THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

Scanned from the collections of
The Library of Congress

AUDIO-VISUAL CONSERVATION
at The LIBRARY of CONGRESS

Packard Campus for Audio Visual Conservation www.loc.gov/avconservation

Motion Picture and Television Reading Room www.loc.gov/rr/mopic

Recorded Sound Reference Center
www.loc.gov/rr/record

THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

O nts
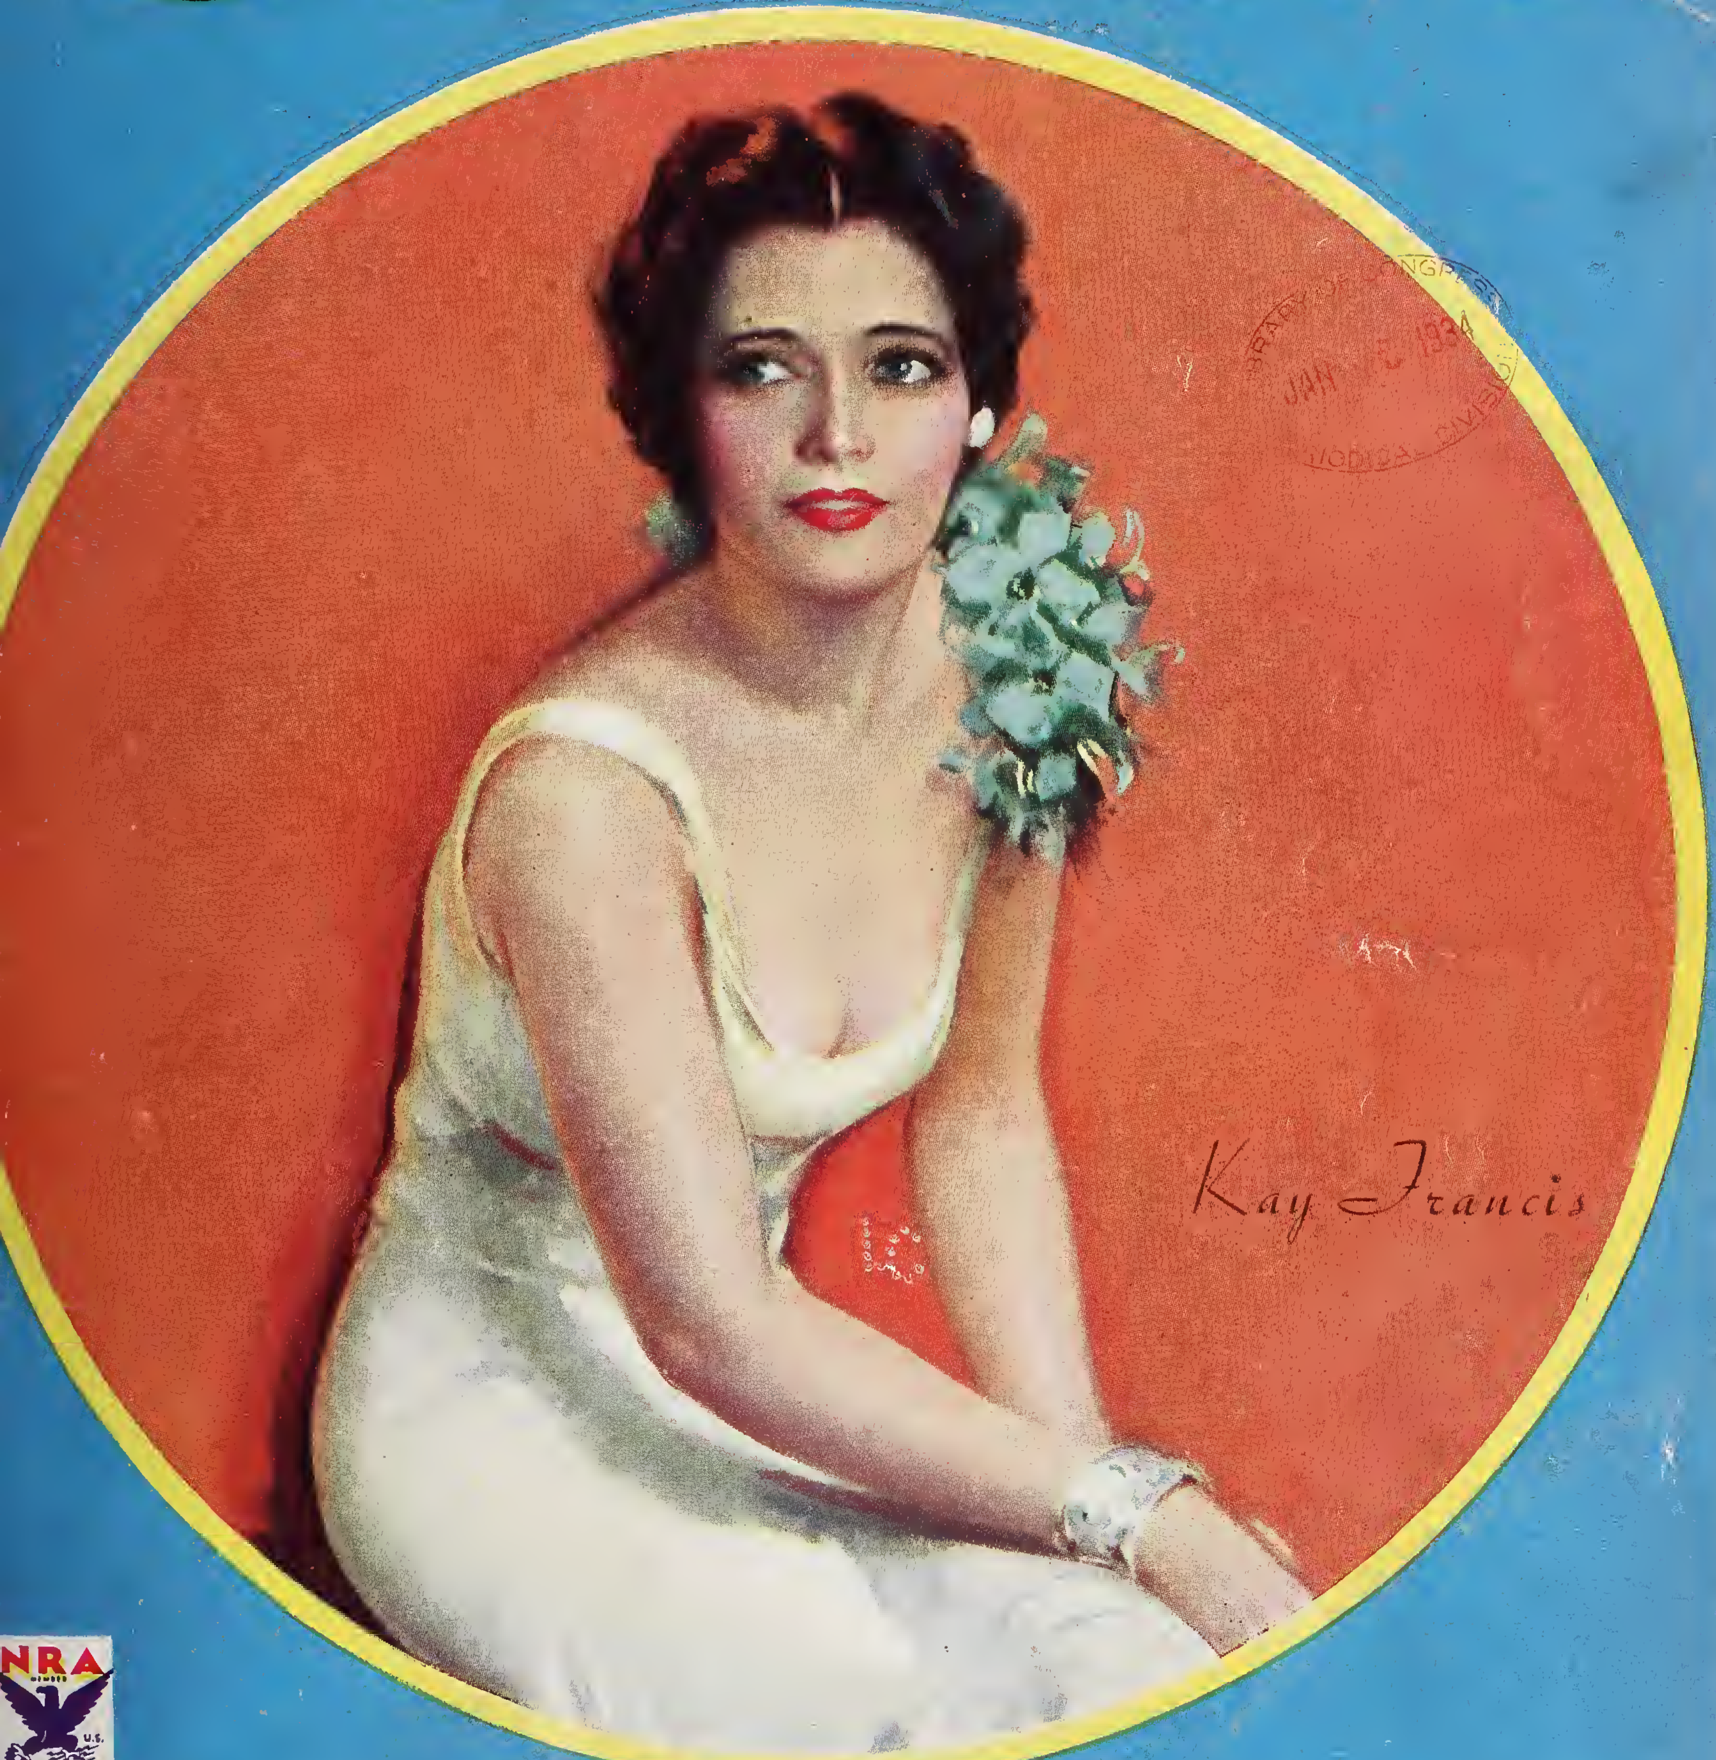
cember

33
3

MODERN Screen

BRARY OF CONGRESS
JAN 6 1934
IODICAL DIVISION



NRA
MEMBER
U.S.
WE DO OUR PART

JOAN CRAWFORD offers YOU a thrilling contest!

The strange case of HITLER and DIETRICH

Faded Home Decorations Made Just Like New

. . . JOHN HELD, Jr.,
the Famous Artist, tells you how to save money on Curtains, Drapes, Table-Linens, etc., etc.

"WHAT makes a movie-actress a star? Personality! Writers describe it as 'color'.

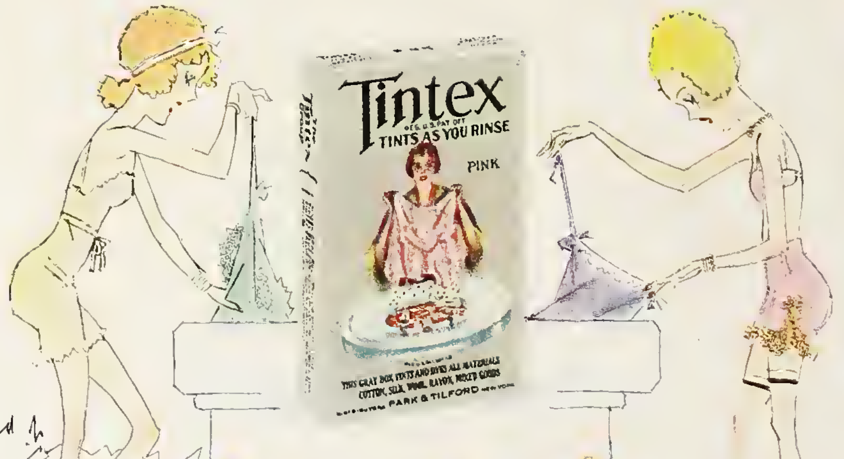
Rooms, too, can have personality. And here it is actually a question of color! Curtains and Drapes furnish the chief color-note for any room. If they are faded or drab, the entire room lacks charm and freshness.

Now, it isn't necessary to get extravagant and replace your faded home decorations. No indeed! Tintex will solve many of your color-problems for just a few cents—and a few minutes of your time. These famous Tints and Dyes quickly and easily restore original colors—or give different colors, if you wish—to all faded fabrics.

Start today—let Tintex make your faded curtains, drapes, table-linens, etc., as color-gay, as color-bright as the day you bought them!"

Don't hesitate to trust the flimsiest material to Tintex. It positively will not injure any fabric that water alone will not harm.

John Held Jr



NRA
WE DO OUR PART

Everything in your wardrobe responds to the color-magic of Tintex. Use it for faded dresses, negligees, underthings, stockings, sweaters, coats, scarfs, etc. etc. Simple as A-B-C. No muss, no fuss—and Tintex never streaks or spots.

Paris Color-Fashions . . . You can keep up-to-the-minute in color with the 35 brilliant, long-lasting Tintex Colors. Many of the season's newest colors will be found on the Tintex Color Card at your dealers. Others can be quickly and easily matched by combining two or more Tintex Colors. Buy Tintex — today — at drug and notion counters everywhere.

PN1993
.M334
Dec.-Oct.
1933-34

Let the spool-end be your guide

J.&P. COATS
50
BEST SIX CORD
CLARK'S TRADE
O.N.T.
MARK
SPOOL
50
COTTON

Spools of thread may look alike. The only way you can tell that the thread is of the quality you know so well is to find the name J. & P. Coats or Clark's O. N. T. on the spool-end. Never take it for granted that you are getting Clark's or Coats Best Six Cord unless the spool-end tells you so. That's the one safe guide to the thread you set out to get—the thread that you, and your mother and grandmother before you, have found always dependable. Look at the spool-end. It pays to use good thread.

J. & P. COATS · CLARK'S O. N. T.

NRA MEMBER U.S. WE DO OUR PART

For more than a century—as today

THE TWO GREAT NAMES IN THREAD

NRA MEMBER U.S. WE DO OUR PART

DEC 22 1933

©CIB 211304

MODERN Screen

FEATURES

HOLLYWOOD'S BABY GENIUS.................................... Rupert Hughes 16
Young Master LeRoy complacently surveys the camera coast

THE STRANGE CASE OF HITLER AND DIETRICH.....Princess Catherine Radziwill 22
(Illustrated by Carl Hauptmann)
Fate has cast together the names of a man of destiny and a glamorous film star

WHAT A TRIO! DICK POWELL AND THE JOLSONS........... Katherine Albert 24
Inseparable companions working for the best interests of each other

KAY FRANCIS' STYLE SECRETS.................................... Virginia T. Lane 26
A well-dressed star reveals "how to hold your man"

JEAN HARLOW ANSWERS YOUR QUESTIONS..................Walter Ramsey 29
The most famous platinum blonde discusses her new husband and her marriage problems

HOW COLUMBO DISCOVERED AMERICA—AND VICE VERSA ....Jerry Wald 30
The ups and downs in the exciting career of radio's newcomer to the movies

IF HE HAD IT TO DO AGAIN—...........................Helen Louise Walker 34
Richard Dix would have done everything exactly the same way

I'VE DRESSED THEM ALL.. Howard Greer 44
Hollywood's most important designer writes about his picture patrons

HOW LUPE AND JOHNNIE WERE MARRIED.........................Ruth Biery 47
They've gone and done it! A hectic courtship ends in marriage. A great scoop!

THE BURDEN OF WARNER BAXTER...............................Esther Meade 48
Despite fame and fortune, unhappiness hounds this talented actor

WHAT STARS WOULD YOU LIKE TO MEET?.......................Faith Baldwin 58
Do you agree with this well-known writer's choice of players?

FORECASTING YOUR FAVORITES............................. Walter Ramsey 60
David Selznick, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executive, tells you plans for his stars

CAN SHE BEAT THE CHAPLIN JINX?......................Dorothy Wooldridge 66
His other leading women have gone down to oblivion. Can Paulette Goddard survive?

HOLLYWOOD MERRY-GO-ROUND ..(Illustrated by Jack Welch).. Katherine Albert 68
Is the camera capitol a crazy town? You'll be surprised!

BE WARM, BE CHIC AND SAVE!................................ Margery Wells 70
You can have glamorous furs at a fraction of what it costs the stars

DEPARTMENTS

BEAUTY ADVICE........................Mary Biddle 6
Latest hints on an always-interesting subject

REVIEWS—A TOUR OF TODAY'S TALKIES............ 8
Criticisms on the newest film releases

BETWEEN YOU AND ME........................... 12
The fans tell their views

THE HOLLYWOOD TIMES........................... 35
News flashes in newspaper form

WHAT EVERY FAN SHOULD KNOW.................. 36
Intimate gossip hot from Movieland

ALL JOKING ASIDE......................Jack Welch 50
Inside stuff about the players

MODERN SCREEN PATTERNS......................... 73
Easy to make—smart to wear

HOLLYWOOD CHARM GOSSIP...................... 74
Fascinating facts on beauty and style

LET'S TALK ABOUT HOLLYWOOD................ 78
More news from the picture capital

DIRECTORY OF PLAYERS.......................... 82
Information about your favorites

DIRECTORY OF PICTURES........................ 84
Brief reviews of new films

And also: Gallery of Honor, 19; Back to the Farm, 32; Picture News, 46; Portraits, 51; The Stars Dress Up as Each Other, 62; Tricks for Winter togs, 72

ERNEST V. HEYN, Editor

MARY BURGUM, Associate Editor ABRIL LAMARQUE, Art Editor - WALTER RAMSEY, Western Representative

Published monthly and copyrighted 1933 by Dell Publishing Company, Incorporated. Office of publication at Washington and South Avenues, Dunellen N. J. Executive and editorial offices, 100 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; H. Meyer, Vice-President; M. Delacorte, Secretary. Vol. 7, No. 1, December, 1933. Printed in the U. S. A. Price in the United States $1.20 a year, 10c a copy. Canadian subscriptions, $2.40 a year. Foreign subscriptions, $2.20 a year. Entered as second class matter September 18, 1930, at the Post office at Dunellen, New Jersey, under act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material.

A Famous Caricaturist's Conception of METRO · GOLDWYN · MAYER'S

New Comedy Team
May ROBSON · Polly MORAN

Their first comedy "COMIN' ROUND THE MOUNTAIN" is all fun. Don't miss it! The cast also includes Charles (Chic) Sale, Una Merkel, Russell Hardie, Jean Parker.

Charles F. Riesner, Director · · · Harry Rapf, Associate Producer

★ The reproduction above of an original painting of May Robson and Polly Moran by Herbert F. Roese is one of a series of caricatures of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer stars by famous artists.

BEAUTY ADVICE

Write to Mary Biddle about your own beauty problems. She'll be delighted to help you in working them out. Address Mary Biddle, MODERN SCREEN, 100 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. Enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope.

By Mary Biddle

THERE are many new tricks to tell you about this month. In fact, I think this whole department will be devoted to blurbs about new beauty aids. So get our your notebooks.

First off, I must tell you about two new kinds of permanent waves that ought to be sweeping the country any day now. One of these waves was mentioned in our "Charm Gossip" department last month. It's peculiarly delightful feature is this: you don't have to go to a beauty parlor unless you prefer. You don't have to sit under a complicated torture machine. You have the hair wound and then you can wander around, sit in a comfortable chair, go and have a chat with the girl in the next booth—or what have you. The apparatus is as comfortable as is possible and the results are excellent.

The other permanent—which should be installed in various places round the country by now—gives the most "individual" waves I've seen in many a moon. I mean, suitable to your own individuality. It's all done—no, not with mirrors—but without the touch of human hands. Or rather, the type of wave that will be best for you is decided upon, the apparatus is set, and then all proceeds with 100% safety and mechanical efficiency. Much, much less heat is used in this type of wave than in others. Nice for fine, silky hair and for white hair.

Coming down to less expensive beautifiers, I ran across the other day a new kind of face-wash. Can be used in place of soap—or after a wash with soap and water or a cleansing with cold cream. It's a nice pinky colored semi-liquid—smells very fresh—and makes you feel as clean as anything. But this is the big point: it has a way of banishing blackheads like nobody's business! Even if you're not troubled with blackheads, I know that many girls acquire a "blackheady" look. I do myself, in this dirty city, if I'm not extra careful. Specks of dirt settle on your face, are held there by your make-up and they're darn hard to remove, sometimes. This new, invigorating wash will do the trick. Nice to keep at the office—together with a roll of cotton—to give your face a thorough cleansing before a date.

Also among the less expensive beautifiers is a shampoo soap that has recently come to my attention. The nice part about this is that—without being in any way a dye or even a rinse—there are various varieties of the same soap for blond, brown, black and red hair. This is one shampoo soap that you can quite safely rub right on the hair. Although, when I used it, I went through my regular business of melting it down. I really think it's a little better that way. Makes a grand lather and gives your topknot lovely glints you'd never suspect were there.

PEOPLE are always writing and asking me about perfumes. It's a most difficult subject on which to advise anyone. But, since Christmas is coming and, as everyone knows, perfume makes a delightful gift, I've gone to some effort in this direction to compile a list that will fit many needs and many pocketbooks. Give me an idea of what type you want to buy—and how much you want to spend—and I'll try to assist you.

Remember this, though, in buying perfumes: a dollar-and-a-half purse flaçon of good perfume is an acceptable gift. A dollar-and-a-half pint bottle of cheap perfume is an insult. If you can't (Continued on page 15)

There are so many grand new beauty aids! Keep posted on them!

HINDS HONEY & ALMOND CREAM
HINDS HONEY & ALMOND CREAM

YOUR HANDS, TOO, PLAY A LEADING ROLE!

Screen romances are enchanting ... but how much more vital is your romance! Do your hands play their role with exquisite grace and beauty? Give them a lovely complexion and they will! Keep them alluringly soft and smooth with Hinds Honey and Almond Cream . . . after exposure, after they've been in water, and always at night. Hinds isn't a thick, gummy, quick-drying "varnish" merely coating the surface. It is a delicate cream in liquid form, that penetrates deep into the pores, to heal, soften, and protect. And Hinds costs a song!

NOW IN A SMART NEW BOTTLE

NRA MEMBER U.S. WE DO OUR PART

In moonlight or any light, GINGER ROGERS' hands are alluringly lovely and smooth. She is shown here with Norman Foster in a scene from RKO's delightful screen play, "Rafter Romance."

New! Hinds Cleansing Cream, by the makers of Hinds Honey & Almond Cream... fragrant, delicate ... liquefies instantly, floats out dirt! . . . 40c, 65c

REVIEWS

. . . A TOUR OF TODAY'S TALKIES

● Recommended.
●● Specially recommended.
Brief reviews on page 84.

Aggie Appleby, Maker of Men
●● Ann Vickers
●● Bombshell
●● The Bowery
A Chance at Heaven
Ever in My Heart
Flaming Gold
Goodbye Love
● Henry the Eighth
I'm No Angel
Love, Honor and Oh Baby!
Midshipman Jack
● My Weakness
Saturday's Millions
● Solitaire Man
S. O. S. Iceberg
●● Stage Mother
Strawberry Roan
To the Last Man
Too Much Harmony
●● The Way to Love
Wild Boys of the Road
● The Woman Spy

Mae West, the dazzling and voluptuous, makes her bow as a burlesque queen in "I'm No Angel." Cary Grant is her leading man again.

ANN VICKERS (RKO)

EXCELLENT. Sinclair Lewis' story is made into very interesting film fare mostly by virtue of the presence of lovely Irene Dunne, who is rapidly becoming one of our greatest actresses. As Ann Vickers, ambitious prison reform worker, she does some really outstanding work.

We meet her first as a settlement worker. Comes Bruce Cabot, on his way to France during the World War and a few days of hectic love. She learns later she never really loved him. The baby dies and Ann goes on with her work, this time in a prison and later in charge of a reformatory. She meets and falls in love with Walter Huston, but loses him to the law when he is found guilty of accepting bribes while on the Supreme Court bench. Three years later he is freed and he, Ann and their baby start life anew.

One of the best, so don't miss it. Not particularly recommended for the kiddies, we might add.

I'M NO ANGEL (Paramount)

DISAPPOINTING. Not up to Mae West's last picture by any means. This is the story of a sideshow burlesque queen, who works her way up a ladder of men to Broadway and the choice spot in the world's biggest circuit.

This is distinctly a one-woman show, no one but West getting a chance. Situations are created for her and gags pointed to her. It often over-

(Continued on page 10)

She signs a new code!

MIRIAM HOPKINS sets up a new code for women in her latest PARAMOUNT picture. In this new screen play her heart is large enough to give employment to two lovers instead of one ..The play—NOEL COWARD'S "DESIGN FOR LIVING". Directed by ERNST LUBITSCH. The lovers—FREDRIC MARCH and GARY COOPER.

Paramount waited 12 years for this girl!

Twelve years ago, "CRADLE SONG" was produced by Eva LeGallienne. The play was so moving and brilliant that it was at once purchased for the screen. Many great actresses were considered for the leading role but none seemed suitable until "Maedchen In Uniform" brought lovely DOROTHEA WIECK to the screen. You will know why 10 million women have raved about DOROTHEA WIECK when you see her in "CRADLE SONG", A Paramount Picture directed by Mitchell Leisen.

. . . Vanilla! They can't take it, but they thought Dewey did! The FOUR MARX BROTHERS as they repel a gas attack with bicarbonate of soda in the third battle of Bull Run in "DUCK SOUP", that very funny PARAMOUNT PICTURE directed by Leo McCarey... with girls and music.

if it's a PARAMOUNT PICTURE it's the best show in town!

(Above) Walter Huston and Irene Dunne make "Ann Vickers" a tense, moving drama. (Right) Not Jackie Cooper getting sentimental—and Wallace Beery taking it! It happens in "The Bowery."

(Above) The threesome that makes "Ever in My Heart" potent with fine characterizations. Ralph Bellamy, Barbara Stanwyck and Otto Krueger. A story of love and renunciation. Rather sad.

steps taste and propriety, the general tone being less subtle than her last film, if possible. However, the picture should draw and please West fans. The supporting cast—Cary Grant, Gregory Ratoff and Ralf Harolde—prove adequate. Definitely not for juveniles.

MY WEAKNESS (Fox)

GRAND musical. Lilian Harvey's first American-released film is swell and Lilian herself is more than good. You'll like this little English girl who first caught your attention in the famous "Congress Dances."

"My Weakness" is a musical of the highest class. Lilian plays a sort of Cinderella type of role. We first see her as a chambermaid in the home of Lew Ayres' uncle (Henry Travers). She enters into a bet with them that any woman, given the advantage of beautiful clothes, can be a success in love. The bet is on and Lilian proves she's right, using Charles Butterworth as her target. Butterworth, incidentally, almost steals the show, he's that good. Harry Langdon also has a meaty part as "Cupid."

There are some grand novelty numbers. Especially the "You Can Be Had" number when all the toy dogs, statues, etc., in the room come to life. If the kids like music, take them.

BOMBSHELL (M-G-M)

S*WELEGANT*. This movie simply brims over with entertainment. It starts out with a bang and finishes with a double bang. Wotta show.

Jean Harlow is a wow as Lola Burns, the movie star whose name blazes from headlines of every newspaper and fan magazine, thanks to an overly-ambitious publicity agent (Lee Tracy). However, the publicity isn't always flattering, and Lola, who thinks she wants to lead a quiet, normal life with the patter of baby's feet resounding through her home, runs away. Always-on-the-job Tracy follows her and she realizes he's her man after all, and the movies are okay.

Jean and Lee are simply swell. Next comes Frank Morgan who is a riot as Lola's drunken, low-brow father. Pat O'Brien as the director, Ivan Lebedoff as the Marquis, Una Merkel as the secretary, Ted Healy as the brother and Franchot Tone in a brief but choice bit are all grand. You'd be foolish to miss this one. Better leave the youngsters at home.

THE WAY TO LOVE (Paramount)

G*REAT entertainment*. Maurice Chevalier's last picture under the Paramount banner is one of his best, with the star in one of his greatest rôles as the lovable, carefree tramp of the streets of Paris, whose sole ambition is to be a guide. This is the type of rôle that Chevalier has been clamoring for, and he proves here that he knows what he's talking about. Ann Dvorak as the little waif (the rôle on which Sylvia Sidney staged a walk-out) whom Maurice meets in a knife-throwing act at a fair, was excellent. It's great having her back in pictures. Edward Everett Horton is, well, SWELL is the word.

You have entertainment plus here. The story is chuckful of laughs, a little sentiment and some knock-out musical numbers. Don't miss it. Take the children, too.

(Continued on page 110)

Now from Warner Bros.' glittering star-ranks blazes...

No wonder they call Warner Bros. "The Star Company".... Week after week in hit after hit, Warners bring you more famous favorites than any other studio! Now it's masterful Paul Muni—great star of "I Am A Fugitive"—soaring to unexampled heights in an impassioned, storm-charged drama of a world reborn! For its savage pageantry, for its courageous theme, for its amazing exploration of the human heart, we recommend "The World Changes" to every moviegoer in the land as the one picture that must be seen this month!

Paul Muni
in
"THE WORLD CHANGES"

ALINE MacMAHON • MARY ASTOR • DONALD COOK
And Thousands of Others — Directed by Mervyn LeRoy — A First National Picture

BETWEEN YOU and ME

Fans, this is your department! A corner designed especially for you, which will welcome your views on the screen and its players

Dear Friends:

Two things this month:

1. November 9 is the birthday of Marie Dressler. If you read this on or before that date, write or wire her in care of this magazine and your greeting will be forwarded to her promptly. It's everybody's chance to pay homage to this grand lady of the screen!

2. You and I probably feel alike about "The Three Little Pigs." I've seen it twice—and I intend seeing it many more times. I sincerely believe that twenty years from now, when 1953 audiences find even "Cavalcade" and "Dinner at Eight" dated, Walter Disney's little masterpiece will be looked upon as a perfect artistic gem.

Now is the time to persuade Mr. Disney to make a full-length "Symphony" in color, and if you'll send me your opinion on that subject, I'll get your vote to him. Write me today!

The Editor

Please address all letters to
The Editor, MODERN SCREEN
100 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Regarding Our Patent Letter-Writer

Realizing that modesty is classed high among the virtues, we are going to do a little bragging about the success of our patent-letter-writer, (a feature of the October issue) just the same.

Remember, you filled in the blanks and disclosed your favorite actor, actress and the player you considered a fitting candidate for future stardom. The coupons literally poured in by the thousands and you fans let it be known without quibbling just who stood aces in your estimation and who might be slipping a bit.

So as not to inject too much suspense, let us hasten to reveal that Joan Crawford, according to your barometer, is the reigning queen of the movies. Yes, Miss Crawford received twice and a half as many votes as her nearest runner-up for popularity honors.

Jean Harlow, another Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, has her legion of staunch admirers as the ballots readily testified. Then came Janet Gaynor, who longs to leave the saccharine for the sophisticated in the matter of rôles. Janet almost came in neck-and-neck with Jean, with Norma Shearer following closely on the heels of the Fox favorite.

With these four setting the popular players pretty firmly, Garbo, Hepburn, Dietrich and Loretta Young find themselves scoring honorable mention.

Now for the male stars:

Clark Gable heads the list with Robert Montgomery following, though not too closely, second. Then comes Cary Grant and after him, several men get an even break—Novarro, Leslie Howard and Ronald Colman.

As to the lesser players most fitted for stardom, two girls walked off with the honors. Just as many want to see little Jean Parker with her name in lights as voted for Frances Dee, who has been on the screen longer and accorded better parts.

And now we want to thank you for sending in your opinions, for it is through these that we are assisted in selecting material for MODERN SCREEN. We must know those players in which you are most interested in order to let you in on their latest activities.

A Break for "Bit" Players

MRS. J. H. ALLEN of Washington, D. C., writes:

Almost everyone must appreciate, but few take the trouble to commend in print, the players who appear in small rôles supporting a star who gets the billing.

It is comparatively easy to score when one is handed the material—a nice fat part in a story designed to suit the talents of a certain actor or actress. But when an unfeatured member of a cast, with a small part, almost steals the picture, the least we can do is recognize him. Ned Sparks is such an actor and, personally, I'd rather see him than Clark Gable any time. I do wish producers would put him in more pictures for he is invariably "swell."

Please Pass the Calories

JANE WRIGHT of Tampa, Fla., does a little censuring. She says:

What, oh what, must actresses weigh in real life! I understand they photograph ten pounds heavier than they actually are. So at what figure can Claudette Colbert, Barbara Stanwyck or Joan Crawford tip the scales?

Claudette, as she appeared in "I Cover the Water Front," was little short of skinny and Miss Crawford looked transparent in "Today We Live," and, in fact, all her recent pictures. I wish she would put on the weight she had in "Dance, Fools, Dance" and "Our Blushing Bride." She certainly would look a whole lot better. Dietrich, too, is too thin. Billy Dove had the beautiful figure! Truly, I am not an advocate of the curves possessed by la West, but pulleez, a little padding over those sharp, angular bones!

(Well, Jane should certainly cheer the Hollywood citizens who have been renouncing potatoes and pie. At that, there is much truth in what she says.)

In Defense of the Stars

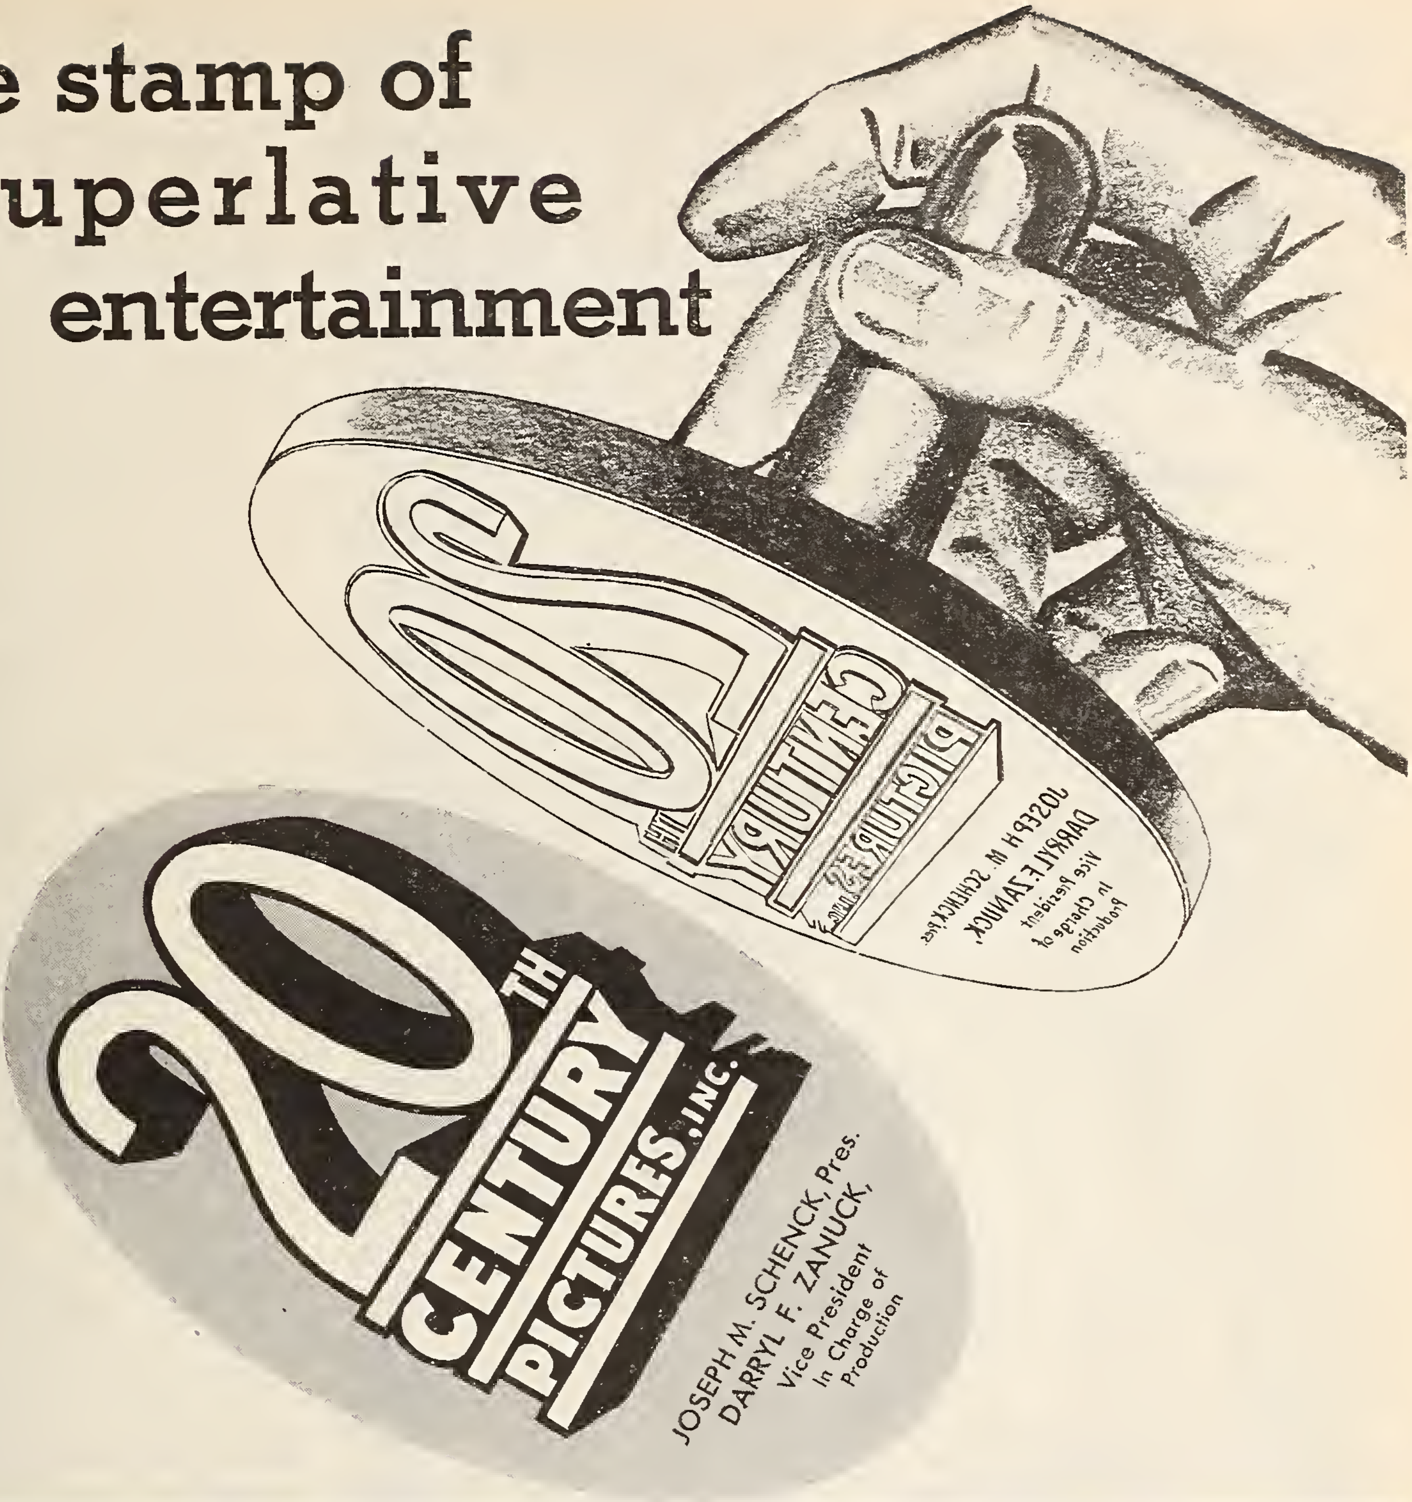
EDNA FOX of Halifax, N. S., writes:

Boy, oh boy, have the stars any real feelings or have they reel feelings? They surely must reel when they read some of the caustic criticism submitted to them through the fan columns!

Because a fan dislikes some player, or his or her acting, is it nice to indulge in downright mud-slinging? Take Joan Crawford, for example. The worst I could say about her is that she looks a little too thin, not gaunt, as described by an Ardent Fan. True, she does overstress her makeup, but she is a sincere actress with style and personality.

Many of the fans seem bent on giving Doug, Jr. all the sympathy in the divorce suit. Who cares about their private lives? "Live and let live." These unfortunate children of the public, unfortunate because every personal move is recorded and censored. Incidentally, I often wonder why the pure-minded never miss a wicked picture? It's very odd! (Continued on page 14)

The stamp of superlative entertainment



20TH CENTURY PICTURES, INC.
JOSEPH M. SCHENCK, Pres.
DARRYL F. ZANUCK, Vice President In Charge of Production

WALLACE BEERY, GEORGE RAFT, JACKIE COOPER in "THE BOWERY"

WALTER WINCHELL'S "BROADWAY THRU A KEYHOLE"

SPENCER TRACY and JACK OAKIE in "TROUBLE SHOOTER"

GEORGE ARLISS in "HOUSE OF ROTHSCHILD"

CONSTANCE BENNETT in "MOULIN ROUGE"

GEORGE BANCROFT in "BLOOD MONEY"

LORETTA YOUNG in "BORN TO BE BAD"

LEE TRACY in "ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN"

ANN HARDING in "GALLANT LADY"

GEORGE ARLISS in "SENTENCED"

"THE GREAT BARNUM"

"I KNEW HER WHEN"

Released thru
UNITED ARTISTS

Lovely Girl? or just ordinary?

MEN CAN TELL
by the Smartness of her Make-up!

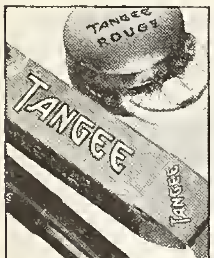
MEN compare her with other girls and find her lovelier by far! Her lips never shriek "paint". For she always uses a marvelous new kind of lipstick that brings smooth, natural color. Rich, glowing color...but not a trace of paint to make her mouth conspicuous!

A lipstick called Tangee

Other lipsticks may coat your lips with paint. But Tangee isn't paint. It's a special kind of lipstick which blends so perfectly that it looks like your own coloring! No hard lipstick line. No caking. No painted look.

In the stick, Tangee looks orange. But put it on. You'll see it change color to the one shade of blush-rose best suited to you! Actually, Tangee brings out the natural color hidden in your lips!

Use Tangee and see fresh, natural color in your lips! Costs no more than ordinary lipsticks ... at any toilet goods counter.



Rouge matches lipstick

Tangee Rouge Compact changes to the one shade most natural for your type! Never causes an over-rouged look. A perfect match for Tangee Lipstick! Comes in refillable compact. Refills fit compact perfectly.

NRA WE DO OUR PART

New! SMALL SIZE TANGEE LIPSTICK 39¢

Also in Theatrical—a deeper shade for professional use

Tested and Approved Bureau of Foods Sanitation and Health Good Housekeeping Magazine

TANGEE
World's Most Famous Lipstick
ENDS THAT PAINTED LOOK

★ SPECIAL 10c OFFER! MM12

The George W. Luft Co.
417 Fifth Ave., New York (Enclose 10¢ stamps or coin)

Rush Miracle Make-up Set containing miniature Tangee Lipstick, Rouge and Powder.

Check Shade ☐ Flesh ☐ Rachel ☐ Light Rachel

Name________

Address________

City________ State________

Between You and Me

(Continued from page 12)

Unimpressed by Glamour

OLD TIMER writes from London, thus:

I cannot find the glamour in a Greta Garbo plot, though I dare say false eyelashes improve her face a lot. (That's heresy, Old Timer! The Garbo lashes, swear those who know, are real.) I can't suppose Tallulah's casting troubles really were the whole and total cause of her failure over there. I cannot see Clark Gable, playing gallants of today, without a silent query why he ever got that way. I wonder why Joe E. Brown and Eddie Cantor should attract. I wonder, too, why Constance Bennett thinks that she can act. How sad I am that Pola Negri keeps on keeping on! I wish these Tarzans, Draculas and Frankensteins galore could bring us back our Wood Nymph—Marie Doro, whom we worshipped so before. We've shoals of well-meant talkie stars but . . . for the screen's only goddess they're no substitute at all. In truth, the days of Marie Doro still stand as paradise to me.

Cynical Letter from a Fight Fan

CAULIFLOWER sends us this from the Bronx:

Hot dog! At last we're going to see some real fighters in a picture. I mean Carnera and Baer in "The Prizefighter and the Lady." We've had enough of make-believe champs and phoney athletes. Don't get me wrong—I don't include Cagney or Weissmuller or Buster Crabbe. They're okay in their line—but it will be the nertz to see some real professionals. Hope they producers don't gum up the works and take all the kick out of the fight scenes.

(According to our spies, Cauliflower, the works haven't been "gummed." There'll be a grand story on Baer in our next issue.)

What's the Matter with Ruth?

ONCE A CHATTERTON FAN of Kansas City, is full of complaints:

What's the matter with Ruth Chatterton? Is she slipping? Is it poor pictures? Or is it me—am I getting tired of her? I used to adore Chatterton. Her pictures were swell. Clear up until "The Rich Are Always With Us." Since that one, I haven't enjoyed any of them. Yet I still think she's a sensitive, versatile actress—a real actress. I suspect that the fault lies with her pictures. Do something about it, Mr. Warner Brothers, won't you?

Not Too Many Dancing Daughters, Please

JENNIE MAY of Washington, D. C., says:

I see they're going to make Joan Crawford a Dancing Daughter again. I know I'm in the minority in disapproving of this. Mind, I will say that Joan went a little haywire in some of her dramatic parts. But on the other hand, she did some excellent work in her more serious pictures. "Possessed" and "Letty Lynton" showed Joan at her best. I'd like to see more pictures like that—with an occasional "Dancing Lady" picture for variety.

CIVIL ANSWERS TO CIVIL QUESTIONS

DOROTHY NISSEN, Rochelle Park, N. J. Davey Lee is now attending public school in Los Angeles. After appearing in Al Jolson's first talkie and making a personal appearance tour, Davey's parents decided to withdraw him from a professional life. Most players send photographs on receipt of twenty-five cents to cover mailing cost.

LLOYD GEORGE, Hunt, N. Y. Leon Janney most recently was seen in "Police Court," a Monogram picture. A letter addressed to him to Hollywood in care of that company will reach him, although Leon is now a free-lance player.

EDWARD CORCORAN, Chicago, Ill. Most cartoon pictures are made in California and while the people employed in making them are both experienced and expert, there may occasionally be a chance for promising talent. However, attempting to break into any branch of the movies is always a precarious undertaking.

JOAN LYNCH, Marblehead, Mass. You will see a lot of Alice White in the near future. Alice is working in "Kid Gloves," and all set to appear in "Counsellor-at-Law," both for Universal.

PEGGY FLEMING, Atlanta, Ga. None of the stars to whom you refer have deserted the screen permanently. They are just having their annual fling on Broadway. Yes, New York's Main Street will see Helen Hayes, Katharine Hepburn, Nancy Carroll and Claudia Morgan acting this season.

JANE THOMAS, Springfield, Mass. But William Powell has played with Ann Harding. In an RKO picture titled "Double Harness." They were swell in this entertaining sophisticated comedy, too.

TERESA REBALDI, Portsmouth, Va. Miss Gaynor pronounces her name Jan-et with the accent on the first syllable. She is all set to start work on "House of Connelly," having just returned to the coast after a New York holiday.

ALYCE OSBORNE, Albany, N. Y. Write Leo Carillo in care of Universal Pictures, Universal City, Calif. Did you hear him on the radio lately, acting as Master of Ceremonies for Chase & Sanborn? He was swell.

Beauty Advice

(Continued from page 6)

fit your pocketbook to your wants in perfume, there's always toilet water, bath salts—in the loveliest containers—bath powders and sachets and talcs which are almost as nice to have—or give. And the perfumed lotions for setting the hair help to bring the glamor and allure that perfume brings, too.

I don't know whether you have noticed—or whether this is prevalent in all parts of the country—but I have observed that good brushes are a lot less expensive than they used to be. And a really good hairbrush is an essential aid to hair beauty. Some time ago I saw perfectly plain, wooden brushes (with, to be sure, superb bristles) as high as seven dollars. Recently, I bought a beauty for three-fifty. If you have been muddling along with an old brush with apathetic, rubbery bristles, now's your chance to get a good brush inexpensively.

HAVE you encountered yet the great big towel-sized cleansing tissues? They're simply marvelous. You can use them for removing make-up, polishing shoes, stuffing the toes of shoes, for dusting and for wrapping up an extra pair of stockings to carry in your purse for that date after work.

I'm asked a great many questions about foundation creams. Personally, I never use them. They just don't happen to suit my skin. But I do use skin tonics and skin lotions. And they serve me—and many other people, too—for a powder base. I've found a lotion that is a little jim-dandy. It's thin, and clear—no gummy substance in it—and perfumed with a famous odor.

There is a new line of make-up, sponsored by a house that has done theatrical make-up and everyday make-up for years, that you should find great fun to try.

First a base is applied, with water. It is blended in and doesn't show at all. Your face looks just like your usual, unmake-up face. Then, if you use rouge, you apply the color to your cheeks—again with water. Like using liquid rouge, really, and that never was a cinch to do. But once you acquire the trick, liquid rouge gives the most natural blush of all. Then, you powder, with a special kind of powder. And finally—this is the most amazing part—you dash, dab or spray cold water quickly all over your face. It gives a lovely pearly lustre to the skin.

Next month I'm going shopping myself and I know I'll come across a great many new tricks and trifles to tell you about in the next issue—dated January and on sale the first of December. There will still be some time before Christmas, if you are not one who does her shopping early. So—be on the lookout! Meantime, write to me if you want to know about the things mentioned in this article.

LOVE IS not BLIND

EVERY CLOSE-UP IS A COMPLEXION TEST!

DOES a shiny, oily nose mar both your beauty and your romance?

You need worry no longer! Gone at last is the embarrassment and the heartbreak caused by Half-Hour Nose. Pompeian has created a new powder that really clings. With Pompeian you can powder once and enjoy yourself all evening, confident of a lasting loveliness.

Pompeian is far more than a clinging powder. Smooth and fine, it gives the skin a soft new beauty, with that youthful, natural unpowdered look. Its ingredients are as high in quality and as intricate of blend as any powder sold. It has an intriguing fragrance of fine French perfume. The purity of the ingredients assures you a powder free from grit and starch, that will not enlarge the pores nor irritate the skin in any way. The Pompeian creams and rouges, famous aids to lovely complexions, are equally high in quality and just as reasonable in price. Regular large sizes are available at all drug and department stores at only 65c. Convenient 10c sizes at the better 5-and-10-cent stores.

THE POMPEIAN COMPANY, INC., BLOOMFIELD, NEW JERSEY.
Sales Representatives: HAROLD F. RITCHIE & Co., INC., New York City.

Robert Young and Leila Hyams featured in "Saturday's Millions," a Universal Picture

Pompeian BEAUTY POWDER

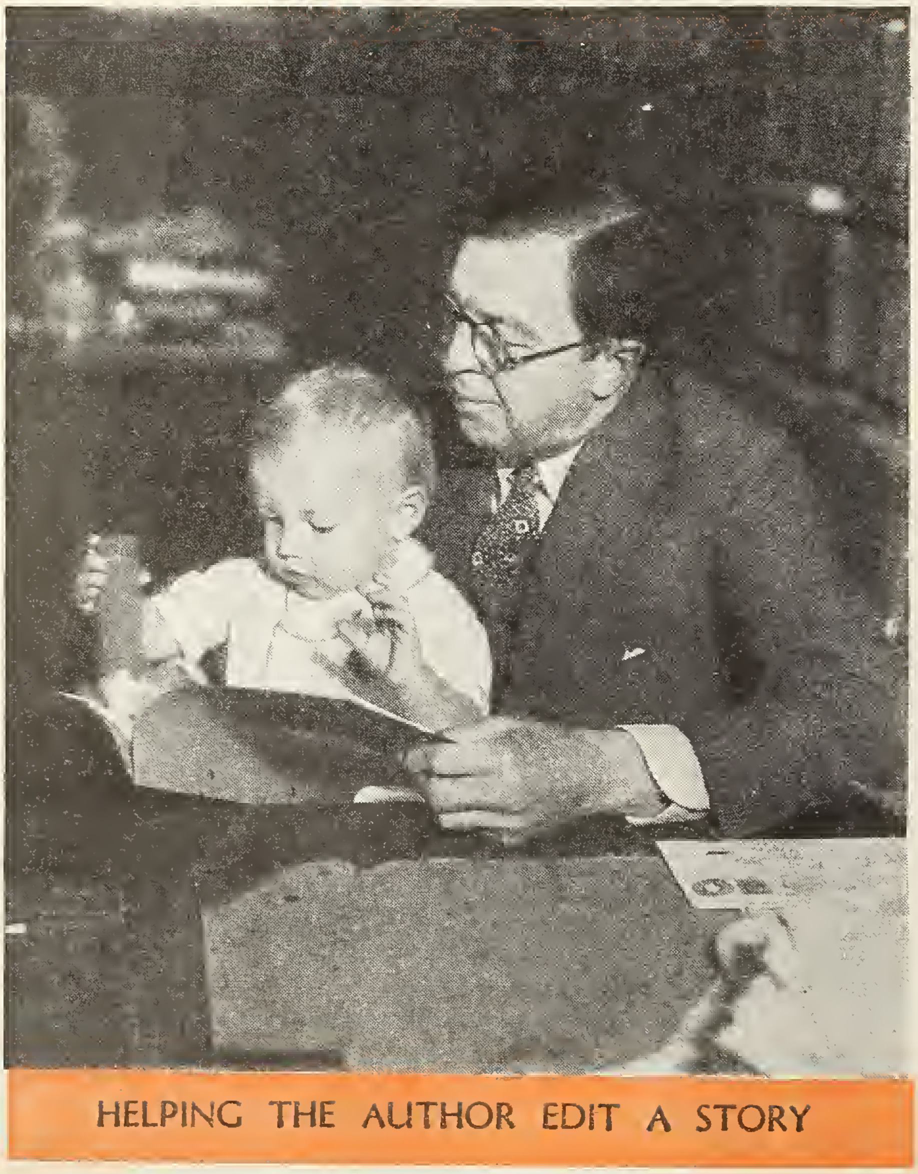
Windblown through Silk

NRA MEMBER U.S. WE DO OUR PART

BABY Le Royalty

by RUPERT HUGHES

HEY THERE, WEISSMULLER!



HELPING THE AUTHOR EDIT A STORY

A VERY FAMOUS AUTHOR

BEING somewhat human and something of a snob, I like to let everybody know about it on the rare occasions when people of distinction deign to notice me. I have bragged of having had Greta Garbo ride on the running-board of my car, and Pola Negri offer to come into my kitchen and cook me a dinner.

And now I want to let the world know that I have had Baby Le Roy sitting on my lap at my desk, even if I have to admit that when he was shown a manuscript of mine he clamored at once for a large blue pencil and began to whack at the text. How soon the studios infect even the youngest people with the movie habits!

But it only goes to show the astonishing precocity of this amazing child. He made his début on the screen at the age of about nine months—this side of oblivion—and proceeded without hesitation to steal the picture from the other star—an obscure foreigner named, I believe, Maurice Chevalier. Now when he is shown a manuscript of mine in the screen version of which he is shortly to appear, he reaches

AFTERNOON ZWEIBACH ON THE SET

MY DINNER! IT'S ABOUT TIME!

GIVES YOU THIS DEEPLY HUMAN PICTURE OF HOLLYWOOD'S LOVABLE BABY GENIUS for a blue pencil as promptly as grown-up motion picture people do as soon as they see a story of mine.

It was a great day in our humble household when we tried to make ready for the call His Majesty—or His Paucity—graciously made on us. We muzzled the Pekingese, chained up the goldfish, established the lifeguards about the swimming pool, put cushions wherever he might sit down, hid the scissors, the pins, and the paste with which I compose my works, and brought forward all the objets d'art that might interest an infant of his years.

WHEN he arrived with his mother and a retinue of two ladies-in-waiting, he promptly charged on the Pekingese. This microscopic lion of a dog who chases man-eating police dogs across the horizon and treats our bull-terriers like contemptible white mice, promptly fled for cover. He did not realize that the distinguished guest was unlike the common children who had tried to gouge out his eyes, pull off his tail and splinter his ribs.

With royal geniality the Baby smiled and forgot him. His manners were exquisite, even for a kinglet, though he did insist, later, upon sitting on the sidewalk outside and, when the photographer set up a silver reflector, he could not be dissuaded from sitting on that and plucking off shreds of tinfoil with which he covered himself and me. But he felt at home there, bathed in radiance like an aureole.

What could be more astounding among all the astonishments the motion pictures have spilled about our jaded heads than the career of this little innocent, who was the talk of the world before he could talk? He is a cosmic figure and does not know it. While so many people, who think they are important, strut about in ignorance of the petty limits of their fames, this babe toddles through the sunshine and has his being in a blaze of arc lights and does not even know that millions are drawn together by the display of his name, millions of adults google like infants when he claps his hands or looks out, up-ended, through the arch of his fat little legs.

"Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world like a Colossus!"

Having quoted Shakespeare, I might go on and cite the platitude, "A little child shall lead them!" I might contrast the Pied Piper of Hamelin decoying all the children into the mountain with this Childe Le Roy, who leads the grown-ups in multitudes into the dark moving picture auditoriums and holds them there spellbound.

The millions who see Baby Le Roy beaming on life or unconsciously forcing people to take care of him and love him, inevitably think better of babyhood and feel its heart-wringing pathos and humor.

Another thing to be remembered and set down on the good side of the ledger is the influence of the moving pictures on the little children who work (so to speak) in the studios. From a long experience with them I can say they are heaven for children. (Continued on page 104)

CRITICS OF NEW YORK NEWSPAPERS WROTE EVERY WORD OF THIS AD

"ROMANCE FRAGRANT AND LOVELY"

—N. Y. Herald-Tribune

"A sensitive and haunting love story that fulfills everyone's wish." (N. Y. Eve. Sun.) "Wrought with rare skill—truly fascinating—you are strongly urged to see it."—N.Y. World-Telegram

★ THERE HAS NEVER BEEN A KISS LIKE THIS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN ★

JESSE L. LASKY'S
Production of

BERKELEY SQUARE

LESLIE HOWARD • HEATHER ANGEL

"You will never see a more dazzling performance."
—N. Y. American

"Plays delightfully and skillfully."
—N. Y. Herald-Tribune

GAIETY
BERKELEY SQUARE
JESSE L. LASKY

RECORD-BREAKING CROWDS saw "Berkeley Square" at the Gaiety, N. Y. at $1.65 admission. You see it at popular prices. Ask your Theatre Manager for the date.

UNANIMOUS!

Never before has a picture received such unanimous critical acclaim as this!

"★★★★ Four Stars."—Daily News

"In a class by itself."—N. Y Times

"An exciting experience you can't afford to miss." —N. Y. Mirror

Every critic, without exception, raved! And you will too!

VALERIE TAYLOR
IRENE BROWNE
BERYL MERCER
Directed by FRANK LLOYD who directed "Cavalcade"
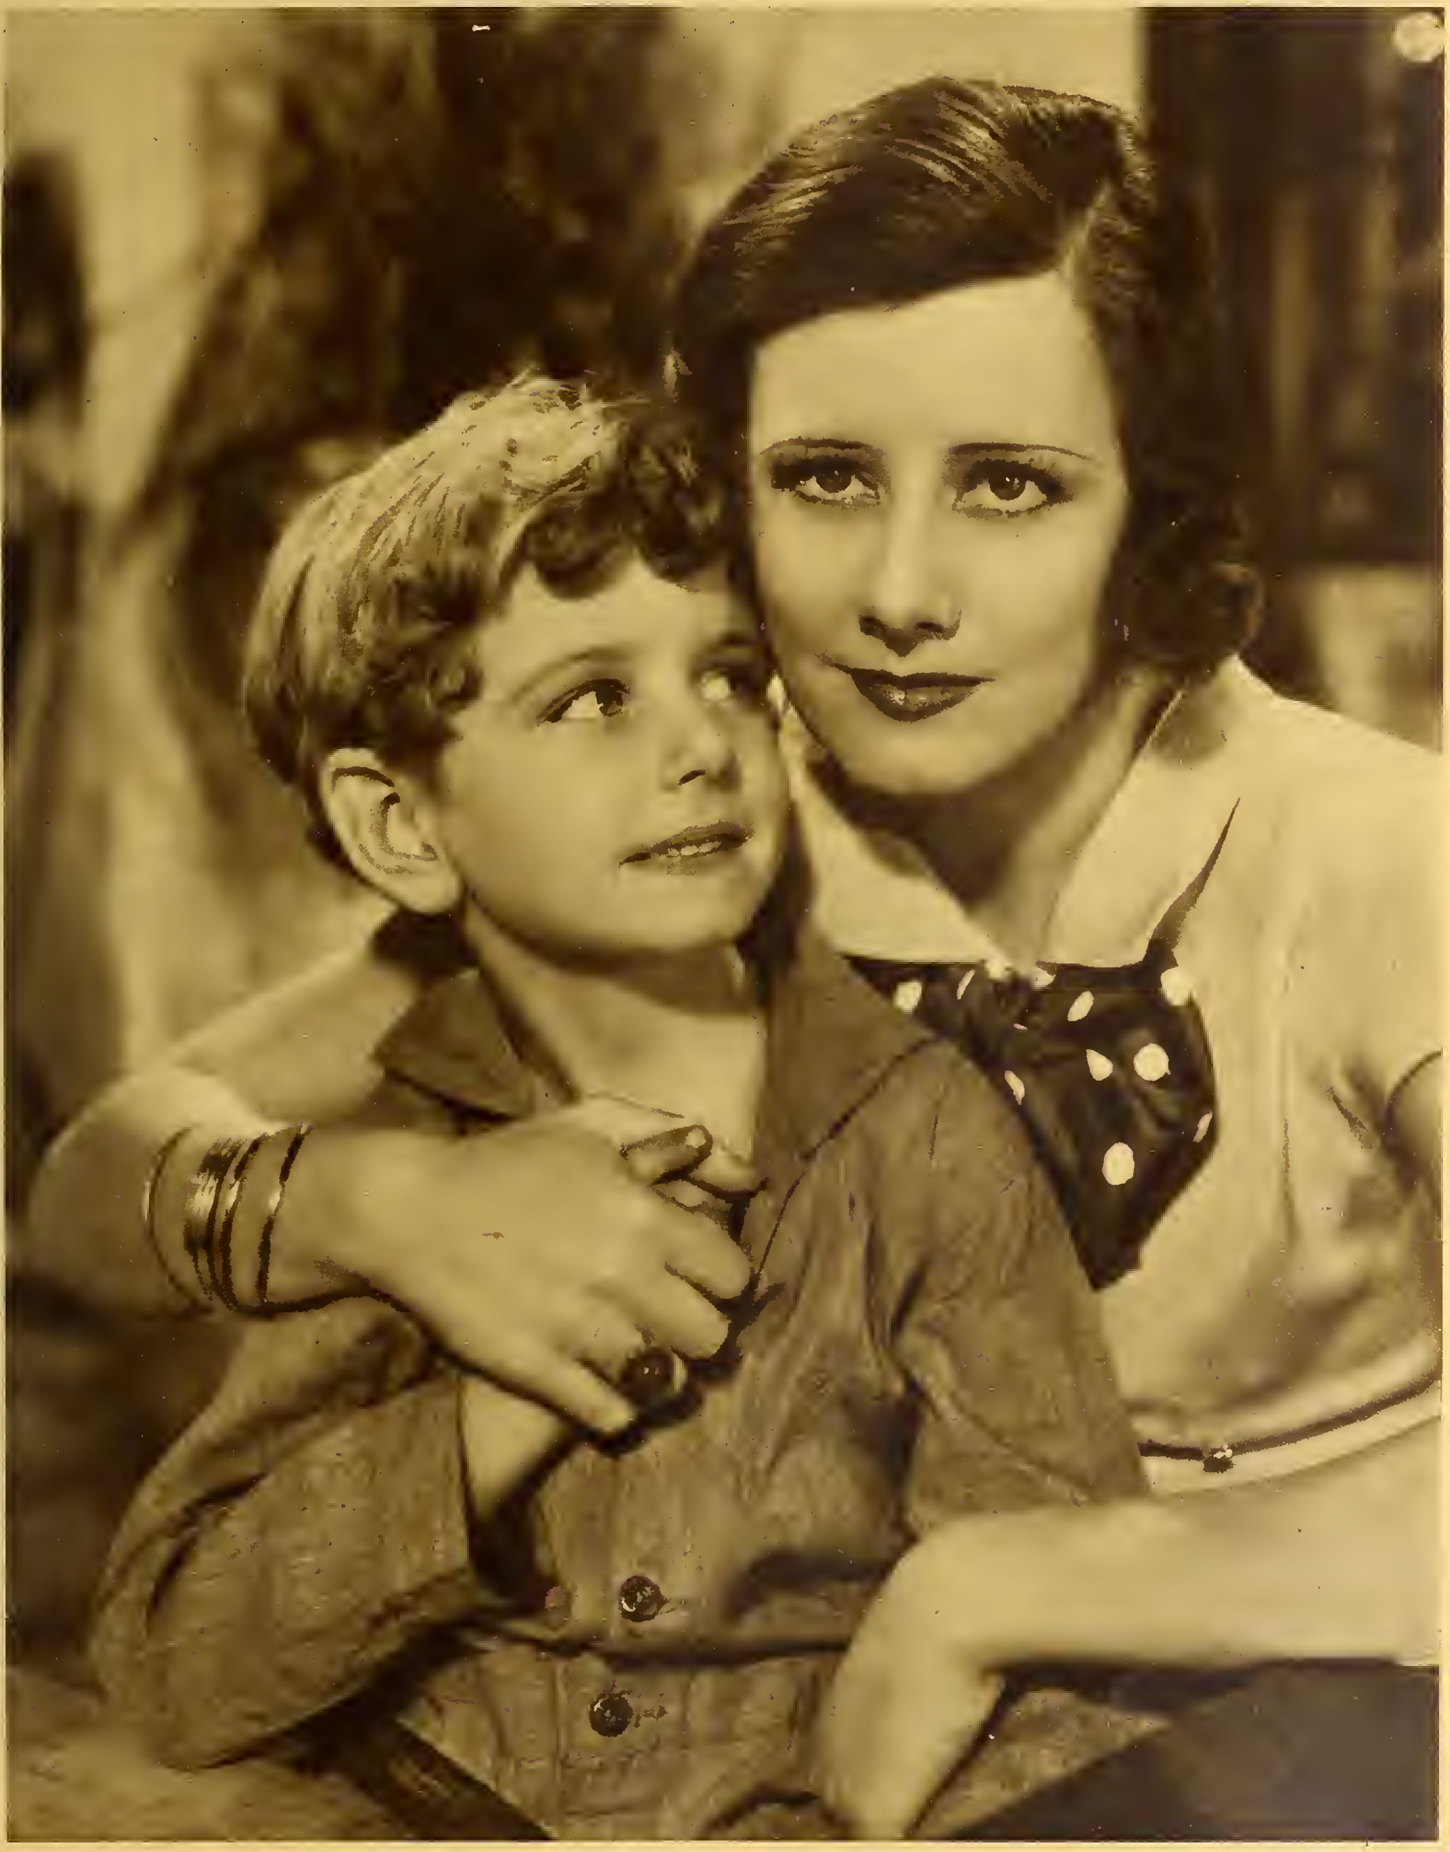
From the play by John L. Balderston

FOX

MODERN SCREEN'S GALLERY OF HONOR



We honor Irene Dunne, shown here with small Wally Albright, for her magnificent work in "Ann Vickers."

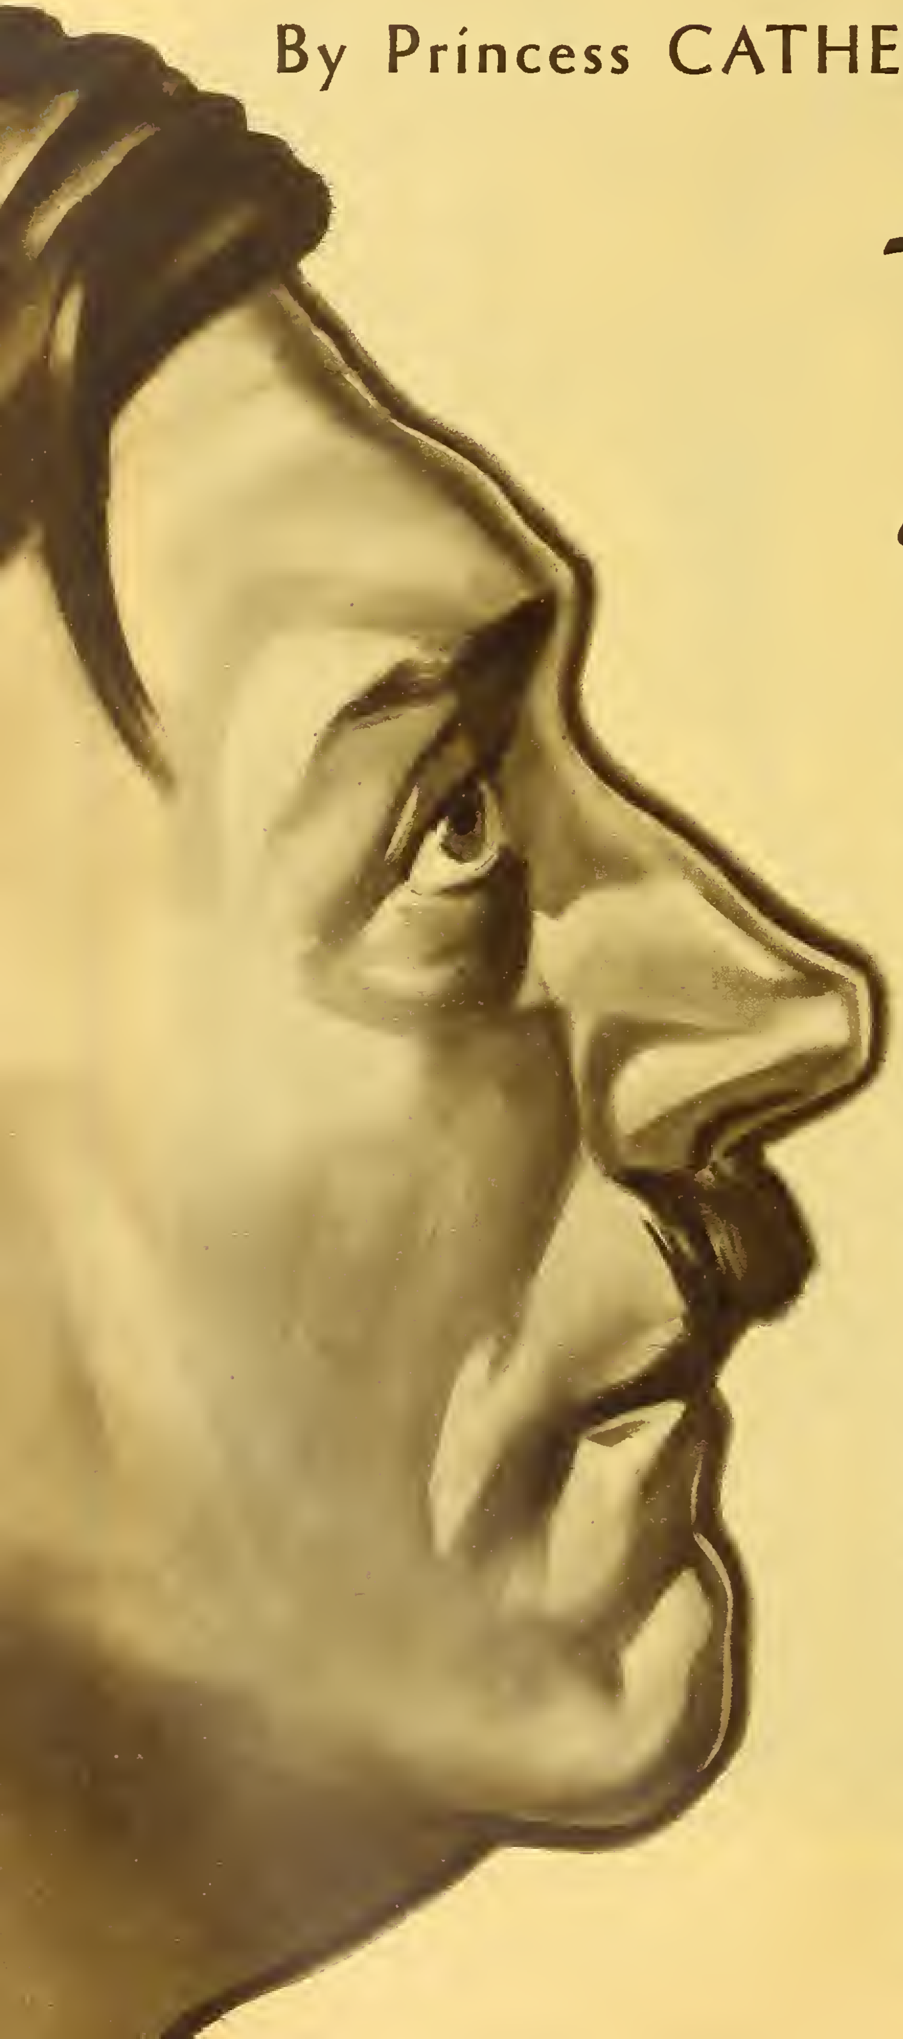
We honor Maurice Chevalier for his charm in "The Way to Love." Ann Dvorak plays opposite him.

We honor Alice Brady and Maureen O'Sullivan for their work in "Stage Mother."

We honor Charles Laughton for his—as usual—superb performance in "The Private Life of King Henry VIII."

THE STRANGE CASE OF HITLER and DIETRICH

By Princess CATHERINE RADZIWILL



TWICE last summer, the world of the motion picture touched the realm of international diplomacy and intrigue. Twice, Marlene Dietrich was visited secretly by soft-spoken, swiftly-moving men. Each of them gave her a message from Adolph Hitler, Germany's dynamic Chancellor, a message that offered her a place as unbelievable as it was magnificent in Hitler's Reich. Each time, she vouchsafed no answer and the messenger fled from her chagrined and baffled.

Not long ago, she returned to America.

Her return brings to a pause as amazing a chain of international events as current history can offer. Positively, it represents the one test to which the mercurial Herr Hitler has set himself and failed utterly.

Herr Hitler and Dietrich, these are not names to be linked lightly. It is of Hitler's doing, not Marlene's. Here are the facts . . .

When Miss Dietrich went abroad last spring, she went to rest. With mind unclouded by worries, she took a lovely white house in sunny southern France. The town was small and cozy and Marlene was a distinguished visitor. For a while, she lived contentedly and quietly, rebuilding her health after the harsh siege of Hollywood picture-making.

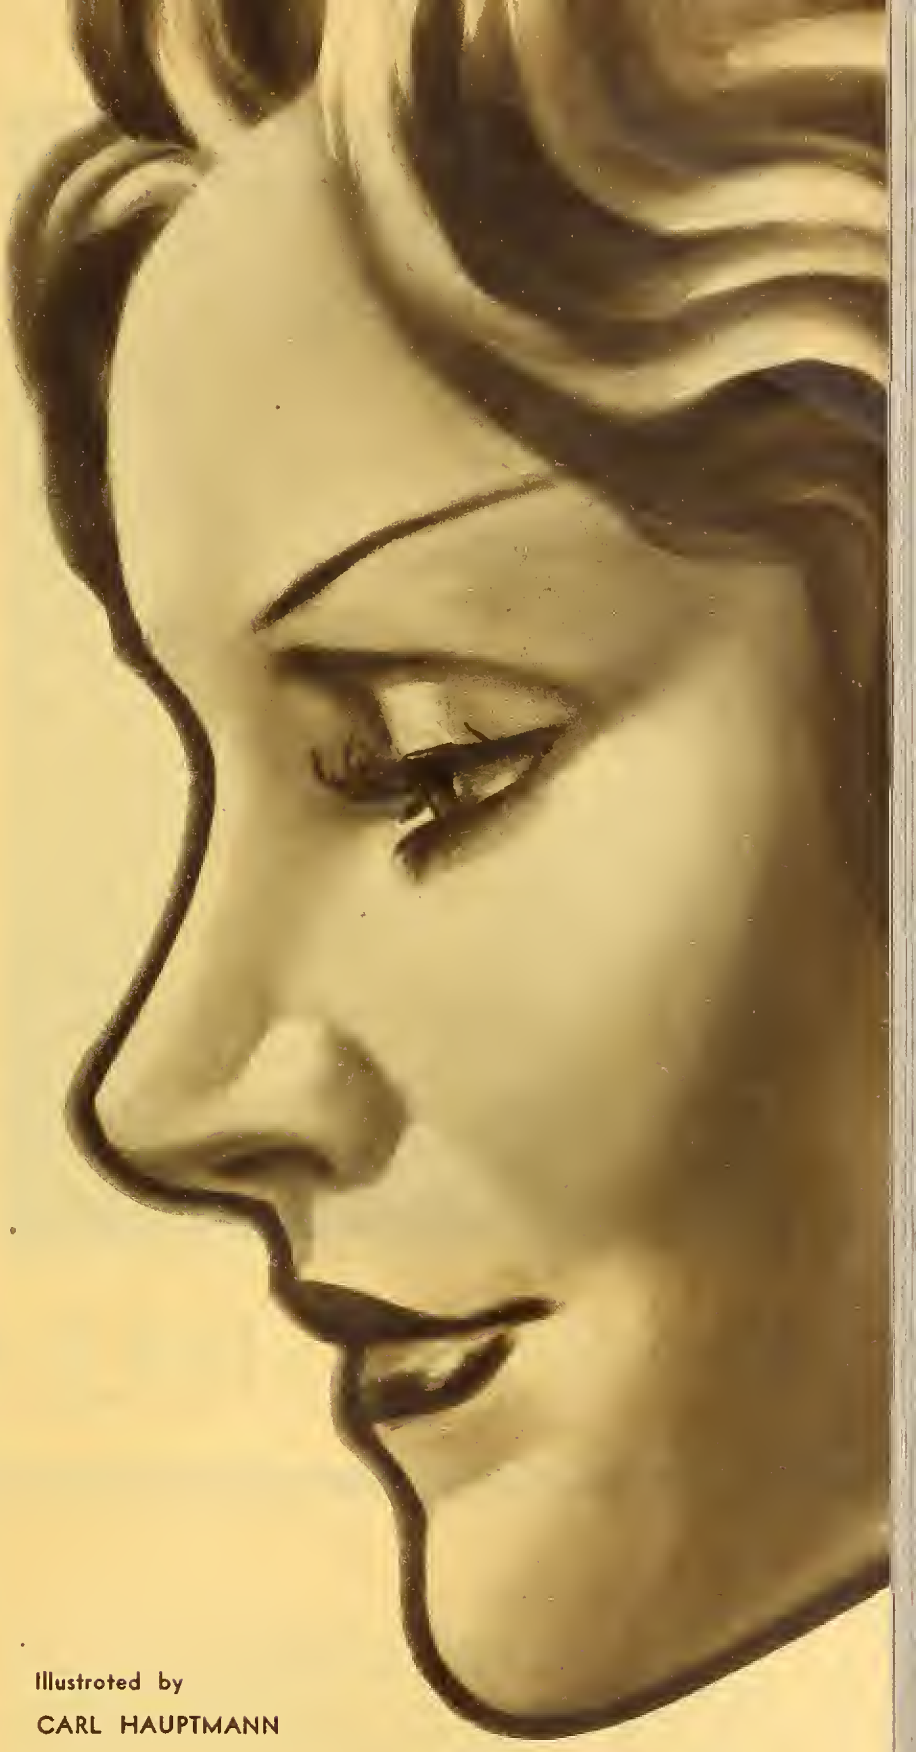
The first messenger from Hitler came like a bombshell, rousing the sleepy townsmen to garrulous gossip. He was blond with a mustache like his master's, and his square-set shoulders sloped awkwardly under a coat of obviously unfamiliar cut. He was a man made for a uniform with ribbons across its chest, and his eyes burned with a fire that Marlene did not understand.

This first emissary told her a story that stunned and thrilled her; that must have left her mind a welter of fancies and thoughts.

Before this visit, Marlene's foretaste of it all, the now-famous statement in Germany's official motion picture organ, the Film Kurier, that warned all German-Aryan actors appearing in foreign countries that the Chancellor expected them to return to the Fatherland or be forever excluded from any possibility of obtaining work in the motion picture business in Germany. There were whispered intimations of reprisals against the families and loved ones of any who dared to rebel. All these things had been brought to Marlene's attention.

SHORTLY afterwards, Hitler's first ambassador arrived with his cleverly planned message. Its first purpose was to banish any resentment Dietrich may have felt at being ordered about; its second was to summon her, not as a subject or slave, but as Napoleon might have summoned Josephine; as a Czar, almost, summoning his

. . . An amazing story which links world affairs with that far-flung industry, the movies. And which reveals the remarkable situation between the stern-lipped Chancellor of New Germany and the glamorous Marlene



Illustrated by
CARL HAUPTMANN

Czarina. That is how Hitler summoned Dietrich.

In effect, this message was: "You are not to regard the warning in the Film Kurier as pertaining to you. It was meant only for the others. Whenever you wish to return, you will be welcomed with open arms. For you, Adolph Hitler has a special regard and a special place."

Before I tell you of that regard and that place, you should know Adolph Hitler's intentions. He sees before him a triumphant Germany to the glory of which all Germans must labor. During the stay I made in Germany last Spring, when people could still talk about things they are forbidden to mention at present, I talked with many men and women connected with the German movies. They all and each one declared that the present Chancellor had the intention to suppress on the screen any production not filmed in Germany by a German concern.

In accord with this program, he had made up his mind to rally to his colors the famous German stars working abroad. Already, he was projecting measures which would compel these stars to give up their work abroad or renounce their native land.

And now—he had selected Marlene Dietrich to be the banner-bearer of Nazi Germany. It remained only to lure her back.

So, when his first ambassador appeared abruptly to throw her quiet and contented existence in that tiny French town into utter confusion, he was polite and formal, no doubt, but his offer came like a bolt from the blue. I think that offer would have turned the head of almost any woman in the world—except Marlene Dietrich.

Before his polite, insistent voice was finally quieted by her refusal to give him an answer, he had painted a glowing picture of a resurgent German movie industry, a throbbing triumphant industry carrying abroad the ideals and fame of a "purified" Germany. And at the head of this vital, vigorous business would stand slender, blue-eyed Marlene Dietrich.

The Chancellor would accord Dietrich the power to direct the destinies of German picture production according to her best lights and judgments; her decisions to go unquestioned and her job of so-called Czar, or rather Czarina, to be handled solely by her, without any outside interference. Her rights would include absolute control of production, with ability to accept or to reject everything from story idea to director, to okay or veto the choice of cast, billing, film cutting and the hundred and one other details attendant upon picture-making.

•

THAT ambassador went back to his master baffled and chagrined, I have said. Presently, such is the determination of this man Hitler, another took his place and returned to the quiet white house in France The newcomer interviewed the lovely (Continued on page 102)

Two significant things happened recently when Marlene Dietrich returned to America.

Questioned by reporters about Germany and Chancellor Hitler, Marlene was the epitome of diplomacy.

"I am an actress," Marlene evaded, "it is foolish to question me about political matters."

However, misquoted by one reporter as saying, "I may go back to Germany when Hitler is not there," Miss Marlene was horribly agitated.

Her mother lives in Germany, you see. It is a matter of record that where it has not been possible for the New Germany to punish those who have talked against it, their relatives have suffered.

The second significant thing occurred when Marlene was questioned about her future plans.

"After I make 'Queen Catherine,' I hope to have another holiday in France," she said. "Then I shall return to Hollywood for one more picture. After that—well, perhaps I shall work in France. Who knows—so far in advance?"

They're moviedom's musketeers—all for one and one for all—a pair of ambitious youngsters and a veteran showman, who is the husband of one and the good pal of the other

What a trio!

DICK POWELL and

YOU know those intimate little memory books that all kids keep?

Just like all of us, Dick Powell had one and on one of the pages, written in a bold boyish hand, is this notation: "Met Al Jolson today."

But at the time Dick wrote that he had no idea how great and curious a part Jolson was to play in his life.

It happened like this.

Dick was singing with a band and serving as master of ceremonies at a Pittsburgh theatre, but he was still young enough and still naive enough to be thrilled by celebrities.

A victrola company had asked Dick to make some records, and in the recording room he met Al Jolson, at that time the greatest showman of them all.

The power and vitality of the man impressed the boy. He had gripped Dick's hand and wished him success. How was young Powell to know that fate had planned that Al should contribute to his success?

Dick went home and wrote in his book. "Met Al Jolson today."

The scene shifts rapidly.

Warners gave Dick Powell a contract. He did well enough in a couple of films and was then cast as the juvenile in "Forty-Second Street." The girl who had the principal role was Al Jolson's wife, Ruby Keeler.

That night Dick did not write down, "Met Ruby Keeler today," for she seemed not at all like a celebrity, but a shy kid who was scared to death of the studio.

Her big eyes looked with increasing terror upon the bustle and activity of the set. She was sitting in a corner alone when they introduced her to Dick.

"Are you scared?" Ruby asked.

"Yes," Dick admitted, "kinda."

"But this is my first picture. You've been in pictures before."

"I've been in a few," Dick said. "But I'm scared anyhow."

IT is true that Dick was nervous about acting in a film as important as "Forty-Second Street," but there was something else that bothered him. Except for that one time in the victrola place, he had not met Ruby's husband. And he had heard how much Jolson adored his wife. He had also heard that Jolson was quick tempered. Another rumor had told him that Al was none too keen about Ruby's becoming a picture star.

It occured to him that Al might not like the idea of

THE JOLSONS!

Dick's making love to his pretty wife all day long. Suppose Al resented that intimate closeness that every love scene inspires. Dick got hot around the collar and wondered if he weren't in a spot.

But these thoughts were interrupted by the director who called Ruby and Dick before the camera to do a scene. When it was over, Ruby said to Dick, "But he didn't tell us what to do. And he didn't tell us whether he liked it or not."

"If he hadn't liked it he would have told us," Dick assured her.

"Oh, would he?" Ruby asked wide-eyed.

The next shot was a love scene.

Dick was really nervous now and he glanced hurriedly about the set wondering if Jolson were on the stage. And then something happened that made him even more worried. Ruby became suddenly tense and rigid. When he put his arms around her she stiffened.

Then it was true, Dick thought. Jolson was jealous. Ruby was afraid of love scenes, too. Boy, he was in a spot!

They rehearsed it once.

"Wait a minute," the director said. "You kids are supposed to be in love with each other. Ruby, you're crazy for him. Loosen up. Put your heart and soul in this. Act as if you really meant it."

But how, Dick wondered, could they loosen up when this barrier—the phantom of Ruby's husband—stood between them? Suppose Jolson were on the set. And suppose Ruby knew it!

And then, suddenly, the ridiculousness of the situation struck him. Why, it was all too funny. There was nothing to do but to laugh about it. Maybe that would relieve the tension, anyhow.

SO, during the next rehearsal, he took Ruby in his arms and shouted, "Say, who is this Al Jolson? I'd like that guy to see me now. And if he'd like to know, tell him I can't take any salary this week. Making love to Ruby is enough."

Everybody laughed, including Ruby. And suddenly the tense atmosphere cleared. This time when they finished the rehearsal, the director called out, "That's swell. We'll shoot it just like that!"

It was a perfect shot and Ruby was no longer shy. But when the scene was finished, Dick looked up and saw Jolson standing there. He (Continued on page 80)

By KATHERINE ALBERT

KAY FRANCIS' Style SECRETS

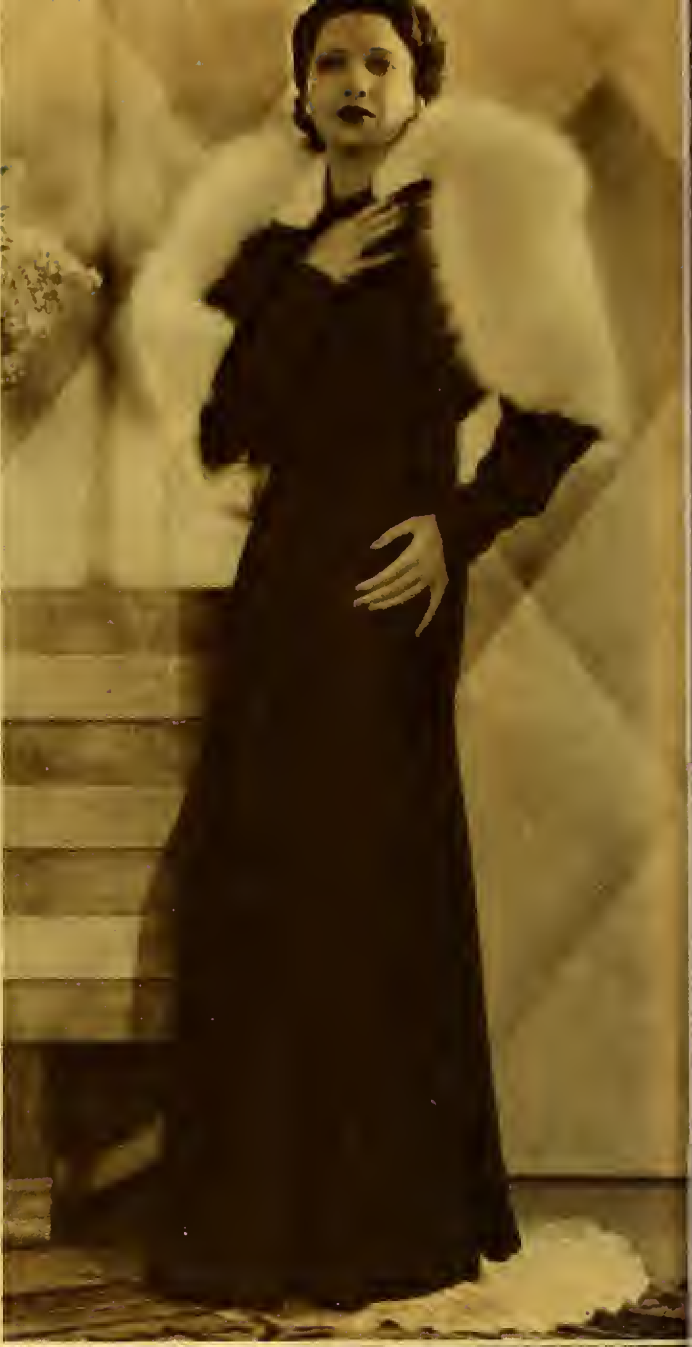
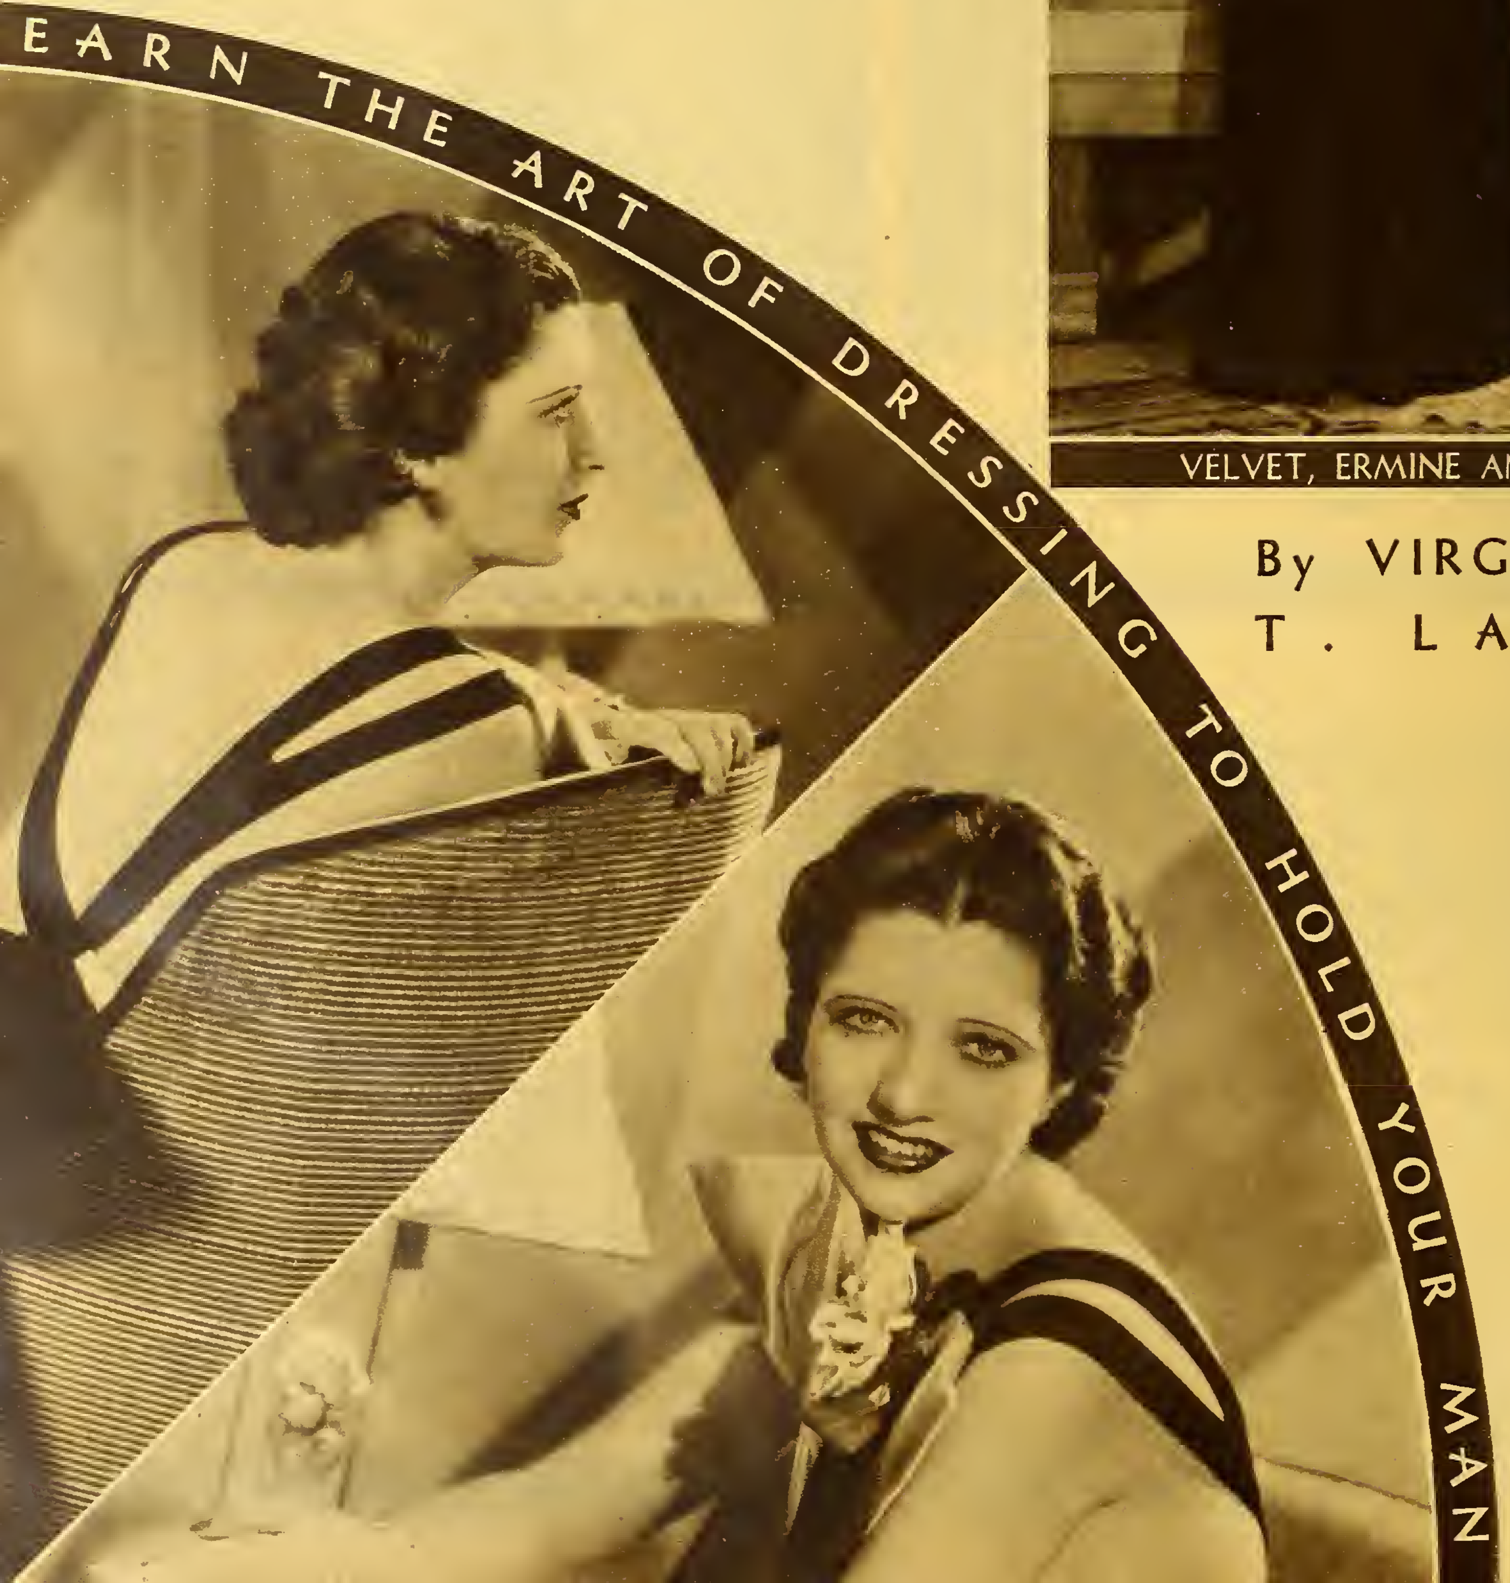
EARN THE ART OF DRESSING TO HOLD YOUR MAN

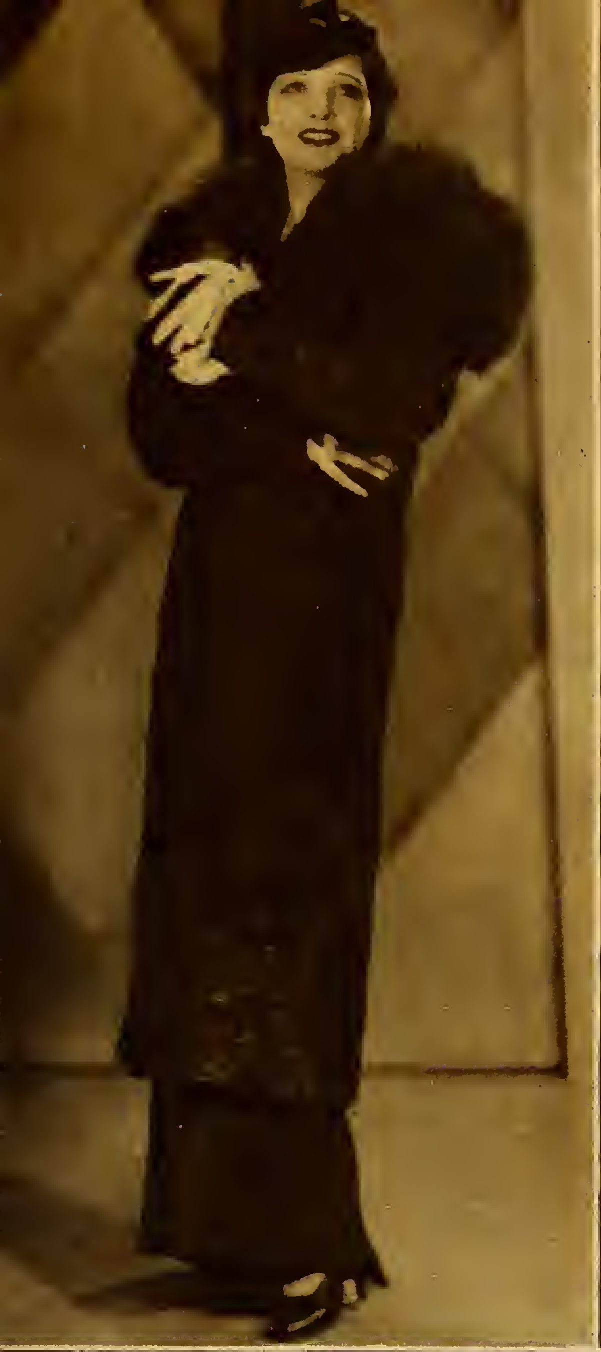
(Below) The back and front views of Kay's most glamorous evening gown. Flesh pink satin and black velvet. The rose in front is placed upon a tailored bow. (Right) A toe-length black velvet evening wrap. The ermine and fox cape is detachable and wearable alone.



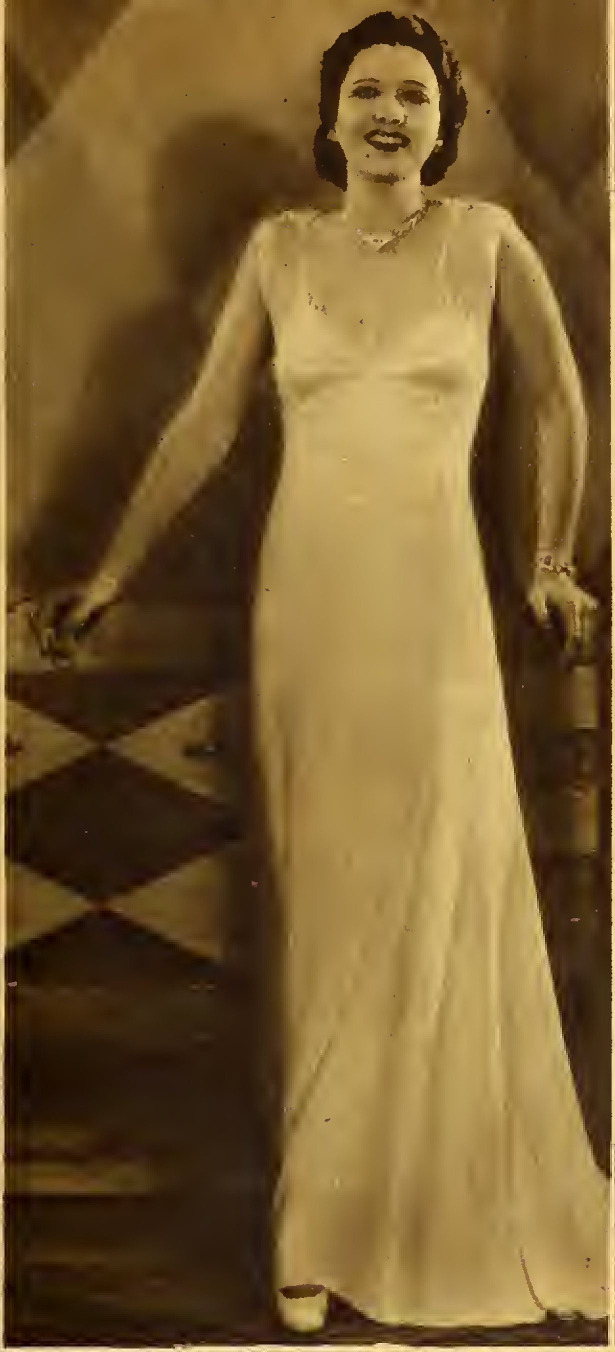
VELVET, ERMINE AND FOX

By VIRGINIA T. LANE

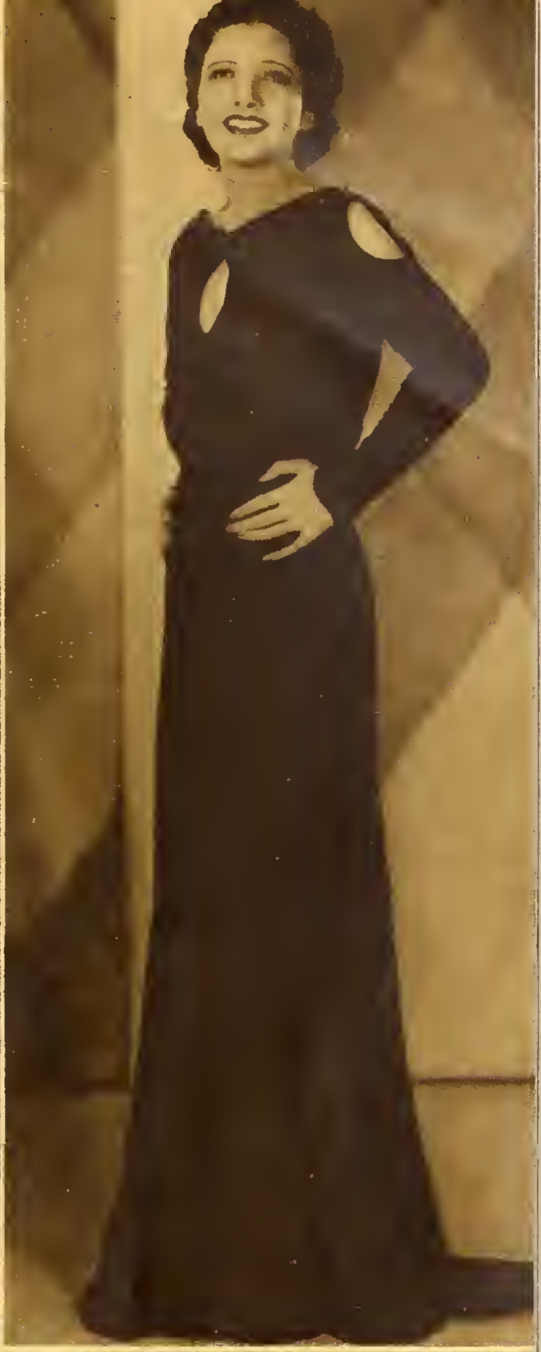




SMART PERSIAN LAMB COAT



WHITE CREPE ROMA



BLACK VELVET HOSTESS GOW

(Left) The latest fashion points in fur coats are illustrated in Kay's Persian lamb. Tubular, with straight sleeves, accented neck. (Right) White crepe roma and bugle beads, worked on a soufflé yoke that gives a startling bare effect.

If you really want to hold your man—husband or beau—or get your man, for that matter, have some sort of romantic hostess gown in your wardrobe, There's nothing more effective for winter than severe black velvet.

EIGHTY-SEVEN thousand women have written Kay Francis within the last year. And almost without exception those women have asked Kay how to dress to hold their husbands . . .

Revealing, pleading letters they were. She showed me a few. "What do you do to be so fascinating, Miss Francis? If I could look like you did in 'Mary Stevens, M.D.' I bet my husband wouldn't have left me alone tonight—as he does almost every night."

Kay looked up from reading that one—sent by a young matron from Middletown. "I wish there was some way I could help. I mean if there was something I could really do about it . . ." And that's where this article had its inception!

As one of the screen's best dressed women, Kay has had to give a great deal of thought to clothes. She seems to epitomize everything young wives want to be—terrifically smart, and charming and mysterious enough to tantalize.

"What if you were giving the seven gospels of dress to a bride—what would they be?" I queried.

She drew pencil and paper towards her, thought for a moment, then wrote down the following:

1. Don't dress up just for your big dates. You won't be able to look your loveliest all the time—no woman can—but strike a happy average. Manage to look your best three-fourths of the time at least. The minute you dress without thought, you're "letting down."
2. Keep that immaculately fresh look at all costs.
3. Never buy clothes merely because they're practical! Even your house dresses can have that delightfully romantic touch and still be very durable.
4. Watch out for the trifles of a costume—they're tremendously important. Never permit your slip to show and don't let your lingerie straps be seen. The easiest way to keep them in place is to tape them to the shoulder seams of your dress, especially if you're wearing an evening gown.
5. Exact imitation is bad; no two people are sufficiently alike to warrant it. When your clothes are in tune with you, then you are charmingly different.
6. Men are susceptible to bright colors and picturesque effects. They like to see women wear gloves.

7. It's a wise woman who doesn't blame her husband's low finances for her own lack of chic!

My eye was caught—and held—by that last of the "gospels" and all it implied. "But Kay, what would you do if you had to live on twenty-five dollars a week?"

"Exactly what I did before," she retorted calmly. "When I was a secretary, you know. I schemed every which way. There was one dress, I remember, that functioned famously. It was a black taffeta with high puffed sleeves and a square neck. For afternoons and Sundays I wore it with a pleated white guimpe and black and white sandals. For dinner I wore it without the guimpe and pinned two enormous yellow tulips on the shoulder. For more formal occasions I discovered a black sequin bolero to wear over it. I made myself an evening hat of the black sequins—and I think my friends said more kind things about me in that costume than in any other I've ever had!

"There are so many things you can do—particularly when it's a 'skirt and blouse' (Continued on page 92)

IMPORTANT NOTICE!

We have had a pattern made for you of one of Kay's loveliest evening gowns. You will find it on our regular pattern page—page 73 (Right) A grand suit. Wide-wale blue silk-and-wool. Tunic length coat—perfect for tall girls. Détachable feminine touches included in the ascot tie and cuffs. (Below) The exquisitely made blouse is of silver gray ribbed silk, with an amusing chain and hook to close the neck. The beads and bracelet are bright blue. Then, note Kay's brown suede and brown kid oxfords. Gold buttons match the trim on the bag. To their right, are two knockout belts. Above the belts is the delightfully insane hat Kay wears with her suit.

Jean answers YOUR QUESTIONS about her marriage

By

WALTER RAMSEY

Congratulations, flowers and twenty-two newspapermen awaited the newly wed Rossons upon their arrival from Yuma. All of which might have floored less poised people than Jean and Hal, who welcomed the visitors and posed graciously for pictures.

Acme

She knows the cruel and unflattering surmises her sudden elopement brought forth and deals with them frankly in this amazing interview

YOU aren't fooling Jean Harlow. Neither is Hollywood!

In spite of the tons of flowers that flooded her home immediately following the sensational news of her airplane elopement with Hal Rosson, and the thousands of polite telegrams of "congratulations," she knows that gossip rampant is pursuing her third marriage just as it has dogged every single climax of her Hollywood life.

She knows that those who have scrutinized, questioned and explored everything she has ever done, seeking ulterior motives and "hidden" stories, are wiring Hollywood with malicious little guesses of why did she do it?

For some time now, I have been telling the world it was my opinion that Jean Harlow was one of the swellest girls ever to come down the Hollywood pike. My deep admiration for her began in the dark days of the Paul Bern tragedy, which widowed the twenty-one-year-old girl and splashed her name in headlines all over the world. But I have never felt greater respect for her than I did that day in her exquisite white Georgian living-room listening to a bride of seven days not only "take it," but actually find sympathy and understanding of the viewpoint of the other fellow.

She was sitting in an enormous white chair, wearing a white sports blouse and skirt, her white-blonde hair waved loosely about her sun-tanned face, which was the only touch of color in this living portrait of a "Lady Done In White." I told her that I was there with the Hollywood gossip angles on her sensational marriage. I have learned from past experience in dealing with Jean to "shoot from the shoulder." Stunningly frank and outspoken herself, she detests bush-beating in others. Ask her a direct question and you get a direct answer. Yet, I quailed at some of the ideas.

Jean didn't. But more surprising than that, was her entire attitude on the matter. There was nothing barbed or angry or "fighting back" in the things she told me. Her thinking process is clearly illustrated in one of the first things she said.

"AS long as I am 'the platinum blonde,' as long as I appear on the screen in décolletté gowns and sexy love scenes, as long as I am Jean Harlow I am going to be discussed. It is the price that my kind of screen character pays for her fame, for her M-G-M contract. And I, personally, do not think that the price is unreasonable. I have tried always to be truthful and frank with the public about Jean Harlow. It is the least I can do."

She lighted a cigarette, calmly waved out the match.

"I don't think there is much you can tell me of what 'they' are saying about my marriage. I think I have heard, or at least sensed almost everything that could be said. You mentioned a moment ago that one of the first questions you had heard was: 'Why did she elope in the middle of the night when they could have made arrangements to be sanely and conventionally married at some reasonable hour of the day just like other people?' And of course the gossip answer is: 'Oh, you know Harlow! She's a publicity hound. Has to do everything sensationally so it will be sure to land in newspaper headlines.'

"But that isn't our answer. It is really a very simple and uninvolved reason with (Continued on page 86)

How COLUMBO discovered AMERICA and vice-versa!

(Left) The Singin' Russ Columbo has proved that he has a nice talent for comedy. In Universal's "Broadway Thru a Keyhole," Russ commences his screen career. That's Paul Kelly with him.

By JERRY WALD

TWO years ago, Russ Columbo was riding the sky, one of radio's brightest stars. "Crosby, Columbo and Vallee," ran the refrain that echoed in millions of loudspeakers.

For millions of women up and down the wavelengths, his voice held a spell and gave promise of romance and glamor. Even now, though he has been off the air for months, he continues to represent Prince Charming.

Before I tell you of the amazing way in which this came about, I want you to remember his acting in "Broadway Through a Keyhole." If you missed the picture, I can tell you there was a mellowness about his mimicry that bespoke much more than his brief experience as an actor. He's incredibly young, you know, to have found stardom in two separate fields. Yet his work bears a veteran's polish.

How is this possible? To give the answer I reveal some of the topsy-turvy things through which he has gone. Believe it or not, they are just the sort of things that might happen to you or me if we were to stray into the path of that thunderbolt called Fame.

In the Hollywood of 1925, when Bebe Daniels was the saucy siren whose virtuous screen kisses set a new standard for university co-eds, and Douglas Fairbanks was a gymnastically-inclined actor instead of a globe-trotter, Russ Columbo was the eighteen-year-old violinist who played "emotion" music for Pola Negri.

When the screen gained a voice, he abandoned his violin and became a voice double. Perhaps you remember a not-quite-convincing Gary Cooper in "Dynamite" singing "How Am I to Know?" Russ did that job and many others, subbing for this or that lord of the screen.

AT night, he played at the celebrated Cocoanut Grove in Gus Arnheim's orchestra. And after a while, with his own little group in the Club Pyramid. Was he ambitious? If you know Hollywood, you already have the answer. In a city where today's stenographer is tomorrow's screen sensation, everyone dreams and plans and hopes for the new day's break. Russ had his dreams, too.

He might still have those dreams if he had not met Con Conrad.

Con Conrad is one of the best song writers in this country. You've whistled his tunes . . . "Margy," "Barney Google," "Ma, He's Makin' Eyes at Me." But

A story of an amazing, Horatio Alger success—and bitter, sudden failure. A story of young love killed by fame's demands and a friendship wounded by one mistake. A story to which the ending has not yet been written . . .

(Above) He's undeniably handsome. His manners are charming. And his baritone voice is grand. (Right) Con Conrad. An unusual combination of hit song-writer and dynamic press agent. Remember the stories about Columbo being engaged to Garbo? Well, he's the chap who put that over!

the night he walked into the Club Pyramid in Hollywood, his fortunes were at a low ebb. Life had jostled him harshly and love had broken his heart—evil portent of what was to happen to Russ—but here in California he hoped to find new inspiration.

Russ first knew of his presence when a waiter brought him the message, "Con Conrad wants to see you. He's at that corner table."

Russ, who had been singing and leading his orchestra without attracting great local attention, attached no importance to the summons.

"Here I am, Mr. Conrad," he said. "What can I do?"

Con Conrad replied, "It's what I can do for you. Listen, kid, you've got what it takes. How soon can you leave for the East?"

That was the beginning. At four o'clock in the morning Conrad was still talking, still painting pictures of fame to the boy whose earnings to date had been $75 a week. A few minutes later, Con was saying, "Think it over, kid. Talk it over with your folks. I'm at the Ambassador." Then he changed his mind. "No, I've got a better idea. I'm going home with you now. We'll get this settled tonight. We won't wait till morning."

That is how it happened that Russ' mother and dad were awakened to face a voluble stranger who promised the moon, sun and stars to their boy.

At nine o'clock, Con, Russ and a lawyer were drawing up an agreement that Conrad would pay Columbo's expenses east and sell his talents in return for one-third of Columbo's earnings. At ten, Conrad had the contract in his pocket. So far so good, except for the fact that he had only $25 to his name.

IT is no easy job to raise $350. The fare back East was just that and Con's sole asset was a week-old Ford. Someone told him that one of the Rhythm Boys at the Cocoanut Grove wanted a car. Conrad hunted up the fellow and made a deal. The fellow was Bing Crosby. So it was his money, in a way, that started Columbo to New York, the same Columbo who was soon to be his bitterest rival in what the radio reporters called "The Battle of the Baritones."

The next day, Con Conrad and Russ Columbo embarked on a journey to the rainbow's end. It was July 4th, 1931.

The New York that Russ discovered was busy and brusk. If it hadn't been for

(Continued on page 98)

BACK to the FARM

KAY FRANCIS give a barn dance out to the Vendomey. And, by Jupiter, 'twas a peck o' fun. Now, if ye'll start at the top and read straight down, we'll tell ye who all the folks is. Fust, Mike Farmer and Glory Swanson. Glory kept hittin' the camera lenses with that water pistol, hehehe! Next, Jack Gilbert and his wife, Jinny Bruce as was. They left the little one ter home with the hired girl. Below them, ye'll find Ken MacKenna, the village constabule, Herbie Marshall and his wife, Edna Best, and our Kay, in a mighty purty checked sunbonnet. Husband MacKenna was right polite about lettin' uninvited folks in—jist for a short spell, though. He'd let 'em eat 'n' drink and then he'd hint that mebbe they'd better be pushin' along. Below them, Dick Barthelmess, who come togged out like a darkey, his wife Jessica Sergeant, Adolphe Menjou and Mr. and Miz Clive Brook. Ye'd have laughed yerself sick at Dolphe's real dress suit—made out of blue denim. Directly below this here writtin' is a gineral view of the layout. Bill Haines and Mrs. Richard Wallace in the foreground. And below that, Ly Barrymore and his wife, Irene Fenwick.

ENRAL STORE
HAY-GRAIN & COAL

WITH YOUR FAVORITE HOLLYWOOD STARS

WELL, if ye'll jist follow the same directions as ye did before, we'll tell ye about the folks on this page. Up top, there's a real sweet pitcher of Ruth Chatterton and her husband, George Brent. And below them, purty Joan Bennett and her husband Gene Markey. Then Mike and Glory again, in the hay wagon with some other folks. Kay didn't want us ter take pitchers of the wagon, but we snuck that one and she called us a naughty boy. And who d'ye suppose those folks are in the next pitcher? Florence Eldridge March and Fred March. 'Course, ye recognize Gloria Stuart and the chap with her is George Oppenheimer. Right below here is a good character photygraft study of Barthelmess—with the missus, again. And directly below them, a couple of desperate cowboys named Ric Cortez and Chuck Farrell, with Christine Lee and the Countess Frasso. And I guess that's all, folks. This is J. B. Scott signing off—goin' out ter git some snapshots of Donald Ogden Stewart's party.

Y' might look on page 62 for views of same.

IF HE HAD IT TO DO AGAIN, IT WOULD BE THE SAME. MARRIAGE—TO THE SAME GIRL—WITH THE SAME METHODS TO ENSNARE HAPPINESS. YET HE REALIZES HIS FAILURE

By HELEN LOUISE WALKER

RICHARD DIX says that the most important day in his career—in his entire life—was the day he married Winifred Coe. That experience, brief though it has been, painful as it must have been in some of its phases, nevertheless has marked a turning point more vivid, more powerful in its effect upon the man, than anything else in his life, a life crowded with crises, with decisions to be made, problems to be met, with adventures, intensity, excitement.

Rich has not been interviewed for a whole year. He has declined to discuss his affairs or his plans with anyone. He will not be interviewed again for a long while.

He told me, the other day, "There were some things printed early in my marriage, which made things difficult. That was one of the first things I learned, after I was married—that things could matter to me which had never mattered before. I decided that the best thing for everyone concerned would be for me not to say anything at all about anything.

"The first thing I want to make clear to you is that if I had it all to do over again. I should not change anything. I should proceed to this same point at which I now find myself. I do not regret my marriage, even though we are separated now. What is more, if this marriage should end in divorce, I should want to try it again. Keep on and on trying it until I met with success!"

Three years ago, Richard first told me about Winifred. He was so in love then that he stammered and blushed like any adolescent. Dix, who was Hollywood's most confirmed bachelor. Dix, who had had ample reason to learn to be cynical about women.

"I want to marry her if she will have me," he told me. "I want it more than I have ever wanted anything in the world."

He went on to describe her and to be ecstatic about the kind of girl she was. A girl who knew nothing of pictures, a girl who had been sheltered and protected and who knew nothing of making her own way in the world. She was intensely devoted to her family, to domesticity, to a dignified mode of living. A girl who was not at all impressed because he was a motion picture actor. A girl who liked him, not for what he stood for in his profession, not for the fame which had accrued to him, but because, somehow, he happened to be the sort of person that she liked! She wasn't, apparently, even curious about motion pictures or the people who made them. And Rich loved that lack of curiosity, that casual attitude of looking upon the picture business as a business, like the law or the wholesale shoe business or, perhaps, the profession of medicine.

THERE was some lovers' quarrel or other shortly after he told me all this, and Rich was quite heart-broken. All, he indicated, was

(Continued on page 90)

EXTRA

The Hollywood Times

Modern Screen's Last Minute News

THE VERY LATEST NEWS

VOL. 3, NO. 3

HOLLYWOOD, NOVEMBER, 1933

NEWS SECTION

GARBO BUILDING CHATEAU NEAR STOCKHOLM

Hepburn Reported Playing Extra in "Queen Christina"

It looks as if Garbo will soon put Hollywood and movies behind her. The star has just purchased an estate in Dyvik, Sweden, near Stockholm, and has okayed blueprints for an elaborate chateau.

When Greta first appeared in Hollywood, she stated that her desire was to earn money to buy a home in Sweden.

"Queen Christina" is now in production and the latest rumor concerning it credits Katharine Hepburn with applying for an extra job. Katie is an ardent admirer of Garbo's and would like to see her work. An interesting slant on this news lies in the fact that many predict she will ultimately take Greta's place.

Jimmie and Sally Balk —Sally Cast for Western

No sooner had Sally Eilers departed from the cast of "Jimmie and Sally," than James Dunn began to draw up his walking papers. Sally claimed her role was "secondary. Jimmy just walked out.

The story's title will undoubtedly be changed, for Claire Trevor and Bruce Riley have been substituted. Incidentally, 'tis said that Sally will play in a Western opposite George O'Brien.

Cabot Flies to Adrienne Then to His Home Town

No sooner was the ink dry on Adrienne Ames' divorce certificate than Bruce Cabot appeared on the scene. He had flown to Reno to plan their forthcoming marriage.

When arrangements were agreed upon, Cabot took off for Carlsbad, New Mexico, his home, to prepare for the big event. Hollywood has interestedly watched this romance since the days when Stephen Ames—Adrienne's "ex"—was delighted that his wife found Bruce a good pal.

ELIZABETH ALLAN AND ROBERT MONTGOMERY TOOK A DAY OFF FROM THE STUDIO TO SEE THE MATCHES RECENTLY

ERIC LINDEN IS FINDING LIFE PRETTY DULL WITH FRANCES DEE ABOUT TO BE MARRIED. SEE STORY AT RIGHT

RENEE ADOREE

Though she had been ill for several years, Renee Adoree's sudden death came as a great shock to the film colony. When the end came, the celebrated star of silent picture days was at her home in Tujunga with Toni, her German companion.

Miss Adoree flashed to fame for her excellent portrayal of Melisande in "The Big Parade," although she gave many fine screen characterizations before and since that one.

CLARA BOW DENIES RIFT WITH REX

The "Brooklyn Bonfire" Explains Cause of Rumor

Clara Bow has all the answers; most of them pretty good, too. If you ask about the rumor that's been seeing the light of print recently, regarding her contemplated separation from Rex Bell, she says, "Nothing to it! Rex and I had an argument. I won; so what?"

Hollywood newspapers ran pictures of the popular pair in tight embrace the day after the meanies started the yarn about a divorce. Meanwhile, the reported "heart" is keeping very quiet.

Flashes from Here and There

Billie Dove and her husband, Bill Kenniston, are thrilled that they're "blessed-eventing."

Eleanor Boardman and Harry D'Arrast, director, will be married as soon as the actress' divorce decree from King Vidor becomes final.

Max Baer and his wife, Dorothy Dunbar, are legally free, which news will interest several sentimental ingenues.

Bill Cagney's recent marriage to Boots Mallory put him in a featured role in "Success." Nothing succeeds like it, you know.

Elissa Landi has just completed her third novel, "The Ancestor."

Dorothy Wilson is the latest leading woman to be cast in "Eight Girls in a Boat."

FRANCES AND JOEL ENGAGEMENT BLOW TO ERIC

Youthful Player Grieves Over Unrequited Love

Eric Linden was recently reported as being seen "somewhere in Europe." The youthful actor left Hollywood the day Frances Dee and Joel McCrea became engaged, declaring he would never return.

Young Linden went about his departure systematically. First, he requested a cancellation of his four-year contract with RKO; then, having just paid down $1200 on his car, returned it to the finance company; and finally, left town immediately. You see, Eric was madly in love with Frances. He is willing to toss his career in Hollywood up in the air now.

Time is a great healer and youth responds quickly, so let us hope!

Sequel for Jean Harlow; Film with Weissmuller

Jean Harlow will don a wig again and create once more that character which started her on the high road to success. "Red-Headed Woman in Paris" is the new title. The story will pick Jean up in Europe (where the first installment ended) and carry her through further adventures.

Incidentally, M-G-M is planning to star the Platinum One with Johnnie Weissmuller in a combination "Tarzan" "Red Dust."

More Wedding Bells— Cary Grant and Virginia

Their closest friends would have you believe that Cary Grant and Virginia Cherrill are all set to take the matrimonial plunge.

Of course, this is not one of the newer Hollywood romances; in fact, its claim to fame lies in its consistency.

Rumor also hath it that there will be a foursome trip to Europe very soon, the vacationing parties being, besides Cary and Virginia, Vivien Gaye and Randolph Scott

THE MARQUIS IS ON HIS WAY TO LOOK OVER HIS ESTATE IN PARIS AND CONNIE BENNETT SAW HIM OFF, LIKE A DUTIFUL WIFE

. . . WHAT EVERY

Divorces take a back seat as fierce marriage epidemic sweeps Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD has been doing nothing but elope this month.

Starting off with the Jean Harlow-Hal Rosson airplane jaunt to Yuma, Arizona (see the story on page 29), our fair hamlet has been bombarded with "more of the same" as fast as the planes could be scheduled. First:

Sally Eilers and Harry Joe Brown. With the startling announcement of this airplane elopement, Hollywood was also treated to the news that Sally had obtained a Mexican divorce—secretly—from Hoot Gibson a few weeks ago. Sally met Harry Joe Brown on her recent trip to Europe. He was traveling on the same boat and during the entire stay abroad they saw each other daily. "I didn't know I was in love with him until he left me in New York and came on to Hollywood ahead of me," says Sally. "But when he met my train in Pasedena, I realized just how much he had come to mean to me and how I had missed him."

Harry Joe Brown is a producer-director at Paramount and a great friend of Hoot's (who sent his best wishes as soon as the wedding was announced). It even looks as though Sally might quit her contract at Fox and go with her husband at Paramount. (More about that later.) They are now living in one of the most gorgeous apartments in Hollywood—seven rooms at the famous Colonial House.

And second:

Boots Mallory and Bill Cagney. Boots has been rumored "engaged" to so many of the local swains that

Toby Wing is THE cutest thing. Maurice Chevalier thinks so, too! That's one of her costumes for DeMille's "This Day and Age."

FAN SHOULD KNOW

Winter season brings gay parties—and the postman brings invitations when she eloped to Caliente, Mexico, it was no end of a surprise. Our newest newlyweds met in the Cocoanut Grove about three months ago. Since that time they have been together almost constantly—Boots taking a few nights off for her other "hearts" occasionally. They were married by a Justice of the Peace in the Mexican town and had a policeman and a cowboy for witnesses. They're looking for a Mexican house in Hollywood in which to settle down.

● Talk about your realism! In a fight scene in "Hoop-la," one of the extras was supposed to hit Clara Bow gently on the chin. As it happened the extra was an ex-prizefighter, and the "gentle tap" knocked Clara completely out. She suffered a bruised jaw, a cut tongue and had to go to bed for a day.

Then over on the Warner lot, during a football sequence in "College Coach," Lyle Talbot was tackled with so much vigor that he had to be taken out of the cast to recuperate. Dick Powell got off a little easier—he suffered merely a sprained ankle!

FIRST NITE NEWS

Bette Davis almost stopped the show at the opening of "I Loved A Woman" by bouncing in with eight escorts! Conspicuous by his absence was Harmon O. Nelson, the husband but very much in evidence was one Lynn Riggs. Lynn seems to be getting quite a habit.

A humorous touch to this particular occasion was the fact that Bette sported a huge corsage of red and white carnations and in the lapel of each man's coat was one of these posies. Four reds and four whites.

Dick Powell acted as master of ceremonies and did a good job of it. He was there with Mary Brian, whom he admits is still his best gal. But he also admits that Mary has such an abundance of boy friends that he has just about given up the idea of being anything more than "another escort" in her life. Not that he wouldn't like to be more than that.

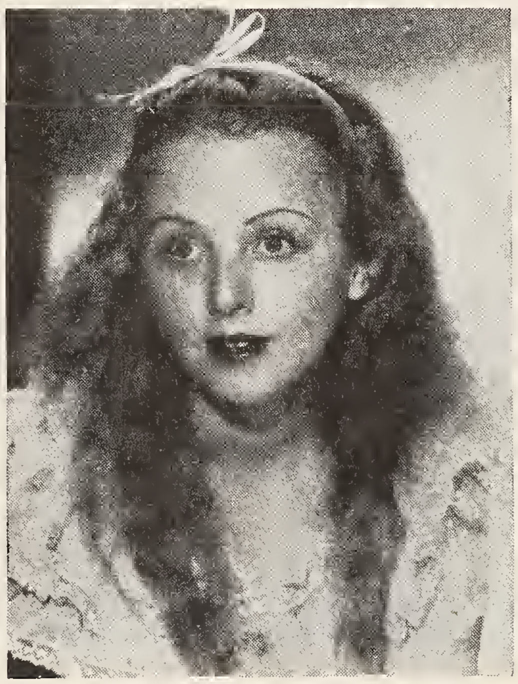
● The Donald Ogden Stewart party was a howling success. (See page 62.) All the guests (which included almost all of filmland) were asked to come representing their favorite actor or actress. It was interesting to note that there were several Joan Crawfords, Hepburns, Shearers and oodles of Mae Wests. But not a single Garbo. Does this signify that the Swedish star isn't such a favorite? Anyway, we think someone missed a grand chance. Wouldn't Garbo as the dancer in "Mata Hari" with a pair of size twelve shoes (as a gag) have been a riot?

MARRIAGE DEPARTMENT

● Hollywood is turning into a matrimonial center, all right. There's Mervyn LeRoy and Doris Warner. They'll get married as soon as Mervyn gets a breathing spell from his directorial jobs. The sudden romance of Lola Lane and Al Hall is so serious that it seems

Acme

William S. Hart took sick and had to go to Lebanon Hospital in Los Angeles. Two-Gun Bill is better now, thanks.



Meet Alice in Wonderland. In other words, winsome Charlotte Henry, who won the Paramount role over 7000 other contestants.

The perfect girl—Agnes Craney—and the perfect man—Jack Jenkins, winners over 100,000 in Paramount's "Search for Beauty."

WALLY AND CAROL ANN IN LUNNON

Acme

(Above) They both look a little bit dazed, though Wallie is smiling manfully. The big Beery and his adored little daughter, Carol Ann, being welcomed in London. (Right) Contender Max Baer, Spanky ("Left Hook") McFarland of "Our Gang," and Carnera. In "The Prizefighter and the Lady."

bound to end at the marriage bureau. In fact, they as much as admit they're headed that way.

But Genevieve Tobin, according to her Ma, is not going to be rushed into matrimony. True, she's engaged, but she wants plenty of time to get acquainted with her man, Felix Chappellet, before she says those important words, "I Do." La Tobin doesn't believe in marrying in haste and repenting at leisure, which seems to be the vogue in Hollywood. She wants her marriage to stick!

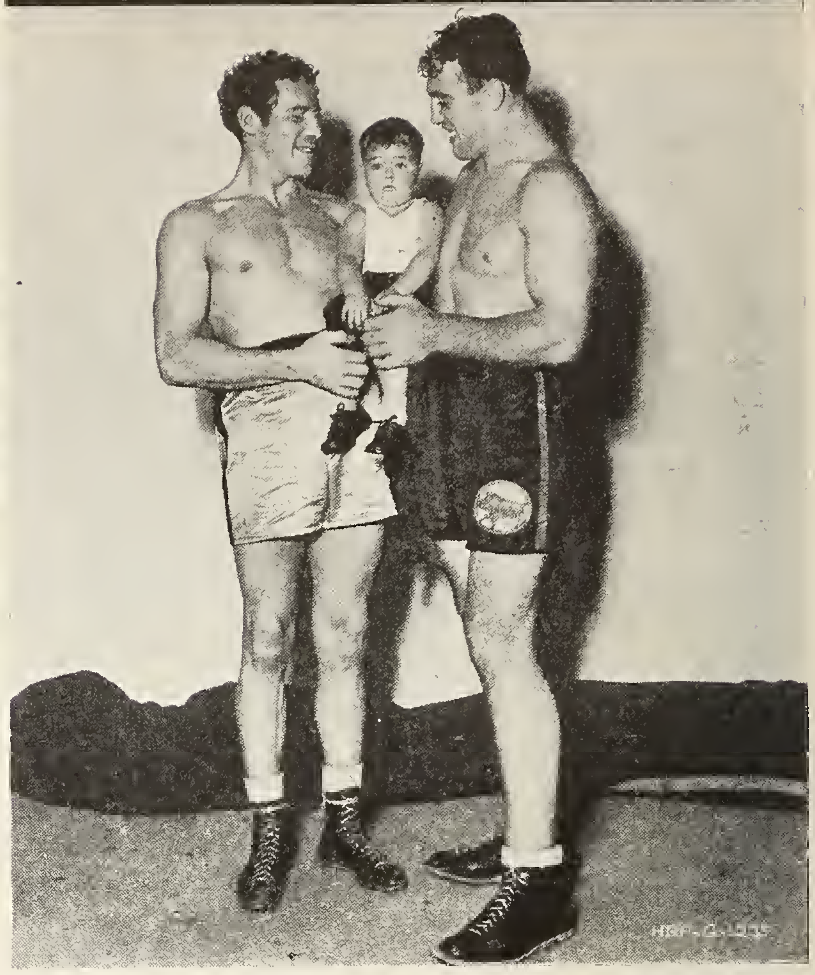
● "And who is Mae West?"

The above question was asked by Marlene Dietrich, creator of "mannish styles for women" . . . but now looking as frilly and feminine and curvy as West herself. This latter fact no doubt motivated the young reporter to ask her how she liked the Mae West styles. In answer to which La Dietrich raised her exotic eyebrows and asked the question that has set the entire film colony a-buzzing.

The battle's on! Marlene has made the first move. Now watch for developments. They should be interesting, inasmuch as both gals are under contract to the same studio—and their meeting is inevitable!

● Greta Garbo is as punctual as George Arliss. At 7:55 to the dot, she checks in at the studio. And at six sharp she drops whatever she's doing and goes home. Arliss has his valet keep his eye on the time-piece and at the appointed hour he steps on the set and reminds his master that it is now exactly six o'clock. But Garbo handles the matter a little differently. She merely instructs her maid to approach her with a glass of water. That's the tell-tale signal. When the boys see that glass of water appear, they know it's a day—even though they be right in the middle of an important scene.

JUST A TRIO OF HUSKY CHAMPIONS



TURF NOTES

● May Robson wandered out to the County Fair at Pomona, California, one Sunday. She was sitting in the grand stand watching the horse races, when the announcer made it known to the crowd that the "Lady for a Day" was in their midst. Fifty thousand people stood up and cheered as May, sporting a very jaunty beret, took a bow.

The same day, over in the stables, Wheeler and Woolsey and Dorothy Lee were spied looking over the livestock. One of the ambitious photographers got the bright idea of having the three of them pose on the back of the prize winning horse. The animal proved to be exceptionally frisky and while the three hung on for dear life, the crowd howled with laughter as Wheeler burst forth with "Who's afraid of the old gray mare?" to the tune of "Who's afraid of the big bad wolf?"

● And while we're on the subject of horse-racing, have you heard the story they're telling on Marie Dressler? It seems that a man in the horse-racing business back in Ohio had been spreading the yarn that he once was Marie's husband. A newspaper man wired Marie, querying her about this. And this is what she wired back:

"Positively untrue but I am getting old and tired and need long rest so if horses running well and he has millions I might consider his proposition at this time."

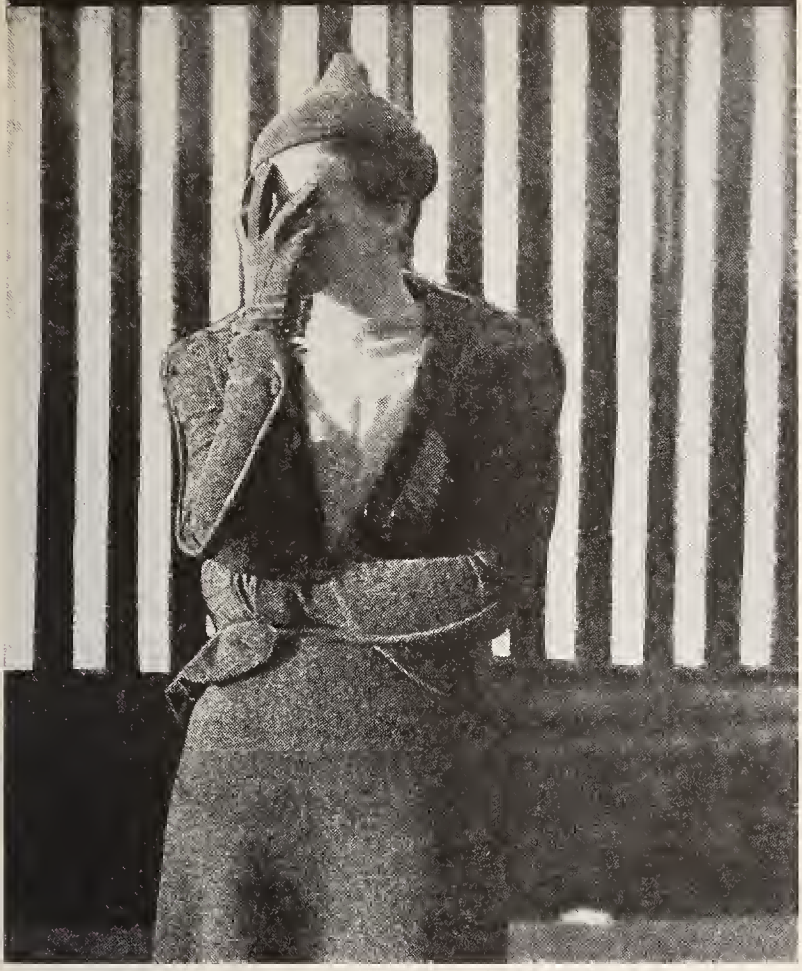
Leave it to Marie to see the humorous side of the thing.

● Lilian Harvey was so worried over how the public would feel about "My Weakness" that she sat home wringing her hands all during the preview. She suffered from such a bad case of nerves that she positively refused to go near the theatre.

However, she was finally persuaded to attend the re-

Miss Dressler's snappy telegram . . . No more Jimmie and Sally? Miss Dietrich, you

KATIE HEPBURN DOES A GARBO



Wide World

MEET MISS SUSAN ANN GILBERT

International

(Left) Katie Hepburn went, in one of her smartest suits and nuttiest hats, to the semi-finals of the Pacific Southwest Tennis Tournament. Photographers bobbed up. And Katie did them that way. (Above) Six weeks old was Susan Ann Gilbert when this was taken.

ception afterwards. And the greeting she received as she made her appearance was so great that it would have satisfied a queen—or even Pola Negri herself!

DOTS AND DASHES

● Dorothea Wieck celebrated her first wedding anniversary the other day . . . Genevieve Tobin has a handsome new mink coat . . . Donald Cook's ambition is to be a director . . . Jean Harlow has no eyebrows—she paints 'em on . . . Johnny Weissmuller has taken up outboard speed-boating . . . Junior Laemmle gave Eleanor Holm (his former sweetie) a set of silver for a wedding present . . . Garbo personally picked Cora Sue Collins to play herself as a child in "Queen Christina" because little Miss Collins looks so much like Garbo's own baby pictures . . . Ginger Rogers' ambition is to make a million dollars, then marry and have at least five children.

● Sally Eilers had no sooner returned from her elopement than she started raising a big fuss over at Fox studio. She absolutely refused to do "Jimmy and Sally," the picture that was to be another "Bad Girl." She claimed her part was too small and insignificant. When she moved all her furniture out of her dressing room, it was believed that she and Fox had actually parted. But it was later stated that the room was needed for office space. However, to date, she hasn't moved into any other dressing room. So-o-o-o. . . . This, coupled with the fact that Sally has intimated that she would like very much to be free to work at Paramount, where her husband is a director, makes it look more than ever as though the rift will not be patched up.

● Jeanette MacDonald and Ramon Novarro are continuing to squabble over on the "Cat and the Fiddle" set. Some wit remarked it should be re-titled "Two Cats and a Fiddle"!

● That Kelton kid (Pert's the first name) is getting in bad in Hollywood because she's such a good actress. First, she stole honors from Connie Bennett in "Bed of Roses." Then, secondly, Samuel Goldwyn is practically re-making the entire picture, "Nana." One reason is that Pert outshone the star, Anna Sten. The new version will not include Miss Kelton in its cast! At present, she's doing a comedy with Zasu Pitts but chances are she won't do any stealing there.

● Loretta Young and Spencer Tracy continue to discuss their "business" during cosy intimate luncheons or while dining and dancing at various popular late-spots about town. They seem to have such a grand time together that maybe the business—which concerns a play both hope to appear in some time this season—is just an excuse! Both Mr. and Mrs. Tracy deny that Loretta had anything to do with their separating. But maybe she will have something to do with keeping them separated.

LOST LOVE NEST

● A few weeks ago Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler took a drive out to Palm Springs and looked rather sadly, but hopefully, at a certain nice sandy lot. Al bought it several years ago and had plans all laid out for a beautiful $100,000 home to be built on it where he and Ruby could spend their holidays. Then came the stock market crash . . . and all dreams of a home were blasted. But Al and Ruby still have the lot . . . and hopes!

LOOK FOR MORE GOSSIP ON PAGE 78

certainly have started something! And we don't mean a trouser fad by any means!

Joan Crawford Offers you a THRILLING CONTEST

PRIZES:

1st—A free trip to visit Joan Crawford in Hollywood, to go places and see things as this glamorous star's guest, to meet her friends, who will then become your friends.

2nd—A Crosley Shelvador Refrigerator (see picture).

3rd—$100 in cash.

4th—A Crosley Dual Tone Low-Boy Radio (see picture).

5th—Ten prizes of a Max Factor make-up kit (see picture).

6th—Five prizes of $10 each.

7th—Ten prizes of $5 each.

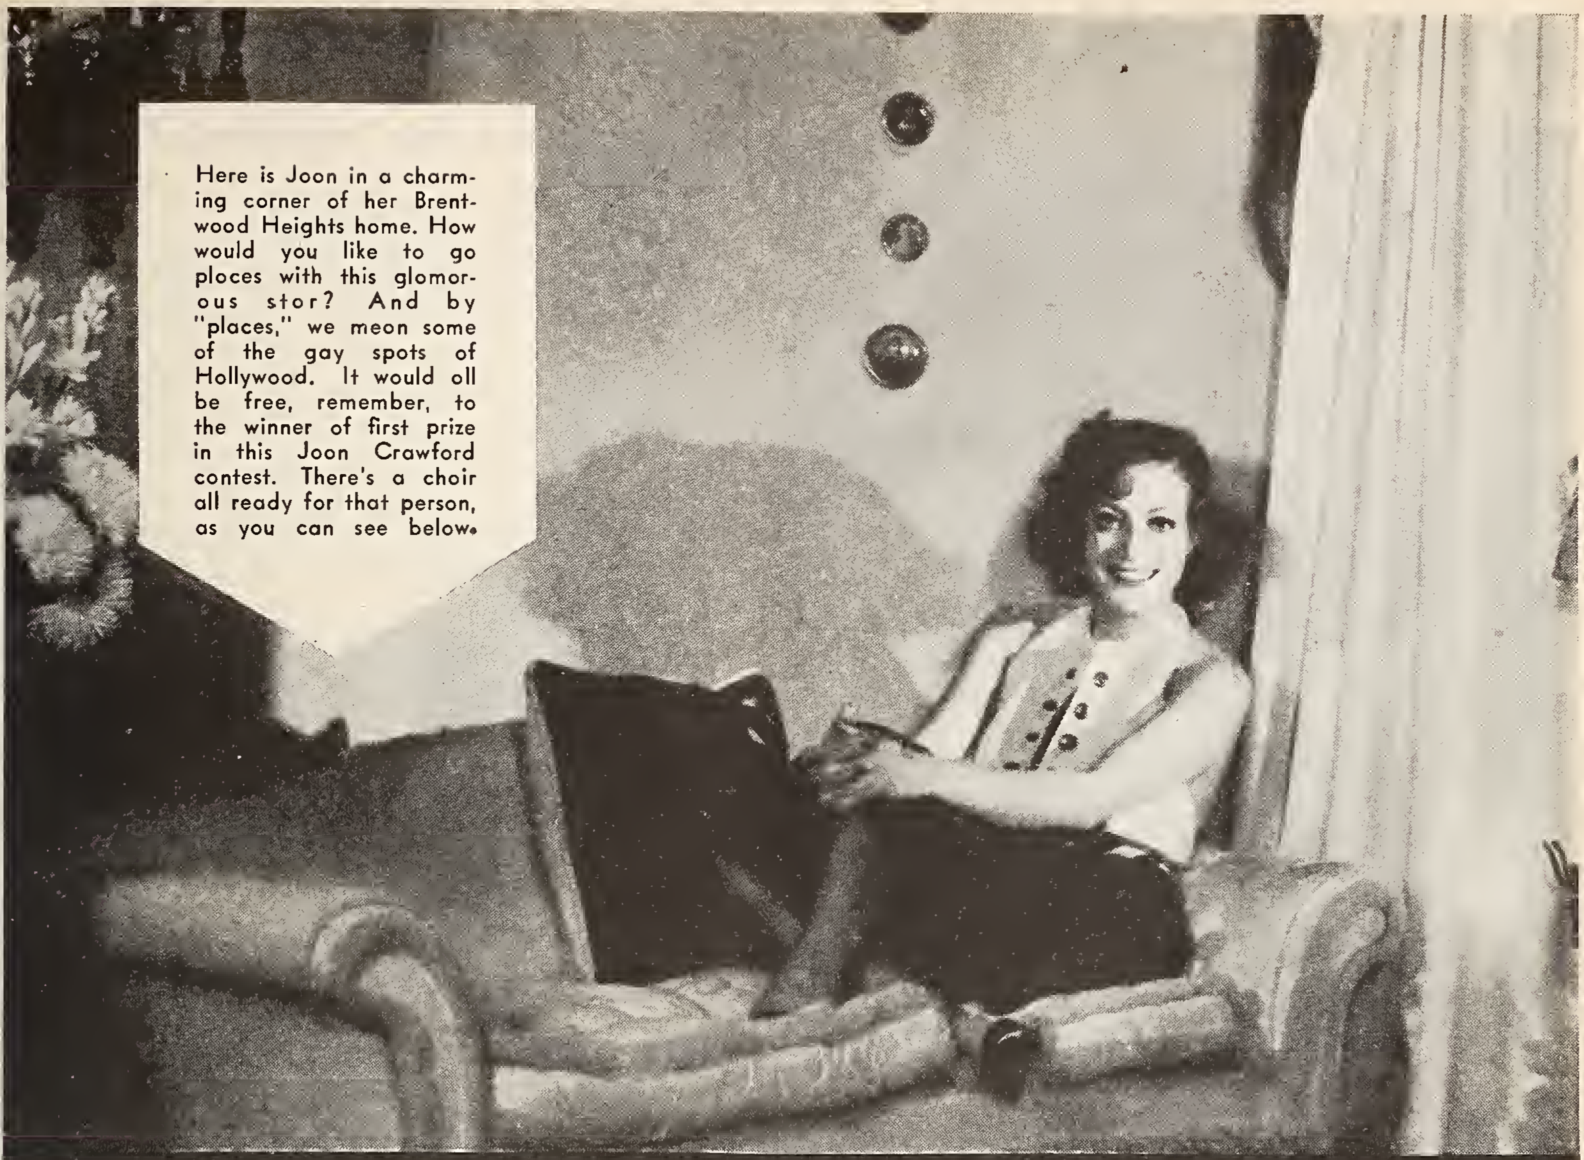
2nd PRIZE: A Crosley Shelvador Refrigerator

Will YOU visit Joan Crawford in Hollywood? Will you win one of these fascinating prizes offered in this exciting contest? Twenty-nine prizes in all—and a lot of fun in the bargain!

HERE you are, boys and girls and ladies and gentlemen! The Joan Crawford contest, which offers more fun than the proverbial barrel of monkeys.

And that's not all it offers, either! Just consider the prizes: first, a free trip to Hollywood, to meet Joan Crawford, to be entertained by her, and taken all manner of exciting places by her. Second, a most modern and efficient Crosley Shelvador Refrigerator to replace that dismal, over-crowded ice-box mother has out in the back pantry. Third, one hundred beautiful dollars in cash. Fourth, a Crosley Dual Tone Low-Boy Radio—a good-looking instrument with a peach of a tone. Fifth, ten prizes each (you see, you can't lose) of a Max Factor make-up kit. Sixth, five prizes of $10 each. And seventh, ten prizes of $5 each. In case of ties, duplicate prizes will be awarded.

Now—where's the little chore you have to do to win one of those elegant prizes? Just turn over the page. There you'll see a number of cut-up pictures. They are four scenes from Joan Crawford's latest picture, "Dancing Lady." You are supposed—nay, commanded!—to put the pictures together again, like Humpty-Dumpty, arrange or number them in the proper order (the order in which the scenes take place in "Dancing Lady". See the synopsis on the next page.) Then—hold those pictures until next month. We'll give you four more to do. Then write a description of Joan Crawford—in ten words or less. Send the eight stills, together with your ten word description of Joan Crawford to the Joan Crawford Contest, MODERN SCREEN Magazine, 100 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. All entries—remember, the complete eight pictures and description—must be mailed before midnight of January 15, 1934.



Here is Joan in a charming corner of her Brentwood Heights home. How would you like to go places with this glamorous star? And by "places," we mean some of the gay spots of Hollywood. It would all be free, remember, to the winner of first prize in this Joan Crawford contest. There's a chair all ready for that person, as you can see below.

FIRST PRIZE: A free trip to visit Joan Crawford in Hollywood, to go places and see things as this glamorous star's guest.

4th PRIZE: A Crosley Dual Tone Low-Boy Radio

5th PRIZE: A Max Factor Make-Up Kit

CAN YOU PUT THE PICTURES

THE STORY OF "DANCING LADY"

Tod Vianet (Franchot Tone) liked wine, women and song. What is more, he could afford them. Tod had dedicated his young life to becoming a super-playboy.

When Park Avenue night life palled, there was downtown New York with its hectic side-shows and gaudy burlesques. It was in one of these that Janie (Joan Crawford) appeared, Janie of the twinkling toes and the magnetic personality.

One evening Tod and the police arrived at the notorious girl-show simultaneously. The latter had come to not-too-gently, but firmly, remove the scantily-garbed talent from the entertainment boards. Young Vianet paid Janie's fine at court. Which favor, he considered, entitled him to intimate and exclusive rights on the dancer. However, it did not take her long to change his mind.

After weeks of idleness, Janie finally secured a job with Patch Gallagher, (Clark Gable) director of Bradley's musical shows.

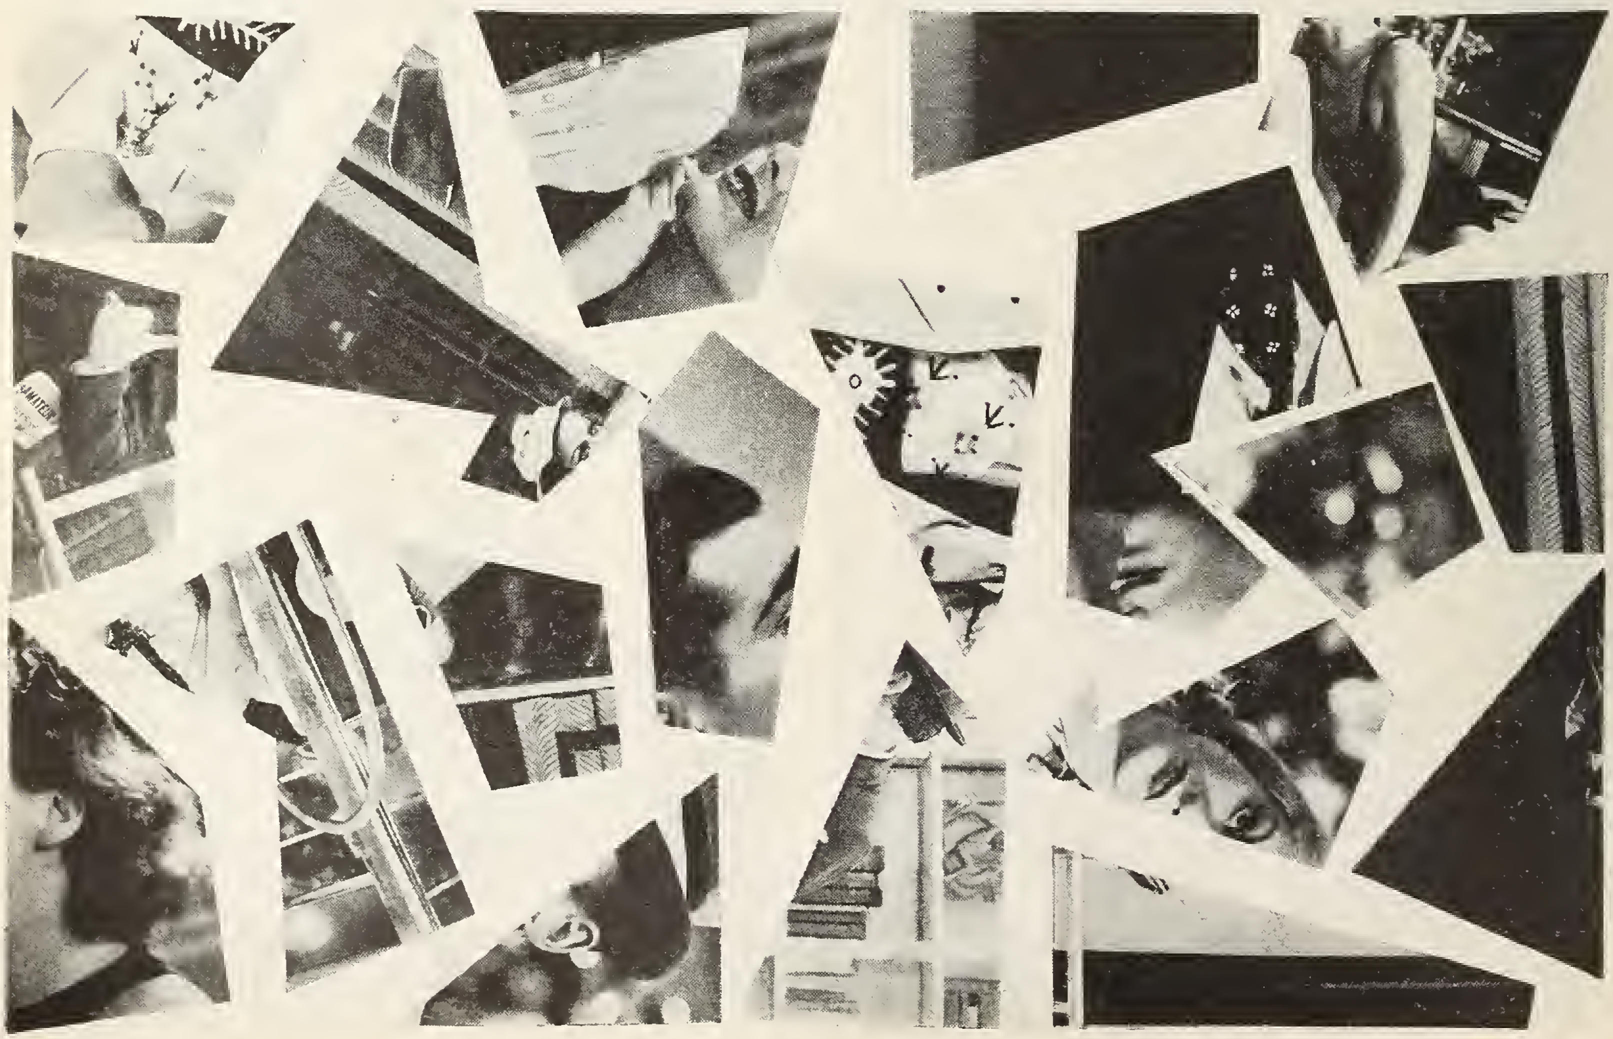
Meanwhile Tod continued to pursue Janie, who consented to marry him if the show should prove a flop. The ingenious youth assures himself of a nice break by buying out Bradley and closing the show.

At this point, Patch's ire is up. He has worked desperately hard for the show and decides to invest his savings in it and carry on. However, when he learns that it was Tod who queered its chances, he sets out on a spree to forget it all.

Meanwhile, Janie, Tod and their gay gang, just returned from a yachting cruise, are celebrating in a crowded bar. There, they discover a dejected and inebriate Patch, who, believing Janie has known what has happened and deliberately deserted the show to marry money, blurts out his side of the story. Which enlightening yarn promptly secures Tod his walking papers from Janie.

Janie takes Patch to his apartment, sobers him up and makes him promise to teach her the routines of the new show. The pair work like Trojans and finally whip the production into shape. Then, there is the matter of instating Janie in the principal role.

On opening night, Tod arrives laden with promises. Janie shall be his wife, share his millions and continue her career if she chooses. She doesn't. She chooses work, success—and Patch!



IN THE RIGHT ORDER . . . ?

RULES

1. At the bottom of these two pages, there are four stills—cut up in segments—from "Dancing Lady." Next month four more stills—also cut up—will be published. The eight stills (or facsimiles of them) must be put together correctly and neatly and arranged in the order in which the corresponding scenes take place in "Dancing Lady." (Synopsis on the opposite page.) When you have done this, write a description of Joan Crawford, in ten words or less. Submit the eight stills and the description together.

2. The prizes will be awarded to the persons who put together and arrange most correctly and neatly the eight stills submitted and who, in the opinion of the judges, give the best descriptions of Joan Crawford in ten words or less.

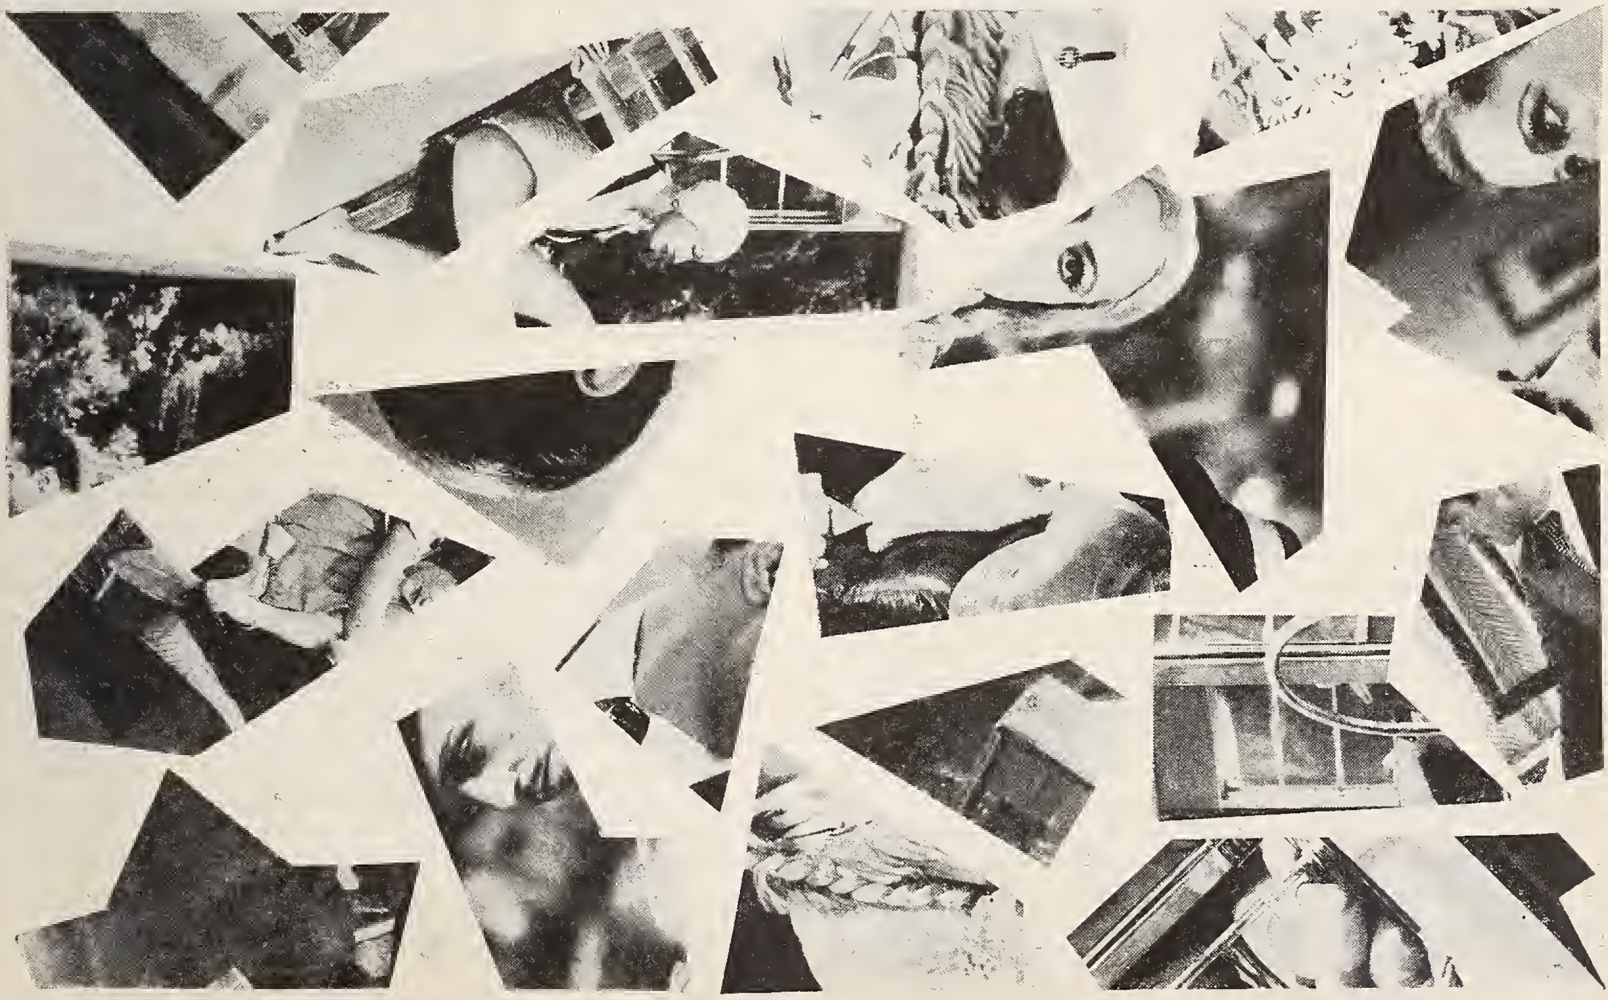
3. The first prize is a free trip to Hollywood to visit Joan Crawford; the second prize, a Crosley Shelvodor Refrigerator; the third prize, $100 in cash; the fourth prize, a Crosley Dual Tone Low-Boy Radio; the ten fifth prizes, a Max Factor make-up kit each; the five sixth prizes, $10 each.

4. The contestants may submit as many entries as they choose.

5. No employees of MODERN SCREEN or members of employees' families are eligible to compete.

6. In case of ties, duplicate prizes will be awarded.

7. Send all entries to Joan Crawford Contest, MODERN SCREEN, 100 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y. All entries must be mailed before midnight of January 15, 1934.



HE'S DRESSED THEM ALL

"I've dressed

By HOWARD GREER

Mr. Greer (left) has had opportunities to meet the stars most informally and discloses what happened on these intimate occasions. (Left to right) Ruby Keeler met Garbo at the designer's salon. Zasu Pitts pities the poor woiking goil. Colleen Moore met her "exclusive" model on another actress. Ethel Barrymore—who said temperament? Helen Hayes is an off-screen ingenue and Ruth Chatterton, a true sophisticate. And Garbo? Well, you'll be surprised!

LOOKS LIKE HER HUSBAND?

MUSSOLINI'S FAVORITE

NOT CLOTHES CONSCIOUS

ONE of the most curious things that ever happened in my shop was the meeting of Greta Garbo and Ruby Keeler. I'll bet it never occurred to you that those two had ever met. But they did, and it is something I have never told before. Here's how it happened.

Ellin Berlin, wife of Irving Berlin, the song-writer, was the one woman who hesitated about signing my autograph book. When I handed it to her, Mrs. Berlin looked at it with a slightly superior air, glancing through the preceding pages to make sure that it would be quite proper for her to lend her name to the collection.

Since such people as Garbo, Marion Davies, Mary Pickford, Norma Shearer, Lily Pons, Ethel Barrymore, Rosa Ponselle and countless others have most graciously consented to add their autographs, I never quite understood Mrs. Berlin's hesitation.

On the afternoon that she was brought into the shop by Mrs. Sam Goldwyn, we also had in various fitting rooms, Lily Damita, Ruby Keeler and Garbo. At that time however, Miss Keeler was not famous as a film star and was known in Hollywood only as Mrs. Al Jolson.

Garbo, frightened as always of people, was doing her utmost to remain hidden in one of the fitting-rooms, but Mrs. Goldwyn, passing the door, saw her.

They exchanged greetings. "Do come down to the end fitting-room and meet Mrs. Jolson," said Mrs. Goldwyn.

Garbo turned quite pale. Meeting anyone is a terrific ordeal for her.

"But why," she asked helplessly, "should I meet Mrs. Jolson?"

Mrs. Goldwyn dashed away and a few minutes later came back with Ruby Keeler, who was quite as shy as Garbo.

The two were introduced and suddenly, hardly believing my ears, I heard Garbo saying to Miss Keeler, them all . . ."

—which reveals to you Greta Garbo and gives you fascinating glimpses of Ethel Barrymore, Colleen Moore, Zasu Pitts. These are the famous designer's treats for you this month in his series of glamorous Hollywood memoirs

PEOPLE FRIGHTEN HER

"LET HER COME IN!"

LIKES FLUFFY THINGS

HAPPY IN FORMAL ATTIRE

"But you look exactly like your husband!"

To this day I shall never know what she meant. I'm sure she did not intend to be facetious. She was simply ill-at-ease and that was undoubtedly the first thing that popped into her head. But I'll bet that Ruby Keeler still wonders whether she meant in or out of black face. Garbo never mentioned the incident again. Nor have I ever asked her why in the world she said such a thing!

Garbo was first brought to my shop four or five years ago. In those days, she was going to occasional parties and dinners. On this particular occasion she was in need of an evening dress for a soirée being given by Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks. The invitations were almost royal commands, since the guest of honor was a British Prince.

Miss Pickford's secretary had telephoned the exclusive few invited and asked them to appear at eight forty-five. His Royal Highness was scheduled to arrive at nine o'clock and she wanted none of her guests found guilty of tardiness.

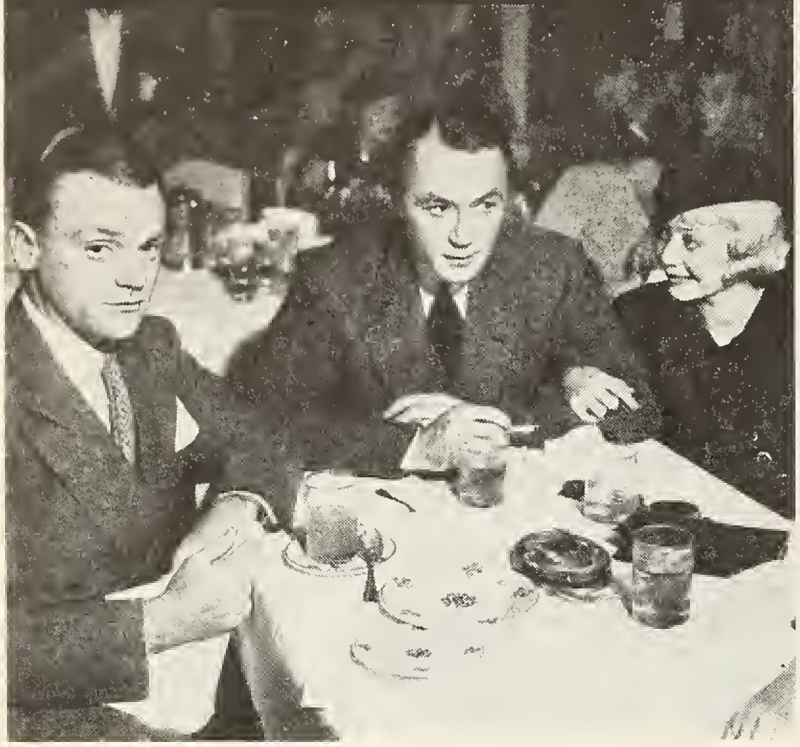
Garbo must have gone through her wardrobe and decided that, for this important night, she had no gown worthy. She came into the shop unannounced with Mrs. Arthur Hornblow and sat quietly in a corner.

Even before she was seated, the news of her arrival had spread like fire to the mannequins' dressing-room and they were pushing each other aside in a frantic effort to get a look at her.

At this time she had only made four or five pictures and in all of them she had worn exotic clothes. It is usually safe to assume that an actress will reflect, in some degree, the same taste in stage or screen clothes as she prefers in private clothes. Helen Hayes, for instance, prefers the same kind of youthful, bouffant dresses for her own use as you often see her wearing before the camera. Ruth Chatterton's film clothes, when (Continued on page 76)

PICTURE NEWS!

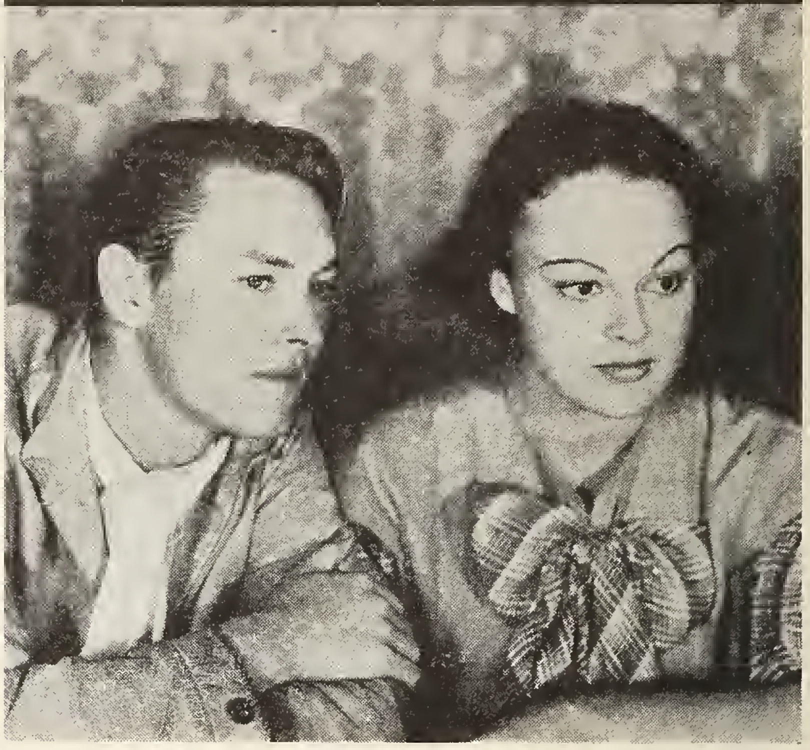
THEY'RE BACK TOGETHER AGAIN!



International News Photos

(Above) James Cagney dining at the Miramar with Cy Bartlett and Alice White, who recently patched up that lovers' quarrel. (Below) And here are Bill Cagney and his bride, Boots Mallory, pleased as punch over their elopement.

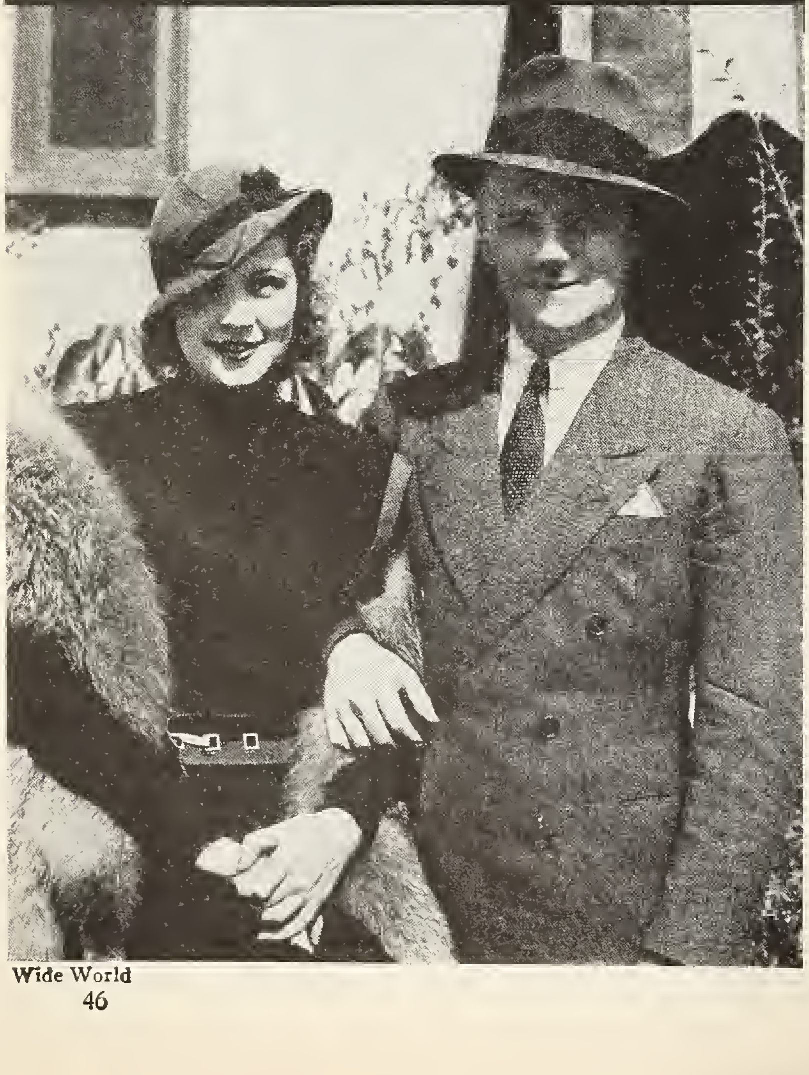
A SIZZLING HOLLYWOOD ROMANCE



Acme

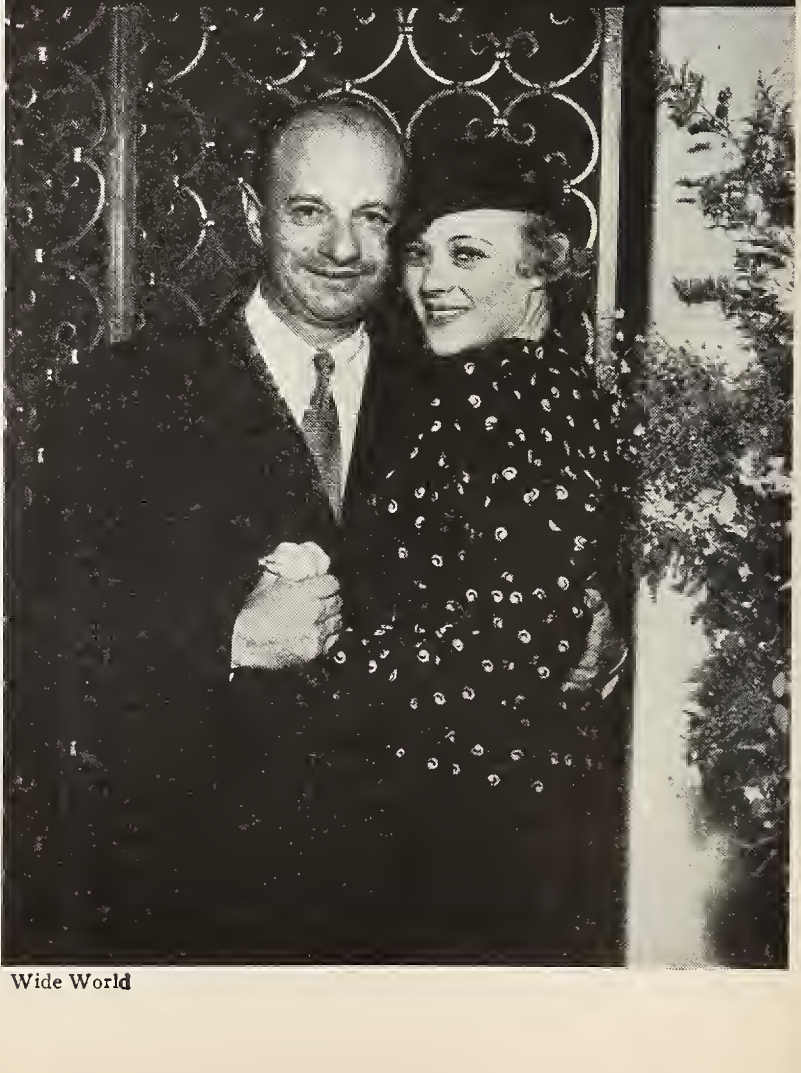
(Above) C. B. DeMille's daughter, Katherine, is stepping out with Richard Cromwell and the gossips hear wedding bells. (Below) Mr. and Mrs. Harry Joe Brown (we know you, Sally Eilers), who wed recently while in the Yuma. Ouch!

BILL PRESENTS THE MISSUS!



Wide World

ANOTHER PAIR OF NEWLYWEDS



Wide World

HOW LUPE AND JOHNNY WERE MARRIED

MODERN SCREEN outscoops itself! With the exclusive story of a marriage that everyone thought would never happen. But it has!

By RUTH BIERY

GUADALUPE VILLALOBOS and Peter J. Weissmuller took out their wedding license at 3:50 Sunday morning, October 8, in the home of Dorothy V. Keeler, Deputy Clerk of Las Vegas county, Nevada. At four, Justice of the Peace Frank M. Ryan pronounced them man and wife. This writer and her husband acted as matron of honor and best man and as official witnesses.

Lupe Velez and Johnny Weissmuller had become man and wife.

Lupe wore a white silk linen dress that she had bought at a summer sale for $2.50. She had never worn it before. Johnny was in tweeds. Lupe wore no make-up—at Johnny's request.

Lupe promised to obey as well as to love and honor—at her own request. It was a single-ring ceremony, also at her request. A tiny circlet encrusted with beautiful but not-too-big diamonds. Her voice was broken and she stumbled a bit over such words as "hereby" and "lawful." Johnny's voice was firm, strong. When Judge Ryan said, "I pronounce you man and wife," Lupe went into Johnny's arms and sobbed frankly upon his broad shoulder.

This magazine has had this story set up in print since the day it all happened. And thereby hangs a brief story.

I have been a friend of Lupe's since her arrival in this strange country. She lived next door to me. Hollywood was bent on teaching this seventeen-year-old child to swear. She did not know what the bad words meant. They got a kick out of her Mexican imitations of foul language. I was just an older woman who tried to help this little newcomer.

Six months ago, she sent for me. "Ruth, I have found my man. I am going to marry him." I shall never forget the light in her eyes. "You have been my friend. From the first. I want you to have that story—exclusive."

Through a guest in Lupe's home, the original plans leaked out. Each member of the press began calling Lupe and Johnny. And Lupe and Johnny said, "We are going to let a friend handle this for us."

Frankly, Lupe and Johnny were threatened, cajoled, promised front page space. And yet they did not weaken. They remembered friendship first—and fame and publicity second. They did not even ask me what I was doing with the story. I did not tell them until the day of the wedding.

I thought you might like to know that there is such a thing as Hollywood friendship. The following story is the story of Lupe's romance. She said, "Tell the exact truth, Ruth. Don't hide things. Tell how I loved Gary Cooper and how I love Johnny." I have done it.

THERE was no hint in the simple ceremony that this was the climax of one of the most gossiped-about and written-about love-lives of Hollywood. It was hard for me to realize that this demure, wide-eyed girl was the Mexican spit-fire whose name had been linked with one man after another.

Riding home in the car—dashing through the now-hot day so that the bridegroom might be on the set of "Tarzan and His Mate" by nine o'clock Monday morning—I thought of the Lupe who had arrived, just seven years ago, in the Los Angeles station with one dollar and one tiny dog in her pocket.

Men gravitated to her, from the very beginning. She had been here only a few months, when her engagement was "announced" to E. Richard Jones (now deceased), who was directing her in "The Gaucho." Her name was linked in rapid succession with the names of Ben Lyon, Nils Asther, Tom Mix, Al Jolson, Victor Fleming and Charles Chaplin. She told me in 1928, "I flirt with men. But I flirt from the outside. Not from the inside. Married? I don't know. I like to wait until I am twenty-five or thirty. Then I like—what you say? Companionate marriage. Not to get so tied down that we get tired of one another!"

And then she met Gary Cooper! Ah—this was a romance that stirred the imagination of the world; that made all of our hearts beat a little more rapidly. This was Love!

And yet, even in its early stages, she knew that this love was doomed. She (Continued on page 96)

THE BURDEN OF WARNER BAXTER

The star who knows that success does not insure happiness

ONE doesn't necessarily have to be a starving Armenian, or a scrub woman with a drunken husband and six children, to understand the meaning of suffering.

One may be, instead, a successful and much-loved movie star, protected by wealth and surrounded by luxury, and yet carry in his soul such a burden of sympathy for human sorrow that it stares out from his tragic eyes and clutches at the hearts of all who know him, either on the screen or in private life.

Picture to yourself a lonely man standing at his window at night, looking out over the sea. A man who believes firmly in metaphysics, or science of the mind, saying over and over to himself, "Warner Baxter—Success! Warner Baxter—Success!"

This is what he does repeatedly, and has done for years, believing that by great concentrations one may wrest from the powers that be, whatever they greatly desire. And he desires and has won success. For this reason—to help others.

For his own sake, I wish he would stand at his window for a while, and call out to the elements a different demand. I wish he would say, over and over, "Warner Baxter—Happiness! Warner Baxter—Happiness!"

For he is not a happy man. A brave man, a good one, a kind one, but not a happy one. Oh, he will tell you he is happy. He will tell you how very happy he is—and lucky. He told me that. He told me, with a pathetic, twisted smile on his lips and a defiant tilt to his handsome head. But in his eyes lay torture. And he reminded me of nothing so much as a small boy who shouts, "I am not afraid of the dark!" and goes trembling upstairs to bed, and whistles to keep up his courage in the shadows.

There is an air of great strength about Warner Baxter, but also a suggestion of a deep inner sadness. You have all felt it in his screen performances, I know. And the explanation of it is this—the burdens and sorrows of others sit too heavily upon him to allow him personal happiness. He is a battleground. A gypsy at heart, he longs to laugh and play and roam, to be carefree and content. But his too sensitive nature forbids him to take personal pleasure, when anyone near him is miserable. And, of course, there is always someone near him who is miserable. The sad at heart are always with us.

Warner Baxter's mother (small picture, opposite page) has given up her favorite child's sock-darning in favor of supervising his fan mail, while the star and his wife sun themselves on the sands of Malibu, right in their own front yard, too.

By ESTHER MEAD

WHEN I asked him what he wanted most in the world, his answer tore at my heart, as I think it will at yours. Another Hollywood man might have said, a trip around the world, or a fortune on which to retire, or something of the sort.

But Warner Baxter answered gravely, "Mastery over my thoughts."

Mastery over his thoughts, so that the things that hurt him will not have the power to sadden him as they do now.

Perhaps that which grieves him most is his wife's inability to enjoy life with him. She is not in good health and nothing he can lavish upon her can restore to him her cheerful companionship. They have no children and he loves children. What a beautiful time he had with the youngsters in "Daddy-Long-Legs."

He owns a lodge in the mountains, but rarely goes there because his wife cannot accompany him. He likes long motor rides and interesting trips, but foregoes whatever she cannot share. While she is not strong and happy, he cannot enjoy life to the full.

His mother is a great comfort to him and lives near, although not with him. For Mother's Day, he gave her a trip to the Chicago Century of Progress.

"She no longer darns my socks," he explained, "but instead supervises my fan mail."

It is she who accompanies him to the openings of his pictures. And she looks very like him.

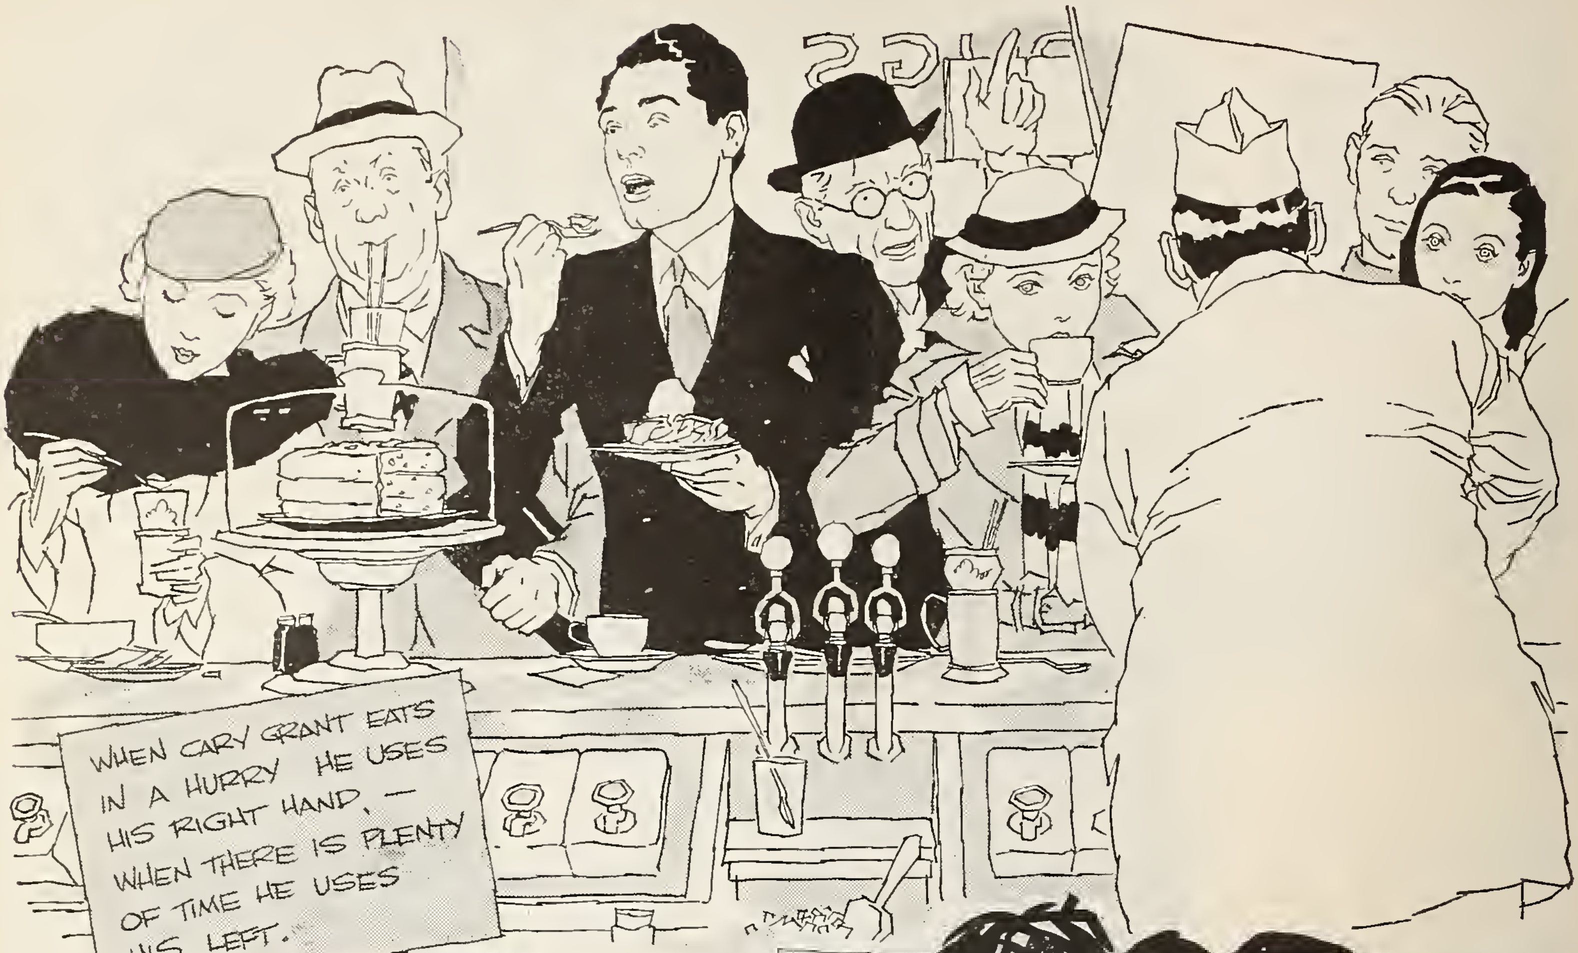
They will tell you that he is one of the most generous men in Hollywood. But his generosity goes far beyond the giving of money, although he does that freely, too. His hand is always in his pocket for the benefit of others. He relieves with hard, cold cash the worry and stress of those with whom he comes in contact who deserve it and often, I am afraid, of those who don't.

But he is a true philanthropist in a far deeper sense. He gives of himself. He is never too busy, never too tired, to encourage, to praise, to help, with sympathy and understanding.

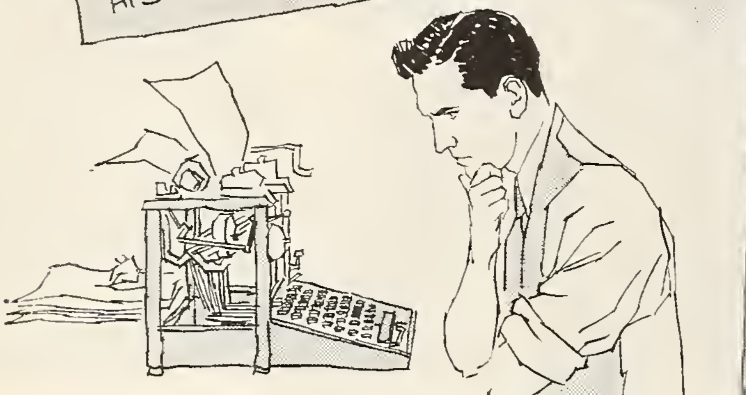
He believes in telling "little white lies," he told me. But only when necessary to save others from being hurt. The truth, he says, is often too cruel. And cruelty is not in his nature. There, again, we see the desire to spare others the heartache he himself endures.

I asked him what he felt were the most important qualities to possess, and after careful (Continued on page 109)

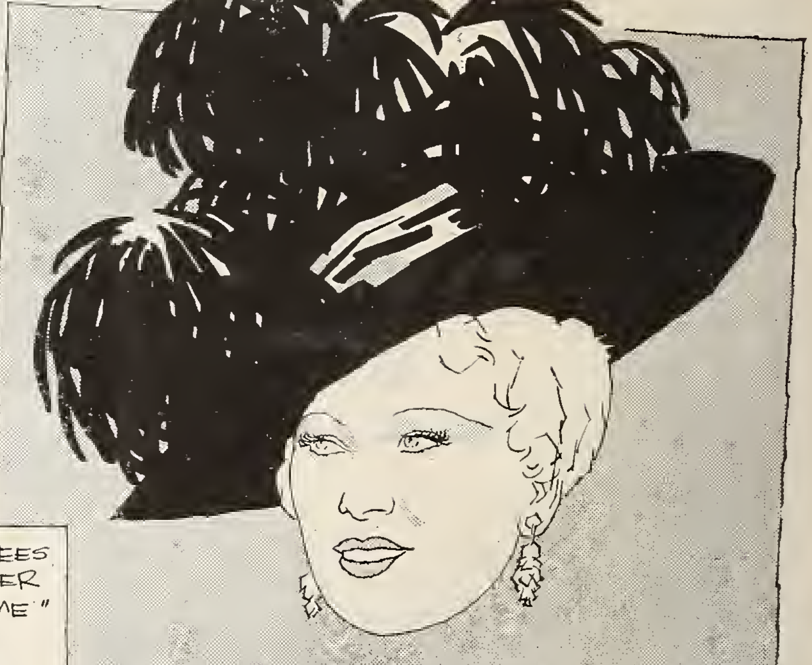
ALL JOKING ASIDE—By JACK WELCH



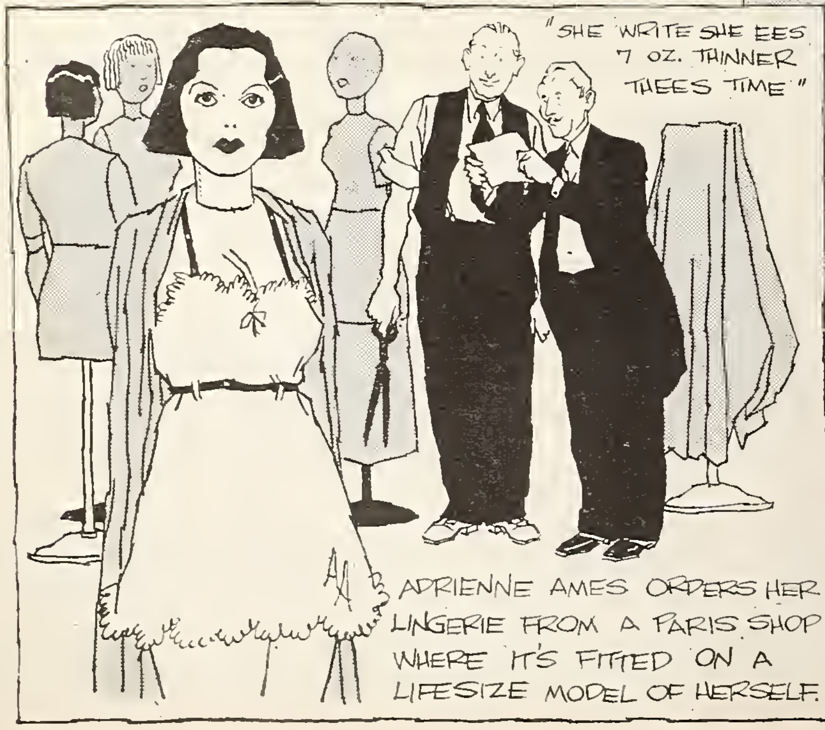
WHEN CARY GRANT EATS IN A HURRY HE USES HIS RIGHT HAND,— WHEN THERE IS PLENTY OF TIME HE USES HIS LEFT.



THE TYPEWRITER FREDRIC MARCH USES IN "DESIGN FOR LIVING" IS ALMOST A CENTURY OLD.

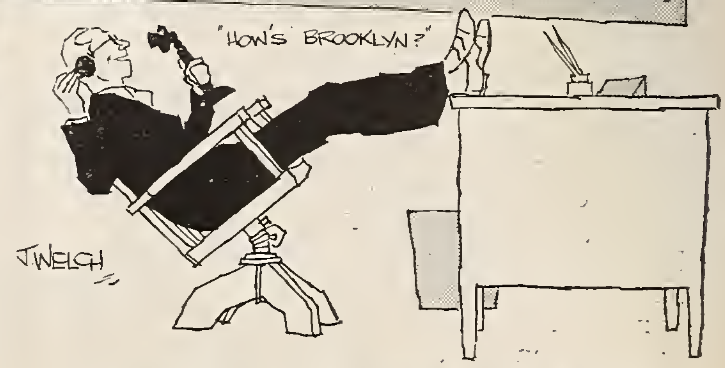


A HAT MAKER OFFERED MAE WEST $3,000 FOR HER ENDORSEMENT OF A NEW LINE OF "MAE WEST HATS"... SHE TURNED HIM DOWN.



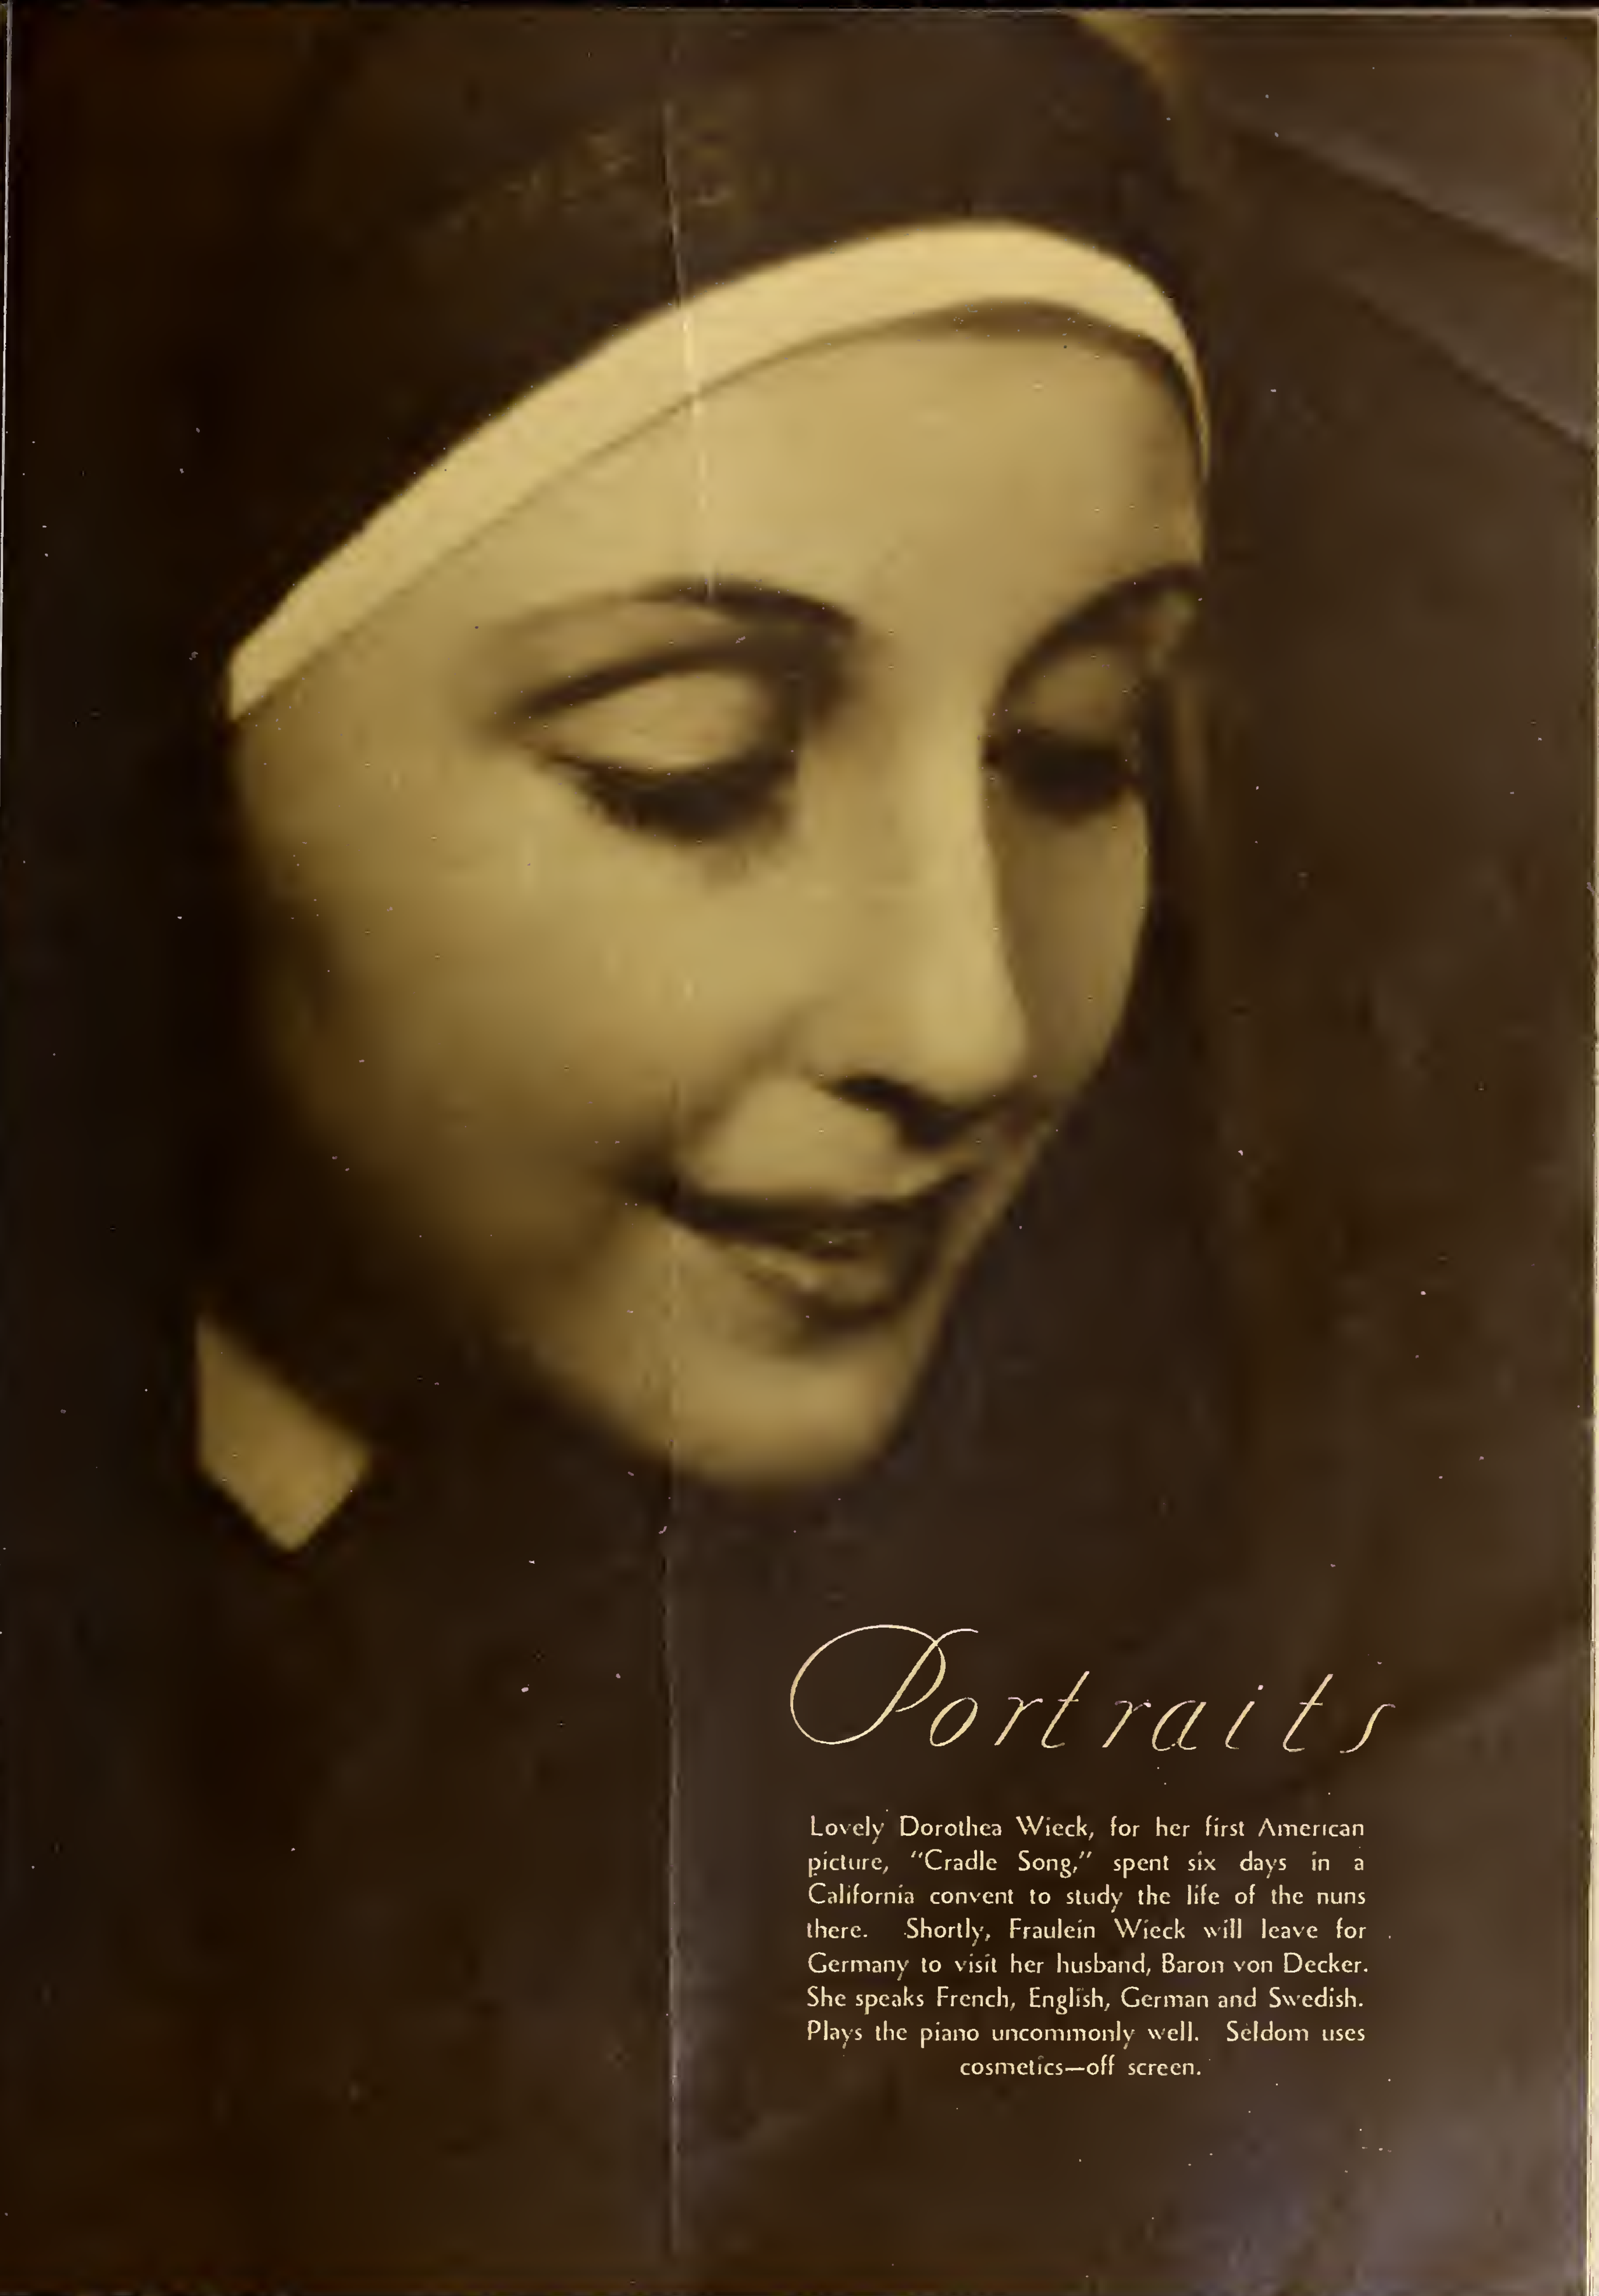
"SHE WRITE SHE EES 7 OZ. THINNER THEES TIME"
AA

ADRIENNE AMES ORDERS HER LINGERIE FROM A PARIS SHOP WHERE IT'S FITTED ON A LIFESIZE MODEL OF HERSELF.



"HOW'S BROOKLYN?"
J.WELCH

PHONE BILLS IN MAJOR STUDIOS RUN FROM $7500 TO $10,000 PER MONTH.



Portraits

Lovely Dorothea Wieck, for her first American picture, "Cradle Song," spent six days in a California convent to study the life of the nuns there. Shortly, Fraulein Wieck will leave for Germany to visit her husband, Baron von Decker. She speaks French, English, German and Swedish. Plays the piano uncommonly well. Seldom uses cosmetics—off screen.

Photograph by Elmer Fryer

● The Menjou period of inactivity is over. 'Dolphe is working in "Convention City" for Warners (to whom he is under contract) and in "The Worst Woman in Paris" for Fox. The man hasn't bought a suit for ten years—tailors all over the country send him raiment in hopes he'll do them a good publicity turn by wearing it. Out at Warners, there's considerable good-natured competition for sartorial honors. Bill Powell and Warren William are giving Menjou a close run.

Photograph by Ernest A. Bachrach

● Ann Harding has completed "Beautiful." H (a Pioneer Picture) will be in Technicolor. title is "The World Outside." Ann has become a Never goes anywhere except on long, solitary moto

BRUCE CABOT

otograph by John Miehle

RUCE CABOT is very proud of his mixed ancestry. There's French, Irish and Indian blood coursing through the Cabot veins. Gossipers were nted when he didn't go to Reno while Adrienne Ames getting her divorce. His next picture (following "Mid- Jack") is "Balloon Buster." Very superstitious lad.

DIXIE FRANCES

Photograph by Otto Dyar

MAUREEN O'SULLIVAN

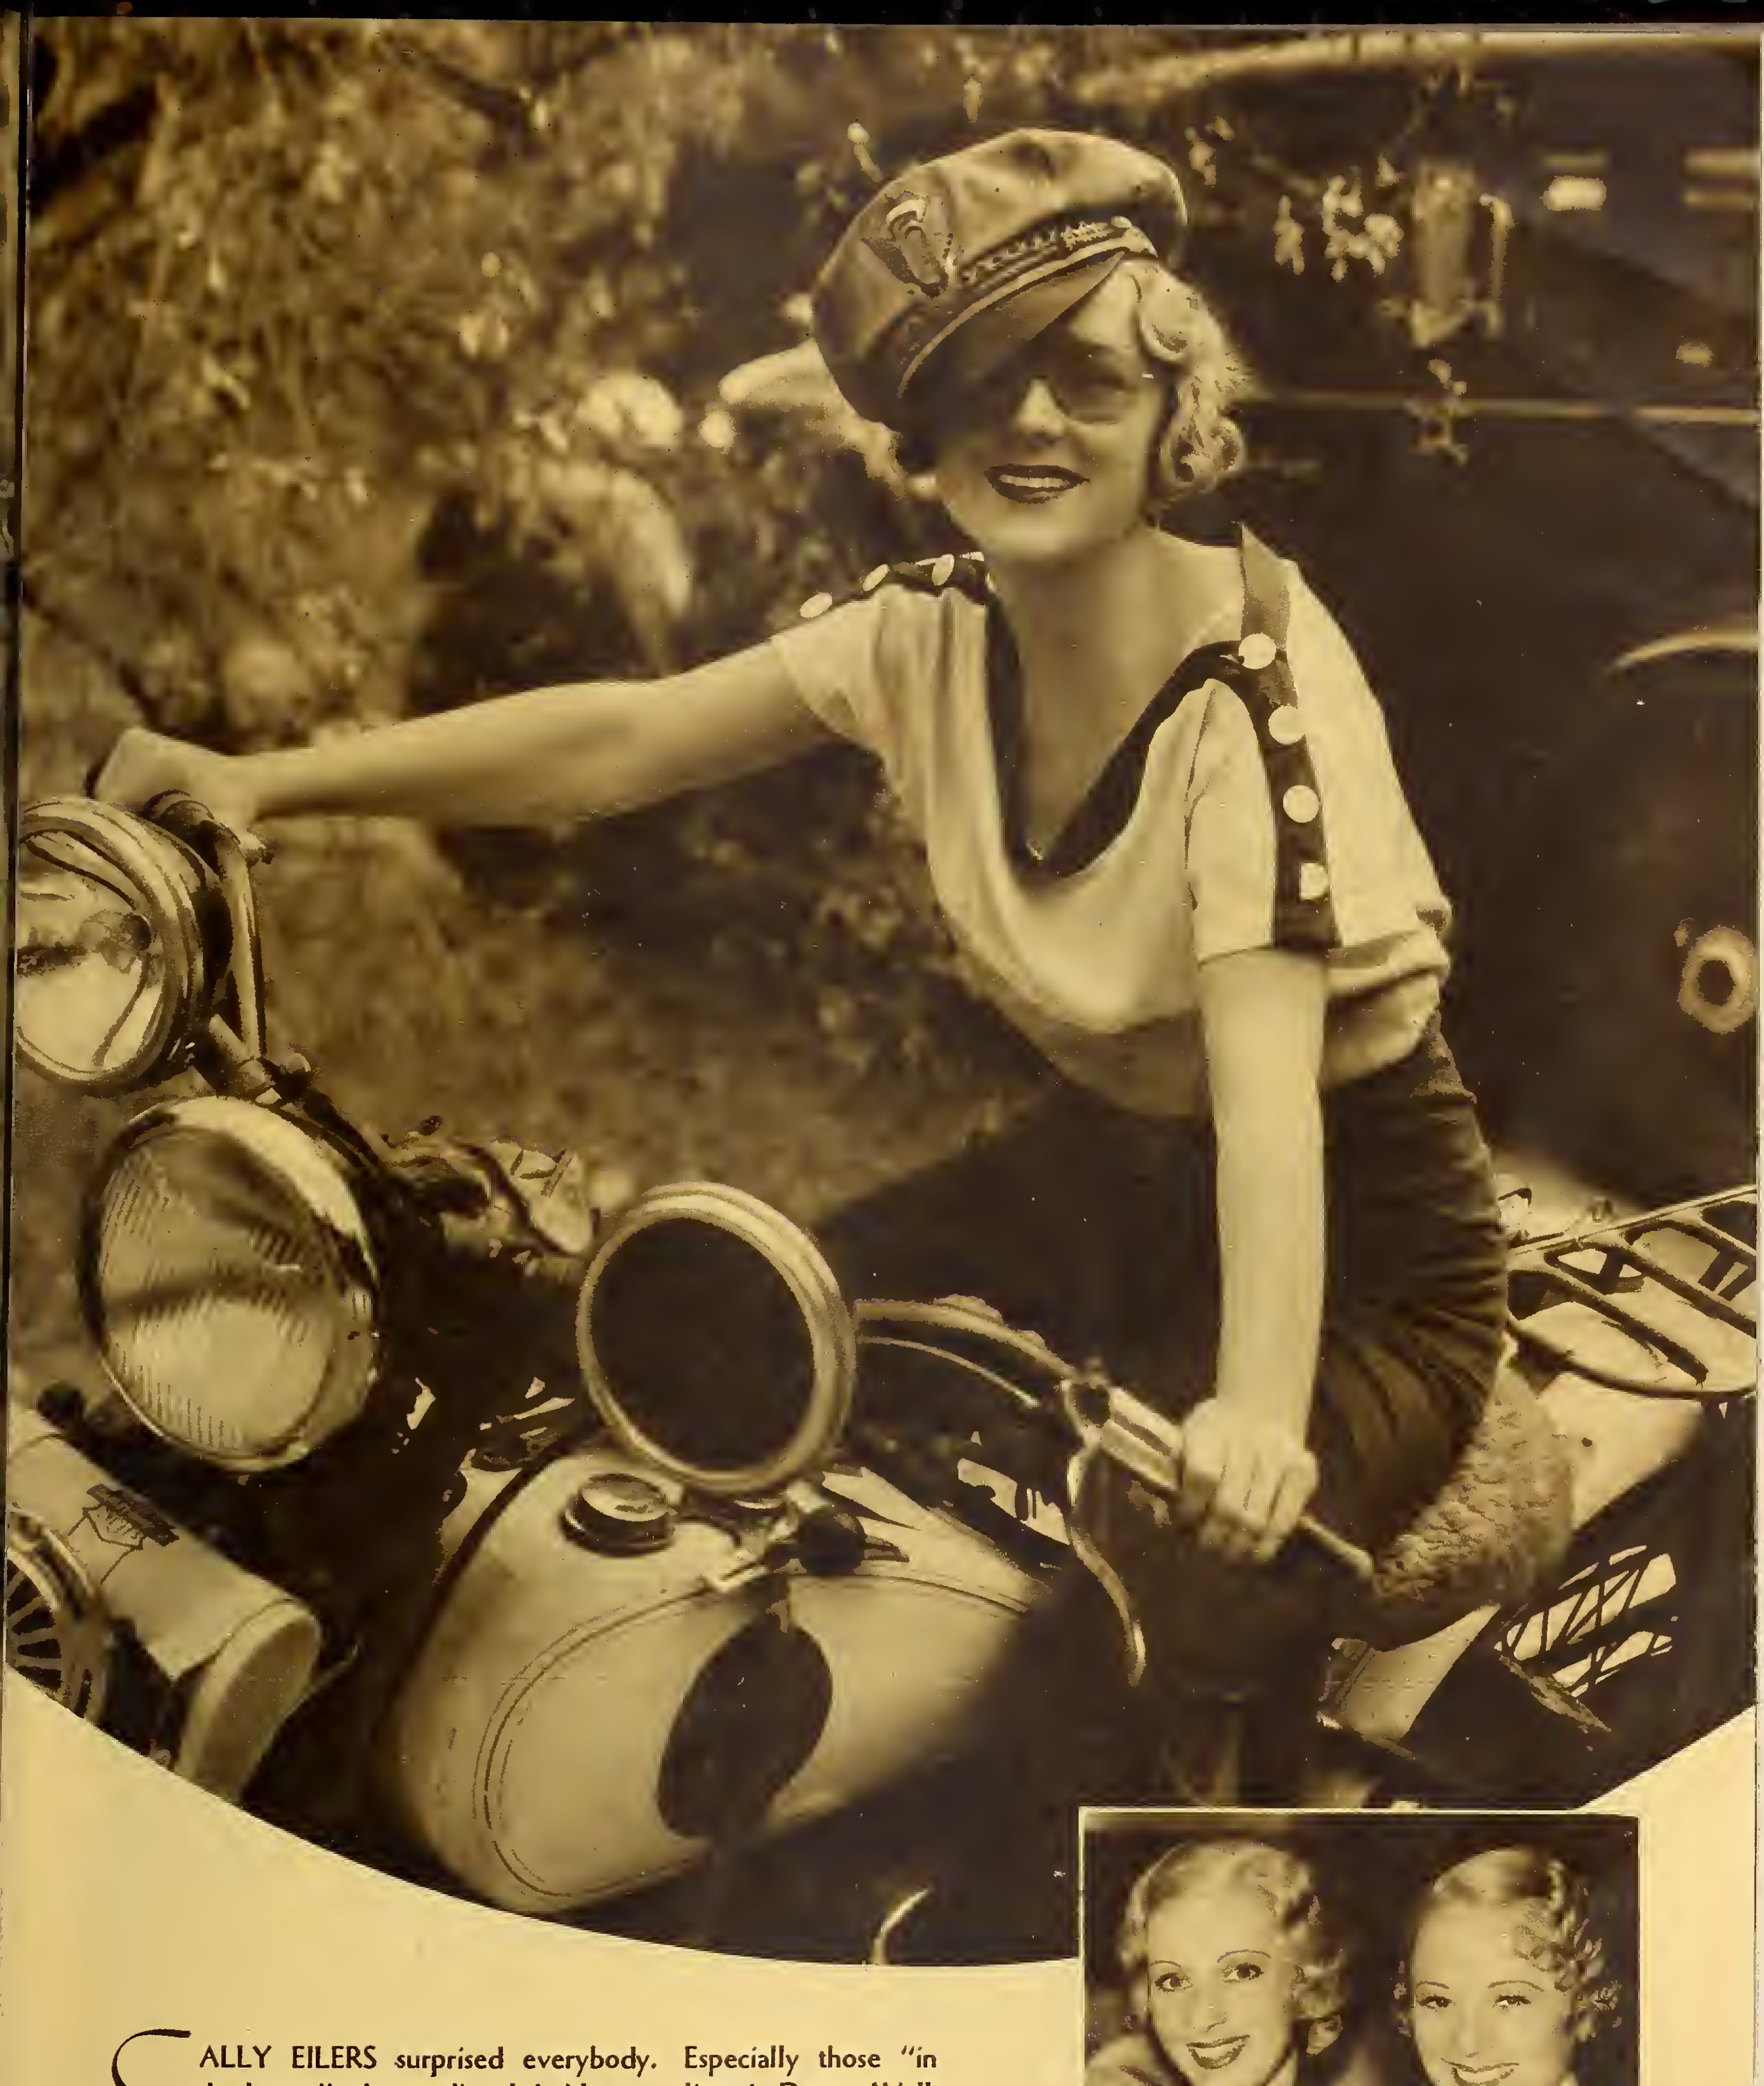
Photograph by Clarence Sinclair Bull

THIS is Dixie Frances. Isn't she cute? She has almost-black hair and black eyes. Comes from Kansas City. Lives in Hollywood with her family. Bought a new Ford with her first paycheck, so she could take her folks sight-seeing. She plays the banjo very well. She had a smallish part in Lilian Harvey's "My Weakness."

IN "Tarzan and His Mate"—the second Weissmuller picture—Maureen O'Sullivan wears three pieces of leather for a costume. In "Stage Mother" with Alice Brady she'll wear considerably more. The O'Sullivan lass seems to have settled her affections permanently on Johnnie Farrow. They're seen here, there and everywhere together.

Photograph
by Freulich

MARGARET SULLAVAN would be partying every evening if Carl Laemmle, Jr., had his way. But stepping out bores her—unless it's out-of-doors. Swimming and tennis—well, that's fun! She's an omnivorous reader, too. All of which may sound as if her press agent were working overtime. But it's true. Margaret has a nice elastic contract that permits her to appear on the stage between pictures. She's in "Jezebel" on Broadway now, replacing Tallulah Bankhead, who has been ill. Without fear of consequences, she states that Hollywood is artificial and New York stimulating. It was while playing there in "Dinner at Eight" that John Stahl discovered her for Universal. You'll see her soon with John Boles in "Only Yesterday."



SALLY EILERS surprised everybody. Especially those "in the know," who predicted she'd marry Jimmie Dunn. Well, Harry Joe Brown, director, won the day and the gal! He feels justly proud, too. So do Bebe and Ben Lyon, who flew with the secrětive pair to Yuma, Arizona, to witness the wedding. Above, we see Our Sal all set for a spin. And on a speed cop's motorcycle, too! That's to insure protection from the law or sumpin. Or maybe the publicity department thought it up as a stunt. What do you think? (Right) Meet Sally's "stand-in" girl, Dixie Martin. They've been pals since high school days. The cameraman focuses on Dixie while the star makes up. "Walls of Gold" is Sal's latest.

. . . And why would you like to meet them? This famous author gives you her list here —with reasons that are witty as well as wise

RALPH BELLAMY
He has a nice face

By FAITH BALDWIN

MADGE EVANS
She's doing so nicely

JIMMIE DUNN
A scamp—but a real guy

I'VE met quite a few Hollywood people, thanks to your editor who kindly indulges my little caprice in that respect. But there are still some left that I'd like to meet. Perhaps you'd like to meet them, too? Well, I'll tell you why I'd like to meet certain stars and players and you write and tell the editor whom you would like to meet—and why. Or whom you wouldn't like to meet—and why.

Here goes. I'd like to meet:

Joan Crawford—because I admire her as a person, as a performer and as a personality, which is quite different from admiring her as a person, you know.

Katharine Hepburn—because I'd like to find out for myself if she is as strange and variable and gaga as the press would have us believe. Personally, I don't believe it. I think it's an act. I think Katharine is clever enough to put on such an act convincingly. But I also think she's a fine enough actress to discard all that publicity nonsense. Anyway, a relative of Katharine's is a very close friend of mine and she assures me that the publicity Hepburn is no more like the real Hepburn than chalk's like cheese. But I would like to see for myself.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—because I find him very interesting as a human being. And because I like him better and better on the screen. I think the chap's a real actor. His fine, restrained and really moving performance in "Morning Glory" proved it. It was no easy task, remember, to shine when playing opposite Miss Hepburn. She's so vivid a character that it takes a real gift and great strength to keep from being entirely dominated by her.

Una Merkel—because her perky little face and funny little voice make me laugh. Consistently. I haven't grown tired of her comedy yet—and I don't believe I ever will.

WHAT STARS WOULD YOU LIKE TO MEET?

Alice Brady—because I have always admired her on the stage. And because her screen work is as fine as her stage work. It took real genius to play her great role in "Mourning Becomes Electra"—Eugene O'Neill's play which the Theatre Guild produced—and then step into the part of the nit-wit Bridgy in "When Ladies Meet." And from that into the mother role in "Stage Mother." Only a real actress could play as many and as diversified roles as Miss Brady has played. And be excellent in all of them.

RUBY KEELER — because, aside from her charm as a player, I find that to me, she has an enormous and wistful appeal as a person. In other words, just as I seriously doubt the Hepburn publicity, I believe — almost one hundred percent—the Keeler publicity. I believe she is sweet and natural and that she honestly adores her husband, Al Jolson, as much as they say she does. And all that is very refreshing, when it's true.

Dick Powell—who wouldn't like to meet him? I have a hunch that Dick is the sort of chap who would be charming to older people—and convincingly so. I'll bet one could turn dear old Aunt Tabitha over to him and he would take her to a matinee and to tea and make the old (Continued on page 105)

CLAUDETTE COLBERT
She has surprised me!

ROLAND YOUNG
We'd talk penguin-shop

KATHARINE HEPBURN
What's she really like?

We're serious about this. You all must want to meet certain Hollywood stars. Miss Baldwin has given her list and her reasons. Send us yours—to 100 Fifth Avenue, New York City, N. Y. —The Editor

FORECASTING YOUR

David O. Selznick, in charge of production at Culver City, continues our series of stories from Hollywood's front offices, outlining "inside" plans for your favorites pictured here

WHEN David O. Selznick arrived at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios to take over the production of this company's big talking picture specials, Hollywood went into a buzzing-bee of curious whispers. After all, Mr. Irving Thalberg, famous as the guiding genius of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio for the past ten years, was in Europe recuperating from an illness.

What would this new regime mean to the studio where there are "More Stars Than There Are In Heaven?"

Would young Selznick, son-in-law of Louis B. Mayer, bring radical changes into the realm of such gilded stars as Greta Garbo, Clark Gable, Joan Crawford, the Barrymores, Helen Hayes, Robert Montgomery, Jean Harlow, Marie Dressler, Wallace Beery, Lee Tracy and the host of others who ply their box-office magic under the banner of the three initials?

If a new policy was to be put into effect, what would the outcome be?

For, even to movie-blasé Hollywood, M-G-M has long stood for glamorous personalities, exciting film-fare and glittering Hollywood news, both on and off the screen.

FAVORITES . . . By WALTER RAMSEY

From the enormous, formal executive buildings that face Culver City, back to the ever-crowded commissary where the M-G-M darlings have lunch, the activities of this lot have been of world-wide interest to movie fans. Great romances vie for headline space with great production news at Culver City; or the famous luncheons given by Marion Davies in her Spanish hacienda bungalow (which is the social center of the enormous lot); or the rumored rivalries of the famous stars who dress within a stone's throw of one another. In fact, the most casual comings-and-goings of this star-studded roster have spelled as much news for the gossip hounds as have their latest casting plans for an "epic!"

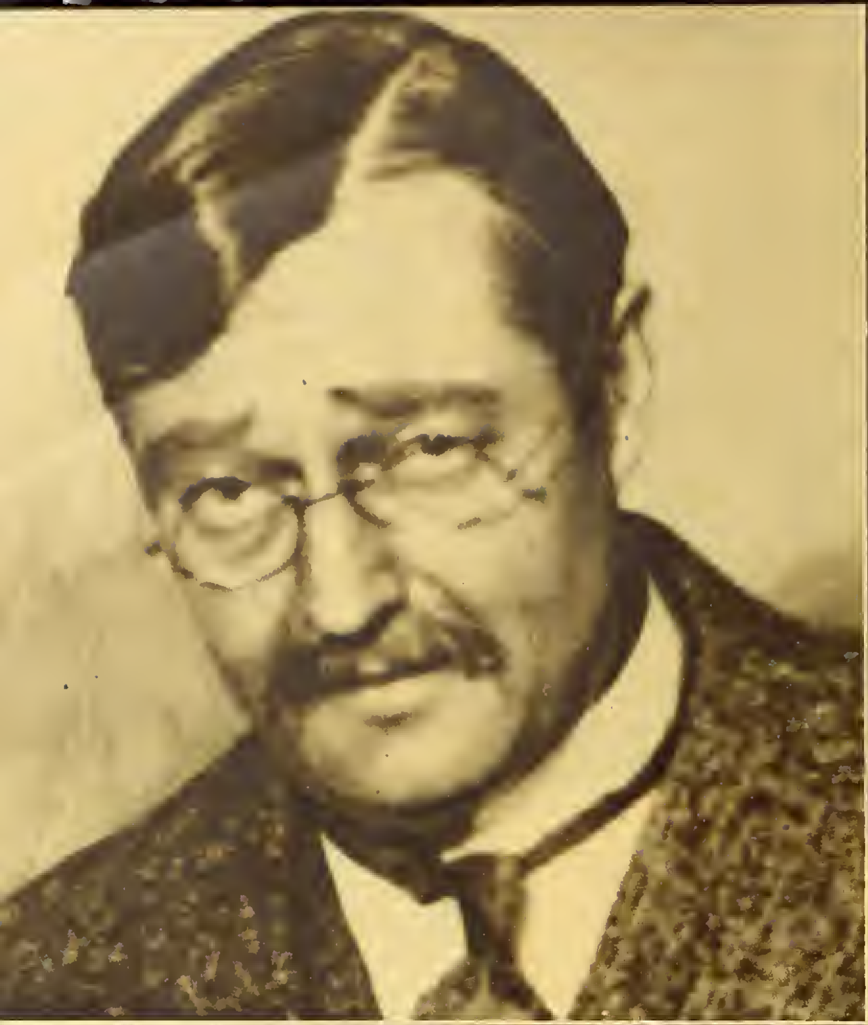
SOMEONE once said that M-G-M stood for Makers of Glamorous Movies. A flattering remark, but so true that it is only natural that Hollywood should have watched with interest the plans of young David Selznick, and their influence on Cinemaville's favorite hot bed of cinematic interest.

The first wave of the Selznick wand-of-authority was "Dinner At Eight." The cast read: John and Lionel Barrymore, Marie Dressler, Jean Harlow, Billie Burke, Madge Evans, Lee Tracy, Edmund Lowe and the ever-loved Wallace Beery. Not since "Grand Hotel" has the public been treated to such an aggregation of talent in a single film. And the whole town sat back to await temperamental explosions! But, the picture was finished two weeks ahead of schedule without a single technical or temperamental hitch. The more cynical commentators set it down to "beginner's luck" on the part of Mr. Selznick.

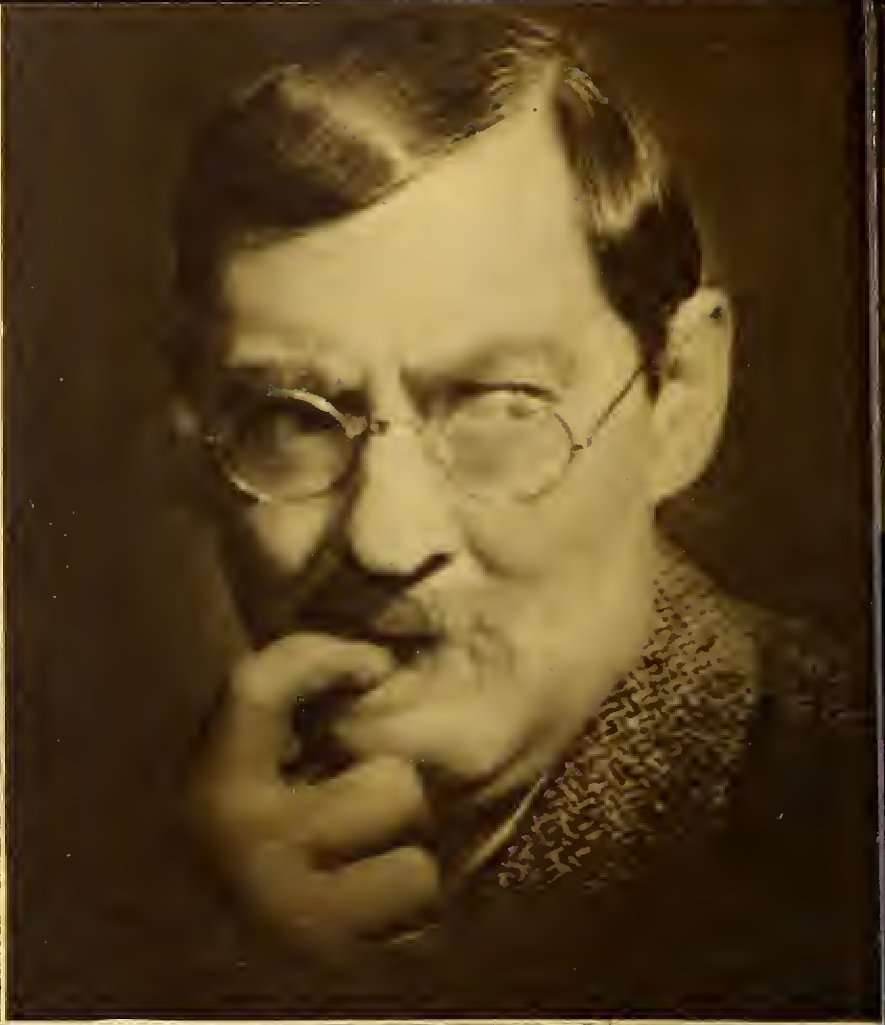
But when he waved his wand over his second great experiment, "Night Flight," and cast such stellar darlings as Clark Gable, Helen Hayes, John and Lionel Barrymore, Robert Montgomery, William Gargan and Myrna Loy in roles that were little more than glorified "bits," it was high time that even the fans turn their attention to the new

(Continued on page 87)

THIS TIME MR. SELZNICK REVEALED WHAT'S IN STORE FOR METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER

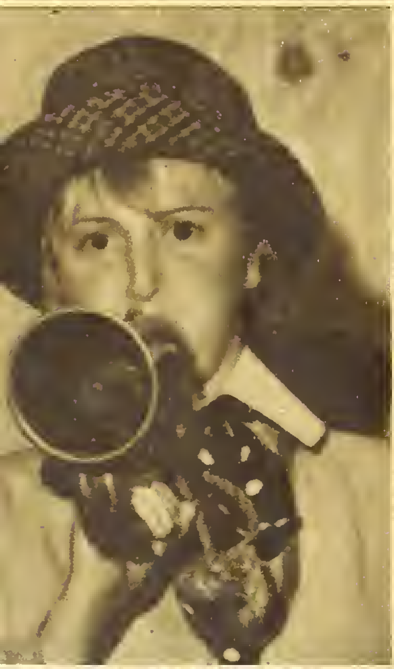


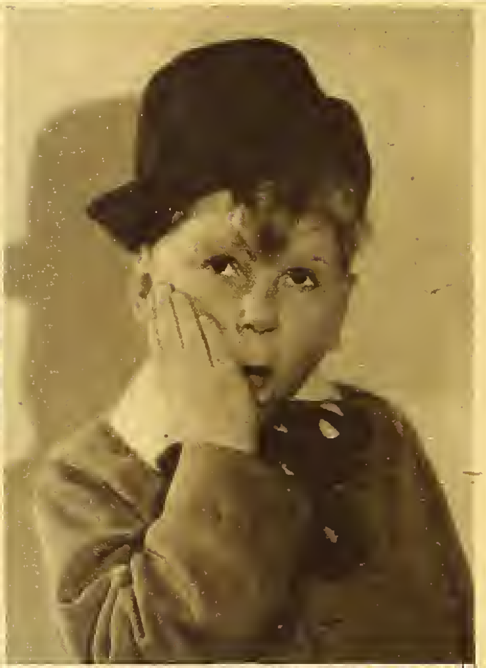
Edmund Lowe as Kringelein



Lionel Barrymore as Kringelein

THE STARS DRESS UP AS EACH OTHER



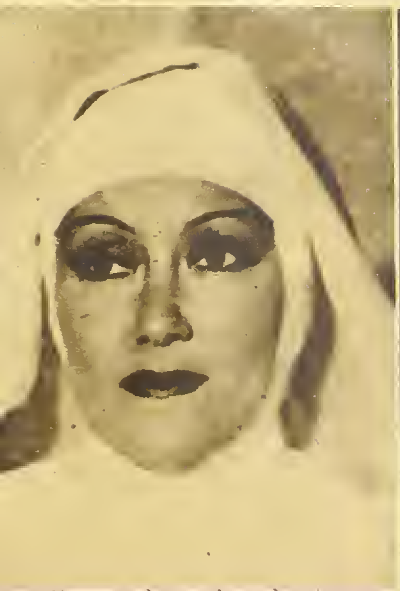


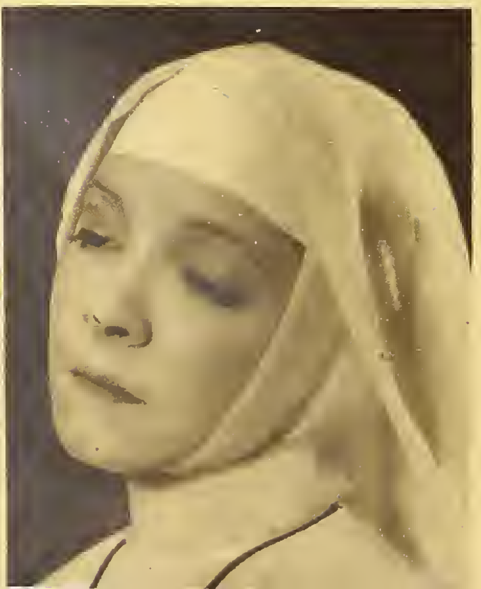
lorence Eldridge as Skippy

Jackie Cooper is dumbfounded

oria as "The White Sister"

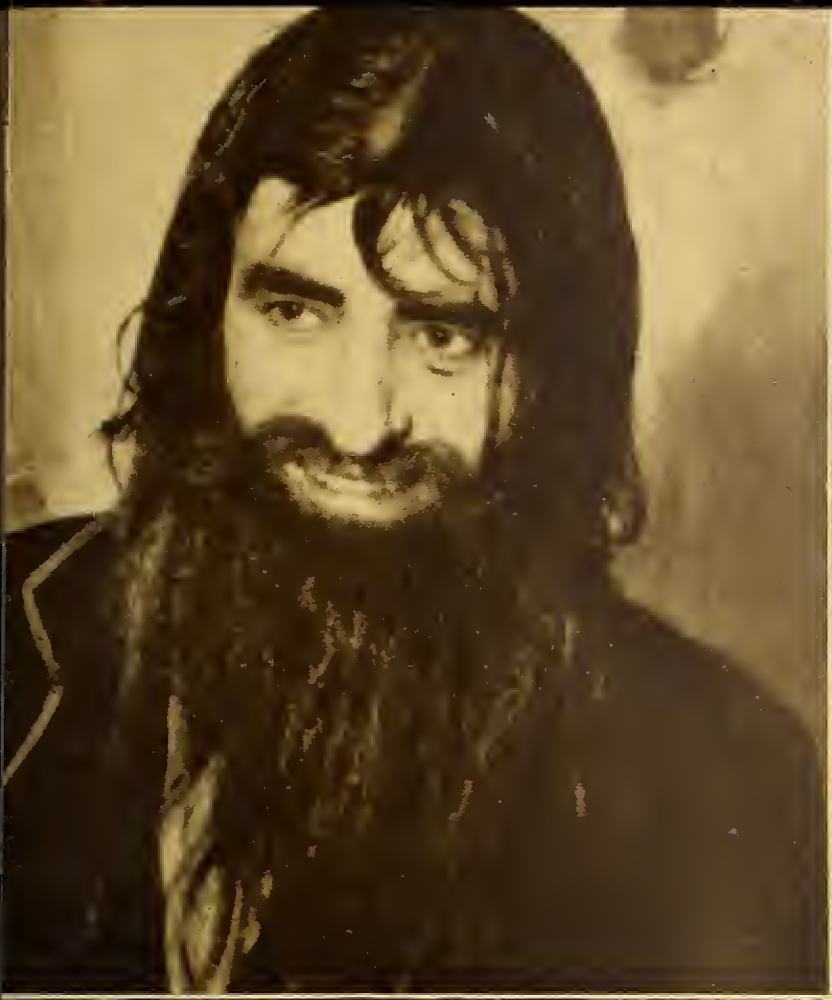
Helen in "The White Sister"



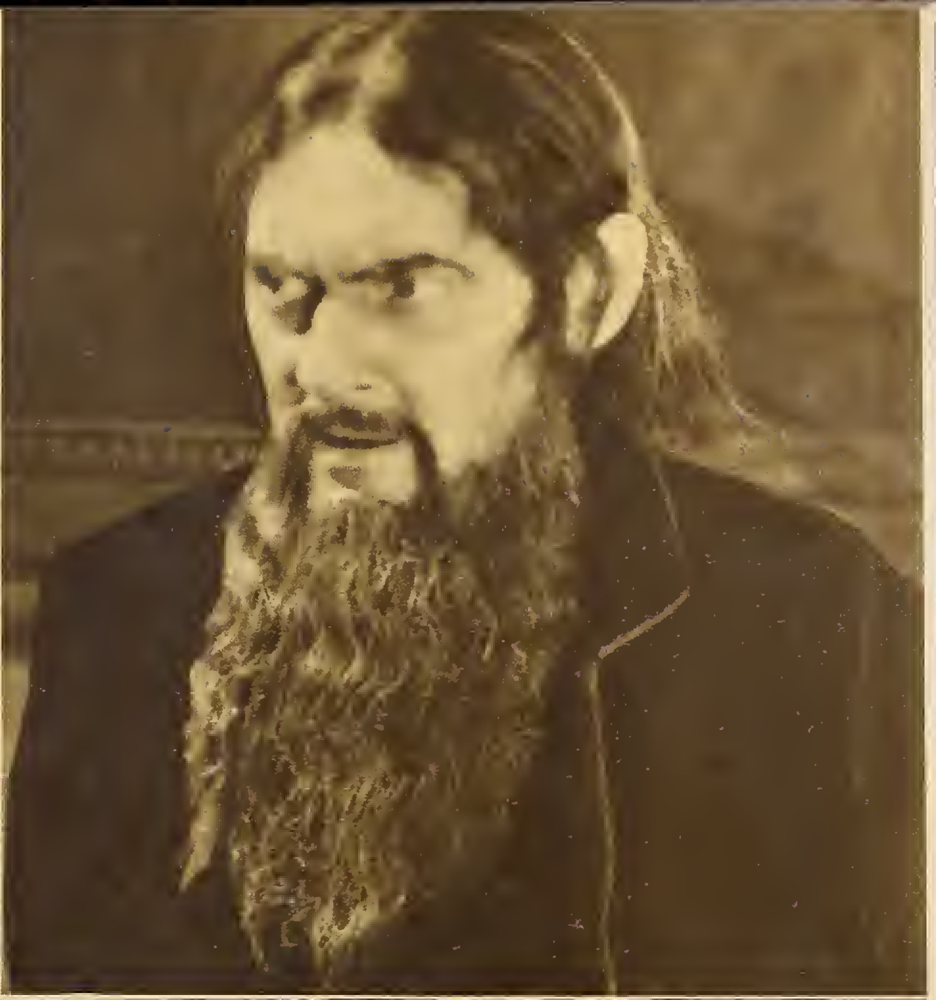


(Top) On the left, Eddie Lowe as Mr. Lionel Barrymore as Kringelein in "Grand Hotel." Personally, we think he looks pretty authentic. On the right is Lionel Barrymore in his Kringelein rig—so you can compare for yourself. Yes, Eddie's wife, Lil Tashman was at the party. She came "as herself." (Middle) Jackie Cooper as "Skippy" played by—you'd never guess—Florence Eldridge March. (Bottom) Gloria Swanson as Helen Hayes in the role of "The White Sister." Husband Michael Farmer turned up as Nils Asther in the Chinese get-up of "The Bitter Tea of General Yen."

All pictures in this feature by J. B. Scott, Modern Screen's exclusive cameraman.



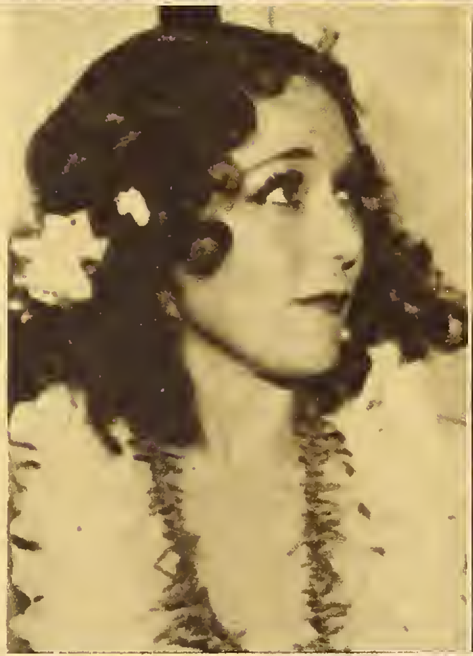
John Gilbert as Barrymore's Rasputin



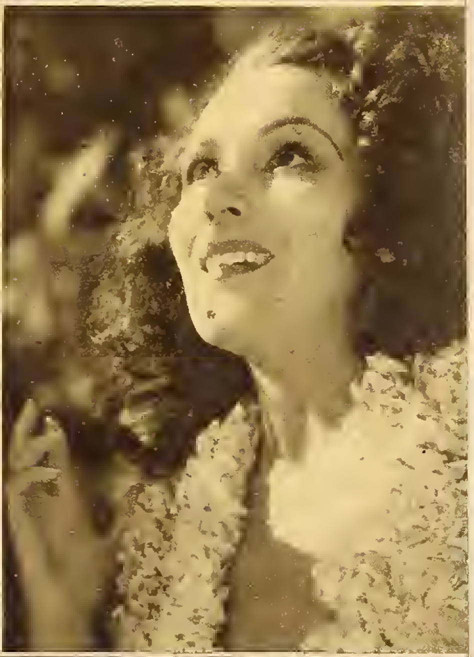
Lionel Barrymore himself as Rasputin

. . . Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ogden Stewart (he's the famous humorist and actor, you know) gave an enormous party at Hollywood's Vendome. The guests were asked to dress up as their favorite stars

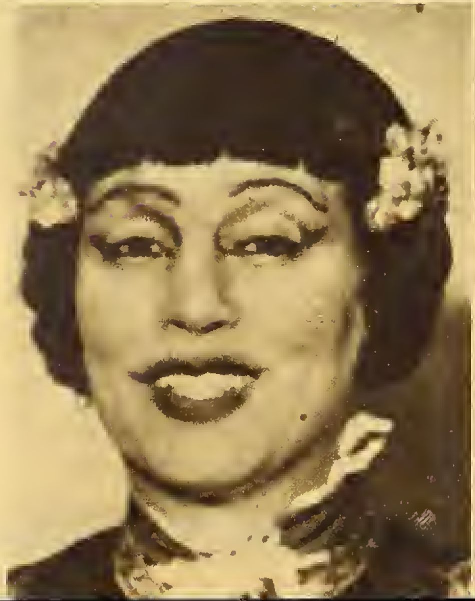
(Top) Jawn Gilbert shows Lionel Barrymore how he would interpret Rasputin. (Middle) Mary Pickford popped a black wig over her blond curls and attended the party as Dolores Del Rio in "Bird of Paradise." Quite an easy costume—just a few hibiscus blossoms and a grass skirt. Dolores herself was at the party with her husband, Cedric Gibbons, but no one could quite figure out what they were trying to be, though Dolores looked beautiful, as usual. (Bottom) You'll never guess. You couldn't guess in a hundred years. Yes, it's supposed to be Anna May Wong. But who is it? Polly Moran!



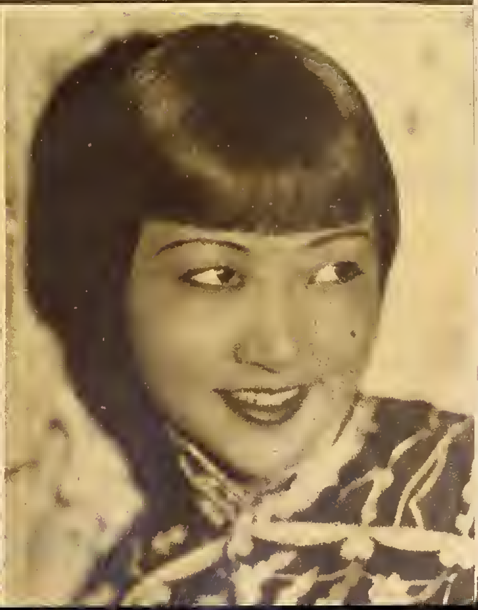
Mary Del Pickford



Dolores Del Rio



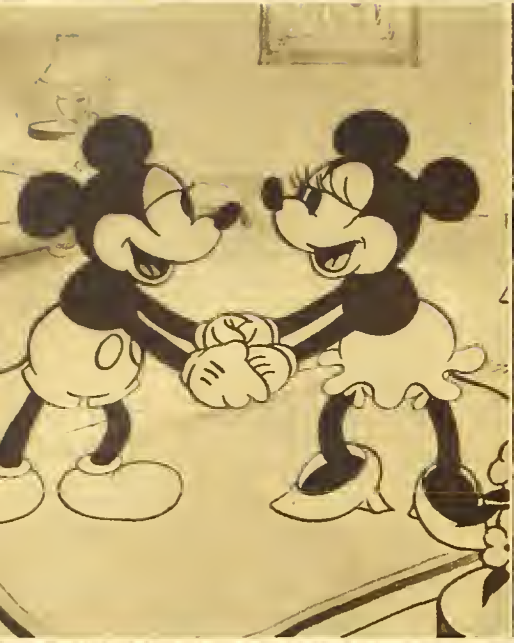
Polly Moran Wong



Anna May Wong

Maurice Chevalier

Chevalier MacKenna



Mickey Mouse and Minnie Mouse

Buster Collier and Rodney Pantages

Fay Wray and Gary Cooper

Mine host and hostess

(Top) Chevalier. Yes. But who's the chappie imitating him? Well, he's the husband of a lovely lady named Kay Francis. Right you are—Kenneth MacKenna. (Middle) Mickey Mouse and Minnie Mouse, played respectively, by Buster Collier and Rodney Pantages. (Bottom) Fay Wray as herself in "King Kong." Note "Kong, Jr." in her hand. Gary Cooper came as "six other guys." To their right are the host and hostess. (Center panels) Joan Bennett came as Jean Harlow—and pretty cute, too.

Jean Harlow all dressed up as herself →

Charles Butterworth Arliss

George Arliss himself

Benchley Hitler

Adolphe Hitler

Du Barry Loy

Clark and McCullough with Sadie

(Top) Charlie Butterworth decided to take it easy. He just added a monocle and came as George Arliss. (Middle) Our choice for first prize—Robert Benchley as Hitler. (Bottom) Isn't she lovely? We mean Myrna Loy in the costume of Du Barry—as interpreted by Pola Negri. That's Arthur Hornblow with her, as Doug Fairbanks, Sr., in "Robin Hood." To their right, Ralph Bellamy and Fredric March as Clark and McCullough with Mrs. Bellamy as Joan Crawford in "Rain."

← Joan Bennett all dressed up as Jean Harlow

CAN SHE BEAT THE

... The path from the Great Comedian's studio has always led to disappointment and disaster for his talented leading women. Will the lovely Paulette Goddard prove the exception to the rule and escape the amazing hoodoo revealed in this story?

By DOROTHY WOOLDRIDGE

Edna Purviance

Georgia Hale

Lita Grey Chaplin

FROM far behind I heard the put-put-put of a motorcycle and sensed what was about to happen. Broad Ventura Boulevard just out of Los Angeles is well-patrolled and, winding through low hills, beckons speed. I had recognized Charlie Chaplin's car and the young woman at the wheel as Paulette Goddard. In a few moments now, I surmised, the girl, the car and the cop would be in a huddle by the roadside.

A half-mile further on, I overtook them. Motorcycle Officer Ray Walker was getting out his book of tickets.

"Forty-five miles in a 25-mile zone is too fast," he expostulated. "Let's see your driver's license."

"Certainly!" replied the little law-breaker. "Maybe I was stepping on it too hard. But it's such a glorious day to be out."

Paulette exhibited her license card, smiled gloriously, then signed and pocketed the ticket. Presently her roadster was in gear again, purring on toward Cahuenga Pass, its driver not one whit disturbed, not at all provoked or annoyed.

"A very unusual girl," remarked Officer Walker. (I had driven up and stopped to see what would transpire.) "She didn't have an alibi or an apology. Just took the ticket and went on."

I mention this incident for one reason: Paulette Goddard is an unusual girl. She is Chaplin's new leading lady in his forthcoming production and, as such, is to buck the biggest jinx which ever has beset a cycle of actresses in Hollywood.

The picture is as yet untitled and, while Miss Goddard's is to be a talking role, the star himself will assume a silent part. When this production has been completed, Chaplin plans to direct a talkie version of "A Woman of Paris." However, Miss Goddard will not play the role created in the silent film by Edna Purviance. Charlie

CHAPLIN jinx?

Under the tutelage of the gifted Chaplin several girls have made their mark, only to disappear from the cinema horizon when Charlie withdrew his influential interest.

Merna Kennedy

Virginia Cherrill

is quite definite on that point.

"You can't play in a Chaplin comedy and survive," is a legend. "Queen for a day, and then 'Exit!' is the order."

"Is it?" I wondered. I have often wondered.

I have been hearing the legend so long it has become bromidic. "What has the presence of Charlie Chaplin to do with a young woman's screen success?" I pondered. "What could cause a jinx to settle upon an actress just because she played opposite the world's great pantomimist? Surely, nothing!"

Then I began to run over the list of those who had helped Charlie make pictures—Edna Purviance, Georgia Hale, Lita Grey, Merna Kennedy, Virginia Cherrill and I found there was something to think about.

There isn't an actress who played a feminine lead opposite the comedian who ever got anywhere.

THE more I think about it, the more convinced I am that if I were an actress and Sir Charles' asked me to appear with him, I would reply: "Kind sir, will you please go jump in the lake! And take your proffered role with you."

For some reason tough breaks have beset Charlie's leading ladies. Disappointments have overwhelmed them. Magnificent picture roles have vanished when seemingly securely in hand. Financial reverses have piled high. Death has hovered near and occasionally reached. Illness has scourged them. Their homes have been robbed, their possessions stolen. And generally speaking, their picture careers have led to the squatty little studios on Poverty Row, from which few ever emerged.

Why is it that Fate is so unkind to those whom Chaplin tries to help?

There is no satisfying answer (Continued on page 107)

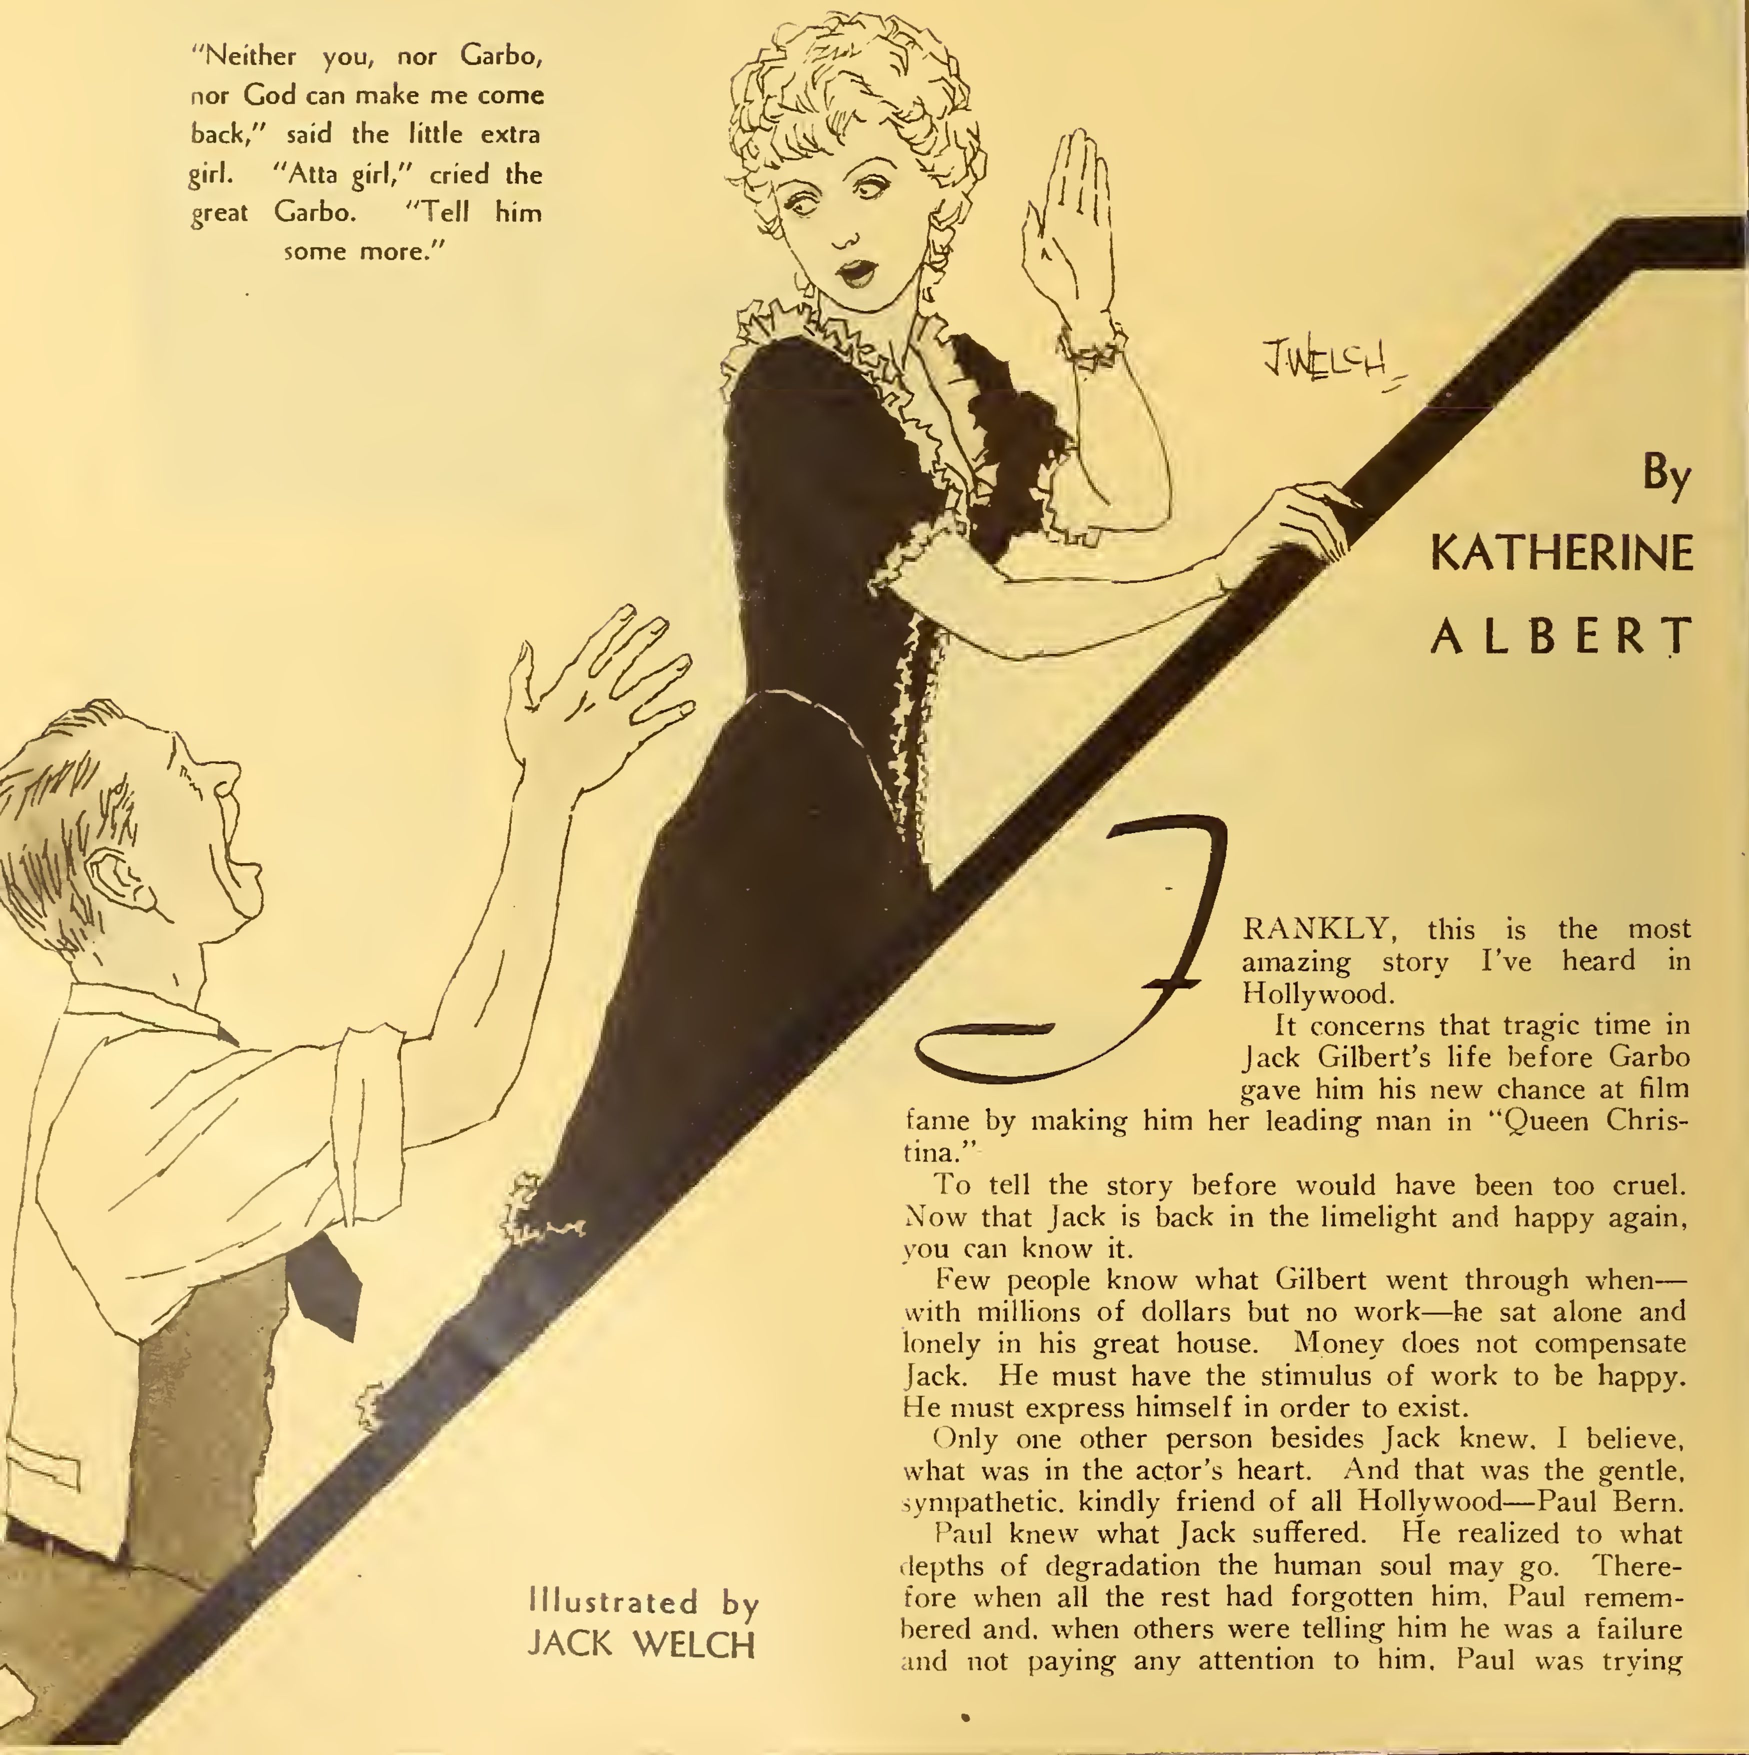
HOLLYWOOD
merry-go-round

"Neither you, nor Garbo, nor God can make me come back," said the little extra girl. "Atta girl," cried the great Garbo. "Tell him some more."



By KATHERINE ALBERT

Illustrated by JACK WELCH

FRANKLY, this is the most amazing story I've heard in Hollywood.

It concerns that tragic time in Jack Gilbert's life before Garbo gave him his new chance at film fame by making him her leading man in "Queen Christina."

To tell the story before would have been too cruel. Now that Jack is back in the limelight and happy again, you can know it.

Few people know what Gilbert went through when—with millions of dollars but no work—he sat alone and lonely in his great house. Money does not compensate Jack. He must have the stimulus of work to be happy. He must express himself in order to exist.

Only one other person besides Jack knew, I believe, what was in the actor's heart. And that was the gentle, sympathetic, kindly friend of all Hollywood—Paul Bern.

Paul knew what Jack suffered. He realized to what depths of degradation the human soul may go. Therefore when all the rest had forgotten him, Paul remembered and, when others were telling him he was a failure and not paying any attention to him, Paul was trying

... Some amazing tales from an amazing town—garnered by one of MODERN SCREEN'S ace writers, who has been out there for a spell. Some of the stories will amuse you, some will sadden you. Some you wouldn't believe if they hadn't happened in Hollywood desperately to secure for him the coveted role of the Baron in "Grand Hotel."

One night the telephone rang in Jack's house. It was such an unusual occurrence that Jack sprang to answer it. He heard the voice of Paul Bern over the wire—a voice that was choked with emotion.

"Jack," Paul said to him. "I swear this is one of the happiest moments of my life. You and I have been friends for years. I have known what you have been through during these last many, many months. I know that work is your life and that you must have it to exist. So it is with the greatest joy that I tell you you have been cast to play the role of the Baron in 'Grand Hotel.'"

JACK could not speak. He hung up the telephone, put his head in his hands and sobbed like a child. The dream was realized—the nightmare was ended. Those torturous months were over. He had a place now—a place in the sun. And his friend, Paul Bern, had brought it to pass.

Joy and gratitude flooded his heart. He was back—back in a great picture—back playing opposite Garbo. Instead of slinking to his dressing room as he had once done, he could walk on the lot with his head up. His belief in himself was restored.

Suddenly the realization of it coursed through his veins and tingled in his fingertips. He was a man of importance once more. No longer was he Jack Gilbert, the failure.

And how he could play that part! Why, he would put everything into it. He would create something fine. Already he was working out scenes and bits of business in his mind.

The telephone rang again. People to congratulate him, no doubt. Well, he would hold no malice in his heart. Even though they were the very people who had ignored him he would take them back, now, and feel no resentment.

Joyously he answered the telephone. Again he heard the voice of Paul Bern.

But this time there was a different tone in it.

"Jack," the voice said. "I don't know how to tell you this. I have done you a great wrong—a terrific injustice. I spoke too soon. This is what happened.

"This afternoon I went into an executive conference. I heard one of the executives say, 'Well, Jack has the role of the Baron in Grand Hotel.' Since that had been my dream, since I had suggested you and wanted you for the part I thought, of course, they meant Jack Gilbert. Another name did not cross my mind.

"I have just now discovered that they were talking about Jack Barrymore!"

You do understand, don't you, why that could never be told until now, when the story at last has a happy ending?

BUT because that was so nearly a tragic yarn I must tell you the funniest thing I've heard in Hollywood.

Out on Joan Crawford's set there are twenty-five of the cutest, freshest, youngest little chorus girls. I believe there's not a one of them a day over sixteen. The other day the assistant director—a big burly lad—discovered that they weren't "up on their number."

He strode over to them. "You're the rottenest bunch of chorus girls it has ever been my misfortune to know," he shouted. "What do you do all day long? You sit around clowning! You laugh and crack jokes. And what about that number! I want to tell you that if that number isn't absolutely perfect by nine A. M. tomorrow I'm going to fire the damn lot of you!"

With a magnificent gesture he turned away, thinking he had left them cowering. Then, suddenly, somebody gave a cue and twenty-five shrill little voices piped up with, "Who's afraid of the big, bad wolf, the big, bad wolf, the big, bad wolf!"

If you haven't seen Walt Disney's "The Three Little Pigs," you won't get the joke. And that's one of the reasons I told the story. For whatever you do you musn't miss that most delightful of all films. Somebody suggested that if the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences had a snitch of humor it would give that the award as the best picture of the year.

Joan Crawford has seen it ten times and is seriously considering buying a print of it to run it over and over again.

Speaking of Joan, I'd better clean up a lot of rumors. She isn't seeing Ricardo Cortez. She isn't thinking of going back to Douglas. She and Franchot Tone are still happy with each other's society. And, except for picture worries, Joan, herself, is happier than I've seen her for a long time.

Picture worries she had a-plenty. It seems as if there is some strange jinx upon "Dancing Lady." One of the comedians dropped dead during its making. Jean Malin who was supposed to have be WARM be chic -and save!

(Continued on page 106)

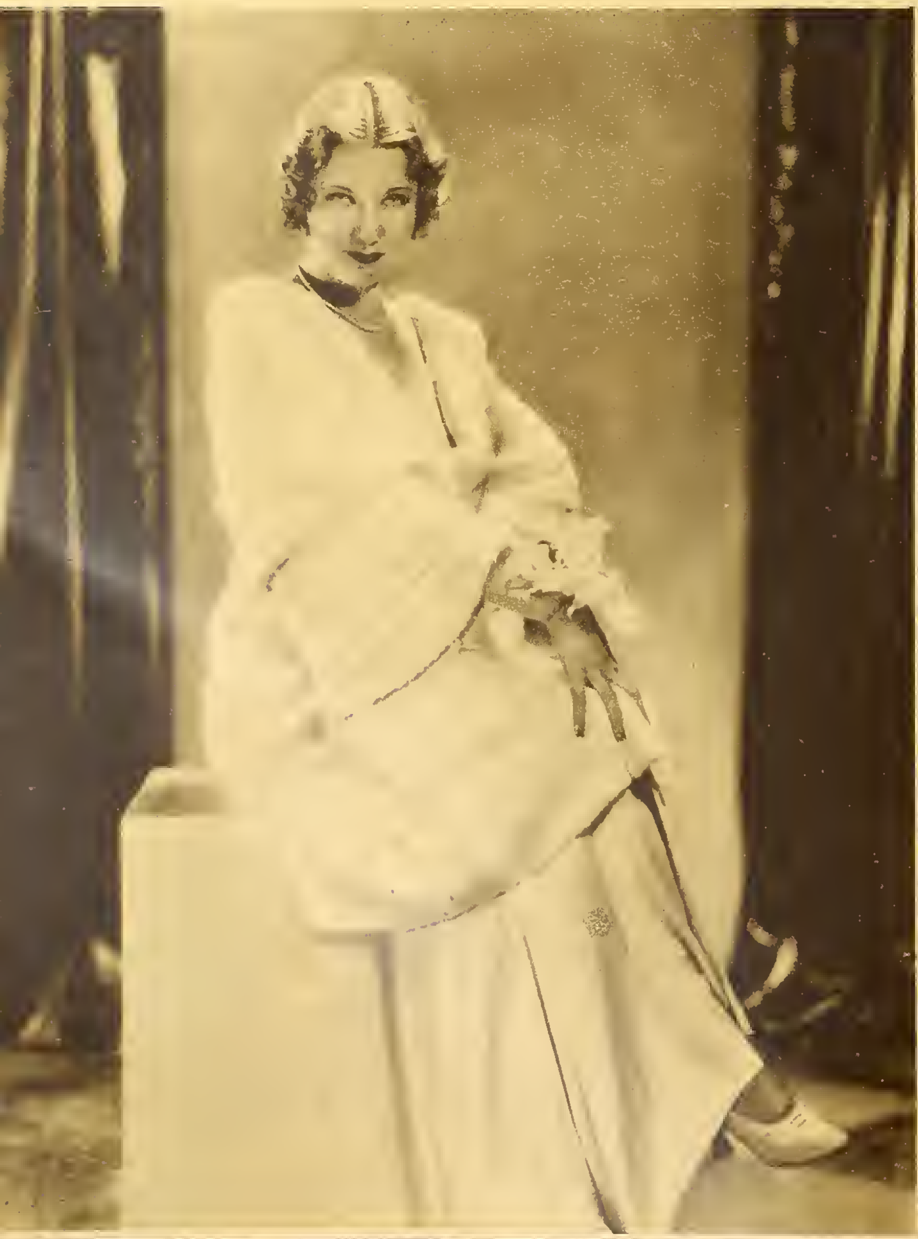
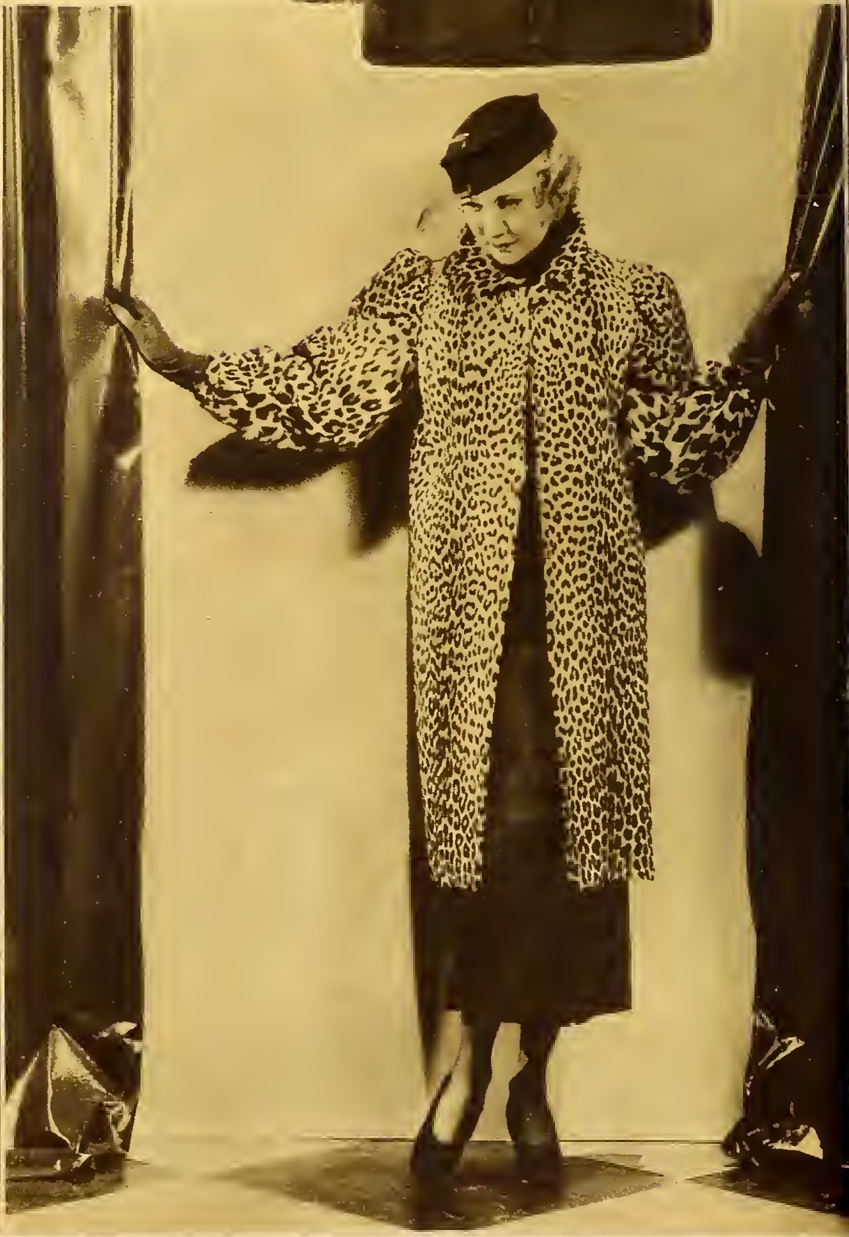
Dorothy Jordan (right) in her gray kidskin jacket, shows what can be done effectively with the short fur jacket. Una Merkel (below, left) wears an evening wrap of white ermine, with scarf collar and wide tiered sleeves, both of which add notes of dressiness to a coat which is handsome in every detail. Also, this same star shows how completely she can change her pattern of allure by dressing in a spotted sport coat of leopard skin (below, right) in three quarter length, made strictly according to the season's demands for outdoor attire.





By

MARGERY WELLS

FUR coats spell romance and luxury. Every girl instinctively knows their flattery—their lure—their charm. But—oh—how to squeeze the budget so that imagination may become possession.

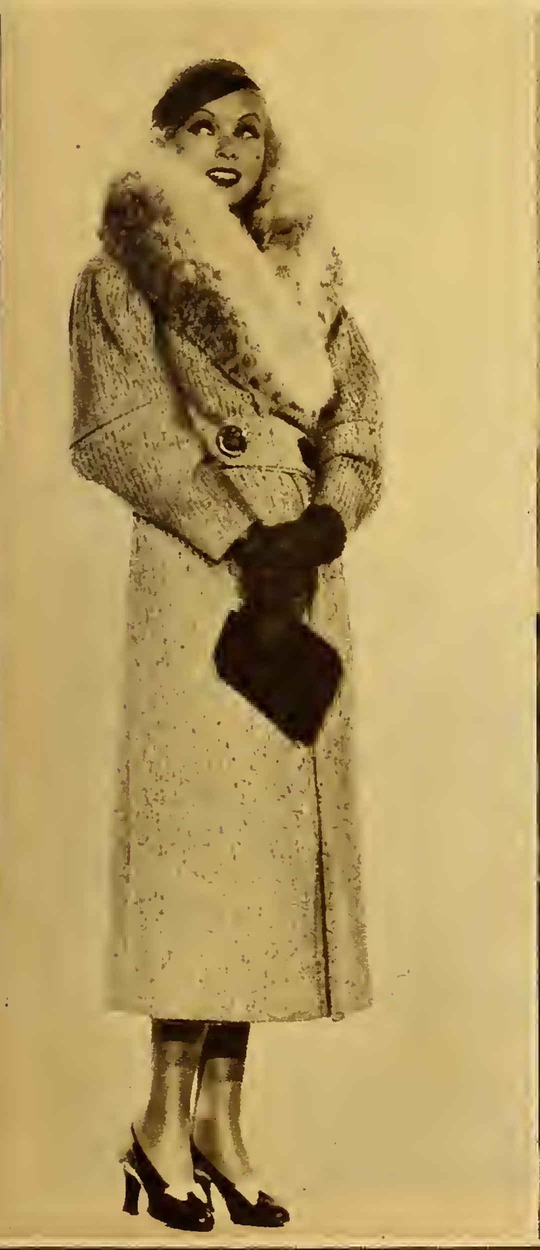
There is more chance for making mistakes in buying a fur coat than in any other dress direction, and the understanding of what is good fur and what is bad is something that only an expert really knows. Therefore, admonition number one must be—go to a recognized, honest dealer when buying one of them.

You want a fur coat this winter? Well, how about it? If you have a couple of thousand dollars to spend (which you probably have not) it's all very easy to say, "have a mink or an ermine or a galyak or something like that." Mink is the best wearing fur of all. It will last for years on end—will not split apart—will not wear off in patches. Perfect! But if you cannot afford this height of luxuriousness, then what? Most of us would rather buy a house and lot for those couple of thousand, if we had them.

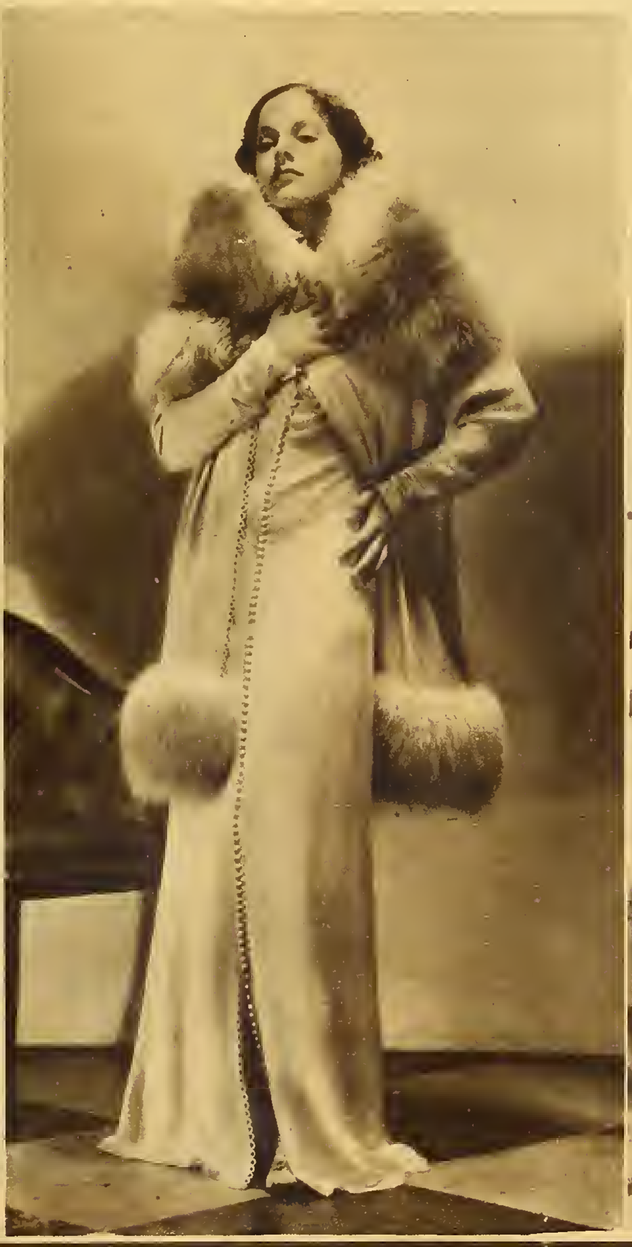
This is the story of one practical minded female who saved one hundred dollars by scrimping and putting by. She put a thousand dollars' worth of study into the subject of furs until she knew their possible wears and tears inside out, and finally bought a gray kidskin. She calculated thus: "If I can wear this coat for three years, it will cost me only thirty-three dollars and fifty cents a year." (Reasonable enough, too, when you spread it that way.) So she wisely chose a straight swagger cut, the style of which was bound to last. This is an important point, for full skirts, puffed sleeves, tricky collars and cuffs and all other extraneous adornments are doomed to only one season's chic.

WHEN three winters had passed and a fourth approached with chilly tread, she took stock of her precious gray kid, for by this time (Continued on page 89)

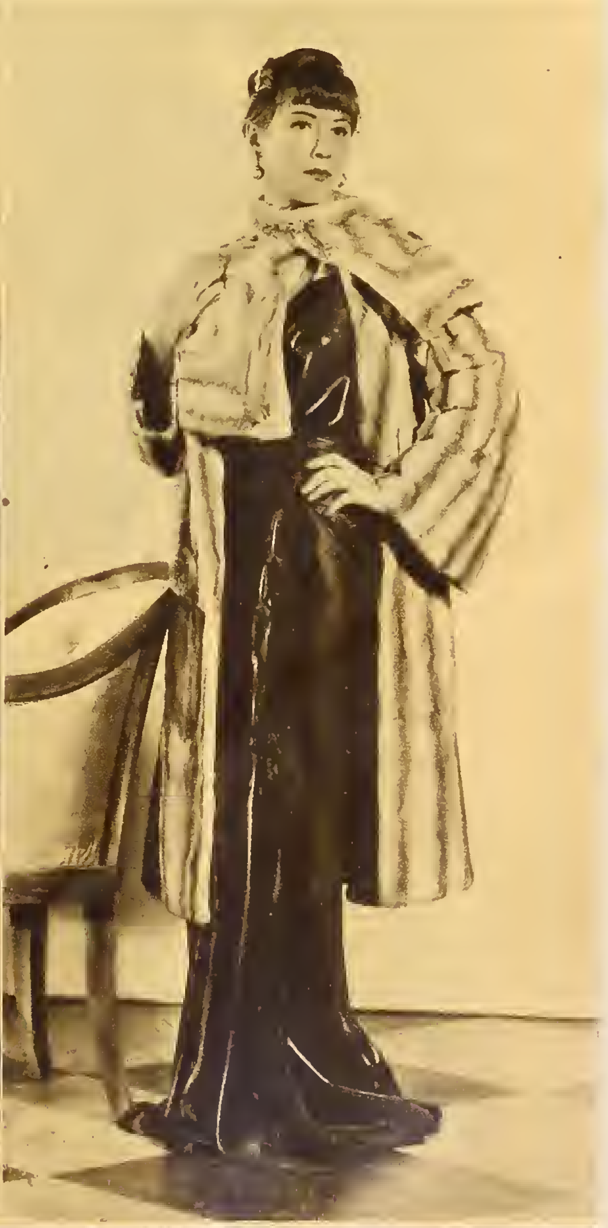
Now for the fur-lined coat with collar of natural lynx. Toby Wing (below) shows how ultra smart a tweed coat of this character can be. And is it warm! The tweed is a light beige, flecked with brown. The coat is simply made—only the design of the sleeves showing the least trickiness.



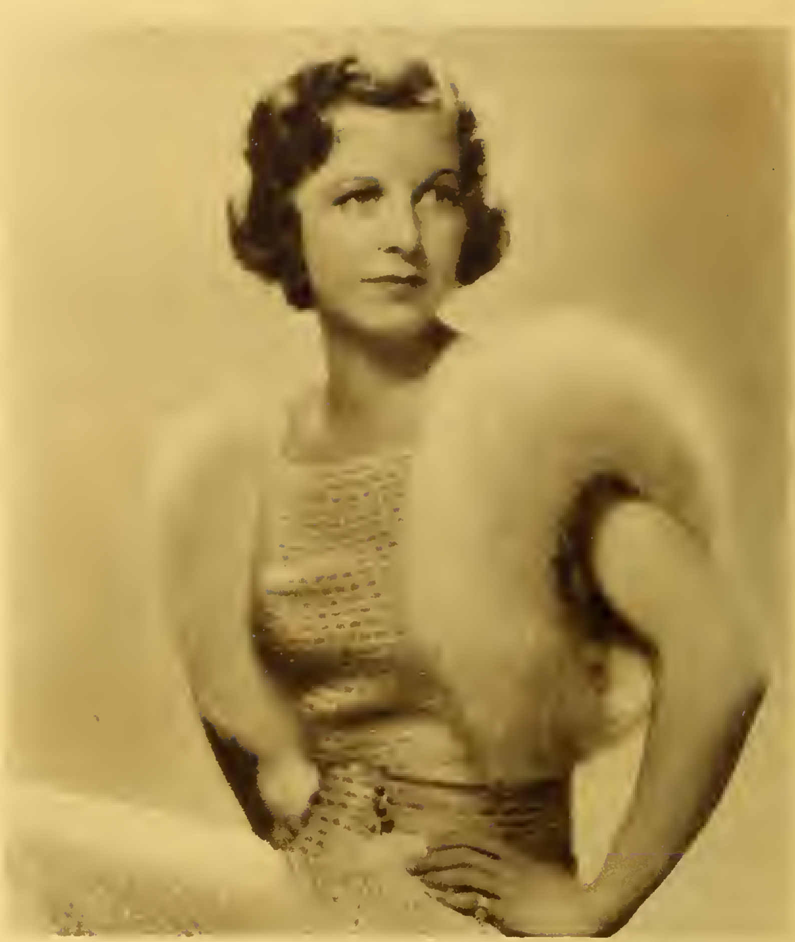
Fur makes the evening ensemble not only a thing of beauty, but one of satisfying warmth. Martha Sleeper (below) wears a three-in-one ensemble of canary yellow suede crepe, trimmed with moonlight gray fox. Her shoulder cape can be easily transformed into a smart muff.



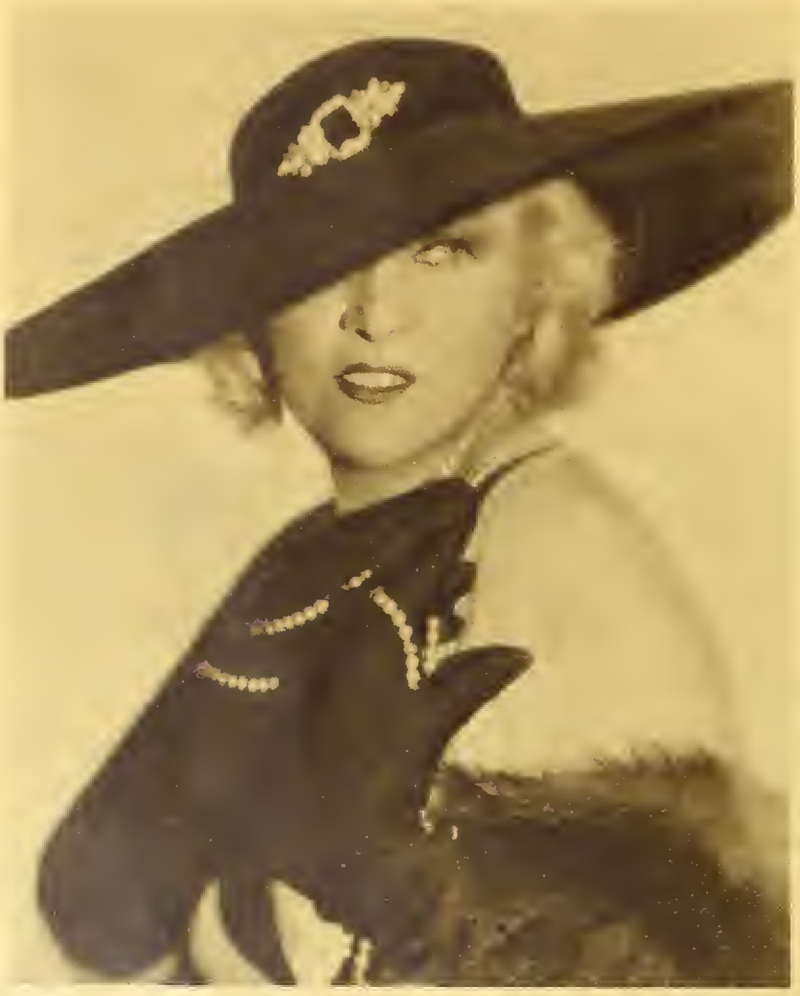
Winter ermine is one of the most precious of furs and most beautiful for either an afternoon or evening coat. Mae Clarke (below) has had hers made after the leading smart model for this winter—an excellent design to follow when buying even less expensive and glamorous furs.

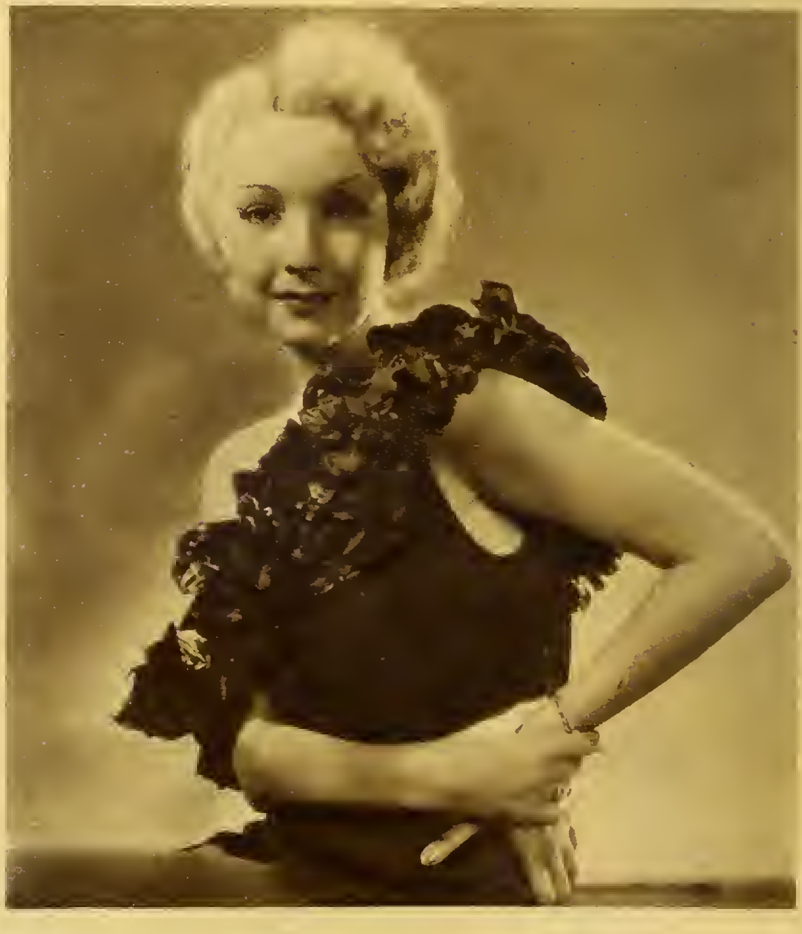


tricks FOR WINTER TOGS



Fur keeps its place as a trimming for evening frocks with the reservation that the fur must be handsome and fluffy and that the dress be kept absolutely plain and straight in line, no matter what the material may be. Margaret Sullivan (above) illustrates this point spectacularly in her silver and white brocade trimmed with wide sleeve bands of precious white fox.

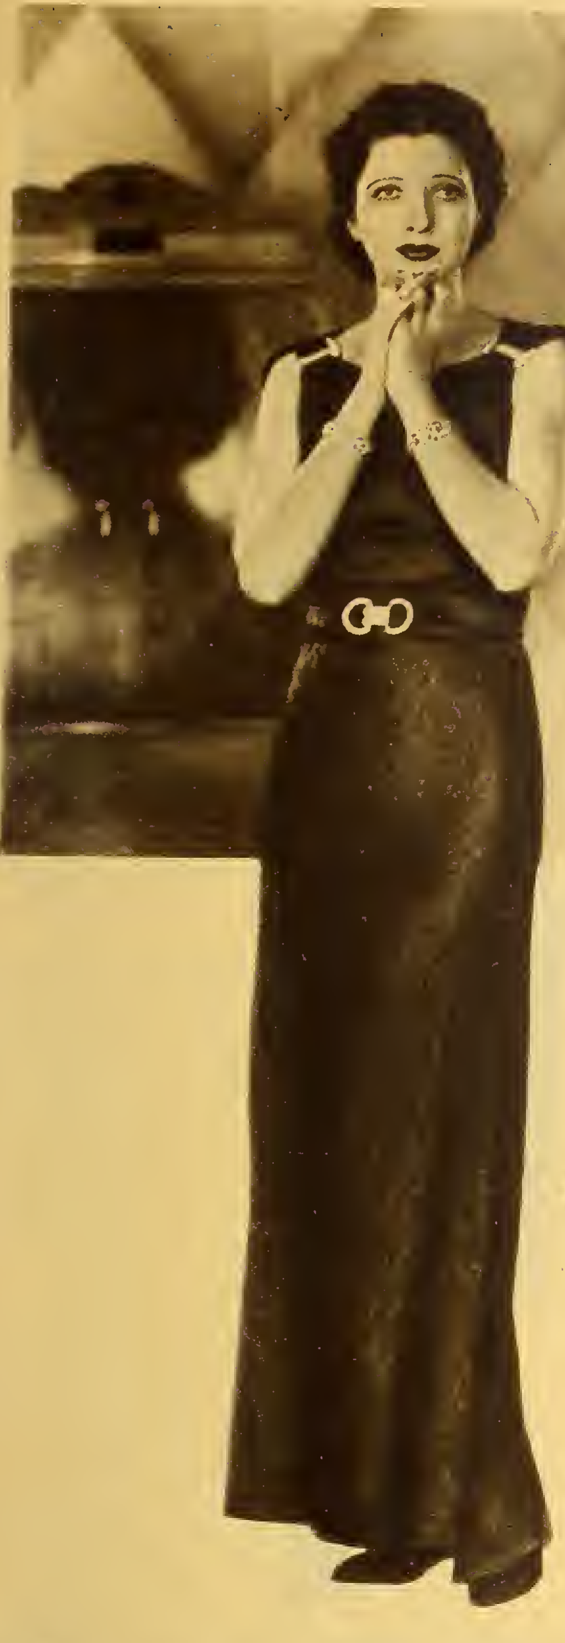


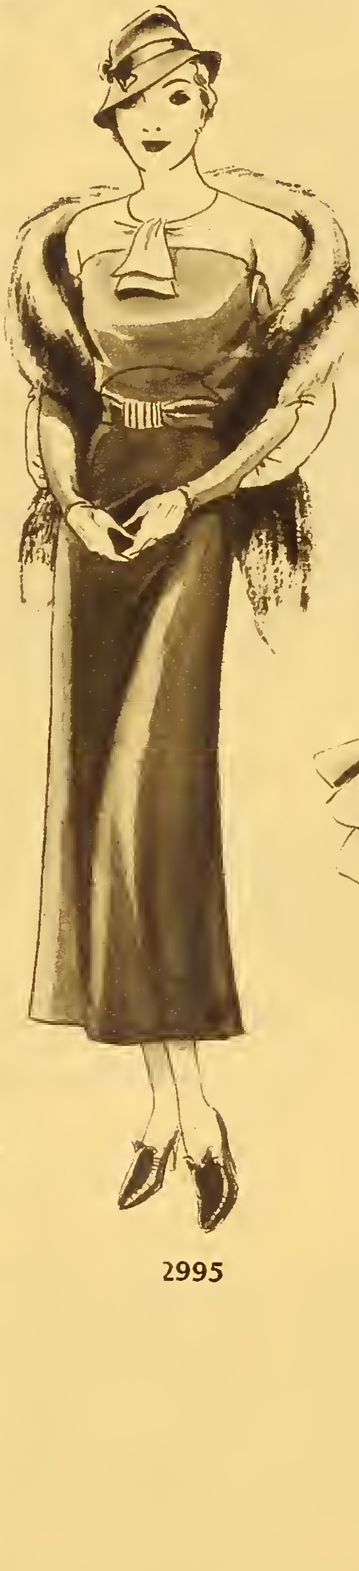


Are we coming back to the 1890 era? Well, Mae West, having taken the country, not to say the world, by storm, says certainly we are, as she leads the winter fashions. Here she is wearing (above) one of her broad brimmed hats, in black velvet, with a rhinestone ornament. It is the sort of thing that is particularly good with bridge or restaurant frocks. At the right, Helen Twelvetrees is wearing one of the new flower petal ruffs over the left shoulder of her evening gown. Nothing is better calculated to add romance to evening attire than this sort of boa-ruff affair.

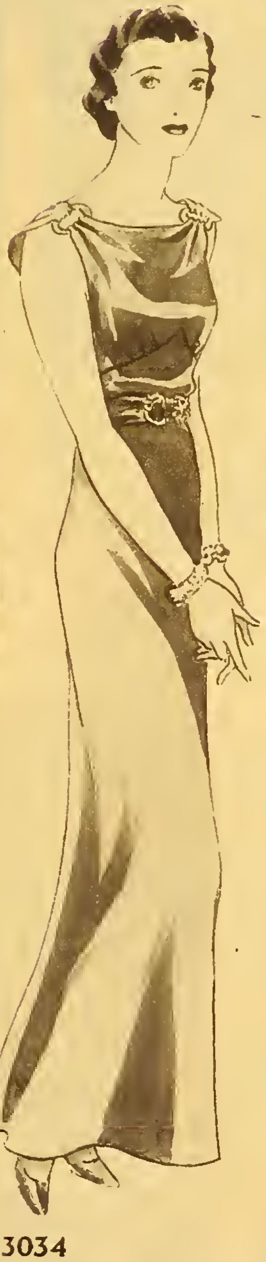
Patterns

The patterns are fifteen cents each. The book is fifteen cents when ordered separately—it is ten cents when ordered with a pattern. You may send stamps or coin—coin preferred. If you live outside of the United States, the patterns cost twenty cents each, the book twenty cents separately and fifteen cents when ordered with a pattern. No foreign or Canadian stamps will be accepted. Orders should be addressed to MODERN SCREEN Pattern Service, 100 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. In ordering, be sure to state size wanted.

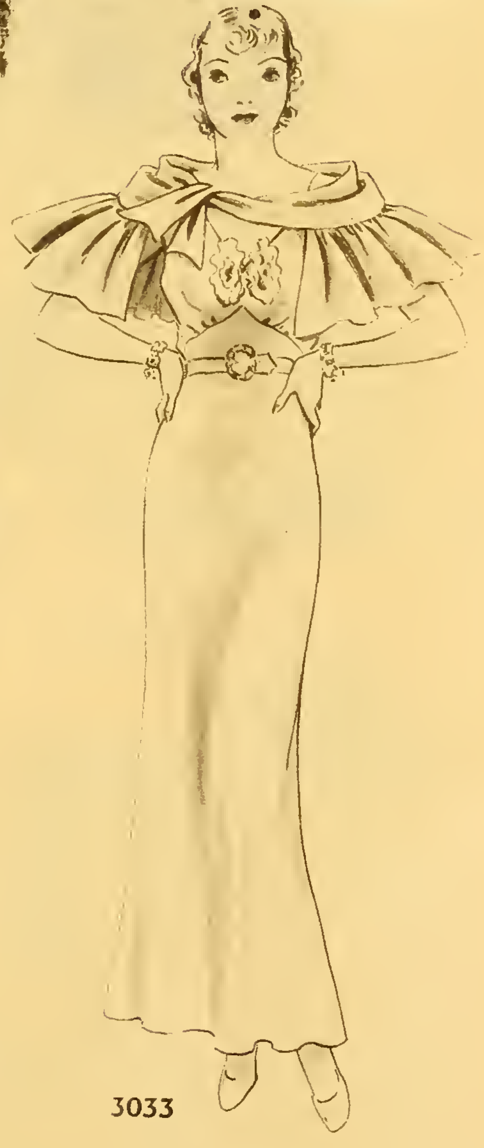




2995



3034



3033

3034—Kay Francis (in the portrait) wears a formal evening gown of shiny black crinkled satin. You can make it for yourself from the pattern at the right. Long lines make it characteristically smart. Shoulders and belt are clasped with round buckles of brilliantes. The back is low. Size 14 to 20, 34 to 40 bust.

2995—Undeniably graceful and slender, too. New drop shoulder attained by well designed yoke that cuts in one with part of the sleeves. Try it in black woolen with shiny black satin for the yoke and sleeve section. Sizes 14 to 20, 36 to 40 bust.

3033—It's young! It's classic, slim, elegantly cut and delightfully sophisticated. Equally lovely in white or pale pink crepe satin, dark grape faille crepe, white, pink, azure-blue or black lace or black silk velvet. The cape is separate. Sizes 11, 13, 15, 17.

For back views of patterns,
see page 94

CHARMING, EASY-TO-MAKE GOWNS FOR BRIDGE, DINNER AND EVENING

(Below) Bette Davis' gloves have huge velvet cuffs which match her brown velvet toque. And (right) Heather Angel's doggy swagger-stick is also an umbrella—when the weather demands. Grand with sportwear.

Hollywood CHARM GOSSIP

A CASUAL peep-in at some of the favorite haunts about town has convinced us that jewelry is occupying a very prominent place on the fashion horizon this winter.

There was Maureen O'Sullivan, f'instance, flashing two or three diamond clips (one huge one on her belt) and a pair of gorgeous cut-steel buckles. We spied Loretta Young at another popular late-spot wearing a cunning novelty bracelet and corsage made of tiny beads and glass in various colors, strung on wire. And Lupe Velez, at the same place, was simply swamped with bracelets.

How times do change! This time last year, Madame Fashion decreed "no jewels" . . . and now the more one wears the smarter one is.

● Janet Gaynor has a swell new idea for handkerchiefs. She embroiders her name in her own handwriting in the corner of each hanky. Sometimes the name is embroidered in different colors to match her frocks. Always the handkerchief is of plain white linen. She also has two or three sweaters with "Janet" embroidered across the pocket. This, too, is in her own handwriting.

● Chinese characters are invading our kitchens. We've had them in our living rooms for a long time—in scrolls, silk hangings and pictures—but Joan Bennett has them adorning her kitchenware. All her flour, coffee, tea and sugar tins and cookie jars are labelled in Chinese. Of course, we couldn't make out what they were, but they did look very gay and interesting and different.

● Ginger Rogers has a new bag that has a very practical feature. The coin purse is attached to the bag proper by means of a small, dainty gold chain. Now isn't that something for you gals who have the habit of losing your coin purse? Another thing we noticed about Ginger's bags . . . this purely ornamental . . . is that she always decorates them with a clip that (Continued on page 103)

SMARTEST HINTS FOR HOME AND WARDROBE — FROM FILM TOWN

TWO SKINS!

You have an Outer and an Under Skin

Do you know the Different Care that Each Skin Needs?

This TWO-SKIN TREATMENT Checks Wrinkles, Corrects Dryness

DID YOU KNOW that those little lines and wrinkles you hate so start in your under skin? . . . before they show in your outer skin? And there's a way to stop them from coming?

Here's how it happens:

You have an outer and an under skin. When you are young, the under skin fits the outer skin like the flesh of a ripening plum.

Then, soon something goes wrong. The tiny glands that poured out beauty oils and kept the under skin so firm and full, begin to fail. The under skin falls into little creases—those first signs of age that deepen and deepen if left uncorrected.

To check this condition, you must help the under skin! That is what Pond's Cold Cream is for.

An Oil Cream that Goes Deep

Pond's Cold Cream is a delicious oil-rich cream that penetrates down to the under skin! And brings it just the oils it needs. Pat it on. Your skin feels toned up right away. Because it is so light and its oils go so deep, it is a marvelous cleanser.

For the Outer Skin — a Greaseless Cream

How very different is your outer skin! This skin contains active moisture cells to guard the under skin against sun, wind, cold, dust, the dry heat of modern houses. But these elements are constantly drying out this natural moisture. Dryness, chapping result.

To correct this, use Pond's feather-light Vanishing Cream. Greaseless, this cream. You can have it on during the day. Leave it on all night. It contains a special ingredient that actually restores moisture to the outer skin. One application will remove roughnesses, relieve chapping!

THE DUCHESSE DE NEMOURS, brilliant society beauty, uses Pond's Two-Skin Treatment

OUTER SKIN
WHERE DRYNESS STARTS

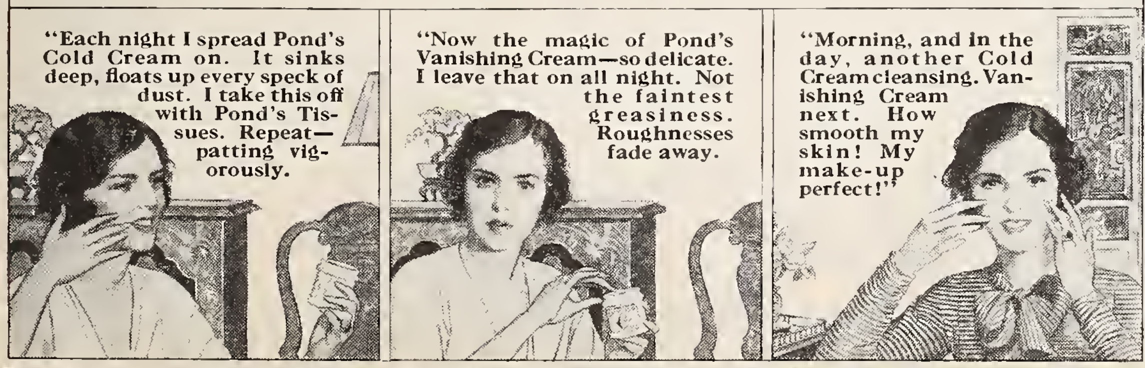
UNDER SKIN
WHERE WRINKLES START

And Pond's Vanishing Cream makes the most effective powder base.

Together these two creams give your skin complete beauty care. They supply everything that each skin needs. Fill out the coupon and send for generous samples. In a few days, see your own skin gain in smoothness, firmness. See the little lines fade away, magically!

POND'S
Vanishing Cream For Finishing
POND'S
Cold Cream For Cleansing

Lovely MRS. MORGAN BELMONT tells how she cares for her skin



"Each night I spread Pond's Cold Cream on. It sinks deep, floats up every speck of dust. I take this off with Pond's Tissues. Repeat—patting vigorously.

"Now the magic of Pond's Vanishing Cream—so delicate. I leave that on all night. Not the faintest greasiness. Roughnesses fade away.

"Morning, and in the day, another Cold Cream cleansing. Vanishing Cream next. How smooth my skin! My make-up perfect!"

POND'S EXTRACT COMPANY, Dept. M
136 Hudson St., New York City
I enclose 6¢ (to cover postage and packing) for samples of Pond's Two Creams and new Face Powder. (Check shade): Naturelle ☐ Light Cream ☐ Rose Cream ☐ Brunette ☐ Rose Brunette ☐ Dark Brunette ☐.

Name____________________

Street____________________ State__________

City____________________

MAIL COUPON

Copyright, 1933, Pond's Extract Company

TUNE IN ON THE POND'S PLAYERS EVERY FRIDAY EVENING, 9:30 P. M., E. S. T. WEAF AND NBC NETWORK

At last Mary Gets a "MOVIE KISS"

1
I WISH JACK WOULD KISS ME LIKE THAT . . .
I CAN SHOW YOU HOW TO MAKE HIM... AT THE 10¢ STORE!
2
KISSPROOF INDELIBLE LIPSTICK, YOU SAY?
YES...IT'S THE SPECIAL LIPSTICK THE MOVIE STARS USE TO GET THEIR "LIP APPEAL"...
3
YOUR LIPS ARE IRRESISTIBLE TODAY... I HOPE YOU'RE KISSPROOF...
YES, THAT'S THE SECRET
THOUGHT
HE'S JUST LIKE THE MOVIE HEROES!

Try the Stage and Movie Lipstick

Now you can give your lips the irresistible appeal of the lips of the movie stars and the girls in the Broadway shows! Just use the same make-up—the new KISSPROOF Indelible Lipstick—Special Theatrical Color. This lipstick gives an effect so alluring, indeed, that it has been placed by the make-up experts in the dressing-rooms of both Hollywood Studios and New York Theatres! The stars could pay any price—yet, it happens, their matchless make-up costs but a few cents! See what it can do for you tonight. You can get KISSPROOF Lipstick in all shades—including the Special Theatrical Color—at any drug or department store and at the ten cent stores.

Kissproof

Indelible LIPSTICK

I've Dressed Them All

(Continued from page 45)

she plays the part of a lady, are invariably her own choice. Hence we assumed that Garbo might like the slinky, embroidered, fur-trimmed exaggerations in which she had appeared in her films.

The mannequins went through the wardrobe and chose the most elaborate dresses. The first girl to appear posed before the great Garbo in a gown which had a bodice of sparkling rhinestones and pearls.

Garbo gave it a casual glance, shrugged and said, "But it is not simple enough."

Another mannequin appeared and still another. But all the dresses were too elaborate. We began showing plainer things, but apparently it was impossible to find anything simple enough for Garbo's taste. But we then learned that she needed the dress for that evening and, since our original models are never sold off the backs of the mannequins and we usually require ten days to copy a dress, it would have been impossible to supply her anyhow.

Several months later, she came into the shop again. This time she was prepared to have clothes made for her. She was getting ready for her first trip back to Sweden and wanted to take a complete wardrobe of new clothes with her. She chose evening dresses, street dresses, several suits and coats.

She abhorred embroidery in any form. She disliked lace. She hated, in fact, anything that was chi-chi. The things she liked most were tailored swagger coats—the first ones she wore—which were modelled after soldiers' raincoats, with wide shoulders, big sleeves and high notched collars. We eventually made her a copy of this same tweed sports coat in black broadcloth, which she wore in the evening over severe, black dinner dresses.

It was during the waits between fittings that I talked with her. She fascinated me from the first and I was convinced that the so-called pose of reticence was a serious complex in her nature.

We were talking, one day, of Paris and I was telling her of some of the people I had known there—Sarah Bernhardt, Gaby Deslys, Yvonne Printemps and Cecile Sorel.

Garbo looked at me with wide eyes. "I suppose nearly everybody who is famous comes into this shop," she said.

"Well, a lot of well-known people have been here," I answered.

"Don't they ever frighten you?" she asked.

"They used to frighten me," I replied. "Sometimes they still do—a little bit."

"People always frighten me," she said. And no one was ever more in earnest.

Then she told me something of her experiences and life in Sweden. She had never been a star over there and, like any young girl who goes to pictures, she had her favorites whom she would have liked to see. They moved in another world. They were surrounded with glamor and she admired them just as any fan admires her favorites.

Then, quite without warning, she found herself in America and her first picture was a sensational personal triumph. Before she had learned to speak English with any fluency, before she was in the least acclimated, she found that Fate had played a trick upon her. The tables were completely turned and she was on one of the pedestals to which she used to turn with worship.

It embarrassed her, for she was not prepared for the lionizing she received. A few months before, she could have walked through the streets of Stockholm and no one would even turn to look at her. Now she couldn't leave her hotel without finding excited groups awaiting her. An American girl could have adjusted her life to this mad, merry, overnight success, but Garbo could not. She was not frightened of success—for success never touches a real artist—but she was panicky before the unavoidable things that went with it.

I never read an article about Garbo, accusing her of posing by loving solitude, that I do not think of her confession to me in that fitting-room.

When the play "Once in a Lifetime" came to Los Angeles, Garbo and I decided to attend a matinee and planned our arrival for a few minutes after the rise of the curtain, so that no one would know she was in the house.

When we arrived at the theatre, the lobby was empty. The curtain had gone up, so we entered a darkened auditorium.

There were allusions to actors and actresses which amused everyone in the audience. There was one line in particular which mentioned Garbo. She was very amused and, for the moment, was just any unknown person laughing over a quip about a famous personage. She had succeeded in dissociating herself from the famous woman she could not help being. She was just about to laugh at what had been said on the stage, when she realized that every person in the house was aware that she was there.

They had all laughed at the mention of other actors' and actresses' names. They were now silent—all turning to stare at Garbo to see how she would react to this mention of her own name. I have never experienced such a dreadful moment. I knew how embarrassed and horrified she was. Her afternoon was spoiled, simply because people around refused to let her have one single moment of relaxation.

Between the acts, people walked up and down the aisles to stare at her. Maybe I would have done the same thing myself. Certainly there are two sides to every question. Any famous person is public property. Some of them revel in the attention, some bear it and a few, like Garbo, resent it, fear it and cannot understand it.

In all the time she has lived in Hollywood, I'm sure not more than ten people have been invited to dine with her. She would tremble if she ever found herself being a hostess. But one evening she came to the shop just before closing time. Usually she drove in and dismissed her chauffeur so that she could walk back to Beverly Hills, a distance of some nine miles.

I put on an old rain coat and walked with her. By the time I arrived my feet felt as if they had been worn down to the ankles, but Garbo, who had walked twice as far, was still fresh and could have gone on tramping for hours. I sank exhausted on the divan and was delighted when I was offered something stronger than water. Then she asked me to stay and share pot-luck with her.

She had two Swedish servants at the time. Garbo spoke to the man in Swedish, apparently telling him that I would remain for dinner. He went white with consternation. A great argument ensued, but eventually a card table was brought in and placed before the fire. Then came an enormous tray with the most amazing collection of Swedish hors-d'oeuvres I have ever seen. With them were little hard-as-nails crackers, which reminded me of compo-board, on which we spread the various appetizers. Following this we had a huge bowl of spaghetti and a green salad. Coffee completed the meal. That was all.

I will never be convinced that Garbo is a happy woman. I doubt that she will ever be. She is so afraid of people that she will never be close to any one person for very long. She would like to travel, dream, live in quiet comfort and I hope some day she may. I am sure that success means nothing to her, that money is only something to insure a future free from worry. She is, to the few who know her, a woman with a delicious sense of humor, an intelligent person and one with a captivating personality. And with it all, she has youth and a rare fresh beauty. I must confess a great fondness and admiration for her.

Here's the signature of the gal with the sad, expressive hands. A strange, nervous, flighty and lovable individual is Zasu Pitts. I've known her often to come into the shop and say, "Show me some clothes." And before the mannequin had a chance to appear in the first dress, Miss Pitts would be wandering restlessly about the showrooms. She might have enough patience to look at two dresses. Then she would say, "But you know what I want, Harold," (she was always confusing me with Harold Grieve, the interior decorator and husband of Jetta Goudal) "don't bother to make the poor gals put the clothes on. Just show them to me."

The one thing I've always refused to do is to show a dress in the hand. It can look like a tired and dejected rag that way. Clothes, like pictures, need

(Continued on page 95)

"Why do my hands get DRY and CHAPPED?"

Those strong suds you use for dishes dry out your hands . . .

but when you use Ivory your hands get Beauty Baths . . .

Use Ivory for your dishes (and all other soap and water tasks) for a week and watch your hands get smoother and softer. Though Ivory is pure enough for a baby's skin, it is economical to use even for housework . . . 99 $^{44}/_{100}$ % Pure.

IVORY SOAP

prevents "Housework Hands"

SEE HOW EASY..

it is to have gleaming floors with only 10 minutes' work

NO RUBBING! NO POLISHING!

● Glo-Coat will change your dull, lifeless floors to beautiful, shining floors right before your eyes. All you do is wipe it over the floor with a cloth or mop, or best of all, the regular Glo-Coat applier. Dries in 20 minutes or less and shines as it dries without buffing or polishing. Modern women everywhere are adopting this new labor-saving method for keeping linoleum, rubber tile, varnished and painted wood floors in perfect condition.

● Buy a 10c trial size of Glo-Coat from your 10 cent store. If they haven't it, send in coupon below.

BY THE MAKERS OF JOHNSON'S WAX

GLO-COAT

JOHNSON'S
GLO-COAT

S. C. Johnson & Son, Inc., Dept. MS12 Racine, Wisconsin. Enclosed is 10c. Please send me generous trial can of your new easy-to-use floor polish, Glo-Coat.

Name__________

Address__________

City__________ State__________

Let's Talk About Hollywood

HERE'S SOME MORE CHATTER FROM FILM TOWN

CHECKING up on our stork news, we find that the Johnny Mack Browns have a new baby boy. He weighed seven pounds and five ounces when born—and naturally papa Brown hopes he'll be a football player.

Dorothy Jordan (Mrs. Meriam C. Cooper) is expecting a blessed event sometime next year.

Joan Bennett (Mrs. Gene Markey) will not make another picture until after the heir arrives—also sometime early next year.

Jimmy Cagney and his brother Bill look so much alike that even their mother has a hard time telling them apart sometimes. The other eve Hollywood gossipers thought they had a real scoop! Jimmy Cagney, devoted husband was sighted dining with another gal! Buzz, buzz—the tongues wagged merrily. Suddenly the girl looked up. It was Boots Mallory—so, of course, the gentleman turned out to be her husband, Mr. BILL Cagney.

On another occasion the marked similarity proved to be very lucrative to Bill. He was spending the day visiting over at the Warner lot—Jimmy's hangout—when a stranger approached him and handed over a ten dollar bill. "That," he said, "is the ten you gave me in New York about a year ago. Thanks for the loan, Jim!"

ALTHOUGH Lola Lane has switched her affections from Lyle Talbot to Al Hall, Lew Ayres remains true to his one love, Ginger Rogers. . . . Frances Dee and Joel McCrea are definitely engaged, with wedding bells "just around the corner"—but they won't talk about it. . . . Dolores Del Rio loves to putter around in her vegetable garden. . . . Jack Holt is planning a South American vacation via tramp steamer. . . . As soon as she finished "Only Yesterday," Margaret Sullavan dashed back to New York to see her sweetie, Jed Harris. . . . Dorothy Wilson finally gets that role in "Eight Girls in a Boat" after two girls did a fade-out. . . . Pola Negri has intimated that she will marry Harold McCormich, sixty-year-old Chicago millionaire. . . . And don't be surprised if Mae Murray and her Prince kiss and make up.

Andy Devine has a new sweetie—but no one seems to be able to find out what her name is. When the question is put to Andy, he hedges with: "She's DIVINE now . . . and will be DEVINE later!"

EVERYONE seems quite pleased with Paramount's choice of "Alice" for "Alice in Wonderland," the film that should be different, to say the least. Out of 7,000 applicants, little Charlotte Henry, virtually unknown, won the coveted role. Charlotte is just seventeen—small and dainty with long blonde hair (natural) and large wistful blue eyes, and has a sweetness and innocence that is really delightful. When asked if she thought she would be successful in pictures, she replied naïvely, "I'm afraid not. I'm not sophisticated enough and don't believe I could be."

WE had our suspicions when Bob Armstrong started building that luxurious hacienda out in Cold Water Canyon. Figured there must be a woman in the case. But after seeing the place, we've decided Bob plans to remain a bachelor for some little time yet. The house—a typical Mexican hacienda, is strictly masculine. There's not a feminine thing about the whole place.

Wonder if Ken Murray suffers any pangs of jealousy when his fiancée, Sue Carol, plays heavy love scenes with her ex-husband, Nick Stuart? The love scenes take place in "Ladies of the Follies," the first picture Sue and Nick have made for a long time.

A DECIDED change has come over William Powell since he became a bachelor again. Long regarded as one of Hollywood's best-dressed men, Bill has until recently upheld this title with due dignity. But lately, he has been striking out for more freedom and comfort. He now goes around attired in ducks, sweat shirt and beret.

AFTER that dramatic and very unexpected midnight visit from her husband, Stephen Ames, Adrienne didn't waste any time about setting out for Reno to become a free woman. Of course, we knew all along she'd get a divorce . . . they always do when they announce an "amicable separation." Adrienne said, just before boarding the train, that Ames had made a very generous property settlement upon her.

In the meantime, Bruce Cabot is going around with a very forlorn look upon his face. Evidently the separation is hard on him.

Alice White bought herself a spiffy all-white Ford coupé. The day it was delivered, she hopped in and drove proudly down Hollywood Boulevard. She was delighted to notice all the attention it attracted—in fact, people actually stopped and stared. It wasn't until she got home that she found out why. On the back of the car, in bold black letters, someone had written: "Come up and see me sometime!"

IT looks like a romance springing up between Carole Lombard and Gary Cooper. Ditto for William Powell and the Countess Frasso. It was amusing to find Carole and Gary at a table together at a popular nite-club recently—with Bill and the Countess seated just two tables away from them and Lupe Velez and her Johnny just across from Carole and Gary. Looked like Old Home Week!

CLAUDETTE COLBERT will have no scar to exhibit when her friends start talking about their operations. Although she recently had an appendicitis operation, it happens that through some new scientific discovery, there is no trace of a scar. This is a life-saver to Claudette, who is preparing to play "Cleopatra" before long. Another thing: she has to stay out of the sun. Cleopatra can't afford to have any bathing-suit stencil work embroidered on her back and chest!

A little blonde went into a Hollywood restaurant for a bite.

"Have you any wild duck?" she asked.

"No," replied the waiter, "but we can take a tame one and irritate it for you."

LEAVE it to Lupe to think of this. She has a recording machine installed in her home that records her voice on wax records when she speaks into it. Before going into a picture, she spends hours practicing her lines before this machine. She plays the records over several times, picks out her weak points, and then starts rehearsing all over again. Her dialogue is pretty near perfect by the time she checks in on the set.

NO doubt there will be many broken hearts when Fifi D'Orsay marries her handsome young doctor, Maurice Hill. The snappy Fifi has been reported engaged several times, but this time she is really serious about getting married. The ceremony is to take place as soon as she finishes her work in Marion Davies' picture, "Going Hollywood." Hill, incidentally, is very good looking, so much so that he once won a contest as the handsomest college student in the Middle West!

PARAMOUNT officials were evidently convinced that Sylvia Sidney really was a very sick girl when she walked out of their picture, "The Way to Love"—or else they're smart enough to realize that Sylvia means plenty of do-ray for them at the box office. Anyway, whatever the reason, they have forgiven if not forgotten. She will have the lead in their "Reunion." Her only punishment is that she will receive no check for the period she was away from the studio.

Joe E. Brown says his life, as a comedian, is full of bumps. In "Son of the Gods," he had to make a parachute jump. According to plan, he was to land safely into a blanket held out by a dozen or more men. However, though Joe landed in the blanket, it was a bit too close to the ground!

P. S.—Joe stood up the rest of the day, including meal-time.

"It's my pet 3 in 1 Costume thanks to IVORY FLAKES"

Fashions by B. Altman & Company, New York

"To make my 3 in 1 masterpiece, I went in for black with white variations. First, I bought the love of a two-piece frock (center) with the collars and cuffs of white ribbed silk that are Ivory-washable. Now notice to what smart work I've put the skirt! With a lacy white Shetland wool sweater (left) I have my second jaunty set-up. With the suave blouse of white silk Bedford cord (right) I have a third costume that's grand for tea dates. Both sweater and blouse wash beautifully with pure Ivory Flakes."

When you're planning your fall clothes, see how many you can buy that are Ivory-washable. Their upkeep will be next to nil, thanks to the low cost of pure Ivory. And your clothes will keep that sparkling freshness—that counts, oh, how it counts!

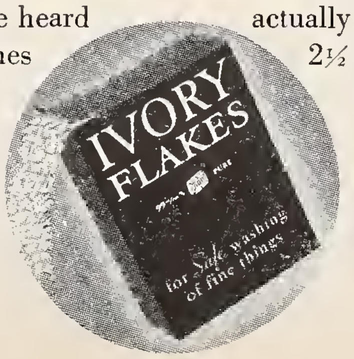
Salesgirls will be glad to advise you. They'll perk up with interest when you ask, "Will this wash with Ivory?" For they'll know that the silk, the wool or the color that won't be refreshed by gentle, pure Ivory just won't satisfy you.

These salespeople have heard sad stories about clothes that weren't washed with Ivory—they know about those flat flakes that stick so easily to crepey weaves and knitted fabrics—causing ruinous soap spots.

But Ivory Flakes aren't flat flakes. They are snowy little curls of Ivory Soap. They're made for girls who can't wait a minute for suds. They curl and melt up into suds instantly in lukewarm water.

Do "baby" your nice things with Ivory Flakes. Don't trust luck, depend upon Ivory's purity. It won't even cost you more to use Ivory Flakes . . . it actually costs less! And there's 2½ ounces more soap in that fat Ivory Flakes box!

CURLY . . .
QUICK-DISSOLVING



99 44/100 % PURE

What a difference!

what a truly amazing difference
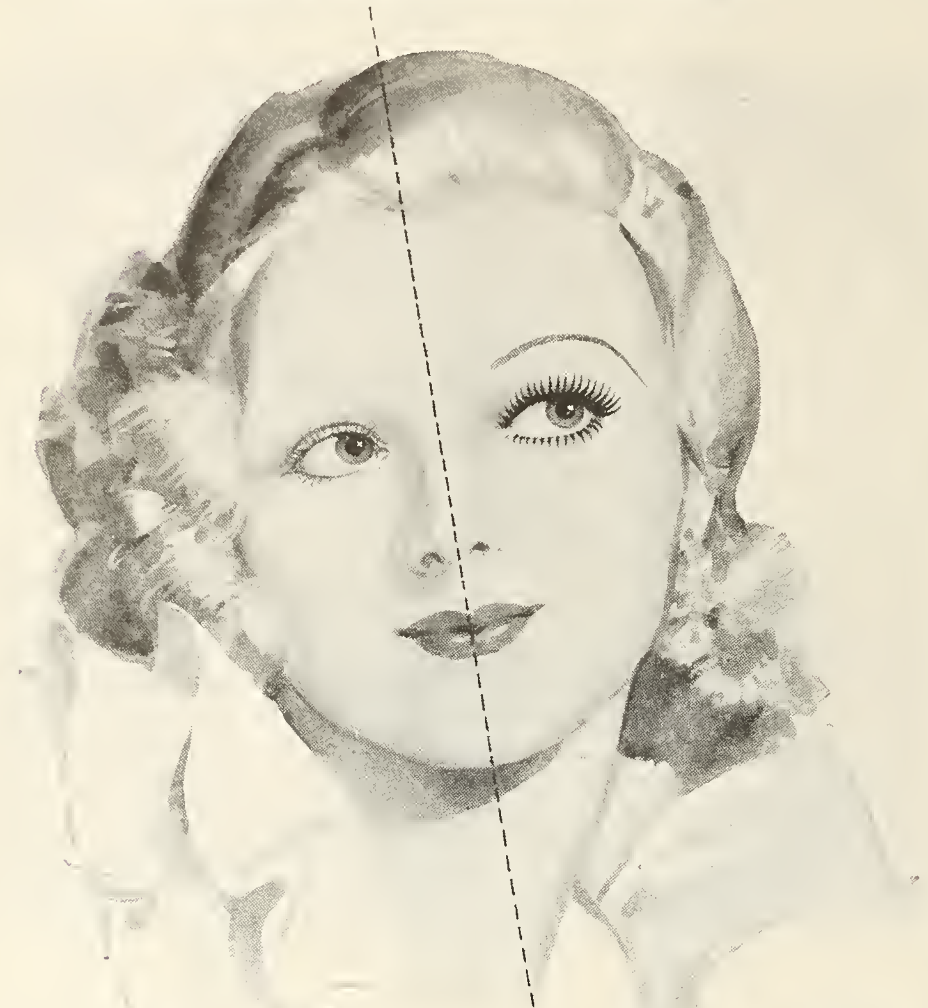
Maybelline Eye Beauty Aids do make



Maybelline

Do you carefully powder and rouge, and then allow scraggly brows and pale, scanty lashes to mar what should be your most expressive feature, your eyes? You would be amazed at the added loveliness that could be so easily yours with Maybelline eye beauty aids!

Simply darken your lashes into long-appearing, luxuriant fringe with the famous Maybelline Eyelash Darkener, and see how the eyes instantly appear larger and more expressive. It is absolutely harmless, non-smarting, and tear-proof, and keeps the lashes soft and silky. Black for brunettes, Brown for blondes.

Now a bit of Maybelline Eye Shadow blended softly on your eyelids, and notice how the eyes immediately take on brilliance and color, adding depth and beauty to the expression. There are five exquisite shades of this pure, creamy shadow: Blue, Brown, Blue-Gray, Violet, and Green.

Form graceful, expressive eyebrows with the smooth-marking, easy-to-use Maybelline Eyebrow Pencil. A perfect pencil that you will adore. It comes in Black or Brown.

To stimulate the natural growth of your lashes, apply the pure, nourishing Maybelline Eyelash Grower before retiring.

The name Maybelline is your assurance of purity and effectiveness. These famous products in purse sizes are now within the reach of every girl and woman at all leading 10c stores. Try them today and see what an amazing difference Maybelline Eye Beauty Aids can make in your appearance!

Maybelline
EYEBROW PENCIL

Maybelline
EYE SHADOW

Maybelline
Eyelash Grower

MAYBELLINE CO., CHICAGO

Maybelline

EYE BEAUTY PREPARATIONS

What a Trio!

(Continued from page 25)

wanted to run away, but before he could turn, Ruby had dashed over to Al and brought him to Dick.

The two shook hands. Somebody called Ruby away and Dick and Al stood there looking at each other.

Al said, "I watched that scene."

Dick just grinned and felt silly.

"It was great," said Al, "and I want to tell you something. You're great for Ruby. You see, she's a funny kid. She's all tied up inside with nervousness. She doesn't think she can act and it's hard for her to unbend, particularly with strangers."

Dick sighed with relief. This was Al Jolson, the showman, talking now. And Dick knew that he meant every word.

"Well, it's great making love to your wife," Dick said. "And you're swell about it."

"Listen," said Al. "I want the kid to make a good picture."

From then on Dick Powell knew that Al Jolson was his friend.

Dick and Ruby made "Golddiggers of 1933" together. Al was in New York and by this time Ruby and Dick had become great friends. They were working on the picture when Al first broadcast and Ruby asked Dick if she might listen in over his radio, for Dick's house is just a couple of blocks from the studio. Ruby brought her sister along and the two sat with their ears glued to the radio.

As Dick watched her sitting there, he realized just how great is her love for Al, for when he spoke her eyes filled with tears and her little hands reached out as if she would carress the cold instrument that brought her her sweetheart's voice.

"You think he's a great guy, don't you?" Dick asked.

Ruby could not even answer.

But in New York, Al was working for Dick as well as broadcasting. In Warners' New York office, Al was going over the publicity campaign for "Golddiggers," and if it had been his own picture he could not have taken more interest in it. But it was not only for Ruby that he wanted publicity. It was for Dick, too. He insisted that Dick should be given credit right along with Ruby, and wherever he was he told what a fine team those two made.

WHEN Al returned to Hollywood and Ruby's third picture was planned, Dick became ill. In the hospital he lay in bed not caring whether he played in a picture or not. He only hoped that he would live.

When the studio realized how long it would take the boy to recover, they cast another player, Stanley Smith, opposite Ruby.

When Al heard about it he went to the office of the biggest executive.

"You're crazy," he told them, "Dick is the only one for Ruby. He understands her. He knows what she needs. He's a fine showman. They're a real team."

But the executive explained that the release date of the new picture was already set and that it was costly to hold up production.

And then an amazing thing happened. Studio executives suddenly realized, after a week's work, that together the new team didn't click. The studio saw what Al had known all along—that Ruby needed Dick.

So they took Smith out and began testing other leading men for the role.

Here it was that Al leapt in, hammer and tongs. "You've got to wait now!" he said. "You've got to wait for Powell to get well. You put another lad in because you didn't want to hold up production, but production has already been held up. Don't make another mistake. Wait for Dick."

And at last the force of Jolson's personality won, and they said they would wait for Powell.

BUT curiously enough these three—Ruby, Dick and Al—whose lives are so tangled, see comparatively little of each other after working hours. Dick, because he takes Mary Brian and other members of the younger set around to parties and dances, and the Jolsons lead the quiet, simple life they always have.

The point is that when Al fights Dick's battles, when he insists that he have a part, when he carefully goes over publicity campaigns, he is really fighting for Ruby.

He is showman enough to know that Ruby Keeler, sensational as she is on the screen, lacks the quality of glamor. Lacking this, she must have something else to take its place. The buoyant, wholesome quality that Dick Powell has is just what Ruby's screen career needs.

Ruby and Dick are great friends on the set.

One day, Ruby showed Dick a new diamond and emerald bracelet that Al had given her.

"It's okay," said Dick. "It's a pretty little bauble. Too bad it isn't real. Al told me about slipping one over on you and putting paste stones in it."

"Why, Dick," Ruby answered, "you don't really think. . . ."

And then she looked up and saw them all laughing.

But sometimes Ruby does a little kidding herself.

Not long ago Dick was making personal appearances in the east. As master of ceremonies, he was playing at Jamaica, Long Island. In the front row was a girl who kept waving at him, but Dick thought she was just a little fan and was afraid to pay any attention to her, lest she break up his act. Just as his act was finished she called out, "Oh, sing something from your latest picture, Mr. Powell." And then he looked down and discovered Ruby Keeler.

Al encourages this kidding. He knows that when Ruby is kept laughing, she has no time for self-consciousness, and that is the bugaboo she has to fight constantly. Dick knows it, too. That's why they make such a grand team.

PARALYZED PORES
TRUE CAUSE OF
DRY OR OILY SKIN
ENLARGED PORES
AND BLACKHEADS
HER PORES SAY
I CAN'T BREATHE!
HELP! GIVE ME AIR!
I'M SUFFOCATING!

MAKE THIS TELLING TEST!

RUB YOUR finger tips over your face. Press firmly. Give particular attention to your chin, forehead, around your mouth, and the little crevices beside your nose. Now! Is your skin absolutely smooth? Or do you feel tiny bumps and rough patches? If you do, you have Paralyzed Pores.

Your Cleansing Methods Paralyze the Pores Because They Do Not Let the Skin Breathe

When you massage a heavy, waxy cold cream into your pores you fill them with a sticky mixture of grease and dirt. The mixture hardens in the pores—plugs them up—paralyzes them. Then the skin, unable to breathe, becomes dry, coarse and muddy. The clogged pores become enlarged. Blackheads and heart-breaking blemishes appear.

How to Correct Paralyzed Pores. For Complete Results Just This One Cream is Necessary

The way to banish paralyzed pores is to use a cleansing method that is founded on a scientific knowledge of the skin and its requirements. Such a method is supplied in Lady Esther Four-Purpose Face Cream.

FIRST: This new cream melts the instant it touches the skin. It penetrates the pores to the bottom without enlarging them, dissolves the waxy accumulations and floats them to the surface where they are easily wiped off.

SECOND: It makes the pores so clean that fresh air rushes in and stimulates your tired skin. Thoroughly cleansed and revived, the pores naturally resume their normal size. Thus this cream corrects enlarged pores. No astringents are necessary.

THIRD: Lady Esther Cream resupplies the skin with a fine oil. That's why it banishes dryness and the withered look of age. You can forget about your skin foods.

FOURTH: This one cream keeps the skin so soft and smooth, powder clings perfectly. You do not need vanishing creams or powder bases.

Prove to Yourself What My Cream Will Do For Your Skin

Mail coupon below to me, and by return mail I will send you a proof tube of my famous Lady Esther Four-Purpose Face Cream. Use this tube as I direct. Then look in your mirror—you'll see an amazing difference. Your face will be softer and smoother than ever before. Lady Esther, 2010 Ridge Avenue, Evanston, Ill.

ACCEPT FREE OFFER

(You can paste this on a penny postcard)

LADY ESTHER MAIL NOW
2010 Ridge Avenue, Evanston, Ill.

Please send me by return mail your 7-day tube of Lady Esther Four-Purpose Face Cream.

Name..........

Address..........

City.......... State..........

THE MODERN SCREEN DIRECTORY of PLAYERS

Columbia Studios, 1438 Gower Street, Hollywood, California.
Educational Studios, Santa Monica Boulevard, Hollywood, California.
First National Studios, Burbank, California.
Fox Studios, Movietone City, Westwood, California.
Samuel Goldwyn Studio, 7210 Santa Monica Boulevard, Hollywood, California.
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, Culver City, California.
Paramount-Publix Studios, Hollywood, California.
Radio Studios, 780 Gower Street, Hollywood, California.
Hal Roach Studios, Culver City, California.
Mack Sennett Studios, Studio City, North Hollywood, California.
Warner Brothers Studio, Burbank, California.
United Artists Studios, 1041 No. Formoso Avenue, Hollywood, California.
Universal Studios, Universal City, California.

ANGEL, HEATHER: Unmarried. Born in Oxford, England, February 9. Fox player. Featured in "Pilgrimage," "Berkeley Square," "Charlie Chan's Greatest Case."

ARLEN, RICHARD: Married to Jobyna Ralston. Born in St. Paul, Minn., September 1. Paramount player. Featured in "College Humor," "Three Cornered Moon," "Golden Harvest." Working in "Captain Jericho." Next is "Lives of a Bengal Lancer."

ARLISS, GEORGE: Married to Florence Montgomery. Born in London, England, April 10. Twentieth Century star. Starred in "The Working Man," "Voltaire," Warners.

ARMSTRONG, ROBERT: Divorced from Jeanne Kent. Born in Saginaw, Mich., November 21. RKO player. Featured in "I Love That Man," Paramount; "Blind Adventure," "Above the Clouds," Columbia.

ASTHER, NILS: Divorced from Vivian Duncan. Born in Stockholm, Sweden, January 17. M-G-M player. Featured in "Night Flight," "Storm at Daybreak." Working in "Beautiful" and "Behold We Live," RKO.

ATWILL, LIONEL: Married. Born in Croydon, England, March 1. Universal player. Featured in "The Sphinx," Monogram; "Secret of the Blue Room," "Solitaire Man," M-G-M.

AYRES, LEW: Divorced from Lola Lane. Born in Minneapolis, Minn., December 28. Fox star. Starred in "State Fair," "Don't Bet on Love," Universal; "My Weakness."

BARRYMORE, JOHN: Married to Dolores Costello. Born in Philadelphia, Pa., February 15. M-G-M and RKO star. Starred in "Reunion in Vienna," "Dinner at Eight," "Night Flight," M-G-M. Next is "Cyrano de Bergerac," RKO and "Counsellor at Law," Universal.

BARRYMORE, LIONEL: Married to Irene Fenwick. Born in Philadelphia, Pa., April 28. M-G-M and RKO star. Starred in "Dinner at Eight," "Stranger's Return," M-G-M; "One Man's Journey," RKO; "The Late Christopher Bean" M-G-M. Next is "The Vinegar Tree," M-G-M.

BARTHELMESS, RICHARD: Married to Jessica Sergeant. Born in New York City, May 9. First National star. Starred in "Central Airport," "Heroes for Sale." Next is "Massacre."

BAXTER, WARNER: Married to Winifred Bryson. Born in Columbus, Ohio, March 29. Fox star. Starred in "I Loved You Wednesday," "Paddy, the Next Best Thing," "Penthouse," M-G-M. Working in "As Husbands Go."

BEERY, WALLACE: Married to Rita Gilman. Born in Kansas City, Mo., April 1. M-G-M star. Starred in "Dinner at Eight," "Tugboat Annie," "The Bowery," 20th Cent. Next is "Soviet."

BELLAMY, RALPH: Married to Catherine Willard. Born in Chicago, Ill., June 17. Fox player. Featured in "Flying Devils," "Blind Adventure," RKO; "Ever in My Heart," Warner Bros.

BENNETT, CONSTANCE: Married to the Marquis de la Falaise. Born in New York City, October 22. Twentieth Century star. Starred in "Our Betters," "Bed of Roses," RKO. Working in "The Woman Spy." Next is "Moulin Rouge."

BENNETT, JOAN: Married to Gene Markey. Born in Palisades, N. J., February 27. Write her at RKO. Free lance. Featured in "From Arizona to Broadway," Fox; "Little Women," RKO.

BICKFORD, CHARLES: Married. Born in Cambridge, Mass., January 1. Write him at Paramount. Free lance. Featured in "The Song of the Eagle," "This Day and Age," Paramount. Working in "White Woman," Paramount.

BLONDELL, JOAN: Married to George Barnes. Born in New York City, August 30. Warner Bros. player. Featured in "Gold Diggers of 1933," "Goodbye Again," "Footlight Parade," "Havana Widows." Next is "Convention City."

BOLES, JOHN: Married to Marcellite Dobbs. Born in Breenville, Texas, October 27. Fox player. Featured in "My Lips Betray," "Only Yesterday," Universal.

BOW, CLARA: Married to Rex Bell. Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., July 29. Fox star. Starred in "Call Her Savage." Working in "Hoopla."

BOYD, BILL: Married to Dorothy Sebastian. Born in Cambridge, Ohio, June 5. RKO player. Featured in "Lucky Devils," "Emergency Call," "Flaming Gold."

BRADY, ALICE: Divorced. Born in New York City, November 2. M-G-M player. Featured in "When Ladies Meet," "Show World," "Stage Mother." Next is "The Vinegar Tree."

BRENDEL, EL: Married to Flo Bert. Born in Philadelphia, Pa., March 25. Fox player. Featured in "My Lips Betray," "The Last Trail."

BRENT, GEORGE: Married to Ruth Chatterton. Born in Dublin, Ireland, March 15. First National player. Featured in "Baby Face," "Lilly Turner," "Female." Working in "From Headquarters."

BRIAN, MARY: Unmarried. Born in Corsicana, Texas, February 17. Write her at Universal. Free lance. Featured in "The Song of the Eagle," Paramount; "Moonlight and Pretzels," Universal.

BROOK, CLIVE: Married to Faith Evelyn. Born in London, England, June 1. RKO player. Featured in "Cavalcade," Fox; "Midnight Club," Paramount. Working in "Behold We Live."

BROWN, JOE E.: Married to Kathryn McGraw. Born in Holgate, Ohio, July 28. First National star. Starred in "Elmer the Great," "How to Break Ninety." Working in "Son of the Gobs." Next is "The Crowned Head."

BROWN, TOM: Unmarried. Born in New York City, January 6. Write him at Paramount. Free lance. Featured in "Central Airport," Warner Bros; "Hell's Highway," Universal; "Three Cornered Moon," Paramount.

BUTTERWORTH, CHARLES: Married to Ethel Sutherland. Born in South Bend, Ind., July 26. M-G-M player. Featured in "Penthouse," "The Hollywood Party." Working in "The Cat and the Fiddle."

CABOT, BRUCE: Unmarried. Born in New Mexico, April 20. RKO player. Featured in "Bird of Prey," "Aggie Appleby, Maker of Men," "Ann Vickers." Next is "Hide in the Dark."

CAGNEY, JAMES: Married to Frances Vernon. Born in New York City, July 17. Warner Bros. star. Starred in "Picture Snatcher," "The Mayor of Hell," "Footlight Parade." Working in "The Finger Man."

CANTOR, EDDIE: Married to Ida Tobias. Born in New York City, January 31. United Artists star. Starred in "The Kid From Spain." Working in "Roman Scandals."

CARRILLO, LEO: Married. Born in Los Angeles, Calif., August 6. Write him at Paramount. Free lance. Featured in "Exile Express," "Moonlight and Pretzels," Universal. Working in "Four Frightened People," Paramount.

CARROLL, NANCY: Married to Francis Bolton Mallory. Born in New York City, November 19. Paramount star. Starred in "Kiss Before the Mirror," Universal; "I Love That Man."

CHAPLIN, CHARLES: Divorced from Lita Gray. Born in London, England, April 26. Write him at Charles Chaplin Studiio, Hollywood. Producer-star. Starred in "City Lights."

CHATTERTON, RUTH: Married to George Brent. Born in New York City, December 24. Warner Bros. star. Starred in "Frisco Jenny," "Lilly Turner," "Female." Next is "Mandalay."

CHEVALIER, MAURICE: Divorced from Yvonne Vallee. Born in Paris, France, September 22. M-G-M star. Starred in "A Bedtime Story," "The Way to Love," Paramount. Next is "The Merry Widow."

CLARKE, MAE: Divorced from Lew Price. Born in Philadelphia, Pa., August 16. M-G-M player. Featured in "Turn Back the Clock," "Penthouse." Working in "The Finger Man," Warner Bros.

COLBERT, CLAUDETTE: Married to Norman Foster. Born in Paris, France, September 13. Paramount star. Starred in "I Cover the Waterfront," United Artists; "Three Cornered Moon," "Torch Singer." Working in "Four Frightened People."

COLLINS, CORA SUE: Child actress. Born in Beckley, W. Va., April 19. Write her at Paramount. Free lance. Featured in "Jennie Gerhardt," "Torch Singer," Paramount.

COLMAN, RONALD: Divorced from Thelma Ray. Born in Surrey, England, February 9. United Artists star. Starred in "Cynara," "The Masquerader."

COOK, DONALD: Divorced. Born in Portland, Ore., September 26. Columbia player. Featured in "Jenny Gerhardt," Paramount; "Brief Moment." Working in "The World Changes," Warner Bros.

COOPER, GARY: Unmarried. Born in Helena, Mont., May 7. Paramount star. Starred in "Today We Live," M-G-M; "One Sunday Afternoon." Working in "Design for Living." Next is "Lives of a Bengal Lancer."

COOPER, JACKIE: Boy actor. Born in Los Angeles, Calif., September 15. M-G-M player. Featured in "Show World," "The Bowery," 20th Cent. Working in "One Cowboy," Paramount.

CORTEZ, RICARDO: Widower of Alma Rubens. Born in New York City, July 7. Paramount star. Starred Treat COLDS in the First Stage!

Colds go thru 3 Stages and they're far Easier Relieved in the First than in the Second or Third! . . .

IT PAYS to know something about colds! They are a great cause of prolonged sickness and financial loss.

A cold ordinarily progresses through three stages. The first—the Dry stage, the first 24 hours. The second—the Watery Secretion stage, from 1 to 3 days. The third—the Mucous Secretion stage. The time to "nail" a cold is in the first or Dry stage. It is twice as easily relieved then.

The Wise Measure

The thing to take upon catching cold is Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. It stops a cold quickly because it is expressly a cold remedy and because it does the four things necessary.

First, it opens the bowels, gently, but effectively, the first step in expelling a cold. Second, it combats the cold germs in the system and reduces the fever. Third, it relieves the headache and that grippy feeling. Fourth, it tones the system and helps fortify against further attack.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is utterly harmless and may be freely taken with perfect safety. It is, and has been for years, the leading cold and grippe tablet of the world.

Now—20% More for Your Money

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine now comes in two sizes—30c and 50c—and is sold by every drug store in America. It pays to buy the 50c size as it gives you 20% more for your money. Always ask for it by the full name and look for the letters L B Q stamped on every tablet. Look for an ulterior motive when a substitute is offered.

A Cold is an Internal Infection and Requires Internal Treatment

LAXATIVE
BROMO QUININE
For Colds
1 GRAIN EACH TABLET CONTAINS ACETANILIDE
LBQ
THE FIRST Laxative Cold Tablet
PRICE 30 CENTS
FOR COLDS & SIMPLE HEADACHES
Paris Medicine Co. St. Louis, Mo.
NRA
U.S.
WE DO OUR PART

GROVE'S LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE

in "Midnight Mary," M-G-M; "Bix Executive," "Torch Singer," "Tho House on 56th Street," Warner Bros. Working in "The Shakedown," Warner Bros.

CRABBE, BUSTER: Married to Virginia Held. Born in Oakland, Calif., February 7. Paramount player. Featured in "Tarzan the Fearless," Sol Lessor; "To the Last Man." Next is "Search for Beauty."

CRAWFORD, JOAN: Divorced from Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Born in San Antonio, Texas, March 23. M-G-M star. Starred in "Today We Live," "Hollywood Party." Working in "Dancing Lady." Next is "Always Tomorrow" and "Merry Widow."

CROMWELL, RICHARD: Unmarried. Born in Long Beach, Calif., January 8. Columbia player. Featured in "This Day and Age," Paramount; "Above the Clouds." Working in "Hoopla," Fox.

CROSBY, BING: Married to Dixie Lee. Born in Tacoma, Wash., May 2. Paramount player. Featured in "College Humor," "Just An Echo," "Too Much Harmony." Working in "Going Hollywood," M-G-M.

CUMMINGS, CONSTANCE: Married to Benn W. Levy. Born in Seattle, Wash., May 15. Twentieth Century player. Featured in "The Mind Reader," Warner Bros. Working in "Broadway Through a Keyhole," 20th Cent.

DANIELS, BEBE: Married to Ben Lyon. Born in Dallas, Texas, January 14. Warner Bros. star. Starred in "Forty-Second Street," "Cocktail Hour," Columbia. Next is "Counsellor at Law," Universal.

DAVIES, MARION: Unmarried. Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., January 1. M-G-M star. Starred in "Peg O' My Heart." Working in "Going Hollywood." Next is "Operator 13."

DAVIS, BETTE: Married to Harmon O. Nelson. Born in Boston, Mass., April 5. Warner Bros. star. Starred in "Ex-Lady," "The Working Man," "Bureau of Missing Persons." Working in "The Shakedown."

DEE, FRANCES: Unmarried. Born in New York City, November 26. RKO player. Featured in "One Man's Journey," "Little Women." Working in "Blood Money," 20th Cent. Next are "Rodney" and "Success Story."

DEL RIO, DOLORES: Married to Cedric Gibbons. Born in Mexico City, August 3. RKO star. Starred in "Bird of Paradise." Working in "Flying Down to Rio."

DEVINE, ANDY: Unmarried. Born in Flagstaff, Ariz., October 6. Universal player. Featured in "Disgraced," Paramount; "Doctor Bull," "A Chance at Heaven," Fox. Working in "Tin Pants."

DIETRICH, MARLENE: Married to Rudolph Seiber. Born in Berlin, Germany, December 27. Paramount star. Starred in "Song of Songs." Next is "Her Regiment of Lovers."

DIX, RICHARD: Separated from Winifred Coe. Born in St. Paul, Minn., July 18. RKO star. Starred in "The Great Jasper," "No Marriage Ties," "Bird of Prey." Next is "Forever Faithful," M-G-M.

DRESSLER, MARIE: Unmarried. Born in Colburg, Canada, November 9. M-G-M star. Starred in "Dinner at Eight," "Tugboat Annie," "Hollywood Party," "The Late Christopher Bean." Next is "Living in a Big Way."

DUNN, JAMES: Unmarried. Born in New York City, November 2. Fox player. Featured in "The Girl in 419," Paramount; "From Arizona to Broadway." Working in "Take a Chance," Paramount.

DUNNE, IRENE: Married to Dr. E. F. Griffin. Born in Louisville, Ky., July 14. RKO star. Starred in "The Silver Cord," "Ann Vickers." Working in "Behold We Live." Next is "My Gal Sal."

DURANTE, JIMMIE: Married. Born in New York City, February 18. M-G-M player. Featured in "Hell Below," "Show World," "A Hollywood Party," "What a Liar." Working in "Meet the Baron."

DVORAK, ANN: Married to Leslie Fenton. Born in Los Angeles, Calif., August 2. Warner Bros. player. Featured in "The Way to Love," Paramount. Working in "College Coach."

EILERS, SALLY: Married to Harry Joe Brown. Born in New York City, December 11. Fox player. Featured in "Made On Broadway," M-G-M. Working in "Walls of Gold."

ELLIS, PATRICIA: Unmarried. Born in New York City, May 20. Warner Bros. player. Featured in "Picture Snatcher," "Narrow Corner," "The World Changes." Next is "Broadway and Back."

ERWIN, STUART: Married to June Collyer. Born in Squaw Valley, Calif., February 14. M-G-M player. Featured in "Hold Your Man," "Stranger's Return," "What a Liar." Working in "Going Hollywood," M-G-M, and "Broadway Through a Keyhole," 20th Cent.

EVANS, MADGE: Unmarried. Born in Los Angeles, Calif., July 1. M-G-M player. Featured in "Dinner at Eight," "Show World," Beauty for Sale." Next is "Forever Faithful."

FAIRBANKS, DOUGLAS, JR: Divorced from Joan Crawford. Born in New York City, December 9. Free lance. Starred in "Narrow Corner," "Captured," Warner Bros.; "Morning Glory," RKO.

FAIRBANKS, DOUGLAS, SR: Separated from Mary Pickford. Born in Denver, Colo., May 23. United Artists star. Starred in "Robinson Crusoe."

FARRELL, CHARLES: Married to Virginia Valli. Born in Walpole, Mass., August 9. Write him at Warner Bros. Free lance. Featured in "Aggie Appleby, Maker of Men," RKO. Working in "The Shakedown," Warner Bros.

FARRELL, GLENDA: Divorced. Born in Enid, Oklahoma. Warner Bros player. Featured in "Lady For a Day," Columbia; "Bureau of Missing Persons," "Havana Widows," "A Man's Castle," Columbia. Working in "The Shakedown" and "Dark Hazard."

FORD, WALLACE: Married to Martha Halworth. Born in England. M-G-M player. Featured in "Goodbye Again," Warner Bros.; "Three Cornered Moon," Paramount; "My Woman," Columbia. Working in "The Lost Patrol," RKO and "East of 5th Avenue," Columbia.

FOSTER, NORMAN: Married to Claudette Colbert. Born in Richmond, Ind., December 13. Fox player. Featured in "Pilgrimage," "Professional Sweetheart," "Rafter Romance," RKO. Working in "Walls of Gold."

FOSTER, PRESTON: Married. Born in Ocean City, N. J., October 24. Write him at Fox. Free lance.

(Continued on page 113)

This Little Twin used Tooth Paste "D." Stains remain, lustre dull, inflammation only slightly improved.

But this Little Twin used Pebeco. . . . Got whiter teeth, brilliant lustre, firmer and harder gums.

Twins, Muriel and Charlotte Denenfeld, age 18, residing at 615 West 164th Street, New York

Twins test six leading Tooth Pastes

PEBECO PROVES BEST

"Why not test Pebeco against the five other leading tooth pastes on twins?" we said.

"Fine!" said Dr. David B. Freundlich, leading dental authority of New York. "Twins provide the most impartial possible testing ground for tooth paste merit. Same environment. Same heredity. Hence their tooth and mouth structure is apt to be alike."

So that's what he did. Tested Pebeco and the five other leading nationally advertised tooth pastes on twins—for thirty days. One twin in each pair used Pebeco twice daily. The other used tooth paste A, B, C, D or E, (well-known brands).

Read at the right what Pebeco did in comparison with the five other tooth pastes!

Pebeco was more than twice as effective because of its basic ingredient, Potassium Chlorate. This substance is an active agent in assisting nature to correct acid mouth, helping to check mouth acids which cause tooth decay. It stimulates the flow of saliva, nature's own process for keeping the teeth sound, gums and mouth vigorous and healthy.

You can prove it, too. Try Pebeco—10-cent or 50-cent size—in your own mouth. You will feel it working for the good of your mouth and gums. And just see what it does for your teeth! Buy a tube of Pebeco today!

On These Five Vital Points Pebeco Wins!

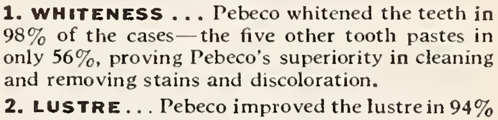
1. WHITENESS . . . Pebeco whitened the teeth in 98% of the cases—the five other tooth pastes in only 56%, proving Pebeco's superiority in cleaning and removing stains and discoloration.

2. LUSTRE . . . Pebeco improved the lustre in 94% of the cases—the others in only 40%. Pebeco, in no case, made the slightest scratch upon the enamel.

3. FILM . . . Pebeco removed mucin plaques (film) from teeth of 88% of the users—others from only 32%.

4. GUMS . . . Pebeco checked inflammation and bleeding, toned and hardened the gums of 97% of the users, other tooth pastes of only 57%.

5. ACID MOUTH . . . Pebeco alone—of all the well-known tooth pastes tested—actually assisted in stimulating the natural flow of helpful saliva which combats the acids that start decay. Other tooth pastes brought only slight or temporary improvement in acid mouth conditions.



Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau

Why Twins and What They Proved

I chose groups of twins because their mouth conditions are apt to be identical. One twin used Pebeco twice daily for 30 days. The other, tooth paste A, B, C, D or E—one of the five other leading brands. I examined each pair weekly. At the end of 30 days, I submitted my reports, and the statements in this advertisement are in accordance with the facts. For professional information on these tests, write me at 101 Central Park West, New York.

(Signed) DAVID B. FREUNDLICH, D.D.S.

© 1933, Lehn & Fink, Inc.

SISTERS?

its her Mother!

THEY'RE great friends, these two—doing everything, going everywhere together. People think they're sisters—for mother has wisely safeguarded her youth. She has never let gray hair set her apart from her daughter—make her a member of the "older generation."

Today there's no need to tolerate gray hair, that makes you old and faded before your time. Notox, the new scientific hair coloring protects you from dreaded Heartbreak Age. Notox is undetectable—totally different from those antiquated "hair dyes" that were rightly considered objectionable.

Instead of crusting the hair with a surface plate of dye, Notox gently penetrates the hair and colors it inside the shaft where nature colors hair. Your hair remains beautifully soft, fine and lustrous. Wash it, wave it, expose it to the sun all you like—Notoxed hair retains its natural, even shade as permanently as nature's own color!

Better hairdressers always apply Inecto Rapid Notox. Resent a substitute—a like product does not exist. Buy it at smart shops everywhere.

● ● Send for free copy of the Inecto Rapid Notox Beauty Analysis. We will give you, too, the address of a conveniently located beauty shop where you may have your hair recolored with Notox. Write Dept. 86, Sales Affiliates, Inc., 33 W. 46th St., New York.

Inecto Rapid

NOTOX

Colors hair inside where nature does

DIRECTORY of PICTURES

● RECOMMENDED. ● ● SPECIALLY RECOMMENDED.

● ANOTHER LANGUAGE (M-G-M)—How a domineering mother can almost wreck a marriage, a husband and a wife. The late Louise Closser Hale is the mother. Robert Montgomery is somewhat miscast as the husband. Helen Hayes is superb as the wife. See it—youngsters under 16 won't care for it

● BEAUTY FOR SALE (M-G-M)—Faith Baldwin's novel transferred to the screen. The action centers around a beauty parlor. Madge Evans, Alice Brady and Otto Kruger are the principals. They are good and so is the large supporting cast. Good—not much in it for young children.

● BED OF ROSES (RKO)—Connie Bennett stops being grand and plays a tough little alley-cat. And she's superb! However, Perk Kelton almost steals the show from her at that. Don't miss it—but send the tots to a Western.

● ● BERKELEY SQUARE (Fox)—A highly imaginative kind of love story. Leslie Howard. who gives a beautifully sensitive performance, finds himself transferred to the 18th century. He falls in love with an 18th century lady—Heather Angel. Excellent and different—but children under sixteen wouldn't understand it.

● THE BEST OF ENEMIES (Fox)—Hilarious beer comedy. Frank Morgan, Joe Cawthorne. Buddy Rogers. Marian Nixon and Greta Nissen. Take the kids along.

BITTER SWEET (United Artists)—Weak romance. All about a wealthy and beautiful English girl who elopes with her music teacher. Not a rave—and of no interest for children.

THE BUREAU OF MISSING PERSONS (Warners)—An unusual police story, dealing with one of the law's departments about which little is known. Bette Davis, Pat O'Brien, Lewis Stone and Glenda Farrell are in it. Interesting and frequently exciting—a bit too advanced for very young children.

● ● CAPTURED (Warners)—Leslie Howard, Doug Fairbanks, Jr., Paul Lukas and Margaret Lindsay in a gripping war story. Most of the action centers around life in a German prison camp. Good—too heavy for young children.

THE CIRCUS QUEEN MURDER (Columbia)—Murder mystery under the big top. All right of its kind—not for children under 16.

● THE COHENS AND THE KELLYS IN TROUBLE (Universal)—Another of the familiar series of Charlie Murray and George Sidney. Okay if you like Murray and Sidney—the kids will enjoy it.

● COLLEGE HUMOR (Paramount)—Lots of laughs taking place on a college campus. Bing Crosby furnishes the crooning. Dick Arlen, Jack Oakie and Mary Carlisle are in it too. Good—children will like it, too.

THE DEVIL'S IN LOVE (Fox)—Love triangle in the Foreign Legion. Victor Jory, David Manners and Loretta Young. Rather slow and the story is a little too familiar, though the principals are good. Only fair—nothing in it for children.

● ● DINNER AT EIGHT (M-G-M)—A fashionable hostess plans a dinner party. And we see what happens to her guests, before the party and during it. Many stories woven into one—and superbly presented by a cast which has been enumerated so many times that you must know it by heart. Well, there are John and Lionel Barrymore, Marie Dressler, Billie Burke, Jean Harlow, Wallace Beery, Madge Evans and at least six other famous names that we can think of off hand. Excellent—but too advanced for young children.

DON'T BET ON LOVE (Universal)—Horse-racing and romance. Lew Ayres and Ginger Rogers. Only fair—and dull for youngsters.

● ● DOUBLE HARNESS (RKO)—Ann Harding—a very nice, well brought up girl—decides that marriage is a woman's business and so why shouldn't a woman be as unsentimental about it as men are about their businesses? The only trouble is that she makes the mistake of falling in love with her "business associate," William Powell. Sophisticated, adult entertainment—not for young children.

DOCTOR BULL (Fox)—Will Rogers as an old-fashioned and much criticized doctor in a gossipy Connecticut gown. His outspoken manner and disregard of mean little conventions get him into trouble—but he wins out in the end. A bit slow—children may enjoy parts of it.

● ● THE EAGLE AND THE HAWK (Paramount)—Fredric March, Cary Grant, Jack Oakie and Carole Lombard in a story of the brutality of war. An excellent picture—not for very young folks.

● ELMER THE GREAT (Warners)—Joe E. Brown at his best in a baseball yarn. Good—splendid for kids of all ages.

● EMERGENCY CALL (RKO)—An exposé of hospitals. Bill Gargan, Bill Boyd, Myrna Kennedy and Betty Furness. Worth seeing—youngsters under 16 better go another day.

F. P. 1 (Fox-Gaumont)—Unusual. A floating platform, built in mid-ocean, is used as an airport. A mysterious menace hovers over the airport. An exciting and different picture. Leslie Fenton, Conrad Veidt and Jill Esmond. You will probably enjoy it—not for young children.

THE FIDDLIN' BUCKAROO (Maynard-Universal)—Excitement and packs of trouble when a government agent joins up with a pack of thieves for certain reasons. Ken Maynard, Gloria Shea—and don't forget Tarzan, Ken's horse. A good Western—fine for kids.

● ● FOOTLIGHT PARADE (Warners)—A still bigger and better musical. This has a better story than even "42nd Street" or "Gold Diggers." Keeler and Powell, Blondell and Cagney. And some stupendous dance numbers. Excellent—take the whole family.

FROM ARIZONA TO BROADWAY (Fox)—Joan Bennett and Jimmie Dunn in a poor crook story. Children won't care for it, either.

● FROM HELL TO HEAVEN (Paramount)—Race track yarn wih Carole Lombard, Jack Oakie. David Manners and Adrienne Ames. Entertainment that everyone will enjoy.

● ● GOLD DIGGERS OF 1933 (Warners)—Swell music, swell dancing, swell cast. Keeler and Powell, Blondell and Warren William, Aline MacMahon and Guy Kibbee. Excellent—for everybody.

● GOODBYE AGAIN (Warners)—The amusing stage play about the author, his secretary and the author's former—and now forgotten—sweetheart who is convinced that she is real "inspiration." Very good—not very suitable for children.

HEADLINE SHOOTER (RKO)—Earthquakes, fires, floods—and love. All in the life of a newsreel man. Bill Gargan, Frances Dee and Ralph Bellamy. Good of its kind. Children will like it.

● HER BODYGUARD (Paramount)—A snappy little entertainer about a sugar daddy employing a bodyguard (Eddie Lowe) to keep his gal (Wynne Gibson) friend out of mischief. Peppy and funny—take the kids.

● HER FIRST MATE (Universal)—His dream of seas and ships becomes a regular nightmare when his wife sinks the family bank account in an old ferry. ZaSu Pitts and Slim Summerville. A laugh from start to finish for everybody.

HEROES FOR SALE (Warners)—A post war depression story about a war veteran. Dick Barthelmess' acting and Aline MacMahon are all that recommend this picture—not for children.

● HOLD YOUR MAN (M-G-M)—Jean Harlow and Clark Gable loving and fighting their way through a story that suits them to a T. Good—not for movie-goers under 16.

● I LOVE THAT MAN (Paramount)—Story of a swell gal who falls for a breezy racketeer. He never does go straight but she loves him just the same. Nancy Carroll and Eddie Lowe. Good—not for youngsters under 16.

● I LOVED A WOMAN (Warners)—Drama of an idealistic business man who becomes a ruthless business baron through the influence of his opera singing mistress. The dynamic Edward G. Robinson, Kay Francis as the mistress, and Genevieve Tobin as his mean-spirited wife are all good. Excellent—not for children under 16.

● ● I LOVED YOU WEDNESDAY (Fox)—Elissa Landi, Victor Jory, Miriam Jordan and Warner Baxter in a very smart and sophisticated little drama. Very, very good but not for young folks under 16.

● THE KING OF THE ARENA (Maynard-Universal)—Ken Maynard as a cowboy sleuth. A good western—send the youngsters.

● ● LADY FOR A DAY (Columbia)—What a jam Apple Annie (May Robson) gets herself into by deluding her daughter, far away in Spain, about their social standing. And when that daughter decides to come home, things happen. Jean Parker, Warren William, Glenda Farrell, Ned Sparks and Guy Kibbee are also in it. One swell picture—take the kids.

● MAMA LOVES PAPA (Paramount)—Mary Boland and Charles Ruggles in a comedy that is very funny—and somehow very touching, too. Good—older children will like it.

● MAN OF THE FOREST (Paramount)—Randolph Scott, Verna Hillie, Buster Crabbe, Noah Beery, Harry Carey, Vince Barnett and a family of mountain lions in an amusing fight over water rights. Good Western for tots and grownups.

● THE MAN WHO DARED (Fox)—A biographical picture based on the life of Anton Cermak, late mayor of Chicago. Deals with the earnest striving of his immigrant parents, the rise of the son and his assassination. Preston Foster is the son, Zita Johann his wife. A very good picture if you are interested—not for children under 14.

MARY STEVENS, M.D. (Warners)—Another love triangle, this time dealing with two struggling young doctors, Kay Francis and Lyle Talbot. Near tragedy that finally ends in true love. Fair—nothing in it for any of the youngsters.

● THE MASQUERADER (United Artists)—Exciting political and love romance. Ronald Colman takes his dope-addict cousin's place in politics—and love. Entertaining—not for children under 16.

● THE MAYOR OF HELL (Warners)—Yarn of a reform school that got reformed. James Cagney and Frankie Darro. Good—kids will like the excitement.

MIDNIGHT MARY (M-G-M)—Loretta Young, Ricardo Cortez and Francbot Tone in a not quite believable gangster story. Fair—not the type of picture for the young folks.

THE MIDNIGHT CLUB (Paramount)—A crook comedy, all about some London jewel thieves. Clive Brook, Helen Vinson. Alan Mowbray, Alison Skipworth and George Raft. Fairly amusing—not for children under 16.

● ● MORNING GLORY (RKO)—A grand little drama of backstage and private life of an odd little country girl. Katharine Hepburn does some vital and remarkable acting. Adolphe Menjou, Doug Fairbanks, Jr., and Mary Duncan complete the cast. Go see this one—no interest for children under 16.

● ● NO MARRIAGE TIES (RKO)—All about the advertising racket, with Richard Dix as the cagey ad man with plenty of gags and catchy smart lines. The gals are Elizabeth Allan and Doris Kenyon. Very good—not for young folks under 16.

● ● ONE SUNDAY AFTERNOON (Paramount)—Gary Cooper and Neil Hamilton love Fay Wray. Neil gets her—and Gary takes Frances Fuller as second choice. But his defeat rankles, for years and years. One Sunday afternoon, he has the chance to murder Neil—no one would ever suspect. He doesn't do it. Why? A splendid drama—not for young children.

● ONE MAN'S JOURNEY (RKO)—Lionel Barrymore in an excellent characterization of a doctor who sacrifices a brilliant surgical career to be a plain country doctor. But his skill surpasses even the specialists' in a crisis involving the life of Dorothy Jordan. Joel McCrea is his son. May Robson the faithful housekeeper. Very good drama—young children will be bored, though.

● PADDY THE NEXT BEST THING (Fox)—Janet Gaynor as a romping young hoyden who saves her sister from the marriage her spendthrift old dad is arranging. Janet marries the wealthy man (Warner Baxter) herself. Margaret Lindsay and Walter Connolly complete the cast. Good entertainment—take the young folks.

● PILGRIMAGE (Fox)—All about a mother's remorse for separating her son from the girl he loves. Norman Foster, Marion Nixon and Henrietta Crosman. A very weepy woman's picture.

● ● THE POWER AND THE GLORY (Fox)—Story of hatred, cruelty and greed in the career of a railroad man. Unusual picture, beginning with the man's suicide and then telling the story of his life in flashbacks. Spencer Tracy with Colleen Moore opposite. Excellent—no interest for tots.

PRIVATE DETECTIVE (Warners)—Yarn of crooks, detectives and love. William Powel does some excellent acting in an only fair picture. Children will be bored.

● PROFESSIONAL SWEETHEART (RKO)—Comedy of a bad little gal who has to be good. And then really wants to be good when the country hick swain comes along. An entertainer—youngsters will think so, too.

● RAFTER ROMANCE (RKO)—An obliging landlord rents the same room to a chap who works at night and a gal who works all day. George Sidney is the landlord and Norman Foster and Marian Nixon are the renters. The whole family will go for this one.

● ● REUNION IN VIENNA (M-G-M) — John Barrymore and Diana Wynward in a smart and sophisticated comedy of exiled royalty and love. Superb—but send the youngsters to a Western.

ROME EXPRESS (Universal)—Conrad Veidt and Esther Ralston in a melodrama of love while traveling. Kids will go for it.

SECRET OF THE BLUE ROOM (Universal)—Yarn about a mysterious murder room in an old castle. Lionel Atwill, Paul Lukas and Gloria Stuart. You'll never guess the guilty person in this mystery drama—exciting for all but very young youngsters.

● ● SECRETS (United Artists)—Mary Pickford and Leslie Howard in a love story of old frontier days. Splendid—okay for young folks.

SHANGHAI MADNESS (Fox)—When they don't obey orders in the United States Army they get kicked out. Spencer Tracy got kicked out. He landed in China, war and love. You might like it—children over 14 will enjoy the excitement.

● ● SHE DONE HIM WRONG (Paramount)—It's Mae West in a Mae West role of those warm old days in the nineties. Everything you expect—send the kids to some other comedy, though.

● ● THE SILVER CORD (RKO) — Emotional drama of a selfish, dominating mother, her two sons and the courageous young wife of one of them. Irene Dunne and Laura Hope Crewes are splendid. Superb acting—children under 16 will not like it.

● SONG OF SONGS (Paramount)—Marlene Dietrich with Brian Aherne in a very emotional love drama. Good—not for youngsters under 18, though.

THE SONG OF THE EAGLE (Paramount)—A so-so beer story. Dick Arlen and the cast are all that recommend this picture—the kids will be bored.

THE SPHINX (Monogram)—Lionel Atwill as a phoney deaf and dumb philanthropist who spends his spare time murdering. A good enough mystery—children under 16 won't be interested.

● STORM AT DAYBREAK (M-G-M)—A vigorous drama and love triangle with the World War as background. Walter Huston, Kay Francis and Nils Asther. Very good—young folks under 16 will not like it.

● SUNSET PASS (Paramount)—A Western with plenty of action and excitement. Good—kids always go for these.

● ● THIS DAY AND AGE (Paramount)—A moving drama of high school kids and their interpretation of the courts and the laws. Charles Bickford, Richard Cromwell and Judith Allen are included in a splendid cast. Excellent—for young and old.

● ● THREE CORNERED MOON (Paramount)—When a scatter-brained mama loses the family fortune there is plenty of life and excitement for the whole raft of spoiled offspring. Claudette Colbert and Richard Arlen are the love interest. Tom Brown, William Bakewell, and Wallace Ford are the sonnies. Uproarious—for the whole family.

● TOO MUCH HARMONY (Paramount)—A peppy, zippy, wisecracking pix with plenty of tunes. Bing Crosby, Jack Oakie, Skeets Gallagher, Judith Allen, Lil Tashman and Ned Sparks. Good—kids will enjoy it.

● ● TURN BACK THE CLOCK (M-G-M)—An absorbing story of a man who wishes he had his life to live over. His desire is suddenly granted. But he finds it is far from what he had planned and expected. Lee Tracy does some excellent acting. Peggy Shannon, Otto Krueger and Mae Clarke support him. Very good—pretty dull for children under 16.

● ● VOLTAIRE (Warners)—George Arliss in a splendid characterization of that 18th century cynic and wit. Reginald Owen, Allan Mowbray, Doris Kenyon and Margaret Lindsay are also in it. Excellent—take the young folks.

● ● WHEN LADIES MEET (M-G-M)—Ann Harding, Myrna Loy and Robert Montgomery—with Frank Morgan and Alice Brady—in one of the most intelligently sophisticated triangle dramas you have ever seen. Very, very good—children under 16 wouldn't understand it.

● WHEN STRANGERS MARRY (Columbia)—Jack Holt in a story of Paris night life and African jungle life. Good—not for young children.

Mother, never give children a grown-up's laxative

THE welfare of your children is your first thought at waking. It is your last thought at night.

And yet, you may be doing them harm by giving them laxatives intended for adult use . . . laxatives often too strong for children.

Constipation affects 90% of all children

No child is immune from constipation, for one of the causes of constipation, mother, is beyond your control—the tendency to neglect nature's urgings for extra minutes of play.

The tell-tale symptoms

When your child is sallow, finicky—probably his elimination is not thorough. Give him a safe laxative—Fletcher's Castoria.

Chas. H. Fletcher's Castoria is a simple vegetable preparation made especially for children . . . Contains no harmful drugs—NO NARCOTICS. It is gentle. It does not gripe. Children love the taste of it! Purchase a bottle at your druggist's. And be sure that the signature Chas. H. Fletcher is on the carton.

Hear ALBERT SPALDING — eminent violinist, Don Voorhees and his Orchestra, Conrad Thibault, baritone, supported by a mixed octet.

Fletcher's Castoria presents these radio artists every Wednesday evening. Columbia network — 8:30 to 9:00 P. M. Eastern Standard Time.

Chas. H. Fletcher
CASTORIA
for constipation in children

from babyhood to 11 years

It's Your Lead — and Everybody's Watching

All men are susceptible to smooth white hands with an alluring feminine texture. Your hands may be short or long, thin or broad, even masculine in shape—as long as they have a clear white complexion, comparable to that of your face.

Pacquin's Hand Cream has been specially prepared to do right by your hands. More than an ordinary vanishing cream, Pacquin's contains the beneficial properties which prevent dryness and chapping. It was originally created for doctors and nurses, to counteract the effect of so much soap and water. Today, smart women everywhere use it.

Pacquin's is not an oily cream. It leaves no sticky, greasy residue on your hands. The skin absorbs it quickly and completely.

don't try to hide your hands—use

Pacquin's

Pacquin's
HAND CREAM

In convenient sized jars, priced 10¢ to $1.00. Also Pacquin's Cold Cream, Vanishing Cream, Lemon Cream, and Cleansing Cream.

Pacquin Laboratories Corporation, New York

Jean Harlow Answers Your Questions

(Continued from page 29)

only one ulterior motive. Eloping was the one sure way of dodging interference with our plans. I don't mean paternal interference, either. My mother and step-father knew of our plans and helped us carry them through. But I mean the outside interference of friends and business associates telling us that we should be married here or there on a Tuesday or a Wednesday or a Friday.

"And there would have always been those who would have advised us that it would be detrimental to our careers to marry at all. It boils down to this; we eloped to save ourselves the pressure of other people's advice! Of course we knew there would be plenty said after the marriage, but what difference could it possibly make then? No, far from being a publicity move, it was for privacy. Even the publicity department of our studio did not know we were in Yuma until four hours after the marriage.

THE minute the news was out, the fireworks started. We arrived by plane from Yuma at nine in the morning and at eleven, twenty-two newspaper writers were here. I was not long in sensing that one of the questions they would very much have liked to ask was: 'Why has she twice married a man so much older than herself?' Paul, you know, was twenty-one years older than I. Hal is sixteen years my senior.

"My only answer to that is, with me, age is merely a state of mental attitude. There is nothing I admire in a man as much as a seasoned, experienced, outlook on life. A man who is sympathetic and kind and understanding is the only type of man I could love. These qualities are not often to be found in younger men, because they are acquired only through the process of living Life! I have always wanted to find in marriage, security and safety and peace of mind as well as love. Hal can give me all these things to a greater extent than any younger man could, unless he was one of those rare exceptions. And I did not meet an 'exception' I could love."

I said, "Jean, a great many people think there is a strong physical resemblance between Hal Rosson and Paul Bern. Many of the newspaper stories commented on the similarity."

"Really?" said Jean. "I do not see this marked resemblance at all. Perhaps it is because I see and know people more clearly as personalities than as faces and hands and expressions and clothes.

"One of the most amusing of the things I have heard is that I married Hal out of gratitude because he is a wonderful cameraman who makes me look my best on the screen. We roared when we heard of it. This should be too silly for even Hollywood to believe. If I had had merely gratitude in my heart, it would have been very difficult to choose between Hal, two or three of the directors who have made my 'best' pictures, a group of writers who have done excellent scripts and any number of leading men who have certainly aided my career by giving such swell support in the love scenes. But, believe it or not, a magazine writer actually phoned the other day to ask if I would give a story titled: I Always Marry for Gratitude! Believe me when I saw that this is the only gossip angle I have heard that really angered me."

Jean ran a hand impatiently through a platinum wave—as I gathered courage to repeat a question asked me via mail by a little fan in Chicago. For sometime this young lady has been corresponding with me on the subject of Jean Harlow. Three days after Jean's marriage she wrote me special delivery:

"Can you imagine it? I had always thought that if Jean married again the lucky man would probably be a millionaire, some dashing young blade just out of Princeton with family tree a mile long and so much money he wouldn't know what to do with it—except spend it on the one and only Harlow! Does Hal Rosson make a lot of money? I never thought that cameramen were rich."

When I repeated the gist of this communication to Jean, she merely laughed again and said:

"Yes, I've heard all that, too, and from sources nearer than Chicago. That picture about the rich young collegian is grand and romantic and I'm sure it would be very nice for anyone except me. Such a marriage would bore me to death. As for Hal's financial standing; well, all I can say is that if the day should come when everybody grew very tired of 'the platinum blonde' and decided not to go to see any more of her movies, I'm very sure I wouldn't miss any of the bread and butter or even the latest Paris models as Mrs. Hal Rosson."

NATURALLY, Jean did not go into the tactless subject of her husband's salary. But it is common knowledge that, as one of M-G-M's ace cameramen, Hal Rosson draws a weekly stipend of so close to one thousand dollars that the difference wouldn't matter one way or the other. And this may surprise you; before Jean got her new contract with an increase in salary, Hal Rosson made more money every seven days than the star he photographed. And now let us hear no more about such matters from "Little Chicago," or elsewhere.

"The latest question that seems to be intriguing Hollywood," continued the girl who knows her fame as few stars do, "is the important subject of where we are going to live. They appear to be wondering if I am going to cast my mother and Bello out in the cold, cold world and remain in this house we have just completed. Or, if I am moving out to Hal's lovely home in Brentwood. Or, if we are going to all live together, or what!

"That's one I can't answer now, as our plans are very indefinite. But until we do make up our minds, we are temporarily installed in an apartment, and I love it. I think it will eventually simmer itself down to this: We will have three homes and live where we please when we please.

"I wonder," she mused wistfully, "if anyone has sought the answer to our elopement in the simple little idea that I love Hal and that I want the security and happiness of a normal married life? To me, this is more important than anything else Hollywood can give. I truly and deeply love the man I have married—there aren't any other reasons."

Forecasting Your Favorites

(Continued from page 61)

guiding genius of M-G-M studios.

For, as a matter of fact, even though David Selznick is a newcomer to authority at M-G-M, he is a pioneer in the making of motion pictures. Thirty-one years of age, he represents, along with Junior Laemmle, the second generation of production chiefs in the movies. At the time of David Selznick's birth, his father, the late Lewis J. Selznick, had already established his "Quality Mark" on the then-flickering films.

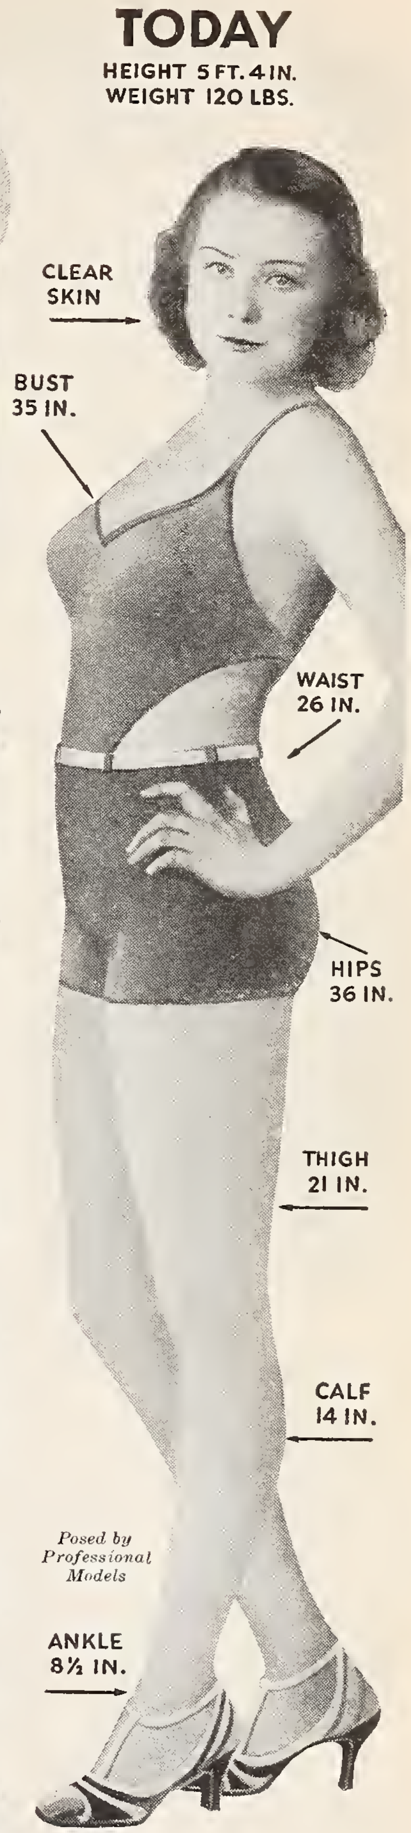
While still attending classes at Columbia University, David Selznick turned his attention to his father's productions and stepped almost immediately into the advertising and publicity departments of Selznick and Select Pictures. To still further acquaint himself with the complete workings of the industry, he later stepped into the position of theater manager, just to get "the other fellow's reaction." Returning to the production end, he served as scenario editor, cutter and was finally appointed as assistant to his brother, Myron Selznick, in the production of such pictures as "The Common Law" and "Rupert of Hentzau."

FROM this point, Selznick's career continued in Front Office Authority. As assistant to B. P. Schulberg at Paramount, he supervised such successes as "Street of Chance" and "Fast Company." Later, he resigned this post to become the executive vice-president in charge of production at RKO-Pathé. Here, he merged these two producing companies into one huge studio and produced such hits as "The Lost Squadron," "A Bill of Divorcement" and "Animal Kingdom."

These last two pictures were sensationally successful, and particularly gratifying to Selznick, who had tried for years to get other producing companies to film these plays. He always met with the same answer: "Too highbrow. We have to play down to our audience."

"That theory has always irritated me tremendously," said Mr. Selznick, who

6 WEEKS AGO
Y-E-A SKINNY



TODAY
HEIGHT 5 FT. 4 IN.
WEIGHT 120 LBS.
CLEAR SKIN
BUST 35 IN.
WAIST 26 IN.
HIPS 36 IN.
THIGH 21 IN.
CALF 14 IN.
Posed by Professional Models
ANKLE 8½ IN.

Skinny? New easy way adds pounds —so fast you're amazed!

Astonishing gains with new double tonic. Richest imported brewers' ale yeast now concentrated 7 times and combined with iron. Gives 5 to 15 lbs. in a few weeks.

NOW there's no need to have people calling you "skinny", and losing all your chances of making and keeping friends. Here's a new easy treatment that is giving thousands solid flesh and attractive curves—in just a few weeks.

As you know, doctors for years have prescribed yeast to build up health. But now with this new discovery you can get far greater tonic results than with ordinary yeast—regain health, and in addition put on pounds of healthy flesh—and in a far shorter time.

Not only are thousands quickly gaining beauty-bringing pounds, but also clear, radiant skin, freedom from constipation and indigestion, new pep.

Concentrated 7 times

This amazing new product, Ironized Yeast, is made from specially cultured brewers' ale yeast imported from Europe—the richest and most potent yeast known—which by a new process is concentrated 7 times—made 7 times more powerful.

But that is not all! This super-rich yeast is then scientifically ironized with 3 special kinds of iron which strengthen the blood, add abounding pep.

Day after day, as you take Ironized Yeast, watch flat chest develop, skinny limbs round out attractively. Constipation and indigestion disappear, skin clears to new beauty—you're a new person.

NRA MEMBER U.S. WE DO OUR PART

Results guaranteed

No matter how skinny and weak you may be, or how long you have been that way, this marvelous new Ironized Yeast should build you up in a few short weeks as it has thousands. It is sold under an absolute money-back guarantee. If you are not delighted with the results of the very first package, your money instantly and gladly refunded.

Only be sure you get genuine Ironized Yeast, not some imitation that cannot give the same results. Insist on the genuine with "IY" stamped on each tablet.

Special FREE offer!

To start you building up your health right away, we make this absolutely FREE offer. Purchase a package of Ironized Yeast at once, cut out the seal on the box and mail it to us with a clipping of this paragraph. We will send you free of charge a fascinating new book on health, "New Facts About Your Body," by a well-known authority. Remember, results are guaranteed with the very first package—or your money refunded. Sold by all good druggists. Ironized Yeast Co., Dept. 312, Atlanta, Ga.

REDUCE
WAIST and HIPS
3 INCHES IN 10 DAYS OR
IT WON'T COST YOU ONE PENNY!

"TEST the PERFOLASTIC GIRDLE . . . at our expense!

"I REDUCED MY HIPS 9 INCHES," writes Miss Jean Healy . . . "I reduced from 43 inches to 34½ inches" . . . writes Miss Brian.

- So many of our customers are delighted with the wonderful results obtained with this Perforated Rubber Reducing Girdle that we want you to try it for 10 days at our expense!

Massage-Like Action Reduces Quickly!

- The Girdle may be worn next to the body with perfect safety for it is ventilated to allow the skin to breathe. It works constantly while you walk, work, or sit . . . its massage-like action gently but persistently eliminating fat with every move you make.

Don't Wait Any Longer . . . Act Today

- You can prove to yourself quickly and definitely in 10 days whether or not this very efficient girdle will reduce your waist and hips THREE INCHES! You do not need to risk one penny . . . try it for 10 days . . . at no cost!

SEND FOR TEN DAY FREE-TRIAL OFFER!

PERFOLASTIC, Inc.
Dept. 5312 41 EAST 42nd ST., New York, N.Y.

Please send me FREE BOOKLET describing and illustrating the new Perfolastic Reducing Girdle, also sample of perforated Rubber and particulars of your 10-DAY FREE TRIAL OFFER.

Name________________________

Address______________________

City____________State__________

Use Coupon or Send Name and Address on Penny Post Card

is a dark, unexcitable gentleman who carries that air of doing things quickly and well. "The day has long since passed when the motion pictures have to play down to any audience. In fact, the average audience now attending the picture theatre is anxious for something better. This was brought home to me in even more glowing form than I had ever dared hope for in the success of 'Bill of Divorcement,' which is a play that I've tried to have produced for ten years without success. To prove that it is what the audiences really want, Katharine Hepburn was made a star by the 'Bill of Divorcement'—her first picture. I call this proof because stars are not made through pictures that fail to have wide audience appeal."

You will notice that the list of successful motion pictures with which Mr. Selznick has been identified includes a majority of stage plays, even high-brow plays. He thoroughly believes that the story is the thing, whether it be in the form of a play, a novel or an original for pictures. To see how closely the studio agrees with his judgment, you have but to look at the contract list of M-G-M which includes twenty contracted stars, forty directors and seventy-five writers. In other words, it considers the story so important that it has hired almost four times as many writers as it has stars.

But a great number of people have been of the opinion that M-G-M, in particular, clung to the belief that the star is the important factor. I asked Mr. Selznick how it was possible to reconcile these two production theories.

BY getting, first, a good vehicle," he replied promptly, "and then casting that story, from the largest to the smallest role, with fine actors—stars if necessary."

"The main reason for our being able to finish 'Dinner At Eight' two weeks before schedule is that every role in the picture was filled by an excellent actor. There were no long delays, no tedious rehearsals by way of getting an inexperienced player up in his lines. When John or Lionel Barrymore stepped before the camera with Billie Burke or Lee Tracy; when Marie Dressler and Jean Harlow were sharing a scene, it went along with clock-like precision because these fine actors know their business as well as their art.

"As for stars not being able to work successfully together, that is sheer gossip. John Barrymore once explained it when he said: 'Doing a scene with an inexperienced player is far more difficult than doing the same scene with a potential scene stealer.' In other words, John Barrymore's scenes with Lee Tracy are much greater scenes for John Barrymore than they would be if he were forced to play opposite a novice.

"But 'Night Flight' is an even greater experiment with an all star cast because the acting roles, while intense and dramatic, are forced to take second place to the thrilling drama of airships in South America. Robert Montgomery, for instance, has approximately two or three scenes before the camera. Clark Gable is never seen except in the cockpit of his plane. Myrna Loy appears in but one sequence. Yet, I claim that 'Night Flight' would never have been the screen entertainment that it is had it been played by lesser actors.

"By this I do not mean that big names will hereafter be played in all star casts merely because those big names will have drawing power at the box-office. That is not the idea at all. For instance, it would have been possible to have cast Clark Gable as the Doctor in 'Dinner at Eight.' His personality would have fit the role perfectly. But on second thought we decided that the role would do nothing particularly effective for Clark. He had nothing to gain by playing it. So, in spite of the fact that we might have gained by his name, we re-cast his part.

"On the other hand, Robert Montgomery has very little footage in 'Night Flight," and yet I think the audience will carry a very definite impression of Montgomery away with them. Thus, if there be such a thing as a 'definite policy' with regard to our all star casts, it might be worded: 'Star personalities in roles which only they can play.'"

AS for our further policies, I doubt if the fans will find any deviation from our set rules, with the possible exception of Joan Crawford. We have in mind the re-establishing of Joan in the type of parts that she made famous (and that, in turn, made her famous). I mean in pictures such as 'Our Modern Maidens' and 'Our Dancing Daughters.' In her present picture, 'Dancing Lady,' Joan will return to her fans of old. We hope that they will be glad to have her back.

"We may make a change in the type of roles handled by Jean Harlow, at least temporarily, in that she will play a less sensational and unsympathetic part in her next picture. We have also concluded that Jean will always have a maximum of comedy in each of her pictures, such as she had in 'Red Dust,' a type of comedy that does not distract from the drama in the least.

"But as far as such stars as Lee Tracy, Marie Dressler, Wallace Beery, Helen Hayes, the Barrymores and Clark Gable, we are sure that if we should attempt to change their own characterizations we should soon be deluged with a flood of protests from their fans. Of course, it is almost needless to say that Garbo will continue to give her public that same incomparable woman-of-mystery that has endeared her to millions.

"I am not at all sure that we shall be able to supply the great demand for pictures starring Marie Dressler, since her health only allows her to work four hours a day, but we shall try to make her pictures, while fewer in number, of greater quality, if such a thing is possible. Marie will be teamed with Jean Harlow in 'Living in a Big Way' for her next, and I am sure this new 'team' will be a great success and provide a lot of entertainment to the audiences throughout the country.

"At the present moment, two rather important things are holding the fore here at M-G-M. One, the teaming of Greta Garbo with John Gilbert. This was the combined results of Miss Garbo's insistence and the demand by theatre-owners of the country. I think it will make for a greater success than these two artists ever enjoyed in the past. Two, Clark Gable's illness continues to hold up production on 'Dancing Lady.' We are bound to have Clark in this picture, however, and have decided to await his recuperation before going ahead with this picture in which he will co-star with Joan Crawford. We are quite sure that, as far as M-G-M is concerned, this year (1933-34) is going to bring you even greater pictures than ever before."

Be Chic—and Save!

(Continued from page 71)

she had grown to love the animal. It had done so much for her looks and her presence. The back was a bit fuzzy where it had been sat upon too often and long. The cuffs and front edges were mangey looking, but on the whole she had to admit the fur was in good shape. It was nothing to be handed thoughtlessly to the rummage sale, especially when no further savings were forthcoming for a new one. Well, this clever one carried her possession to a little furrier who cut off the coat to an ample hip length—just enough to lose the crushed place in the rear. He bound the worn edges with an inch wide binding of gray leather, added a gray leather belt, and here was, to all intents and purposes, a new coat with another three years of life ahead of it. Divide the original expenditure of one hundred dollars—plus twenty-five for alteration—by six and was this an economical young lady or was she not?

That is the way to wangle and plan when fur is the subject of the day. And in no other way can you beat the game.

Don't do as another young person did—spend sixty-seven fifty on a poor imitation sealskin, which petered out pathetically after one year's wear. The coat looked all right, shiny and slick, hanging on the rack when she bought it, but the fact of the matter was that the skins, thin and irregular enough to begin, had been stretched beyond their slender capacity and could not stand the gaff of even one hard winter's wear. That's why I say, "Go to an honorable dealer, when you are buying furs."

If you have from one hundred to a hundred and fifty dollars to spend on a coat, select it from these furs: natural muskrat, Hudson seal, which is dyed muskrat, pony skin or natural colored kidskin. The latter fur, when dyed, fades easily and becomes battered looking.

If you can spend as much as two hundred or two hundred and fifty, go in for caracul, or buy a better quality of Hudson seal. You can find some leopard skin coats for this price, or a

The Smartest Women Use
FAOEN BEAUTY AIDS

FAOEN
FAOEN Powder
No. 3 FAOEN
FAOEN

— yet they cost
ONLY 10¢

A wave of common-sense buying is sweeping the country! In beauty-aids, for example, thousands and thousands of America's smartest women are turning to Faoen. They have learned this startling fact, revealed by the scientific report of a famous Research Laboratory:—"every Faoen Beauty Aid tested, is as pure and fine as products of like nature sold for $1 or more." Yet Faoen Lip Stick, Rouge or Face Powder do not cost $1 or more—they cost but 10¢ each. That is why it's sensible . . . it's smart . . . to use Faoen!

FAOEN PERFUMES, No. 3, 12 and 19, are captivating odeurs that have the long-lasting quality of expensive imported perfumes

● CLEANSING CREAM • COLD CREAM
FACE POWDER • ROUGES • PERFUMES

PARK & TILFORD'S
FAOEN
(FAY-ON)
Beauty Aids

10¢ each at
the better 5 & 10¢ Stores

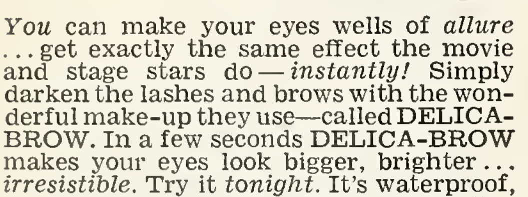
HOW JOAN got her "MOVIE EYES"

MARY, THE BOYS SAY YOUR EYES ARE IRRESISTIBLE—HOW DO YOU DO IT?
—IT'S A TRICK STUDIO MAKE UP EXPERTS USE—CALLED DELICA-BROW I'LL FIX YOURS NOW...

JOAN THAT EVENING
HOW MYSTERIOUSLY BIG AND STARRY YOUR EYES ARE TONIGHT—THEY PUT A SPELL ON ME!
THOUGHT
YES—SPELLED D-E-L-I-C-A B-R-O-W

Have the Witching Eyes of the Movie Stars Tonight

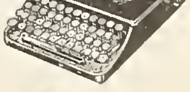
You can make your eyes wells of allure ... get exactly the same effect the movie and stage stars do—instantly! Simply darken the lashes and brows with the wonderful make-up they use—called DELICA-BROW. In a few seconds DELICA-BROW makes your eyes look bigger, brighter ... irresistible. Try it tonight. It's waterproof, too. Remember the name, DELICA-BROW. At all toilet goods counters and at the 10c stores.



10¢ A DAY BUYS A NEW REMINGTON PORTABLE TYPEWRITER

Special 10-Day Free Trial Offer

Think of it! You can buy a new standard Remington Portable Typewriter for but 10c a day. Standard keyboard. Small and capital letters. Beautiful finish. Carrying case included free. Big help in school work. Write today. Say: Please tell me how I can get a new Remington Portable typewriter on your special 10-day free trial offer for but 10c a day. Remington Rand Inc., Dept. 802 Buffalo, N. Y.



nutria—sometimes even a squirrel.

Up to three, four and five hundred dollars, there are beaver, caracul, Persian lamb and Alaska seal, which is very smart this year and lasts forever.

A fur coat in the lower price ranges is always what is called "a better buy" when it is not trimmed with a contrasting fur—that is, when the collar and cuffs are made from the same fur as the coat. Fur trimming, unless it is quite handsome, ruins the style of the coat, and a handsome fur trimming runs up the price astoundingly.

No wool in the world can keep you so warm as fur, for the hide of the animal is air proof and cool breezes cannot get through. So, if you must have warmth and cannot go as high as a hundred dollars, then consider the fur lined coats. They can be most awfully good looking when smart tweeds are used for the outside portion. Again, don't have fur collars. Simple scarfs or collars of the tweed are better style. And these coats—very good looking ones—can be had for as low as twenty-five dollars. (On Toby Wing's coat on page 71, there is fur, to be sure. But it is a much too expensive fur for the girl who cannot spend much more than that $25.)

A fur which looks like seal is dyed rabbit. This is a fairly good wearing fur, and sometimes a coat of this sort can be found for as low as fifty dollars. I have seen awfully good looking ones, which could hardly be detected from the real thing. But here again, fur judgment is needed. Watch your step, when buying in this class. It is bad economy to buy too cheap, unless you are sure that the fur will have some lasting qualities.

Write to me, if you wish, asking information about your particular fur problem. Remember that you, too, can look gorgeous in furs, if you only take care to spend your money wisely.

If He Had It To Do Again—

(Continued from page 34)

over. But scarcely had he moaned his moan into my sympathetic ear when—everything was patched up, the engagement was announced, the two were married and about to live happily ever after.

Richard Dix had married his Home Girl.

Now, the first little indication of misunderstanding came almost immediately after the wedding. They had flown down to Yuma to be married, with a whole airplane load of miscellaneous and assorted relatives. They had eluded reporters and photographers at the brief ceremony and they eluded them again, by accident, when they returned to Palm Springs, whence the newlyweds would proceed to Richard's ranch for a short honeymoon.

The plane had to make a forced landing, by night. A dangerous landing and an inconvenient one. But the unexpected circumstance resulted in their missing the reception committee of newspaper people who had assembled at the Springs.

The new Mrs. Dix considered that a small triumph, a happy accident which added to the felicity and privacy of the honeymoon. When they returned, after a few weeks, to Hollywood, the papers were still clamoring for pictures. Of course! Richard explained to her that they must go to the studio to be photographed together and separately, to satisfy those demands. She was bewildered.

Patiently Richard explained to her that his life was not his own at all. He lived by belonging to the public, and the public was reached and satisfied through the press. He had obligations not only to the people who paid to see him on the screen, but also to the studio which employed him and to the papers which helped to build his reputation.

She did not understand. Her previous experience, all her standards, had included no such invasions of her privacy. But she acquiesced amiably because he asked her to. She was extremely gracious about it.

Then Richard went to work on a picture.

"It would be grand," Richard commented, reminiscing about those first days of readjustment, "to be the sort of man who goes to work at eight or nine or ten, depending upon his power and importance. A man who eats a leisurely lunch, attends to the matters of the afternoon, stops at his club for a highball and then drifts home to dress for a punctual seven-thirty dinner during which he may consider, with his family, the plans for the evening. Personally, I should love a life like that! But the exigencies of picture acting do not permit any such procedure.

WHEN I am working, I arise at five or six, depending whether I have location shots or studio shots that day. I have a glass of fruit juice or a cup of black coffee. I come to the studio, have a work-out and a rub-down. Then I put on make-up which may take anywhere from half an hour to an hour and a half, depending upon whether I have to get any special effects. The one I have on now was a lengthy one to apply. I am supposed to be ill, but not as ill as I was in the shots we made yesterday. I have to consider exactly what my condition is supposed to be at this point of the story—how many close-ups there are—a dozen things which go with the job of acting.

"I work all day. I go to the projection room and look at the rushes. I confer with the director and the supervisor. Perhaps something has gone wrong and there are things to be ironed out. Plans for the next day's shooting to be made.

"At last I go home. This may happen at any time between seven and midnight. Sometimes, of course, I work all night. When I do reach home, I am exhausted. I want a mild highball, some dinner, a book and a pipe for a little while—and bed. You see, schedules have been tightened so in the past year or two. We are allowed much less time on pictures than we used to have.

SOMETIMES when I am between pictures, I have a few weeks to relax and enjoy myself. But it hasn't happened like that very often in the past year or two.

"You see, it isn't much fun, waiting for that sort of husband, for a young woman, full of life and interest in things and a desire for social contacts, and so on! I simply could not give Winifred what she was entitled to have of my time and attention. You can't blame her for developing a certain amount of discontent."

All through this recital, Rich was concerned with seeing to it that Winifred was not blamed in any way for anything that had happened. Nor did he reproach himself. He had done his best. Circumstances had simply been too much for them.

A year or so ago there were rumors of a rift in the Dix family, rumors of an impending separation and divorce. But Mary Ellen Dix was on her way. The Dixes were reunited and Richard bought a new home. For the baby's sake, they would try once more to readjust themselves to one another.

More and more, as it became apparent to Winifred that her husband's inexplicable profession made him different from other husbands, she depended upon her own family for amusement, companionship, sympathy.

"I am fond of my family, too," Richard told me, ruefully. "I like to have dinner with them once a week, to be in touch with them every day. But I did not, after I had my own home, want my family with me every single minute!"

RICH said, "If you are going to have this sort of career, then you must make up your mind to these things. You must learn to fulfill your obligations and try not to emphasize them."

But the person who shares your life has none of the compensations, and shares most of the penalties. If you are not the sort of person to whom applause and limelight are meat and drink, then you suffer. Do you begin to understand the handicaps which this young couple had to face?

Yet, Richard would not have missed this experience for anything in the world.

"Marriage," he said, "taught me things. It enlightened me. I hope it mellowed me. Any bachelor who reaches the age of thirty-five and does not try it, if he can find someone to try it with him, is a plain fool. He simply does not understand what he is missing.

"Now, if you have lived alone, had your own man-servant, had your house run for your specific convenience, you are going to run into snarls when you

"LURELESS LETTY"
Becomes the Most Popular Girl at the Party!

1
I'M SO DISCOURAGED—I DON'T SEEM TO ATTRACT THE BOYS — LACK SOMETHING, I SUPPOSE
HOW SILLY! YOU'VE SIMPLY LET YOURSELF BECOME A LITTLE CARELESS ABOUT YOUR APPEARANCE YOUR HAIR ESPECIALLY!
2
WHAT CAN I DO? I DON'T WANT TO PAY $2 FOR A FRESH WAVE EVERY TIME I HAVE A DATE!
EVER HEAR OF JO-CUR? YOU CAN WAVE YOUR HAIR YOURSELF MARVELOUSLY WITH JO-CUR — AND IT COSTS ABOUT A NICKEL! HERE, LET ME SHOW YOU RIGHT NOW . . .
3
IT'S JUST THE EFFECT I WANT—THE BEST WAVE I EVER HAD! AND ABOUT AS EASY AS COMBING THE HAIR!
WITH JO-CUR YOU CAN SUIT YOUR OWN PERSONALITY EXACTLY YOU LOOK MARVELOUS!
4 AT THE PARTY A FEW DAYS LATER
LETTY HAS GOT SO POPULAR LATELY A FELLOW CAN SCARCELY GET A DANCE . . . LOOKS LIKE A DAZZLING MOVIE STAR!
ISN'T SHE JUST RAVISHING?
THANKS TO THAT WONDERFUL JO-CUR, DEAR!

Have That "Ritzy" Fingerwave
in Your Own Home Tonight

NOTHING "lures" like lovely hair! Thanks to a marvelous new French discovery, today it is totally unnecessary ever to sacrifice charm by having hair straggly and unattractive. Indeed, it happens you can have the same wonderful fingerwaves that the famous stars of the stage and movies have. Set them yourself! Try JO-CUR Waveset—today!

With the big bottle of JO-CUR, for 25c, you get 5 perfect waves—each of which might cost you $2 or more at an expensive hairdresser's. Each lasts a full week. And fingerwaving your hair with JO-CUR is about as quick and easy as combing it!

Remember, JO-CUR is different from any other waveset known. JO-CUR is made with a quince-seed base —not cheap gum, which makes the hair gummy and sticky. JO-CUR will not leave white flakes. If you have a permanent, JO-CUR will preserve its beauty far longer . . . Double your "appeal"! Express your VIVID PERSONALITY—bring out YOUR loveliness as never before—TONIGHT!

Get your bottle of JO-CUR at any drug or department store, or, in the trial size, at the 10c store.

Jo-cur
PRONOUNCED "JOKER"
WAVESET

Jo-cur
WAVESET
FINGER WAVING
WATER WAVING

CAROLE LOMBARD, GLAMOROUS PARAMOUNT PICTURES PLAYER

ENTICING EYES win Love!

● Eyes hold mystery and glamor only when they are set off by rich, dark, long-looking lashes. Such lashes are enticing to men.

Now any girl can have such lashes. For Winx—the NEW type mascara—transforms even pale, skimpy lashes into veils of luxurious loveliness.

Winx is made with a special French formula. Therefore it cannot smudge or flake as ordinary mascaras so often do. Never stiffens into coarse, ugly beads. Always looks completely natural.

Two forms—Liquid Winx, waterproof . . . Cake Winx, tear-proof.

And . . . to make your eyes doubly seductive, use the new Winx Eye Shadow. It is not greasy.

WINX

GEORGE:

Come home

I didn't mean the things I said. I'm sorry. My nerves were on edge. It must have been my old feet that made me say what I did. I'm a different person now—No more corns for me. I discovered *Blue-Jay. Forgive me George—come back.

*Blue-Jay—the scientific Corn Remover by Bauer & Black, surgical dressing house. Pain stops instantly—Corn gone in 3 days.

Write Bauer & Black, Department MS12, 2500 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois, for free booklet and interesting foot exercise pictures.

try to live with someone else. It's good for you. I was a selfish so-and-so and I know it. If you are single and you have asked a girl to go with you to the theatre and it happens that you are held up at the studio, you may call her and say, 'Look! I am tied up. Do you mind terribly if we go on Saturday instead of tonight?' The chances are that she doesn't mind in the least. If she does, you can send her flowers or something. She won't hold it against you, really, for long. She will say, 'Oh, it's just an actor,' and let it go at that.

"That is one of the reasons that I would not have missed this experience for anything. It is one of the reasons why I shall try it again, if this marriage ends in a divorce."

I ASKED Richard if there was anything at all about this marriage thing that he regretted. Did he wish he had not married until later? Did he think it would have been better if he had married a girl who was in the profession? Could anything have contributed to a more successful culmination?

His answer was "No!" to all my questions.

"I always said that I should wait to marry until I knew exactly what I wanted, and I did. I was as sure of myself and my choice as I could be."

I recalled that there had been another time in Richard's past, when he wanted terribly to marry. He tried to safeguard happiness ahead of time by establishing mutual interests and understanding. It had not worked, and he was pretty lacerated then. That was a long time ago. This time, he was so sure.

"Please believe me when I tell you," he urged me. "There is no other woman—there is no other man—involved in this break. There has not even been a real break, in the sense of dramatic scenes, accusations, resentments, wounded feelings. We have talked it over in as sensible and adult fashion as we could, and have concluded that Winifred will be happier, for the time being at least, at home with that family to which she is so devoted. Things will be easier and less trying for me if I am allowed to conduct my life to fit my work.

"We are still friends. I call her each evening when I come home from the studio. On Sunday I shall go to take Winifred and our baby for a drive. I want to do these things.

"We were such grand friends before we tried to be married to one another. It would be really a great loss to me if we could not be grand friends and enjoy each other from now on. And we have Mary Ellen.

"I don't regret one moment of this. It has done tremendous things for me. Even a brief experience of perfect companionship is a precious thing to have had in one's life.

"If I had it all to do over, I should do it in exactly this fashion!"

Kay Francis' Style Secrets

(Continued from page 28)

season like this. With a black velvet skirt, for instance, styled in the new tubular way and having fullness at the bottom, you can change from a lime green satin afternoon blouse to an écru lace one for formal dining. And that lace blouse might be trimmed with rhinestone buttons and have a cape that swings over the shoulders. Then if you're going on to a dance, slip a matching black velvet top on—one with plenty of back interest and cut out a bit under the arms. Tuck it under your skirt and hide the joining with a wide girdle of tiny mirrors.

"Your coat? A double-breasted Prince Albert, by all means, with a severe high neck. And of the black velvet of course. If you own a fox skin, wear it—only drape it in back instead of front because even fur is doing a reverse on us this winter!"

Those agate green eyes of Kay's were agleam now as ideas came to her. It occurred to me suddenly that dress luxuries in themselves mean nothing to her. She has done without them once; she could do without them again—and still be superbly smart. I've seen her in slacks on her boat looking as coolly groomed as she does in an Orry-Kelly creation.

Did you ever consider her height? Did you know that she is just about the tallest woman star in pictures? Five feet, seven and a quarter inches. It came as a shock to me. I'd never thought of Kay as being tall. Very few people do. She gave the answer to that herself. "Possibly it's because I never do, either. It is silly to be conscious of your height. To try to make yourself look shorter by slouching. That simply makes the clothes hang badly and you're really conspicuous then. Tall girls should dare to be pictorial; that is their special forte. And what a winter it is for them—sartorially speaking! Or rather for us I should say. Long-haired furs being worn with a stand-up gesture that 'cuts' the figure beautifully; capes, broad collars—and even berthas; interesting belts—how I love 'em! And tunics. I suppose that's the reason I always have suits with three-quarter length coats, just to give that tunic effect. It's so good on a person with inches to spare."

WHICH brings us right to the topic of Kay's newest suit. (See page 30.) The kind of suit which takes full responsibility for any numer of things. Shopping, lunching, office-ing. It's a navy blue mixture of wool and silk, proof against wear and weather. Notice the wide wale in the material. And don't be fooled by that white waffle crêpe collar and plaited cravat. They're not part of the blouse. They are sewn right on the jacket, if you please, and clasped by a pearl and lapis brooch—the feminine touch supreme. The long fitted coat is fastened with bone buttons, cylindrical in shape, and has padded, squared shoulders but long tight sleeves edged with the white crêpe. Kay's accessories to it include black kid pumps and a purse piped with white. Again the white motif in the gloves.

"Have a theme to every costume," is the Francis prescription. This "theme" consists of peaks—those on the shoulders and the one on that hat. It's probably the most waggish hat in existence. Same fabric as the suit. And a bewitchingly mad design.

As a matter of fact, all Kay's hats are mad. They're little "nifties" such as you'd expect a short, cute person to wear. That is where she has the courage to be different—with very delightful results. Tall women, as a rule, speak of large picture hats in endearing terms. Presumably they make you look shorter. Kay detests them. You can't inveigle her into wearing one unless a screen production definitely demands it.

"We have to be dignified often enough," she declares. "Give me tiny, crazy hats for lively moments."

ANOTHER tradition of tall girls she rebels at—low heels. Kay's are high. Incidentally, she has the smallest foot—takes a size four. And she says the trick is to select vamps that make your feet look small. There's a good sample of such a vamp on page 30 where you see her new pair of brown kid and suede oxfords demonstrating that very thing.

"Gentlemen," mused Kay, "prefer variety. They love it. Try giving your husband a steady diet of seeing you in one type of dress and he's apt to grow pretty restless! I wonder if my little friend in Middletown, for example, has a romantic robe for those evenings à deux.

"Now by 'romantic robe,' I don't mean an expensive, luxurious garment. I mean something clingy and very long and traily. Something definitely picturesque. Something easy to slip into when you leave the kitchen to its own devices.

And how better can you go picturesque than in black velvet—made similar to that devastating dinner gown of Kay's on page 29? Mystery? Allure? My dears, a husband would have to have a heart of stone to walk out on a wife in a dress like this!

The highlights, of course, are those "cut-outs" on the shoulders and in front. The long tight sleeves with the slightly pointed cuffs. Not a jewel. Just a thread of gold stitching picking out the line of the neck and the cuffs.

There should, naturally, be variety in head-dress too. Kay has two pet methods of arranging her hair. One she calls "for sophisticated and business hours." She wears her long bob straight back with only a suggestion of a wave in front but curled up tightly in back. It has a neat, "finished" look under hats.

Then with formal attire, she has her hair parted in the middle, brought back and waved diagonally with rolled curls

Kleinert's
THRIFT GUARANTEED
3

Kleinert's
DRESS SHIELDS
are guaranteed to protect your dress under all circumstances • • •

Excitement, over-heated rooms, any intense emotion instantly increases under-arm moisture—even in the coolest weather.

In all such emergencies, you can rely on Kleinert's dress shields to prevent fading and friction and to lengthen the life of your frock by protecting it adequately at the point of greatest wear.

For guaranteed satisfaction insist on "Kleinert's"—it's true economy not to risk disappointment with inferior substitutes when 25¢ will buy real Kleinert's dress shields in the store where you purchased this magazine.

Kleinert's
T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
GUARANTEED DRESS SHIELDS

as low as 25¢ a pair

NRA MEMBER U.S. WE DO OUR PART

SKIN SOFTER SMOOTHER

Instantly

HERE is a beauty secret long known to southern girls—famous for their exquisite skins. . . .

DIXIE DEB ALMOND LOTION, patted on the face after cleansing, imparts a baby-like softness, banishes roughness, and forms a perfect base for face powder. It protects the skin from drying wind and sun.

DIXIE DEB CUCUMBER LOTION keeps the hands beautifully smooth and white—a mild bleach kind to sensitive skin exposed to housework or the weather. Keep both on your beauty shelf.

10¢ each

Large size bottles at this low price are made possible by our huge sales.

DIXIE DEB

Quality Cosmetics

At Better Chain Stores

FREE! HOW TO MAKE GIFTS 100 OF THEM AT HOME

Make beautiful, valuable articles easily at little cost. Illustrated directions for flowers, pillows, bags, toys, favors, bracelets—all easy in the world's most versatile medium. 50 lovely shades... 1000 uses. Write for "Things to Make." It's yours FREE! DENNISON'S, Dept. M-192, Framingham, Mass.

Dennison Crepe

NOW—Sparkling WHITE TEETH without HARD BRUSHING!

It's no longer necessary to scour and scrub teeth to make them white. Instead, gently brush teeth with Boracetine Tooth Powder. It makes teeth sparkling white by releasing harmless oxygen. Cigarette stains, discoloration and film are completely removed without scrubbing—without injury to tooth enamel or gums. Boracetine tastes good, neutralizes acidity and goes twice as far as paste. Be sure to try it. Kresge Stores everywhere sell Boracetine in large 10c cans. Write for free 7-day sample.

F. E. BARR & CO.
2537 Calumet Ave., Chicago (2)

Boracetine TOOTH POWDER

at the nape of the neck. This is the way Kay dresses her hair in the majority of her screen roles.

Every successful structure starts with a good foundation. Why shouldn't a woman? Kay's choice is that new all-in-one garment that smooths you out in the—er—right places and permits you to curve in accordance with the latest mode.

Even ultra-slim people like Kay need a good foundation garment for this year's styles. So much emphasis, you see, is put on the backs of dresses. Everything is smoothed out skin-tight in front so that the slightest bulge is as obvious as can be. And when you buy a foundation garment, do buy a good one. It will pay in the long run.

Observe how perfectly her moulded evening gowns fit over it. That white crepe roma on page 29 which she chose from one of her productions for her personal wardrobe. Doesn't it seem to indicate glorious times ahead? Irridescent white bugle beads embroider the bodice; they're worked over a flesh colored soufflé yoke that gives a startlingly bare effect.

And when the lady wishes to don a wrap—black velvet, it is, the last word in evening coats. Toe length, long snug sleeves, fitted, high neckline. And let me tell you about that ermine and fox cape swinging over it—which could easily be copied in white lapin. It isn't attached to the coat at all! What's more, Kay is wearing it upside down! When she wants it to go with the black velvet, it is joined simply by two large pleats in back. At other times, those pleats are let out, the cape turned around and she has another wrap.

THE perfect complement to a shiny black crepe dress, for instance. (The dress is shown on page 73—our regular pattern page—and a pattern of it has been made for you.) It's the heavy blistered kind of crepe that's so highly important at present. And the things it does for the figure—oh, my dear! Kay considers it as enticing as satin and she lets it "speak for itself." No elaboration of any sort other than those buckles of brilliants which clasp the shoulders—novel new manner of doing it—and hold the belt in place. A small, rounded waist, slinky lines that are eminently suitable to such slithery material—and you have a dress that Hollywood calls "divine." The one spot of color is the flash of rubies in Kay's bracelets.

The Persian lamb coat she occasionally wears with it gives evidence of the latest trend fur coats are taking—a tubular effect, close-fitting sleeves and with the neck line accented. (See page 29.)

Of course, for sheer unadulterated drama there isn't anything in the world quite like flesh-tinted satin and black velvet. Especially if you want your drama colored with memorable moon-lit moments! Look what that combination does for Kay—on page 28. The satin is strictly on the bias so that she has that delicious poured-into-a-mould appearance. A train—"mais oui!" And that startling décolletage made even more effective by the black velvet straps which end in a glorious bow. The bodice in front has an accidentally draped look that to me is most intriguing. And a single soft rose on a tailored loop of black velvet—romantic days are here again. Cheerio! The flesh-pink and black velvet combination can be worked out in a number of ways to suit almost every type except the terribly athletic girl.

But don't think Kay's wardrobe is entirely the "glory" kind. There are plenty of "substantial" clothes to give it balance that are every bit as interesting. By way of contrast her house things are severely plain. Not a flimsy negligée anywhere. She has one very similiar to a man's. Dull-finished black satin with green trimmings and a trick "K" embroidered on the pocket. Her pajamas, too, have a masculine cut. There's a dark blue corduroy pair with red pipings, and some of heavy black crepe, creased, with a short jacket and a white vest.

Kay gets a complete change from very feminine things that way. There must be variety, you remember! Some of her chic street togs have vests also. Like a four-piece suit of beige and blue checked woolen that sports a blue velvet waistcoat.

Now—do you think you can utilize the lessons Kay has taught you to make life a happier and more romantic affair? Of course you can! Even if your funds are so limited that the $25-a-week salary Kay used to live on—and dress well on, too—looks like untold wealth to you . . . Even if, I say, do not be discouraged.

The back views of the patterns shown on page 73. Kay Francis' lovely evening gown (3034) is so simple to make that you really must try it. 3031—shown here without the cape—is very youthful. 2995—you can make it with short sleeves—works out well in two materials.

I've Dressed Them All

(Continued from page 77)

frames to give them character.

The last time she was in was the day that the newspapers published an interview with a visiting Italian Countess who said that Mussolini's favorite actress was Zasu Pitts. We asked her if she had read the article. She was like a child receiving a compliment upon her first piano recital. The nervous, bird-like hands fluttered in front of her. Nothing in the world had ever pleased her quite so much.

Here is a name which thrills me. It is that of Ethel Barrymore.

The first time she came into the shop she was playing at one of the theatres in Los Angeles. It was an off-season and few people were there. Miss Barrymore came alone, took a seat in a corner and asked to be shown some dinner gowns.

We were all delighted to have her there and turned handsprings to please her, which really wasn't necessary for she is extremely easy to get on with.

Several days later she returned. As she walked through the showroom on her way back for fittings, she passed a famous star trying on hats.

"Wasn't that Ethel Barrymore?" the star asked breathlessly. "Do ask her if I may say 'hello' to her. I met her in New York once. I'm sure she will remember."

One of the saleswomen carried the message to the Great Ethel.

"Let her come in," she said in a tired voice. "I haven't the vaguest idea who she is, but I don't want to hurt her feelings."

When the name of Colleen Moore was placed in my book she made an enormous salary. Her fame was worldwide. The same saleswoman who had embarrassed me by not knowing who Norma Talmadge was came rushing into my office quivering with excitement and said, "Colleen Moore's upstairs!"

I went into the showroom and found an unassuming young lady, walking nervously about.

Since that time, I have made many clothes for Colleen Moore, but I'm sure that she likes clothes much less than does the average girl. She seems much more at ease in sports clothes than in so-called "proper" attire. However, upon those rare occasions when she does feel like dressing up, she can be as smart as the next one.

Fitting her evening dresses was always a bit of a disappointment because she was forever arriving for fittings wearing flat-heeled shoes and rolled socks. Nothing in the world is more ludicrous than a girl in a long white satin evening dress with brown brogues peeping out beneath the hem.

This is the third installment in Howard Greer's fascinating memories from his life. In forthcoming articles you'll find dozens of hitherto unpublished stories of your favorites.

ROBERT YOUNG and LEILA HYAMS in a scene from the Universal picture, "Saturday's Millions"

Have the Clear, Lovely Skin Men Can't Resist!

Read How a Remarkable Pasteurized Yeast Ends Ugly Spots and Blemishes and Keeps the Skin Youthful and Alluring

A CLEAR, lovely skin, a fresh, radiant complexion, eyes that sparkle—have you these charms that win men's hearts? If not, try eating this new type, scientifically pasteurized yeast that is bringing beauty and vivacity to thousands of women.

Skin and complexion troubles, says medical science, are nearly always caused by constipation or a run down nervous condition. To combat these causes of bad skin you need to enrich your diet with certain nutritive elements. In many of our most common foods these elements are entirely lacking. Few people get enough of them for maximum health.

Yeast Foam Tablets contain concentrated stores of these corrective substances. These tablets are pure yeast and pure yeast is the richest known food source of the vitamins B and G.

These precious elements strengthen the digestive and intestinal organs. They fortify your weakened nervous system. Thus they aid in building the health and vivacity that make you irresistible to others.

These results you get with a food, not a drug. Yeast Foam Tablets are nothing but pure yeast pressed into convenient, easy-to-take form. A scientific toasting process gives this yeast a delicious, nut-like flavor. It cannot cause gas or discomfort and it is always uniform.

This yeast is used by various laboratories of the United States government and by many leading American universities in their vitamin research.

Look and Feel Years Younger

Any druggist will supply you with Yeast Foam Tablets. The 10-day bottle costs only 50c. Get one today. Then watch the improvement in the way you feel and look. See how your friends note the change in your appearance.

•

Thankful for clear skin again: "I certainly am pleased at the results Yeast Foam Tablets have given me. Before I started taking them my face looked terrible. Now it is beautifully clear. I can't thank you enough for the relief your yeast has afforded me." OAKWOOD, WIS.

•

Not a blemish now: "My face was so covered with pimples and rashes that I was ashamed to walk down the street. I have now been taking Yeast Foam Tablets for three months. They have done wonders for me. There is not a blemish on my face." CLEVELAND, OHIO

Yeast Foam Tablets Stay Fresh for Months

YEAST FOAM TABLETS
YEAST

FREE: MAIL THIS COUPON TODAY

NORTHWESTERN YEAST CO., MM-12
1750 North Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill.
Please send free sample and descriptive circular.

Name__________
Address__________
City__________State__________

Here's One SAFE Way To Lose FAT

Prescribed By Doctors

● Don't stay fat and unattractive—not when it's so easy and safe to get rid of double chins, ugly hip-fat and rolls of unattractive fat on waist and bust—

● At the same time you can build up more energy and strength—increase vitality—feel and look younger and keep free from headaches, indigestion, acidity, gas and shortness of breath—simply take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water first thing every morning.

● An 85c jar lasts 4 weeks and is sold by druggists the world over. Make sure you get Kruschen, the SAFE, HEALTHY way to reduce — safeguard your health — refuse cheap imitations.

FREE: Write E. Griffiths Hughes, Inc., Dept. MM-2, Rochester, N.Y., for new book giving complete details of Kruschen Treatment—also precious aids for obtaining youthful beauty.

KRUSCHEN SALTS

BUNIONS Quick Safe Relief!

Pain is quickly relieved; pressure on the sore spot is removed and irritation soon healed. Get a box today. Sold everywhere.

Dr Scholl's Zino-pads

Keeps WORKING HANDS Soft and White

Whether you do housework or office work, you can keep your hands soft, smooth and lovely with Hess Witch Hazel Cream. This different type lotion penetrates both the outer and inner layer of skin, relieving the cause of chapping, roughness and dryness. Just a few drops at a time does the work. No stickiness — gloves go on easily.

Try Hess at once. Sold in Dime, Drug and Department stores—10c, 25c and 50c sizes. Sample Free on request. (19)

E. E. HESS COMPANY
12 Main Street Brook, Ind.

HESS
WITCH HAZEL CREAM
HESS

HESS Witch Hazel Cream

Lupe and Johnnie Were Married

(Continued from page 47)

discovered, during those two years of hectic, wild, uncontrolled emotionalism that love was burning away all that was within her. She was becoming a by-product of love rather than making love just a by-product of life. No actress can do it. Even the terrific, impelling energy of Lupe Velez could not serve two masters. Her acting became more and more secondary to her love-making.

Lupe could have married Gary Cooper. No mothers, no fathers, no gossips—nothing or no one but Lupe and Gary themselves, could have prevented that ceremony. I was a matron-of-honor at Lupe's wedding to Johnny because I am a friend and as a friend had been with her through the hectic drama of that other love. I had walked the floor with Lupe Velez until after three o'clock one morning when she was burning with the white heat that a misunderstanding with Gary had lit within her. And yet, at eight o'clock she had been on a motion picture set working. She looked—as any woman would look who had walked the floor for eight hours crying and tearing her hair and screeching and praying. Yes, praying.

People have said that Lupe Velez takes marriage lightly. They have pointed to the number of "fiancés" to prove it. They do not understand that the reason she has not married before is because she does not take marriage lightly. We never recover entirely from our childhood beliefs; our inherent religions. Lupe is Mexican. Marriage is to her a holy sacrament to last forever—if it is at all possible to forearm oneself so it may be everlasting. Not like a Hollywood marriage.

None of us will ever be able to set upon paper the true picture of the sacrifice made by Lupe when she put Gary Cooper upon a train which would head him toward the African desert. Lupe knew this was farewell—forever. Gary didn't. Her great love did not tell him. It shielded him even until the last moment. Gary has told me of the shock, the terrible shock, when her letters dwindled; of the even greater shock when he returned to New York and found her flitting from one gay night club to another with one escort after another. When he heard the stories about her gaiety, her wild abandon, her many so-called "love affairs." He could not believe these stories were true.

I shall never forget one evening in her home, two years after she had sent Gary into Africa—alone. She sat on a stool, at my feet, in that softly shadowed living room which Gary had helped her to buy and to furnish. She allowed the tears to weave their unmolested ways down her cheeks. Her eyes were deep pools of black. Their blackness had been lightened, once, by the light of excitement which flickered in them. There were no lights on this evening.

"Love is the only thing on earth which pays you regular interest. I may lose all of my diamonds and fur coats and money. Who can tell? The only thing I can never lose is the memory of love. It, alone, pays me rich dividends upon what I have invested.

"The beautiful thing about your first love is: you are ignorant. When one is ignorant, she can be happy. A woman in love the first time is like a woman about to have her first baby. She is ignorant of the responsibilities, the worries, the unhappiness which it may bring her. She does not look forward to the fact that it may have measles, whooping cough or even, some day, go to prison. To her, this first baby is going to be the President of its country. No second baby can be exactly like the first because a mother can be absolutely ignorant only once."

For two years, nearly three, Lupe thought that she could never love again!

WHEN Lupe Velez first arrived in this country—a wistful child of seventeen who could speak no English, she told me, "I am vat you calls zee flirts. I wiggles my eyes at all mens." She followed this philosophy until she met Gary Cooper. After she and Gary had separated, she returned to it. She became, again, the flirt; a woman who wiggled her eyes at all men. But her heart remained the ashes of a single fire.

Johnny Weissmuller was just one more man to be smiled at and flirted with when she met him. A big, handsome, wistful lad who reminded her in many ways of Gary when she had first known him. When the rumors about her and Johnny began, Lupe was amused. She knew—and I knew—that he meant no more to her than had Nils Asther, Tom Mix, Al Jolson, Victor Fleming before Gary; than had Jack Gilbert and others since Gary. Johnny was just another man. Someone to go places with. To have a good time with. To flirt with.

And then he became—a pal. The first she had ever had.

Lupe did not know about pals. She did not understand that there are men who can be friends to a woman. She did not realize that such a friendship might pave the way for an affection that does not burn at white-heat, always. A white-heat is too hot to be comfortable. But a steady, firm fire that flashes up occasionally when extra fuel is added: a fire that never dies completely because it is a well-banked fire.

She did not know. She learned.

Johnny Weissmuller had been in love before. He had been married. Although he had not been as famous as Gary, he had had more experience. He knew more about women. He knew that women like to be managed as well as loved.

Johnny's love was no less to him than Gary's had been to him. Only he understood better. When Lupe's love flared too high and threatened emotional tempests, Johnny shrugged and kept silent or forgot to call her up for several days. For example. Lupe loves excitement. She likes to play in the evenings when she is not working. Theaters; dinner parties; prize fights. But Johnny is a swimmer. Too much bright-life is not for athletes. "I will take you twice a week," he told her.

And somehow, this big man who said, "We'll go out twice a week," and stuck to it—this giant who did not buy her expensive gifts as had all others but who bought her a little Ford car which he ordered her to drive herself because he thought it was good for her—the big boy who got her roller skates and insisted that she use them—this lover who bought her a tiny love ring and presented it with a bashful grin and "This doesn't mean money but love, dear"—this Johnny Weissmuller brought forth still another side of Lupe.

I DROPPED into her home for dinner, one evening. She was cooking it, herself. She was frying the potatoes with grease that spluttered up every few seconds to scald her briefly; she was baking chicken as it is baked in Mexico. "I'm cooking Johnny's dinner with my own hands. He likes me to."

When they first talked about marriage, Lupe was frightened. "Marriage cannot change human nature. I will not marry unless I feel it will last. I have suffered much but at least I have not suffered from divorce. I have been saved from that. I do not know —marriage seems to act like windows on a jail. You want to break them down. Even though you love, something inside you says, 'I am in jail.' I have seen that from other men and women. I could not have that."

So Lupe and Johnny sat down and tried to figure a way not to feel as though they were in jail. When they are both in Hollywood, they are not to go out with anyone else. That is because they feel certain they will not Lupe and Johnnie at the recent Tennis Matches at the Los Angeles Tennis Club.

YOU'RE RIGHT, JUNE KNIGHT!

June Knight

Alluring Universal Star says:

BLUE WALTZ Beauty Aids make every woman more alluring

TRUST June Knight, attractive Universal star, to find that Blue Waltz Beauty Aids are the perfect make-up treatment!

She says—"Blue Waltz . . . the fragrance, like the melody, lingers on."

And, she's certainly right, for you will find it easy to bring out all your natural charm with the glamorous Blue Waltz perfume, silk-sifted face powder, and special-shaped indelible lipstick—they are pre-matched to harmonize with each other and with your skin, in shades most flattering to your individual type.

Your friends will admire your flawless make-up when you use the Blue Waltz cosmetics! Visit your 5 and 10c store to-day, and see why both Hollywood and Broadway are wild about Blue Waltz Beauty Aids. Each, only 10c

Blue Waltz
Fifth Avenue, New York

PERFUME FACE POWDER LIPSTICK CREAM ROUGE VANISHING CREAM TOILET WATER COLD CREAM EYE SHADOW BRILLIANTINE TALCUM

"Chance," she sobbed, "save the last shot for me."

WESTERN ROMANCES
DECEMBER 15¢
LOVE RIDES THE BORDER by EUGENE CUNNINGHAM
EMPEROR'S GOLD by F.V.W. MASON

At All News Stands

Last Bullet... Was It for Her?

Grimly the man looked down the long barrel of his rifle, watching for deadly sombreros. Crouched beside him on the rocks the girl who meant more than life itself, waited . . . and wondered if that last bullet was really to be for her. The shots came faster—and closer . . . the bandits edged nearer . . . and then . . . ?

Eugene Cunningham, masterful writer of western stories, gives you the flaming, vivid denouement in "Love Rides the Border", a complete-in-one-issue novelette in December WESTERN ROMANCES. Enjoy it, with many other thrilling romances of the glamorous west in this absorbing new issue. Get your copy today.

WESTERN ROMANCES

"It Seemed Like a Miracle...

Those 10¢ WINDOW SHADES Looked So Expensive"

I NEVER dreamed that any shades could set off the furnishings of my rooms so well. My Clopay Shades were truly marvelous—their creped surface looked so much smarter than the hard, shiny surface of cloth shades that used to cost me 50c each. And the beautiful chintz patterns I got in Clopay at 10c I really never could find before in any shades! . . . Millions of women already approve Clopay—the new kind of shade that won't crack, pinhole, fray or curl . . . yet sells for 10c. Available in soft, plain colors and latest chintz effects no other shade has. Easy to put up, too . . . no tacks or tools. For a real thrilling experience see Clopay Shades today. Send 3c stamp for color samples. Clopay Corporation, 1220 York St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

At All 5c and 10c Stores and Many Department Stores

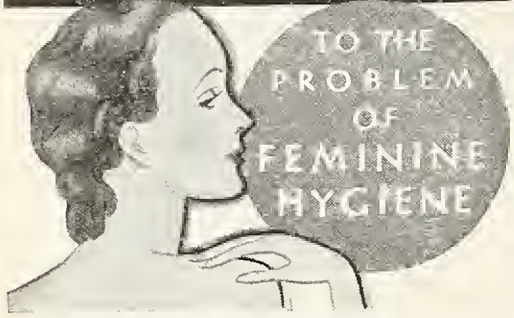
CLOPAY WINDOW SHADES

SKIN BLEMISHES DISAPPEAR

45 Years Amazing Success Proves It.

Pimples, tan, dark spots, muddy complexion and many other embarrassing skin blemishes vanish with KREMOLA—purifies, whitens, beautifies your skin. KREMOLA is a doctor's prescription used over 45 years with amazing success. FREE SAMPLE. Send 10c for postage, packing, booklet. DR. C. H. BERRY CO., Dept. MM-12, 2975 So. Michigan, Chicago, Ill.

THE answer



TO THE PROBLEM OF FEMININE HYGIENE

● To the perplexed woman seeking a dependable answer to the vital problem of personal hygiene, we advise BORO-PHENO-FORM. Known to the medical profession for more than forty years, it carries highest recommendations. Convenient—no water nor accessories required. Soothing; harmless—non-caustic; odorless; dependable. A boon to the mind and health of every married woman.

Dr. Pierre's BORO-PHENO-FORM

● Try it now. Just send 10c and coupon for generous Trial Package.

Dr. Pierre Chemical Co., Dept. N-16
162 N. Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.
Please send me your Trial Package of BORO-PHENO-FORM, Directions and Enlightening Booklet. I enclose 10c.
Name
Address
City State

want to. But if they are in separate cities, they are to be on marital vacations. Johnny is to see other women; Lupe other men. If either should make mistakes that might hurt the other—they are to say nothing. "What we don't know can never hurt us," they have decided.

They wanted to keep their marriage a secret until they can get used to being married. "It's the first days that will be a little hard. We want to get used to the feeling——"

For weeks before they were married, Johnny had promised, "I'm going to punch you in the jaw, Lupe, the moment it is over, so you'll know for sure that you are married to me."

But he took her into his arms, instead. They kissed as man and woman have kissed following that beautiful ceremony since it was created. And then, he took her chin in his huge fist, "This is the punch in the jaw, dear——"

"I know we are married, dear. I know. I'm glad. But Johnny, you haven't had breakfast. Oh, please let's hurry and get Johnny something to eat. He has to eat regular meals, you know. He has to be at work tomorrow morning."

Johnny slipped his arm around her and winked at us. "All women are alike. They're always worrying about feeding their husbands. Lupe's just like any other bride, isn't she?"

She was. Only Lupe Velez had waited enough years; had experienced enough of love to know that the marriage that has an opportunity to bring contentment is often more successful and lasting than the one which may bring only excitement. And a man can keep contented only when he is given his breakfast on time.

How Columbo Discovered America

(Continued from page 31)

Conrad's glib enthusiasm and his gaudy word pictures of a tomorrow crammed with riches, Russ might have returned home.

For six weeks, nothing happened. Finally, Conrad got a radio executive up to his apartment. Russ sang to Con's accompaniment, and the executive turned cartwheels in his enthusiasm. "Why," he demanded, "haven't we heard him at NBC? Bring him over tomorrow."

After he had gone, Con said, "This calls for a celebration."

The Nut Club is New York's maddest night club. In Greenwich Village, it attracts the town's most sophisticated crowd. This night, Con and Russ ran into another celebrating party. Harry Richman was the host, and one of his guests was a beautiful girl named Dorothy Dell who had been Miss Universe of 1931. Now she was in Ziegfeld's Follies. This night, Russ Columbo met her, lost his heart.

Russ' first network broadcast was on a Tuesday night at eleven-thirty. At first, the late-hour assignment seemed like a death sentence. No one listened so late at night. It was agreed that a soloist wouldn't have a chance. But Russ changed all that, for something in his voice appealed.

HE might have been singing yet, if it hadn't been for Bing Crosby. Bing was a West Coast sensation. His fame, sweeping eastward, caused NBC and CBS to bid for his services. "Get Crosby," was the order of the day. Apparently, everyone else on the air was forgotten. Especially Columbo, who, because his style so closely paralleled Bing's, was released by NBC.

This is just one of the shocking things that happened to this twenty-three-year-old kid.

At the end of the fight to hire Crosby, the Columbia Broadcasting System had won. Conrad looked at the situation like a general surveying a battlefield. To Russ he said, "Kid, we've got one chance." It was Con Conrad who sold the National Broadcasting Company on the "battle of the baritones" idea. Going back to NBC, he sold them Russ Columbo all over again, persuaded them to give Russ such a "build-up" that it would take the edge off Crosby's appearance over a rival network.

These next weeks were mad and as full of success as Russ was to know in those days. His new salary was at first $150 a week. Soon, Con promoted a new Lincoln car. Newspapers began to talk about Russ Columbo, NBC's sensational baritone. Maxwell House Coffee signed him for three weeks work at $3,000. Listerine came next, paying $2,500 a week.

At this point in most stories of sudden wealth, one meets a boy's swelling conceit or arrogance and ingratitude. Russ kept his feet on the ground. So far as I know, he has made but one serious mistake in his career. It came later on.

NOW, he was in love with Dorothy Dell. Nightly, she was seen with him.

It was a line of type that blasted his romantic house of cards. Walter Winchell, New York's gossip columnist, reported in his daily column, "Dorothy Dell, the Follies dolly, and Russ Columbo, NBC's Romeo of Song, plan to middle-aisle it shortly."

And Colombo's employers, hearing of this rumored marriage, told him flatly that he could not get wed; to do so would diminish his popularity.

For those of you who read the announcements of engagements of movie and radio stars, engagements that never come off and marriages that are annulled, here is a glimpse behind the scenes. To Con Conrad, Russ' manager and best friend, was handed the task of breaking up the romance with Dorothy Dell. A very nasty job.

Con broke it up, all right. He went straight to Dorothy and told her what this marriage would do to Russ. I am not sure how much she loved Russ, but this I do know. When she heard that she might stand between him and success, she stepped aside with a valorous smile and promised never to see him again.

At first, Russ was stunned in a desperate school-boyish way. And then frantic. She returned his letters, refused to answer her phone, avoided him. In desperation, Columbo finally bared his heart to Con Conrad. And Con, full of honest love for this kid he had built into a star, broke down and told him what he had done.

When he had finished his story, Russ was white and shaken. And then righteously furious. That night, he walked out of the apartment that he shared with Con, swearing never to return.

For three days, they met only at the broadcasting studio where no word passed between them. Con did all he could to win back Russ' respect. On the fourth day, Russ returned to his apartment, but an unbridgable gulf yawned between him and his manager. He felt he had been wronged, and the hurt of it lingered. Later, he was to retaliate.

Now, however, working together did much to smooth out their disagreement. In 1932, Russ was atop the tremendous wave of popularity which Conrad and NBC had fashioned for him. Publicity "stunts" to keep his name ever before the public were once-a-week affairs. The most famous of all—and the greatest hoax—fooled every city editor in New York, and connected Russ' name with that of Greta Garbo.

LET'S examine it briefly and observe how these millstones of fame grind. You may have read, in 1932, that Greta Garbo was engaged to marry Columbo. A thousand papers printed it. Here is the story.

Greta Garbo was visiting New York, hiding herself as usual, and reporters were frantic to get news of her. Winchell scooped the town one morning by publishing that she was at the St. Moritz Hotel. Twenty-four hours later, Con Conrad gave a party for newspapermen in his apartment ostensibly in honor of Columbo's successful engagement at the Waldorf-Astoria. During the party, the telephone rang. It rang twice. And a third time. When the continued noise had attracted everyone's attention, Conrad lifted the receiver.

"Hello," he said loudly enough for all in the room to hear. "No, this is his manager. Call what room? Suite 2231 at the St. Moritz. Whom should he ask for?"

Apparently puzzled, he replaced the receiver, saying, "That's a funny one. When I ask who's calling, they hang up. Hey, Sammy!" (Sammy is one of the conspirators planted across the room so all can hear), "You live at the St. Moritz. Do you know anyone in room 2231?"

"Room 2231," Sammy sang back. "Why, that's Garbo's room. I live on Mother!

Here's the A.B.C. of COLDS-CONTROL

Ⓐ To AVOID Many Colds

At that first sneeze, sniffle or nasal irritation, apply Vicks Nose & Throat Drops, the new aid in preventing colds. The drops are especially designed to stop colds where 3 out of 4 colds start—in nose and upper throat. Used in time, these unique drops help to avoid many colds entirely.

Ⓑ To SHORTEN a Cold

If a cold has developed, massage throat and chest at bedtime with Vicks VapoRub — the modern method of treating colds. Like a poultice, VapoRub "draws out" soreness and tightness. And all night long its medicated vapors carry soothing relief direct to irritated air-passages.

Ⓒ To Build RESISTANCE to Colds

Follow the simple rules of health that are part of Vicks Plan for better Control of Colds. In thousands of clinical tests, under medical supervision, Vicks Plan has greatly reduced the number and duration of colds—has cut their dangers and expense. The Plan is fully described in each Vicks package.

NRA

VICKS SPECIALISTS IN CONTROL OF COLDS

You'll read your own story when you read Joanna Parker's confession. + + + Hers is every woman's story because she found every woman's love. . . .

THREE KINDS OF LOVE

The book-length true novel complete in the January MODERN ROMANCES on sale December First

New Discovery Takes Out Color Like Magic!

Harmless as Boiling Water

Fast colors—even jet black—can now be removed like magic, without harming fabrics in the slightest! And all through the use of an amazing product available for home use everywhere! It is known as White RIT.

Simply drop a White RIT wafer in boiling water, put in the goods from which you want to remove the color, stir, and in a jiffy all color will disappear. Even the water stays colorless!

Also Takes Out Spots and Stains

It's marvelous for removing mildew, yellowness caused by washing, ink spots, grass stains, rust... never harms the fabric. Diapers come out soft and snowy white, too.

Use White RIT to take old, faded color out of dresses, hosiery, underthings, curtains, draperies—any article unevenly faded, or sun-streaked.

After the color has been removed it is easy to put in any fashionable new color you like with Instant RIT.

You can easily take out all the old color . . . even black . . . with White RIT. It never harms the fabric. Also removes those stubborn spots and stains!

Now rinse your dress in a bright shade of New INSTANT RIT. Not a soap any more . . . but a new powder wafer that dyes in the rinse!

Look how RIT dyes every thread, even the seams through and through. And a special patented ingredient prevents streaking...gives you beautiful, even color.

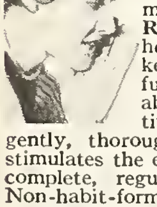
See RIT color card with its 33 smart colors at your dealer's. White RIT and Instant RIT are on sale everywhere.

WHITE RIT

Removes All Colors —HARMLESSLY

What SHE TOLD WORN-OUT HUSBAND

SHE could have reproached him for his fits of temper—his "all in" complaints. But wisely she saw in his frequent colds, his "fagged out," "on edge" condition the very trouble she herself had whipped. Constipation! The very morning after taking NR (Nature's Remedy), as she advised, he felt like himself again—keenly alert, peppy, cheerful. NR—the safe, dependable, all-vegetable laxative and corrective—works gently, thoroughly, naturally. It stimulates the eliminative tract to complete, regular functioning. Non-habit-forming. Try a box to-night. 25c—at druggists'.



FREE! New gold & blue 1934 Calendar-Thermometer — samples NR and Tums. Send name, address, stamp to
A. H. LEWIS CO.
Desk TK-77
St. Louis, Missouri

NR TO-NIGHT TOMORROW ALRIGHT

"TUMS" Quick relief for acid indigestion, sour stomach, heartburn. Only 10c.

the same floor. I know."

The newspapermen present smiled wisely and said nothing. They knew Conrad and his "stunts." Con turned back to the phone.

"Get me the St. Moritz," he directed. Within a minute he had found that the occupant of 2231 was a Miss Gustafsen. And everyone knew that Miss Gustafsen was Garbo's real name.

Still, the newspapermen were very suspicious. So Conrad let the whole thing drop . . . for the moment. Next day, into a St. Moritz lobby that was crowded with reporters and photographers trying to see Garbo, there walked two page boys carrying a giant basket of flowers. A tag bore the name Greta Garbo. A smart newshawk delayed the pages, extracted the white card faintly visible among the blooms, and read the name on it. Russ Columbo.

Again, smart city editors refused the story. It seemed too much like publicity. So Conrad went to work on Walter Winchell, insisting that the story was on the square, showing him telegrams signed "G.G." Russ had received. Against his better judgment, Winchell ran an item. He said Garbo and Columbo were stepping out nights.

That item was the hole in the newspaper dam. Next day, the flood for which Conrad had worked and prayed, broke over the town and country; a flood of printer's ink that placed radio's Romeo and the glamorous Garbo on the verge of marriage, and tilted Russ' destiny even higher in the sky. When you read those stories, mind you, Russ hadn't even met Garbo.

At that time, even Bing Crosby did not represent a serious menace. To Russ and Con in those merry days, life must have been something seen through a rosy haze. All that they asked was granted them. Of course, it was too fantastic to last. Everyone told them that, but they laughed off the warnings. Now, like a rocket that has spent its flaming, flashing trail in the sky, Columbo began to fall. Conrad took him out of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel so he might find more time for theatrical engagements. Next day, the Brooklyn Paramount asked Con to cut $800 off Russ' $3,000 weekly salary. Con refused, and took him out of the theatre, figuring they would come around in a week, begging. Well, they didn't. The final numbing blow fell when the Listerine firm decided to suspend its broadcasting program.

Can you imagine such a paralyzing descent? One week, they were earning $7,000 and living like princes. Seven days later, their income was exactly nothing. I rather imagine Russ began, for the first time, to sense that his rise had been too meteoric and not solidly enough ballasted to last. I don't think, though, that he realized this was the beginning of the end.

It was, undoubtedly. We are a nation of hero worshippers and romance-seekers who forget with mordant swiftness. When Russ left the air, he walked out of our lives—and most of us turned to the baritone promises in Bing Crosby's voice.

And, just as everything that Con Conrad had done had been quite all right for a time, now it was the wrong thing. Presently, discouraged and ill, he renounced his rights as Russ' manager. Other managers put Columbo into this theatre and that, but the fire had gone out of the singer's personality. Young as he was, it is understandable, isn't it?

For the first time, too, Russ was thinking for himself. Always, Con Conrad had been his brains, a leader and patron to be obeyed unswervingly. Now, groping like an inexpert child, Russ sought to get his life back to its old level. Many things interfered, among them a childish resentment at being Fate's plaything, and a false notion that he had to present the same front he had shown in his $7,000-a-week days.

Presently, it seemed that the same malady of "wrongness" gripped him as it had gripped Conrad. Nothing he did was right.

And then Conrad came back. Away vacationing, resting, his brain had conceived a score of fresh ideas. He returned with new enthusiasm. Russ was delighted to see him. I'm not sure of their relations this time, whether Con became his manager anew or merely helped him as a friend. I do know that the reunion started Columbo's comeback toward those radio heights that he was destined never to gain again, but on which his heart was set.

With Con directing, he turned from this engagement to that, growing again, adding fresh friends. One job was at New York's swanky Woodmansten Inn. The opening was a gala, glittering occasion with Eddie Cantor, Harry Richman, Ruth Etting, Bert Lahr, Pola Negri, Guy and Carmen Lombardo and many others present.

Among those many others were Jack Dempsey and Dorothy Dell.

FRIENDS who were there have told me that Russ' face turned white when he saw Dorothy. Nor will they soon forget his voice as he sang that night. Dorothy and Jack danced by his place as he led the band. Momentarily, she stopped, saying, "Jack and I came down to wish you loads of luck, Russ." Before he could answer, they were gone. When he turned to sing with the orchestra, Fate's amazing way had chosen the song . . .

"I can't forget the night I met you
That's all I'm thinking of;
Though you call it madness,
Ah, but I call it love . . ."

I don't think he ever saw Dorothy again. Within a few months, he didn't care to see her. For soon he met another girl who fascinated him. This time, he was playing at the Cocoanut Grove in Manhattan's Park Central Hotel. Among the artists who were part of the entertainment were Hannah Williams (newly separated from Roger Wolfe Kahn), the late Roscoe Arbuckle, and Queenie Smith.

During the first part of that engagement, it seemed he was firmly planted on the highroad back to fame. Surely nothing could stop him now. But something did. He fell in love, unreasonably, with Hannah Williams.

What of Hannah? Therein lies much of Russ' tragedy. When she told him she was leaving for Reno to secure a divorce, Russ was desolate. With no warning at all—and this is that one serious mistake I mentioned some time ago—he decided to throw over everything to go with her. Somehow, she got out of town alone. But twenty-four hours later, he had packed his bags and followed.

It was now that Russ was to learn how bitter love can be. Compared to it, his feeling for Dorothy Dell was a mid-summer fancy. For in Reno, he overtook Hannah and told her what he had done. Can't you see him, the eager-eyed suitor gladly laying his career on the guillotine of his love, happily renouncing the shallowness of fame for this beautiful thing that possessed him? If Hannah had married him, we might have a different and perhaps more happy Colombo today.

But she refused him. She did not love him. And it very nearly broke his heart.

IN New York, if he had returned, he might have gathered up again the strings of his life, but pride kept him from going to those who might laugh at him. And Conrad, he learned, was bitterly angry because of Russ' ill-timed flight to Reno. So, like a wanderer who finds all roads closed, he went home.

En route from Reno to California, he picked up a paper. It announced the engagement of Hannah Williams to Jack Dempsey.

Curious, isn't it, that life should arrange its pattern so that Jack Dempsey should be cast as this song-singer's Nemesis? But no odder surely, than that an untrained singer should rise at such a pace to heights few have ever attained, and then fall like a spent bullet?

Without Con Conrad it all would have been impossible. They met in California, and the end of this story finds them there again. Russ fled there, seeking peace and rest. Con returned on the advice of his physician, the result of a nervous breakdown suffered after Columbo had deserted his Cocoanut Grove job. And what of their relationship.

Today, they live five miles apart. But they don't see each other. Each is proud, and each has been wounded deeply. I can't help but feel, though, that they must soon be friends again; for Russ is an honest soul and he realizes how much Con did for him, while Conrad has a sincere affection for his former protégé. He did his best, in every case, for him.

Until a while ago, when he turned to the movies, Russ lived in practical retirement. It was youth's own eagerness and the healing balm of time that finally brought him out. Today, he is signed for three feature length pictures by Universal, and a career in a new field lies ahead. At twenty-five, he knows what he does and does not want. For one thing, and this is the supreme sign of the boy growing into manhood, he wants to do his own thinking.

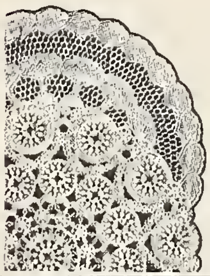
Dress up your "Dress up" dinners

IMPORTANT holiday dinners—gay party tables—informal Sunday night buffets—all take on an inviting new note of daintiness when you use Roylace Paper Doylies. They're a clever added touch—attractive, decorative, yet so practical.

Roylace Doylies are really exquisite in their lovely, lace-like designs—and in crisp white or pastel tints to match your color scheme. Not at all expensive, you can afford to use them for all your entertaining; in fact, that's an economy-idea, for they save your costly linens and laundering.

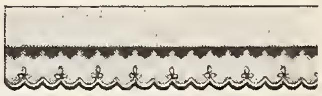
You can get Roylace Doylies in many sizes, to dress up every course of service; you'll want them under appetizers, fruits, cakes, finger bowls—and for sandwiches, drinks, and bread-and-butter plates.

At 5 and 10c stores, stationers, department stores, etc. Always select the transparent envelopes marked "Roylace." The Royal Lace Paper Works, Inc., 842 Lorimer Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

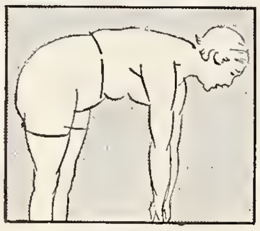


Roylace
Paper Doylies
—and shelf papers

In Shelf Papers insist on Roylace, too. The new Double-edge, Clothlyke paper is four times as strong and costs the same—5c.



AFTER MONTHS OF HOPELESS STRUGGLE AGAINST UNLOVELY FAT



I KEPT GAINING WEIGHT IN SPITE OF DAILY EXERCISE AND CONSTANT DIETING . . .

I TRIED TIGHT, CHOKING GIRDLES, TOOK WEAKENING SALTS, AND STILL I WEIGHED TOO MUCH

FINALLY, I FOUND A TRUE REDUCER . . .

"I Know a Remarkable Way to Reduce Fat!"

I TRIED a dozen or more foolish fads in my efforts to reduce. I watched my diet at every meal for months and months—yet it seemed that I would have to go on foolishly fighting fat for the rest of my life.

At last a friend suggested a true reducer called Marmola, that is based on a scientifically recognized reducing principle. I had heard of it before, of course, but I did not fully realize how the use of Marmola has spread thruout the world—into more than 12 foreign countries. I know now that it employs a tested principle that does reduce.

Marmola is so effective that it has become the world's leading remedy for fat. Over 20 million boxes have been sold.

Why should anyone wishing to reduce fail to try this famous remedy, when it has such a remarkable record? The formula is printed in every box. And it is so delightfully simple. Just 4 tablets a day. No starvation diets. No strenuous exercises. No foolish fads. You will feel better because Marmola acts the right way to help turn fat to vim. At all good drug stores. Do not accept substitutes.

MARMOLA

The Strange Case of Hitler and Dietrich

(Continued from page 23)

lady most skillfully. When he might have blustered, he cajoled; when he might have flung his fury against her calm, he pleaded. Never a trace of fiery Hitler's dictatorship found expression in that French parlor, nor an echo of brow-beating tactics.

In Berlin, where Nazi boot heels rattle endlessly over clean cobbled roads, this officer's report produced a minor sensation in Hitler's inner circle. Probably, sundry hotheads would have wreaked their vengeance on Miss Dietrich if they could have reached her. But not the iron-willed man who is now Germany's dictator.

The very few people who know of this story have asked why he has acted in this matter in a way so foreign to his nature. Rebellion he has invariably crushed; but now he entreats. Why?

Strange to say, Marlene Dietrich is the only being on earth who has succeeded in touching a warm chord in his heart. In his opinion, she is the greatest German woman in existence at the present day, the one unsullied glory on the honor roll of German citizenry. He never misses seeing any of the productions in which she appears, and his one unfulfilled ambition is to bring her back to Germany.

The fact of the matter is that Hitler, although he might become furious if anyone hinted to him that such was the case, is in a sense in love with Marlene Dietrich. Not with the woman herself, whom he has never met, but with the glamorous figure of her screen self.

Her entire life appeals to him. In a certain sense, they have much in common, for each is a self-made person and Marlene has known much of the drudgery and despair he must have felt before he gained his place in the sun. She is the only woman who has escaped the ostracism in which he holds all others. In his mind, women are relegated to their homes.

AND what of Marlene, now that she has returned to America? When one has been offered the world, what is there left? Well, there is the sunshine of California and a gay coterie of dear friends, all of which she would have been forced to sacrifice if she had accepted Hitler's offer to head his revived movie industry. There is a delightful climate, and there is a warm spot in the hearts of millions of Americans who have accorded her far more recognition than she ever gained in her native land. And there is a free country called America in which her tiny daughter can grow and bloom.

These things Marlene values. To hold them for herself, she has offered Hitler's scheme no encouragement.

But Hitler is not easily deterred. If you wonder at his leniency and self-control in a case where he might have been expected to resort to more violent methods, just remember that Hitler, the strong man, has also his weak spots.

As he dreams, in those rare moments that he is idle, he thinks not of the woman herself but of the lovely creature he has seen on the screen before his tired eyes. She has become a symbol of the greatness that is to be Germany's in every field of endeavor as well as the movies. Desperately, he wants her back for Germany. He grudges, I'm sure, the American public the sight of her and her deep, blue eyes.

THE LUCKY WINNERS!

MODERN SCREEN is pleased to announce the winners of the Clark Gable-Mae West Contest.

Remember, in the September issue, we invited you to write us—in not more than twenty words—why you would or why you would not like to see this popular pair cast as the "love interest" in a forthcoming production.

Thousands of replies poured into our office before September 15th and we have taken the time since to diligently consider the reasons, pro and con, for your decision. The awards follow:

Rubye M. Chapman of 802 South Perry St., Montgomery, Alabama, wins the first prize. Fifty dollars.

Walter C. Blackburn of 154 Maplelawn Drive, Dayton, Ohio, is awarded the second prize. Twenty-five dollars.

And the five other prizes of five dollars each go to:

E. E. Preston, 119 Livingston Ave., New Brunswick, N. J.
E. Bass, 602 Trutch St., Victoria, B. C.
Ruth Goodwin, 1712 Northview Road, Rocky River, Ohio.
C. Diana Cowan, 2628 West Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif.
Emily Kispert, 1481 Shakespeare Ave., New York, N. Y.

"Here is the SECRET" says Mary Brian

MOON GLOW
NAIL POLISH
Beautifies Your Hands

YOU will be delighted with the smartness of your hands when you beautify them with MOON GLOW Nail Polish. Keep on your shelf all of the five MOON GLOW shades—Natural, Medium, Rose, Platinum Pearl and Carmine.

If you paid $1 you couldn't get finer nail polish than MOON GLOW—the new Hollywood favorite. Ask your department or drug store for all shades of MOON GLOW Nail Polish in two sizes, 10c and 25c. If they cannot supply you, fill in the coupon below and mail today.

Moon Glow Cosmetic Co., Ltd., Hollywood, Calif.
Gentlemen: Please send me introductory pkg. of Moon Glow. I enclose 10c (coin or stamps) for each shade checked. ( ) Natural ( ) Medium ( ) Rose ( ) Platinum Pearl ( ) Carmine.
Name..
St. and No..
City............................State..............M-12

DEAFNESS IS MISERY

Many people with defective hearing and Head Noises enjoy conversation, go to Theatre and Church because they use Leonard Invisible Ear Drums which resemble Tiny Megaphones fitting in the Ear entirely out of sight. No wires, batteries or head piece. They are inexpensive. Write for booklet and sworn statement of the inventor who was himself deaf.

A. O. LEONARD, Inc., Suite 986, 70 5th Ave., New York

Grow Mushrooms
IN YOUR CELLAR OR SHED

Make Money at Home!
Experience unnecessary, we tell you how. Big demand! Write for Mushroom Book free.
American Mushroom Industries, Ltd.
192 Woolnough Bldg., Toronto, Ont.
EARN up to $25 A WEEK or More

"Her Blonde Hair won me!"

ROMANCE always comes to blondes who keep their hair golden. And it's so easy with Blondex. This special shampoo not only prevents darkening—but safely brings back natural golden color to dull, faded light hair. Brings out sparkling lights—adds gleaming radiance. Not a dye. No harmful chemicals. Fine for scalp. Used and recommended by scores of famous blonde movie stars. Get Blondex today! Two sizes—NEW inexpensive 25c package and economical $1.00 bottle. At any good drug or department store. Have you tried Blondex Wave-Set Powder? Doesn't darken light hair—not sticky—only 35c.

NRA MEMBER U.S. WE DO OUR PART

Charm Gossip

(Continued from page 74)

matches her costume jewelry. She has an array of these clips which slip on easily to the flap of the bag.

● The newest thing for head dress is the adjustable bar. Have you seen them? They are worn over the head from the tip of one ear to the tip of the other. They come in many different types and shapes and even prices. Connie Bennett has a rhinestone and seed pearl one for evening wear that makes her look very beautiful and regal. Alice White wore a black onyx one the other night that looked quite startling against her blond locks.

Then there are tortoise shell ones for daytime wear. Marion Davies usually slips one on when playing tennis. Claims it's grand for keeping the hair out of her eyes and, besides, it looks very smart.

● Heather Angel is sporting an extremely smart—and clever—accessory. (See page 74.) It's a gay swagger stick made of natural wood, with a Scotty's head on top. Just the thing to give the proper dash to a street costume. And the unique part is this: if a rain storm should overtake her, she removes that folding case of flexible wood and reveals the real purpose of the gadget.

It's a little umbrella and the Scotty's head serves as a handle!

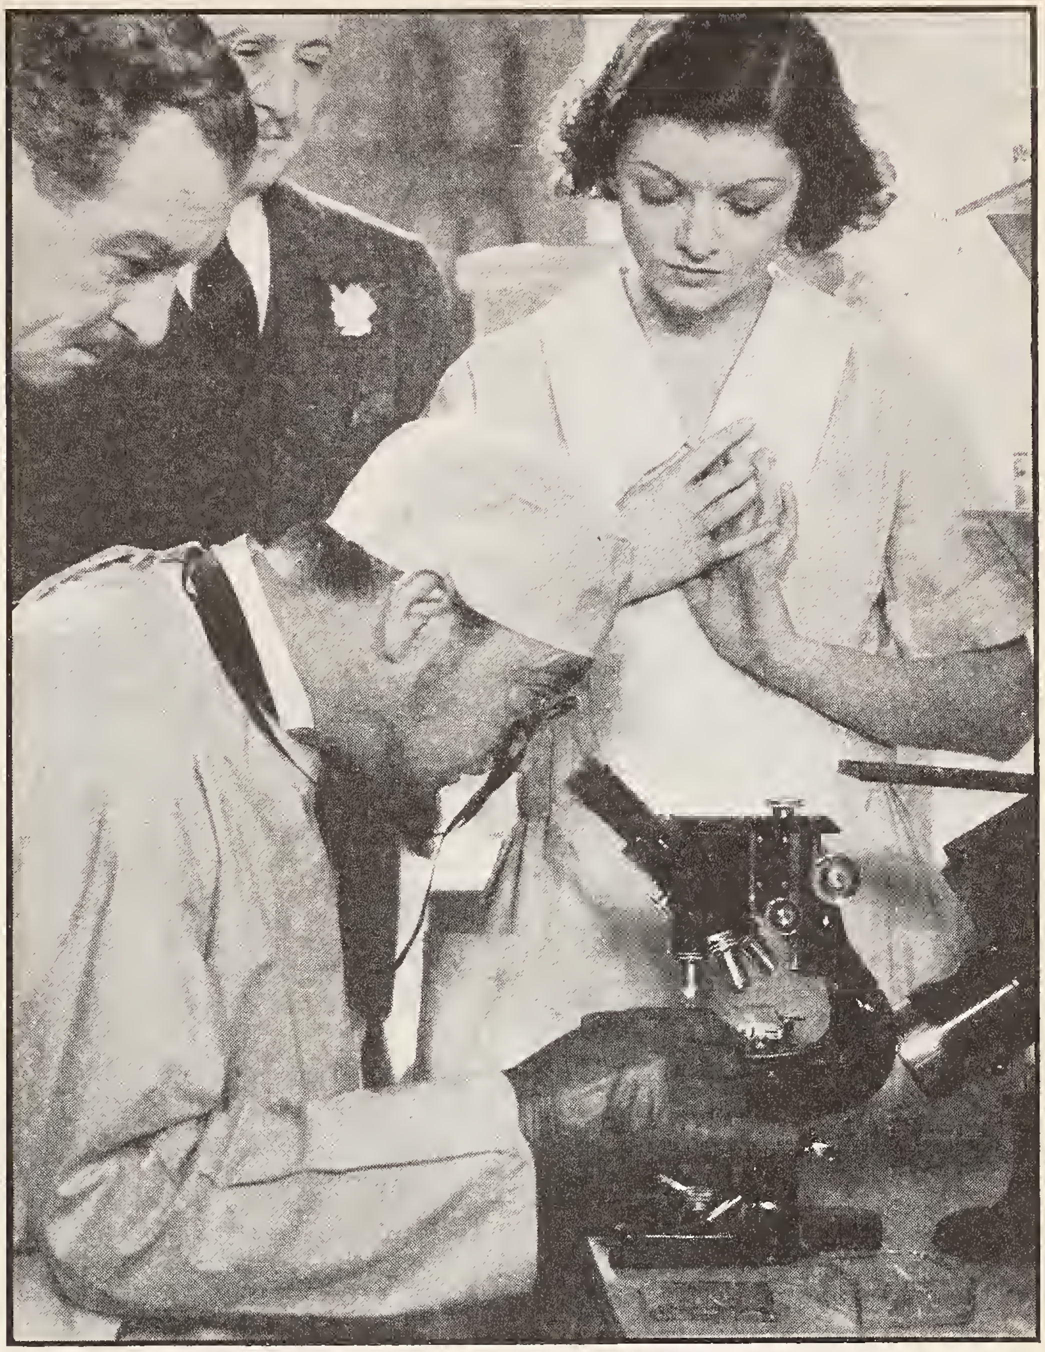
What, you ask, happens to the cover? Heather collapses it as she would a drinking cup and slips it into her pocket! Which solves the problem of whether to carry an umbrella or not in excellent fashion. One like that is an asset to any costume.

● It's nice to have a feather in your cap—particularly this season! You should see Ann Harding's. She has a brown antelope beret with a wide-awake feather whirligig directly in front. Chic!

And Norma Shearer has an entire hat of feathers—curled gray ostrich to match her ostrich boa. And does Norma look divine in gray! Her hat is the smartly defiant kind that parks over the right eye and it's very small. The boa swirls around her shoulders adding emphasis to a gray wool afternoon frock.

● "Ensemble" has taken on a new meaning. It's gloves now that serve to stress some note in your costume. And very effectively they do it—as in the case of Sharon Lynne's new black velvet dinner outfit. The puffs on her sleeves are of ermine so she wears black velvet gloves with an ermine edge on the cuff.

Patricia Ellis goes distinctly Spanish caballero in her "after five" frock. Her black sailor of shiny velvet with its narrow crown has a delightful swagger air that is accented by the matching gauntlets. They flare up high on her arm and are caught by rhinestone buttons exactly like the one on her hat.



John Barrymore, Myrna Loy and other players in "Topaze"

"Amazing, Professor, simply amazing!"

Assistant: "And do you really mean to say you've isolated the wotzitoyuh bacteria at last?"

Professor: "Yes, indeed, Miss Hoozis, this is the marvelous germ which has made our patient so joyful, jocular, happy, and generally delighted with life."

Assistant: "Where does the germ come from, professor?"

Professor: "Well, it's a singular thing, but we are able to locate it only in the bloodstreams of readers of

FILM FUN

The Screen's Only Humor Magazine!

P. S. How's your own bloodstream today? Better see your newsdealer right away!

1¢ A WEEK
for deep lustrous
WAVES..!

NEW! Hollywood Method
Costs Less . . . Lasts Longer!

THINK of it! A typical "movie star" wave only 1c a week. Done right at home, too, without fuss or bother. The new Hollywood wave. Simply mix a tablespoonful of Stylset in half a cup of hot water Dip comb in and apply to hair. Then merely set your waves. You will be amazed at the lovely, lasting results. Watch flat, straggly hair come to life in soft, alluring waves. Greaseless, non-alcoholic. 10c buys a big 4 oz. bottle. Garry & Co., 104 5th Ave., N. Y. City.

STYLSET sold at 5 & 10¢ stores 10¢

NO MORE PAINFUL BANDAGES

No more bandage that sticks and hurts. Over a million people use SEALTEX because it will not stick to skin or hair and requires no pins or tying—sticks only to itself. 10c, 25c and 50c sizes in blue and white package. All Kresge stores or mailed postpaid.

The SealTex Corporation, 936-46 W. Chicago Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Sticks only to itself

SEALTEX

Cash Daily Making Do-Nuts!

BIG PROFITS in Your Own Business at Home

You can make steady, daily profits, more than double your cost, making electric-baked, GREASELESS do-nuts at home with the Ringer Electric Do-Nut Baker. It makes delicious, large do-nuts that SELL!

"I bake from 75 to 144 dozen do-nuts a day. Have 10 people working for me. Everybody is crazy about the whole-wheat do-nuts." Mrs. Peter Barksdale, Virginia. "We already have a nice restaurant and store trade built up." M. W. Palmer, Pa. "In a town of about 3,000, we increased our sales from 50 dozen the first of the week to 200 dozen the last of the week." Mrs. Flora D. Lane, Iowa.

No Canvassing Grocers, drug stores, lunch counters buy all you make. Many operators have regular routes to private customers or sell by boys.

FREE PLAN shows you how to start this fine-paying repeat business. No experience needed. Recipes furnished for plain and many fast-selling fancy Do-Nuts. $25 starts you, total investment less than $60. Begin at home in your spare time. Send a post-card today for full information. No obligation, no salesman will call.

Ringer Do-Nut Company

303 Main Street N.E.,
Minneapolis, Minn.

Hollywood's Baby Genius

(Continued from page 17)

TAKE the miracle of Baby Le Roy's life. If an old-time saint had done for this child what the studios did, they would have statues of him and a day set apart for him.

There was in Los Angeles a young widow, hardly more than a child herself. She could get no work to do; her parents could find no work for months. In her despair she went to the Salvation Army Home and lived upon its charity for the first seven months of her baby's life. Then her father and mother found employment and were able to take their child and their child's child under their humble roof. The prospects were not good for any of these four obscure victims among the millions on millions of the depression's victims.

Then Paramount decided to put on a picture called "A Bedtime Story." It concerned Maurice Chevalier and a little orphan left in his car. The company thought it would be an idea to have a real orphan play the rôle. They sent word to all the philanthropic organizations in the city to send in their orphans. The Salvation Army people remembered the Winebrenners, mother and son, who had left the home six weeks before.

Nearly two hundred babies were snowed down upon the Paramount studio. Baby Le Roy chanced to be the first one photographed. Some mysterious power made him so memorable that he could not be crowded aside by the throng of infants. He was chosen. What a miracle of luck! What a lightning stroke of selection! What a needle in a haystack of needles!

The company not only gave him—or rather, his mother, as his trustee—a fine salary, but also an endowment insurance that will take care of his college education when he reaches that far off state of comparative senility—and heaven send that he may!

So the child was whisked from the depths of obscurity to a co-starring rôle with the international favorite, Chevalier. The two of them made so fascinating a team that each supported the other.

There have been countless infants on the screen, chuckled at and forgotten; but something about Le Roy Winebrenner has seized the heart of the world. He is remarkably amenable to suggestion and devoid of tantrums at critical moments, which endears him to the directors and stars who know what agonies a recalcitrant child can inflict on a company and what appalling expense he can inflict. A child that will not behave before a camera is like a little Nero fiddling while money burns. Baby Le Roy is interested in everything and something of a mimic. He is not easily thrown into those spasms of noisy wrath that infants are prone to—spasms so violent that first one fears they will choke to death and then that by some chance they will not.

BUT the ease with which he was camera-broken was only the negative side of his genius. The thing that made him a golden child and led the company to sign him up for a long term of years at a gorgeous salary was his amazing appeal to audiences. He reeks with personal magnetism, and if you can explain that miracle please let me know, for it is an increasing mystery to me.

Of course, all babies are wonderful and quite beyond explaining. In their happier moments, practically every baby that is healthy and normally built is pleasant to hold and hug.

There have been prodigies of beauty and intellect, infants that spoke Latin at three, and gave concerts at four and so on. But Baby Le Roy is too young to show whether he is going to be a genius in music or foreign languages at an early age. Except for a few words, all language is foreign to him and those delightful glugging sounds, those purling laughters and tinkling chuckles are a foreign language to his listeners.

So far as I can figure it out after an hour or two of the society of this dazzlingly famous world-figure, his power is in his unusual usualness, his amazing averageness. He is none of those unearthly little angels that we sometimes see, who got their eyes of blue out of the skies as they came through. He has on his shoulders none of those ancient philosopher heads that babies sometimes reveal. He is just a fine upstanding lad of his years, as good-looking as a healthy child might be, tremendously like other boys of his age. He is the great Everychild.

Parents who see him do not feel humbled or ashamed of their own output. With their normal prejudices in favor of home industries they can nudge each other and say, "Our baby is as good as that. Our baby could do as well. Our baby has an equal right to fame and fortune!" On the screen he does no acrobatic feats or sleight-of-hand tricks to make ordinary parents hang their heads over their own ordinary creations. He awakens no jealousy, sends nobody home in chagrin.

Baby Le Roy waddles and rolls, chuckles and howls, pouts or smiles, laughs or yawns, sleeps or wakes, toddles on typical little drunken feet or flops on a typical little bottom just as the rest of us did when we were beginners in life, just as the vast majority of children do now. Therefore he sums up childhood.

Millions follow him with their eyes, millions gasp when he sits down hard, millions laugh when he smashes somebody's watch, or simply utters some such magic incantation as "Gljmpph!" or "Wrlmks!" or however you spell it.

For those who wish to know how a monarch of such multi-millionarish power spends his time, this daily schedule of his life will give you a peek behind the young man's throne.

He awakens at six o'clock. He gets his first bottle immediately. At 6:45 he has his bath. Then he gets breakfast—or knows the reason why! Cream of wheat, or well-cooked oatmeal with milk. He plays outdoors in the sun till ten, at which time he is served a cocktail of plain orange juice. This makes him sleepy, so he naps till noon. When he awakens, he has lunch: Spinach and carrots, and stringbeans or a baked potato. The menu offers a choice of desserts—apple sauce, cooked pears, peaches or apricots. Most of this is eaten with exquisite manners—only a little of it landing on the floor.

The afternoon is divided between play, a bottle, and two hours' sleep. A sponge bath at four-thirty, followed by afternoon tea of crackers or zwiebach. More play—till six—and then dinner of chicken broth and a vegetable and to bed promptly at seven, with another eight-ounce night-cap.

And when the baby is working, this schedule is followed as closely as possible. After breakfast, he rides to work in a studio car. He works for an hour in the morning and an hour in the afternoon—hours broken up so that he shall not be under the lights more than seven minutes at a time. Between scenes he is taken outside to play. He has his regular morning and afternoon nap and his regular meals no matter who says what about the shooting schedule. And, when he's working, he must be home in bed at six-fifteen.

Baby LeRoy is as faultless as a human child has a right to be. He goes about his work and does it well. He takes good care of his mamma, who takes good care of him. He has countless customers and gives them far more than their money's worth. He makes all babies more lovable, more desirable, and doubtless in innumerable unimaginable ways eases the way and improves the life of his little fellow citizens plodding across the twilight land between being Nobody and Somebody.

A child is so helpless that it is only fair when the world is helpless before a child like this one. Baby Le Roy is adorable because he sums up perfectly an era in human existence.

Schopenhauer said something to the effect that the things we learn before we are eight years old are so vast, so important, that everything we learn afterward is petty and inconsequential. Perhaps that is why, when a little child walks through a story of grown-ups threshing about in their complicated spider webs, he seems so magnificent, so important, so mysterious in his complete aloofness.

Baby Le Roy never lets the majesty of that rôle fall from him. He is the visiting stranger from a larger world.

And so I say—long may his didies wave over this world!

What Stars Would You Like to Meet?

(Continued from page 59)

darling feel that he was having a good time doing it.

Claudette Colbert—because I had just about decided that she wasn't getting the roles which did her justice. I was beginning to feel disappointed in her—when along she came with her swell, natural and likeable performance in "Three Cornered Moon." I took it all back. Why, the girl is a superb comedienne! A couple of bravos, Claudette.

Mae West—because I honestly didn't believe that they could transfer her from the stage to the screen without spoiling her or losing some of her appeal. I sat in the front row when "Diamond Lil," was playing on the New York stage. And clapped till my hands were sore. And I was afraid, when she went to Hollywood, that they'd prissify her—tone her own. Well, Mae wouldn't let 'em, even if they wanted to—which they don't. And another reason I'd like to meet her—she's had such a colossal influence on figures and clothes. And, speaking of colossal, it reminds me that I'd like to meet——

Jimmy Durante—because everyone who does know him seems to like him so much and finds him such a unique person. I liked him a lot on the stage but I've decided I like him even better on the screen. Hotcha-cha-cha!

Aline MacMahon—because I believe she has the kind of sense of humor that's worth traversing a couple of counties to find. She seems real, too—and that goes for her unshaved eyebrows and her perfectly natural, unbobbed hair, as well as for her personality.

Karen Morley—because she's so un-Hollywood. I like her work in pictures immensely. It's always intelligent and it isn't lacking in glamor, either. I like the way she wears blonde wigs in her pictures—and keeps her own hair its original shade of plain brown. I like the way she had her baby—without a lot of publicity and pother.

Helen Hayes—because I have always held her very high in my estimation as a stage star. And because the motion pictures have in no way dimmed her exquisite light. She has one of the most charming little faces it has ever been my good fortune to look upon. I believe her to be a rational human being, despite her great gift—or maybe because of it.

FRANCHOT TONE—because, as I said before, he reminds me of my first beau. This is a woman's reason, but I'll bet a baker's dozen of nice round ginger cookies that it is the reason behind a great many women fans' vote for favorite male players.

Ralph Bellamy—because he has such a nice face. And because he is so very un-Hollywood, too.

Robert Young—because he seems content to make haste slowly in his career. He plays supporting roles, does

BE IRRESISTIBLE
USE IRRESISTIBLE* PARFUM
IRRESISTIBLE
JOUBERT • PARFUMEUR
FIFTH AVENUE • NEW YORK
* PURSE SIZE AT YOUR FIVE AND TEN CENT STORE

FREE CLASS & CLUB PIN CATALOG
EMBLEMS BASTIAN
Shows over 300 handsome, smart, up-to-the-minute designs. Many color Illustrations. Styles to meet taste of every club, class, school or society.
RBI 35¢ UP
LOWEST PRICES-BIGGEST CHOICE-QUALITY MADE
Money-back guarantee covers every item we make. Deal with the firm that has led for 37 years and be sure of complete satisfaction.
Write today for our big FREE catalog
Bastian Bros. Co., 92 Bastian Bldg., Rochester, N.Y. 34

More than Skin-Deep Beauty with RADIO GIRL PERFUME and POWDER

YOUR make-up is not complete without the unseen beauty of RADIO GIRL PERFUME. Its exquisite fragrance accents your personality, as lipstick accents the beauty of your face. . . Now, every girl can have this added charm. Though RADIO GIRL is a truly French odeur, because it is compounded in this country, it is sold at a price anyone can afford. . . RADIO GIRL POWDER, too, is lovely and flattering. Try the new Dermatone shade—it blends with every type from blonde to brunette. GET YOUR FREE SAMPLE.

Use this COUPON for FREE SAMPLE
M12
BELCO CO., St. Paul, Minn.
Send me FREE Regular Size Radio Girl Perfume and Trial Size Radio Girl Face Powder. I am enclosing 10c (coin or postage) to cover cost of mailing.
Name............................
Address............................
City............................State..............
(Print name and address plainly please.)

RESINOL SOAP
RESINOL

Resinol Helped My Skin in 3 Days

"When I decided to try Resinol Soap and Ointment, my complexion was a sight from pimples and blackheads. I had a horrid, muddy looking skin and when I used powder it looked even worse. After three days use of the Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, I could see an improvement. Now all my friends tell me how well my skin looks." (Signed)—Mrs. M. N.* *Name on Request. St. Louis, Mo.

Does your skin annoy or embarrass you? Then get Resinol Ointment and Soap from any druggist today. You will doubtless find, as thousands of others have, that this simple treatment can help you.

For a free sample, and copy of skin treatment booklet, write Resinol, Dept. 1-C, Baltimore, Maryland.

BECOME AN EXPERT ACCOUNTANT

Executive Accountants and C. P. A.'s earn $3,000 to $15,000 a year. Thousands more are needed. We train you thoroughly at home in spare time for C. P. A. examinations or executive accounting positions. Previous bookkeeping knowledge or experience unnecessary. Training given by C. P. A.'s. Write for free book, "Accountancy, the Profession That Pays," and learn about opportunities in this growing profitable field.

LaSalle Extension University, Dept. 12318-H, Chicago
The School That Has Trained Over 1,200 C. P. A.'s

LEARN
Piano, Violin, Cornet, Trumpet, Mandolin, Guitar, Banjo, Organ, Accordion, Saxophone, Clarinet

EASY HOME METHOD—new, fast way for beginners. Makes you accomplished in amazingly short time. 300,000 enthusiastic students. Low cost; easy terms. Satisfaction guaranteed. Free Catalog gives full details.

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC
Dept. 568 702 East 41st Street, Chicago

Stay Sweet with "HUSH" Cream DEODORANT
PREVENTS ALL BODY ODORS

Quick and easy to use.... Absolutely pure. cooling and soothing—non-irritating. FOR UNDERARM PERSPIRATION.

If your favorite toilet goods counter cannot supply you, write for handbag size, 10c. enclosing stamps or coin.
10c SIZE AT MOST 10c STORES

25c 50c

HUSH CO. 116 Market St., Phila., Pa.

I DISCOVERED a NEW Way to REDUCE

Surplus Fat Goes Without Severe Exercise or Starvation. Easy! Safe!

"My weight was a joke to my friends. But it wasn't funny to me. Now it's my turn to laugh and be happy—thanks to SLENDO Herb Tea."—This new, different tea, blended from pure medicinal herbs and roots, is just the thing for overweight people tired of freak diets and ineffective methods. By gently correcting body functions, it harmlessly reduces accumulation of excess fat. Brew it like ordinary tea. Delicious hot or iced. You'll say there's nothing like it!

Sample 10¢ Just send name and address together with 10c for liberal trial package of SLENDO Herb Tea and directions. Write today!

MODERN MEDICAL CO.
1420 So. Halsted St., Dept. N-2 Chicago, Ill.

them well, and is improving steadily in each succeeding picture. You never hear of him rowing with his studio for money or more prominence.

Charles Ruggles—because he reminds me of Mr. Milquetoast of comic-strip fame and has, at the same time, the saving grace of great charm. Whenever I am feeling rather low in the mind and sunk in the soul, I search the newspapers for a Charles Ruggles picture. I believe that he has what all really great comedians must have to be great. That is, the ability, to make you laugh with a little catch in your throat. Remember "Poppa Loves Momma"?

Jimmie Dunn—because he's such a likeable young scamp. One has the feeling, like Aunt Polly in "Tom Sawyer," that's he probably up to the most devilish mischief while he's standing there with such a cherubic look on his face. I have the idea that Master Jimmy would drive one crazy ninety-eight percent of the time. But when it comes to a show-down, I'll bet the lad is right there with whatever you need, whether it's money, medical aid or matches.

Roland Young—because he is alone in his class of brilliant, flawless underplaying. And because he collects penguins. So do I. And I bet he'd give his eye teeth for the two I carry in my pocketbook. They're carved and painted wood and so small you can't see them without your glasses.

Jean Hersholt—because I have never seen him play a part that he didn't do to perfection. Any part he plays always stands out.

Madge Evans—because she's so very pretty and because she is coming along so fast and so well in roles that are never sensational. It's darn hard to play sweet, straight parts, you know, and make them mean a lot.

Loretta Young—because she's so very pretty, too. And because she has grown so rapidly—professionally, I mean. Why, it's actually difficult to remember that a short time ago she was just another one of Hollywood's pretty ingenues.

Charlie Chaplin—because I almost did meet him, once. And I wrote a story about that "almost." And I would like to know how near I came to the truth in my surmises about him in that story.

Marion Davies—because I have a fancy that she would be as fine and stimulating as she is a performer.

Jean Harlow—because I'd like just to sit and look at her. And because those who know her say how regular and un-sirenish she is, and I'd like to see for myself.

And, now—well, I thought I'd be able to conquer it, but I see that I can't. I might as well confess that I'd like to meet——

Greta Garbo—because it's so difficult. Because it can't be done. Because I don't give a couple of hoots or tinker's you-know-whats about this mystery stuff. And because I have an idea that if one could meet her she'd probably be pretty regular, after all. And because everyone wants to, and because it's a good idea, I think, to have one ambition which you know can't be fulfilled. Still, why not?

And it so happens that I'd like to meet the people I have already met all over again. I haven't space to name them all but there are a few and the reasons why I'd like to see them a second time.

John Barrymore, whom I met over twenty years ago; John Boles, because he was so darned nice to me; Robert Montgomery, in order to tell him what a perfectly superb performance he turned in "When Ladies Meet"; Marie Dressler, because to meet her once is to wish you'd meet her just about every day of your life—she gets under your skin, does Miss Dressler. Gary Cooper, to see how much he has changed since he came back from that big game hunting trip and because he's a weakness of mine, anyway.

Lee Tracy, because he's probably that nice he'd remember me from last time, being a courteous young man, and that would be highly unusual; Dorothy Jordan, to tell her how she astonished and interested me in "Bondage"; Mary Pickford, because I'm tired of having them write slush and sob stuff about her; she's too big a person. She is a person who can be self-contained and is. And if I'm any judge, she doesn't rate pity but three cheers and a tiger and all our loyalty and admiration. And, of course, I'd like to meet again Jimmy Cagney, the gentleman with a gorgeous punch.

And all the others. I am very like Oliver Twist. I keep on howling for Moore—Dickie Moore, of course. And that reminds me, Mr. Editor, isn't there any chance, ever, that you will let me interview Baby LeRoy. I talk his language. I'm sure we'd get along.

Hollywood Merry-Go-Round

(Continued from page 69)

a part in it was killed. Clark Gable has been ill. The studio strike was on and some bad film—which has to be re-made, of course, was shot. And to cap the climax, just when everything was going smoothly, Joan sprained her ankle and couldn't dance for a week.

But Joan keeps on living a simple and a quiet life. Not so the rest of Hollywood. Somehow or other there is more going out and dressing up and putting on the dog in Hollywood than ever before.

THE Colony Club is the last word. Into the beautiful, rambling old building—once someone's gorgeous home—where it is located, all of the stars come at some time or other. The place is open from afternoon until far, far into the night. It is very swank and very smart. If anyone becomes too noisy he is gently eased out by a bouncer attired ever so correctly in dinner clothes!

One of the most charming homes in town is the entirely made over one of Dick Arlen and Jobyna Ralston at Toluca Lake. They had to do something fine to house that fine baby of theirs—a chuckling little angel who looks exactly like Paul Whiteman before he got thin. I told Jobyna I thought he looked like Paul and I said it with my hand on the door knob. I expected to have an early American lamp come crashing around my head, thrown by the irate mother.

Instead Jobyna laughed. "And sometimes," she said, "he looks a little like Joe E. Brown."

The night I was at the Arlens', Bing Crosby and his wife were there and into the festivities walked Mr. Ralston, Jobyna's father—a little gentleman from Tennessee who doesn't know one picture star from another. He calls Gary Cooper "that fellow with the long legs" and Bing Crosby is known to him as "Bimg."

Suddenly he turned to Crosby and said, "You know, Bing, the South 'whupped' the North."

Startled, Bing answered, "But how do you figure that Mr. Ralston?"

"Well. We 'whupped' all the battles."

"What about Gettysburg?" Bing asked.

That stopped Mr. Ralston for a minute. And then he said, "We were hungry! Besides, what does a fellow who sings over the radio with a cold in his head know about history?"

There's a grand new game being played in Hollywood. Try it out at your next party.

One person goes out of the room—as one person seems always to do in games—while the others decide upon a certain character. But I'm getting confused. Perhaps it would be better if I told you just how we played it at the Arlens.

Dick Arlen went out of the room. We decided that the character he must guess would be Charles Laughton. With a loud whistle we called Dick back and accused him of listening at the door. He swore he didn't, so the game progressed.

"If this person were an automobile," said Dick, "what sort of an automobile would he be?"

"A huge touring car, well upholstered," was the answer given by Dixie Lee, I believe.

Then Dick went on to the next person.

"If this person were a kind of wall paper, what would the pattern of it be?"

"It would have a design of cupids and pigs," was the answer from the one asked.

And that's how the questions go. You interpret a person in the terms of the inanimate things he reminds you of.

If this person were a city what city would he be? If a kind of dog what kind of dog? If an animal—a newspaper—a restaurant, etc., etc.? The trick is not to confuse the character's likes and tastes with what he reminds you of. It's also lots of fun when the character is one of the members of the party and right in the room. Once I was "It" and Dick Arlen was the character. I asked Bing Crosby if this person were a day what sort if day would he be. "The second of March at Cape Cod," Bing said—which is a perfect description of Dick Arlen.

GARBO has further shut herself off from the world—even the studio world. She now has a private flight of stairs leading to her dressing room and at the entrance of the stairs is a gate which is locked! Well, the other day an extra girl was coming off the set. The gate was locked. Not knowing that the stairs were reserved for Garbo, she started to walk up them, going to the large extras' dressing-room.

An assistant director yelled for her to come down when she was half way up.

"Listen," she said, "I don't care if these stairs lead to heaven. I can still get through to the extras' dressing room. I'm so tired my back bone is jelly and you, nor Garbo, nor God can make me come back now that I'm half way up."

She had just finished this speech when she looked up and saw Garbo. For a minute she was terrified and then Garbo laughed. "Atta girl," said the Garbo. "Tell him some more." So a little extra girl went over the private stairs to her own humble dressing room.

The most excitement in Hollywood is out on the lot where they are shooting "The Prizefighter and the Lady." Max Baer and Carnera are out there doing their stuff—and you've never seen so many cauliflower ears all gathered together in one place. All of their pals are watching the fight. Baer and the champ are the best of friends and clown all day long. One day Carnera said to his friend, Bull Montana, "How can I fight this guy, Max? I like him!"

Can She Beat the Chaplin Jinx?

(Continued from page 67)

In a bungalow not far from the studio, some months ago, lay Edna Purviance, her death apparently a few hours away. An acute heart attack had laid her low. Shadows of an afternoon sun going down at sea seemed to cast a benediction upon the life of the beautiful young woman. From 1916 until 1921 she had played leads with Chaplin, and in 1922 was starred in "A Woman of Paris," with Adolphe Menjou, produced and directed by Charlie, himself. She was a favorite of the comedian.

"We've done about all we can," said

NOT NEW SHOES
Just old ones dyed with Realshine DYE

REALSHINE
Realshine
BLACK SHOE DYE

Shoes last twice as long NOW! One coat of marvelous REALSHINE DYE makes old summer shoes look like NEW Fall ones. So easy and inexpensive, too.

AT YOUR 5 & 10¢ STORE 10¢ ONE COAT does the TRICK

REALSHINE CO. Inc. GALVESTON, TEXAS

350 LITTLE BLUE BOOKS 5¢ EACH
Send postcard for our free catalogue. Thousands of bargains. Address:
LITTLE BLUE BOOK CO., Catalogue Dept., Desk 151, GIRARD, KANSAS

Save money on shoe bills. Easy! Just spread on So-Lo. Dries tough overnight. Outwears ordinary leather. Fix the family's shoes at home.
"So-Lo saves me $3.00 a month for shoes alone" writes Mrs. C. Johnson, Altoona, Pa.
So-Lo also fixes anything of leather, rubber or cloth. — hot water bottles, rubber boots, footballs, etc.
over 4 million satisfied users.
GUARANTEED!
So-Lo MENDS THE SOLE FOR 1¢
Tear out this ad—get So-Lo at any Kresge, Kress, Woolworth or other 5 & 10c store, or any hardware store.

Sudden Change to COMPLEXION BEAUTY
Amazed Her Friends

But she never told them why. For years her skin was dull and sallow. Pimples, blotches and blemishes caused by constipation marred her chance of beauty. But not any more.

Stuart's calcium wafers worked their wonders for her. Gentle internal cleansers—they quickly help to remove the cause: intestinal stasis and poisonous wastes that dull the eye, blotch the skin and stupefy the mind and personality.

A five day test of Stuart's Calcium Wafers will often work a wondrous change: soft, silken skin clear and free from faults! Bright, sparkling eyes! Alert and vigorous in mind and body! No wonder that so many thousands of people find that an occasional sugar-coated Calcium Wafer (Stuart's) is all the tonic that they need.

STUART'S CALCIUM WAFERS
AT ALL DRUG STORES: 10c and 60c

FREE SAMPLE COUPON

A sample package—sufficient to prove the value to you of Stuart's Calcium Wafers—will be sent to you, if you mail this coupon to the Stuart Co., Dept. 32-E Marshall, Mich.

Name ....

Address ....

Town ....

FADED GRAY HAIR

Women, men, girls with faded, gray, streaked hair, shampoo and color your hair at the same time with my new French discovery—"SHAMPO-KOLOR." No fuss or muss. Takes only a few minutes to merely shampoo into your hair any natural shade with "SHAMPO-KOLOR." No "dyed" look, but a lovely natural, most lasting color; unaffected by washing or permanent waving. Free Booklet. Monsieur L. P. Valligny, Dept. 39, 23 W. 30th St., New York City.

Be Your Own MUSIC Teacher

LEARN AT HOME

to play by note, Piano, Violin, Ukulele, Tenor Banjo, Hawaiian Guitar, Piano Accordion, Saxophone or any other instrument —or to sing. Wonderful new method teaches in half the time. Simple as A B C. No "numbers" or trick music. Cost averages only few cents a day. Over 600,000 students.

FREE BOOK Write today for Free Booklet and Free Demonstration Lesson explaining this method in detail. Tell what your favorite instrument is and write name and address plainly. Instruments supplied when needed, cash or credit.

U. S. School of Music, 14412 Brunswick Bldg., N. Y. C.

$2.15
29x4.40-21
12 MONTH WRITTEN GUARANTY BOND WITH EACH TIRE
MEMBER NRA
FREE! TIRE GAUGE
WITH EACH ORDER FOR 2 TIRES
TAKE TIRE PRESSURE THRU SIDE WALL of TIRE
NO FUSS—NO DIRT

NEW LOW PRICES GOOD YEAR Firestone—Goodrich U. S. AND OTHERS

LOWEST PRICES ON EARTH

TIRE USERS by the thousands all over the U. S. A. vouch for the LONG, HARD SERVICE, under severest road conditions of our standard brand Tires reconstructed by the ORIGINAL SECRET YORK PROCESS. OUR 17 YEARS IN BUSINESS makes it possible to offer tires at LOWEST PRICES in history with 12 month guarantee.

Don't Delay—Order Today

BALLOON Tires

Size Rim	Tires	Tubes
29x4.40-21	$2.15	$0.85
29x4.50-20	2.35	0.85
30x4.50-21	2.40	0.85
28x4.75-19	2.45	0.95
29x4.75-20	2.50	0.95
29x5.00-19	2.85	1.05
30x5.00-20	2.85	1.05
28x5.25-18	2.90	1.15
29x5.25-19	2.95	1.15
30x5.25-20	2.95	1.15
31x5.25-21	3.25	1.15
28x5.50-18	3.35	1.15
29x5.50-19	3.35	1.15
30x6.00-18	3.40	1.15
31x6.00-19	3.40	1.15
32x6.00-20	3.45	1.25
33x6.00-21	3.65	1.25
32x6.50-20	3.75	1.35

CORD Tires

Size	Tires	Tubes
30x3	$2.25	$0.65
30x3½	2.35	0.75
31x4	2.95	0.85
32x4	2.95	0.85
33x4	2.95	0.85
34x4	3.25	0.85
32x4½	3.35	1.15
33x4½	3.45	1.15
34x4½	3.45	1.15
30x5	3.65	1.35
33x5	3.75	1.45
35x5	3.95	1.55

All Other Sizes

DEALERS WANTED

SEND ONLY $1.00 DEPOSIT with each tire ordered. We ship — balance C. O. D. Deduct 5 per cent if cash in full accompanies order.

ALL TUBES BRAND NEW — GUARANTEED

Tires failing to give 12 months' service replaced at half price.

YORK TIRE & RUBBER CO., Dept. 1812A
3855-59 Cottage Grove Ave. Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Kurt Behne. "Now we can only wait and hope." Then——

"She will live," Dr. Behne eventually announced.

Possibly she sighed, wearily. So many things had come into her life since she and Charlie had known each other. In the first place, "The Sea Woman," directed by Joseph von Sternberg for Chaplin, in which she played the leading role, was shelved and never saw the light of day.

"Throw it to the wolves!" exclaimed Chaplin when he saw it.

Now at thirty-four, the name of Edna Purviance seldom is mentioned. No specific thing can be pointed to which explains why she so completely faded from the film firmament. She stepped aside and watched her master go up and on until he became undisputed, reigning comedian of the world. But that invisible "jinx" got her.

NEXT to the Chaplin fold came the wistful, big-eyed Georgia Hale, a St. Joseph, Mo., girl, to give a splendid performance in Chaplin's "The Gold Rush." When the picture was exhibited, other producers in Hollywood almost tore down the doors to Chaplin's offices to get permission to sign Miss Hale. She was naive, natural, exquisite —a discovery. Chaplin dangled her tantalizingly at the end of a string for a while, but eventually let Paramount sign her.

Six months later, the company believed it had made a mistake. The Georgia Hale under guidance of Chaplin, "the old master," was a different Georgia Hale from what Paramount found. Consequently, the option on her services was never exercised. She drifted over to "Poverty Row," and was cast in Trem Carr's Rayart picture, "The Gypsy of the North." On location at Big Bear Lake in the San Bernardino mountains a few days later, an automobile in which she was riding ran on to a thin spot in the ice and broke through. Only the quick action of a stunt man saved her from death.

The case of Lita Grey, of course, is widely known. Charlie married her and it cost him a million dollars to regain his freedom. Every foot of the film, "The Circus," in which Lita appeared, was burned. It cost a fortune, but no matter.

Besides the domestic grief Lita encountered, a hundred other troubles beset her. Her mother was divorced. Her grandfather, to whom she was devoted, died. Her reported engagements to Roy D'Arcy and Phil Baker went on the rocks. She became ill from ptomaine poisoning, her former butler mysteriously was murdered on the Utah desert, and in January, 1931, she hysterically reported to the New York police that, while in the company of Georges Carpentier, she was held up, kidnaped in her own car and robbed of jewelry valued at $25,000. Recently she was disbarred from exploiting the Chaplin children on the screen, and her own career was sunk. Was the jinx working?

There was Merna Kennedy, vivacious red-head who played the leading feminine role in "The Circus." Merna was a friend of Lita Grey. They took dancing lessons together. She was only eighteen and was appearing in a musical comedy when Chaplin met and seized upon her as exactly the type he was hunting.

AS in the case of Georgia Hale, the picture no sooner was released than there was a regular mob-rush of other producers to get Merna.

Universal Pictures got Merna and assigned her to the leading feminine role in "Broadway." She "got by" with the part and that was about all. She didn't exhibit the spark she showed in "The Circus," and the five-year contract was allowed to lapse at option-time.

Then the grief started. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer signed Merna for "The Song Writer," but before the first day was ended, dismissed her and wired to New York for Helen Johnson to come out post-haste by airplane. Next she was seen playing a supporting role in Constance Bennett's "Lady With a Past," for Pathé. After which, roles simply quit. The supply ran out. It seemed there were no more. In August 1931, at the end of her string, money gone, prospects almost nil, creditors pressing, Merna filed a voluntary petition of bankruptcy in the U. S. District Court, listing her liabilities at $4,868.56, and with not one cent of assets. She was "broke," nearly $5000 in debt—and in Hollywood!

On top of this came a broken romance. For Merna Kennedy and James Hall, Paramount's handsome leading man, fell in love—head over heels in love. One Los Angeles columnist wrote: "James Hall prefers red-heads. Merna Kennedy has red hair and she and Mr. Hall are one of the most engaged couples in Hollywood. They are seen everywhere together. It is not one of those sudden romances, for they have been keeping company for quite a spell, if you will pardon my colloquilism."

But "Jimmie" Hall had a wife, it developed. They had been separated three or four years, but nevertheless she existed. She was a singer, known on the stage as Irene Hamilton. In 1928, Jimmie had sought legal separation or divorce from her, but failed, and in November last year she had him arrested and extradited to New Haven, Conn., on a charge of desertion.

Naturally, little Merna Kennedy's love affair went haywire suddenly and violently, and she hit the long, long trail again, looking for studio work. She got a break in "Laughter in Hell," and recently signed for the lead opposite John Darrow in "The Big Chance," the first of a series of eleven Eagle Pictures.

RECENTLY, the red-head formally announced her engagement to Busby Berkeley, creator of dance ensembles for musical pictures at Warner Brothers, which may mean her permanent retirement from the screen. The wedding is expected some time this summer with a honeymoon in Honolulu. Let's hope the jinx is over!

Take the case of Virginia Cherrill, who had the feminine lead in Charlie's latest picture, "City Lights." Virginia had never appeared in a film when Chaplin "discovered" and signed her. Over family objections, she went to work.

Two years Virginia worked in "City Lights," developing the character of the blind flower girl which won such acclaim. As soon as the role was completed, she was snapped up by Fox Films on a year's contract, and as quickly unsnapped when the year was up. Fox directors couldn't develop the spark that Chaplin unearthed.

Back in the City of Broken Dreams, Miss Cherrill took up the quest for fame again. A year ago she was placed under contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, but has been given only two minor roles in that company's productions. No opportunity has been afforded her to appear again as the wistful, adorable character which distinguished her as the blind flower girl in "City Lights."

NOW comes Paulette Goddard with a smile on her face, defying the jinx and all the little jinxes attached to the Chaplin influence. She has a grin for their mere mention.

Paulette arrived in Hollywood a couple of years ago, a platinum blonde. She had left Great Neck, Long Island, at fifteen, to become a chorus girl in New York. At sixteen she was dancing in Ziegfeld's Follies. At seventeen she was playing a role in Archie Selwyn's "The Conquering Male." She was 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighed 110 pounds, typically a show girl. Edgar James Goddard of the Southern States Lumber Co., Asheville, N. C., saw Paulette and came under her spell. He married her to take her off Broadway. But she went too far off. Following a year's travel in Europe, she returned virtually a stranger to the lumberman, and they were divorced.

Paulette came to Hollywood, got a $75-a-week job at the Hal Roach studio and took a screen test for a better one at Universal, but failed. When Samuel Goldwyn was selecting his beauty chorus for Eddie Cantor's, "The Kid From Spain," he saw Paulette and gave her a position. It was while thus employed that she met Charlie Chaplin, and he began taking her places. Naturally, rumors of a new love in his life circulated rapidly, and when Paulette, leaving for New York one night by airplane, threw her arms about Charlie's neck and kissed him, the news was blazed to all corners of the world.

"We paid out about forty bucks for newspaper clippings at the rate of three cents a clip," said Al Reeves, general manager of the Chaplin Studio. "That was one kiss 'heard round the world.' "

Will Paulette encounter the Chaplin jinx? Is her association with him to be bounded with misfortunes and disappointments? The other Chaplin leading ladies saw glory fade into the mists and the fame they expected vanish.

Edna Purviance saw her screen aspirations smothered, her jewelry stolen and her health cracked. Georgia Hale drifted to obscure pictures made on Poverty Row, was nearly drowned in Big Bear lake and eventually dropped out entirely. Lita Grey saw her mother divorced, her grandfather die, her two engagements broken, her children barred from the screen, $25,000 worth of jewelry wrested from her by bandits and learned that her butler was murdered in lonely desert wastes of Utah. Merna Kennedy dropped from one engagement after another and finally went bankrupt with nearly $5000 in debts. Virginia Cherrill tumbled out of a car, her home was looted, her engagement broken and she started playing small parts.

Now it's Paulette Goddard's turn. How will she fare?

You make the prediction.

The Burden of Warner Baxter

(Continued from page 49)

thought he answered, "Courage and diplomacy. And I think I'd give diplomacy about two-thirds."

He feels that courage embraces all other fine qualities, because one must possess it in order to be honest, to remain loyal, to keep one's self-control. And diplomacy is so vastly important to him because without it one cannot be kind and helpful.

THERE was, for instance, the proud father who brought his little daughter to Warner Baxter for him to pass on her stage ability. The father was sure that she could be developed into a remarkable "movie child." After seeing her go through her bag of tricks, Warner found himself in a quandary. He couldn't bring himself to brutally tell the father that his child had nothing whatsoever to recommend her for the movies. But inasmuch as she actually did have a very sweet little singing voice, he praised that, and advised the father to train her for the concert stage and offered his help. In such ways he uses diplomacy.

He realizes the value of praise. He knows that it is often more helpful than the gift of money. So he is lavish in praising, where it is due. Perhaps that is because his own heart is a little comforted by appreciation. I had told him that I believed his public loved him. The weariness left his face for a moment and an eager interest showed in the tired eyes.

"Do they really, you think?" he asked hungrily. "One never knows, you see."

The sadness that smoulders within does not, however, prevent him from being a delightful companion. He has a ready wit and greatly appreciates humorous incidents and happenings.

BOBBY LOX HAIRPINS

are better because of their strong, permanent spring, carefully rounded ends, smooth, unbroken enamel inside as well as outside.

A SCOLDING LOCKS PRODUCT

Scolding Locks Corp., App.eton, Wis. MM3
Please send me free a regular 10c card of Bobby Lox Hairpins in the following colors: ....
Name..
Address.......................................
City.......................... State............
I usually buy in the store checked below:

☐ S. S. Kresge Co.
☐ S. H. Kress Co.
☐ W. T. Grant Co.
☐ G. C. Murphy Co.
☐ Scott Stores
☐ F. W. Woolworth Co.
☐ McLellan Stores
☐ McCrory Stores
☐ Grand-Silver Stores
☐ Neisner Bros.
☐ J. J. Newberry Co.

Send for 10¢ card FREE

NO JOKE TO BE DEAF

—Every Deaf Person Knows That

George P. Way made himself hear, after being deaf for 25 years, with Artificial Ear Drums--his own invention. He wore them day and night. They stopped head noises and ringing ears. They are invisible and perfectly comfortable. No one sees them. Write for his true story, "How I Got Deaf and Made Myself Hear". Also booklet on Deafness. Address

Artificial Ear Drum

GEORGE P. WAY, INC.
717 Hofmann Building Detroit, Michigan

REDUCE 3 LBS. A WEEK OR NO COST!

No pills or tablets, no starvation diets, no strenuous exercising, no salts. Send for free trial of Dain Tea. Just drink it with your meals. Watch ugly, unhealthy fat disappear. Your request for free trial brings trial supply by return mail and full $1.00 treatment which you may try under our 10-day refund guarantee. Try Dain Tea at our risk.

DAIN TEA CO., DEPT. C, BALTIMORE, MD.

Save ½ ON HOSIERY BILLS

Peds—cozy, concealed footlets, slipped under or over your sheerest hose, will end all cold feet worries. Peds—made of mercerized lisle, are worn by smart women everywhere for business, shopping, at home—for all winter activities, indoors or out! • Remember, too, Peds save mending—a fact every thrifty woman appreciates. Buy Peds today at the better 5c and 10c stores, or send 20c with correct stocking size to RICHARD PAUL, Inc., Cooper Bldg., Dept. M3, Los Angeles, Calif.

Peds
TRADE MARK REG.

ELASTIC EDGE
NON SLIP HEEL

—no more cold feet either!

20¢

THESE
Glamorous people

MEET THEM ALL IN THE DECEMBER RADIO STARS!

WALTER WINCHELL

What's the low-down on "the low-down man"? See "Walter Winchell's 'Enemies'" in December RADIO STARS.

BURNS & ALLEN

What does Gracie really think of George, and wish-washy—er—rather, vice-versa . . .' See "The Burns and Allen Double-Cross" in December RADIO STARS.

RUDY VALLEE

Another laurel for a master showman! See "For Distinguished Service" in December RADIO STARS.

JESSICA DRAGONETTE

Discover the real, the unpublicized Jessica. Read "The Girl Nobody Knows" in December RADIO STARS.

BERT LAHR

The amazing ups-and-downs of an extraordinary clown. See "He Was Radio's Biggest Flop" in December RADIO STARS.

Radio Stars
THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY RADIO MAGAZINE

Blackheads* pimples, acne vanish as if by magic after a few applications of famous Grace Lynn Acne Cream and Lynn-Tone. Leaves skin clear, lovely. Send no money. Pay postman only 98c plus postage for full treatment. Satisfaction guaranteed or money back. Send today.

GRACE LYNN TOILETRIES, Dept. B Evansville, Ind.

BOYS & GIRLS Earn Xmas Money

Write for 50 Sets St. Nicholas Christmas Seals. Sell for 10c a set. When sold send us $3.00 and you keep $2.00.
St. Nicholas Seal Co., Dept. 880-M.S., Brooklyn, N. Y.

WANTED STRONG MEN FOR THE MOVIES

Physical Culture Training won me a Movie Contract. Now 3,500 athletes are in pictures! Studios are clamoring for men with perfect Physiques . . . men with Physical Culture Training.

Free Trip to Hollywood

To meet this demand, I now offer YOU the chance to win Free Trip to Hollywood with Screen and Talkie Test. Through my home-training Physical Culture Course, I'll develop you into the kind of big, muscular HE-MAN the Studios are Seeking. Let me prove it. No obligation. Just mail coupon for Free Illustrated Book, telling about my low-price course, easy terms and Free Movie Contest.

Joe Bonomo, 230-F Bonomo Bldg., Hollywood, Calif.
Send me Free Book and details of your Course and Free Movie Contest. My age is ....
Name..
Street Address..
City.............................State..................

Laughingly, but with kindly understanding, he told me of a fan letter he had received from a woman in a hospital. She wrote that she would like to explain why she was thus confined. It seems that she, her sister and her husband had gone one evening to a Baxter picture. When the family returned home, the wife and sister raved so long and so enthusiastically over Warner, as the hero, that the husband could bear it no longer and finally hit his wife over the head with a poker. I believe Warner checked on this, and found it to be absolutely true.

Then there was the girl who, having struggled for months for an introduction, fell in a faint at his feet when the meeting finally took place. And still another girl who traveled half across the country to meet him, and when she did, was struck dumb, and found herself unable to speak a word.

I ASKED him if he felt that lending money often made the persons who received it one's enemies, by giving them an inferiority complex in one's presence.

And he replied, "I don't lend money, I give it usually. But even that sometimes destroys friendship. There is a man whom I have recently helped. He is a valued friend and I often visit him. But last week when I telephoned to say I would be unable to go to his house, he felt queer about it and thought it was because I didn't care to see him on account of the money. When, actually, I wanted very much to be with him."

I know that he has several times bought stories he knew he never could use, from unknown writers who have come to him, rather than turn them away empty-handed.

And then there was the man, also a writer, whose mother was ill, and who was bearing a great financial strain. Warner Baxter visited the mother at the hospital and left, as he went away, a check large enough to keep her in comfort for many months.

So long as there is hardship and misery in the world for others, Warner Baxter will continue to share it, to the exclusion of his own happiness. Things hit him too hard. He will never become hard-boiled. When his servant, a colored boy whom he had employed for a long time, was killed driving his car, Warner became actually ill and went to bed for two weeks. He still dislikes to go into a certain room in his house where the boy most frequently worked.

He receives the largest fan mail of any star at the Fox Studio. What is the reason for his tremendous appeal? I think I know the answer. He arouses the mother instinct in women, because, subconsciously, they are aware of his inner sadness. And men respect him for his manliness.

He has all the physical qualifications of the more glamorous men of the screen plus something else. An added maturity, an inner fineness. If you are very young and can react only to muscles, curls, dimples and sex-appeal, don't go to see a Baxter picture. He has all these things, to be sure (except, maybe, the curls), but they are submerged by his extraordinary mental attributes.

A rare soul, a sensitive soul—courageous and strong—but too keenly attuned to human suffering for his own good. He longs to laugh and be light of heart. But he cannot, while others weep. And so now you know why all the tragedy of the ages seems to look out at you from his kindly eyes.

Reviews—a Tour of Today's Talkies

(Continued from page 10)

THE BOWERY (Twentieth Century)

You'll Like It. Twentieth Century bows in with their first effort and it's something to be proud of. This talkie has the stuff that makes for real entertainment. The story, a more or less history of New York in the late Nineties, is interesting and very well told with such valiant troupers as Wallace Beery, George Raft, Fay Wray and Jackie Cooper making such characters as Chuck Connors and Steve Brodie live. None of these players have ever had better rôles, nor have they given such outstanding performances. The film rolls along at a snappy pace, contains some hearty laughs, some tears and a lotta pretty chorus gals.

You mustn't miss seeing "The Bowery." That goes for the kids, too.

EVER IN MY HEART (Warners)

Heavy Stuff. A slow but touching story of an American girl and a German boy whose marriage is sacrificed to the World War. Barbara Stanwyck marries Otto Krueger, a German. He becomes an American citizen and obtains a position as a college professor. Comes the war and, though he tries to be a loyal citizen, he loses his position. Poverty, sickness. Their little boy dies. Crushed, he leaves his wife and joins the German army. Later they meet in France. Barbara is serving in a relief unit and Otto is there as a spy. Torn between duty to her country and love for her man, Barbara poisons their wine and they die in one another's arms.

Both Barbara and Kreuger give splendid performances. Ralph Bellamy as "Jeff," who has loved Barbara since childhood, is also good. Not recommended for children.

SATURDAY'S MILLIONS (Universal)

Very good. Apropos of football season, here's a yarn of the gridiron that should please the fans. Robert Young, cocky young football star, looks upon the game as a racket. Leila Hyams loves him, but Bob prefers the company of a night club entertainer, Mary Doran. The eve of the big game, Mary and her husband try to frame him, but Bob fights his way out and plays next day handicapped by a broken hand. Although the game is lost, he is congratulated for his gameness and fine spirit. He gets next to himself and it's clinch for Leila and Bob.

Young does some fine work. Andy Devine as Bob's faithful room-mate, Mary Carlyle as Andy's patient sweetie and Johnny Mack Brown as the Captain, round out the cast. Swell for kids.

SOLITAIRE MAN (M-G-M)

Great. One of the smoothest and most thrilling mystery films to reach the theatre in a long time. Most of the action takes place in a cabin of an airplaine while crossing the English Channel. A band of jewel thieves—Herbert Marshall, May Robson, Elizabeth Allan and. Ralph Forbes—have pulled their last job and are bound for a farmhouse in Devonshire for peace and quiet. The strange and exciting things that happen before they get there will keep you glued to your seat until the end.

Marshall carries off the honors of the show, although Lionel Atwill as the villain, Mary Boland as the hysterical American tourist and Forbes as the frantic young man, all do marvelous work. Jack Conway deserves praise for a swell directorial job. He manages to keep the action always at top-notch speed in the narrow confines of a cabin airplane. If the kids like mysteries, this is the best.

THE WOMAN SPY (RKO)

A Pip. Constance Bennett's latest picture, with Gilbert Roland as her new leading man, is one of her best. Connie, herself, is probably at her very best.

The story is exciting, thrilling and romantic. It's a war picture dealing with the intelligence departments, which is a little out of the beaten track of the general war drama. Connie is a Russian spy; Roland an Austrian spy. They meet and fall desperately in love, without knowing each other's identity. Later, they learn they are sworn enemies. Follows the duty vs. love struggle, but this has a happy ending.

Connie is very convincing as the little Russian spy and is beautifully photographed. Edward Ellis is excellent as the cruel major. Worth seeing, but not exactly the type for children.

THE PRIVATE LIFE OF KING HENRY THE EIGHTH (United Artists)

Great Characterization. Charles Laughton grabs himself a plum in the rôle of lustful, rowdy King Henry VIII. The movie sticks to the private life of Henry and makes roaring entertainment from start to finish. It begins with Henry's second marriage to Ann Boleyn, her execution, and his third marriage to Jane Seymour. She dies in childbirth, and he marries Ann of Cleves. That ends in divorce. His next marriage is to Katharine, whom he loves but must behead because she is unfaithful. He winds up married to the bickering Katherine of Parr, his children's governess.

The cast, all English, gives grand support, but it's Laughton's picture. Treat yourself to an evening with him. As for the kids, well, maybe not.

STAGE MOTHER (M-G-M)

Marvelous Entertainment. A backstage story with a mother-love angle. Alice Brady is a vaudeville performer who has never quite clicked. She resolves that her daughter (Maureen O'Sullivan) shall benefit by her mistakes and become a great star. She trains her and before long daughter becomes a success, thanks to momma Alice. But not without sacrifice. When she falls in love with a young artist (Franchot Tone) Alice does a little blackmailing and practically forces her child into the arms of a millionaire. They settle for twenty-five grand and a trip to Europe. On the boat, Maureen receives a proposal of marriage from a young Lord (Phillips Holmes) and in a dramatic scene, renounces all bonds to her ambitious mother. However, in the end, Alice relents.

STATEMENT OF THE OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, CIRCULATION, ETC., REQUIRED BY THE ACT OF CONGRESS OF AUGUST 24, 1912,
Of MODERN SCREEN, published monthly at Dunellen, N. J., for October 1, 1933.

State of New York }
County of New York } ss.

Before me, a Notary Public in and for the State and county aforesaid, personally appeared Helen Meyer, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that she is the business manager of the MODERN SCREEN and that the following is, to the best of her knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management (and if a daily paper, the circulation), etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, embodied in section 411, Postal Laws and Regulations, printed on the reverse of this form, to wit:

1. That the names and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor, and business managers are: Publisher, George T. Delacorte, Jr., 100 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.; Editor, Ernest V. Heyn, 100 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.; Managing Editor, George T. Delacorte, Jr., 100 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.; Business Manager, Helen Meyer, 100 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

2. That the owner is: (If owned by a corporation, its name and address must be stated and also immediately thereunder the names and addresses of stockholders owning or holding one per cent or more of total amount of stock. If not owned by a corporation, the names and addresses of the individual owners must be given. If owned by a firm, company, or other unincorporated concern, its name and address, as well as those of each individual member, must be given.) Dell Publishing Company, Inc., 100 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.; George T. Delacorte, Jr., 100 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.; Margarita Delacorte, 100 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: (If there are more, so state.) None.

4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company but also, in cases where the stockholders or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by her.

5. That the average number of copies of each issue of this publication sold or distributed, through the mails or otherwise, to paid subscribers during the six months preceding the date shown above is: (This information is required from daily publications only.)

HELEN MEYER, Business Manager.
Sworn to and subscribed before me this 26th day of September, 1933.
MAY KELLEY,
Notary Public N. Y. County.
N. Y. County Clerk's No. 85.
N. Y. County Register's No. 5K278.
(My commission expires March 30, 1935.)

Will You Invest A Dime to discover a Priceless Beauty Secret?

Vivani tells you positively that you can get the same flattering effects from gorgeous Vivani face powder that sells for only 10c as from powders costing much more. Further, that no finer ingredients can be bought at any price. Invest a dime to discover this priceless beauty secret that will mean dollars of savings on make-up. Get a box of gorgeous Vivani from your 10c store. If they do not have it—send a dime in coin or stamps, together with the name of your dealer, to Benjamin Ansehl Co., 6700 Vernon Pl., St. Louis, Mo. The same offer applies to Vivani Creams, lotions, brilliantine, eye-lash and nail preparations.

VIVANI

Beauty preparations of finest quality at 10c

NEWS! CANARY OWNERS

The perfect food to keep your bird healthy, happy and in song. Birds crave Magic, developed by a famous bird lover. No other food like it. 10c at Woolworth, Kresge, Grant Neisner, Murphy, McCrory stores and Pet shops.

THE NATURE FRIEND, INC.
1840 Boone Ave., N. Y. C.
"Dept. F4"

"MAGIC" GET IT FOR A SONG

FREE
Write for free canary book. Add 10c for a test supply of Magic.

ANY PHOTO ENLARGED

Size 8x10 inches or smaller if desired. Same price for full length or bust form, groups, landscapes, pet animals, etc., or enlargements of any part of group picture. Safe return of original photo guaranteed.

47c

SEND NO MONEY Just mail photo or snapshot (any size) and within a week you will receive your beautiful life-like enlargement, guaranteed fadeless. Pay postman 47c plus postage—or send 49c with order and we pay postage. Big 16x20-inch enlargement sent C. O. D. 78c plus postage or send 80c and we pay postage. Take advantage of this amazing offer now. Send your photos today. Specify size wanted.

STANDARD ART STUDIOS
908 West Lake Street, Dept. 1323-W CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

NEW LOW PRICES on GOODRICH-Firestone GOOD YEAR U.S., FISK and OTHERS

$2.15 29 x 4.40 - 21

SAVE ON YOUR TIRES

And we defy anyone to excel our quality. Every standard brand tire reconstructed by our superior, modern method is positively guaranteed to give full 12 months' service under severest road conditions. This guarantee is backed by the entire financial resources of an old reliable company. Member N R A. Today's lowest prices.

YOU CAN'T BEAT OUR PRICES

BALLOON TIRES

Size Rim	Tires	Tubes
29x4.40-21	$2.15	$0.85
29x4.50-20	2.35	.85
30x4.50-21	2.40	.85
28x4.75-19	2.45	.95
29x4.75-20	2.50	.95
29x5.00-19	2.85	1.05
30x5.00-20	2.85	1.05
28x5.25-18	2.90	1.15
29x5.25-19	2.95	1.15
30x5.25-20	2.95	1.15
31x5.25-21	3.25	1.15
28x5.50-18	3.35	1.15
29x5.50-19	3.35	1.15
30x6.00-18	3.40	1.15
31x6.00-19	3.40	1.15
32x6.00-20	3.45	1.25
33x6.00-21	3.65	1.25
32x6.50-20	3.75	1.35

Reg. CORD TIRES

Size	Tires	Tubes
30x3	$2.25	$0.55
30x3½	2.35	.75
31x4	2.95	.85
32x4	2.95	.85
33x4	2.95	.85
34x4	3.25	.85
32x4½	3.35	1.15
33x4½	3.45	1.15
34x4½	3.45	1.15
30x5	3.65	1.35
33x5	3.75	1.45
35x5	3.95	1.55

All Other Sizes

WE WANT DEALERS

All TUBES GUARANTEED Brand NEW

SEND ONLY $1 DEPOSIT on each tire ordered. We ship balance C. O. D. 5 per cent discount for full cash with order. Any tire failing to give 12 months' service replaced at half price.

GOODWIN TIRE & RUBBER CO. Dept. 373
1840 S. MICHIGAN AVE. CHICAGO, ILL.

FREE "RAY-O-VAC" Flashlight Lantern With Order for 2 Tires
Complete with batteries and bulb, ready to use. Household and automobile necessity. Gives 500 foot light beam. Adjustable handle.

12 MONTHS WRITTEN BOND GIVEN WITH EVERY TIRE

MEMBER N.R.A

SKIN ERUPTIONS
NEED NOT WORRY YOU

Pimples, eczema, itching, burning skin, undue redness, minor rashes and sealy scalp are no longer necessary when relief is so simple. Poslam will show what it will do for you in one application. Just apply at night and note improvement next morning.

JUST TO PROVE IT
we will send you a test package FREE
Simply send your name and address to:
POSLAM COMPANY
Desk 10-W, 254 W. 54th St., New York, N. Y.
You can get Poslam at any drug store, 50c

WANT A STEADY JOB
Work for "Uncle Sam"
$1260 to $3400 Year

MEN—WOMEN 18 to 50. Common Education usually sufficient. Short hours. Vacation with pay. Write immediately for free 32-page book, with list of future positions and full particulars telling how to get them.

FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. R-318 Rochester, N. Y

KEEP LAMP & RADIO WIRES OFF FLOOR
New Easy Way
FITS BACK OF BASEBOARD OR MOULDING
JUSTRITE
PUSH-CLIP
10 Cents
at KRESGE

Amazing invention guarantees neat, quick job. No damage to woodwork. No tools needed. Improve appearance of your rooms—keep all wires off floors with JUSTRITE PUSH-CLIP. Economical. Set of eight colored clips to match your cords, 10c.

Looks 10 Years Younger
Brushes Away Gray Hair

Now you can really look years younger. With an ordinary small brush you just tint those streaks or patches of gray back to your natural shade—whether blonde, brown or black. It is so easy to do—at home—with Brownatone. Over 20 years success. Guaranteed harmless. Active coloring agent is purely vegetable. Does not coat the surface—actually penetrates the hair. Defies detection. No telltale, flat "dyed" look. Cannot affect waving of hair.

No need to guess. Cut a lock of hair from your head and apply this famous tint. If Brownatone does not give your gray, streaked, dull, or faded hair its natural color, youth and luster, your money back. Only 50c. All druggists.

REMOVE FAT
From any part you wish reduced. No Equipment necessary—Your money back if you are not satisfied.

A SAFE SURE WAY JOAN HALL CREAM AND METHOD quickly and safely reduces double chins, arms, bust, hips, legs and other parts of body.

LARGE JAR NOW ONLY
NOTHING MORE TO BUY 60c Two Jars For $1

JOAN HALL, Dept. M-1, 1851 Washington Ave., New York City. Please send Joan Hall Cream and Method at reduced price. I will pay postman 60c plus few cents postage. My money will be refunded if not pleased.

Name..
Address..

Brand New NOW ONLY $19.75
TYPEWRITER
Guaranteed by REMINGTON

Sensationally new low price and easy terms. Standard 4-row keyboard—fully guaranteed by Remington Co. Send no money.

10 Day Trial—then 10c a Day

Send for new literature and easy pay plan—only $1.00 down, then 10c a day. Also bargains in Standard Size refinished office models, sent free. Write for details and special money-making opportunities.

International Typewriter Exch., 231 W. Monroe St. Dept. 1261 Chicago

TOO MUCH HARMONY

(Paramount)

Very Good Musical. Not the most lavish musical, but very entertaining at that. The plot is better than usual with some good brisk dialogue and hot musical numbers woven in. Jack Oakie, Judith Allen and Skeets Gallagher are members of a small time vaudeville team. Bing Crosby, star of a big New York show, drops in, spots Judith and wants her for his act. She refuses to go unless he takes the other two, so all journey to the big city. Lilyan Tashman is Bing's sweetie and Jack is delegated to vamp her so Bing can devote his time to Judith, with whom he has fallen in love. Oakie consents, although he, too, loves Judith. The biggest thrill of the show is the opening night sequence when Judith gets stage fright and Bing rushes out and sings the song for her. Very well done.

S. O. S. ICEBERG (Universal)

Beautiful Scenery. For spectacular beauty, the kind found in the ocean regions of the Arctic with its gigantic icebergs, this film rates ace-high. The story and cast are secondary. It concerns a scientist (Rod LaRocque) and his company in Greenland. LaRocque loses his way and almost starves to death in an ice cave. Two of the members meet horrible death in the icy waters, another goes mad and tries to stab his companion, and finally lunges from an iceberg into the sea. At last, one of the party attempts to swim to an Eskimo village to bring help to his companions. The rescue scene is quite exciting.

LaRocque, back after a long absence from the screen, is supported adequately by Leni Riefenstahl and Ernst Udet, famous aviator. Worth seeing for its scenery. Children may find it interesting.

AGGIE APPLEBY, MAKER OF MEN (RKO)

Pretty Good. A funny, rowdy little comedy with such good players as William Gargan, Wynne Gibson, Charles Farrell and Zasu Pitts in the cast. Story is about Aggie (Wynne Gibson), who annexes Charlie Farrell, son of the wealthy Schlumpp family, when her own sweetie Red Branahan (Bill Gargan) gets sent to prison for beating up three coppers. She proceeds to make young Schlumpp into another Branahan, even giving him the name, and then falls in love with him. However, she sticks to the real Branahan when he gets out of jail. Dialogue is fast, furious and funny. Okay for the youngsters.

LOVE, HONOR AND OH BABY!

(Universal)

Good and Funny. In this latest Zasu Pitts-Slim Summerville comedy, Slim is a young lawyer whose clients usually land behind the bars. He wants to marry Zasu, secretary to a big business man, but hasn't the dough for a license. Because the boss is susceptible to pretty stenos, Zasu, Slim and Zasu's family frame him into a breach of promise suit. This is a riot, particularly the court scene. Slim and Zasu are funny, as usual. George Barbier as the boss, Lucille Webster Gleason, Verree Teasdale and Donald Meek are good. Kids will get a kick out of it and you probably will too.

WILD BOYS OF THE ROAD

(Warners)

Something Different. A touching story of youngsters who are forced out into the world to make their own living when their parents no longer can support them. Frankie Darro and Edwin Phillips, along with other boys and girls, take to the road, go from place to place, hop freight trains, beg and even steal. There are no jobs. Edwin loses a leg, and Frankie gets involved in a robbery and is taken to court. His plea to the judge is splendid and makes a dramatic ending. Grand acting. Send the kids—it will teach 'em to appreciate home.

MIDSHIPMAN JACK (RKO)

Okay. It's been a long time since we've had a story of naval cadets. But now Radio comes out with one and it's good. Bruce Cabot plays Austin, an upper classman whose indolence has made him almost a permanent fixture. He falls in love with the commandant's daughter (Betty Furness), sneaks out to meet her and in other ways, gets in bad. However, the loyalty he instills into the younger boys is his redemption. Frank Albertson, Arthur Lake, Purnell Pratt and Florence Lake all give good support. Entertaining, inspiring and all that. Swell for children and grown-ups alike.

TO THE LAST MAN

(Paramount)

Not So Good. A mild western, even though almost everyone in the picture is killed before it's over. It's the old feud angle. The Colbys and Spelvins have hated each other for years. Esther Ralston, a Colby, and Randolph Scott, a Spelvin, are in love, but are loyal to the old family hate until in a battle royal everyone is killed off except these two. Jack LaRue, Noah Beery, Buster Crabbe and Muriel Kirkland make up the cast. Okay for the very young kids.

A CHANCE AT HEAVEN (RKO)

Good. A simple, down-to-earth and delightful story, the kind Vina Delmar is so capable of writing, about a young boy and girl in love, but whose matrimonial plans are upset when the rich girl from the city puts in an appearance. Ginger Rogers, Joel McCrea and Marian Nixon make up the triangle. Their swell performances, plus snappy dialogue, makes this pretty good entertainment. You can take the whole family.

Directory of Players

(Continued from page 83)

Featured in "The Man Who Dared," Fox; "Sensational Hunters," Monogram. Working in "Hoopla." Fox.

FRANCIS, KAY: Married to Kenneth McKenna. Born in Oklahoma City, Okla., January 13. Warner Bros. star. Starred in "Storm at Daybreak," M-G-M; "I Loved a Woman," "The House on 56th Street." Next is "Broadway and Back."

GABLE, CLARK: Married to Ria Langham. Born in Cadiz, Ohio, February 1. M-G-M star. Starred in "Hold Your Man," "Night Flight." Working in "Dancing Lady." Next is "Two Thieves."

GARBO, GRETA: Unmarried. Born in Stockholm. Sweden, September 18. M-G-M star. Starred in "As You Desire Me." Working in "Queen Christina."

GARGAN, WILLIAM: Married. Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., July 17. RKO player. Featured in "Headline Shooters," "Night Flight," M-G-M. Working in "Four Frightened People," Paramount. Next is "Success Story."

GAYNOR, JANET: Divorced from Lydell Peck. Born in Philadelphia, Pa., October 6. Fox star. Starred in "State Fair," "Adorable," "Paddy, the Next Best Thing."

GIBSON, HOOT: Separated from Sally Eilers. Born in Takomah, Neb., August 6. Write him at Hoot Gibson Picture Corp. Starred in "Dude Bandit."

GIBSON, WYNNE: Divorced. Born in New York City, July 3. RKO player. Featured in "Emergency Call," "Her Bodyguard," Paramount. Working in "Wanted at Headquarters," Universal. Next is "Success Story."

GILBERT, JOHN: Married to Virginia Bruce. Born in Ogden, Utah, July 10. M-G-M star. Starred in "Fast Workers." Working in "Queen Christina."

GOMBELL, MINNA: Married to Joseph Sefton. Born in Baltimore, Md., May 28. Fox player. Featured in "The Way to Love," Paramount. Working in "Hoopla."

GRANT, CARY: Unmarried. Born in Bristol, England, January 19. Paramount player. Featured in "The Eagle and the Hawk," "Gambling Ship." Working in "I'm No Angel." Next is "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" and "Come On Marines."

HAMILTON, NEIL: Married to Elsa Whitner. Born in Athol, Mass., September 9. Write him at Universal. Free lance. Featured in "Silk Express," Warner Bros.; "One Sunday Afternoon," Paramount; "Ladies Must Love," Universal.

HARDING, ANN: Divorced from Harry Bannister. Born in Fort Sam Houston, Texas, August 7. RKO star. Starred in "When Ladies Meet," M-G-M; "Double Harness." Working in "Beautiful."

HARDY, OLIVER: Married to Myrtle Lee. Born in Atlanta, Ga., January 18. Hal Roach star. Co-starred in "Tickets for Two," "Dirty Work."

HARLOW, JEAN: Married to Hal Rosson. Born in Kansas City, Mo., March 3. M-G-M player. Featured in "Dinner at Eight," "Hold Your Man," "A Hollywood Party." Working in "Bombshell." Next is "Living in a Big Way."

HARVEY, LILIAN: Unmarried. Born in London, England, January 19. Fox player. Featured in "My Lips Betray," "My Weakness."

HAYES, HELEN: Married to Charles MacArthur. Born in Washington, D. C., October 10. M-G-M star. Starred in "Night Flight," "Another Language." Next is "The Old Maid."

HEPBURN, KATHARINE: Married to Ludlow Smith. Born in Hartford, Conn., November 8. RKO player. Featured in "Christopher Strong," "Morning Glory" and "Little Women."

HERSHOLT, JEAN: Married. Born in Copenhagen, Denmark, July 12. M-G-M player. Featured in "Dinner at Eight," "Hollywood Party," "The Late Christopher Bean." Working in "The Cat and The Fiddle."

HOLMES, PHILLIPS: Unmarried. Born in Grand Rapids, Mich., July 22. M-G-M player. Featured in "Beauty For Sale," "Penthouse," "Stage Mothers." Working in "Nana," United Artists.

HOLT, JACK: Divorced from Margaret Wood. Born in Winchester, Pa., May 31. Columbia star. Starred in "Tampico," "The Wrecker," "Man of Steel."

HOPKINS, MIRIAM: Divorced from Austin Parker. Born in Bainbridge, Ga., October 18. Paramount player. Featured in "The Story of Temple Drake," "Stranger's Return," M-G-M. Working in "Design For Living." Next is "Chrysalis."

HOPPER, HEDDA: Divorced. Born in Hollidaysburg, Pa., June 2. Write her at M-G-M. Free lance. Featured in "The Barbarian," "Beauty for Sale," M-G-M.

HORTON, EDWARD EVERETT: Unmarried. Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., March 18. Write him at M-G-M. Free lance. Featured in "A Bedtime Story," "The Way to Love," Paramount. Working in "Design for Living," M-G-M.

HOWARD, LESLIE: Married. Born in England, April 24. RKO star. Featured in "Captured," Warner Bros.; "Berkeley Square," Fox. Working in "The Lady is Willing," Columbia. Next is "British Agent," Warner Bros.

HUDSON, ROCHELLE: Unmarried. Born in Claremore, Okla., March 6. Fox player. Featured in "Dr. Bull." Working in "Walls of Gold." Next is "Mr. Skitch."

HUSTON, WALTER: Married to Nan Sunderland. Born in Toronto, Canada, April 6. M-G-M player. Featured in "Gabriel Over the White House," "Storm at Daybreak," "Ann Vickers," RKO. Working in "The Prizefighter and the Lady."

HYAMS, LEILA: Married to Phil Berg. Born in New York City, May 1. Universal player. Featured in "Saturday's Millions." Working in "Tin Pants."

JOLSON, AL: Married to Ruby Keeler. Warner Bros. star. Born in St. Petersburg, Russia, May 26. Starred in "Hallelujah I'm a Bum." United Artists. Working in "Wonder Bar." Warner Bros.

JONES, BUCK: Married to Odille Osborne. Born in Vincennes, Ind., December 12. Universal star. Starred in "Unknown Valley," "The Open Road." Working in "Gordon of Ghost City," serial.

JORDAN, DOROTHY: Married to Meriam C. Cooper. Born in Clarksburg, Tenn., August 9. RKO player. Featured in "Bondage." Fox; "One Man's Journey," "Hide in the Dark." Next is "Trigger."

JORDAN, MIRIAM: Unmarried. Born in London, England, March 3. Fox player. Featured in "Dangerously Yours," "I Loved You Wednesday." Working in "He Knew His Women."

JORY, VICTOR: Married to Jean Inness. Born in Dawson City, Alaska, November 23. Fox player. Featured in "I Loved You Wednesday," "The Devil's In Love," "My Woman," Columbia. Working in "Smoky."

JUDGE, ARLINE: Married to Wesley Ruggles. Born in Bridgeport, Conn., February 21. RKO player. Featured in "Flying Devils," "Sweet Cheat," "Sensational Hunters."

KARLOFF, BORIS: Married. Born in Dulwich, England, November 23. Universal star. Starred in "The Mummy," "The Ghoul," Gaumont. Working in "The Lost Patrol," RKO. Next is "The Return of Frankenstein."

KEELER, RUBY: Married to Al Jolson. Born in New York City, August 25. Warner Bros. player. Featured in "Forty-Second Street," "Gold Diggers of 1933," "Footlight Parade." Next is "Sweethearts Forever."

KENYON, DORIS: Married to Arthur Hopkins. Born in Syracuse, N. Y., September 5. Write her at RKO. Free lance. Featured in "Voltaire," Warner Bros.; "No Marriage Ties," RKO. Next is "Counsellor at Law," Universal.

KIBBEE, GUY: Married. Born in El Paso, Texas, March 6. First National player. Featured in "Lady For a Day," Columbia; "Gold Diggers of 1933," "Footlight Parade," "The World Changes," "Havana Widows," Warner Bros. Next is "Convention City."

KRUEGER, OTTO: Married to Sue MacManamy. Born in Toledo, Ohio, September 6. M-G-M player. Featured in "Turn Back the Clock," "Beauty for Sale." Working in "The Prizefighter and the Lady."

LANDI, ELISSA: Married to J. C. Lawrence. Born in Venice, Italy, December 6. M-G-M player. Starred in "The Warrior's Husband," "I Loved You Wednesday," Fox. Working in "By Candlelight," Universal.

LARUE, JACK: Unmarried. Born in New York City, May 4. Paramount player. Featured in "The Story of Temple Drake," "To the Last Man," "Kennell Murder Case," Warner Bros. Next is "Funny Page."

LAUGHTON, CHARLES: Married to Elsa Lanchester. Born in Scarborough, England, July 1. Paramount player. Featured in "The Sign of the Cross." Working in "White Woman." Next is "Funny Page."

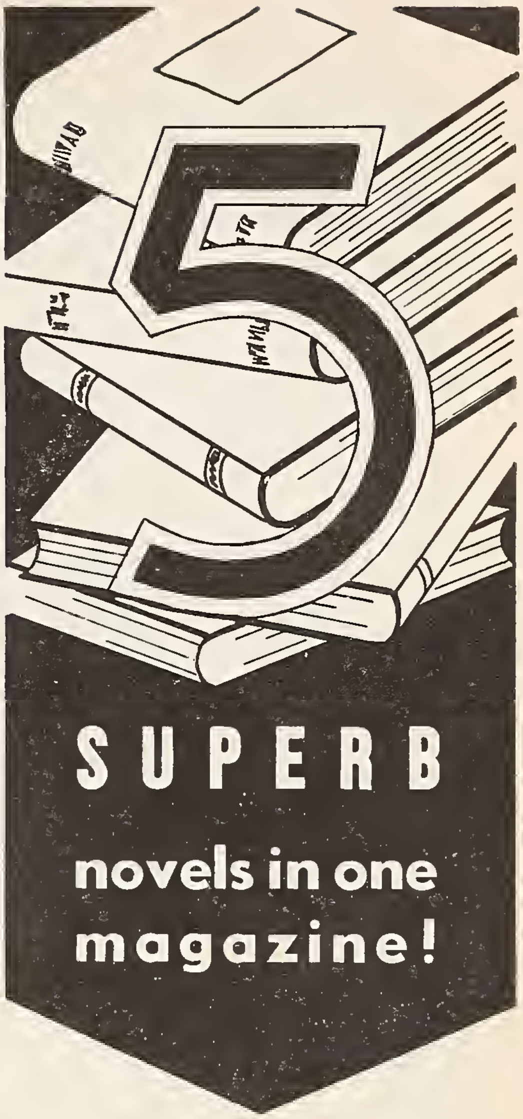
LAUREL, STAN: Married. Born in Ulverston, England, June 16. Hal Roach star. Co-starred in "Tickets for Two," "Dirty Work."

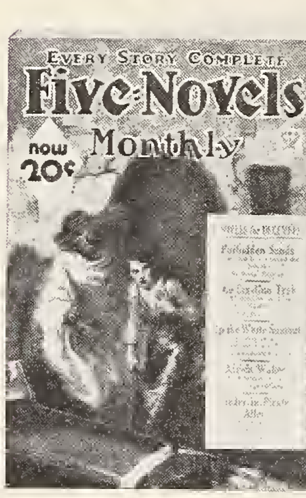
LINDEN, ERIC: Unmarried. Born in New York City, July 12. RKO player. Featured in "The Silver Cord," "The Flying Devils," "Bird of Prey."

LLOYD, HAROLD: Married to Mildred Davis. Born in Burchard, Neb., April 20. Write him at Paramount studio. Producer-star. Starred in "Movie Crazy." Next is "Cat's Paw."

WHO DO YOU SUPPOSE—

Who do you suppose is going to appear in MODERN SCREEN shortly? He is a very famous humorist. A grand story-teller. A great, big, heavy man with an authentic Southern drawl. He's usually smoking a cigar. You've heard him on the radio. Can you guess? Well, it's Irvin S. Cobb! + + + Watch for him in an early issue





Do you want hours and hours of perfectly grand reading? Do you want romance, adventure, mystery? Do you want a realistic tale of the sidewalks of New York, and then, perhaps, a glamorous love story of the Sahara? It's all yours for the asking, in that delightful magazine,

FIVE NOVELS MONTHLY

Ask your newsdealer today for the November issue. And then enjoy yourself with:

MYSTERY! "Death at Stone Mansion"
SPORT....................."Touchdown"
THE WEST.........."The Chollo Kid"
ADVENTURE!....."The Gold of Isis"
ROMANCE....."Every Man's Honor"

LOMBARD, CAROLE: Divorced from William Powell. Born in Fort Wayne, Ind., October 6. Paramount player. Featured in "The Eagle and the Hawk." "Brief Moment," Columbia. Working in "White Woman." Next is "All of Me."

LOWE, EDMUND: Married to Lilyan Tashman. Born in San Jose, Calif., March 3. Write him at Paramount. Free lance. Featured in "I Love That Man," Paramount; "Dinner at Eight," M-G-M; "Her Bodyguard," Paramount. Next is "No More Women.'

LOY, MYRNA: Unmarried. Born in Helena, Mont., August 2. M-G-M player. Featured in "The Barbarian," "When Ladies Meet," "Night Flight," "Penthouse." Working in "The Prizefighter and the Lady."

LUKAS, PAUL: Married. Born in Budapest, Hungary, May 26. Universal player. Featured in "Captured," Warner Bros.; "Secret of the Blue Room," "Little Women." RKO. Next is "By Candlelight."

LYON, BEN: Married to Bebe Daniels. Born in Atlanta, Ga., February 6. M-G-M player. Featured in "I Cover the Waterfront," United Artists.

MACDONALD, JEANETTE: Unmarried. Born in Philadelphia, Pa., June 18. Paramount player. Featured in "Love Me Tonight." Working in "The Cat and the Fiddle," M-G-M.

MACK, HELEN: Unmarried. Born in Rock Island, Ill., November 13. RKO player. Featured in "Hold Your Man," "The Late Christopher Bean," M-G-M; "Aggie Appleby, Maker of Men." Next is "Chrysalis," Paramount.

MACMAHON, ALINE: Married. Born in McKeesport, Pa., May 3. Warner Bros. player. Featured in "Gold Diggers of 1933," "Heroes For Sale," "The World Changes."

MANNERS, DAVID: Divorced from Suzanne Bushell. Born in Halifax, N. S., April 30. Write him at United Artists. Free lance. Featured in "Warrior's Husband," "The Devil's In Love," Fox; "Torch Singer," Paramount. Working in "Roman Scandals," United Artists.

MARCH, FREDRIC: Married to Florence Eldridge. Born in Racine, Wis., August 31. Paramount star. Starred in "Tonight is Ours," "The Eagle and the Hawk." Working in "Design for Living." Next is "Chrysalis."

MARITZA, SARI: Unmarried. Born in China, March 17. RKO player. Featured in "International House," Paramount. Working in "Beautiful."

MARSH, JOAN: Unmarried. Born in Porterville, Calif., July 10. Write her at Fox. Free lance. Featured in "Three Cornered Moon," Paramount; "The Man Who Dared," "It's Great to be Alive," Fox.

MARSHALL, HERBERT: Married to Edna Best. Born in London, England, May 23. Paramount player. Featured in "Solitaire Man." Working in "Four Frightened People."

MAYNARD, KEN: Married to Mary Leiber. Born in Mission, Texas, July 21. Universal player. Featured in "Fiddlin' Buckaroo," "Daring Danger."

MENJOU, ADOLPHE: Divorced from Kathryn Carver. Born in Pittsburgh, Pa., February 18. Warner Bros. star. Featured in "Morning Glory," RKO. Working in "The Worst Woman in Paris," Fox. Next is "Convention City."

MERKEL, UNA: Married to Ronald Burla. Born in Covington, Ky., December 10. M-G-M player. Featured in "Beauty for Sale," "Stage Mother." Working in "Bombshell." Next is "Forever Faithful."

MONTGOMERY, ROBERT: Married to Elizabeth Allen. Born in Beacon, N. Y., May 21. M-G-M star. Starred in "When Ladies Meet," "Night Flight," "Another Language." Next is "Two Thieves" and "Overland Bus."

MOORE, COLLEEN: Married to Albert Scott. Born in Port Huron, Mich., August 19. Write her at RKO. Free lance. Featured in "The Power and the Glory," Fox. Next is "Nothing Else Matters," RKO.

MOORE, DICKIE: Boy actor. Born in Los Angeles, Calif., September 12. Hal Roach player. Featured in "Gabriel Over the White House," M-G-M. Working in "The Wolf Dog," "Mascot" and "Man's Castle," Columbia.

MORGAN, FRANK: Married. Born in New York City, June 1. M-G-M player. Featured in "Show World," "Stage Mother," "Dancing Lady." Working in "Bombshell" and "The Cat and the Fiddle."

MORGAN, RALPH: Married to Grace Arnold. Born in New York City, July 6. Fox player. Featured in "The Power and the Glory," "Shanghai Madness," "The Kennell Murder Case." Working in "Walls of Gold." Next is "The Mad Game."

MORLEY, KAREN: Married to Charles Vidor. Born in Ottumwa, Iowa, December 12. M-G-M player. Featured in "Gabriel Over the White House," "Dinner at Eight."

MORRIS, CHESTER: Married to Sue Kilbourne. Born in New York City, February 13. Universal player. Featured in "Tomorrow at Seven," RKO; "Golden Harvest," Paramount. Working in "Dangerous to Women."

MUNI, PAUL: Married to Bella Finckle. Born in Vienna, September 22. Warner Bros star. Starred in "I'm a Fugitive From a Chain Gang," "The World Changes." Next is "Hi, Nellie."

McCREA, JOEL: Unmarried. Born in So. Pasadena, Calif., November 5. RKO player. Featured in "Bed of Roses," "One Man's Journey," "Chance at Heaven." Working in "Flying Down to Rio." Next is "The Sea Girl."

McLAGLEN, VICTOR: Married to Enid Lamont. Born in London, England, December 10. Write him at RKO. Free lance. Featured in "Hot Pepper," Fox. Working in "The Lost Patrol." RKO.

NAGEL, CONRAD: Married to Ruth Helms. Born in Keokuk, Iowa, March 16. M-G-M player. Featured in "Ann Vickers," RKO.

NISSEN, GRETA: Married to Weldon Heyburn. Born in Oslo, Norway, January 30. Fox player. Featured in "Melody Cruise," RKO; "Life in the Raw," "The Best of Enemies."

NIXON, MARIAN: Divorced from Edward Hillman. Born in Superior, Wis., October 20. Write her at RKO. Free lance. Featured in "Pilgrimage," "The Best of Enemies," "Dr. Bull," Fox; "Chance at Heaven," RKO.

NOVARRO, RAMON: Unmarried. Born in Durango, Mexico, February 6. M-G-M star. Starred in "The Barbarian." Working in "The Cat and the Fiddle."

OAKIE, JACK: Unmarried. Born in Sedalia, Mo., November 14. Paramount player. Featured in "The Eagle and the Hawk," "College Humor," "Too Much Harmony." Next are "Alice in Wonderland" and "Sitting Pretty."

OLIVER, EDNA MAY: Divorced. Born in Boston, Mass., January 12. RKO player. Featured in "Ann Vickers," "Only Yesterday," Universal. Working in "Meet the Baron," M-G-M.

OSBORNE, VIVIAN: Unmarried. Born in Des Moines, Iowa, December 10. Warner Bros. player. Featured in "Supernatural," Paramount; "Tomorrow at Seven," RKO.

O'BRIEN, GEORGE: Married to Marguerite Churchill. Born in San Francisco, Calif., September 1. Fox star. Starred in "Canyon Walls," "Life in the Raw," "The Last Trail."

O'BRIEN, PAT: Married to Eloise Taylor. Born in New York City, September 1. Write him at Warner Bros. Free lance. Featured in "Flaming Gold," RKO; "The Bureau of Missing Persons," Warner Bros. Working in "Bombshell," M-G-M and "College Coach," Warner Bros.

O'SULLIVAN, MAUREEN: Unmarried. Born in Dublin, Ireland, May 17. M-G-M player. Featured in "Tugboat Annie," "Stage Mother." Working in "Tarzan and His Mate."

PALLETTE, EUGENE: Divorced. Born in Winfield, Kan., July 8. Write him at Warner Bros. Free lance. Featured in "Storm at Daybreak," M-G-M; "The Kennell Murder Case," Warner Bros.; "Shanghai Madness," Fox. Working in "From Headquarters," Warner Bros.

PICKFORD, MARY: Separated from Douglas Fairbanks, Sr. Born in Toronto, Canada, April 9. United Artists star. Starred in "Secrets."

PITTS, ZASU: Divorced from Tom Gallery. Born in Parsons, Kan., January 3. Universal player. Featured in "Love, Honor and Oh Baby," "Aggie Appleby, Maker of Men," RKO. Working in "Dummy's Vote" and "Meet the Baron," M-G-M.

HERE ARE THEIR BIRTHDAYS FOR NOVEMBER AND DECEMBER

Alice Brody	November 2
James Dunn	November 2
Joel McCrea	November 5
Katharine Hepburn	November 8
Marie Dressler	November 9
Helen Mack	November 13
Dick Powell	November 14
Nancy Carroll	November 19
Boris Karloff	November 23
Frances Dee	November 26
Elissa Landi	December 9
Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.	December 9
Una Merkel	December 10
Sally Eilers	December 11
Karen Morley	December 12
Norman Foster	December 13
Ruth Chatterton	December 24
Helen Twelvetrees	December 25
Marlene Dietrich	December 27
Lew Ayres	December 28

POWELL, RICHARD: Divorced. Born in Mountain View, Ark., November 14. Warner Bros. player. Featured in "Gold Diggers of 1933," "Footlight Parade." Working in "College Coach." Next are "Sweethearts Forever" and "Convention City."

POWELL, WILLIAM: Divorced from Carole Lombard. Born in Pittsburgh, Pa., July 29. Warner Bros. star. Starred in "Private Detective," "Double Harness," RKO; "The Kennell Murder Case."

RAFT, GEORGE: Unmarried. Born in New York City, September 27. Paramount player. Featured in "Midnight Club," "The Bowery," 20th Cent. Next are "Chrysalis" and "All of Me."

RAYMOND, GENE: Unmarried. Born in New York City, August 13. Write him at RKO. Free lance. Featured in "Ann Carver's Profession," "Brief Moment," Columbia; "The House on 56th Street," Warner Bros. Working in "Flying Down to Rio," RKO.

ROBINSON, EDWARD G: Married to Gladys Lloyd. Born in Bucharest, Roumania, December 12. Warner Bros. star. Starred in "The Little Giant," "I Loved a Woman." Working in "Dark Hazard."

ROBSON, MAY: Married to Ora H. Brown. Born in Melbourne, Australia, April 19. M-G-M player. Featured in "Lady for a Day," Columbia; "Beauty for Sale," "Show World," "Stage Mother," "Solitaire Man."

ROGERS, CHARLES: Unmarried. Born in Olathe, Kan., August 13. Fox player. Featured in "The Best of Enemies." Working in "Take a Chance," Paramount.

ROGERS, GINGER: Divorced from Jack Pepper. Born in Independence, Kan., July 16. RKO player. Featured in "Don't Bet on Love," Universal; "Rafter Romance." Working in "Flying Down to Rio" and "Hip Hips Hooray."

ROGERS, WILL: Married. Born in Okagah, Okla., November 4. Fox star. Starred in "Too Busy to Work," "State Fair," "Dr. Bull." Next is "Mr. Skitch."

RUGGLES, CHARLES: Married. Born in Los Angeles, Calif., February 8. Paramount player. Featured in "Melody Cruise," RKO; "Mama Loves Papa." Working in "The Alimony Racket," RKO. Next is "Funny Page."

SHANNON, PEGGY: Separated. Born in New York City, January 10. Fox player. Featured in "Girl Missing," "Deluge," "Turn Back the Clock," M-G-M. Working in "Fury of the Jungle," Columbia.

SHEARER, NORMA: Married to Irving Thalberg. Born in Montreal, Canada, August 10. M-G-M star. Starred in "Smilin' Through." Next is "Marie Antoinette, an Average Woman."

SIDNEY, SYLVIA: Unmarried. Born in New York City, August 8. Paramount star. Featured in "Pick Up." Starred in "Jennie Gerhardt."

SKIPWORTH, ALISON: Unmarried. Born in London, England, July 25. Paramount player. Featured in "Midnight Club." Working in "Tillie and Gus." Next is "Alice in Wonderland."

STANWYCK, BARBARA: Married to Frank Fay. Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., July 16. Warner Bros. star. Starred in "Baby Face," "Ever in My Heart." Next is "Broadway and Back."

STONE, LEWIS: Married to Hazel Wolf. Born in Worcester, Mass., November 15. M-G-M player. Featured in "Looking Forward," "Bureau of Missing Persons," Warners. Working in "Queen Christina."

STUART, GLORIA: Separated from Blair Gordon Newell. Born in Santa Monica, Calif., January 21. Universal player. Featured in "Secret of the Blue Room," "The Invisible Man." Working in "Roman Scandals," United Artists.

SUMMERVILLE, SLIM: Married. Born in Albuquerque, N. M., July 10. Universal player. Featured in "Her First Mate," "Love, Honor and Oh Baby." Working in "Tin Pants."

SWANSON, GLORIA: Married to Michael Farmer. Born in Chicago, Ill., March 27. United Artists star. Starred in "Perfect Understanding." Next is "Miss Fane's Baby," Paramount.

TASHMAN, LILYAN: Married to Edmund Lowe. Born in New York City, October 25. Write her at 20th Cent. Free lance. Featured in "Mama Loves Papa," "Too Much Harmony," Paramount. Working in "Broadway Through a Keyhole," 20th Cent.

TOBIN, GENEVIEVE: Unmarried. Born in New York City, November 29. Warner Bros. player. Featured in "Goodbye Again," "I Loved a Woman," "Golden Harvest," Paramount. Working in "Dark Hazard."

TODD, THELMA: Married to Pasquale de Cicco. Born in Lawrence, Mass., July 29. Hal Roach player. Featured in "Mary Stevens M. D.," Warner Bros. Working in "Son of the Gobs," Warner Bros. Next is "Hip Hips Hooray," RKO.

TONE, FRANCHOT: Unmarried. Born in Niagara Falls, N. Y., February 27. M-G-M player. Featured in "Lady of the Night," "Stranger's Return," "Stage Mother." Working in "Dancing Lady" and "Bombshell." Next is "Moulin Rouge," 20th Cent.

TRACY, LEE: Unmarried. Born in Atlanta, Ga., April 14. M-G-M player. Featured in "The Nuisance," "Dinner at Eight," "Turn Back the Clock." Working in "Bombshell."

TRACY, SPENCER: Separated from Louise Treadwell. Born in Milwaukee, Wis., April 5. Fox player. Featured in "The Power and the Glory," "Shanghai Madness," "A Man's Castle," Columbia. Working in "The Mad Game," Fox.

TWELVETREES, HELEN: Married to Frank Woody. Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., December 25. Paramount player. Featured in "A Bedtime Story," "Disgraced," "My Woman," Columbia. Working in "Dangerous to Women," Universal.

VELEZ, LUPE: Unmarried. Born in San Luis Potosi, Mexico, July 18. M-G-M player. Featured in "The Hollywood Party."

WEST, MAE: Unmarried. Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., August 17. Paramount player. Featured in "Night After Night," "She Done Him Wrong." Working in "I'm No Angel." Next is "It Ain't No Sin.

WEISSMULLER, JOHNNIE: Divorced from Bobbe Arnst. Born in Chicago, Ill., June 2. M-G-M player. Featured in "Tarzan the Ape Man." Working in "Tarzan and His Mate."

WHEELER, BERT: Separated from Bernice Spear. Born in Paterson, N. J., August 31. RKO player. Featured in "So This is Africa," "Diplomaniacs." Working in "Hip Hips Hooray."

WHITE, ALICE: Unmarried. Born in Paterson, N. J., August 28. Universal player. Featured in "Picture Snatcher," M-G-M. Working in "Dangerous to Women." Next is "The Good Red Bricks."

WILLIAM, WARREN: Married. Born in Aitken, Minn., December 2. Warner Bros. player. Featured in "Gold Diggers of 1933," "Goodbye Again," "Lady for a Day," Columbia.

WILSON, DOROTHY: Unmarried. Born in Minneapolis, Minn., November 14. Write her at Columbia. Free lance. Featured in "Professional Sweetheart," RKO; "Above the Clouds," Columbia.

WOOLSEY, ROBERT: Married to Mignone Reed. Born in Oakland, Calif., August 14. RKO player. Featured in "So This is Africa," "Diplomaniacs." Working in "Hip Hips Hooray."

WRAY, FAY: Married to John Monk Saunders. Born in Alberta, Canada, September 25. Twentieth Century player. Featured in "Ann Carver's Profession," Columbia; "One Sunday Afternoon," Paramount; "Shanghai Madness," Fox; "The Bowery," "Man of Steel," Columbia.

WYNYARD, DIANA: Unmarried. Born in London, England, January 16. M-G-M player. Featured in "Cavalcade," Fox; "Born to Kill," "Reunion in Vienna." Next is "The Fountain."

YOUNG, LORETTA: Divorced from Grant Withers. Born in Salt Lake City, Utah, January 6. Twentieth Century star. Starred in "Lady of the Night," M-G-M; "The Devil's in Love," Fox; "She Had to Say Yes," Warner Bros.; "A Man's Castle," Columbia.

YOUNG, ROBERT: Married to Elizabeth Henderson. Born in Chicago, Ill., February 22. M-G-M player. Featured in "Hell Below," "Tugboat Annie," "Saturday's Millions," Universal. Working in "Beautiful," RKO.

YOUNG, ROLAND: Married. Born in London, England, November 11. Write him at Paramount. Free lance. Featured in "Pleasure Cruise," Fox; "Blind Adventure," RKO. Working in "Great Adventure," Dowling. Next is "She Made Her Bed," Paramount.

Printed in the U. S. A. by Art Color Printing Company at Dunellen, N. J.

Four LITTLE WOMEN faced life . . .

SHE SAID: "Love, KEEP OUT!"

SHE WELCOMED LOVE

SHE PLAYED SECOND FIDDLE

AND SHE MET A DARK ANGEL

● There were few families as happy as the Marches—four pretty sisters, an understanding mother and an idealistic father. Jo was determined that nothing should ever separate them. And she fully realized that if she was to succeed in this purpose, her greatest enemy was love.

● But can one girl mould the lives of three others? Can youth and beauty long resist the darts of the naked litle boy with the bow and arrow? Life swept in upon them, bringing a varied cargo: tragedy . . . laughter . . . romance . . . and something they had never counted on!

● That's "Little Women", Louisa May Alcott's absorbing classic which has just been brought to the screen by Katherine Hepburn, Joan Bennett, Frances Dee and Jean Parker. We emphatically advise you to read the charming story of this screen masterpiece in the new issue of SCREEN ROMANCES. You'll find it utterly delightful!

● As usual, SCREEN ROMANCES gives you in the same issue, 11 other engrossing stories of the latest and best motion pictures, all dramatically and liberally illustrated by scenes from the Hollywood productions.

● Get your copy of this unique screen story magazine today. It means hours of real entertainment!

In December SCREEN ROMANCES, read these absorbing screen stories—complete and profusely illustrated:

LITTLE WOMEN, Katherine Hepburn, Joan Bennett and other stars . . . ANN VICKERS, Irene Dunne, Walter Huston . . . ONLY YESTERDAY, John Boles, Billie Burke, Reginald Denny . . . CRADLE SONG, Dorothy Vieck . . . WHITE WOMAN, Carole Lombard, Charles Laughton . . . THE WORST WOMAN IN PARIS, Adolphe Menjou, Benita Hume . . . SOLITAIRE MAN, Herbert Marshall, Elizabeth Allen . . . STAGE MOTHER, Alice Brady, Franchot Tone, Maureen O'Sullivan . . . A CHANCE AT HEAVEN, Joel McCrea, Marian Nixon, Ginger Rogers . . . THE HOUSE ON 56th STREET, Kay Francis . . . WALLS OF GOLD, Sally Eilers, Norman Foster . . . GOLDEN HARVEST, Richard Arlen, Chester Morris, Genevieve Tobin.

Screen Romances

NOW—12 COMPLETE SCREEN STORIES IN EVERY ISSUE!

The CREAM OF THE CROP ITS Crowning Glory
LUCKY STRIKE
IT'S TOASTED
CIGARETTES
LUCKY STRIKE
20

INSURING FINE TOBACCO FOR future Lucky Strikes

Not many smokers have seen a fine tobacco plant in full bloom, so we show you this picture. These fine types of plants are permitted to flower and to produce seed—to reproduce the Cream of the Crop—enabling Luckies to maintain the same fine, uniform quality that smokers everywhere appreciate—so round and firm and fully packed—free from loose ends.

ALWAYS the finest tobaccos ALWAYS the finest workmanship
ALWAYS Luckies please!
"it's toasted" FOR THROAT PROTECTION—FOR BETTER TASTE

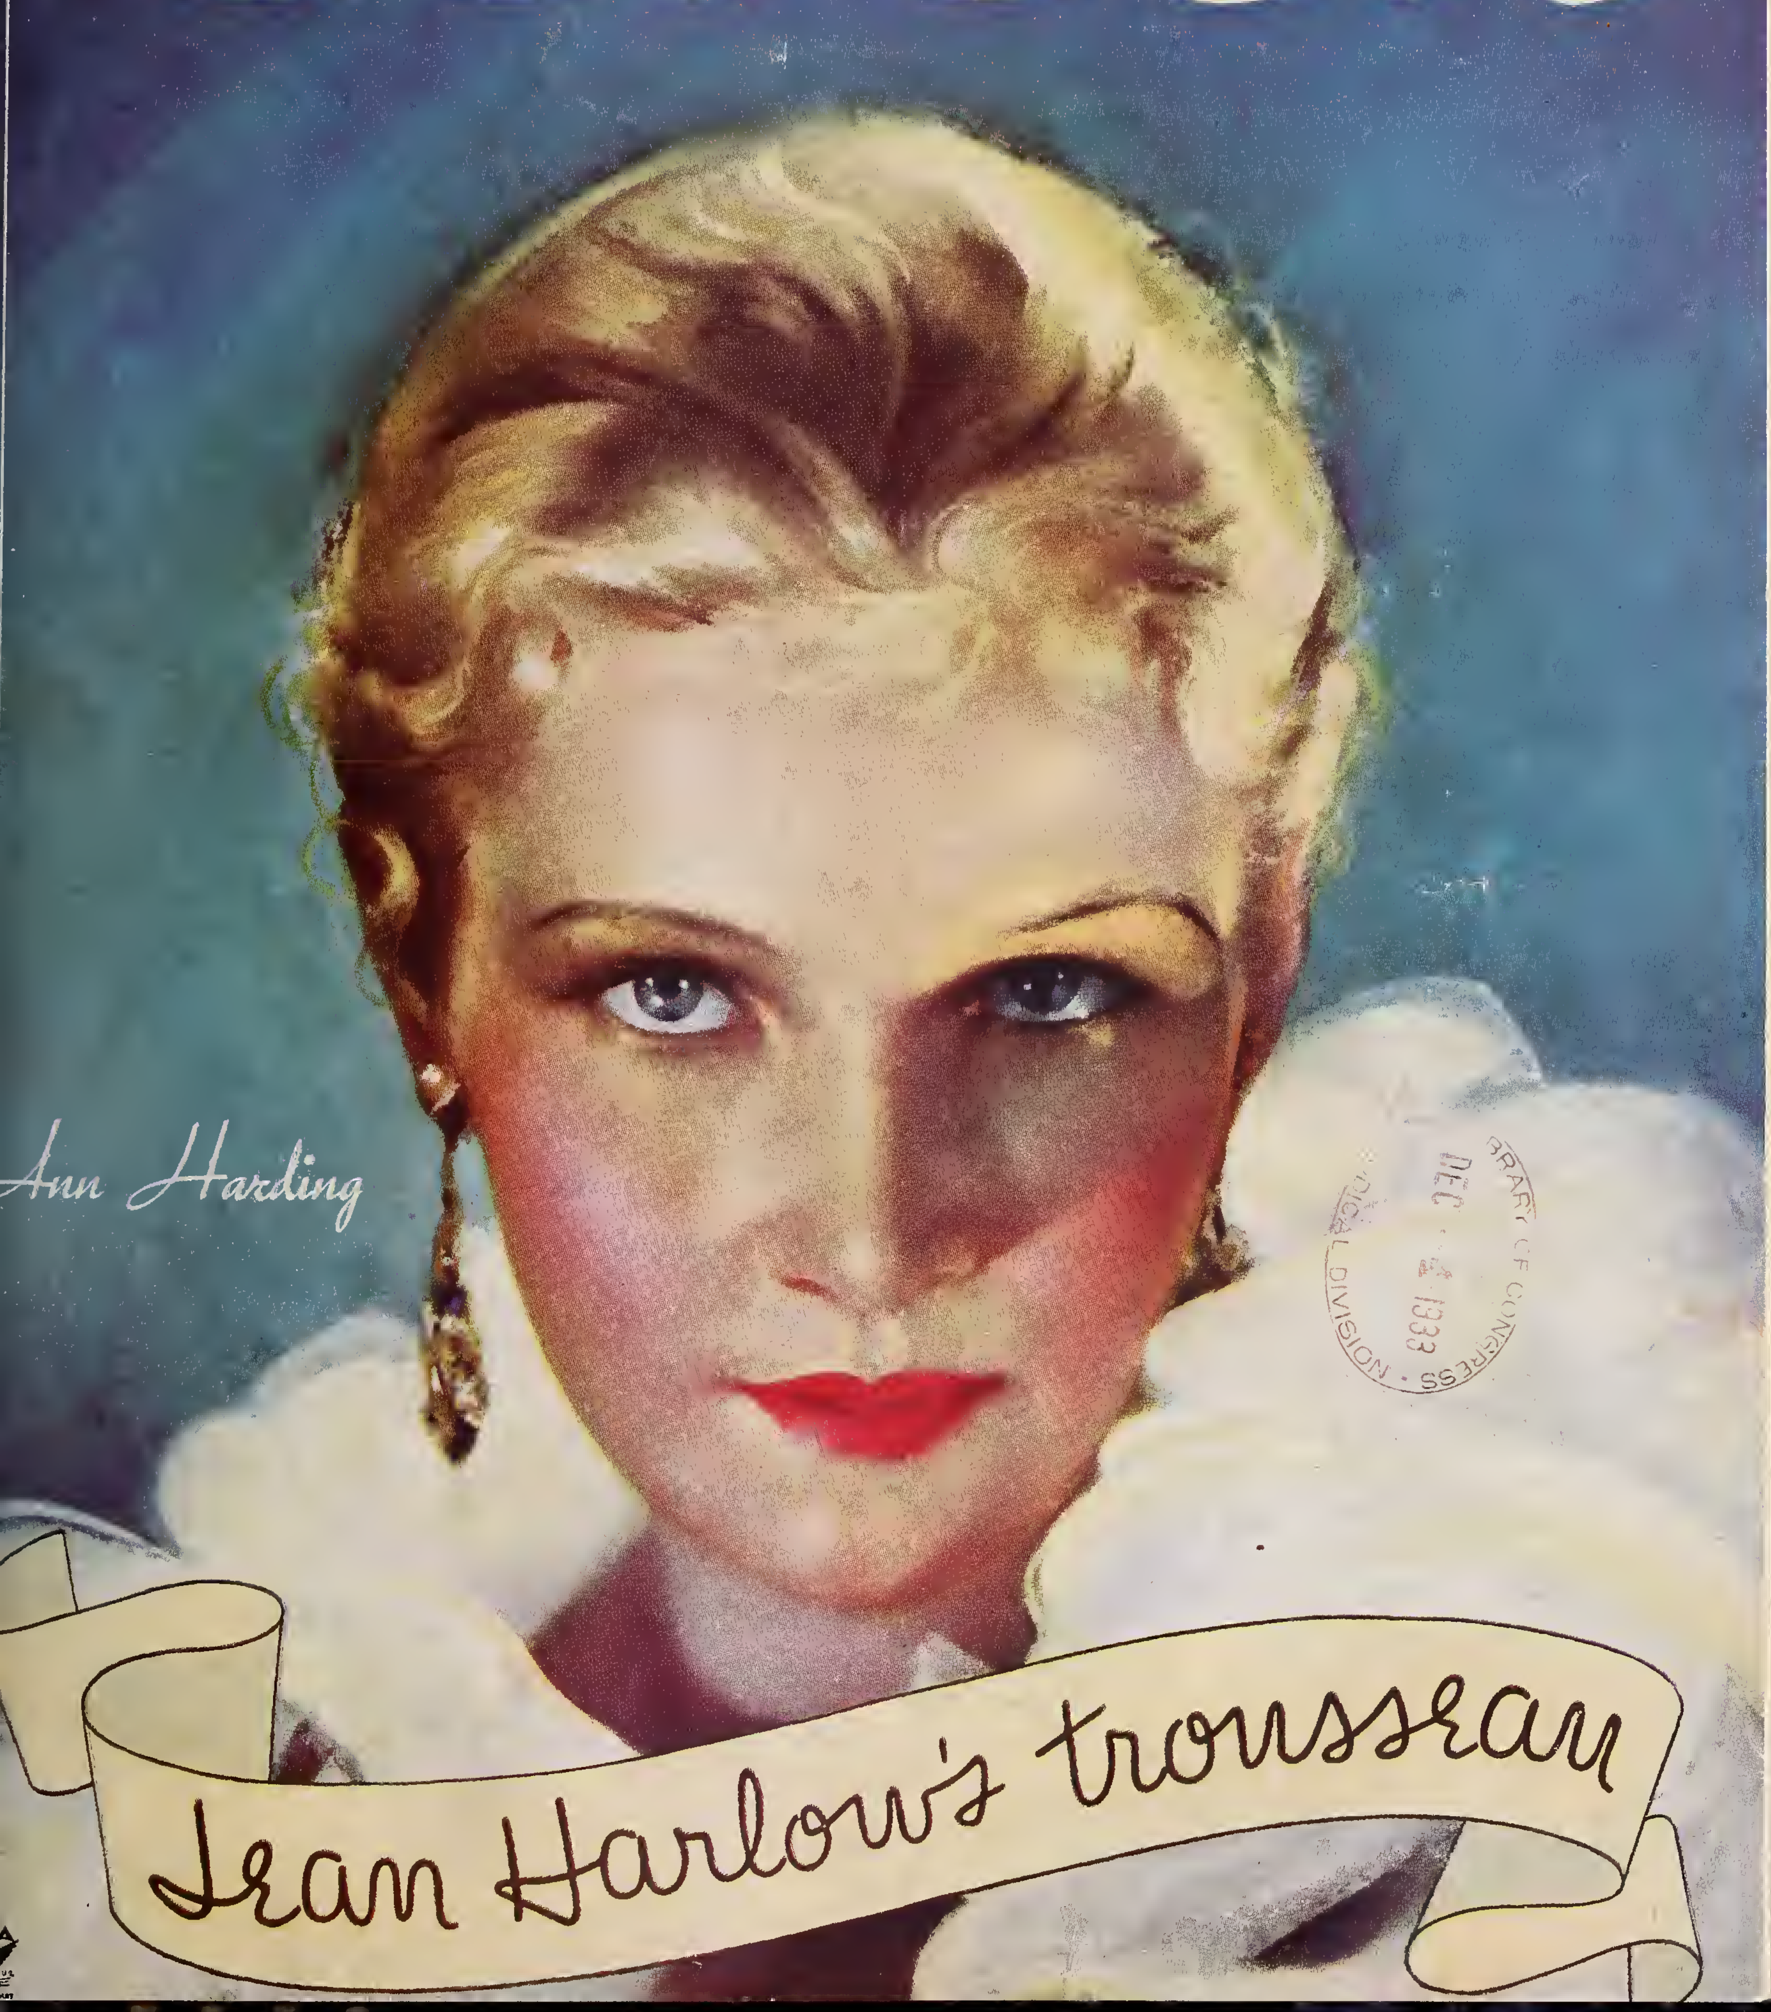
Copr., 1933, The American Tobacco Company

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION OF ANY SCREEN MAGAZINE

10 cents
'34

January

MODERN Screen



Ann Harding

Jean Harlow's trousseau

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
DEC 4 1933
PERIODICAL DIVISION

12 STAR TRIUMPH!

Now Comes the Year's Most Celebrated Hit!

★MARIE DRESSLER
★JOHN BARRYMORE
★WALLACE BEERY
★JEAN HARLOW
★LIONEL BARRYMORE
★LEE TRACY
★EDMUND LOWE
★BILLIE BURKE
★MADGE EVANS ★KAREN MORLEY
★JEAN HERSHOLT ★PHILLIPS HOLMES

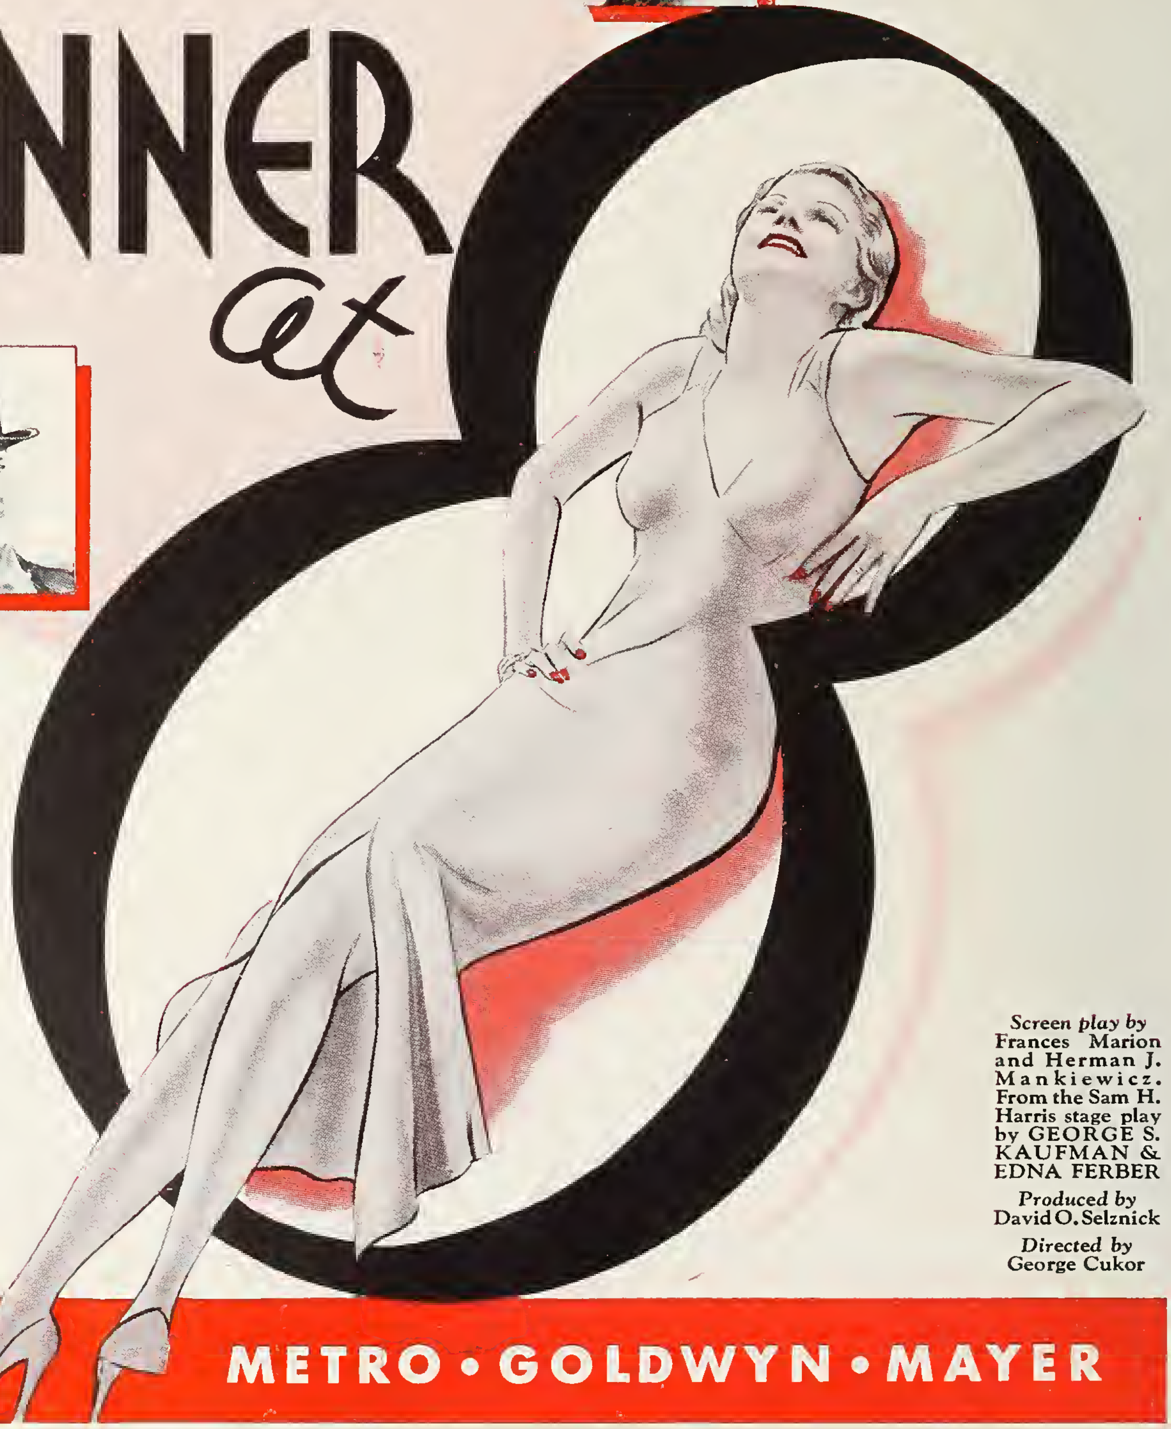
DINNER at 8



"DINNER AT 8" flames with drama . . . the fallen matinee idol . . . the millionaire's frivolous wife . . . the amorous doctor of the idle rich . . . stolen hours of romance . . . each thrilling episode played by a great STAR! No wonder it was Broadway's advanced-price film sensation for three months. It is YOURS with a thousand thrills NOW!

Screen play by Frances Marion and Herman J. Mankiewicz. From the Sam H. Harris stage play by GEORGE S. KAUFMAN & EDNA FERBER

Produced by David O. Selznick

Directed by George Cukor

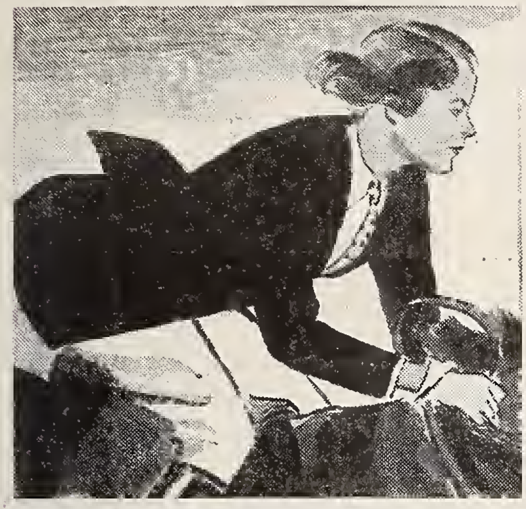
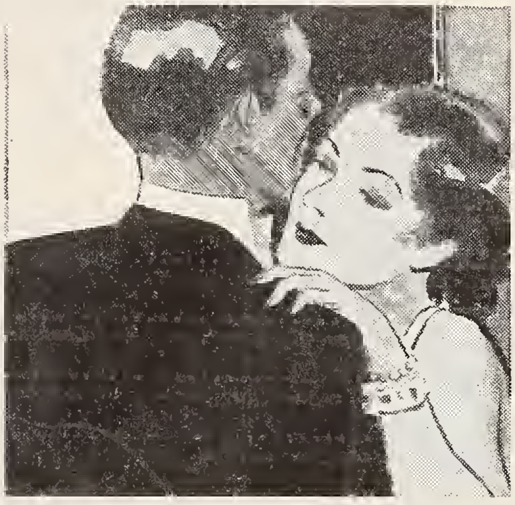
METRO • GOLDWYN • MAYER

Isn't It A Shame!

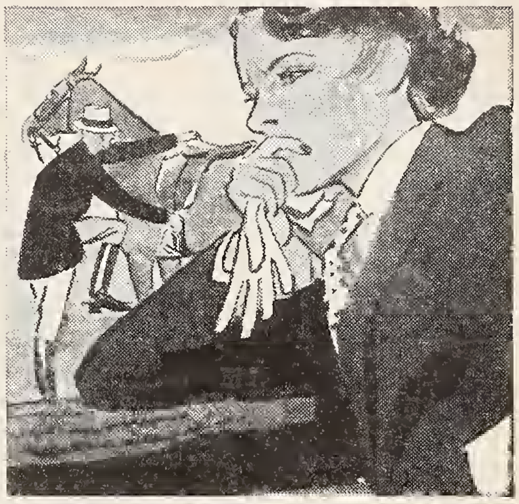
SHE'S GRAND ON A HORSE—AND A DANCE FLOOR—BUT OH, HER TERRIBLE TEETH!



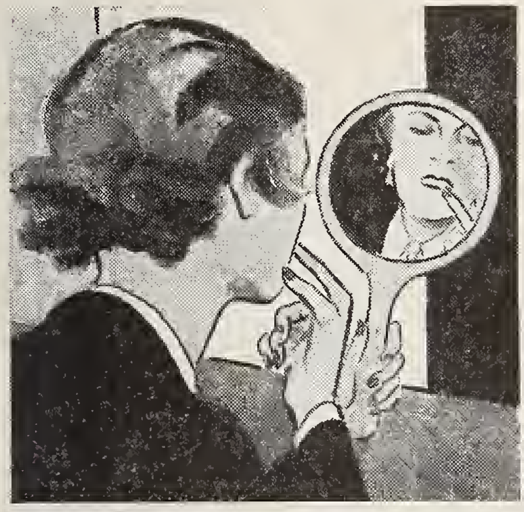
Julie sits a horse like a slim young princess—and rides like a demon Legionnaire. She's as daring as she is lovely. But there's a "but" about Julie!



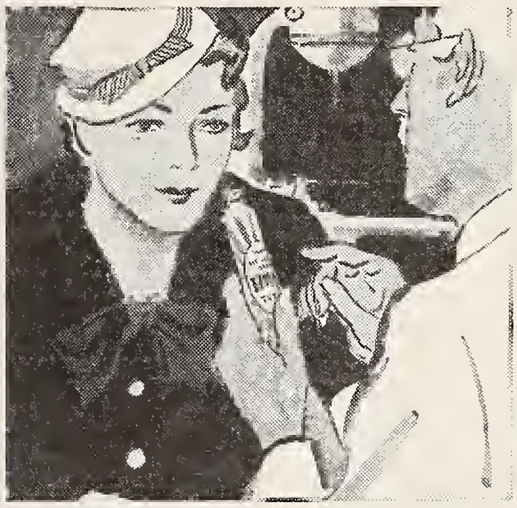
Julie dances as lightly as a floating autumn leaf. And her frocks are scanned by many an envious eye! But the "but" about Julie spoils all her good times!



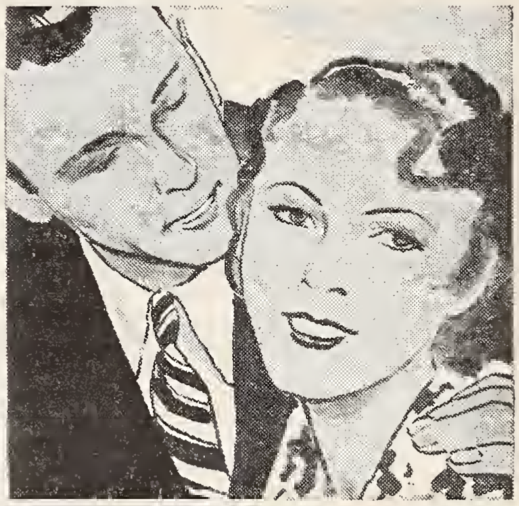
Young men ride with Julie—and they dance with Julie. But they never, never propose to Julie. For the "but" about Julie is her teeth!



If only Julie would look into the mirror—and see what the men see: her dingy, dull teeth! Julie doesn't dream that "pink tooth brush" is the cause!



Julie's dentist could tell her that she needs to massage her tender gums—with Ipana. If only Julie knew about Ipana Tooth Paste and massage . . .



It wouldn't be a month before her teeth would look grand! Her gums would be firmer. Her smile would be attractive. And Julie could hold her men!

Avoid "Pink Tooth Brush" with Ipana and Massage!

PERHAPS you have been a "Julie"–and have allowed "pink tooth brush" to spoil your teeth and your smile.

Don't be a "Julie" any longer. Get IPANA Tooth Paste. And not only clean your teeth with it—but each time put a little more Ipana on your brush or fingertip, and massage it directly into your tender gums.

Modern gums tend to become flabby and unhealthy—and to bleed—because modern foods are not sufficiently rough and crunchy to stimulate them. Your gums need massage—with Ipana.

Your dentist knows that there is ziratol in Ipana. This aids in toning the gums back to healthy hardness. And when you are rid of "pink tooth brush," you aren't likely to pick up gum infections like gingivitis, Vincent's disease, and pyorrhea. You'll feel safer, too, about the soundness of your teeth.

Ipana is a good tooth paste—and it is good for tender gums. Use it! You'll have good-looking teeth!

THE "IPANA TROUBADOURS" ARE BACK! EVERY WEDNESDAY EVENING . . . 9:00 P. M., E. S. T. WEAF AND ASSOCIATED N. B. C. STATIONS

IPANA
TOOTH PASTE

GOOD FOR TENDER GUMS
IPANA
TOOTH PASTE
BRISTOL-MYERS
NEW YORK

BRISTOL-MYERS CO., Dept. K-14
73 West Street, New York, N. Y.

Kindly send me a trial tube of IPANA TOOTH PASTE. Enclosed is a 3¢ stamp to cover partly the cost of packing and mailing.

Name..........

Street..........

City.......... State..........

DEC -1 1933
©CIB 208332

MODERN Screen

FEATURES

NRA
U.S.
WE DO OUR PART

GARBO FALLS IN LOVE.......Mary Ann Stevens 12
The Queen of Mystery succumbs to Cupid! What will the outcome be?

—AND CLARA BOW GOES GARBO.......Gladys Hall 13
Fact! The Brooklyn Bonfire craves solitude, the company of Rex Bell, and a good book or two

NO ROMANCE BALLYHOO, PLEASE.......Carter Bruce 14
These sweet newlyweds, Frances Dee and Joel McCrea, demand—and get—privacy

MY TEN FAVORITE HOLLYWOOD STORIES.......Irvin S. Cobb 16
The famous humorist recalls chuckles from Talkie Town

JEAN HARLOW'S TROUSSEAU.......Virginia T. Lane 24
The most glamorous blonde has the most glamorous clothes! Look and see!

THE PRIVATE HISTORY OF A CROONER.......Walter Ramsey 28
The life of Dick Powell is the story of a regular guy, crooner or no crooner

IF YOU MET MAX BAER.......Katherine Albert 32
Der Maxie, you'll discover, is like no one you ever met before

MARTYRS TO AMBITION.......Faith Baldwin 34
An article that will make you think—and wonder—and feel rather sad

DICK CROMWELL SURPRISES YOU.......Caroline Somers Hoyt 40
The glamorous women in his life would put to shame a Casanova

JOAN CRAWFORD'S "DANCING LADY" CONTEST....... 43
Marvelous Prizes! Lots of fun! Read the details

COULD YOU "TAKE IT"?.......Barbara Barry 46
The Mad Marxes make the life of their stooge, Margaret Dumont, miserable. But she loves it!

HOW A STAR WAS CREATED.......Charles Beahan 50
Margaret Sullavan meant what she said. But—she changed her mind. Why?

WITH HEARTBREAK BETWEEN THE LINES.......Adele Whitely Fletcher 54
You'll be amazed at the lonely letters—begging letters—despairing letters the stars receive

REPENTING AT LEISURE.......Martha Kerr 57
Judith Allen married for love but she married in haste, too. Read the inside story

I'VE DRESSED THEM ALL.......Howard Greer 62
This famous designer brings you more fascinating anecdotes

MODERN SCREEN MINIATURES

- DAVID'S LOST LOVE.......Sonia Lee 66
  David Manners' first love was too beautiful to last
- GAMBLING FOR FREEDOM.......Jack Grant 66
  All about an amusing pact between John Miljan and his wife
- WHY HOLLYWOOD SPURNED HER.......Nanette Kutner 67
  Have you wondered about Evelyn Brent? Here's the answer
- HEAD OF THE FAMILY.......Jack Jamison 67
  A charming story about little Cora Sue Collins that you'll adore

YOU CAN HAVE CLOTHES THE STARS WEAR.......Margery Wells 70
You really can! You might even win one—free! Read the details

DEPARTMENTS

REVIEWS—A TOUR OF TODAY'S TALKIES....... 6
Just criticisms of the current films

BETWEEN YOU AND ME....... 10
Your department—to express your views

THE HOLLYWOOD TIMES....... 35
Our last-minute newspaper

WHAT EVERY FAN SHOULD KNOW....... 36
Are you up on your low down about the stars? Here's the latest

MODERN SCREEN PATTERNS....... 72
You can make them—so easily. And so inexpensively

HOLLYWOOD CHARM GOSSIP....... 74
All the news on the latest fashion wrinkles—from the fashion center

THE MODERN HOSTESS.......Phyllis Deen-Dunning 76
Grand late-supper or after-party dishes that any hostess will want to know

BEAUTY ADVICE.......Mary Biddle 78
An expert tells you important facts about poise

DIRECTORY OF PICTURES....... 80
Short reviews of current films

And also: Portraits, 19; Picture News, 48; Gallery of Honor, 51; Babes in Joyland, 58; Double Christening, 60; These Mad Musicals. 64; Dressed for the Bowery 68; Hats for Winter Dresses, 73.

ERNEST V. HEYN, Editor

MARY BURGUM, Associate Editor
ABRIL LAMARQUE, Art Editor
WALTER RAMSEY, Western Representative

Published monthly and copyrighted 1933 by Dell Publishing Company, Incorporated. Office of publication at Washington and South Avenues, Dunellen, N. J. Executive and editorial offices, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; H. Meyer, Vice-President; M. Delacorte, Secretary. Vol. 7, No. 2, January, 1934. Printed in the U. S. A. Price in the United States $1.20 a year; 10c a copy. Canadian subscriptions, $2.40 a year. Foreign subscriptions, $2.20 a year. Entered as second class matter September 18, 1930, at the Post office at Dunellen, New Jersey, under act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material.

PARAMOUNT PRESENTS
Lewis Carroll's

Alice in Wonderland

with CHARLOTTE HENRY as "Alice"... and

RICHARD ARLEN · ROSCO ATES · GARY COOPER · LEON ERROL · LOUISE FAZENDA · W. C. FIELDS · SKEETS GALLAGHER · RAYMOND HATTON · EDWARD EVERETT HORTON · ROSCOE KARNS · MAE MARSH · POLLY MORAN · JACK OAKIE · EDNA MAY OLIVER · MAY ROBSON · CHARLIE RUGGLES · ALISON SKIPWORTH · NED SPARKS · FORD STERLING

Directed by Norman McLeod

ALICE is entertained by the Red Queen (Edna May Oliver) and the White Queen (Louise Fazenda).

ALICE meets the Duchess (Alison Skipworth) and hears the baby sing "Wow-wow-wow"

ALICE at the Tea Party with the Mad Hatter (Edward Everett Horton), the March Hare (Charlie Ruggles) and the Dormouse (Jackie Searle).

ALICE meets the White Rabbit (Skeets Gallagher).

ALICE ... Charlotte Henry, who was the final choice from 6000 candidates for the part.

If It's a PARAMOUNT PICTURE . . . It's the Best Show in Town

(Left) Miriam Hopkins, Fredric March and Gary Cooper in "Design for Living." (Right) Myrna Loy, Max Baer and Walter Huston in "The Prizefighter and the Lady."

REVIEWS

A TOUR OF TODAY'S TALKIES

By WALTER RAMSEY

LITTLE WOMEN (RKO)

PERFECT. If all the superlatives in the following reviews were grouped together—and another dozen added—there still wouldn't be enough to express adequately the beauty, the sheer loveliness of this masterpiece. This is the picture of pictures and should go down as one of the finest things ever tackled in the film industry.

Besides the delightfully human story (one you are all familiar with), marvelous photography and brilliant direction, you have the privilege of watching the performances of the most perfect cast ever assembled, headed by Katharine Hepburn, than whom there is none better. She was grand in "Bill of Divorcement" and "Morning Glory." She is amazing in this! You'll long remember her Jo March.

Joan Bennett as Amy, the youngest of the March clan, was a delicious surprise. We didn't know she was such a swell actress. Jean Parker as Beth and Frances Dee as Meg topped anything they have ever done. Spring Byington was ideal as Mother March. Edna May Oliver as the aunt, Paul Lukas as Professor Baer, Douglas Montgomery as Laurie and Henry Stephenson as Mr. Lawrence were all outstanding. And a special bouquet to George Cukor, the director.

But why say more? See it for yourself, and you will agree that it is one of the greatest. It is a picture that will be enjoyed and wept over by everyone.

[● Recommended
●● Specially recommended
Brief reviews on page 80.]

●● Little Women
●● The Prizefighter and the Lady
●● Footlight Parade
●● Only Yesterday
●● Eskimo
●● Man's Castle
●● Design for Living
● King for a Night
●● The World Changes
● Christopher Bean
●● Broadway Through a Keyhole
● The Mad Game
● The House on 56th Street
White Woman
The Invisible Man
The Worst Woman in Paris
● Female
Olsen's Big Moment
● My Woman
● The Kennel Murder Case
Special Investigator
● Havana Widows
Hell and High Water
College Coach

THE PRIZEFIGHTER AND THE LADY (M-G-M)

EXTRA SPECIAL. This film excels anything ever done in this line. The story packs a terrific wallop. The fight between Max Baer and Primo Carnera is alone worth the price of admission. Besides this, there's a swell love story, glorious acting, including the surprise performance of Baer, and direc- (Continued on page 8)

Beauty Contest!

Get a Camay Complexion and You'll be Admired Wherever You Go

"BEAUTY CONTEST?" Certainly! Every woman in the world is entered. Your beauty, your charm, your skin are judged by every man and every woman you chance to meet.

So get yourself a Camay Complexion! It will earn for you favor and praise. And then you'll thank heaven for a soap like Camay which imparts to the feminine skin a lovely peach-bloom texture.

"The Soap of Beautiful Women is an excellent name for Camay," wrote a girl from Washington, D. C. "Every girl I know who uses Camay has a lovely clear complexion."

"My skin is so much fresher since I've been using Camay," said a young New Yorker. "I admit I admire myself in the glass."

THE "GOOD TASTE TREND" IS ALL TO CAMAY

Try Camay yourself! Use it faithfully for one month! It's changing the soap habits of the nation! Every day thousands and thousands of women—forsaking all other soaps—are taking up Camay.

Perfumed as if it came from Paris—smart as the newest fashion—Camay looks and smells high-priced. Yet you'll be delighted to know that it costs but a trifle. Get a supply of Camay today!

Another Beauty Contest Won! The unforgettable thing about this girl is her lovely Camay Complexion. It wins attentions—compliments—in her daily Beauty Contest.

CAMAY
THE SOAP OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN
CAMAY

Camay is the modern beauty soap—pure creamy-white and lavish of lather. Wrapped in green and yellow, fresh in Cellophane. Use it on your face and hands, and in your bath!

Copr. 1933, Procter & Gamble Co.

CAMAY the Soap of Beautiful Women . . .

(Continued from page 6)

tion and photography that are pretty well-nigh perfect.

Briefly, the story concerns the cocky but likeable Steve Morgan (Baer) who becomes a runner-up for champ through the efforts of his manager, Walter Huston. He woos and weds Myrna Loy, sweetie of Willy Ryan (Otto Kruger), big nightclub racketeer. Success, plus feminine flattery, goes to Steve's over-sized head—and Myrna walks out on him. In a rage, Steve fires his manager, goes on a drinking orgy and winds up in a sad condition for the big fight with the world's champ (Primo Carnera).

You'll like Baer as an actor. He makes the character of Steve Morgan ring true and his song and dance number is a knockout. Myrna Loy gives a fine, sympathetic performance. Otto Kruger plays brilliantly and Huston does his usual swell work.

You're bound to like this. The kids will love it and fight fans will literally eat it up. See it by all means.

FOOTLIGHT PARADE (Warners)

MARVELOUS MUSICAL. Here is the best yet turned out by the studio that gave us "42nd Street" and "Golddiggers of 1933." The story is so good for this type of picture that it rates special mention. Busby Berkeley deserves a great hand for his dance numbers, which are better than ever.

And what a cast: Jimmy Cagney does his rôle of the musical producer in a fast, sizzling tempo. He should be in love with his secretary (Joan Blondell) but, instead, he falls for a dizzy, blonde golddigger. Don't worry, he finds out in time to clinch with Joan. Then, there's that team of Ruby Keeler and Dick Powell, who give you some great numbers that will send you away whistling. Frank McHugh . . . Guy Kibbee . . . Hugh Herbert . . . but why say more?

The big climax comes when Jimmy is forced (in two short days) to show three new stage ideas in three different theatres, miles apart. The shows are knockouts. The rush from one theatre to another is made via bus—and the girls dress and undress therein. Then—the leading man breaks down and who do you suppose steps into his place. Right—James Cagney!

Take the whole family to this one and you'll see a great show.

ONLY YESTERDAY (Universal)

BEAUTIFUL PICTURE. 'Tis seldom one runs across a picture that is so human and pathetic that even the most hardened need not be ashamed of a tear. The picture begins in the year 1929, just as the market crashes. Then there is a flash-back to the entry of our boys into the World War—"which seems only yesterday."

For the remainder of the story we are shown the history of two young sweethearts (Margaret Sullavan and John Boles). Of their pre-war romance . . . his sailing before the wedding could be arranged . . . and his return. He is a father, but he doesn't even recognize the mother!

Margaret Sullavan, new to the screen, makes as delightful and interesting an entrance to motion pictures as we have ever seen. She is a superb actress—a different personality. John Boles gives a fine, restrained performance. Billie Burke, playing the rôle of the girl's aunt, does nicely and Reginald Denny handles capably the rôle of Billie's husband.

While this picture is not particularly recommended for children, it is placed on the "must see" list for all others.

(Continued on page 95)

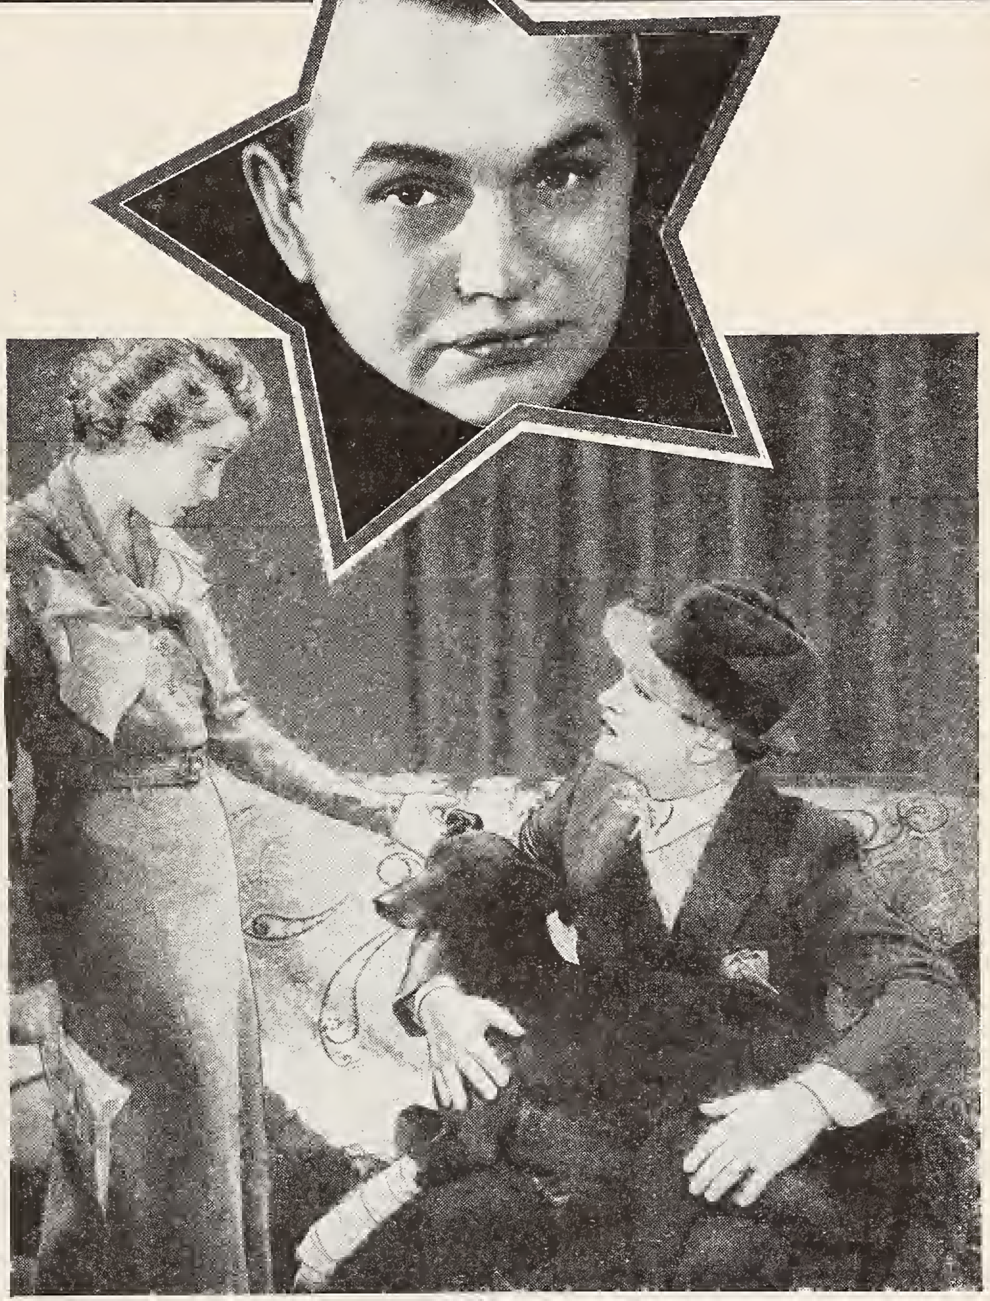
George Brent and Ruth Chatterton who are teamed in "Female."

Paul Lukas and Katharine Hepburn in the delightful "Little Women."

Paul Kelly and Hugh O'Connell in "Broadway Through a Keyhole."

Naturally... Warner Bros.' famous star family supplies 1934's first dramatic hit!



The star of the month—in a story from the book-of-the-month—makes the picture of the month, as Warner Bros. again team the author and star of "Little Caesar" . . . This roaring, real life drama of a "plunger" of the tracks, wagering body and soul—hazarding love and life, is hailed by a million readers as W. R. Burnett's greatest story...awaited by fifty million theatre-goers as Robinson's greatest picture!

Edw. G. Robinson

in

"DARK HAZARD"

A First National Picture with Genevieve Tobin • Glenda Farrell • Directed by Alfred E. Green

BETWEEN YOU and ME

What have you to say about the movies and its players? Remember, this page is reserved for your opinions, so please air 'em

Dear Friends:

Keep your eye on Jean Muir, who appears in "The World Changes"; Paul Kelly in "Broadway Through a Keyhole"; Margaret Sullavan, in "Only Yesterday"; Evelyn Venable in "Cradle Song"; Fred Astaire in "Dancing Lady" and "Flying Down to Rio."

I think most, if not all, of these players are headed for big things. When you've seen them, drop me a line and give me your honest reaction.

Already you're expressing rabid and widely divergent opinions on Mae West, and her chances for continued success. My thought is that Mae went too far in "I'm No Angel"—the twisting of every possible situation into a sex gag palled on me. Maybe I'm wrong. What did you think?

The Editor

Please address all letters to
The Editor, MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Opinions of a "Neutral" Fan

A "WELL WISHER" of Mussoorie, India, says:

I have a deep admiration of American talkies. Therefore, being neither English nor American, I speak without prejudice in making a serious criticism of the appalling voices and accents of many of the players.

Admittedly, Americanese for Americans, but producers should remember that Hollywood films are not made for the American public alone. They are shown and heard all over the world, on which Hollywood depends greatly from the financial point of view.

My criticism applies chiefly to featured players and supporting casts. The stars, with few exceptions, speak very well. Nothing could be more attractive than the voices and pronunciation of Ronald Colman, Ruth Chatterton, Kay Francis or William Powell. But George Raft, Jean Harlow, Una Merkel and many others; well, it's just too bad!

British films are making strides in popularity against the American and it is partly due to this voice question. So, Hollywood, look sharp and try to improve matters immediately, if you want to retain your place of supremacy in the film world.

A Great Big Hand for the Big Bad Villain

OVA HUNT of Huntsville, Ala., proves herself fair-minded when she says:

Sometimes I think movie fans judge players by the roles they portray rather than their acting ability. This is most unfair. Of course, it is only natural that we be thrilled when the hero gets the upper hand in the picture, but when it comes to comparing players or judging talent, what about the villain? He usually has the most difficult role in the cast, a role that requires much rehearsing and demands good acting. Watch him in the next picture and see if I'm not right. So, let us give more praise to Jack LaRue, Irving Pichel and others who play these difficult parts. They certainly deserve it. So here's mine.

A Big Bouquet for Lee

MARIE LA ROCHE of London, England, writes from abroad to say:

I am not in the habit of writing raves, nor am I the hysterical type who goes crazy over each new screen personality. But, after seeing Lee Tracy's latest mirth-quake, I simply must get some of my admiration for this unique actor off my chest.

Mr. Tracy seems to actually live each character he portrays and interprets a role in an inimitable way. This man is a comic genius. He can have you "in the aisles" with laughter one moment, gripping the sides of your seat with excitement at his amazing speed the next, and yet he is able to bring a lump to your throat quicker than any other actor when portraying an emotional scene. He has great sincerity. What a wonderful character he made of the bewildered and lovable "Private Jones." Some of the scenes in this film were the most poignant I have ever seen.

And so, all hail to the finest actor on the screen. We cannot see enough of this charming wisecracker.

Here's for Wholesome Entertainment!

IDA M. BELL of Philadelphia, Pa., writes:

We—and I speak for a host of movie-goers—would welcome another Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter film. Many of us are weary of crook dramas, sordid stories and jazzy tales and turn to this wholesome type of entertainment as a flower turns to glorious sunshine.

Both Gaynor and Baxter have the gift of innate charm and appeal. They both have the power of bringing out the romance in a picture and making it shine. Together, they have had two cinema successes—"Daddy Long Legs" and "Paddy the Next Best Thing." How about a third?

(We're all for it, too. Perhaps when the powers that be at Fox read this, the idea will appeal to them.)

Praise for Another Tracy

R. E. McCANN of Pacific Grove, Calif., says:

Unless I am very much mistaken, there is a certain actor who is fast reaching the top of his profession and is also winning the admiration of many a movie-goer.

It is Spencer Tracy who is making a place for himself, a unique place—different from all the rest.

What that "something" about him is, is difficult to say, but after seeing "The Power and the Glory," I can only quote, "You can't judge him by ordinary standards—he was too big." And Spencer Tracy is too big, has too deep an understanding of the character he plays to be regarded merely as one of many.

Some Praise for Garbo and Gilbert

MRS. J. E. TURNER of Seattle, Wash., writes:

I can hardly wait for the picture, "Queen Christina," to be released

(Continued on page 83)

"A FEW CENTS FOR TINTEX DOES WONDERS!"

It's Smart to Use Tintex!

"YOU SIMPLY MUST USE TINTEX TINTS AND DYES!"

These famous Tints and Dyes mean a more fashionable Wardrobe—lovelier Home Decorations—at less cost!

IT'S smart to use Tintex—smart because it brings Fashion's newest colors to every washable fabric—smart because it saves you many, many dollars.

●

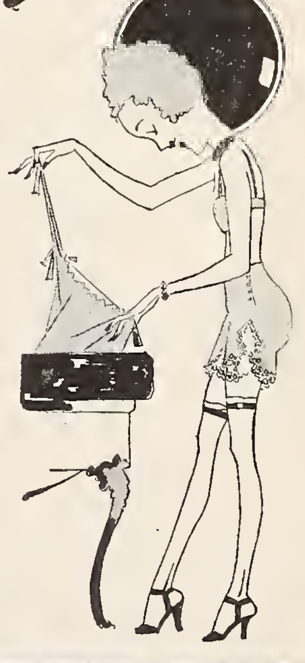
If anything in your wardrobe or home decorations is faded, Tintex restores its original color. Or gives them an entirely different color, if you wish. That's the beauty of Tintex.

●

Just "tint as you rinse"—it takes but a few minutes. That's the simplicity of Tintex.

●

It costs but a few cents to duplicate high-priced professional work. That's the economy of Tintex. Be smart! Start using Tintex today. 35 brilliant, long-lasting colors.



On sale at drug stores and notion counters everywhere

Tintex

..World's largest selling

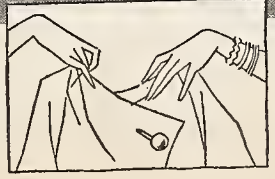
TINTS and DYES

PARK & TILFORD, Distributors

Tintex
TINTS AS YOU RINSE

To Change Dark Colors to Light—use Tintex COLOR REMOVER

Supposing you have a dark dress (or any other dark-colored article) and are pining for a lighter colored one . . .



Tintex Color Remover will safely and speedily take out all trace of color (including black) from any fabric . . .

Then it can be redyed or tinted with Tintex Tints and Dyes in any new shade to suit yourself—either light or dark.

(Above) On the "Queen Christina" set. A set that is seething with emotion! Garbo in love—? How does Gilbert feel about it? And Rouben Mamoulian?

GARBO FALLS IN LOVE—

By MARY ANN STEVENS

THE drama of that almost legendary figure out of Swedish history, the royal Queen Christina who masqueraded as a boy, now being enacted before the cameras of Culver City, cannot be half so exciting as the thing that has happened behind the cameras during the filming of the picture.

Garbo has fallen in love! This time, with her new director, Rouben Mamoulian.

Only a few people on the M-G-M lot know of it—the privileged few who work daily on the set with Garbo, and the members of the cast.

Jack Gilbert knows it. Jack—who was once himself so madly, so publicly, so obviously in love with the glamorous Swede that his very existence was dependent upon her momentary favor.

It is a strange story, and no one yet knows what the consequences will be. For Garbo at her most docile and phlegmatic has struck terror to the hearts of the M-G-M executives with her quiet, but none the less forceful, decisions to work or rest as the mood struck her.

With Garbo it was a case of love at first sight. You read recently in Modern Screen of the beautiful gesture which Garbo made upon her return from Sweden when she heard of the plight of Jack Gilbert.

She was, of course, interested that Gilbert give a good account of himself, not alone for his sake, but for the sake of her picture. She had taken this stand. Now it was up to him to make good.

And then she met her new director, and what has happened to the aloof, silent Garbo seems to have blotted out all consideration for anything, anyone else.

It is as if this woman who was born to simulate and portray passion had never been in love, never known love before, as if her schoolgirl worship for the tragic genius of Mauritz Stiller, her brooding gratefulness which sometimes blazed into love for the devoted and adoring Gilbert, were but preludes to the grande passion she now feels.

Her affection is so openly displayed on the set, her sudden interest so intense, that it has all but interfered with the progress of the picture. Everyone on the set knows—and wonders!

She does not mind. She must always be looking at Mamoulian, those slumbrous eyes lighting suddenly with admiration—and more.

And how does Mamoulian return this affection? No one knows, yet. No one dares ask. When a queen falls in love it does not seem quite the thing for one to ask the favored one how he feels about it. How should he feel? Yet there are those cynics (and Hollywood has more than its share) who say, "Mamoulian is, of course, anxious to get a good picture, and he may be—well—just diplomatic. And it must be an easy matter to be diplomatic in such a situation." But time holds the solution.

And time, too, holds another solution. What of Jack Gilbert, Jack Gilbert who is trying to, who must make his come-back in this picture? How must he be feeling? What are his emotions as he watches the progress of this latest Hollywood affair!

YOU say he is no longer in love with Garbo. And you are right. You say it cannot affect him. I am not so sure of that. For he had no sooner stepped onto the set to begin work than Garbo lost interest in him completely. It was as if he were someone hired to do a job, not

(Continued on page 87)

J. B. Scott

AND CLARA BOW GOES GARBO

By GLADYS HALL

(Top) Clara Bow and Rex Bell, her husband, at the opening o. "Hoopla." This is the only première Clara has attended for ages. She hasn't changed. She's being herself for the first time in her heretofore unhappy life. (Left) A "typical" Bow pose—from "Hoopla!"

READ this story carefully. Make note of the title. Cast an eye on the pictures. Otherwise you may suppose that there has been a typographical error and that this story and the one on the opposite page have been accidentally switched.

Nothing of the kind, however, has happened. This is a Bow story.

Clara tanks-she-go-home—and goes.

Clara never goes to parties, openings (her own picture, "Hoopla," rated an exception), the fights, the Grove, the Vendome or any of the places where stars foregather to make a little merry-merry.

Clara wears no make-up off the set. You wouldn't recognize her as Clara Bow if you met her face to face under the noonday sun.

Clara wears old clothes and takes hikes.

Clara has a No Visitors sign on her set. Just like Garbo. If you should commit the criminal blunder of stumbling onto the Garbo set you would be guillotined. Ditto for Bow.

Clara almost never gives interviews and may go so completely Garbo as never to give one again from this time forth.

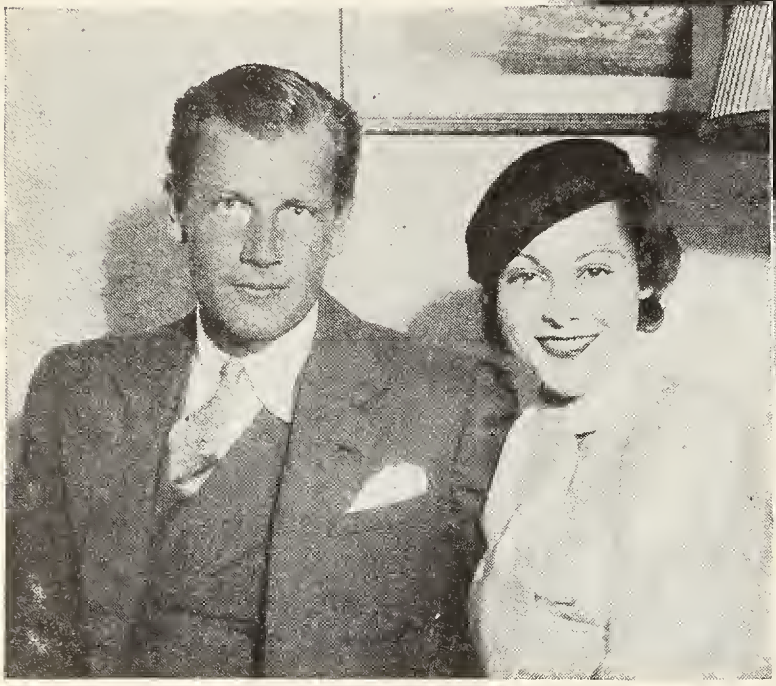
Clara is wearing spectacles. She has a slight astigmatism. She doesn't care a rap—about wearing the glasses, I mean.

Clara has the body of a Mae West, she has the smart-cracking line on the screen, the young voluptuousness, the come-see-me-sometime eyes and curves. She has the lone-wolf spirit of the lonely Swede.

ALMOST from the beginning Clara has played a lone hand. Almost from the beginning Garbo played a lone hand. I say "almost" because, in the very beginning, Garbo did go to social affairs, did give interviews, did pose in shorts and bathing suits and what-nots for photographers.

Even in her troubles, her newspaper notoriety and other unpleasantnesses, Clara has been, more or less, obscure and alone. When she was sued (as who is not?) it was by a little, salaried secretary. (Continued on page 101)

(Below) A picture taken after their runaway marriage at Rye, New York. Oh, yes—they'll pose for an occasional picture. To refuse would only make the press more avid. But no hand-holding or lovey-dovey poses! Nossir!



WHEN Frances Dee and Joel McCrea had bought their marriage license, they started out to look for a little white church in which to be married. They had always wanted to be married in a white church. They found one in a small town called Rye, New York. It was a Methodist church and there they became man and wife.

But neither Frances nor Joel told me about the little white church—nor any of the details in connection with their wedding. I got what facts I'm about to tell you from a close personal friend of theirs.

The one thing both Frances and Joel were set on was that there was to be no romance ballyhoo. And they were absolutely sincere—so sincere, in fact, that they did not run from newspaper reporters and photographers. This hide-and-seek game that many stars play with the press is a sure-fire method of getting publicity. Frances and Joel posed for their pictures together (but without arms entwined about each other). They talked to a few newspaper people (but without telling the reporters how much in love they were).

Though they had been engaged for several months, the wedding happened suddenly. Frances was at Fort Myer, Virginia, on location for her new picture, "Rodney." Something went wrong with the story and certain scenes had to be rewritten. The company told her she could go to New York for three days. That gave Frances an idea.

She telephoned Joel at once. He hopped in a plane immediately and the next day they were at City Hall getting their license. The reporters hadn't been tipped off. Nobody but the Chief Clerk knew who they were.

IT was Joel's first trip to New York, but when the friends who went with them tried to point out the Empire State Building and other points of interest, Joel gave New York's skyline only the merest glance. He was interested in just one thing—Frances.

. . . NO ROMANCE

BALLYHOO, PLEASE!

By CARTER
BRUCE

. . . The perfect married couple! But Frances Dee and Joel McCrea won't use their love and marriage as a publicity racket! Here's why

A studio executive volunteered to lend them his roadster for a couple of days, so they could drive out of town and find their little white church. Six days later the owner of the car as well as the other New York Radio Pictures executives were trying to find them. They turned up a week—to the day —after their marriage, contrite at having caused anybody any trouble, but too happy to care much. They had made one bow to Frances' career. They had telephoned her company at Fort Myer and discovered she wouldn't be needed.

And that was the way of the marriage and honeymoon of Joel McCrea and Frances Dee. It was as simple as that—and done with no hectic front-page stories, no publicity, no ballyhoo.

It all came from an agreement they had made when they first became engaged. They were not—they promised each other—going to do the things that most Hollywood engaged couples do.

Before their marriage they agreed to make a personal appearance for their studio. It had just one string to it. "Not one word shall be said about our going together—and no informal pictures shall be taken of us together."

Of course, the boys in the RKO publicity department thought the couple were just kidding. They immediately sent out a story to the manager of the San Francisco theater where Frances and Joel were appearing to the effect that " . . . this charming new Hollywood romance . . . everyone expects them to elope on a moment's notice . . . they might even be married on this little trip."

However, exactly ten minutes before Frances and Joel were set to take their bows before the northern city audience, Frances got a look at the speech in the hands of the master of ceremonies. He was trying to memorize it and she caught such phrases as "Hollywood sweethearts . . . another charming romance . . . elopement."

She stalked to her dressing room; put on her hat. Joel was summoned, consulted, and just like that they started for the door marked exit.

(Continued on page 105)

● These are the Camera Coast anecdotes which most amused America's famous humorist and connoisseur of wit. And so Irvin S. Cobb has written them down here for you

Cartoons by
F. G. COOPER

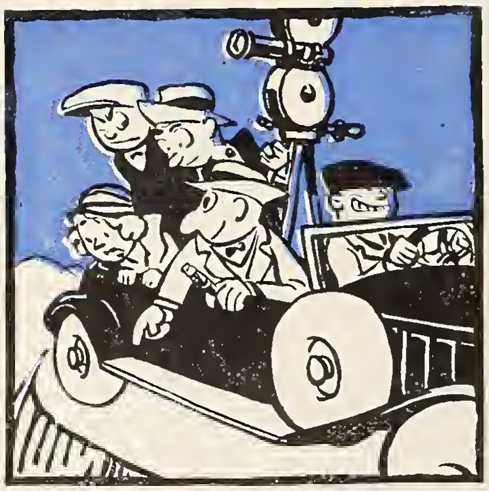
● A man back from Hollywood brought with him two anecdotes regarding a gentleman who holds an important, indeed a commanding, position in one of the biggest of the studios. This gentleman chooses subjects for screening; he casts companies; he passes on details of location, of costuming and of treatment; he bosses directors and he issues orders to actors.

Once upon a time he was told that the editorial department of his plant looked with an eye of favor on the project of making a film version of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." Promptly he put his foot down on it.

"Nix," he said, "we wouldn't do it. The public is fed up on these here college plays with football players for heroes."

Later, he personally was supervising the taking of certain scenes of a comedy. In the script prepared from the author's scenario by the continuity writer, he came upon a line to the effect that the leading woman should be pictured as seated alone in a deep reverie.

"Come with me, you," he said, indicating the assistant director, the leading lady and the boss camera-man. "I got just the place for taking this here piece of business."



He loaded the puzzled trio into an automobile, got in himself and bade the driver take them along a certain road winding into the foothills above Los Angeles. After an hour or so of steady travel, they came to where a narrow but precipitous canyon cut into the contours of the landscape. Here the leader of the expedition gave orders to halt.

"There you are," he stated, with a wave of his arm, "you could look maybe for a week and nowhere you wouldn't find no deeper reverie for her to be setting in than this."

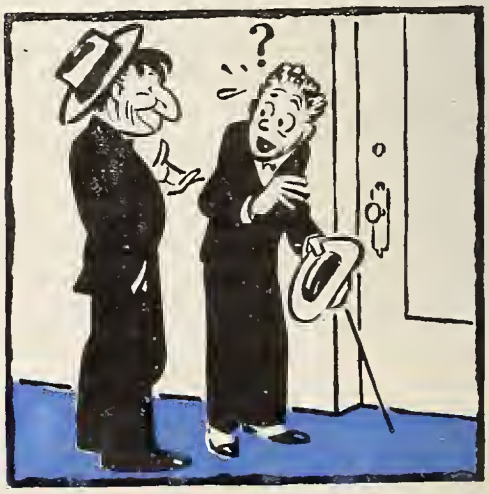
● When General Neville, the hero of the defense of Verdun, made his tour of America he was the guest of honor at a big public reception in one of the Southern California hotels. Among those invited to greet the distinguished Frenchman were the more prominent members of the moving picture colony.

At the doors of General Neville's suite, Will Rogers met Charlie Chaplin. Chaplin, who in private life is a reserved and rather shy little man, was considerably fussed over the prospect ahead of him.

"I suppose we're expected to say a few words to the General," he confided to Rogers. "But for the life of me I can't think of the best way to start the conversation."

Rogers gave the problem a moment's earnest consideration.

"Well," he drawled, "why don't you ask him if he was in the war,



My ten favorite Hollywood Stories

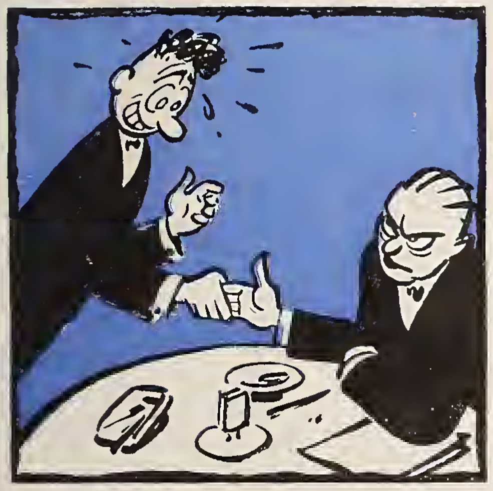
by Irvin S. Cobb and, if so, which side he was on? Then let nature take its course!"

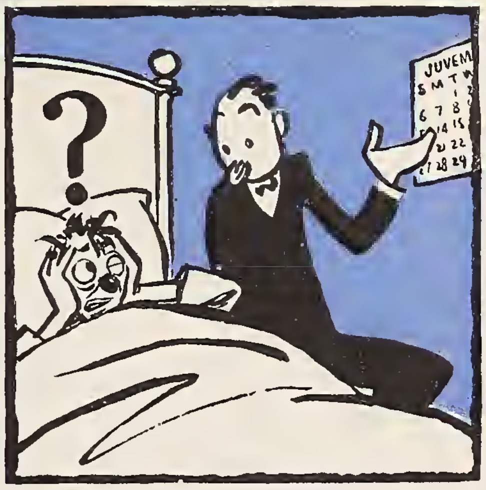
● Shortly before Wilson Mizner, the famous wit of Hollywood, died, he was sitting in the Brown Derby when there entered a bright youth, newly arrived from New York. The young gentleman, having made a local hit writing gags for radio programs and Broadway patter comedians, had on the strength of his genius secured a contract to do comic continuities for one of the smaller movie concerns. Seeing Mizner hunched in a corner, he asked for an introduction. And as he clasped the bony hand of perhaps the greatest wise-cracker America ever produced, he said:



"Mr. Mizner, I wonder how it's going to feel when two real humorists get together?"

And Mizner, out of the corner of his mouth, said: "Sucker, you'll never know!"

● A certain Hollywood actor got carried away by the spirit of these Repealish times and remained carried away for several days. He came to himself in his own room without knowing exactly how he got there. A friend sat beside him.



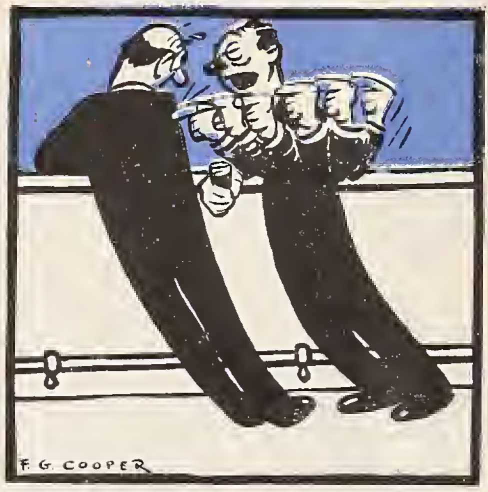
"Hello," he said, "what day is this?"

"This," said his friend, "is Thursday."

The invalid thought it over a minute.

"What became of Wednesday?" he asked.

● There is a certain young actor out there, who, when sober, is one of the most companionable of men. But when he indulges in strong water, his nature changes. He becomes disputatious and occasionally quarrelsome. Such times, he delights to corner some acquaintance and pin him down to a definite position on a subject and debate the point for hours and hours and hours.



One night, being in one of these alcoholically promoted moods, he trapped a friend against the bar of a Los Angeles club.

"You go 'round saying you know so mush, don't you?" he demanded belligerently. "You go 'round saying you know so many people in this town, don't you? Thatsh kinda fellow you you are, aint' you —huh?"

"Not at all," protested the hapless friend. "I never—"

"Pleash don't contradict me," said the actor; "thatsh no way to carry on argument between gen'men. Lemme get (Continued on page 93)

COME TAKE A JOY RIDE THROUGH THE SKY!

See this grand, breath-catching climax of all screen musical entertainments! . . . A picture that gaily spurns the earth and chases Folly among the stars!

DOLORES DEL RIO

"FLYING DOWN TO RIO"

Heart-racing romance . . . so daring, so different . . . that your wildest dreams of a "music show" will come to enchanting fulfillment! . . . Thrilling stars, teasing tunes, delirious fun and gorgeous girls in scenes of ravishing beauty . . . The year's most exciting revel in the theatre bids you "Happy landing" with

DOLORES DEL RIO
GENE RAYMOND · RAUL ROULIEN
GINGER ROGERS · FRED ASTAIRE

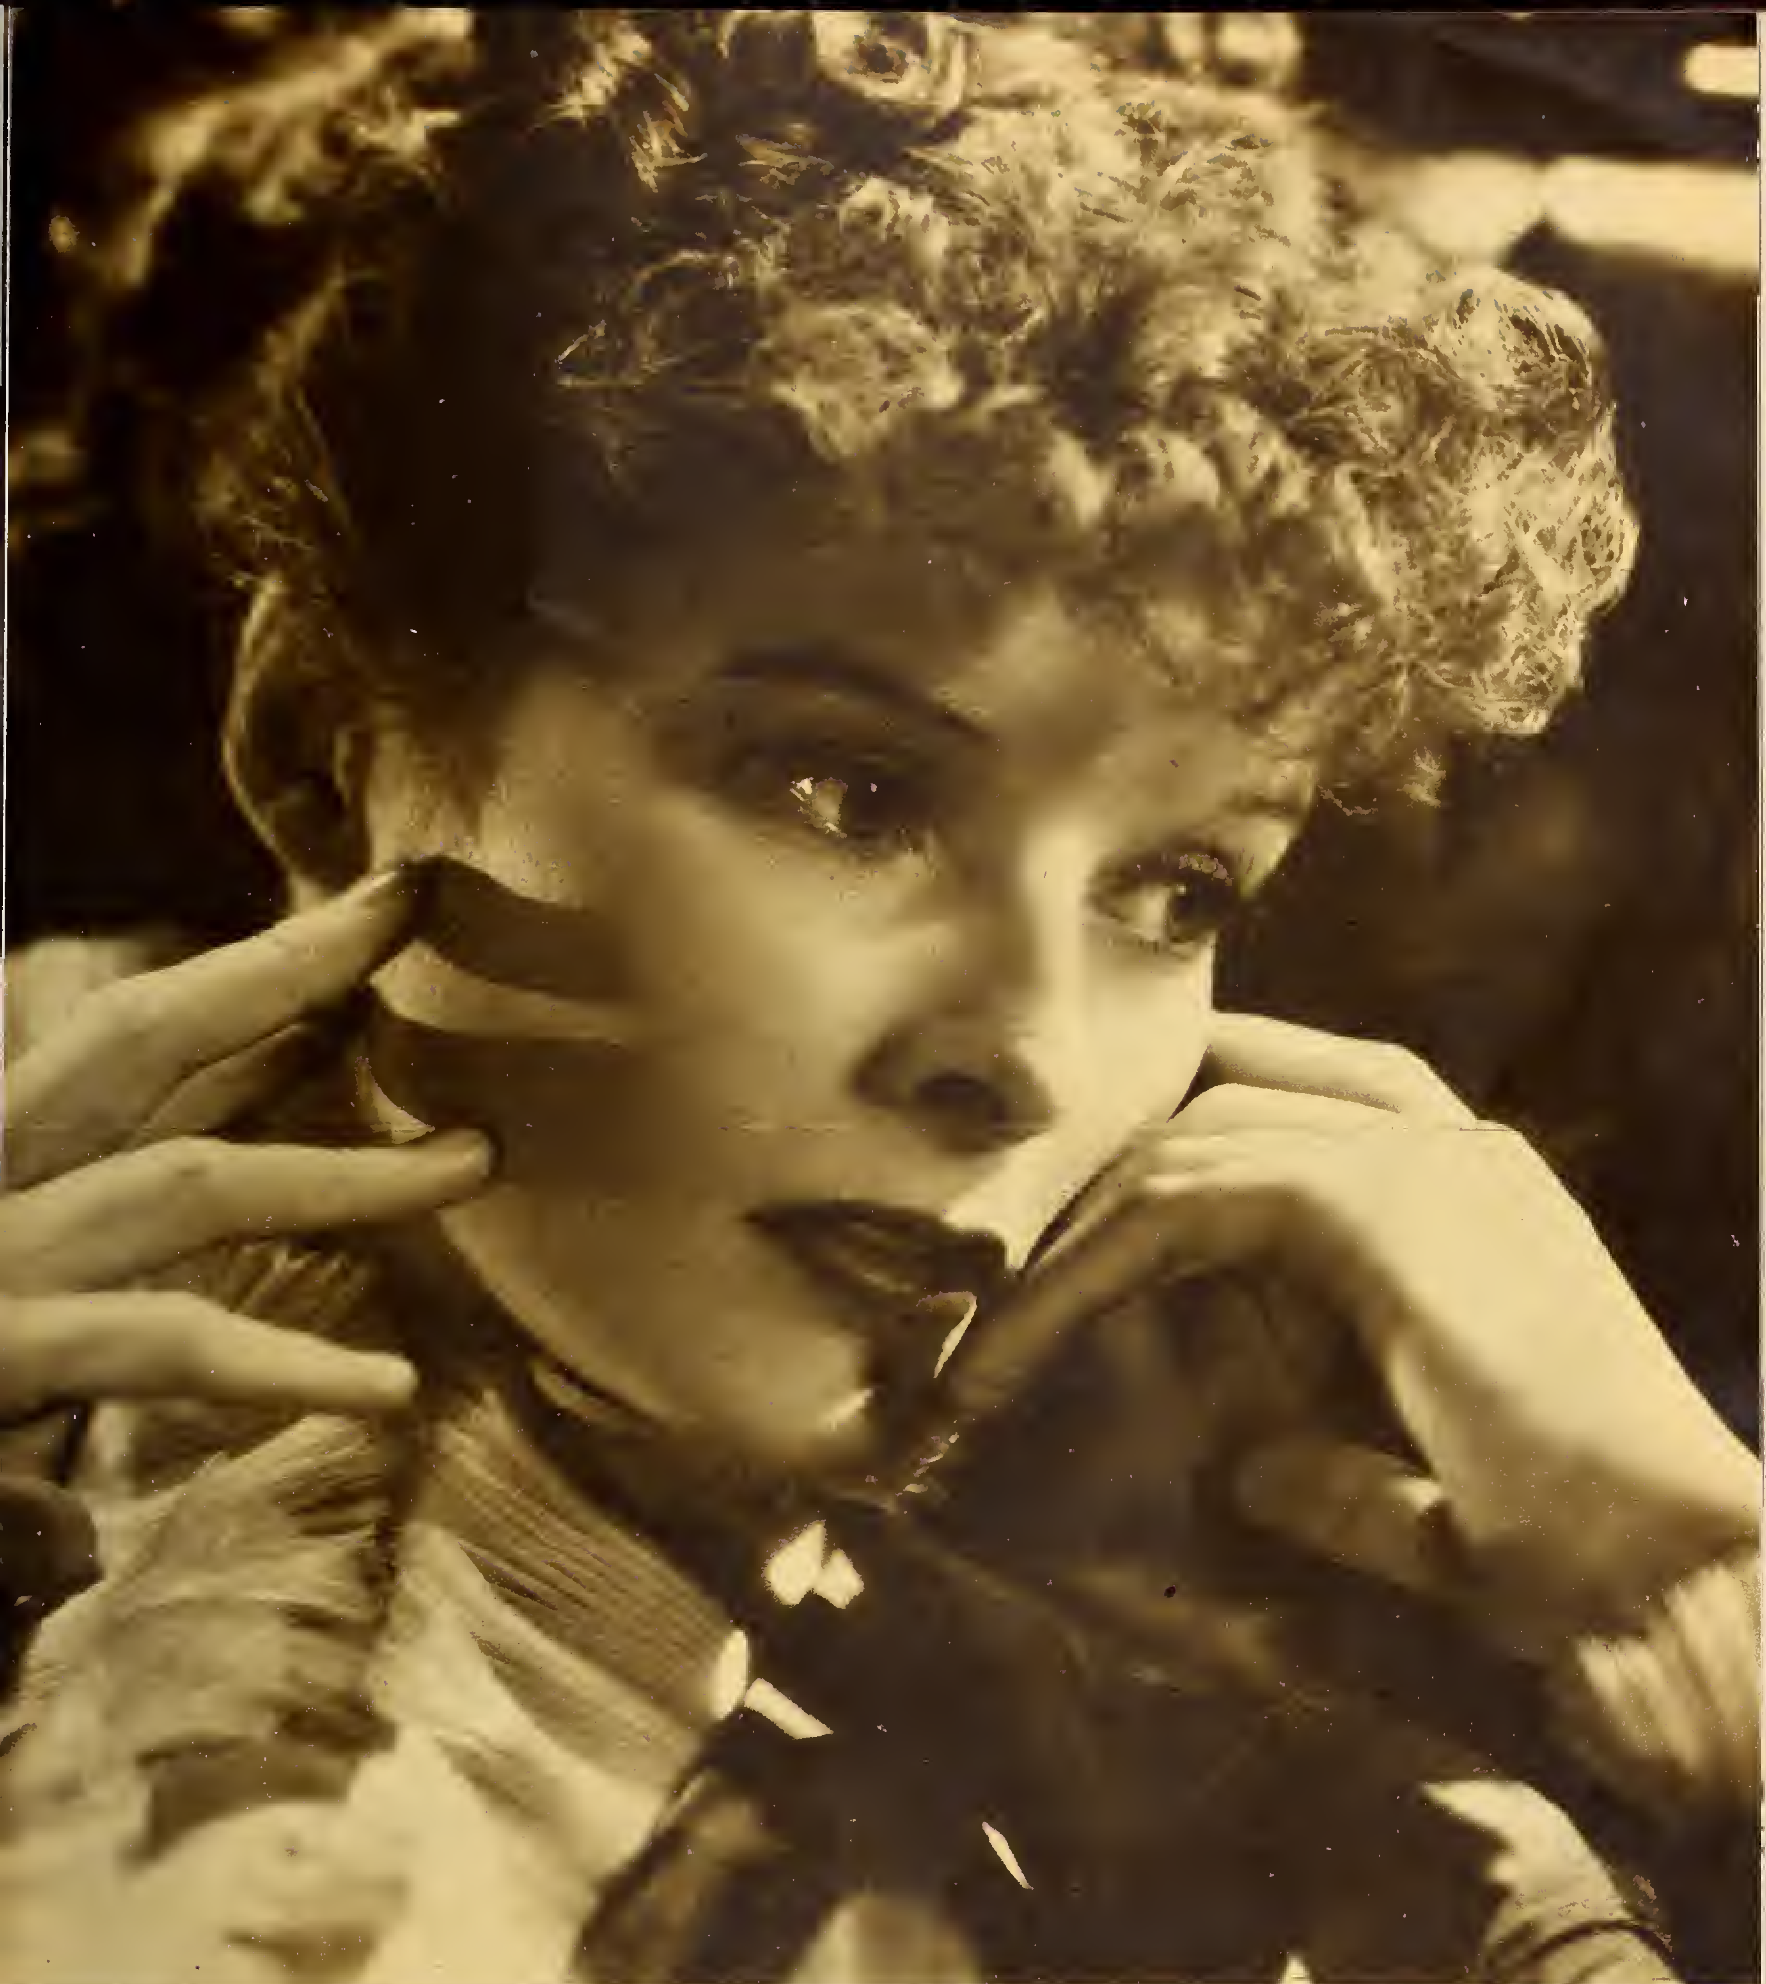
Music by VINCENT YOUMANS
An RKO Radio Picture directed by Thornton Freeland
MERIAN C. COOPER, Executive Producer
Louis Brock, Associate Producer

Hear these tantalizing songs: . . . "Music Makes Me" . . . "Orchids in the Moonlight" . . . and the new dance sensation that will soon be sweeping America . . . the hypnotising, compromising "Carioca"!

GENE RAYMOND

RAUL ROULIEN

FRED ASTAIRE GINGER ROGERS

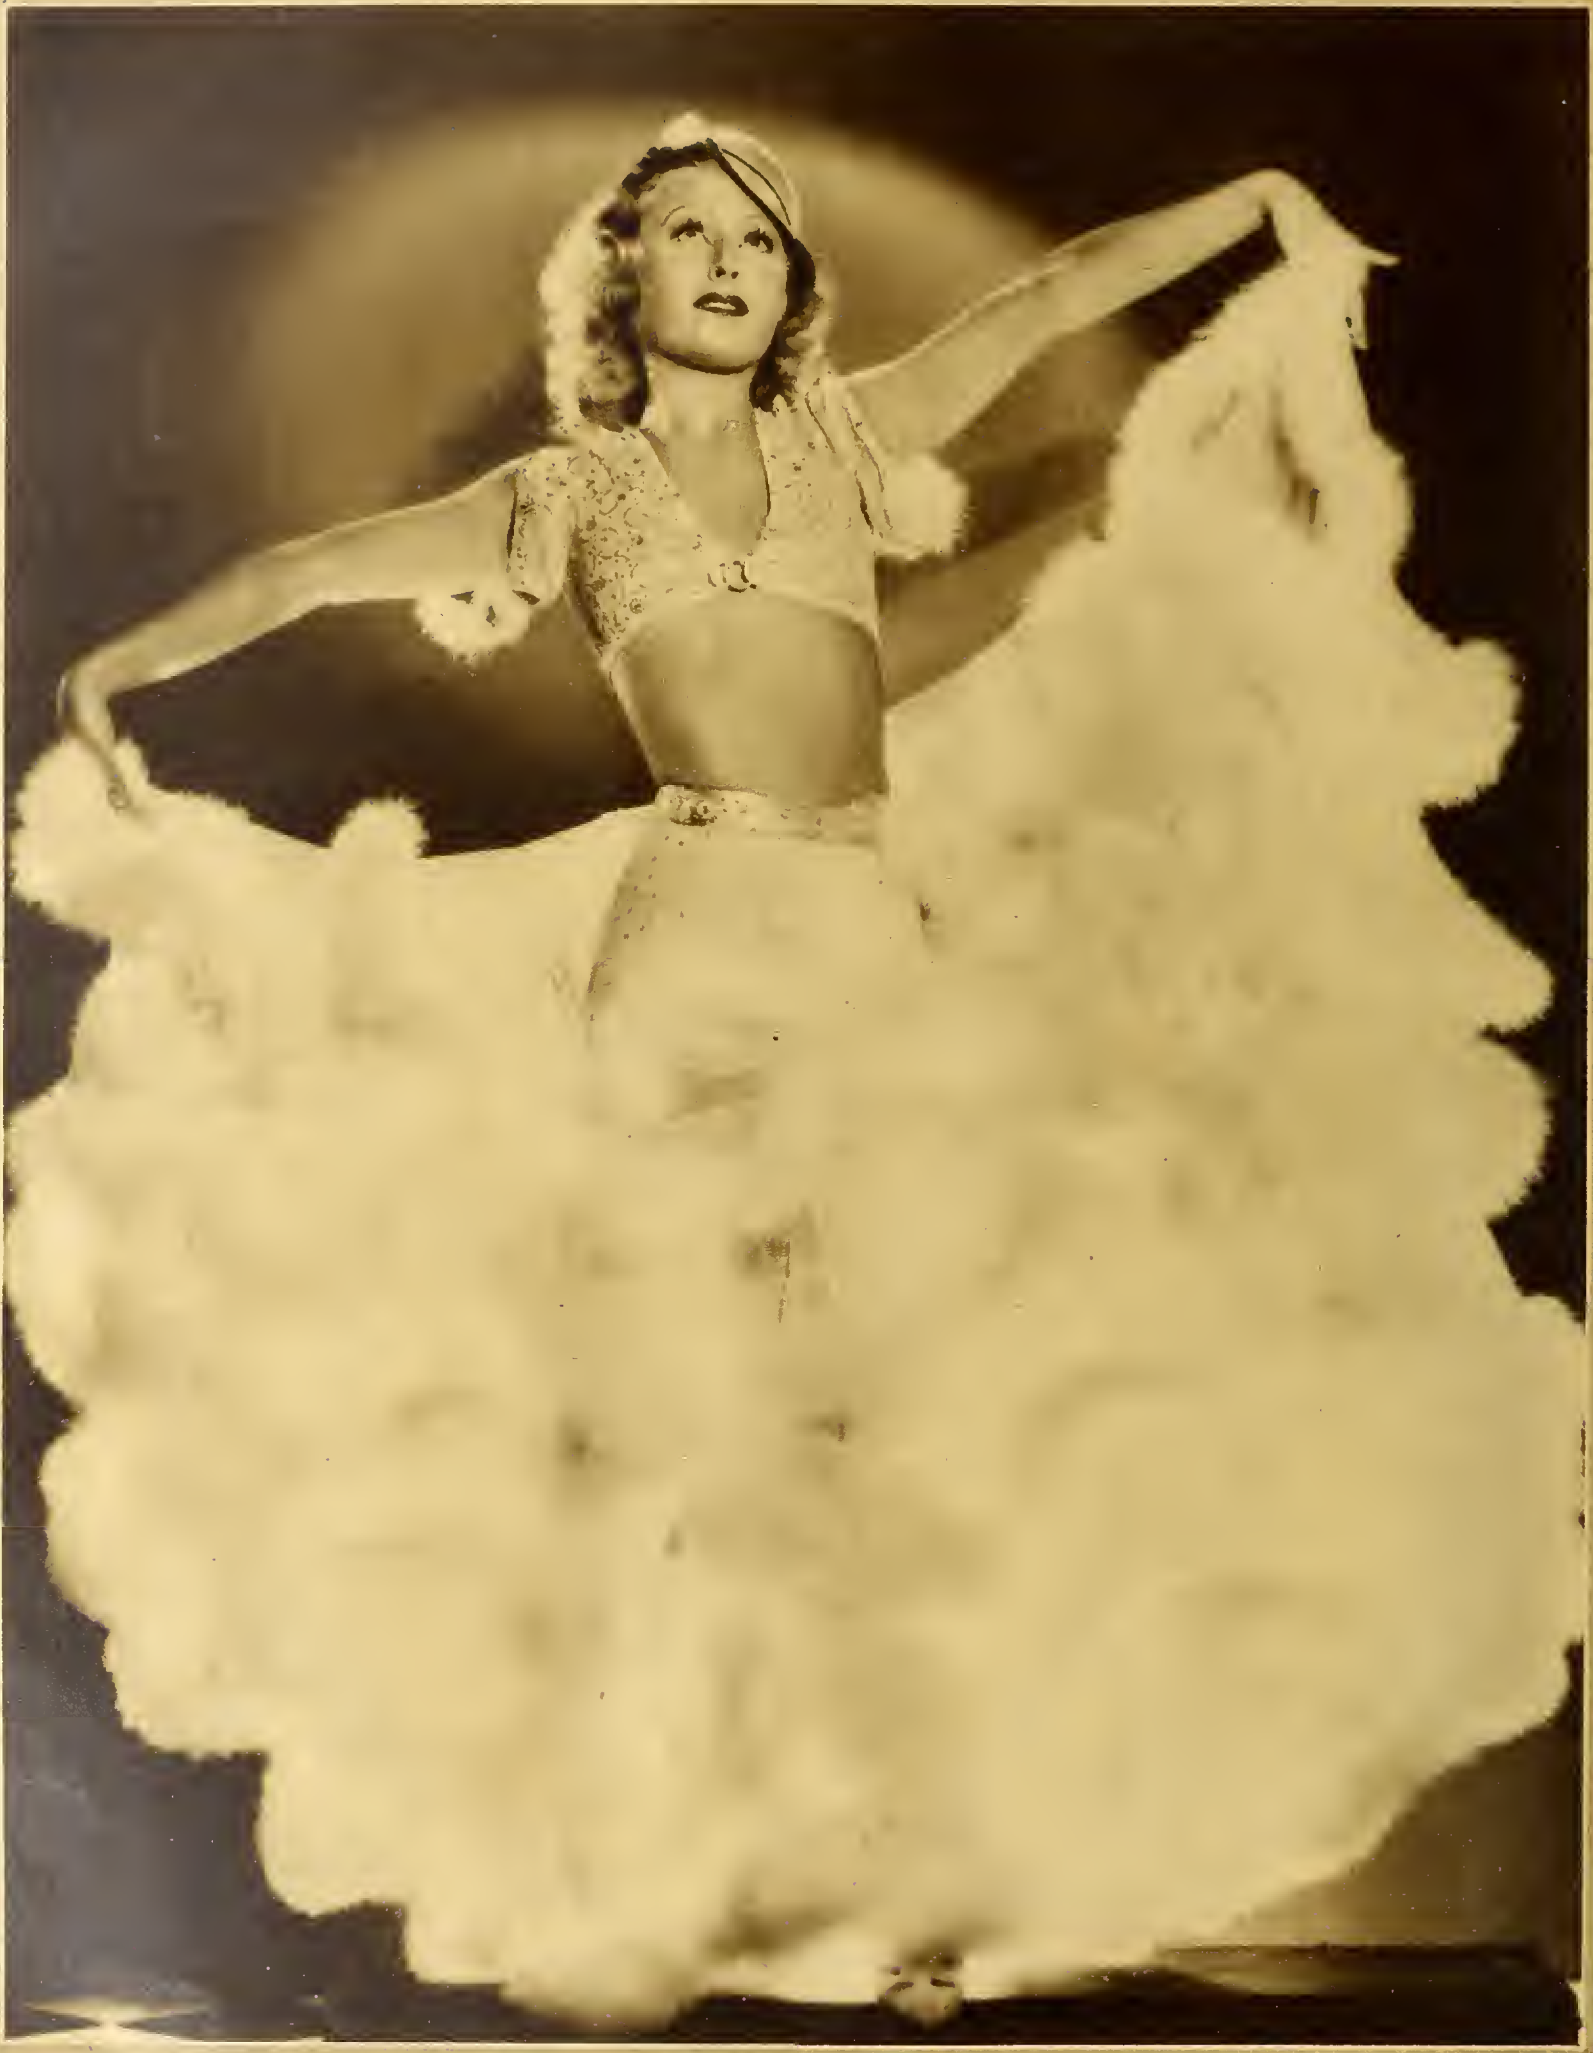


Portraits

Katharine Hepburn's sudden snootiness toward news photographers is based upon perfectly understandable feminine vanity. The Hepburn freckles show up in a news photo, you see—they don't show under screen make-up. Katie, has a pet hat she has bought in Paris and wore in "Christopher Strong," "Morning Glory," and now treasures in her own wardrobe. It's a good luck piece. Naturally, its style didn't suit "Little Women"—but perhaps it will appear in "Trigger," her next picture. On an ocean voyage she invariably gets sea sick.

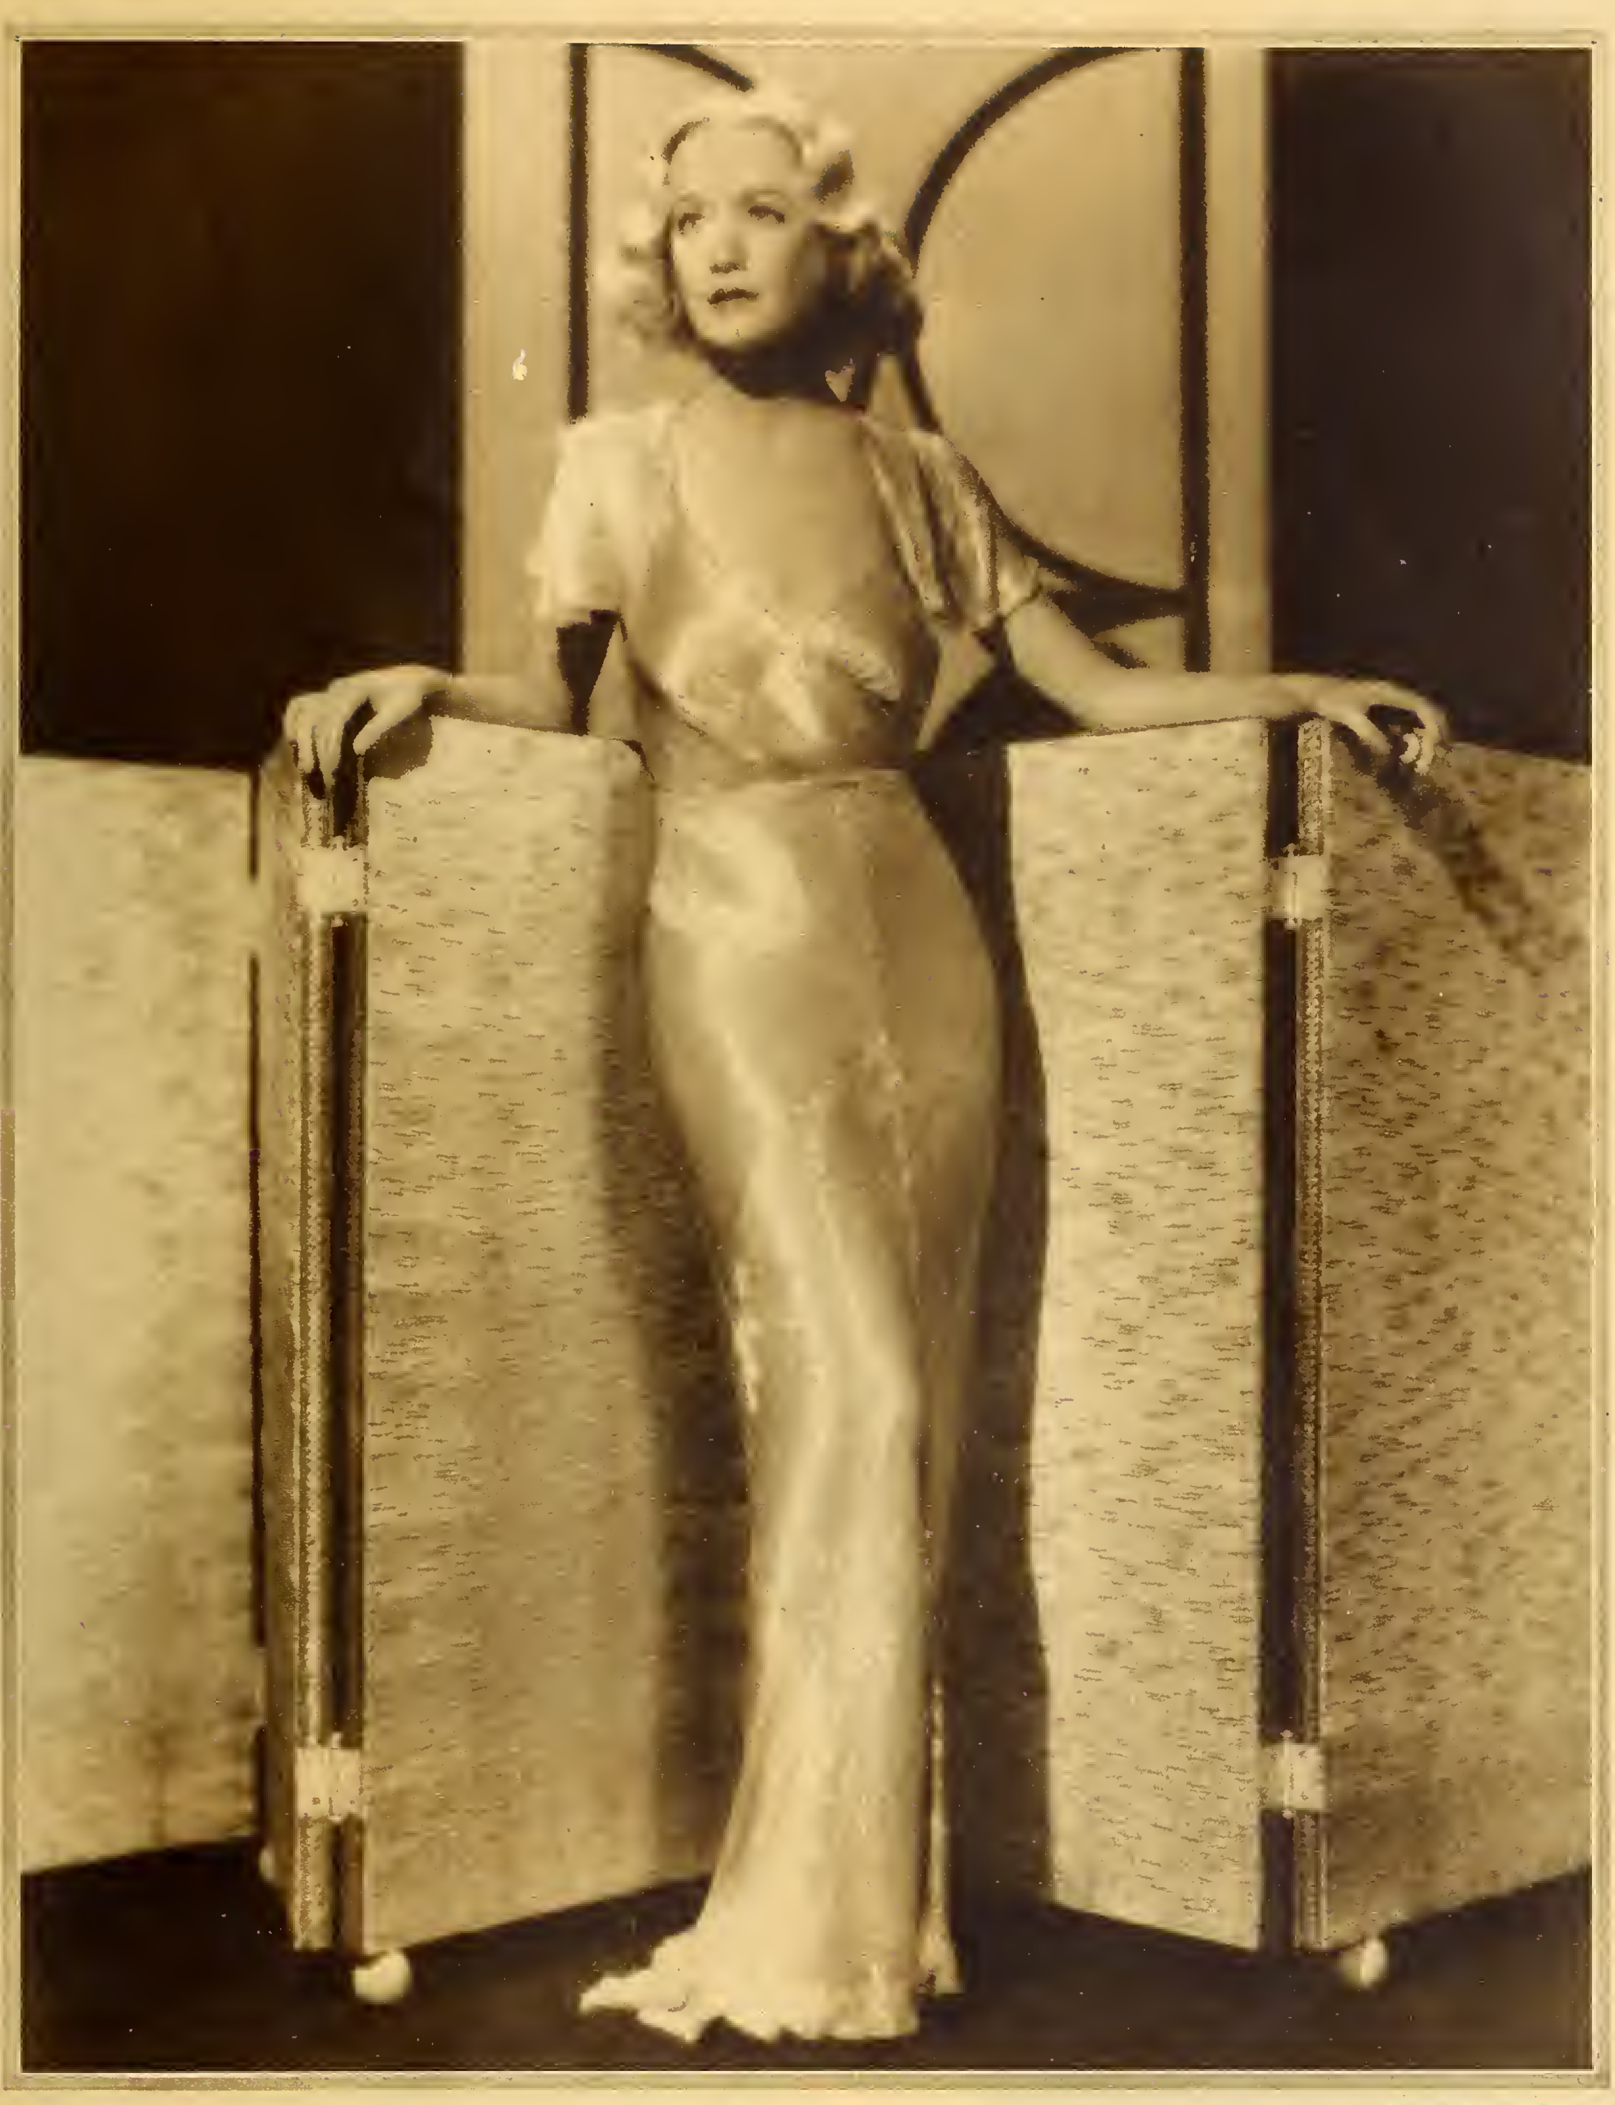
Everyone on the set likes Paul Kelly. Everyone off the set does, too. He's a smiling Irish lad with a friendly manner and a firm handclasp. Paul was recruited to the film ranks to play an important role in "Broadway Through a Keyhole." Now he is making a gangster story called, "Gentlemen, the King." When he has a day off, Mr. Kelly spends it on golf links. His score is in the seventies. He is a good swimmer and an intrepid flyer.

Jean Muir, technically a newcomer to the camera colony, has three talkies to her credit already. "The Earth Turns" is to be her next. Jean owns a wardrobe of sports clothes, a new roadster and a perfect photographic face. Valuable items for an ingenue to possess? We think so. Miss Muir is unmarried for, she claims, she's too selfish to fall in love. Perhaps she's too wise. When a difficult problem confronts her, she phones Jimmy Cagney, who is her pal.



Otto Dyar

One star who can wear maribou and ostrich feathers and spangles and never look over-dressed. Because she's so slim and dainty, we suppose. Lilian Harvey has almost completed "I Am Suzanne." She has worked every single day except eleven since she arrived in Hollywood. During those eleven days she gave interviews. Lilian has an enormous appetite and doesn't stint it. Dancing and swimming look after her slimness. Have you seen her In "My Lips Betray"?



Eugene Robert Richee

At last—in "Design for Living" and "Chrysalis"—you are to see Miriam Hopkins wearing really glamorous clothes. Like the one above. Hollywood folk call Miriam "the human dynamo." She can accomplish more in one day than six women. She adores California in the daytime but finds evenings boring. Hates bridge and night clubs and premières. She'd like to smoke, but can't learn how. She has one vice—forgetting appointments.

JEAN HARLOW'S

Every bride wants an adorable fluffy negligée. And Jean, who ordinarily sticks to pretty severe lines, weakened just once when she saw the dove pink, maribou-trimmed creation at the left. (Below, left and right) She calls it her formal "picture" gown. Corded gold lamé. With a straight-cut cape (removable, of course) which drapes cowl-fashion across the back. And a mermaid train. The dark hostess gown is jewel green sauvage velvet.

Clothes from Bullock's Wilshire. Specially posed for Modern Screen

A dainty pink negligée, a formal gold lame picture gown and a hostess gown of green sauvage velvet

By VIRGINIA

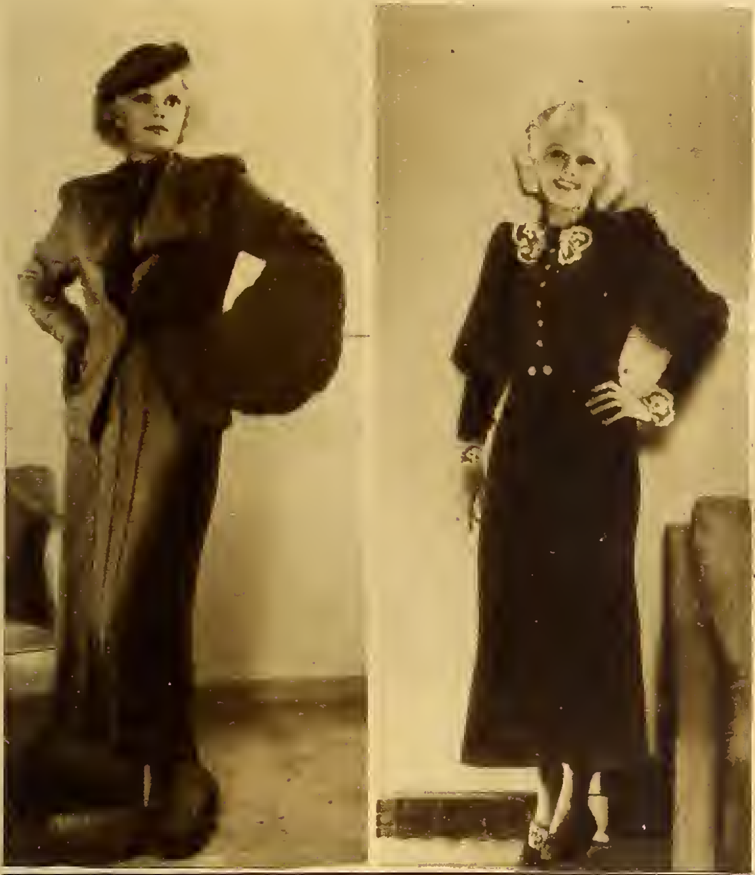
GOOD morning! This is the Duchess of Ginsberg speaking. Get out of bed, darling. Maybe you haven't noticed—but it's a perfectly beautiful day and I'm going shopping for a trousseau. Want to come along?" Jean Harlow's voice came bubbling over the wires, gay with excitement.

Did I want to go along? Does Mussolini like black shirts!

We met in front of Bullock's Wilshire, that classically modern shop where the clerks look like French countesses and act personally interested in you. And anyway, I

TROUSSEAU

At the right is the sort of outdoor outfit which any bride would adore for weekend trips with him. The logwood seal coat is lined with gay plaid, to match the skirt. (Below, left and right) For those occasions when you want to look awfully smart, but not too dressed up. A cocktail suit of Rodier gold tweed. With a mink-brown satin blouse. A crazy little hat, circled with mink. Then, there's the attractively "schoolgirl" black frock of velgrana trimmed with dainty lace bows.



A cocktail suit of golden tweed, a schoolgirlish dress of black velgrana and a stunning outdoor ensemble think brides exert a charm all their own, don't you? Because clothes never have appeared more scrumptious. And when you consider the bride was Jean . . .

T. LANE

"I sort of reversed the order of things. Married before I bought my clothes! But we had to do things in a hurry," she chuckled as we entered the regally quiet 18th Century salon. Then the fun began.

Out came a negligée that was like sipping a heady cocktail while you listened to your favorite symphony—if you know what I mean. Exhilarating and at the same time aesthetic. The material was dove pink crepe patterned with delicate satin flowers in pastel shades. And if that doesn't do things to the imagination! Like all self-respecting negligées it had a sheath silhouette and finished with a grand swirl of a train. What made it even more yum-yum were the huge cuffs and the collar of blue-orchid maribou. Instantly my mind reverted to that maribou of mother's reposing all these years in a half-forgotten trunk. Would I delve after it as soon as I got home—now would I!

THIS is the season of seasons to haul out all those "fine feathers and fluff" of former times, have them cleaned, and use them to marvelous advantage.

"Um, I said I'd never go in for pastels," Jean was musing to herself, "but, heaven help me, I'm weakening."

(N.B. She weakened all the way.)

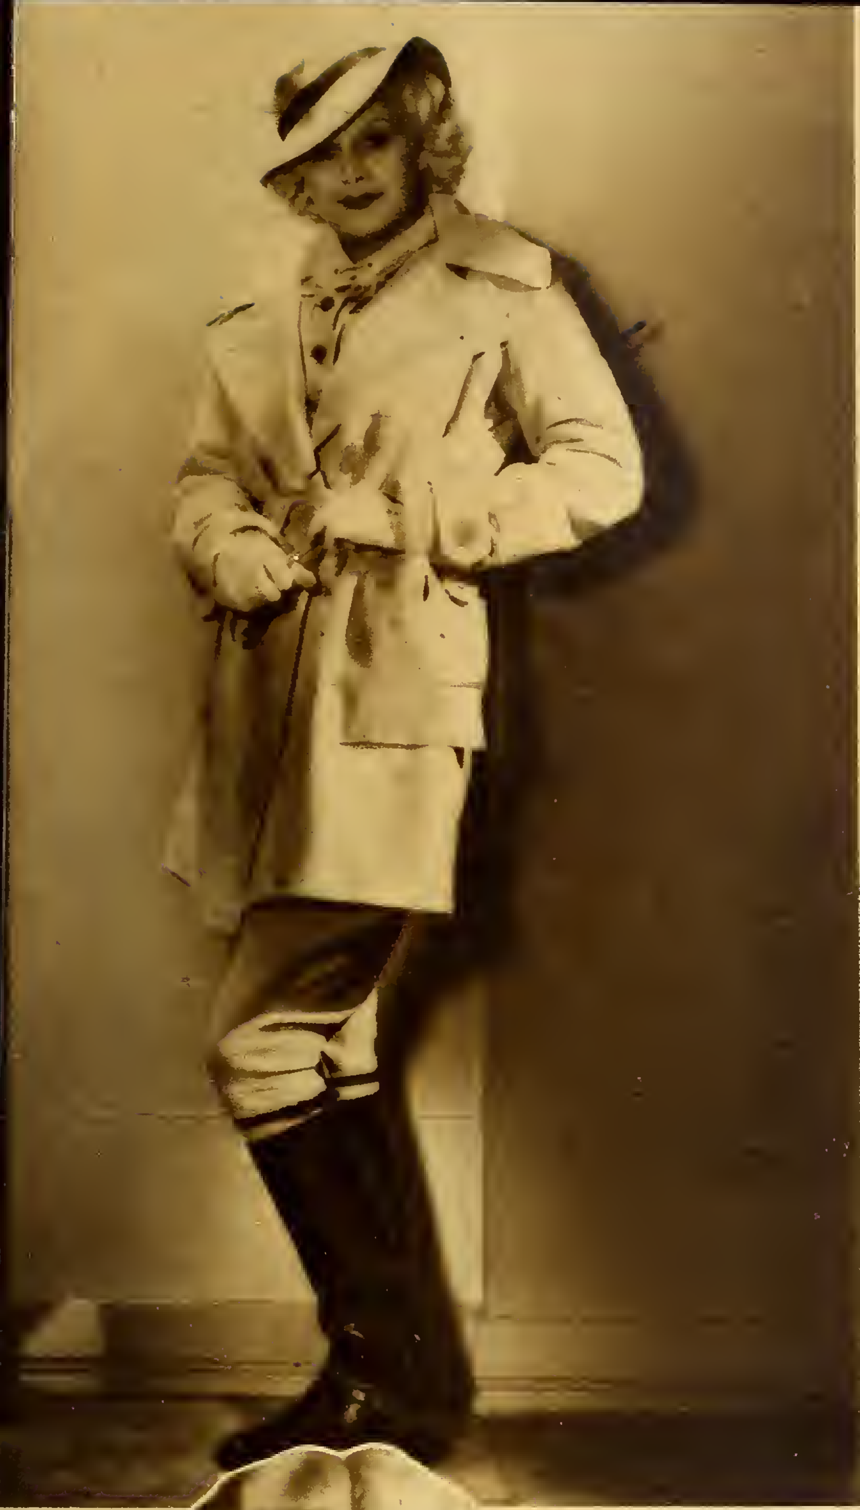
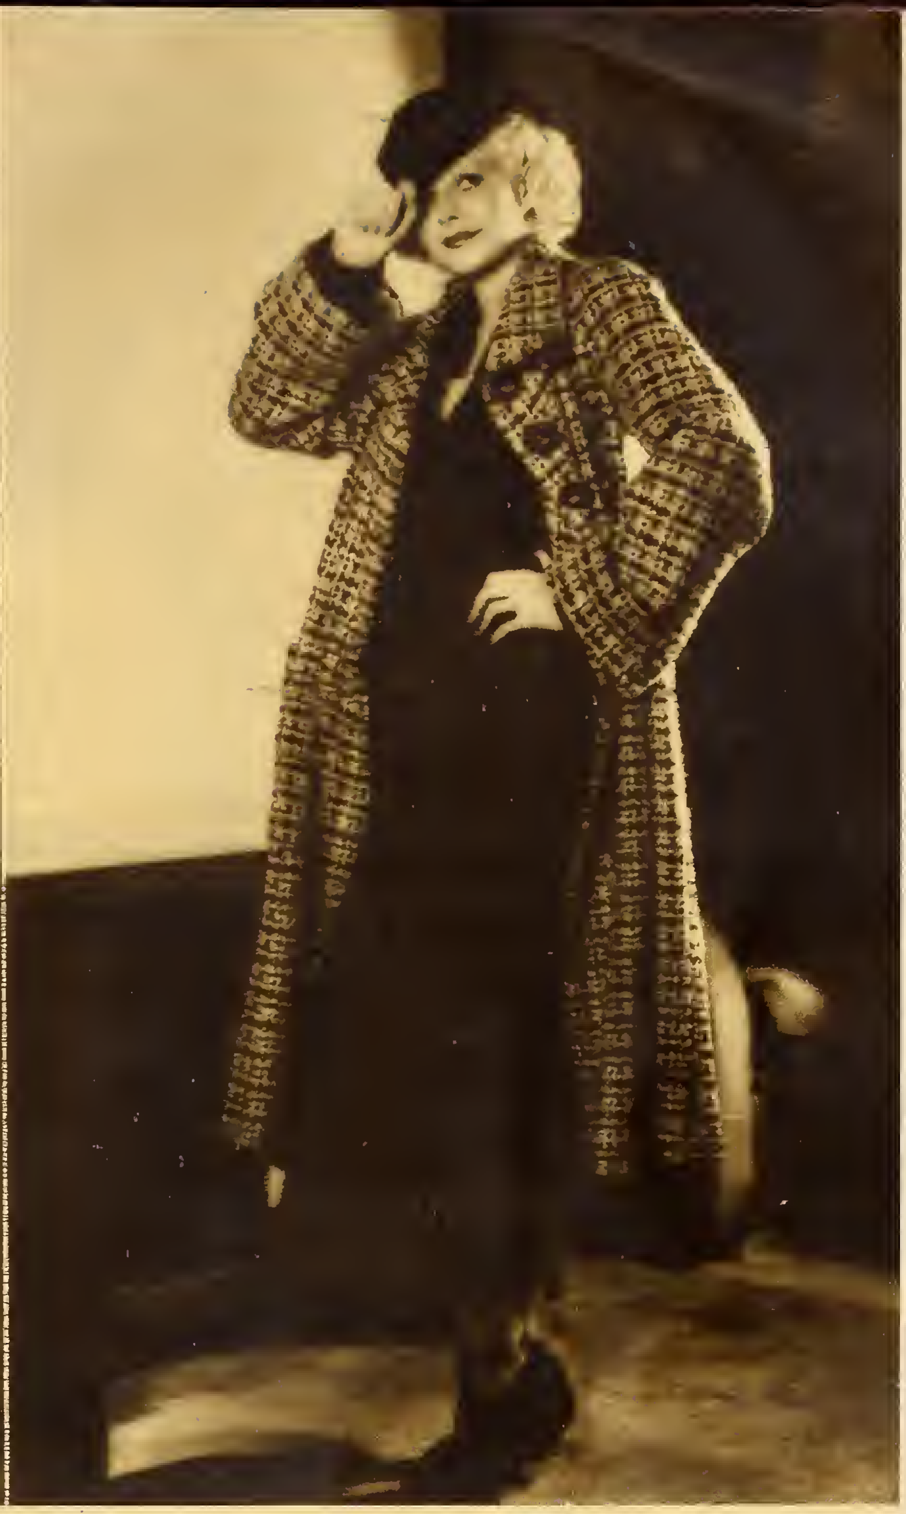
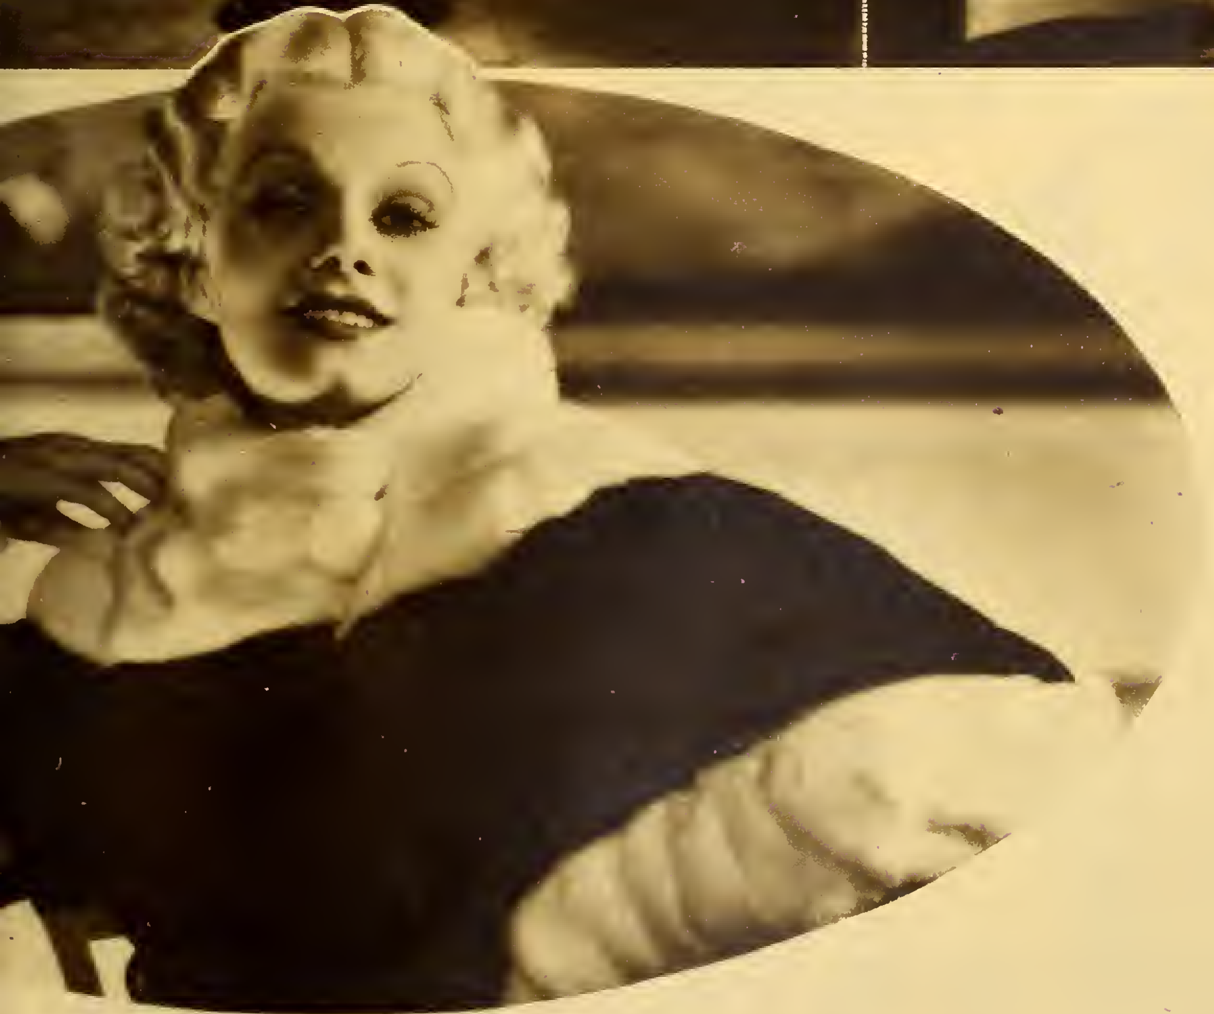
"You know, Virginia, I don't think men want their wives to be boyish or brilliant across the breakfast table. They want to leave for the day's work with a pretty, wholly feminine picture in mind. Fluttering-hands-about-the-coffee-pot sort of thing—so you have to be sure your sleeves are as becoming as your neckline. Pink, my dear; that's the morning tonic that puts them in a mood to do battle against the world for the little woman!" Jean's jolly laughter rang out but I couldn't help wishing all young brides had as much wisdom.

"No," she went on, "I'm going to keep my more exotic 'hostess' dresses for dinner at (Continued on page 84)

(Above, left and right) Perfect taste—perfect tailoring. Jean's golf suit—which will stand up well, too, under hard wear to and from the studio. It's of green wool. The black velvet evening gown is, we think, Jean's grandest dress. The bows on the hips give it a new silhouette. The slit in front and the short train are ultra-glamorous.







(Above, left and right) Jean chose beige and brown for her riding habit. The coat and slipover she wears beneath it are beige suede. The breeches are cavalry twill. Then—Jean's separate topcoat—so handy to go with other costumes. This is loosely woven tweed in a brown and white check. (Left) The black velvet and ermine wrap that goes with Jean's velvet evening gown.

1

2

1. Ye Crooner at ye age of one. 2. Ye crooner at ye age of three. Both these pictures were taken in Mountain View, Ark. 3. Master Richard on the right. Big brother Luther on the left. Waiting for a street car, we suppose. 4. At the age of about ten, Dick went into his thoughtful, studious phase. He was so wrapped up in his own thoughts that he'd even do chores without demanding the usual dime or quarter. 5. Dick, at eight, in full Wild West regalia. That's the youngest Powell, Howard, with him. 6. This was the Powell home at Berryville, Arkansas—a town of twelve hundred souls, all of whom considered the Powell house pretty fine and the Powell kid, Dick, a regular imp—which he was.

3

4

THE PRIVATE HISTORY OF A CROONER

By

WALTER RAMSEY

DICK POWELL, OF THE ARKANSAS POWELLS, USED TO BE WHAT IS KNOWN AS A LIMB. BUT THERE WAS THE STUDIOUS PHASE, TOO. AND THE SHEIK PHASE. THEN—A GIRL SAID HIS VOICE WAS SWELL!

THE first professional crooning experience of Mr. Richard Powell occurred in his eighth year when he discovered that Uncle Billy, the old station master down at the railroad track, would pay him five cents a chorus for singing "Casey Jones." Though he was later to receive thousands of times that amount for his crooning talent, at the time the pay-off more than exceeded his fondest expectations. His wants were very simple. A bag of jelly beans, or a soda—what more did life have to offer? There were even music-loving moments when Uncle Billy would go for fifteen cents worth of "Casey Jones." Then Mrs. Powell's little boy considered himself up in the big dough.

For every single earthly duty he performed, the juvenile Richard demanded and received pay. Helping his mother with the dishes rated a nickel. Helping his father with fence repair earned a dime. Heavier chores extended as high as twenty-five cents. He did nothing for nothing.

Says Dick: "I was born with a Hollywood-contract mind. Later, this inborn insistence of mine for raking in the shekels threw me for a terrific loss and nearly cost my life into the bargain, but that was not until Hollywood happened to me. In the beginning it was my family that held the original contract on my services and they paid and paid!"

STRICTLY speaking, that "original contract" began the day of his birth, November 14, 1905, in Mountain View, Arkansas. Mountain View's entire population totaled eight hundred, of which the Powell family were four (counting Mr. and Mrs. Powell and Dick's older brother). The family swelled to five two years later when another son was born. The Powells were of moderate means. Mr. Powell worked as a traveling salesman for the International Harvester Company. His salary was sufficient (just) to provide his family with the necessaries of life, which consisted of a frame home facing the town square, three meals a day through the week and a "chicken blow-out" on Sunday.

The first three years of his life Master Powell spent in howling to high heaven. All members of his family have frequently informed him that he was a crying baby. He screamed when the lights went out—and he bellowed when they went on. He bawled for his food—which gave him gas pains—and then hollered a couple of hours because of that. It was a relief to everyone, including the harassed neighbors, when little Dickie Powell was old enough to don short pants and hie himself off to rural kindergarten every morning.

When he was six years old he fell in with bad company. The two Cass boys were, according to local reputation, hoodlums. They were seven and six years old respectively, and it was the Casses who initiated Dick into the art of the B-B gun, into filching Sunday school contributions for ice cream sodas and other fascinating misdemeanors. He was an apt and attentive pupil, often contributing several ideas of his own.

Mrs. Powell used to throw up her hands and declare for life she didn't know where Dick got his ways. Her oldest son was a model of correct deportment. The baby who arrived two years after Dick was a lamb. Mrs. Powell frequently broadcast the thought that Dick was like his father's side of the family. And yet, with all her scoldings and lectures, it was quite clear that the black sheep was her prime pet. The family relationship was never more clearly related than the day Master Richard fell against the kitchen stove, nearly braining himself. He went out like a light.

"Dickie, darling," screamed Mrs. Powell, "don't die! Don't die!"

The mutilated Richard revived just sufficiently to take in the drama of the situation. "Can I have a quarter if I live?" he breathed faintly. The frantic Mrs. Powell ran for her purse and returned with the death reprieve. Ten minutes later, her miraculously revived son was recuperating on a drug store stool under the soothing effects of a banana split. However, the fall against the kitchen stove had been a nasty one. To this day he carries the scar.

DICK managed to pass through one grade of grammar school in Mountain View before his father was promoted by the Harvester Company to the larger territory of Berryville, a town of about one thousand two hundred. His increase in salary and authority not only meant a newer and nicer home for his family, but also a real back yard with a couple of cows, a pig or two, chickens and fifty or more white rabbits. The latter were Dick's property exclusively. He was a rabbit breeder and "fancier" of the highest order. Occasionally he sold them. But with the rabbits, for the first time in his life, his money sense was fogged. He loved every one of them and it was difficult for him to part with any one, even for twenty-five cents. In fact fifty hardly tempted him.

1. The whole family out for a Sunday airing in the Buick—1916. Mama and papa, Dick—with an eye for the spotlight—draped on the engine hood, and the other two Powell kids in back. 2. At a Boy Scout camp in the Ozarks. Dick was about fourteen, then. 3. Luther, the studious one, Howard, the baby, and Dick in the backyard of the home in Little Rock. 4. Would you believe it? Note the fit of the coat. He was about eighteen. 5. This was taken for his best girl in Little Rock. During the sheik phase. Dick was quite the beau of the town—or was it his father's car which made him so popular? 6. The attractive young man as he is today.

When he was not engaged in his rabbit fancying, he attended school—a typical one-room country schoolhouse "down by the mill." It was located a mile and a half from the Powell home and Dick and his brother covered the distance on the back of the proverbial old gray mare.

Spring in Arkansas was a season of beauty and delight. All about them spread large fields of daisies blowing softly in the April breezes. White clouds floated like cream puffs overhead. The air was filled with the scent of apple and cherry blossoms. But to the two barefoot boys astride the plodding old horse, these beauties of nature were merely places and things.

The daisy fields were mere battlegrounds where points of honor were defended and fought out by the gang. And many is the battle Dick had in the daisy field that adjoined his home.

When young Powell was nine years old he fell in love with a tender young miss named Mary Burton George. It was an intense and confusing emotion, complicated by the fact that Mary's brother Pat could not abide Dick. It was all Pat could do to restrain himself when Dick was invited by the George family to take a ride in the Ford on Sunday afternoons. The three children were always relegated to the back seat and it was a fine point of the Powell technique that he was able to hold Mary's hand under the laprobe and look romantic, while at the same time he was getting his shins kicked by his love's brother. On three different occasions they had it out in the daisy patch. Pat was larger and older, which is another way of saying that Romeo Powell seldom ever came out on the top side of the heap. There were bitter, scratching moments when young Dick wondered if love was worth all the hell it raised—just as older and wiser men have been wondering since time began.

But life was not exactly a continual round of daisy field battles with Pat. There were the usual marble games behind the court house and, of course, the swimming hole where the kids went in minus the formality of a bathing suit. A boy pushed Dick into the deepest part of the stream one day—and that is where and why he learned to swim.

It was at this stage of his life that he began to develop that desire for solitude that comes so puzzlingly and suddenly into the life of every boy. Though he still liked to play with the kids, he discovered much to his surprise, that he was equally happy in his own society. Way out back of the barn where no one could see or hear him, he would lie for hours against a stack of hay, thinking his own thoughts. He became less of a nuisance to his family. No longer was he given to squawking and howling about everything that displeased him. In one of his trance-like moods he would even help with the chores without letting out a yelp for pay. His worried family came to the conclusion that he must be slightly ill. But, physically, his health was perfect.

It was mental growth that young Powell was suffering. He was beginning to awaken to the fact that there was a world out beyond those Arkansas hills, a puzzling world of which he knew nothing. This knowledge had been borne upon him during his weekly excursions to the Berryville picture show where he watched Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, clad in swell clothes, recreate synthetic romance. At first his interest in the movies had been purely mechanical; his pal, the theatre projectionist, would let him run the film now and then. But as the weeks went by, his interest switched from the fun of operating the mechanical toy, to the reels and reels of exciting stories his own hand was cranking out on the screen.

HE began to see himself not as an Arkansas Hill Billy but as a suave man-about-town (preferably New York) like Francis X Bushman. He frequently committed to memory the long sub-titles that accompanied the pictures, and would rehearse them out loud when he was alone. With the money which he had saved from his dish-washing and fence repairing chores, he bought himself a straw hat with a red and yellow plaid band around it. He began to wear shoes and stockings even on week days. One day, arrayed in his finery, he was strutting up and down back of the barn. With elaborate gestures, à la movies, he would tip his hat to the amazed and wide-eyed cow that gazed out from her stall. Dick was declaiming, "Good day, my fine woman," just as his brother rounded the corner with a milk pail. He (the brother) almost dropped it in surprise at the picture that met his eyes. "Are you goofy?" he shrieked. But with a withering glance, his blood kin passed him by and stalked with dignity into the house.

But, crazy though his antics might have been, they were the beginning of a feeling of restlessness in the juvenile Powell bosom. He craved, and developed, more "dignity" even into his play hours. His studies received more and more of his attention. His clothes and appearance became highly important. His strange new mood found but one friend in Berryville—young Digby West, son of the local banker. (Digby, who has since been graduated from Cornell and who is married now and president of his father's bank, is still an intimate friend of Powell's. Since their kid days they have never been out of touch with one another.) Though the advent of Digby and Dick into the ranks of the Boy Scouts was not exactly popularly approved by the Berryville gang, join it they did and very seriously went about their business of "one good deed a day." Their first kindnesses were bestowed on one another—by previous agreement. They decided that Dick should present Digby with a red tie and in return Digby was to purchase Dick one of those diamond sparkler rings from the five and ten cent store. One day, in climbing a tree with Digby, the ring caught on a branch and nearly tore his finger off. But he would have regretted the loss of the finger far less than he did the actual loss of the ring.

When Dick was twelve, his family moved again—this time to Little Rock, capital and largest city of the state. With the exception of parting with Digby, which the move necessitated, Dick was overjoyed with his change of locale. Compared to Berryville and Mountain View, Little Rock was a bustling metropolis.

Nor was Dick one to welch on the opportunities of city life which had come his way. He set about to study his lessons with a diligence born of ambition. His older brother, the studious one, was setting a very high-powered example for him. He was the editor of his high school paper, was taking piano lessons and French, and his fame as an all-state basket ball player rated his picture in the paper five or six times during ball season.

It was such glory as this that young Dick craved, and during his seventh and eighth grades in grammar school he studied like the very old Ned. Even a pretty girl named Elizabeth Weldon whom he might have fallen for hard (in a less serious and ambitious frame of mind) was merely relegated to the rôle of a cute kid to take riding on the handlebars of his bicycle.

Mr. Powell, Sr., had now risen to an excellent executive position with the Harvester company. Bonuses and salary raises were coming in regularly. And just as regularly did the Powells move. From Twenty-fourth Street they moved to 1723 Izrid Avenue, their first automobile appeared on the horizon, and the Powells were on easy street.

Where nickels and dimes had formerly been dished out to their son, Mr. and Mrs. Powell were now digging into their pockets for dollars. Dick boasted the loudest shirts and the tightest pinchback (Continued on page 106)

IF YOU MET MAX BAER

You'd be completely flabbergasted, that's what! Nothing exactly like him has ever been seen on the Hollywood horizon

By KATHERINE ALBERT

WOULD you rather I talked to you like I am—just in my shorts, Katherine, or should I go over to my dressing room and put on some clothes?"

It was a terrific problem for the pugilistic Max Baer. You could tell by the very bewildered way his forehead wrinkled that it was by way of being a big decision. Not being able to cope with it all by himself, he left it up to me. We had, incidentally, met just a second before.

Mind you, the question of modesty did not occur to Max. It was simply—and one can see his mind working as one may watch the inside of a clock (the only difference being that a clock is more complicated)—it was simply this: did he look more ravishing in the purple fighting trunks and loose flowing bathrobe or would he knock me cold quicker if he were all done up in his smart street clothes? Max couldn't decide. He likes himself both ways.

I decided in favor of the street clothes. It was not a question of modesty with me, either. I'd seen him in shorts—that's all. I thought a little variety would be fun.

It took him quite a while to change. After all, he had to be impressive, but in due time I found him seated opposite me in one of the offices in the publicity department at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. Max (remember that he had called me Katherine instantly and I didn't want to be outdone in informality) filled the chair and slopped over the sides. His personality filled the room.

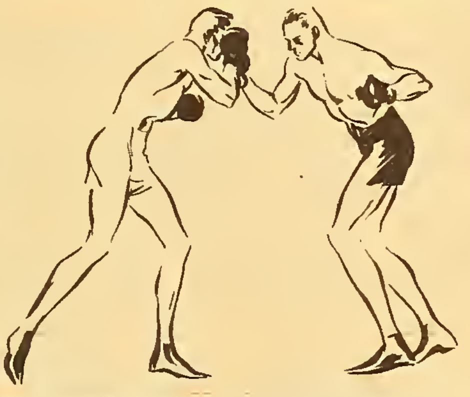
"Tell me about yourself," I began.

THAT approach—with the average movie actor—usually brings, "Oh, there's nothing to tell about me," or, "Well, what, specifically, would you like to know about me?" It is, as a matter of fact, an old and not very good approach any more. But looking at Max Baer I couldn't think of anything else to say.

"Tell me about yourself," I had said. Max thought that was a fine idea. So he began to tell.

"My wife's eleven years older than me, see? We've been married two years and separated four times and divorced once. She's got money. But she's jealous of my success.

"Of course, when we walk down the street together I'm always followed by a bunch of kids who beg for my autograph. It's good business to sign for the kids. Besides, I liked kids. But she always stands by in a bored way while I'm writing my name. Just jealous, see? That's why we got a divorce.



"There hasn't been a colorful fighter since Dempsey. I've got color. I'm young—just twenty-four—I grew up on a California ranch. I'm colorful. Why, whenever I walk into a newspaper office and the reporters interview me, they always get a story. That's swell for a champ."

I murmured that I could get his point of view. And then I asked him how he liked working in pictures.

"Sure, they're okay. No, I wasn't a bit scared. What's there to be scared of a camera for? I was more scared of Myrna Loy. I'd seen her in all these parts where she knifes a guy in the back or shoots him in the head or something. When I heard she was working in my picture, 'The Prizefighter and the Lady,' I was scared. I thought she might kill me. Then I met her and I said to myself, 'What's wrong with you—a great big fellow like you scared of a little girl like her?' And I wasn't scared any more. See, it was just all those parts she plays. Now everything is swell.

"They want me to stay in pictures. They say I'm swell in my part. But I think I'd be foolish to sign up in pictures, don't you? See, there are lots of movie stars—but there's just one champ."

I asked, rather timidly, "You're sure you're going to win the title from Carnera next June, aren't you?"

"Sure I'm sure. I can win from Carnera. You see, we're having a fight in this picture. They wanted me to knock Carnera out in the picture, but he wouldn't take a knock-out. He said it was bad for a champ to do that. So I said, 'If Carnera won't take a knock-out, I won't take a knock-out.' They had to re-write the story. Now it's a draw."

He got up out of the chair and stretched himself.

"Well, Katherine, did I give you a story?" he asked as he ran his hand over his dark curls.

"You certainly did, Mr.—er—Max," I answered.

"Hope you see the fight in June," he said pleasantly. "Then you can tell people you met the champ."

In a second he was gone. And I sank back in my chair to ponder over Max Baer.

SHOULD I say he was conceited? Should I make the lead of my story, "Max Baer is the most conceited man who ever set foot in Hollywood"? No, it wouldn't be fair, for it really isn't conceit that permeates his personality. You couldn't possibly say that a little child with a bow of pink ribbon on her hair who preens before the mirror is conceited, could you? That's the way it is with Max. Nothing is sophisticated, nothing so civilized as conceit could ever be a part of him. It is just guileless, childish ego. Max Baer thinks he's good. He sees no reason for hiding his light under a bushel. And out on the M-G-M lot he has them gasping.

When he first came out he announced that he was engaged to June Knight. Somebody reminded that he had—at that time—a perfectly good wife.

"Sure I know," Max said, "but we're separated." It was difficult to explain that, really, one couldn't be engaged to one woman unless one were actually divorced from one's wife. Max couldn't see it. Now he and Dorothy Dunbar are divorced. But in the meantime Max has seen so many pretty girls in Hollywood that he has sort of forgotten about June.

He has, for instance, seen Garbo. And what's more, he's seen her at work on the set—something that not even M-G-M's chief executives have seen.

Garbo, as you know, has her set guarded as if she were wearing the Hope diamonds. No outside eyes are ever permitted to look upon her while she works. In very intimate scenes not even the electricians and property boys are allowed to watch her. Black flats are placed around her—just out of camera range.

So you can imagine how everyone felt when Max suddenly announced. "That Greta Garbo is certainly a pretty girl. And it sure is interesting to watch her act."

"Watch her act?" (Continued on page 86)

FLOHERTY JR.

"Think of the girls, and the men, too, who have held to their young, quivering, frightened lips the bottle marked with the skull and crossbones. Because ambition meant more to them than life."

MARTYRS to AMBITION

Ambition wrecks love. Takes lives. Ruins health. Slays happiness. Hollywood knows!

By FAITH BALDWIN

Illustrated by FLO HERTY, Jr.

I HAVE no statistics to prove it, but it seems to me that ambition has killed, directly and indirectly, more men and women than bullets. Not that I deplore ambition. No one ever arrived anywhere without it, but an overdose is sometimes fatal. Ambition has not only wrecked the lives of the people in whom it has burned like a consuming flame but the lives of the other, innocent people dear to them. It has taken its toll of happiness, of body, of soul and of mind. It has become, at times, an obsession with men and women, not only of today but of all eras. It has brought success and failure, it has brought happiness and misery; it has been all things to all men.

Suppose we look at some of the people of Hollywood to whom ambition has meant the sacrifice of something dear to them. Let's take the long distance marriage first of all.

A lot of nonsense has been written, and spoken, on the subject of suiting one's marriage to convenience; about the "glamor" of a marriage which stays always fresh and new and ardent because the two most concerned see each other a good deal less than ordinary people; because they inhabit separate houses and thus manage to perpetuate an eternal honeymoon.

This may be true, in a sense, yet it isn't marriage. Marriage, if it means anything at all, means a partnership and a sharing and a togetherness. Of course people who are married in the "ordinary" way often quarrel and are sometimes bored, being human, and are forced to watch certain lovely things vanish from their union, but, if they are sportsmen and well mated, they watch, too, other things, just as important, take their place. Marriage as an institution has glaring faults, perhaps. But so far no real substitute has been found for it that is really satisfactory. And these long distance marriages of the screen and stage and other professions are not satisfactory. They can't be, because they defeat every purpose for which marriage was evolved.

THERE'S Katharine Hepburn, for example. She is married to an attractive and charming man, whose business keeps him in New York. Hers keeps her in California, for the greater part of the time. They meet, occasionally and briefly, and no doubt are very happy in these encounters. But love thrives only in a fertile soil, and this is barren ground, is it not? One gets so out of the habit of needing people, of wanting them. One's interests become diversified and one cannot possibly see eye to eye with (Continued on page 94)

EXTRA

The Hollywood Times

Modern Screen's Last Minute News

THE VERY LATEST NEWS

VOL. 3, NO. 4

HOLLYWOOD, DECEMBER, 1933

NEWS SECTION

MANY MOVIE MARRIAGES UNDER WAY

CHARLIE CHAPLIN AND HIS BEAUTIFUL FIANCEE. THE VIVACIOUS PAULETTE GODDARD, ARE INVARIABLY AMONG THOSE PRESENT AT THE MAYFAIR DANCES

MARY AND DOUG WILL RECONCILE

Hollywood's Famous Pair To Try Life Together Again

If reports of those credited to be "in the know" are correct, it won't be long now before Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks will patch their temporary marital difficulties and take up life together again.

Steps toward a reconciliation were affected recently by transatlantic telephone, when Doug denied that he had any notion of becoming a British subject.

Doug plans to return to Hollywood.

George Arliss Hunts Home —To Play Rothschild

It begins to look as if George Arliss had become a true devotee of California's most-talked-of-town, for the British star is about to forsake hotel life in favor of a home of his own.

The star is slated to play Rothschild as his next for Twentieth Century. The colorful role of the renowned banker is a distinct departure from any of the parts Arliss has essayed recently.

Big "Shrubbery" Shower For Mary Brian's New Home

Something unique in the way of "showers" occurred recently when Mary Brian moved into her new home at Toluca Lake. Everybody came and brought a plant or a shrub. Quite a novel idea.

Margaret Ettinger thought it up and has earned Mary's gratitude. It will be sort of fun to point out Gary Cooper's fir tree and Carole Lombard's hedge contribution to visiting friends.

WEDDING BELLS SLATED TO RING FOR FILM FAVORITES

News of the Lupe Velez-Johnnie Weissmuller marriage—scooped by MODERN SCREEN—started Cupid clinching romantic deals in Hollywood. And cinema sweethearts, who once planned to tread the bridal path when they got around to it, are now purchasing four-karat sparklers and setting dates.

Gary Cooper and Sondra Shaw were among the first to raid the jeweler's and sally forth with a canary-colored diamond, which is the first step to definitely withdraw one of the colony's most eligible bachelors from circulation.

Undoubtedly, as you read this, several of the engaged couples will have taken the "for better or for worse" vows, only time divulging who will beat who to the post in the matrimonial sweepstakes.

Charlie Chaplin and Paulette Goddard will reach the altar in June. The locale of their wedding is to be England, which country is also due to serve as the nuptial setting for Cary Grant and Virginia Cherrill. However, Tom Gallery and Madge Evans will wed much sooner. Their romance has almost become legendary. In fact, it has endured since Tom and Zasu Pitts came to the legal parting of the ways and Madge arrived on the camera coast.

Russ Columbo and Sally Blane plan to become Mister and Missus in the near future, as do Mary Brian and Donald Cook. It will seem strange indeed to see little Mary, who has been Hollywood's official belle for so long, devoted to one man exclusively.

The Doris Warner-Mervyn LeRoy nuptials are definitely scheduled for January and rumor hath it that Miss Warner's friend, Gwen Heller, is due to meet Dick Powell at the altar in the not-too-distant future.

Norma Works on First Film For Her Husband's Unit

Norma Shearer is all ready for work again. This, after that extended European vacation which she and her husband enjoyed last summer.

Mr. Thalberg will produce his wife's picture, an original story called "Rip Tide," from MacArthur's facile pen.

Flashes from Here and There

William Powell is going places and seeing things with the luscious-looking Margaret Lindsay.

George Raft's new "best gal" happens to be Shirley Grey.

Carl Laemmle, Jr., heart whole and fancy free for several months, takes Irene Bentley to the gay places.

Walter Disney's voice is heard in the Mickey Mouse pictures. Walt speaks up for Mickey.

Gary Wright, is now escorting Countess Frasso, who until recently was constantly in Gary Cooper's company.

Dorothea Wieck is that pleased that her husband is visiting her in Hollywood.

WHEN VIRGINIA CHERRILL RECENTLY ARRIVED FROM A VACATION IN HONOLULU, CARY GRANT WELCOMED HER AS SOON AS THE MONTEREY DOCKED

MISS STANWYCK RETURNS TO FILMS

Star in Hollywood Set to Start New Picture

Barbara Stanwyck is back in Hollywood, keeping very much to herself and wearing dark glasses. The star is not attempting a Garbo, nor anything approaching it. Fact of the matter is, Barbara suffered a nervous collapse during her trip east, which necessitated a two-months' rest period, and absolute quiet.

The star's next will be "Broadway and Back.

Bill Cagneys Credit Caption On News Photo for Romance Start

There must be something to this "power of suggestion" idea after all.

Bill and his bride, Boots Mallory, never knew how much they cared until they read a caption under a newspaper picture. Said cutline avowed their undying devotion and, 'twas from its extravagant phrases that the now happy newlyweds got the idea. A few weeks later the pair were wed.

Lona Andre Assures Herself a Gay Time at Her Own Party

There are several ways of insuring oneself of attention and apparently pretty Lona Andre knows all of 'em.

The young lady threw herself a Hallowe'en Party and invited four of her "steadies" and fifteen young male eligibles appearing in "Search for Beauty." There were no women, so Lona had all the dances. You'll have to admit it's a sound way to rate popularity!

Marlene misquoted? Well, Diamond Mae claims that she didn't start the fireworks

One believer in Santa Claus, anyway. Baby LeRoy, in ecstasy and pink flannelette, sings a small carol in praise of his new red automobile. For a whole day, he's free from studio worries and work on "Miss Fane's Baby."

The most discussed pair of newlyweds since Gloria brought home her Marquis. Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Weissmuller, on whose runaway marriage MODERN SCREEN scooped such a grand scoop, are now "at home."

J. B. Scott

WHAT EVERY FAN SHOULD KNOW . . .

GARBO is going to move. Her peace has been greatly disturbed ever since the publicity broke in the newspapers regarding a certain Oscar H. Brosi, who was nabbed by police as he was attempting to climb the wall at Garbo's home. Brosi stated he had been trying to see la Garbo for three years. Unfortunately the address of the star's home was given—1201 San Vicente Boulevard—with the result that a dozen or more people can usually be found outside the gate hoping for a glimpse of the famous Swede who refuses to be glimpsed.

So yesterday, garbed in white tennis shoes, white duck trousers, canvas gloves, a mannish polo coat, beret and huge black goggles, Garbo went house-hunting. Nothing suitable has been found yet.

THEY HAVEN'T MET YET!

● Paramount is still trying to get Mae West and Marlene Dietrich together for a photograph. They want to put an end, once and for all, to the battle that started when Marlene was quoted in New York as saying she had never heard of Mae West, and they think a friendly picture will turn the trick. They almost succeeded at the premiere of "I'm No Angel," but Marlene managed to slip in unseen. Mae declares she won't make the first move as she didn't start the fireworks and Marlene insists she was misquoted. So, for the present, the battle still rages.

● Gene Raymond was on his way to keep a date with Mary Brian one evening when his car suddenly came to a dead stop at a busy intersection. No amount of coaxing would get the old wagon to budge. The traffic signals changed from a red STOP to a green GO time and again, but the bus remained adamant. Finally a wise guy whizzed by and shouted, "What's the matter, buddy, don't you like the colors?"

DIX LIKES CHICKENS

● At last we've found out why Richard Dix spends so much time on his "hide-away" ranch. For years Rich and his "mystery ranch" have been the subject of much discussion in Hollywood. No one knew where it was located except that it was "somewhere in the Malibu Mountains." There is no telephone, no mail delivery. When Rich retires to his ranch, he is merely "out of circulation." At first, reports were that he was writing a novel or a life story or something. But now the secret's out: he is raising chickens. He started out with a few, as a lark, but became so intrigued by the "fowl" business that he's now operating on a big scale and a profitable one, too, they say.

● Never let it be said of Lilian Harvey that she throws her money away. During her lean days in Europe, before she became a successful actress drawing a large weekly salary, she learned the art of saving. Whenever she needed a new dress or a pair of shoes, she would lay aside a certain sum of money each week until the purchase price was reached. And even now, when any shop would only too gladly extend her credit, she still sticks to this method of buying. No purchase is made without first planning and saving toward it. Lilian laughs at her frugality, but claims she really gets a bigger kick out of doing it that way.

● Maybe not the most correct ensemble, but Marlene Dietrich wore a heavy red rough-neck sweater with a couple of diamond clasps at her throat at the Colony Club t'other night.

MASTER LE ROY TEMPERAMENTAL

● Baby LeRoy is acquiring temperament now that he's a star. It happened on the "Miss Fane's Baby Is Stolen" set when the director ordered a tub of water for a scene in which Dorothea Wieck was to bathe Master LeRoy. The youngster took one look at the familiar object and put up a long, loud howl. He refused to be quieted until the tub was removed.

● Pity poor Katharine Hepburn. She has to learn seven long dramatic prayers for her next picture, in which she portrays a faith healer.

● While broadcasting over the radio recently on behalf of the proposed actors' salary control clause, Lilyan Tashman revealed the fact that she is the proud possessor of two hundred ermine coats. Lil must have forgotten, for the moment, that there is supposed to be a depression.

● A great deal of discussion has been aroused with the release of M-G-M's "Bombshell," co-starring Jean Harlow and Lee Tracy. While everybody admits it's grand entertainment, there are those who think it unwise to debunk Hollywood. They claim there are still people who idolize movie stars, think Hollywood a glamorous place, and to them, the (Above) At the Hollywood opening of "I'm No Angel." The star herself, Mae West, resplendent in lace gown, white fox, orchids and diamonds, makes her bow to the audience. (Right) Jack La Rue and the pretty little English actress, Ida Lupino, at the Mae West premiere.

J. B. Scott

J. B. Scott

(Right) It won't be long now. Cary Grant and Virginia Cherrill, very much in love and practically ready for that march to the altar, at the "I'm No Angel" premiere.

J. B. Scott

picture will be a disappointment. On the other hand, it is hoped that they will see the humor of the thing and not judge everybody and everything in the picture business by this film, which after all, was produced purely for entertainment.

MAUREEN'S ENGAGED

● Maureen O'Sullivan is wearing a big flasher on the correct finger and Johnny Farrow is having his apartment redecorated in Mexican style. So, it looks like wedding bells in the offing for these two.

● Leave it to the studio heads to find a way out of most any situation. Recently, when George Brent walked out of the "Mandalay" cast, a hurried call was put in for Lyle Talbot to replace him. Lyle, who had just figured in a nasty automobile smash-up, appeared with a deep gash across his forehead. Every trick known to the art of make-up was applied, but the gash loomed forth in all its ugliness. Finally one of the "heads" got a bright idea. He sent for the scenario writer, and after a few minutes' conference, it was decided to have a paragraph written into the beginning of the script, which takes care of that scar in a most heroic manner.

● Hepburn's stand-in, secretary, seamstress, maid, cook and hairdresser are all wearing overalls now.

J. B. Scott

And so they were married. Andy Devine and Dorothy House. The pair were cast as sweethearts and the roles so appealed, they made 'em permanent.

● Here's some good news for you "Three Little Pigs" fans: This Silly Symphony has met with such tremendous success that Walt Disney is going to feature them (plus the Big Bad Wolf) in several other Mother Goose rhymes. In other words, they're going to become regular stars like Mickey Mouse. Incidentally, folks are seeing "Three Little Pigs" for the umptieth time and still enjoying it.

● Speaking of "The Three Little Pigs," a new café recently opened in Hollywood called the "Three Little Pigs Inn" and features the "Big Bad Wolf Orchestra." Cute?

● Wags report Randolph Scott and Vivian Gaye (Sari Maritza's pretty manager) are looking at wedding rings . . . Doris Warner is being flooded with showers. Her wedding to Mervyn LeRoy is scheduled for January 3 . . . The Bob Kennistons (Billie Dove) are blessed-eventing, and the same is hinted of Thelma Todd and hubby, Pat Di Ciccio.

J. B. Scott

Yes, it's Polly Moran and her handsome new husband, Martin Malone. Polly's marriage was a surprise.

GEORGE BREAKSTON'S BREAK

● Hollywood is always flooded with yarns about new talent being "discovered." Many of them mere fabrications. But here is one that is really true.

For weeks Frank Borzage had been testing kid actors for the lead in "Paul Street Boys." It was an important part and Borzage was frantic. Pacing his floor one afternoon, he happened to glance out through his window and saw, crossing the lot, a young lad about eleven. "That's exactly what I want," the director shouted, and was through the door like a streak of lightning. His flow of questions . . . "Who are you, what's your name, how'd you happen to be here?" almost frightened the poor boy to death.

He finally managed to say his name was George Breakston and he was calling for his mother who worked at the studio as a hat designer. Funny part is, neither the mother nor the son were a bit thrilled about the prospect of George becoming an actor. Borzage had to plead with them before they finally consented, and then the mother declared it was merely to secure enough money for George to complete his education. Her boy, she said, was going to be an engineer!

J. B. Scott

Janet Gaynor and Jeanette MacDonald are all set for the "Little Women" preview, but obligingly pause to pose for our cameraman.

● John Gilbert's worries are evidently over. His picture with Garbo is finished and the entire studio is wreathed in smiles. There's a rumor afloat that he may replace Chevalier in "The Merry Widow," which would be the height of something or other for Jack. You will remember his decline started with the advent of talkies because officials reported his voice recorded badly. Now "Merry Widow" is a musical and if Jack draws the rôle, he will not only talk, but actually sing!

APOLOGY

● In connection with the article, "The Inside Story of Hollywood Feuds," in the November Modern Screen, we are in receipt of communications from George Brent, Ruth Chatterton (Mrs. George Brent), and Ralph Forbes which state that the details about them in this story are inaccurate and place them in a false and misleading light. Since they are the parties concerned in the paragraphs in question and are the only ones in a position to know the exact facts, we feel that it is only just that we make a retraction and apology at this time for these statements.

TOBY'S ALL SET

● You've probably been wondering, during these last few months, just who Toby Wing is. Truth of the matter is, Toby, the luscious-looking blonde, has been under contract to

Wide World

This is not Alice in Wonderland, but lovely little Maria Sieber, Marlene's daughter. You'll see her with her famous mother in "Catherine the Great."

Paramount for over three months without a single assignment. But she suddenly finds herself with two assignments. She'll make her debut in "Chrysalis" and "Search for Beauty" and is the gal excited! And her contract with Paramount was recently renewed.

● Joel McCrea and Frances Dee (the newlyweds) went furniture-shopping the other day. After paying for a swanky-looking bathtub, they discovered the state tax on it amounted to $15.

Joel looked at Frances and whispered, "A case where you're sorta cleaned before the bath."

● Speaking of bathtubs, Mae West never takes a shower. She prefers tub baths, heavily scented.

● Marlene Dietrich's pet Scotty Nicki, caused quite a stir of excitement when she upset the telephone in Marlene's room, threw the receiver off its hook and started barking for all she was worth. Central, fearing something was wrong, reported it to the police station and in a few minutes several coppers were pounding on Dietrich's door.

Nicki is in the dog-house now.

● A well-known wit says that ZaSu Pitts is different from most Hollywood gals. She acts dumb but is smart . . . while most of them act smart and are dumb.

● Hollywood is buried under such an avalanche of mail daily that most letters (bearing the stamp of "form letter") seldom get further than the office boy. So when a certain form letter suddenly hit the film capital like a package of T. N. T., no one was more surprised than the sender himself, a certain Jack Moss, hard-working insurance agent in Beverly Hills. The letter stated that anyone who could put his or her hands on $1,000 was a possible subject for abduction and went on to offer to pay any ransom up to $10,000 for the nominal sum of $8.35 per month.

Two or three of the stars, believing they were "on the spot," stirred up a big fuss. "Another racket," they cried. The district attorney is now investigating the matter while Moss, swearing he's on the level, sits in his office quite befuddled by all the sudden publicity and whatnot.

● There is no end to some people's talent. Ramon Novarro, who just finished a successful musical tour in Europe, plans to produce his own play in England next year. He will be author, producer, director and star.

JEANETTE'S IN DEMAND

● Jeanette MacDonald doesn't have to worry particularly if she doesn't get that rôle in "The Merry Widow." Maurice Chevalier has stubbornly refused to have Jeanette in the picture with him—professional jealousy is said to be the reason—and this has rather put the studio on the spot. However, several other studios are clamoring for her talents. Twentieth Century has put in a bid for her, RKO wants her for "My Gal Sal," originally slated for Irene Dunne, and M-G-M has another story in mind for her entitled, "The Goldfish."

J. B. Scott

He was all ready for a hunting trip, when the studio summoned Clark Gable for retakes. However, being un-temperamental, the star took it gracefully.

● Judith Allen and her mother are both left-handed . . . Myrna Loy becomes a star with her latest flicker, "Prizefighter and a Lady" and well she deserves it . . . Unlike Garbo, Katharine Hepburn doesn't mind having people watch her work.

● A certain taxi cab driver in Hollywood lost his best customer when Alice Brady bought herself a car. Until now, Alice has used his cab exclusively since she first lighted into the village.

● Maria Sieber (Marlene Dietrich's daughter) will have her first fling at picture work in her mother's next picture. She will portray Marlene as a youngster.

● Clara Bow, the original "It" gal, is now wearing spectacles. Doctor's orders.

● We are told the word "curvacious," derived from the two words "curves" and "vivacious," and especially coined to describe Mae West, will be included in the new edition of the dictionary. Mae should feel honored, to say the least.

● Since their divorce, Max Baer and Dorothy Dunbar go everywhere together. That's the new Hollywood custom, y'know.

● Mary Brian declares she's been in a fog ever since she was cast for the dreary (atmospherically speaking) picture by that name. The entire film was shot in a fog (composed of mineral oil), and the one and only day she had off, Los Angeles happened to be enjoying a real "San Francisco fog." A few days later, when the studio sent her out in a blimp to make some publicity pictures, the fog was so thick the pilot cruised about for five hours before he could see to make a landing. Ho, hum, such is life.

J. B. Scott

Pat De Ciccio, Dorothy Dunbar (Max Baer's "ex"), Max and Thelma Todd tune up with "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?" Something new in quartettes!

"WHY DOESN'T HE LIKE ME?"—GARBO

ON HIS KNEES BEFORE DIETRICH!

DICK CROMWELL

By CAROLINE SOMERS HOYT

MAYBE you've read all this stuff about Richard Cromwell being a shy little country boy who doesn't know what to say nor how to say it—a lad who gets embarrassed when he's out in society. And maybe you've believed it. If so, get it all right out of your head, for beneath that boyish exterior beats the heart of a sophisticate.

Dick Cromwell—apparently the same shy, bashful lad of "Tol'able David"—has known and known well the most glamorous women of Hollywood. They have been his real friends. He has collected them as one collects autographs. What's more, all these women have liked the lad for his charm, his wit and his unconventionality.

The women in Dick's life? The glamorous women he has known? Just listen! Garbo, Crawford, Dietrich, Bankhead!

Dick had never said much about them until one afternoon, the two of us sat chatting and he began to talk. It was just one of those things that sometimes happen, for I know he has never told these stories before. But they were so amusing that I finally persuaded him to let me pass them on to you.

Let Dick tell it in his own words.

"Naturally, I've always had a crush on Garbo. Who hasn't? Even before I was in pictures—long before—I used to find out by devious methods the address of her house and ride up and down before it waiting for her to come out. She never came—and usually I'd discover that she had moved to another house just about the time I'd learned the last address.

"Then one day I was working in my shop and I saw Garbo drive up to a little candy and nut store. I dropped what I was doing and tore around to watch her. She bought fifty cents worth of nuts, looked in the bag and said, 'My God, that's enough nuts to last me a month.' And then she drove away.

"A couple of years passed before I saw her again. I'd gotten in pictures by that time and also by that time I'd told a lot of people how crazy I was about Garbo. Muriel Ames—the wife of Robert Ames who died—and Sulka Viertel (wife of Berthold Viertel) swore they'd fix it for me to meet Garbo.

IT happened at a cocktail party—one of the few Garbo has ever attended. I don't know what they had told her about me, but at any rate, when I walked in she beckoned to me.

"'You are the nice boy who like Garbo, yes?' she said. 'Well, just for that, sit by me and I'll see that you get plenty to drink.'

"She sat at the cocktail party all afternoon and didn't move out of her chair. Every now and then she'd say something and laugh that big laugh of hers, which sometimes means she is really amused and sometimes means she is just bored.

"A few weeks later, Muriel Ames came over to my house and began—as she always does—with 'Mercy, dear.' Well, 'Mercy, dear'—I was going to see Garbo again—on a yachting party. 'Mercy, dear,' Muriel said, 'Can you bear it?'

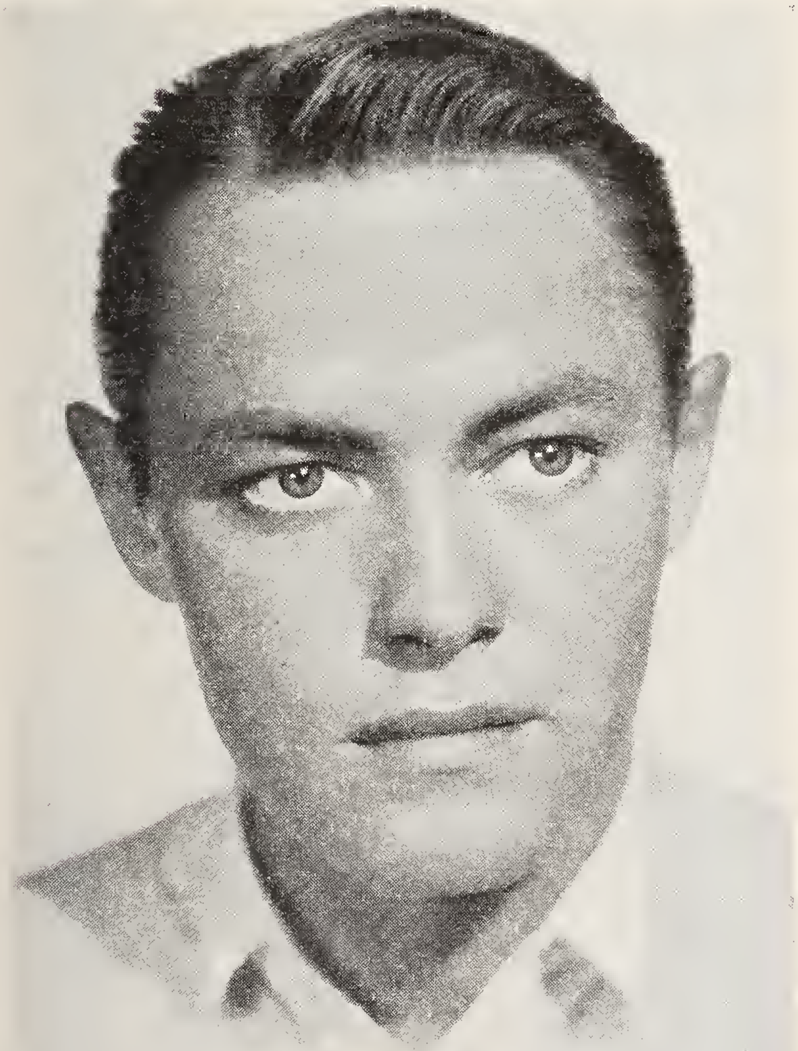
"I said I'd try.

"There were just a few of us on the boat and we were

"MY NAME'S JOAN CRAWFORD"

TALLULAH THINKS HE'S TOO DIVINE!

SURPRISES YOU



—with the fascinating stories of his friendship with four of Hollywood's most glorious women: Garbo, Dietrich, Crawford and Bankhead!

in a state of jitters for fear Garbo wouldn't arrive. Then we saw her striding down the beach and sighed with relief.

"We set out and I think I saw what few people have ever seen. I saw Garbo really happy. Sitting in the prow of the boat, facing a stiff sea, with the wind blowing her hair, she was like some Viking goddess. But, unlike the Viking goddess, she kidded and laughed—really laughed as if she meant it—all afternoon.

"Her jokes are rather sly and dry. She has a brand of humor all her own and she loves to make a joke.

"Once she turned to Muriel and said, 'Why doesn't this boy like me?'

" 'Mercy dear,' Muriel answered. 'He's crazy about you.'

"The end of that trip was disastrous for me. I thought I'd be smart and show off before Garbo, so suddenly I jumped overboard and started to swim alongside the boat —but the damn thing went too fast. The next I knew it was almost a mile away and I almost caught pneumonia.

"Garbo is a strange woman. She works out her own life and lives it and does not know why she is thought strange. I know, however, of one very curious thing she does. When she has been seeing too many people—when she has been dissipating her time —she punishes herself by locking herself in a dark room and staying there, sometimes for three days!

(Above, left) In "Hoopla," Clara Bow is supposed to "seduce" Dick Cromwell. The "seduction" scenes were acted so realistically that, first thing you know, gossips were saying Clara and husband Rex Bell were about to separate. Cause: Mr. Cromwell. Just how silly that story was is proven in the article. (Right) Dick and Kathryn DeMille, daughter of the famous Cecil. She and Dick are thick as thieves these days.

I HAPPENED to be present when Garbo and Tallulah Bankhead met. People have said that at that meeting she and Garbo insulted each other. It isn't true.

"Tallulah has more curiosity than a cat. She was mad to meet Garbo. Garbo, in her more silent way, has curiosity, too, and she was just as anxious to meet Tallulah. They had both heard much about the other so when Tallulah asked her to a party at her house Garbo, to everybody's surprise, accepted.

"Those two met. They were polite and charming to each other but intensely curious and it was amazing to see then eyeing each other from head to foot as they shook hands.

"However, it was a swell party and I have an unforgetable picture of Garbo sitting on Tallulah's bar swinging her long legs and laughing that hearty Swedish laugh.

"When I went to work at M-G-M they told me I'd never get a chance to see Garbo. They said that she goes from her dressing room to the set in a car with the curtains drawn and that even if you happen to see her and even if you have met her before she wants to be left strictly alone.

"But, strangely enough, I saw Garbo every day walking from her dressing room to the stage. Still thinking she wanted to be left alone, I did not speak to her. But one day she saw me and called out, 'Well, well, here's the boy who once liked Garbo and doesn't any more. He doesn't like Garbo so much that he dives off boats to get rid of. her. How are you, kid?' Everybody at the studio stood around in amazement.

"It's funny, but I always seem to be meeting these women at cocktail parties. That's where I met Marlene Dietrich, too. I have a lot of German friends and it was through them that I got to know her.

"When we met she said, 'Ah, "Tol'able David" is my favorite picture in America.' We chatted for a while. I wish I could have foreseen the circumstances under which I was to meet her next—and altered them.

"Joan Crawford had asked me to her anniversary party. I knew I would be working late at the studio, so I took my evening clothes to change there. As I put on my trousers a button that holds the suspenders came off and there was no time to sew it on, so I pinned my trousers up with a large safety pin and went to the party.

"The first person I saw there was Marlene Dietrich. I went over to speak to her and just then, like a gag in a comedy, I felt my trousers slipping. Well, I couldn't lose my pants there in Joan's beautiful living room so I dropped to my knees before Dietrich.

"Lots of people saw the gesture and I understand that I was called all kinds of a fool for trying to be so gallant. I never could tell anyone that it wasn't gallantry. I was too busy pulling up my pants and getting out of the room —with hand neatly poised on hip—to go upstairs and fix the darn things.

"I felt, however, that Dietrich thought I was a show-off so that's why I was so pleased when she asked me and the German friends to her house.

THE way Marlene shows you she likes you is to give you food and food and more food. I have never seen so much and such delicious things to eat—platter after platter, all heavy and German, but grand.

"Although on this day Marlene was being very amusing I was still feeling like an idiot because of the episode at Joan's and when she was called away by a long distance call from Germany and didn't come back for a long time and then seemed quite upset and excused herself, I thought she wanted to get rid of me. So the Germans and I left.

"Later I heard that Marlene—all apologies and carrying platters of food—had come to their house and I had gone home.

"Here's something that Marlene doesn't want known but I saw it in print not long ago so there's no reason why I can't tell you. She plays the musical saw—and plays it well, too.

(Continued on page 82)

ENTER JOAN CRAWFORD'S

"Dancing Lady" CONTEST now! —AND WIN A FREE TRIP TO HOLLYWOOD

AND MANY OTHER VALUABLE PRIZES!

PRIZES:

- 1st—A free trip to visit Joan Crawford in Hollywood, to go places and see things as this glamorous star's guest, to meet her friends, who will then become your friends.
- 2nd—A Crosley Shelvador Refrigerator (see picture).
- 3rd—$100 in cash.
- 4th—A Crosley Dual Tone Low-Boy Radio (see picture).
- 5th—Ten prizes of a Max Factor make-up kit.
- 6th—Five prizes of $10 each.
- 7th—Ten prizes of $5 each.

ARE you in the swim—which means: how are you making out in the Joan Crawford contest? Everybody's in it, you know; for besides being a load of fun, think of the prizes! The rules are on the following page—but first read this!

Imagine a free trip to Hollywood as a guest of Joan Crawford. To go places and see things with this scintillating star. To meet other celebrities through her and have them become your friends. Well, all of that comprises the first prize.

There are other winners' gifts, too. Just listen. For the contestant who is second best awaits a most modern and efficient Crosley Shelvador Refrigerator, handsome enough to grace and enhance anybody's pantry. Third, one hundred dollars in cash. Fourth, a Crosley Dual Tone Low-Boy Radio—an attractive instrument with a beautiful tone. Fifth, ten prizes each (Continued on page 97)

2nd PRIZE: A Crosley Shelvador Refrigerator

HERE ARE THE RULES

1. At the bottom of these two pages, there are four stills—cut up in segments—from "Dancing Lady." Last month four other stills—also cut up—were published. Reproductions of them will be found on pages 96 and 97, if you missed them. The eight stills (or facsimilies of them) must be put together correctly and neatly, and arranged in the order in which the corresponding scenes take place in "Dancing Lady." (Synopsis on the opposite page.) When you have done this, write a description of Joan Crawford, in ten words or less. Submit the eight stills and the description together.

2. The prizes will be awarded to the persons who put together and arrange most correctly and neatly the eight stills submitted and who, in the opinion of the judges, give the best descriptions of Joan Crawford in ten words or less.

3. The first prize is a free trip to Hollywood to visit Joan Crawford; the second prize, a Crosley Shelvador Refrigerator; the third prize, $100 in cash; the fourth prize, a Crosley Dual Tone Low-Boy Radio; the ten fifth prizes, a Max Factor make-up kit each; the five sixth prizes, $10 each.

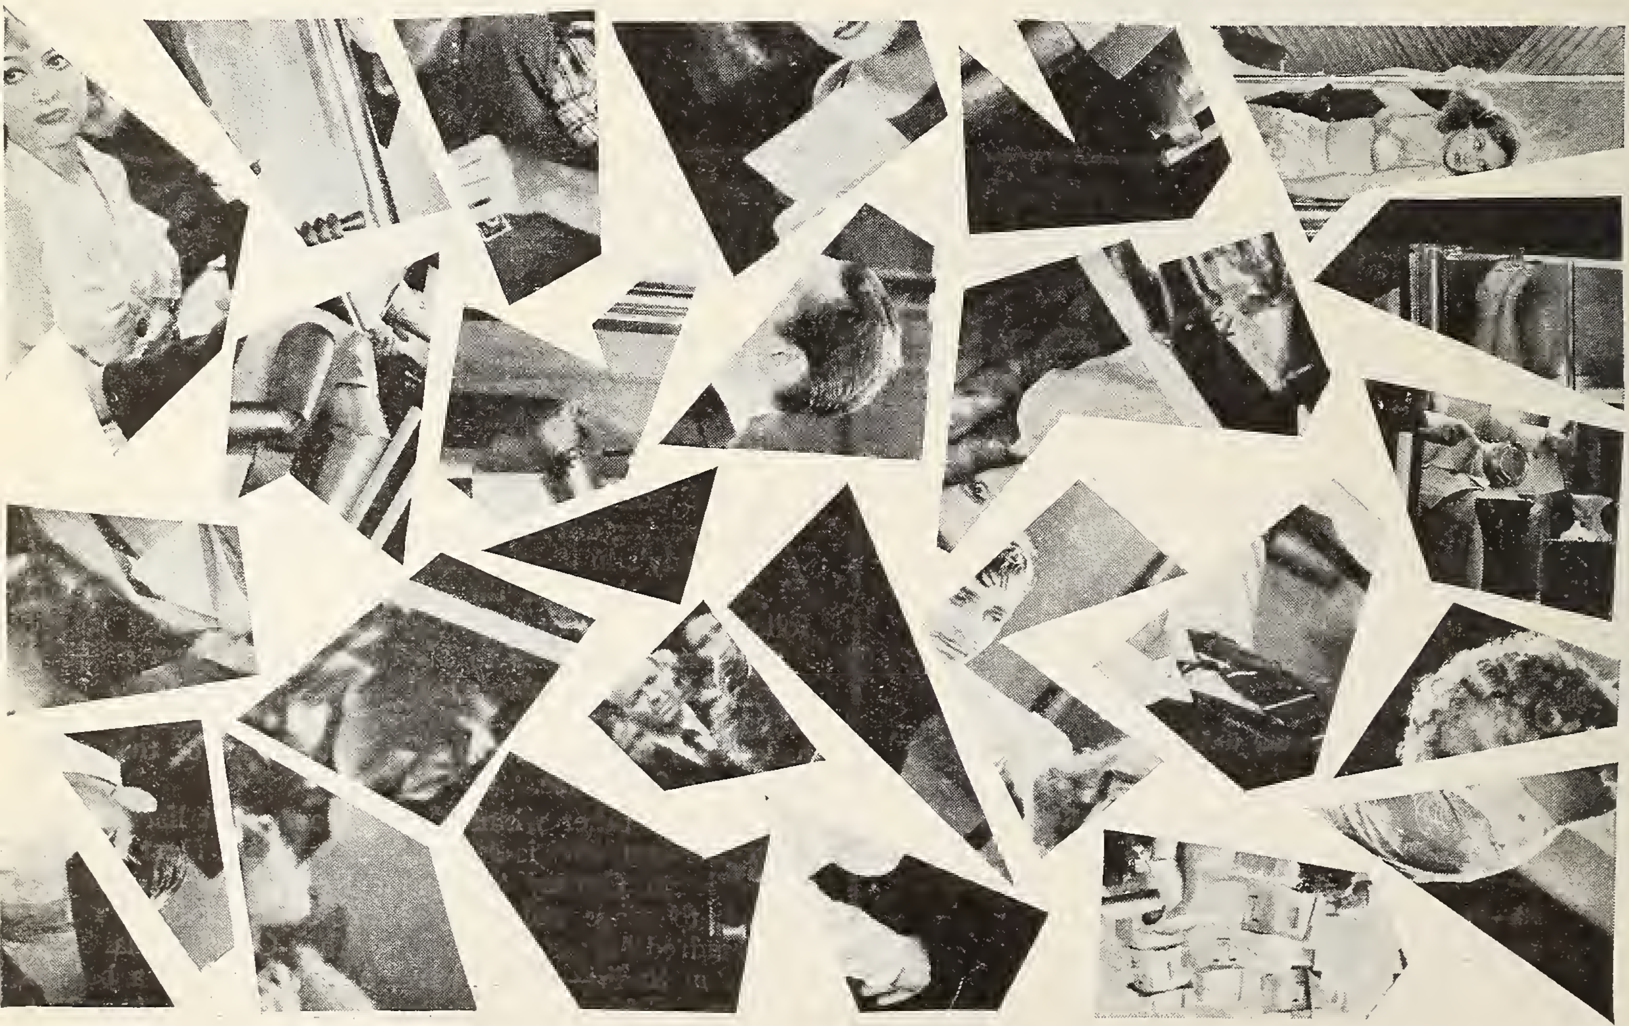
4. The contestants may submit as many entries as they choose.

5. No employees of MODERN SCREEN or members of employees' families are eligible to compete.

6. In case of ties, duplicate prizes will be awarded.

7. Send all entries to Joan Crawford Contest, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y. All entries must be mailed before midnight of January 15, 1934.

CAN YOU PUT THE "Dancing Lady"



THE STORY OF "DANCING LADY"

Tod Vionet (Franchot Tone) liked wine, women and song. What is more, he could afford them.

When Park Avenue night life palled, there was downtown New York with its hectic side-shows and gaudy burlesques. It was in one of these that Janie (Joan Crawford, appeared.

One evening Tod and the police arrived at the notorious girl-show simultaneously. The latter had come to not-too-gently, but firmly, remove the scantily-garbed talent from the entertainment boards. Young Vionet paid Janie's fine at court. Which favor, he considered, entitled him to intimate and exclusive rights on the dancer. However, it did not take her long to change his mind.

After weeks of idleness, Janie finally secured a job with Patch Gallagher, (Clark Gable) director of Bradley's musical shows.

Meanwhile Tod continued to pursue Janie, who consented to marry him if the show should prove a flop. The ingenious youth assures himself of a nice break by buying out Bradley and closing the show.

At this point, Patch's ire is up. He has worked desperately hard for the show and decides to invest his savings in it and carry on. However, when he learns that it was Tod who queered its chances, he sets out on a spree to forget it all.

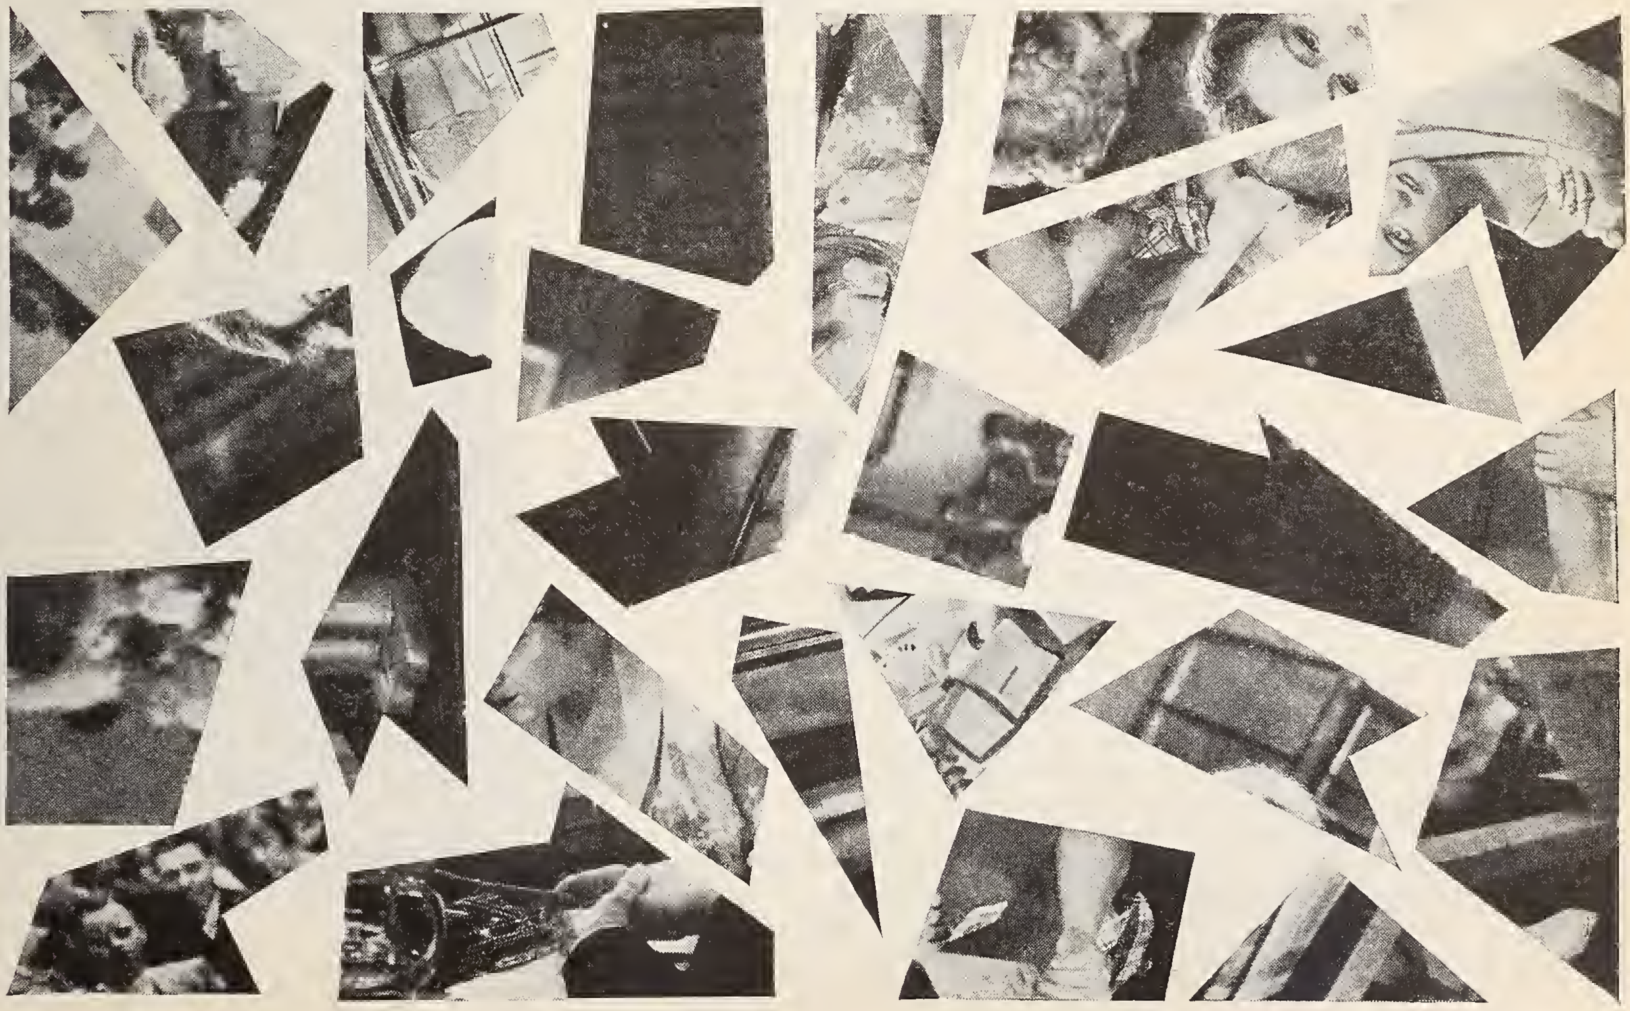
Meanwhile, Janie, Tod and their gay gang, just returned from a yachting cruise, are celebrating in a crowded bar. There, they discover a dejected and inebriate Patch, who, believing Janie has known what has happened and deliberately deserted the show to marry money, blurts out his side of the story. Which enlightening yarn promptly secures Tod his walking papers from Janie.

Janie takes Patch to his apartment, sobers him up and makes him promise to teach her the routines of the new show. The pair work like Trojans and finally whip the production into shape. Then, there is the matter of instating Janie in the principal role.

On opening night, Tod arrives laden with promises. Janie shall be his wife, share his millions and continue her career if she chooses. She doesn't. She chooses work, success—and Patch!

4th PRIZE: A Crosley Dual Tone Low-Boy Radio

STILLS IN THE RIGHT ORDER?



Remember "Mrs. Rittenhouse" in "The Cocoanuts"?

COULD YOU "TAKE IT"?

By BARBARA BARRY

MARGARET DUMONT has been on the receiving end of more Marx mauling than she can remember.

Harpo wrestles with her. Groucho throws her for a ten-yard loss. Chico rides across the set on the train of her Patou model. And, when they can't think of anything else, they all climb in her lap and make collective love to the lady.

For five years, the Marx maniacs have been giving this girl a big hand—as well as an occasional foot—in the interest of good, clean fun. It's a rough life, mates, but Miss Dumont loves it because it is never monotonous. If you've ever watched the four brothers cavort, that last crack goes without saying.

Groucho calls her "Tootsie." Harpo cuts it to "Toots." But Chico and Zeppo get along with just plain "Maggie," much to the stately Miss Dumont's amusement.

At the time of her introduction to the Marx boys, Miss

Groucho calls the stately Margaret Dumont, Tootsie. Harpo—Toots, Chico and Zeppo—Maggie

Those mad, unpredictable Marx Brothers could make life miserable for you if you were their stooge. Read how Margaret Dumont takes it

Dumont had definitely given up the stage to fill a more important role as the wife of one of New York's wealthiest clubmen.

Previous to her marriage, she had acted as foil to such celebrated comedians as Lew Fields, and others. Sam Harris, the w.-k. Broadway producer, was so favorably impressed with her dignified "stooging" that, when the Marx brothers came to him for aid in securing the services of a capable "straight" woman, he immediately sent for Miss Dumont.

The boys liked her, gave her a contract, and rehearsals for "The Cocoanuts" got under way. And what a way!

"Every rehearsal was different," Miss Dumont smiled reminiscently. "I knew my lines, all right, but I might as well have been quoting 'The Face on the Barroom Floor,' for all the attention those lunatics paid to the script!

"The opening night arrived and I was absolutely horrified! I went to Groucho and begged him to give me a coherent idea of the routine he intended to use. 'At least,' I argued, 'give me my cues!'

"'Don't expect any cues from me!' he replied cheerfully. 'It's every man for himself!' and he patted me on the shoulder before dashing out on the stage.

"THE time came for my entrance, and while the four of them romped about the stage, ad libbing hilariously, I stood in the wings with shaking knees. I strained my ears for some semblance of a cue. None came. Minutes ticked off. I had to get on, but . . . how? Finally, in desperation, I took the bull by the horns, walked on and simply forced myself in, somehow. It worked perfectly. Harpo dashed off in pursuit of another blonde, Chico and Zeppo disappeared, and Groucho and I had the center of the stage.

"What he was going to say, or do, I had not the slightest idea. 'Ah, Mrs. Rittenhouse,' he said grandly, gesturing toward a wicker settee. 'Won't you . . . er, lie down?'

"The audience went into hysterics! It was a good thing, too, because the prolonged laughter gave me an opportunity to get my bearings. That scene was the comedy highlight of the show. And it was as new to me as it was to the audience. Groucho had made up every word of it as he went along!"

But unexpected "gagging" is by far the least of Miss Dumont's troubles.

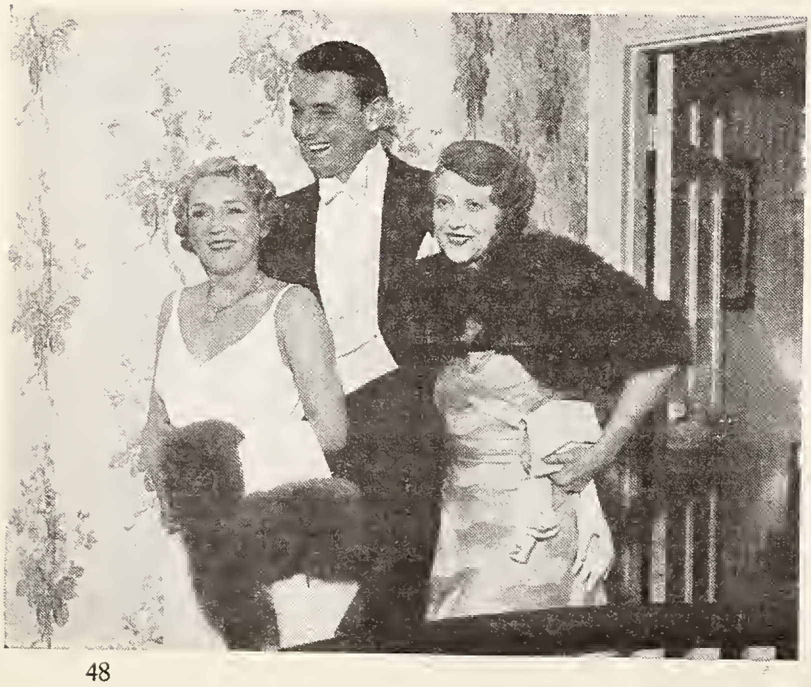
At the climax of a torrid love scene, in "Cocoanuts," Groucho wrapped his leg around the dignified lady's ankles and tried vainly to upset her. Somehow, she managed to keep her footing. But, Groucho vowed that before the season was over she was doomed to bite the dust.

"Right up until the last performance, I had the best of him in that particular struggle," she said. "And then, just at the last, he did it. Perhaps I was over-confident, or, possibly he caught me unaware. Anyhow, I went down, with a very undignified thud! (Continued on page 102)

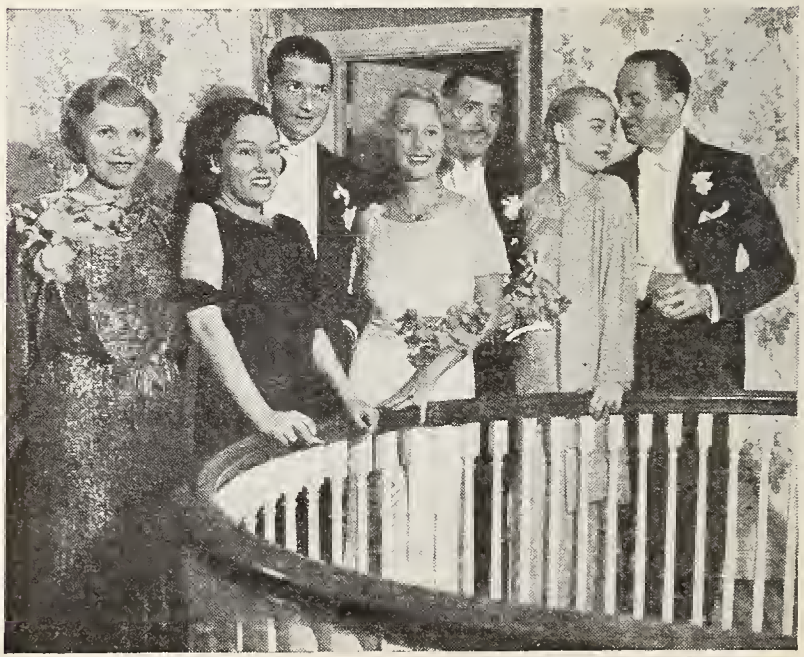
. . . Come on around Hollywood with Scotty, our exclusive cameraman, and see the stars in the full swing of winter gaiety and exciting social doings!

PICTURE NEWS!

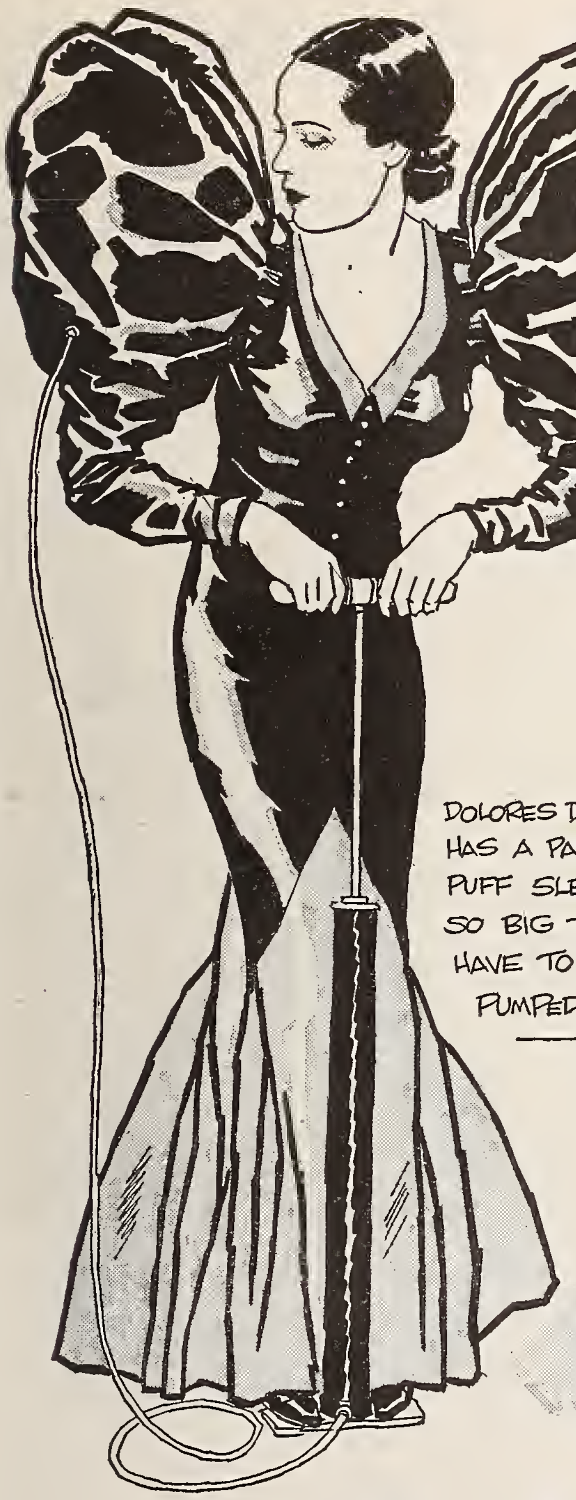
(Above) Gene Raymond and Mary Brian at the Embassy Club Opening. Gene had a party of twenty. (Below) Mary Pickford, George Brent and wife Ruth Chatterton at Mrs. Sidney Franklin's party for Grace Moore, the blonde operatic star.



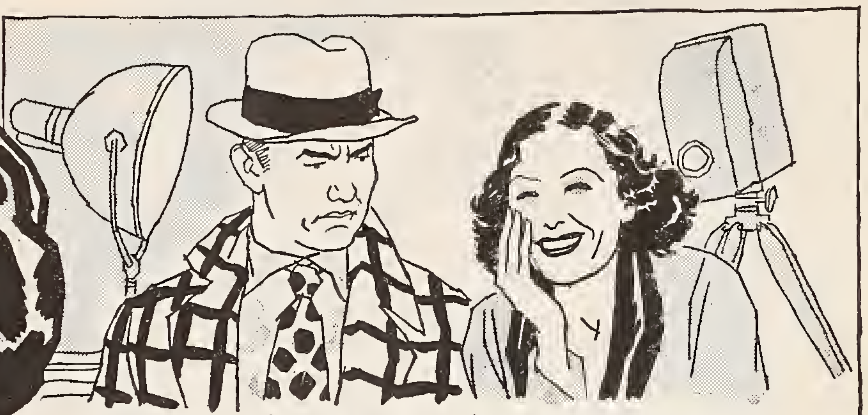
(Above) Ralph Bellamy, Jeanette MacDonald and Jimmie Dunn at the first meeting of the Screen Guild—(Below) The Franklin party again. Lef to right, the hostess, Gloria and Mike Farmer, Grace Moore and Valentin Parerra, Carole Lombard and Bill Powell.



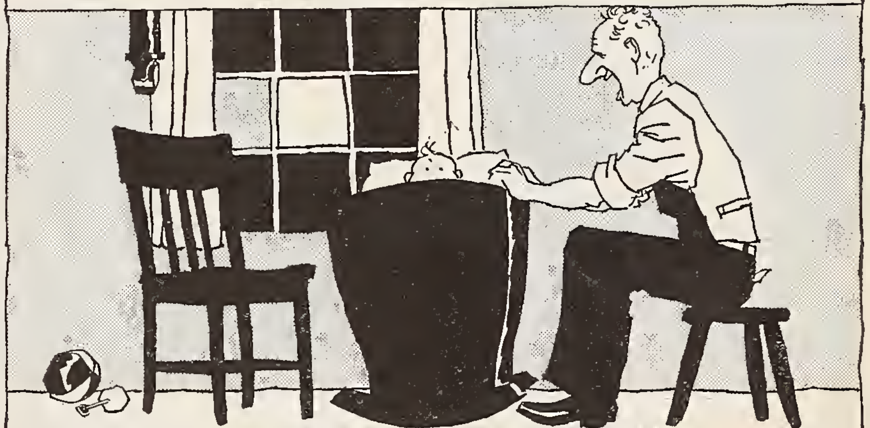
ALL JOKING ASIDE — By JACK WELCH



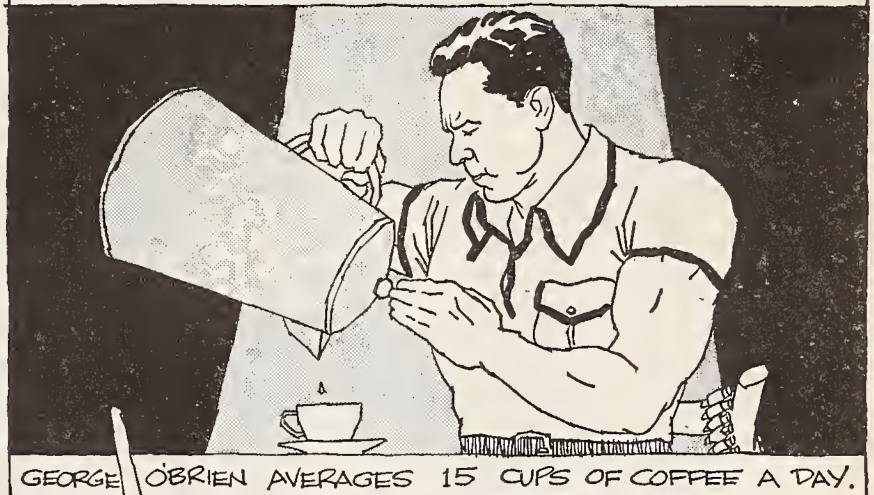
DOLORES DEL RIO HAS A PAIR OF PUFF SLEEVES SO BIG THEY HAVE TO BE PUMPED UP.



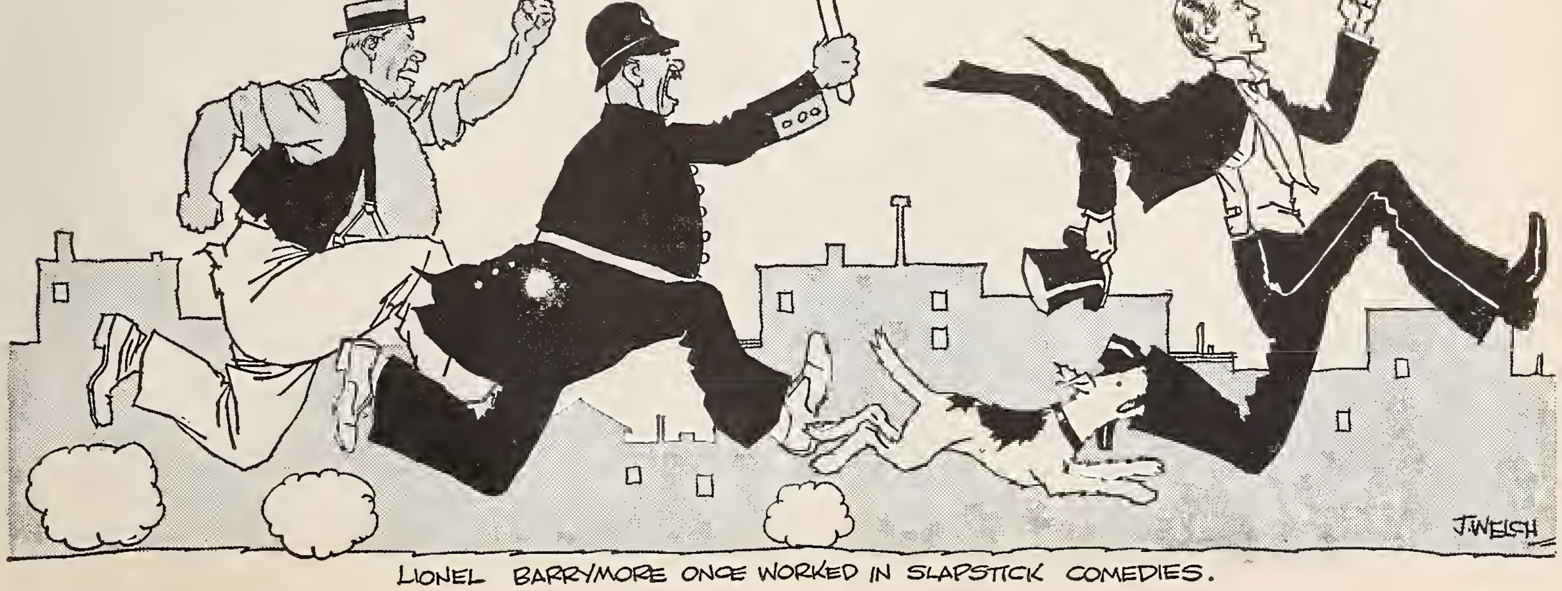
A SCENE IN "DANCING LADY" HAD TO BE RE-SHOT 12 TIMES BECAUSE JOAN CRAWFORD COULDN'T KEEP FROM LAUGHING EVERY TIME SHE LOOKED AT TED HEALY.



THE ONLY WAY TO KEEP JIMMY DURANTE FROM YELLING TOO LOUD INTO THE MICROPHONE IS TO SEPARATE HIM FROM IT BY THE WIDTH OF TWO CHAIRS.



GEORGE O'BRIEN AVERAGES 15 CUPS OF COFFEE A DAY.



LIONEL BARRYMORE ONCE WORKED IN SLAPSTICK COMEDIES.

HOW A STAR WAS CREATED

. . . It took tact, time and bitter argument to overcome the amazing Margaret Sullavan's perfectly sincere dread of Hollywood stardom

By CHARLES BEAHAN

Charles Beahan is responsible for Margaret Sullavan's entrance into the stars' ranks as the result of her hit in "Only Yesterday," with John Boles. He knows Miss Sullavan well—so well that he knew how to overcome her fear of Hollywood's habits with artists—"typing," poor pictures, fabulous salaries paid for indifferent work. Mr. Beahan is the co-author of "Jarnegan" and "Society Girl," and author of "Night for a Lady," and many other works. You will remember that, about a year ago, he married Sidney Fox, with whom, it might be added, he is ecstatically happy.

TRUMPETS sound in Hollywood, brilliant lights sweep heavenward, producers, directors, supervisors, cameramen, even office boys, are colliding with each other in the rush to take bows—for a new star has been born. With tinsel banners waving, broad grins beaming, a bright red feather for each and everybody's cap—the studio officials at Universal are patting themselves on their tummies in anticipation of a long, comfortable winter, and perhaps other winters to follow.

And why?

Because Margaret Sullavan, an unknown stage player, free, white and twenty-odd, not a raving beauty but a swell actress, came to Uncle Carl's sprawling studio carelessly tucked away in the California foothills, and gave such a performance in "Only Yesterday" as has not been seen in these parts since Garbo startled the natives in "The Torrent." Fairly bursting with pride, Universal feels that it has in Margaret Sullavan what is described in Hollywoodese as "the sensation of sensations," the makings of a household word and the runner-up for the uncrowned queen of the cinema.

And what does Margaret Sullavan think?

That blue-eyed, Southern Irish miss believes that she is a total flop in pictures, that she photographs like a pekinese (this is her own description) and that she had better stick to the stage if she wants her career to last. A courageous reaction from an actress, and yet Margaret Sullavan is sincere in her beliefs and she left the projection room at Universal after seeing a preview of "Only Yesterday" with the firm conviction that as a screen actress she would never make a go of it. On the other hand the entire screen world is proclaiming her performance and calling her the biggest discovery since Hepburn.

BUT Margaret Sullavan has always felt this way about herself in pictures. I recall our first meeting last spring. She had come to my office at Universal's New York office at my request, for I felt that she was the most promising young actress on the New York stage and potentially a great screen bet. It was my job to find personalities that would click at the box-office.

I recall her saying, "Listen, Charlie Beahan, why do you want to bother with me? I'll never make the grade in pictures. I'm not pretty enough."

"Nonsense," I told her, "you may not be a glittering Hollywood Christmas tree, but you are something infinitely more worthwhile, a fine actress—and that is what we want."

Margaret reached for a cigarette and spoke in that thrilling, husky voice of hers. "Perhaps some day I will be a fine actress if I work hard enough, but my chance will come on the stage, not in the pictures."

"Your chance will come more quickly in pictures if you get the right break—the right part."

"How can I count on that?" she asked. "You know I wouldn't sign any of those fool long-term contracts where a studio can put you in anything that comes along."

I tried to explain to her that this was impossible, that, on occasions when a studio had (Continued on page 103)

MODERN SCREEN'S GALLERY OF HONOR

We honor Margaret Sullavan for her astounding performance in "Only Yesterday."

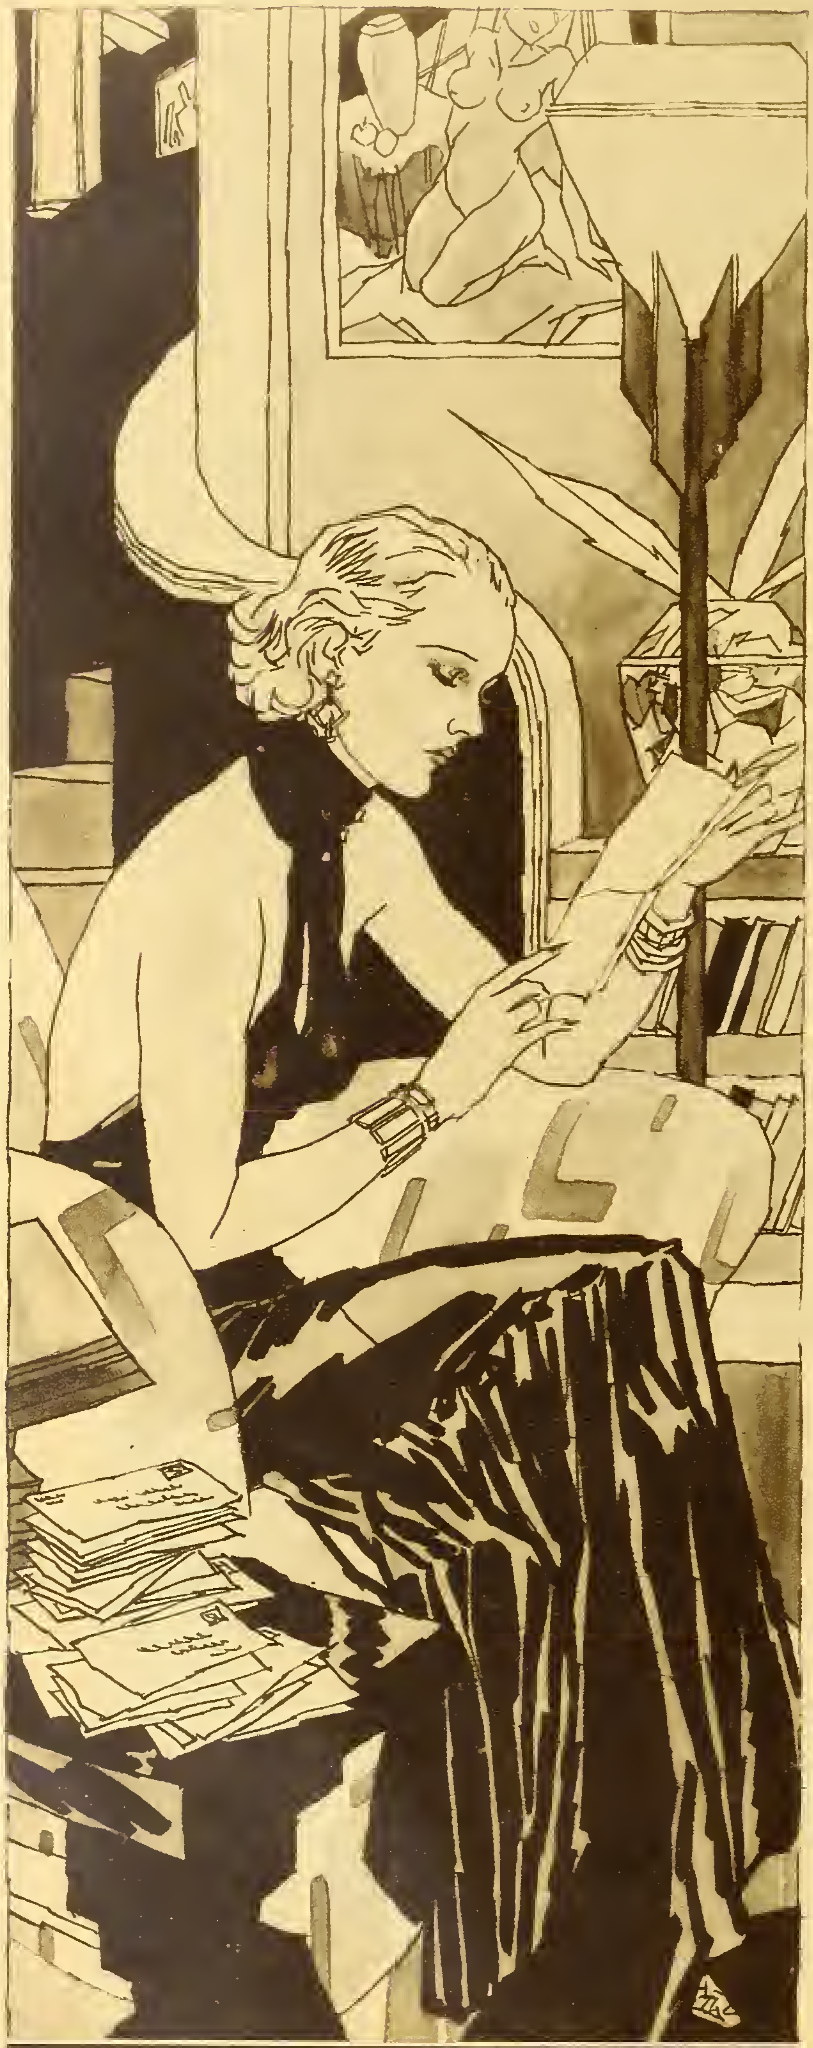
Elmer Fryer

We honor Paul Muni for his customary dynamic work in "The World Changes."

Otto Dyar

We honor Loretta Young and Spencer Tracy for their work in "A Man's Castle."

WITH HEARTBREAK



MISS HOLLYWOOD READS HER MORNING MAIL

By ADELE WHITELY FLETCHER

Illustrated by JACK WELCH

SOME of the stars receive as many as ten thousand letters a month. Most of these, of course, are nothing more than requests for photographs. Hundreds upon hundreds are begging letters. . . .

"Will you send me your old clothes?"

"Will you buy me a wooden leg?"

"Will you help me get into pictures?"

"Will you pay for an advertisement in the newspaper to help me find my lost dog?"

"Will you send me money so I can get a divorce?"

"Will you buy my paisley shawl that belonged to my grandmother?"

There is the very much-to-the-point letter Roland Young received:

"Dear Roland:

"I think you are swell in pictures.

"Please send me $317.50 at once. My wife and I live with her parents and it isn't very comfortable. The radio needs repairing and something must be done to the car.

"Respectively,

————"

However, other letters are to be found in those huge, bulging mailbags which have heartaches between the lines. Letters that wouldn't be sent anyone in the world but the stars. Letters as intimate and sacred as those things pious Catholics whisper through the grilles of confessionals. Sometimes a letter will tell more than you feel the correspondent meant it to. While another will be written with that utter lack of restraint that marks the human being who is desperate.

MAUREEN O'SULLIVAN hears regularly from an old couple convinced she is their daughter. It is a touching story you piece together from their letters. They are so lonely. Too late they realize how the restrictions they attempted to impose upon this child of their maturity irked and aggravated her until she reached her breaking-point and ran away. They admit they may have been over-conservative. But she was so dear to them. They always were so afraid she would venture too far, get hurt.

If their daughter could read the letters this couple write Maureen, firmly believing her to be their child, I think she would go back home.

They ask nothing, this old couple. But they send little presents. A jar of home-made apple jelly. "You always

BETWEEN THE LINES

. . . To look into the stars' mailbags is to look into human hearts. Hearts young and old. Lonely and hungry. Frantic and afraid. Desperation inspires the letters and sublime faith anticipates response used to like apple best of all," they write.

Again and again both Maureen and her secretary have written this couple that they are mistaken in her identity, that her mother and father are in Ireland. But always their answer is the same. She need not be afraid, they tell her, they never will say or do anything that will interfere with her career. As one letter put it:

> "Both papa and I know how happy you must be playing in movies. When you used to say you'd be a rich actress one day we thought it was only talk."

Then, squeezed in at the bottom of the page, there was a postscript:

> "Don't forget Aunt Mary's birthday."

There are thousands of letters from young girls. They ask how to hold the love of boy-friends more loved than loving. They ask for dresses in which to graduate. And dresses in which to be married.

"Dear Miss Francis," a girl seventeen, writes to Kay, "Long ago I saw your picture in my friend's movie magazine. You are very beautiful. You are my favorite movie star.

"If you have any old dresses or just anything will you please, please send them to me. I don't mean anything that would be of any use to you. I mean old things. I could fix them. Then I could be a little like other girls.

"When we had a who's who contest in school I was elected the best sport and most popular. But now I can't go to school anymore. I have to stay home and help with the farm work. My father can't afford to pay for outside help. Anyhow I couldn't go anywhere. I have no clothes and no money. If you have ever been left out by the crowd you know how it is.

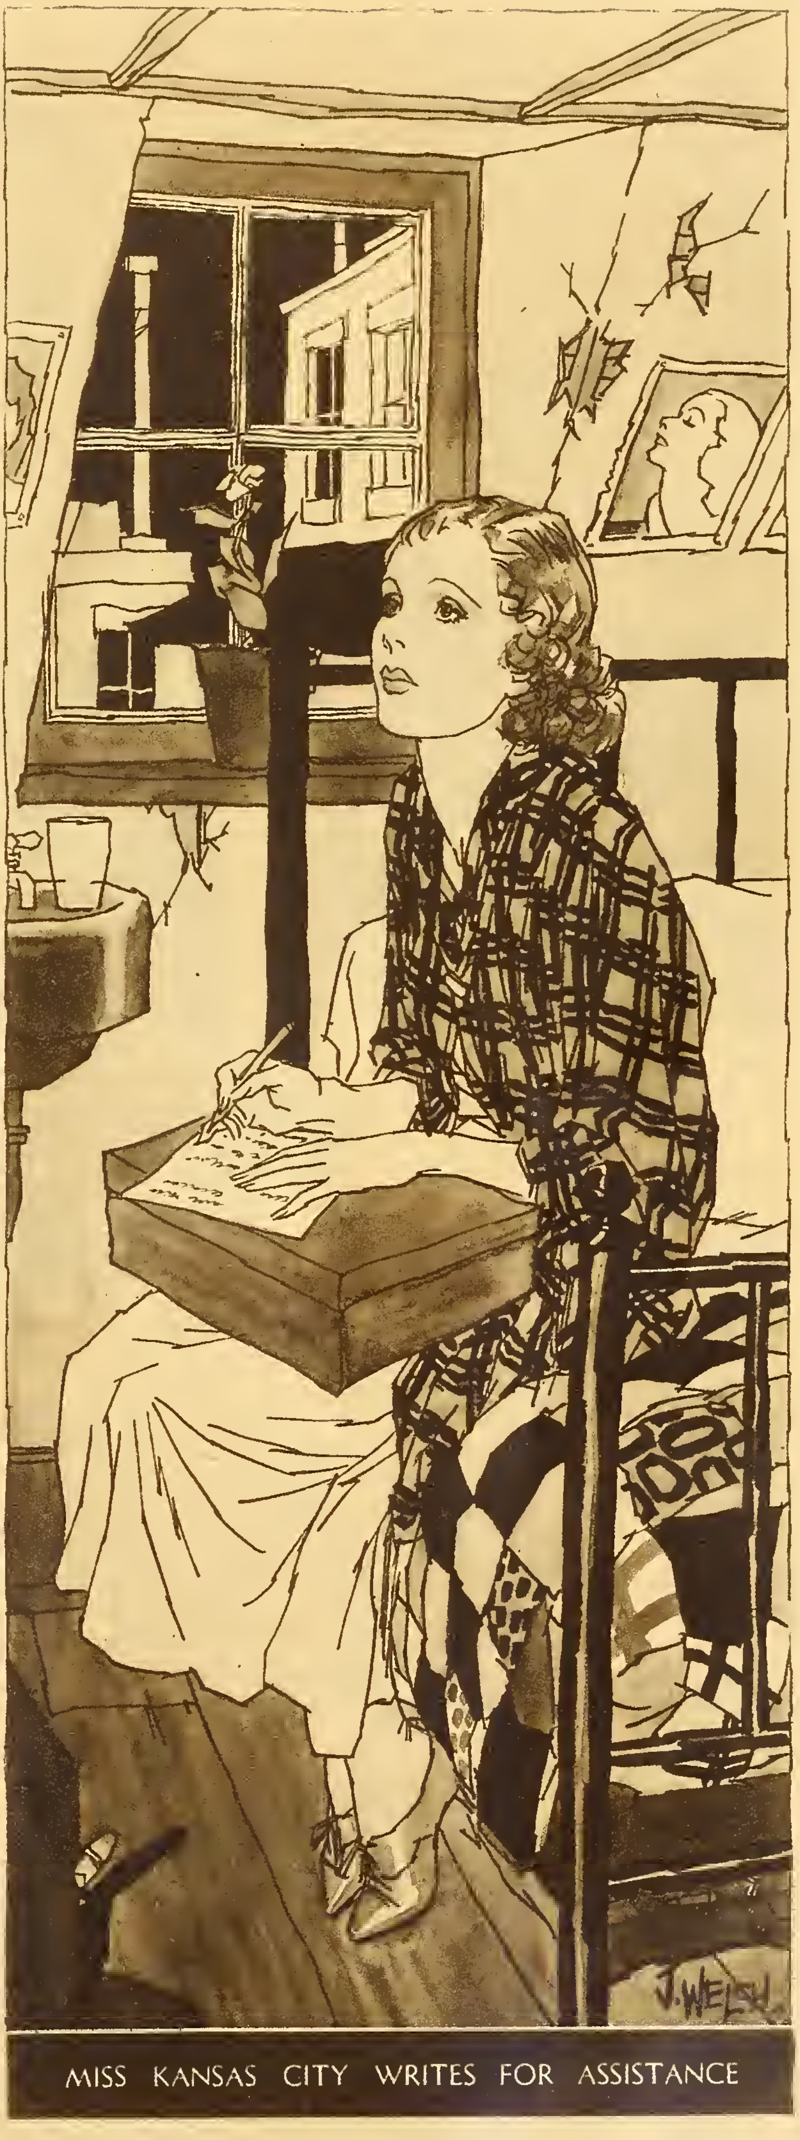
"You are the only one that can help me and if you can't I will be broken-hearted. Please send me something. You will be rewarded some day. Please. Please. I love you.

————"

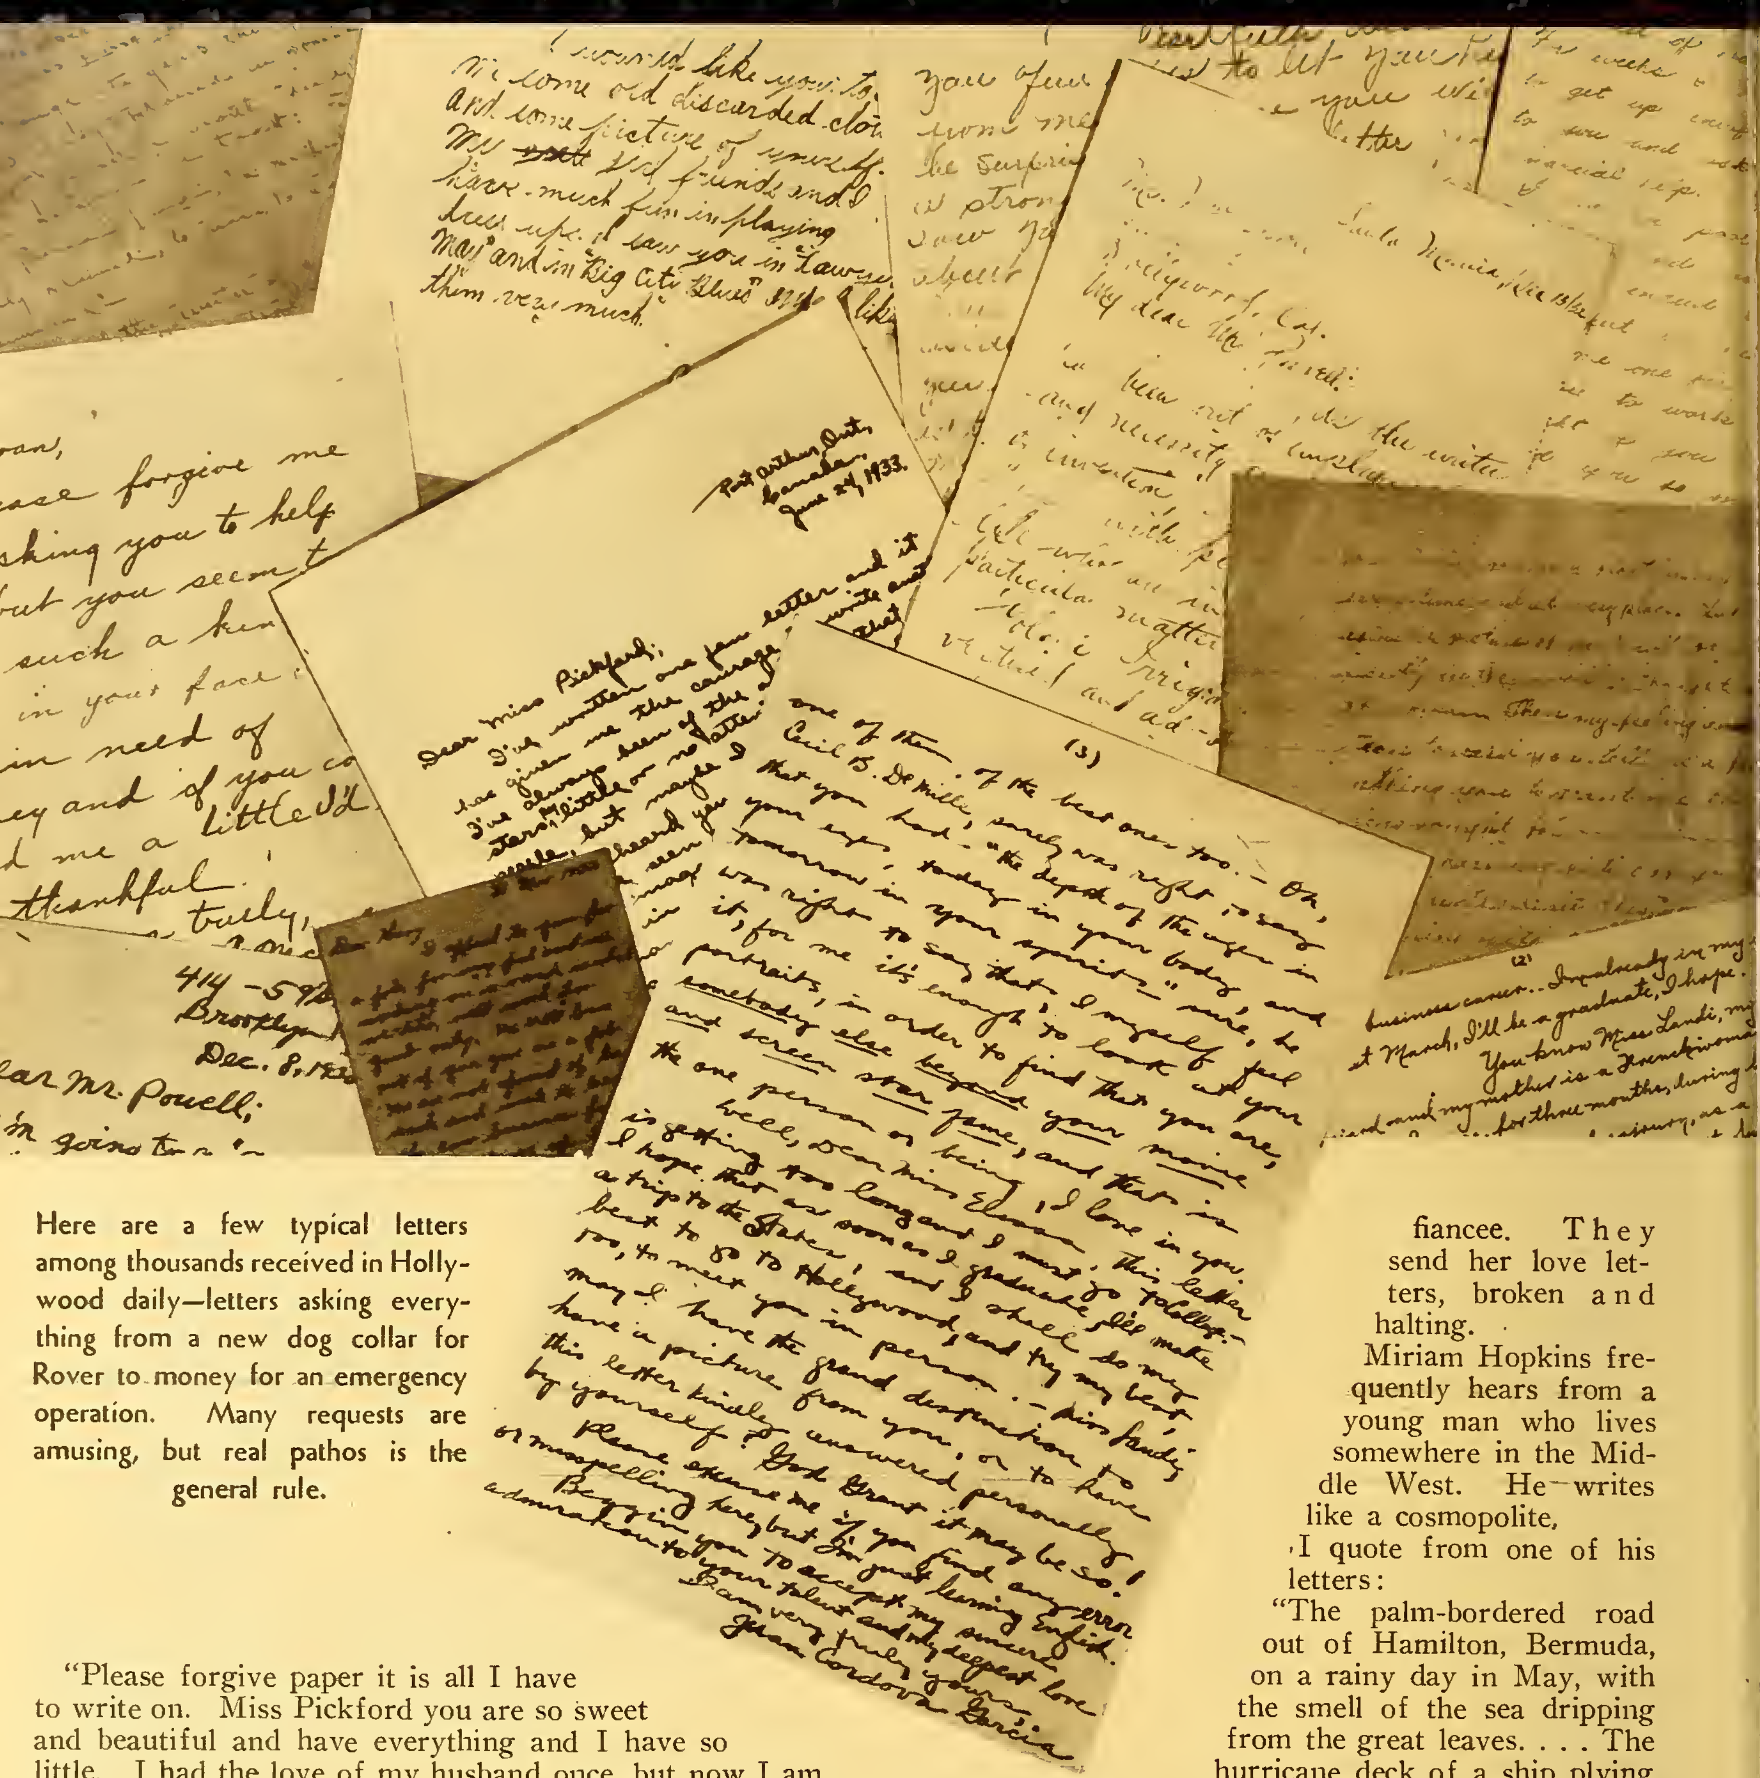
SINCE the depression letters like this have tripled. Reading them, you realize the greatest thing these last few years have cost any individual is their youth. And youth is the quality above all others that people strive to preserve.

Apropos of this is a letter, pencilled, on a page torn from a copy-book, which came to Mary Pickford.

"Dear American Sweetheart:



MISS KANSAS CITY WRITES FOR ASSISTANCE



I would like you to
... some old discarded clo...
And some picture of yourself.
My ~~...~~ girl friends and I have much fun in playing dress up. I saw you in "Lawyer Man" and in "Big City Blues" and like them very much.

...man,
...ase forgive me
...sking you to help
...but you seem t...
such a kin...
in your face
...in need of
...ey and if you co...
...d me a little I'd ...
...thankful.
... truly,

414 - 5th ...
Brooklyn ...
Dec. 8, 193...
...ar Mr. Powell;
...m going to ...

Port Arthur, Ont.
Canada.
June 24, 1933.

Dear Miss Pickford;
I've written one fan letter and it has given me the courage ... write and
I've always been of the ...
Stars, little or no atten... people, but maybe I ...

(3)
one of them. Of the best ones too. — Oh,
Cecil B. DeMille, surely was right in saying that you had — "the depth of the ages in your eyes, today in your body, and tomorrow in your spirit —" mine, he was right to say that. I myself feel it, for me it's enough to look at your portraits, in order to find that you are, somebody else beyond your movie and screen star fame, and that in the one person or being, I love in you.
Well, Dear Miss Elissa, this letter is getting too long and I must go to college. —
I hope that as soon as I graduate I'll make a trip to the States, and I shall do my best to go to Hollywood, and try my best too, to meet you in person. — Miss Landi, may I have the grand destinction to have a picture from you, or to have this letter kindly answered personally by yourself? God Grant it may be so!
Please excuse me if you find any error or misspelling here, but I'm just learning English.
Begging you to accept my sincere admiration to your talent and my deepest love
I am very truly yours,
Juan Cordova Garcia

(2)
business career. I'm already in my
...t March, I'll be a graduate, I hope.
You know Miss Landi, my
...ed and my mother is a Frenchwoman
... for three months, during ...

Here are a few typical letters among thousands received in Hollywood daily—letters asking everything from a new dog collar for Rover to money for an emergency operation. Many requests are amusing, but real pathos is the general rule.

"Please forgive paper it is all I have to write on. Miss Pickford you are so sweet and beautiful and have everything and I have so little. I had the love of my husband once, but now I am getting along in years and my face is sagging. I used to have beautiful eyes but I have cried them dull. I still love my husband even though I know he is awful chaser after other woman. Oh Miss Pickford, if I could only win him back I would be so happy. What do the stars do to keep beautiful? Where do they get their faces lifted? Would you help me to do it? Your face looks so kind and I believe you will understand how I feel. Oh Miss Pickford if you would only help me.

Your Friend,
________"

Where else can this woman turn for help? Her friends, doubtless, are as prematurely aged by perpetual worry and hard work and not enough recreation as she is herself. But the movie stars. . . . Are they not possessed of beauty secrets greater even than those practised by the ancient Egyptians and fortunes like the biblical loaves and fishes, equal to any demands?

Mary also receives many letters from shell-shocked war veterans. But these letters never are retained. They are too tragic. Several of these men believe Mary to be their fiancee. They send her love letters, broken and halting.

Miriam Hopkins frequently hears from a young man who lives somewhere in the Middle West. He writes like a cosmopolite,

I quote from one of his letters:

"The palm-bordered road out of Hamilton, Bermuda, on a rainy day in May, with the smell of the sea dripping from the great leaves. . . . The hurricane deck of a ship plying noiselessly thru the blue of a Caribbean night with the intermittent click of the poker chips in the smoking-room and the orchestra below playing a waltz."

And then, further on:

"Eugene O'Neill tries on the whiskers of Strindberg and the results are singularly unfortunate."

Miriam was intrigued. Curious, too, as to why a young man with such a colorful life should write to a stranger. Surely he would have plenty of gay friends of his own.

ONE evening Miriam and a friend, visiting her, decided it would be a lark to call this young cosmopolite on the telephone. They put in a long distance call, sure that in his comparatively small community his name alone would identify him. They were wrong however. The operator reported she could not locate him. Whereupon Miriam became more curious than ever. Not long after this when a man she knew was to be in this correspondent's town she asked that he look him up. It was only with difficulty and through (Continued on page 88)

REPENTING AT LEISURE

Revealing Judith Allen's marriage, the reason for its concealment—and the reasons for her repentance

By MARTHA KERR

(Above) Gus Sonnenberg, former champion wrestler, was a most ingratiating chap. But so unstable! Always getting into financial scrapes and motor accidents. Judith Allen loved him dearly, but she knew she must escape for both their sakes. (Right) Her ballyhooed "romance" with Gary Cooper caused no end of trouble.

YOU know the old adage, "Marry in haste and repent at leisure"? That's what Judith Allen has been doing—the Cecil B. DeMille discovery whose work in "This Day and Age," "Too Much Harmony," "Hell and High Water" and "The Thundering Herd" you remember. She's been repenting at leisure for quite a long time.

Like everyone who has been hurt by an unsuccessful marriage she swears she won't try it again for a long, long time. For the two years that she was married to Gus Sonnenberg left an indelible mark upon Judith's heart. They were the worst two years of her life.

She doesn't like to talk about them. She isn't the sort of girl who babbles her troubles to everybody. Young as she is, there is about her a New England reserve that makes it difficult for her to talk about the things that are close to her heart. But she has wanted to clear up some wrong impressions—principally, that she squandered her husband's money and then, when she signed a movie contract, threw him over.

As a matter of fact, she knew two months after they were married that it wouldn't last. She realized that all of the things that made Gus attractive as a sweetheart—his boyish charm, his gayety, his irresponsible good humor—were the things that did not make a good husband. She realized it during the first two months of their marriage—when he told her fantastic lies about everything and then, confronted with the truth, confessed he had fibbed—and thought he could make it all right by giving her an expensive ring or bracelet. She, who wanted the peace of a home, the stability of a good husband and children, found that she dared not have children for fear they might inherit their father's faults. In her own heart she knew that it was over in two months—but she also knew that she could not accept alimony (she has a New England conscience about that) and that she could not leave him until she was able to support herself.

IN order to understand the trouble that came into the home of Judith and Gus, one must understand Gus Sonnenberg.

I'm sure you've known men like him. He is the sort of lad that people like instantly. Judith's mother thought he was a dear lad and heartily approved of the match. His success as a wrestler had not gone to his head. When he walked into a room his charm instantly electrified everyone. But he was totally irresponsible. He could not tell the truth. He was happy only when surrounded by a group of gay, laughing people. And he could not resist the sociability inspired by too many highballs.

Nothing can so completely devastate a woman as life with a man who does not tell the truth. When Gus went out, Judith had no idea when— (Continued on page 92)

(Above) Chester Morris with Cynthia and Brooks Morris. (Center) Wes Ruggles and mama Arline put Charles Wesley in his walker.

Babes in

(Above. right) John Lachlan Brown makes faces at Johnny Mack. (Right) Patricia Hamilton and some of her art work.

(Below) Neil and Patricia Louise Hamilton are having a swell time. She's the little girl he and Mrs. Hamilton adopted.

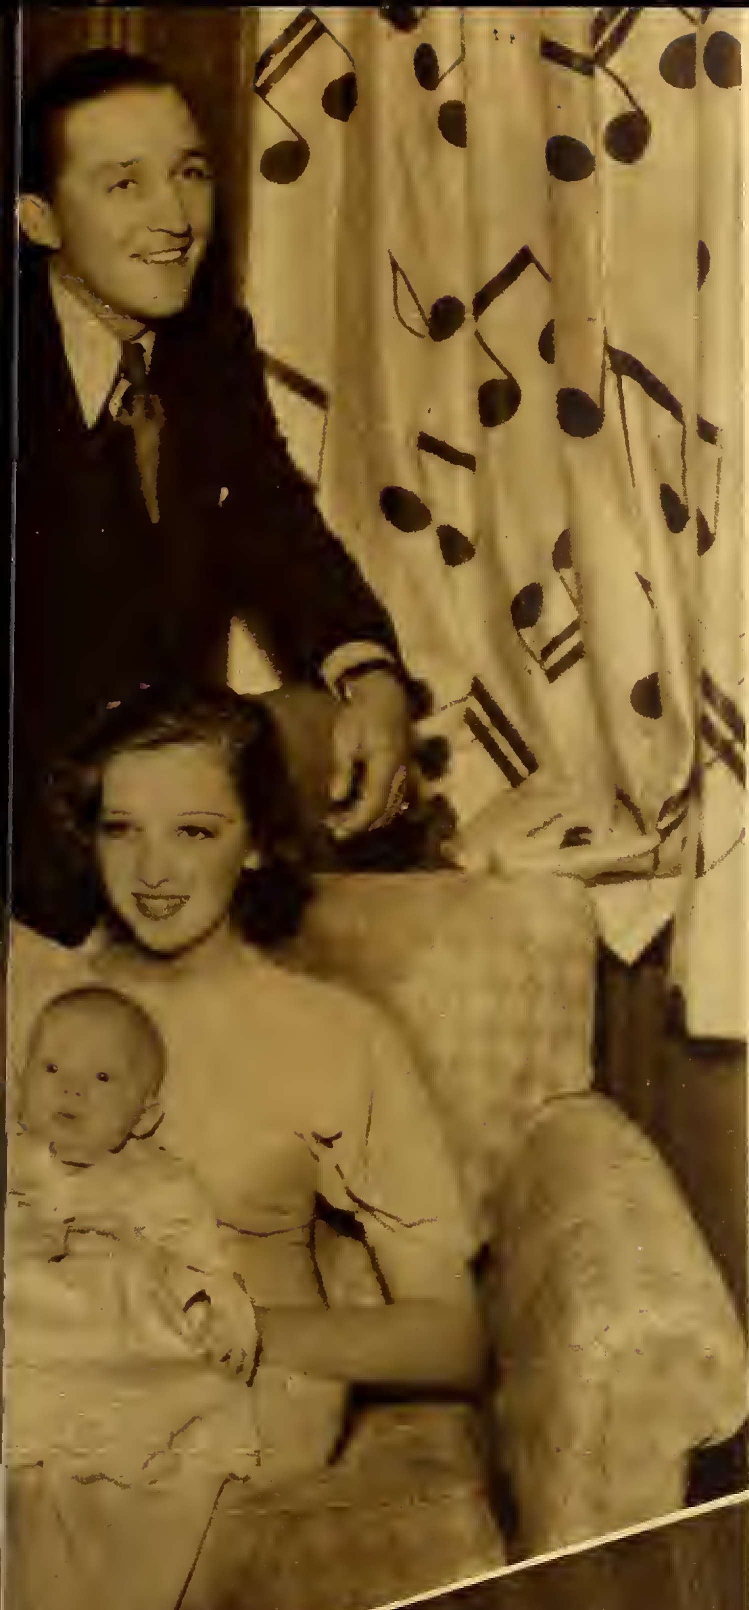
Joyland

(Above, left to right) Leslie Howard Gargan can't make up his mind whether or not to be jealous of small brother William Gargan, Jr. Isn't Jack Bryan Woody a sturdy little chap? His ma, Helen Twelvetrees, is positively popping with pride over him. The lady making cooing noises at Edward G. Robinson, Jr., is Anna Q. Nilsson. Mrs. Lucille Gleason is holding him. (Right) Oopsy-daisy! John Miljan and fourteen-month-old John, Jr. (Below) That's right! Geef daddy a smack! Stu, Stu, Jr., and June Collyer Erwin.

All Photographs by J. B. Scott

DOUBLE CHRISTENING

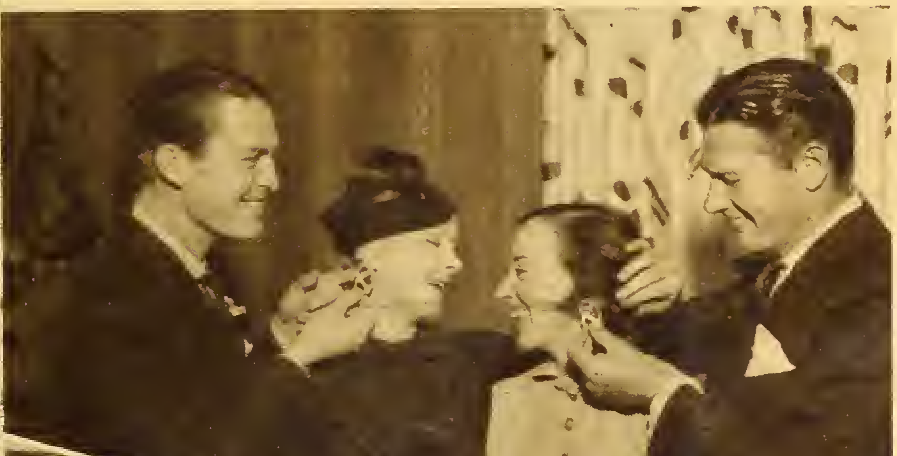
(Left) There they are. Both proud papas, both proud mamas, and both highly interested infants. (Below) Bing being an attentive host to his mother, Mrs. Harry Crosby, and James Cagney. (Bottom, left and right) Entirely too much harmony! Bing, Skeets Gallagher, Ed Sutherland and Ken Murray, singing a very loud lullaby for the two youngsters. Next, Arline Judge Ruggles, who has a very cute baby of her own, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Joe Brown (Sally Eilers to you) and Wesley Ruggles.

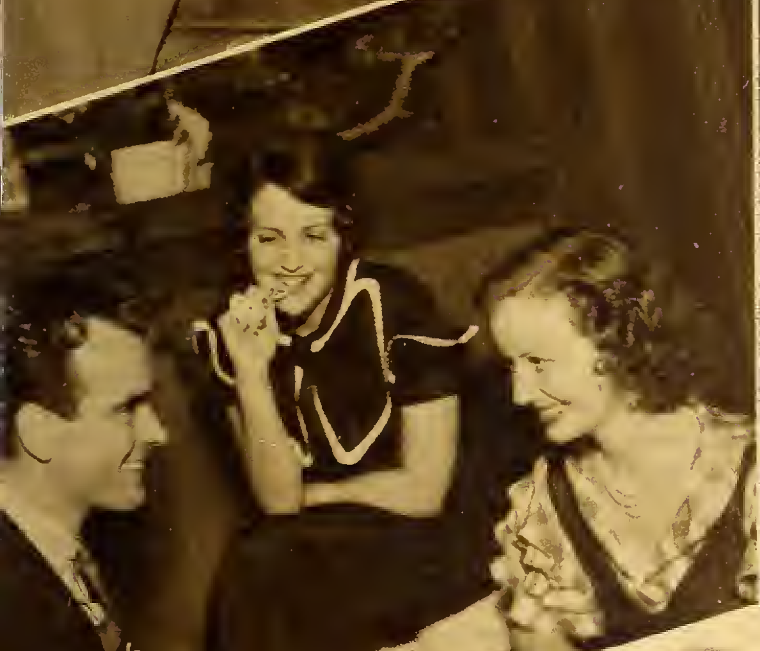


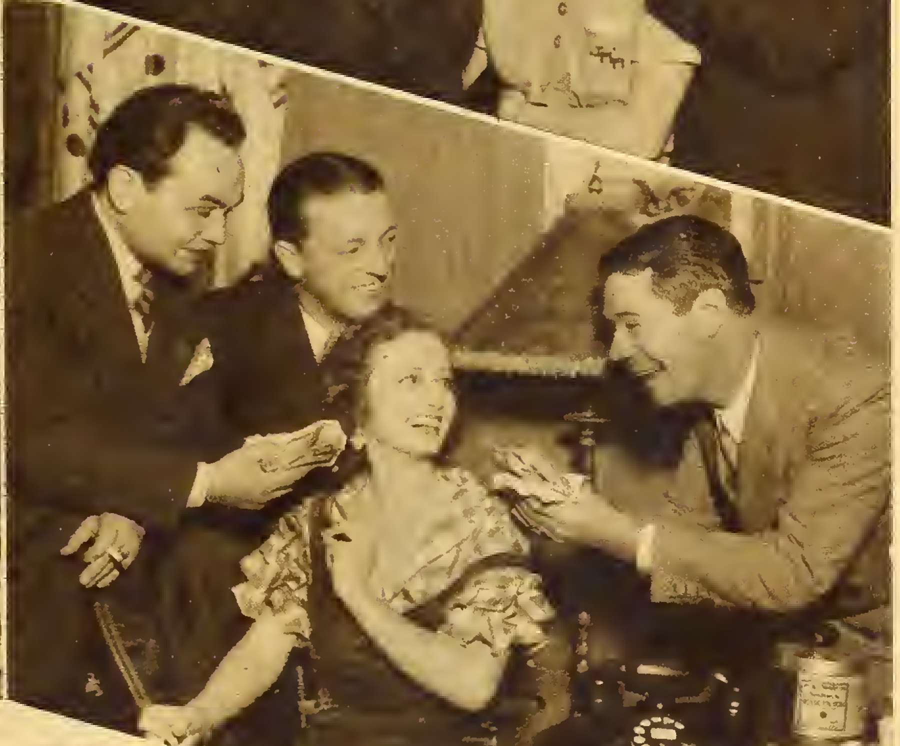
The Richard Arlens and the Bing Crosbys give a joint party in honor of Richard Ralston Arlen and Gary Evans Crosby

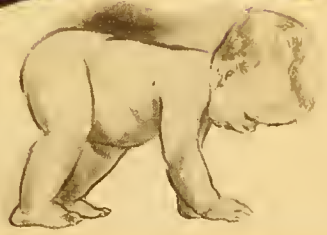
(Below) Chester Morris and Richard Arlen indulge in some foolishness with a couple of pretzels, while their wives, Sue and Jobyna, look amused. (Bottom, left and right) Sue Carol and Nick Stuart, that nice, friendly divorced couple, and Judith Allen. Sue and Ken Murray seem to be as devoted to each other as ever. In the next picture, Judith Allen is being positively smothered in attention and sandwiches by Ed Robinson and Joe E. Brown while Al Hall leans on the back of her chair.

Photographs by J. B. Scott









MARY PICKFORD

I'VE

JOAN CRAWFORD WITH THE AUTHOR

By HOWARD GREER

KAY FRANCIS

THE other day a friend of mine patted me on the shoulder and said, "Well, Greer, old boy, it's a sign that age is creeping upon you when you've lived long enough to write your memoirs."

Here I've been glancing through the autograph book that has reposed in my shop for years and jotting down everything I know about the stars who have inscribed their names, but somehow it didn't occur to me that I was writing memoirs. These aren't memoirs in the real sense of the word, are they?—since I've been skipping all over the book and am as apt as not to tell something that happened ten years ago and then in the next paragraph describe an incident that occurred yesterday.

Now here's a name written years ago, but its owner seems to have the spirit of eternal youth.

Mary Pickford has been one of my most particular and exacting customers. She takes an almost fanatical care in the choosing of models and materials but, once she has chosen, she does not change her mind. She is small in stature and knows that a dress which looks well on a

SYLVIA SIDNEY

RUTH CHATTERTON

MAE MURRAY

DRESSED THEM ALL

Hollywood's most important designer reveals intimate fitting-room secrets of his glamorous picture patrons in his series of delightful and fascinating memoirs girl several inches taller than she will not look well on her unless carried out with proportionate changes.

Miss Pickford is almost maddeningly meticulous in her demands for cutting down the width of bands, belts and ruffles to two-thirds of their measurements on the original models.

I have seen my fitters stand beside her while she took the tape-measure in her own hands and checked up on the width of a belt and then compared it with the lesser width which we had cut for her.

She is extremely particular about clothes for her personal wardrobe—but a hundred times more so about her picture clothes. When we were making the famous tulle bouffant she wore in "Coquete," we had the dress photographed on the headless dummy figure used in the workroom. Back, front and side-views were photographed.

MISS PICKFORD made no attempt to give the dress anything of herself. "Of course it will look better in motion," I said to her one day, "and will have much more life when you are in make-up and in the part."

"I want to test the dress alone," she answered, "not to find its good points, but its bad ones. If it looks halfway decent on one of those dummy figures then naturally it will look infinitely better when it is seen on the human figure."

It was the first and only time that I have ever had clothes tested in a "dead" state so that their worst points could be discovered. But that's the way Mary Pickford works and, although I'm glad all my customers don't do it, I think it is a good idea.

One evening Miss Pickford was in the shop after closing hours. Bolts of material had been brought up from the stock room and unfurled before Miss Pickford in a fitting room. For a long time she compared them. At length she made her choice. The saleswoman and I left the fitting-room and waited in one of the show-rooms while Miss Pickford put on her hat.

We sat for what seemed an hour and at length I said, "Perhaps Miss Pickford has fainted. You had better go see what the trouble is."

The saleswoman came back to me in a moment, her eyes wide with astonishment. "What do you suppose she was doing when I found her?" she gasped. "She was down on her hands and knees busily wrapping the material up on the bolts. When I asked her why in heaven's name she was doing that she replied, 'But I know that it's after hours and I've kept you all late. There's no reason why I shouldn't help you put things in order.' "

I rushed in to try to stop her. There were still several lengths of material on the floor, but we could not get her to leave until she had helped us clean up the room.

It is a curious thing that Mary Pickford takes such pains with her clothes, yet Kay Francis who has the reputation of being one of the best-dressed women in Hollywood is not at all clothes-conscious off the screen.

But here's a secret. Kay is much taller than most people believe so she has to resort to a little trick to make her appear smaller in scenes with leading men. Her screen street dresses are always made an inch shorter at the back and when she walks on the set she literally slouches an inch off her height, but because the back of her skirt is shorter it hangs even with the front when she slouches. It is not a thing I'd recommend to girls in private life, but it works before the camera.

HERE is Sylvia Sidney's signature and when I write of her I feel like lighting a fire on the hearth and turning up my coat collar. On the hottest summer days Sylvia can stand a fur coat. (Continued on page 99) these mad musicals!

1

2

3

4

5

6

1. She helps to speed things up in RKO's "Flying Down to Rio." Her name is Monita Castenada. 2. The principles in RKO's beeyootiful musical extravaganza—Ginger Rogers and Gene Raymond. 3. Fred Astaire, dancer par excellence, is showing Ginger the new Carioca tango, introduced for the first time in "Flying Down to Rio." 4. Alice Stombs takes off for Rio in the new flying shirt, made of a yard of ribbon. 5. And now, "Roman Scandals," which threatens to be plenty mad, what with Eddie Cantor and all. The beautiful Roman lady is Gloria Stuart. 6. The "Slave Market Scene." 7. Grace Poggi dances the Roman Rumba, one of the reasons, probably, for the fall of Roman Empire. 8. Eddie does a Cicero. 9. The Archery Scene, against a very beautiful and authentic background.

7

DAVID'S LOST LOVE

By SONIA LEE

HOLLYWOOD has found in David Manners a challenge to its curiosity. And here is the story which will explain David Manners to Hollywood. It goes back to 1928.

David was returning from abroad and had made the shipboard acquaintance of a delightful English couple. They were on their way to Banff and David decided to go with them. At Banff, they collected supplies for a pack trip to Jasper Park. And a guide called Jim.

On the morning of departure, a fifth member joined the party. She was Jim's daughter, Mary, who frequently went with her father on excursions of this sort.

She intrigued David. Slender, clear-eyed, with a keen mind, she would have graced a drawing-room. She was a revelation to the boy who had known sophisticated women.

His admiration increased when she demonstrated her knowledge of woodcraft. She could handle horses and was adept at making camp.

For hours, David and Mary rode woodland paths together. And there were walks along the moonlit trails when camp was made. The third day, David knew he was in love; gloriously and completely.

He told the girl as they rode into the sunset. That night the air was balmy and no tents were pitched. The bedrolls were placed on balsam boughs in a clearing. And throughout the night they talked, too deliriously happy to even think of sleep.

Their plans were simple. Immediate marriage was out of the question. David had been suffering from recurrent attacks of pneumonia, and his trip abroad was during one of his recuperative periods. He would return to New York, solve the financial problems facing him, and then send for her. They would live happily.

Mary had too much courage to cry when the moment of parting came. They belonged to each other for always. They would wait for each other.

The trip had lasted five days and was destined to modify the pattern of David's life.

On his arrival in New York, he began counting the days before a letter from Mary could reach him. He had written her en route East.

But there was no word from Mary. Each succeeding day held an added note of uneasiness for him. He was sure of her love and no mistake.

Finally, in terror at her silence, he wrote to her father at Banff, begging for news of the girl—for one line assuring him that she was well. The days stretched into weeks. Letters and telegrams remained unanswered.

Then he heard from his English friends. They spoke of inconsequential things, which he skimmed in hope that somewhere would be a line about the girl. There was.

A postscript. And it read: "You will be distressed to hear that old Jim's charming daughter was killed in an auto accident the day she returned to Victoria."

David Manners was standing at a window of his apartment as he read that fatal sentence. The first snow of the year was falling gently. The world was in a shroud.

It was a love too perfect to have a happy ending in marriage.

MODERN SCREEN Miniatures

GAMBLING FOR FREEDOM . . . !

By JACK GRANT

IMAGINE breezing in late for dinner without facing the necessity of offering explanations to the little woman! Fancy spending an evening as you choose without manufacturing excuses about working overtime or sitting up with a sick friend!

Your wife doesn't even have to be in the country, if you follow John Miljan's formula for freedom. Visualize the advertisements! "Reduce your marital woes. No pills—no pain. Dr. Miljan's prescription guaranteed or money refunded."

You know John Miljan as the perpetrator of screen villainies. He is best known in Hollywood as a liberator of married men, an emancipator of henpecked husbands.

It is doubtful if John realized the import of his discovery when the formula was evolved, for it began very casually.

John and Mrs. Miljan had friends in for a quiet evening of bridge. John won and his wife lost. When the game ended, John demanded that Mrs. Miljan pay her gambling debt.

"I must borrow from you," she laughed. "I have no money. You might as well transfer the amount from one pocket into another and we'll call it square."

"Now is that right?" John protested. "If I lose, I pay. Winning, I break even."

"It's your fault for being the family's only wage-earner, John."

"There's no consolation in suffering for a virtue," John said.

So the argument raged. Mrs. Miljan offered her wedding ring for security. She thought of things she might do for her husband in lieu of actual cash. But John was adamant.

As a last resort, Mrs. Miljan suggested, "Suppose I give you a day to do just as you please. You can go fishing or anywhere you desire. Will that satisfy you, Shylock?"

"A day of freedom," John mused. "No explanations. It's a bargain."

Credit a man who knows when opportunity knocks and invites it in!

The Miljans bet upon any number of things, but mostly bridge. When they are alone, they play two-handed contract. If John loses, his wife collects the cash. If John wins, she adds the time in hours and minutes to his score. Deductions are made, as spent, from the time he has coming, but he is never allowed to draw in advance.

The only difference of opinion that has ever arisen came one night when John went to a prize fight with Wallace Beery. He was five hours ahead of the game and was gone nearly six. Mrs. Miljan inquired where he had been. John protested.

"I wasn't asking about the first five hours," she said. "Only the last one. You were fifty-five minutes late."

This incident brought a new rule into effect. Time is clocked for the full period John is away from home.

"What if I want to go to Caliente?"

"You travel on your own time."

Mrs. Miljan has observed the agreement that prohibits her from asking questions concerning her husband's whereabouts when free, for good sportsmanship on the part of the wife is imperative to the success of the Miljan's freedom formula.

WHY HOLLYWOOD SPURNED HER

By NANETTE KUTNER

EVELYN BRENT was all ready to leave Hollywood. She never wanted to return. This is her story.

"They wasted me. The producers seemed to think that because I played a crook, I was to play one forever.

"I suppose I made a mistake, but I couldn't play studio politics. I told people what I thought of them, and you can't do that if you want the right rôles. Most stars who stay on top put on a constant show. I couldn't.

"Eventually, I was out. I started watching the financial upheaval that was shaking Hollywood. I saw stars, who had let success go to their heads, afraid. I was afraid myself. I could still work for independent companies, but there was neither money nor glory in that. Then, I faced myself.

"I thought things over from the beginning. There was my first chance. It came with the rôle of Feathers in 'Underworld.' They planned to make the picture in ten weeks. But politics interfered. The director was told, after he had started, to make it in four. Before the time was up he was ordered to finish it in three days or they would scrap it. I worked for three days and nights without a wink of sleep. But we finished.

"When the picture was previewed, I heard important picture people say it was so bad it should be shelved. It was sent, without a line of advertising, to a theater in Los Angeles. The night after the opening, the papers called it the greatest gangster drama ever produced. Of course, the people who knocked 'Underworld' said they had known how wonderful it was.

"It was then they wanted to star me. I begged off. I knew I'd have a better chance surrounded by all-star casts and good stories. But nobody paid any attention.

"My first starring picture was adapted from a novel by Phillip Gibbs. The man who purchased it had never read the book. The rôle was for a shrinking type like Lillian Gish. I put up a kick, so they had it re-written. Besides the bad story, I was given a cast and director no one had ever heard of. I finally broke my contract with Paramount and went to Radio. Things continued.

"Two years ago I was offered five thousand dollars a week to make a personal appearance tour. I turned it down. What was five thousand then? The price of a car. Now, I know.

"I went into vaudeville to see if I could actually put on an act. We opened in Omaha. I had such stage fright I thought I never could go through with it. That same week the banks closed. We were nearly stranded. At the moment I was worried where my next meal was coming from, I knew I was a trouper.

"I've done away with pride. I know I could always get a stage part at fifty dollars a week.

"Understand I don't blame Hollywood. The people there simply had no vision. In one way, it's a good thing. It's good for that new crop of young people. They won't be elevated to stardom over night. They'll learn Hollywood has changed into a sane place."

And now Miss Brent is back again. At Universal, playing in "Cross Country Cruise." Lots of luck!

MODERN SCREEN Miniatures

HEAD OF THE FAMILY . . . By JACK JAMISON

YOU know who Cora Sue Collins is, although you may not know her by name. Few child actresses have aroused the interest she has provoked in a few months. You saw her in "Smilin' Thru," and there was a flash of her in "Silver Dollar."

I first met Cora Sue on the "Unexpected Father" set, where her work fascinated me. She was reveling in it. "When does my scene come?" she kept asking. When her scene did come the director took her on his knee.

"Now, here's what I want you to do, darling," he said. "You're lying in that bed, asleep. Daddy Slim and Aunt Zasu come in and talk together about you. You lie still as a mouse. Then they come over to the bed and Daddy Slim pats your head. Then he talks some more. And then you open your eyes, sit up, and put your arms around his neck."

When he put her down, Cora Sue was jumping from one foot to the other, so eager was she to try it. Laughing, she dodged her mother and ran to the bed. Slim Summerville and Zasu Pitts went into their "business." Cora Sue went into hers.

"No retake!" called Thornton Freeland. "Perfect the first time."

How does she do it? What is the secret behind this astonishing baby? Mrs. Collins understands it no more than you or I. She can tell you she felt she had a child different from other babies when Cora Sue was three days old. She can tell you that after the same length of time, the baby would turn her head to listen if anybody played the piano. And she can tell you that she has always felt that her daughter would be an actress. But that is all she knows. However, there is a story behind Cora Sue!

The family lived in Clarksburg, West Virginia. Mr. Collins was a salesman for a hosiery company. There is no use in hurting anybody, so let us say merely that their home life was unhappy. Mrs. Collins wanted to take Cora Sue to Hollywood. There was no money. However, maybe the hosiery company, which owed Mr. Collins back salary, would advance the funds for the trip. It was a gamble, but she got $100. On the money, the three went to Hollywood, riding in day coaches.

Their only chance of more money lay in a sample-case which an executive at the mills had handed to the mother with the check. Perhaps she would be able to sell stockings here and there. She sold a few on the train.

They arrived in Hollywood with $5, enough to pay the deposit on a tiny apartment. Cora Sue needed a doctor. There was no money for food. None came from the father in West Virginia. A theater manager in Clarksburg failed to send a letter of introduction to one of the studios. And, now that she was within reach of the studios, Mrs. Collins didn't know how to get Cora Sue an interview.

That is the sort of predicament which ends with a caption in a newspaper: "Mother and babies found dead in apartment. Failure to find work the reason." Luckily, in this

(Continued on page 86)

1

2

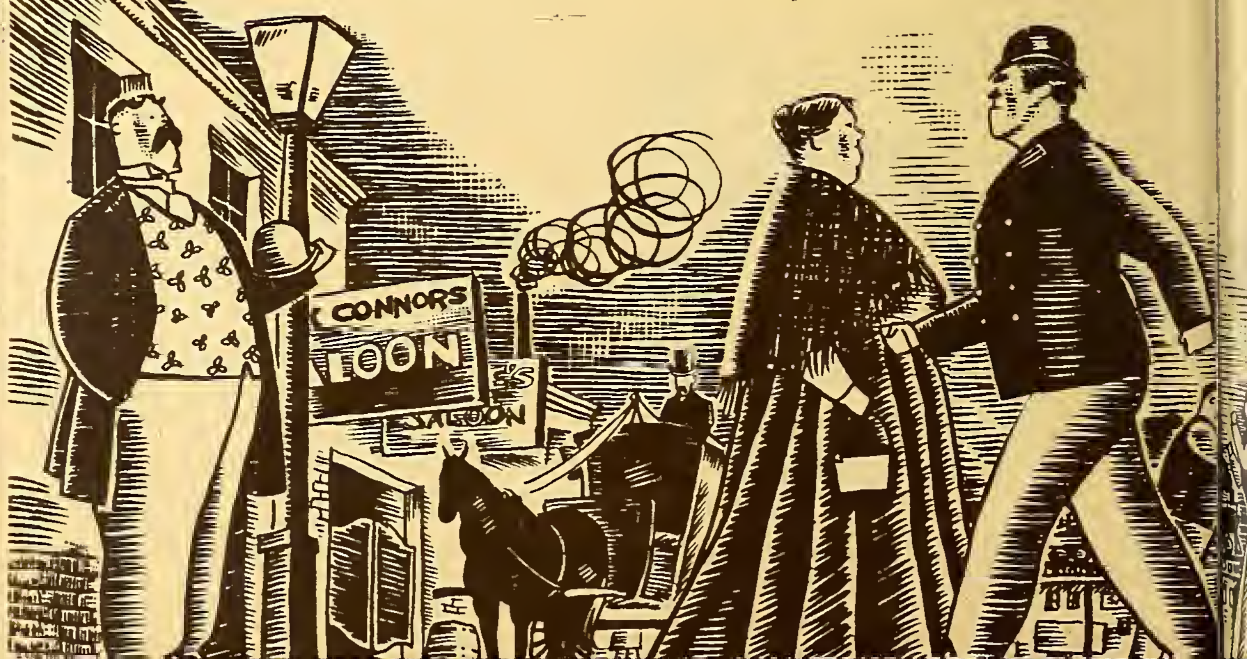
3

4

Decoration by Jack Welch

DRESSED FOR

"Oh, the Bowery, the Bowery"—what d'yuh mean, we don't go there anymore! At least, Hollywood's Vendome was filled to overflowing one recent night with celebrities garbed in authentic roughneck attire. 1. Ed Robinson and wife, as a couple of 1890 slummers. 2. Not Mrs. Darryl Zanuck and Kay Francis—well, I never! 3. Ginger Rogers and Lew Ayres, with moustache slightly cock-eyed. 4. Jean Harlow, George Raft, who amused the customers with some fancy stepping, and Arline Judge. 5. George Bancroft, Jeanette MacDonald and Bob Richie—still Jeanette's fiancé, not her husband. (Or is he?)



6

7

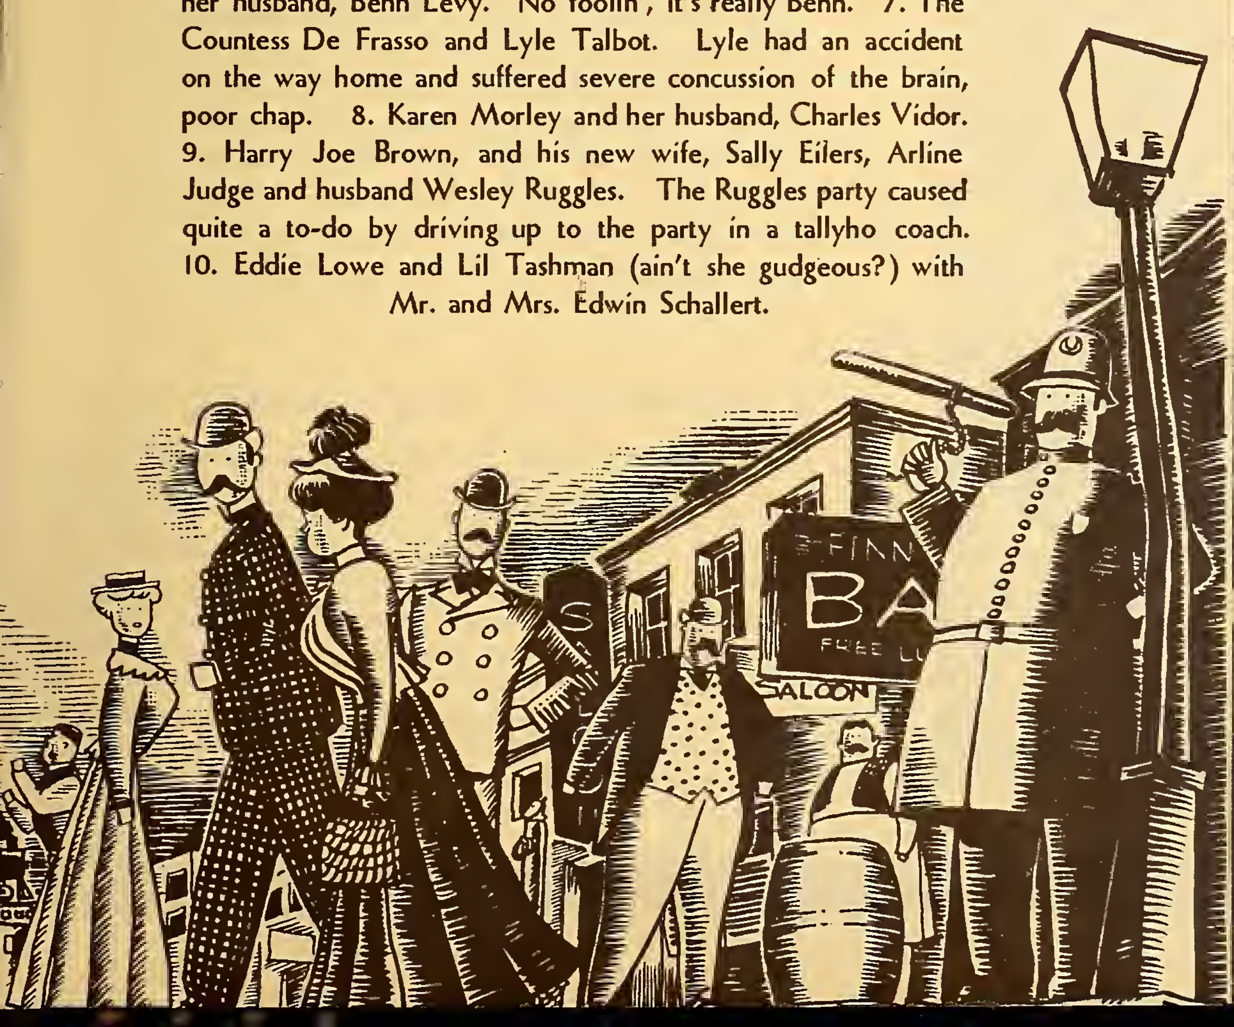
8

All photographs by J. B. Scott, Modern Screen's exclusive cameraman

The BOWERY

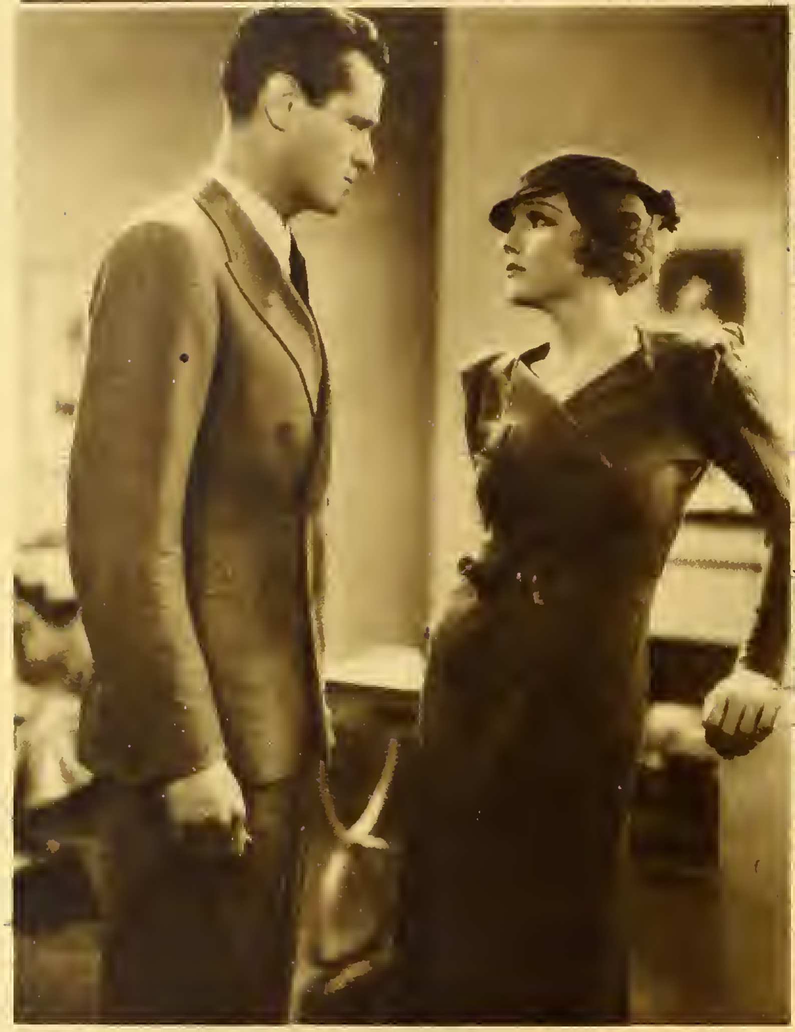
6. They were the hit of the evening. Connie Cummings and her husband, Benn Levy. No foolin', it's really Benn. 7. The Countess De Frasso and Lyle Talbot. Lyle had an accident on the way home and suffered severe concussion of the brain, poor chap. 8. Karen Morley and her husband, Charles Vidor. 9. Harry Joe Brown, and his new wife, Sally Eilers, Arline Judge and husband Wesley Ruggles. The Ruggles party caused quite a to-do by driving up to the party in a tallyho coach. 10. Eddie Lowe and Lil Tashman (ain't she gudgeous?) with Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Schallert.

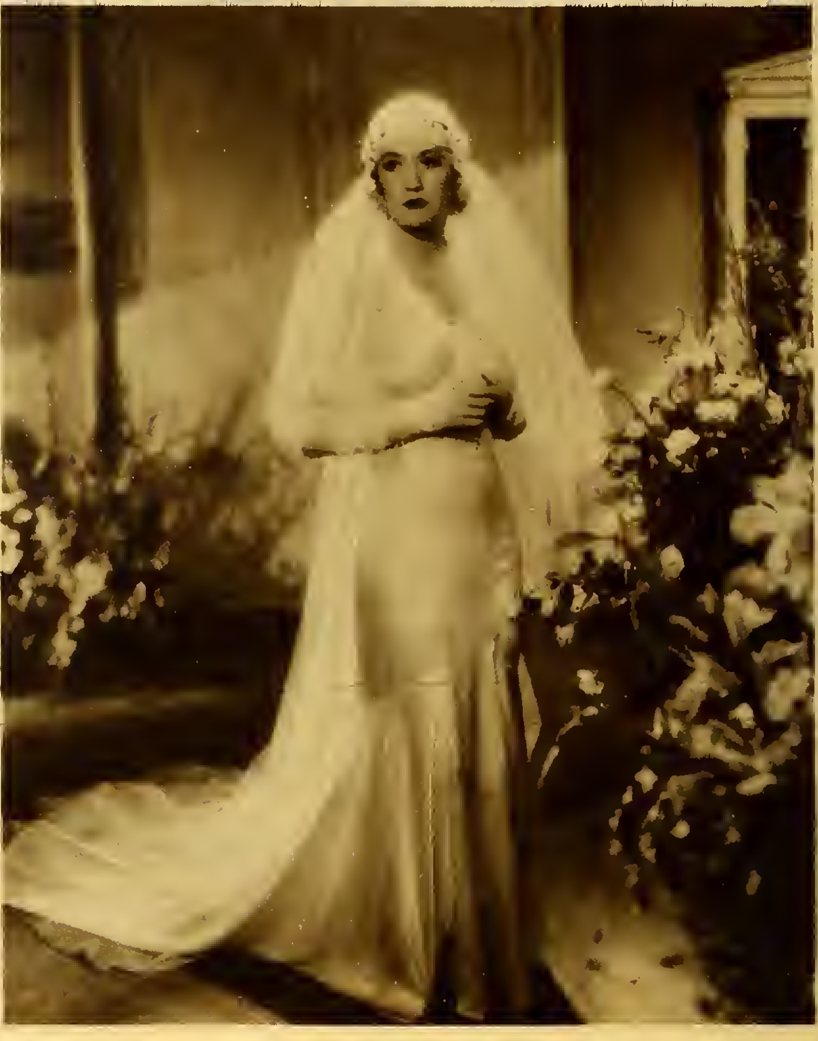
9

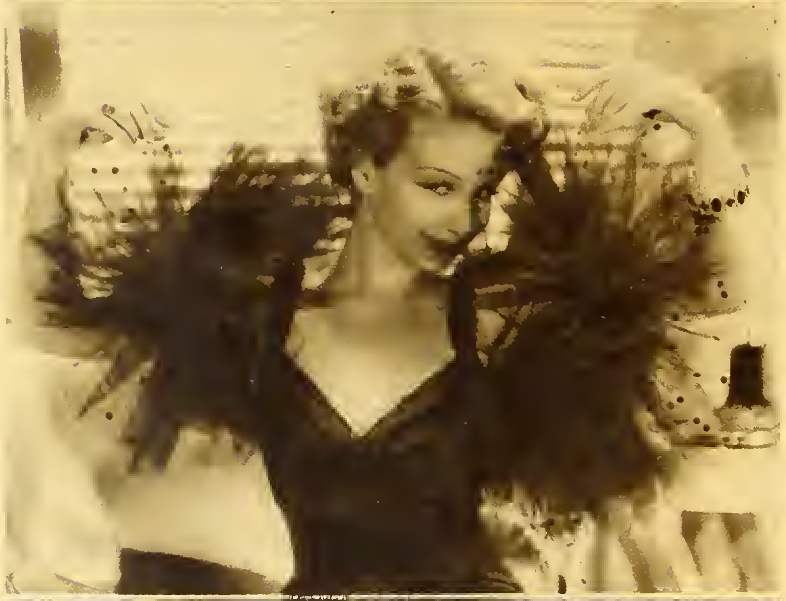


10

YOU CAN HAVE CLOTHES







CINEMA SHOP

The Cinema Shop (an exterior view is shown at the lower left) is a gift to girls who would own dresses exactly like the movie stars. All the dresses on these two pages are on sale at the various Cinema Shops throughout the country. (Left) Sari Maritza's black chiffon is accompanied by a pert circle of sequins which she wears for a wrap. Constance Cummings (above, left) in a woolen daytime frock which she wears in "Broadway Through a Keyhole." And Miriam Hopkins' bridal gown (above) which she wears in "Design for Living." You could, of course, wear it for an evening gown—without the veil.

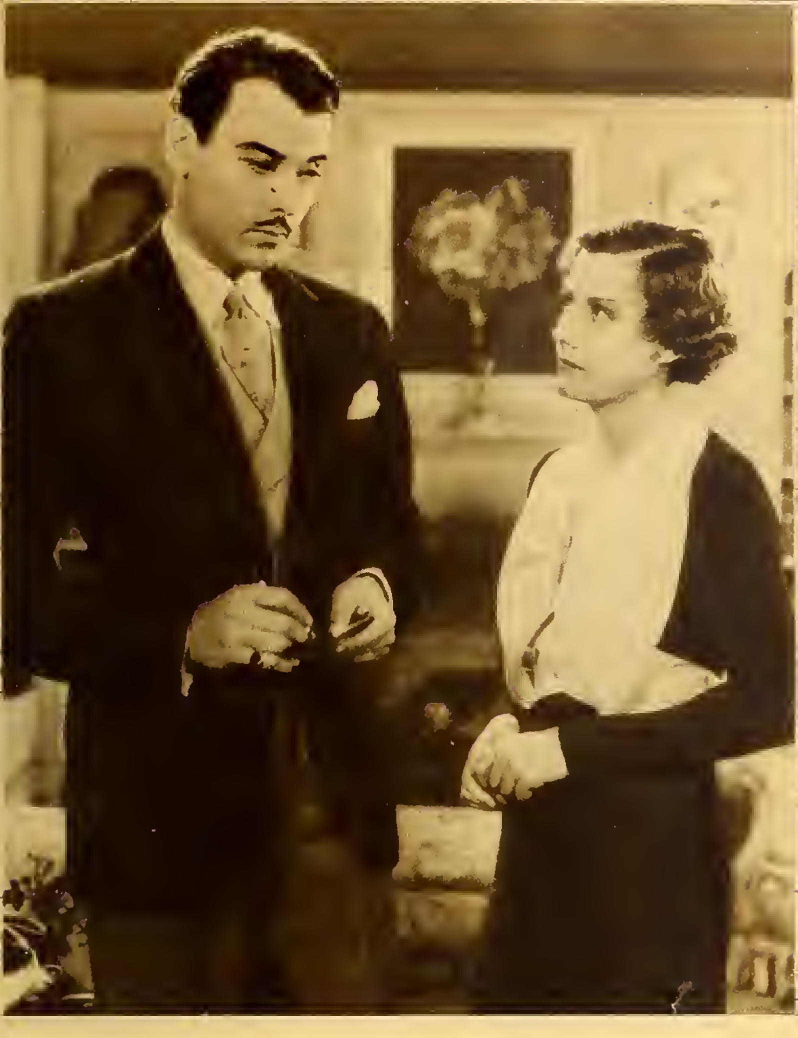
YOU CAN WIN A STAR'S DRESS!

Yes, indeed! You can win one of the four dresses at the top of these two pages. The dress worn by Constance Cummings, the one worn by Miriam Hopkins (which can be used, without the veil, as an evening gown) the one worn by Irene Dunne, or the one worn by Mary Howard.

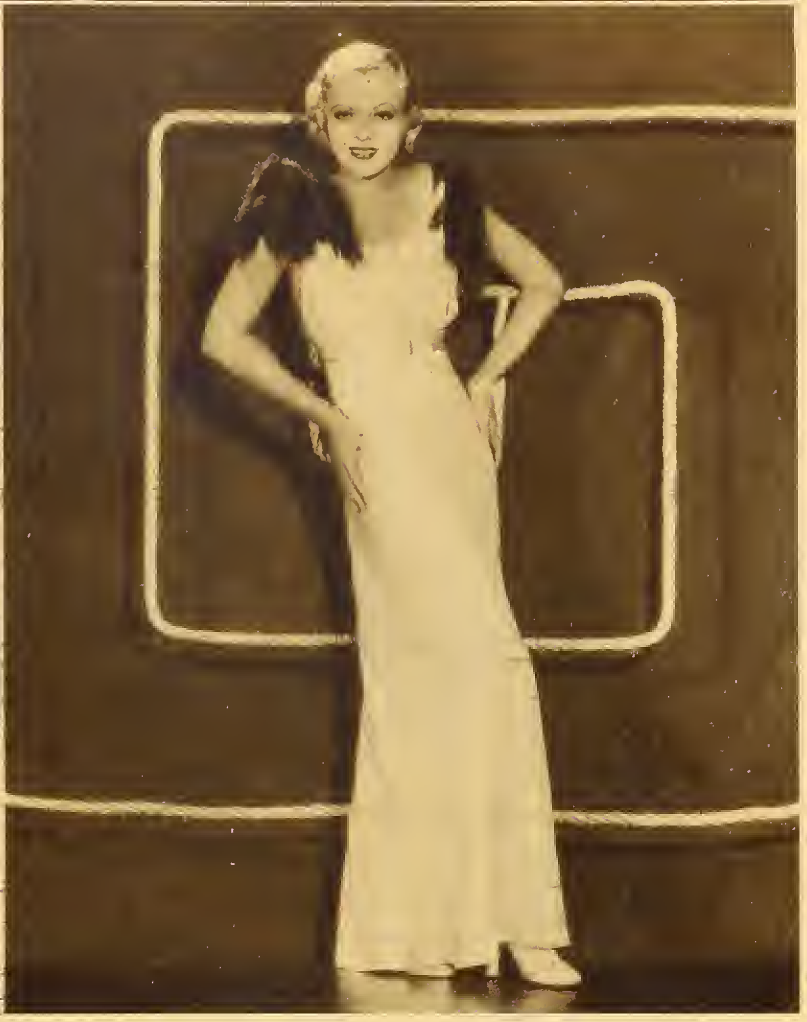
This is what you must do: Write your opinion in fifty words or less of the dress you like best of those four—and why. The four best opinions, with reasons, will win, in each case, the dress best liked by the writer. Send your letters to Margery Wells, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y. With your entry, please give the size dress you wear and what color you prefer.

YES, COPIES OF YOUR FAVORITES' GOWNS CAN BE BOUGHT AT MODEST PRICES

THE STARS WEAR...



You can follow the lead of Irene Dunne as she appears in "Behold, We Live," with a black crêpe dress, very much relieved by a white vest and jabot effect that buttons on over each shoulder (easily removable for washing) and has that chic quality of making a dark dress infinitely becoming. There is a long and narrow clip which is used to fasten the jabot at the pointed neckline. This is the sort of dress you can wear almost all day.



How would you like to have Mary Howard's white crêpe gown from "My Weakness"? It would be quite possible, if you shop at the Cinema Shop. This is the simplest sort of a frock, with perfectly uninterrupted lines, a square neck in front and a low back. Then, just for a dashing relief, tufts of fur are fastened over the shoulders, giving that broad look so much to be desired. A practical feature is that the fur can be removed when it grows tiresome.

By Margery Wells

POLLY SMITH wanted a dress like one Claudette Colbert wore in one of her recent pictures—wanted it till she ached. Polly knew in her heart that she was enough like Claudette to look the type exactly, if only she could lay her hands on that bit of perfect simplicity. But she had a feeling, too, that it couldn't be done. Stars' dresses were always so expensive and everything—top notch designers to create them; clever, trained fingers to make them.

"Dream on," mocked her fresh younger brother, "who do you think you are anyway? Don't forget you're only plain Polly Smith. D'yuh think we're millionaires?"

And then, one day, wandering through one of those big stores, Polly came upon a veritable doll's house marked "Cinema Shop." There were dresses on dummies in the little windows—dresses which looked strangely familiar. Certainly she had seen them somewhere before. She crept through the wide door cautiously, took a closer look around. To Polly, who had had her own insignificance rubbed into her by a scoffing family, it was as though she had stepped alone and unguarded into fairyland. For there before her gaze were ranged in breath-taking rows the very selfsame dresses she had seen some of her favorite stars wearing. Could it (Continued on page 87)

WHERE? HOW? READ ABOUT THE CINEMA SHOPS AND THE WORK THEY'RE DOING

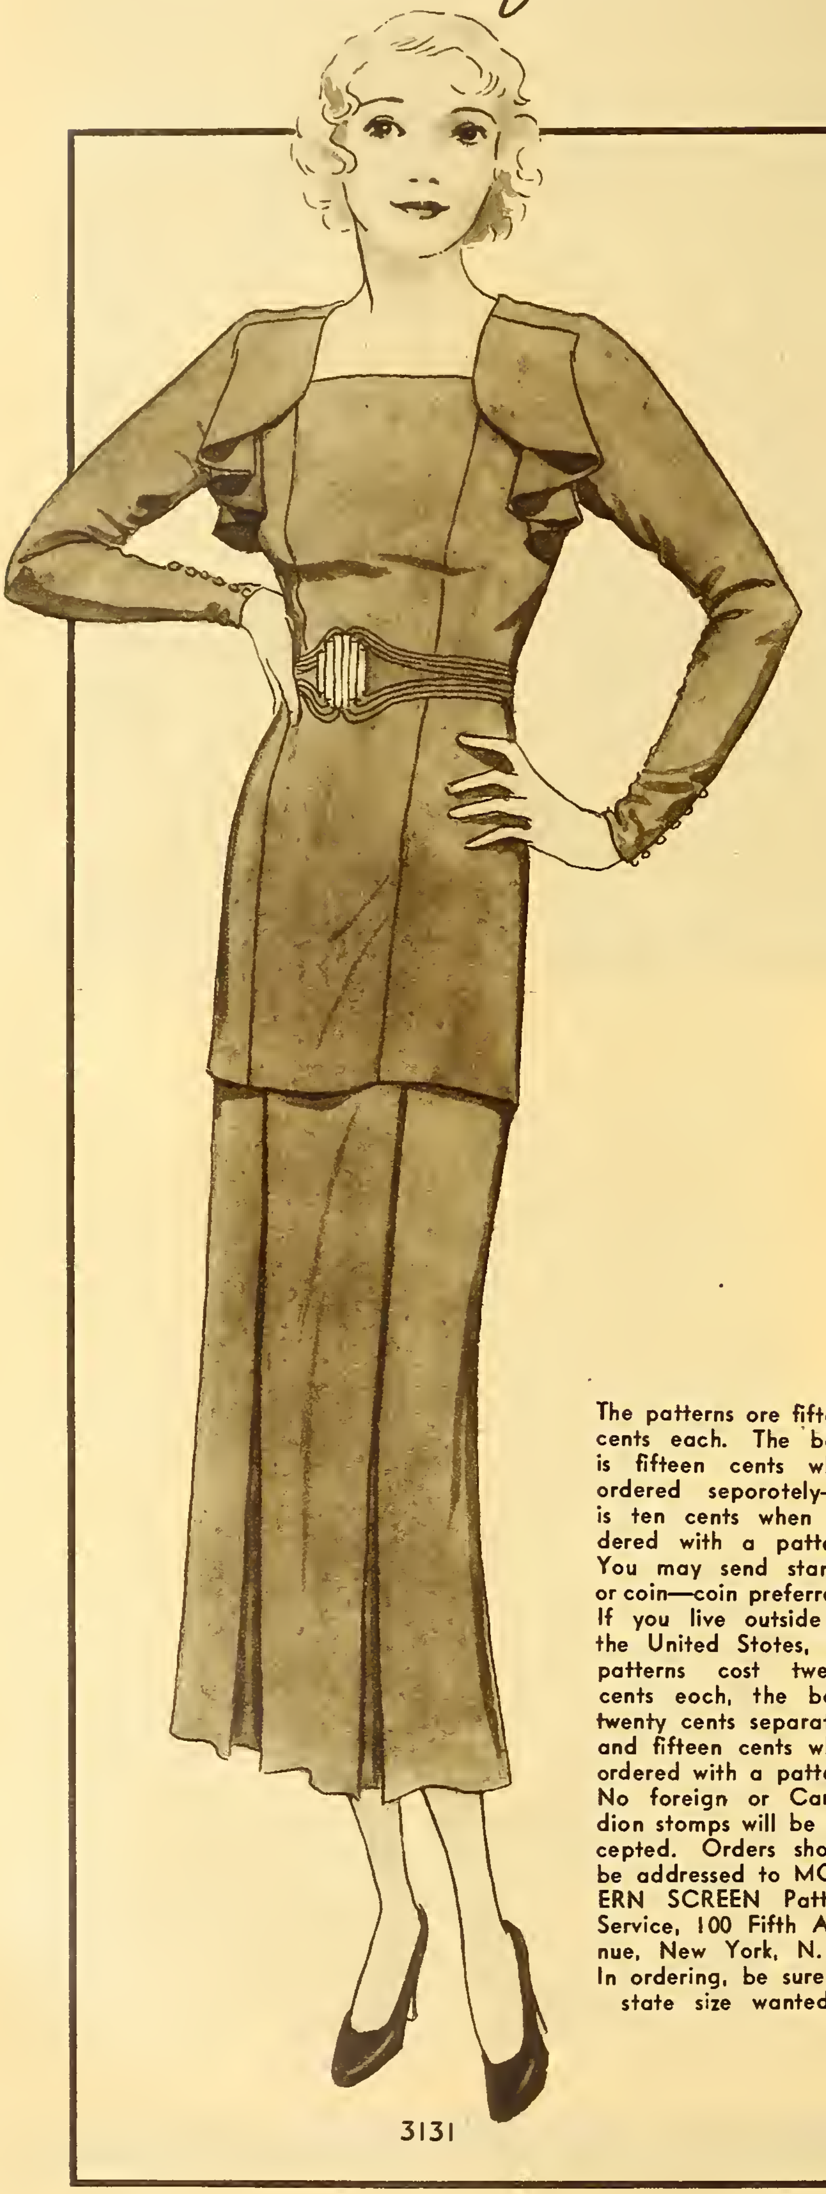
Patterns for Winter Dresses and 3131—Alice White, in Universal's "Kid Gloves," wears this dress of bright red wool embroidered with little gold dots. The sleeve top is novel, the kick-pleated skirt is practical, and the buckle setting off the belt is very modern. Sizes 14 to 20, 36 to 40.

925—A distinctly smart dress of bronzeen green woolen with toning satin used for the drop-shoulder yoke. It has sheath-like lines that will make you look tall. Sizes 14 to 20, 36 to 40.

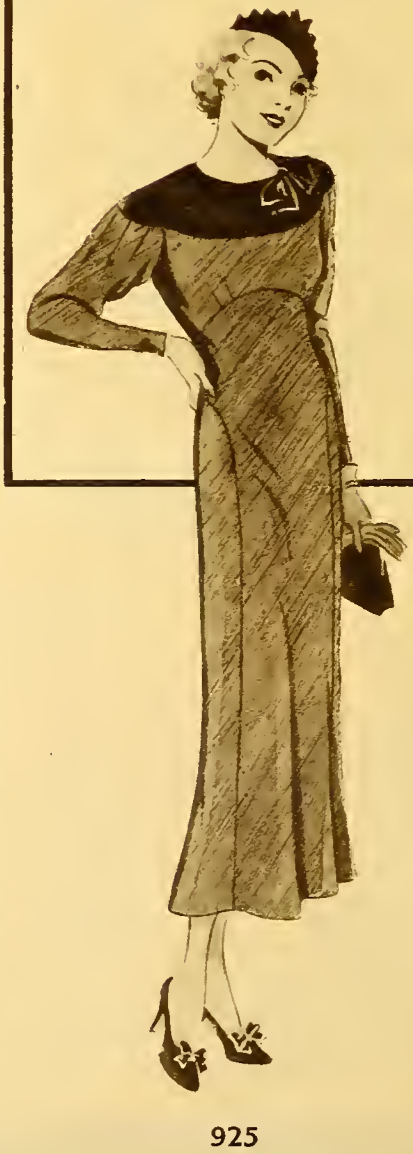
300—Mandarin red crepe silk made this fascinating dress, smart for bridge or tea. It is cut along princess lines. It can have long sleeves, if you prefer. Sizes 14 to 20, 36 to 40.

For back views,
see page

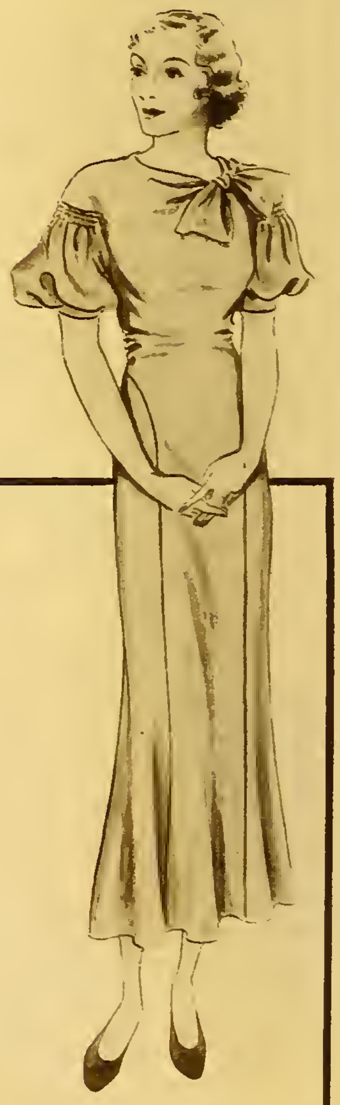


3131

The patterns are fifteen cents each. The book is fifteen cents when ordered separately—it is ten cents when ordered with a pattern. You may send stamps or coin—coin preferred. If you live outside of the United States, the patterns cost twenty cents each, the book twenty cents separately and fifteen cents when ordered with a pattern. No foreign or Canadian stamps will be accepted. Orders should be addressed to MODERN SCREEN Pattern Service, 100 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. In ordering, be sure to state size wanted.

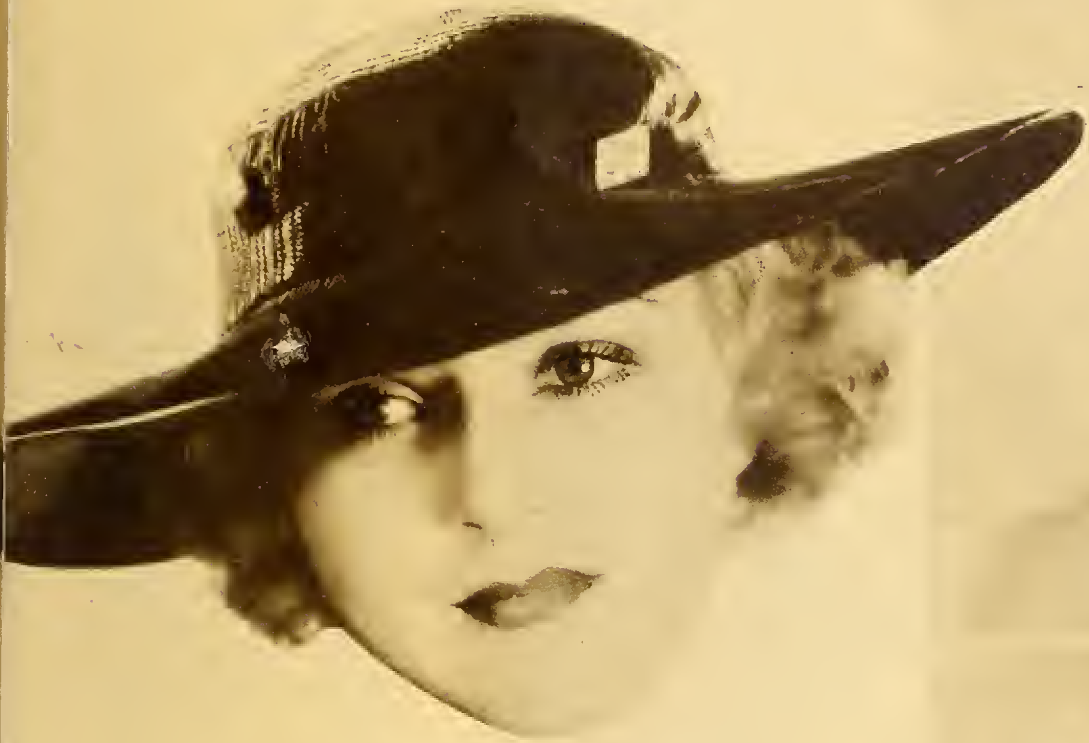


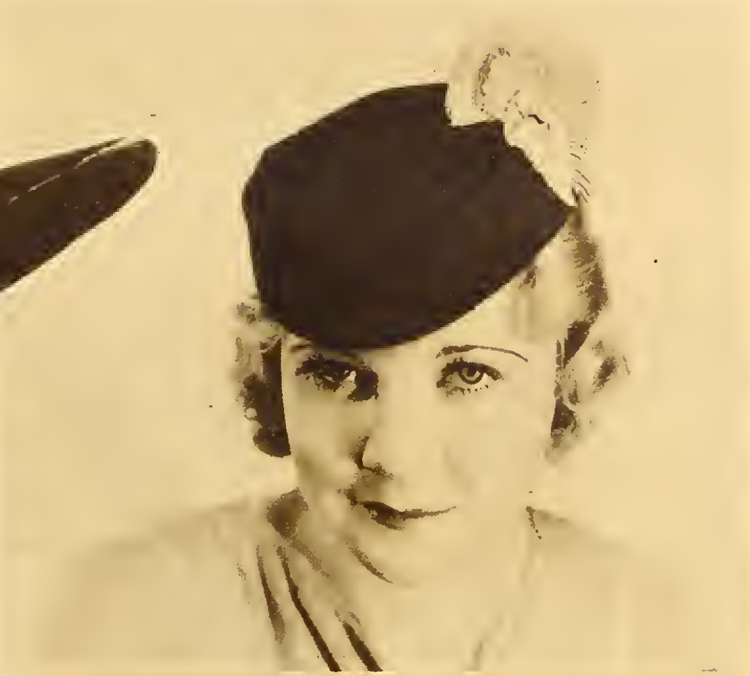
925



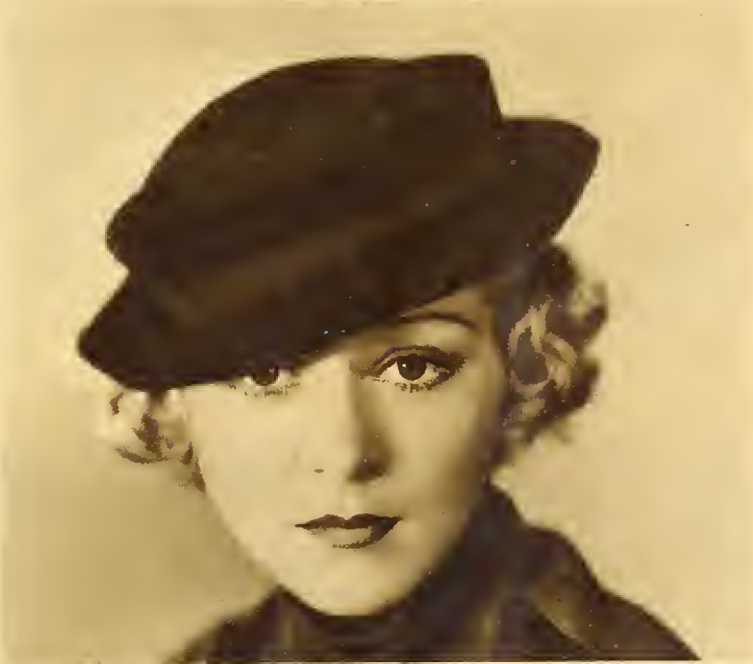
300

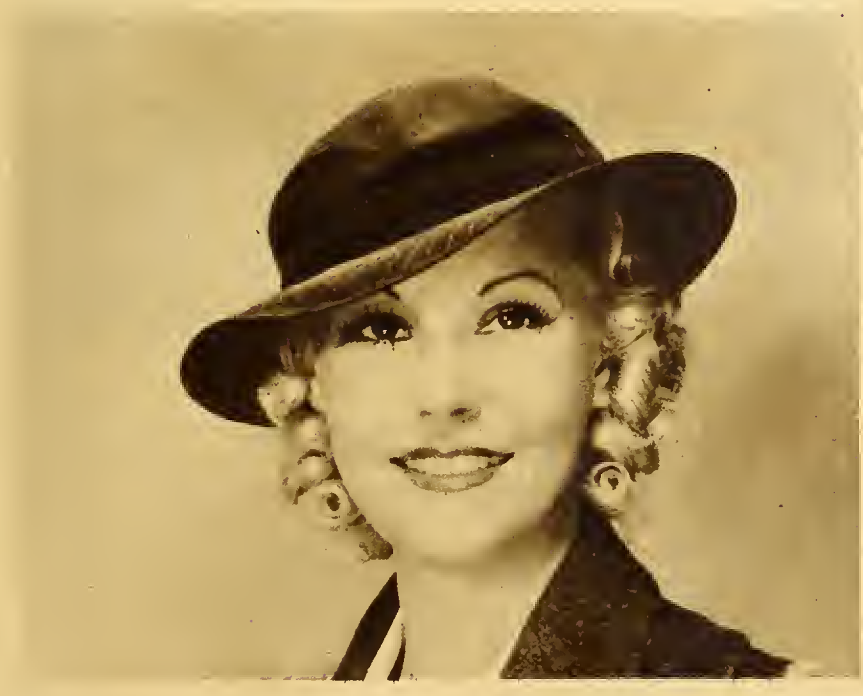
stunning hats to go with them

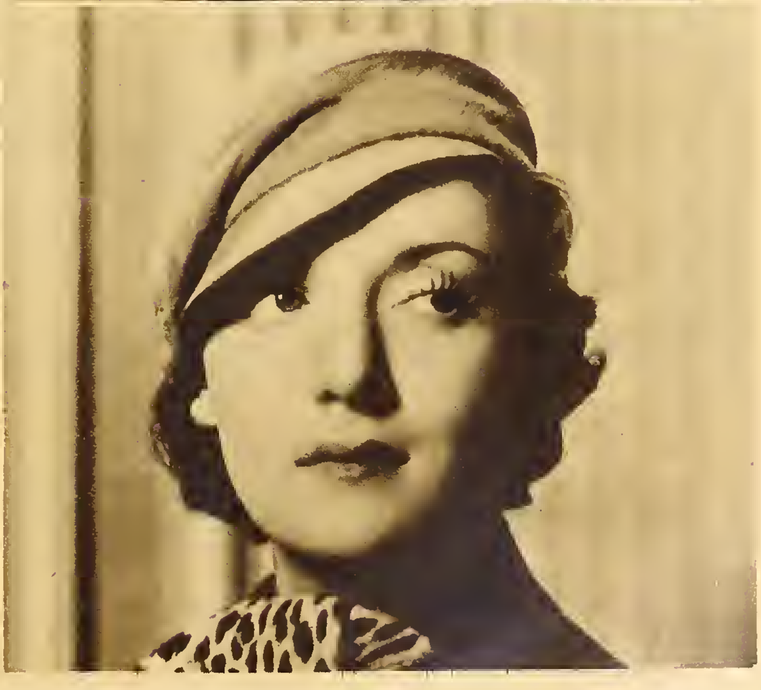




The Merry Widow hat has taken a definite hold on winter fashions. Claire Trevor shows one worn in the best manner (above). Black and white is the color scheme for Una Merkel's dress and hat (upper right). Then there is the black velvet brimmed hat worn by Claire Trevor (right). Dorothy Tree's visored hat is made from the same fabric as her suit (below, right) and is picked up by a scarf of leopard skin. June Knight (below) is strictly tailored in her suit and brimmed felt hat.







Hollywood charm gossip

INTRIGUING NEWS OF FRIPPERIES AND FOLDEROLS STRAIGHT FROM THE HOLLYWOOD FRONT

Something new in shoulder straps. The material of Patricia Ellis' new evening gown—a luscious thing of corded white satin — is braided in very clever fashion to form straps.

MARY CARLYLE has a brand new hair style . . . thanks to the hairdresser out at Columbia studios. She has always had a yen to wear her blonde locks in a thick braid wound about her head, but somehow this style looked a bit too formal for a little gal like Mary. So she took her problem to the studio hairdresser, with the result that she has a coiffeur that leans toward the coronet but yet is very girlish. Instead of the braid, a row of little tight curls are formed across the top of the head. The back of the head from the nape of the neck to the crown is just one mass of ringlets.

● Dorothy Wilson has a rather unusual idea for dressing up her dark hair. In each wave she places a gold bobbie pin. The light pins against her dark hair are really very attractive.

● Speaking of hair, it's interesting to note that several of our well-known blondes are going natural! Helen Twelvetrees' blonde tresses are now a beautiful light golden brown. Very becoming, too. Glenda Farrell will soon follow Helen's example and one or two others are seriously considering the change. A tip from studio cameramen that dark hair photographs more flatteringly is probably the reason for all this ado.

● Mae West has the trickiest, neatest and most practical make-up box on the Paramount lot. The color is old rose (Mae's favorite shade) and it is so built that it combines vanity, beauty box, hamper and cabinet . . . and still retains beauty and simplicity in its lines. The center of the vanity is divided into compartments to hold her toiletries. The hamper is attached to one leg and the cabinet to the other. The mirror, which is hung separately, is equipped with make-up lights.

● We've just discovered something about Clark Gable. He can cook! His specialty is fried oysters—and here's his recipe:

Drain oysters. Take two cups of cracker crumbs finely rolled. Beat two eggs, add two cups milk and season. Press three or four of the oysters together, dip first in egg mixture then in cracker crumbs. Repeat, pressing into balls as you do so. Drop into hot deep fat and fry until golden brown.

Result: a messy kitchen, but a swell dish of oysters!

● George Raft has one of those new "tuck-back" suits that are the last word in men's apparel. The tucks appear on the back of the coat, starting from the shoulder line and disappearing into the narrow belt at the waistline. The tucks, very small in size, give that popular broad effect through the back. The coat fits quite snugly over the hips.

● Can you imagine putting castor oil in your eyes? That's what June Collyer does and she claims it's really the grandest thing in the world for giving the eye that much-sought-after luster. Its cleansing and protecting qualities are also wonderful. One drop in each eye will remove all stray bits of mascara, dirt or dust. June always uses it before working in a picture as it's a great protection against kleig eyes. (Continued on page 90)

To avoid Wrinkles treat your Under Skin

When Dryness bothers treat your Outer Skin which roughens and dries, if unprotected from sun, wind, cold weather, overheated houses, make-up—which tend to dry out its natural moisture.

OUTER SKIN

UNDER SKIN
which shrinks when tiny glands fail, thereby causing the outer skin to form folds and wrinkles. Here you help these glands to work properly.

WHAT causes wrinkles? What causes dryness? Since Eve, women have dreaded these two greatest enemies to skin loveliness . . . charm . . . Romance!

Today we know the answer to these old riddles.

How Wrinkles Come!

There are two layers of skin. Each entirely different. Both smoothly fitting in youth as the skin and flesh of a firm ripening plum.

But the under skin soon loses that glorious firmness . . . Shrinks, as its own beauty oils fail. The Outer Skin falls into folds. Little lines form. Eventually, dreaded wrinkles!

Pond's Cold Cream is made to help you avoid these very troubles. It is rich in oils. And it penetrates all the way to the under skin. Brings it just the oils it needs to keep it firm and full. When you use this lovely satiny cream, your skin feels rejuvenated—to its very depth—instantly! Because it goes so deep, Pond's Cold Cream is the thoroughest cleanser as well as beauty builder.

How to Correct Dryness

But Dryness occurs in the Outer Skin! That thin layer of skin that has to withstand sun, wind, cold, the dry heat of modern houses.

When the moisture cells in this fine skin are dried out by exposure, it becomes harsh, chaps.

Try Pond's Vanishing Cream to correct this trouble. This fragrant, fluffy cream is made especially for the Outer Skin. It contains a very marvelous substance that prevents loss of skin moisture—actually restores it, and smooths away roughnesses in one application!

Pond's Vanishing Cream is famous also as a powder base. It takes your make-up beautifully, and holds it for hours.

OUTER SKIN
WHERE DRYNESS STARTS
UNDER SKIN
WHERE WRINKLES START

Mrs. George Grant Mason, Jr.

Society beauty, cares for her exquisite blonde skin the Pond's way . . . Pond's Cold Cream for her Under Skin, Pond's Vanishing Cream for her Outer Skin.

Now in lovely new jars
POND'S
VANISHING CREAM
Finishing
POND'S
COLD CREAM FOR Cleansing

Pond's Creams in the new oval jars with smart jade-green tops are the SAME marvelous creams . . . in MORE generous quantities . . . and at the SAME blessedly low prices!

The TWO-SKIN TREATMENT society women use as told by

MRS. THOMAS CARNEGIE, JR.

1 "At night I cream face and neck with Pond's Cold Cream, then remove it and the day's dirt with Pond's Tissues. A second cleansing tones my skin deep down.

2 "Next, Pond's Vanishing Cream for my overnight cream—so much better than sticky creams. It takes away roughnesses, dryness . . . and it's so delicious to use!

3 "In the morning, and in the day, Pond's Cold Cream again. Then Vanishing Cream to prepare for make-up and prevent chapping or drying. This 2-cream treatment keeps my skin feeling alive and glowing."

MAIL COUPON AND SEE FOR YOURSELF

POND'S EXTRACT Co., Dept. A, 136 Hudson St., New York City
I enclose 10¢ (to cover postage and packing) for samples of Pond's Two Creams and six shades of Pond's new Face Powder.

Name______________________________

Street______________________________

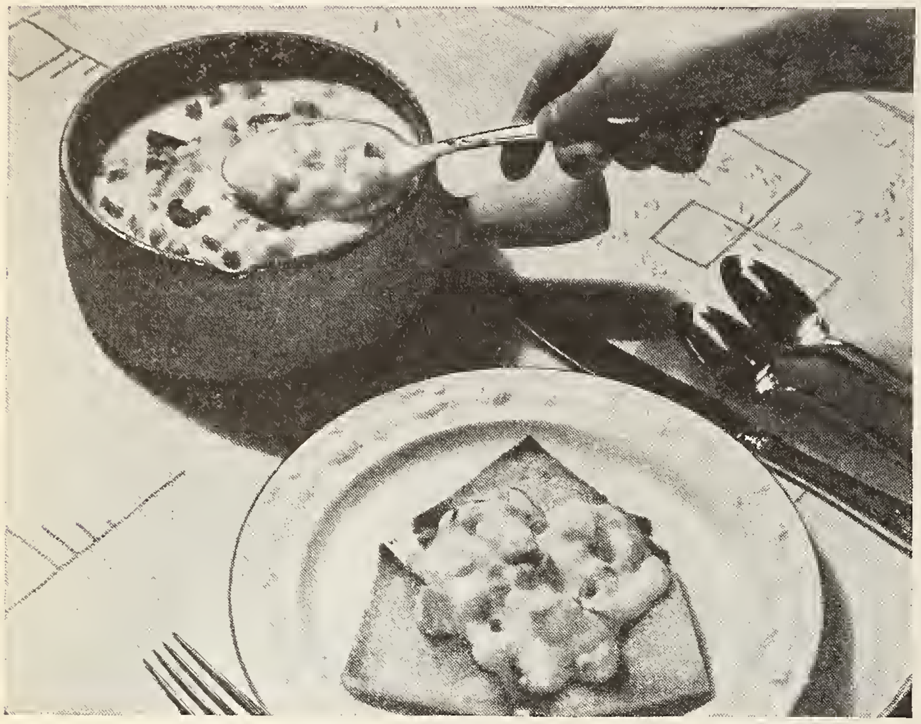
City________________State____________

NRA

Tune in on the Pond's Players Fridays, 9:30 P. M., E. S. T. WEAF and NBC Network

Copyright, 1933, Pond's Extract Company

THE MODERN HOSTESS



(Left) "Chicken à la Gargan"—named for its creator. A tempting canned chicken combination, which the Modern Hostess is pleased to pass on to you. (Right) Bill Gargan raids the refrigerator in search of ingredients for a new after-theatre dish.

Courtesy of Richardson & Robbins

By Phyllis Deen-Dunning

THE party was over and it was late. Six of us piled into Bill Gargan's car. Suddenly Bill said, "I don't know about the rest of you, but I'm as hungry as the proverbial wolf. How about going up to the house for a bite of something?"

"What, for instance?" asked our escort skeptically.

"Don't ask Bill that," laughed Mrs. Gargan. "He never knows himself what he's going to produce until it's too late to do a thing about it. He crosses the contents of cans and bottles with whatever he happens to find in the refrigerator and expects you to eat the results—and like it! Oddly enough, folks generally seem to think it is great."

So we silenced our companion's protests and eventually wound up in the Gargan kitchen—and good and glad we are that we did—for we picked up some ideas for quickly prepared dishes which are going to come in very handy these winter evenings, especially during the holiday season when people are dropping in unexpectedly, just when one has the least time for cooking.

On this particular evening, Bill collected eggs and butter, a loaf of bread, a can of tomato sauce and a jar of little frankfurters from the well stocked pantry. He instructed us to remove the crusts from six slices of bread and then to cut out the centers, leaving a ring of bread about an inch wide all 'round. Meanwhile, Bill melted three tablespoons of butter in a frying pan and, when we had fixed the bread, he put the slices into the pan. Next he broke an egg into the hollow center of each slice. This cooked over a low flame until the bread was a golden brown on the underneath side. Then he grasped a griddle-cake flipper and deftly turned each slice over, egg and all.

Bill had opened the can of tomato sauce and the jar of frankfurters and put them to heat in separate pans. Then, when he deemed the eggs in the bread slices had attained the correct degree of hardness, he transferred one egg slice to each plate and poured hot tomato sauce over the lot of them. He laid a frankfurter along the side of each and bade us "fall to."

We've used this basic bread and egg idea in loads of ways since, using mushroom sauce or hot Hollandaise sauce instead of the tomato sauce, supplemented by crisp bacon or sausages or thin broiled ham instead of frankfurters. Served with corn bread and a salad, it makes a good luncheon or Sunday night supper dish.

AFTER the food had been devoured we sat around to have a good-night cigarette and we took this opportunity to quiz Mrs. Gargan further about Bill's culinary accomplishments.

"Most of Bill's stunts are worked out with canned stuff," she replied, amused that anyone should be interested in her husband's frying-pan adventures.

"But can I perform miracles with canned chicken?" interrupted Bill. "You think those eggs were good? Well, wait 'till you've eaten Chicken à la Gargan! If it wasn't so late I'd make some for you right now!"

"Don't you believe him," Mrs. Gargan advised. "Since the very first time Bill first got the idea for combining

(Continued on page 91)

MODERN SCREEN STAR RECIPES

HOME SERVICE DEPARTMENT
MODERN SCREEN Magazine
149 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y.

I enclose a stamped, addressed envelope, for which please send me the recipes for January, 1934, at no further cost to me.

Name.......................
(Print in pencil)

Address.......................
(Street and Number)

....
(City) (State)

• Bill Gargan, an impromptu chef, prepares exciting late supper dishes •

"It cleared her Complexion surprisingly quickly"

Dr. Hufnagel is Chief of the Dept. of Skin Diseases of the Hospital of the Rothschild Foundation in Paris.

says the noted
DR. LEON HUFNAGEL,
Paris Dermatologist

One of the best known skin specialists in France, Dr. Hufnagel, co-author of the famous "Traité de Dermatologie," describes this typical case:—

"MLLE. D—typist. Persistent furunculosis (boils) and pimples on face and neck. Complexion muddy. Complained of headaches.

"Patient had been subject for years to constipation. X-rays showed intestines weakened by laxatives. I prescribed yeast.

"In 3 weeks her evacuations became normal. Her skin eruptions dried up and no others appeared. Her headaches disappeared and her digestion greatly improved."

"A POOR COMPLEXION," states Dr. Hufnagel, "is usually a sign of poisons in the system. External treatment, therefore, is not enough.

"I advise people suffering from constipation and skin affections to add yeast to their diet. It is the surest corrective for skin eruptions that I know."

Eaten daily, Fleischmann's Yeast actually strengthens the intestines—softens the clogging food residues—promotes the daily evacuation of bodily waste that is so essential to a clear skin and abundant energy.

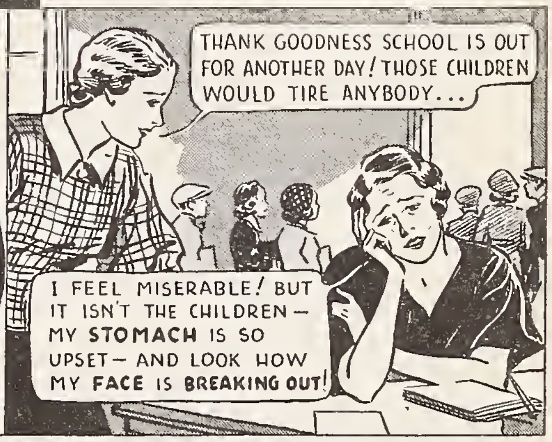
Just eat 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast daily—before meals, or between meals and at bedtime—plain or dissolved in a third of a glass of water.

You can get Fleischmann's Yeast (rich in vitamins B, G and D) at grocers, restaurants, soda fountains. Try it—now!

Copyright, 1933, Standard Brands Incorporated

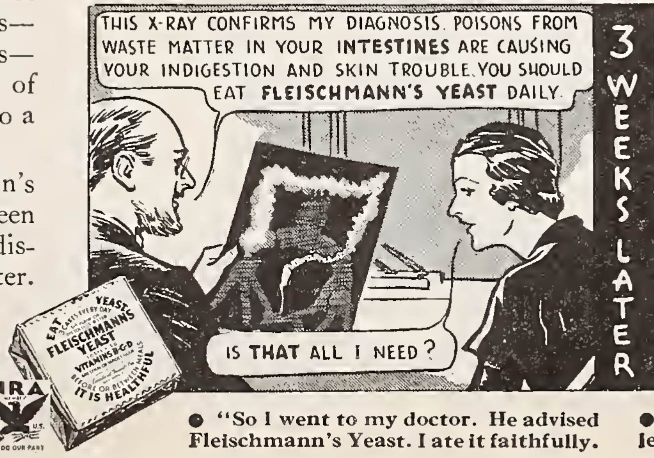
"I was so worried about my skin!"
writes Emily O'Brien, Mount Vernon, New York

● "I am a teacher," writes Miss O'Brien. "I'd become run-down—had indigestion. Felt miserable...



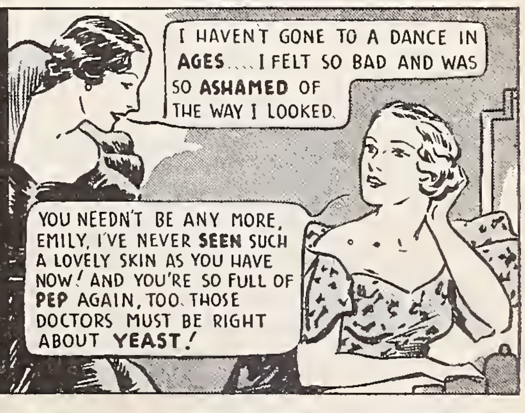
THANK GOODNESS SCHOOL IS OUT FOR ANOTHER DAY! THOSE CHILDREN WOULD TIRE ANYBODY...
I FEEL MISERABLE! BUT IT ISN'T THE CHILDREN — MY STOMACH IS SO UPSET— AND LOOK HOW MY FACE IS BREAKING OUT!

● "Then my face began to break out in eruptions. I was horrified. I worried about it terribly . . .



THIS X-RAY CONFIRMS MY DIAGNOSIS. POISONS FROM WASTE MATTER IN YOUR INTESTINES ARE CAUSING YOUR INDIGESTION AND SKIN TROUBLE. YOU SHOULD EAT FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST DAILY.
IS THAT ALL I NEED?
FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST
3 WEEKS LATER

● "So I went to my doctor. He advised Fleischmann's Yeast. I ate it faithfully.



I HAVEN'T GONE TO A DANCE IN AGES.... I FELT SO BAD AND WAS SO ASHAMED OF THE WAY I LOOKED.
YOU NEEDN'T BE ANY MORE, EMILY. I'VE NEVER SEEN SUCH A LOVELY SKIN AS YOU HAVE NOW! AND YOU'RE SO FULL OF PEP AGAIN, TOO. THOSE DOCTORS MUST BE RIGHT ABOUT YEAST!

● "Very soon my health improved. Indigestion left and my skin cleared up. It was wonderful!"

BEAUTY ADVICE

Before you, you have some excellent lessons in correct posture. For standing—Kay Francis. Easy, graceful, and poised. Above, you see Dorothea Wieck in an informal, casual snapshot. Notice how straight her back is as she leans forward in that chair. Next to her, Carole Lombard is saying "Heads up!" And Florine McKinney, in her rowing machine, gives you a gentle hint about exercise that is good for shoulders.

Write to Mary Biddle about your own beauty problems. She'll be delighted to help you in working them out. Address Mary Biddle, MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y. Enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope.

By MARY BIDDLE

I HATE to use the word "posture." I know that, in school, the word was dinned into you until you were heartily sick of it. I can remember when I went to school how that confounded word was screamed at me every time I turned around. Quite rightly, I admit, for, being taller than any of my friends, I was always trying to slouch off a couple of inches. A very silly idea, as I'll admit now. It didn't make me look smaller—it simply made me look sloppy.

However, whether you loathe the word or not, I'm going to talk this month about posture. And high time, too. Because the new fashions call attention so cruelly to our carriage and poise. Because the popularity of the débutante slouch, a few years ago, has left us with a disgraceful hangover of bad standing and sitting postures. Because a graceful, erect carriage is one of the first steps toward a good figure, toward chic, toward health.

Look at Kay Francis standing regally in the middle of this page. Look at the stately Dorothea Wieck sitting in a chair as a chair should be sat in. Look at the encouraging lift of Carole Lombard's chin and head. And look at young Florine McKinney at her rowing machine—a grand invention to pull the shoulders back into line.

You can improve your posture—maybe you'd like the word poise better?—by exercising, of course. And I'll give you some exercises later on in this article. But—most of all—posture, and poise) can be improved by daily concentration upon proper standing, sitting and walking. You must think about it.

And work at it. If necessary, tie a string around your finger which will mean "Check up on your posture!" I know it's difficult—we can stand and sit quite properly as long as we keep our minds on it. But as soon as something claims our attention, the shoulders droop, our middles slump and our heads duck forward. It takes time and concentration to maintain a good posture if we haven't been in the habit of it. So—let's get in the habit, before it's too late.

Considering Kay Francis again. Kay is a tall girl. Just about the tallest on the screen. Five feet seven. That's awful tall for the movies, you know. Occasionally, Kay must slouch a bit on the screen so that she'll be shorter than her leading man. But such a practice isn't advocated in real life and you'd never catch Kay doing it in real life. No, sir!

IN trying to figure out why people don't stand and sit properly, I have come to the conclusion that one of the reasons is that they don't know how. They think, many of them, that "correct posture" is a stiff, unnatural, uncomfortable bolt-uprightness. It isn't. Here's what it is: stand on your own two feet, with the weight evenly distributed on the two of them. Balance the greater part of the body weight forward—so that the balls of the feet take it. Now—pull in on your abdominal muscles. Hard. If you pull hard enough, you won't have to throw your chest out or pull your shoulders back. Because you'll find that the chest will naturally lift itself as the stomach is pulled in, flat and hard. And as the chest lifts, the shoulders go back where they belong. Now, check up on the rear of yourself—you don't want that prominent enough part to be sticking out grotesquely, do you? Well, then, pull it in—as you would pull it in if someone were going to spank you. Keep the stomach muscles taut. And don't give me the excuse that you can't hold your stomach in and pull your derriere in at the same time. You can, if your muscles are good enough.

Now, with weight properly distributed, tummy in, back as flat as possible and chest properly lifted—start to "grow tall." Stretch up, as if you were trying to pull yourself apart at the waist. Lift your arms, sideways, up over your head and stretch, stretch, stretch. Do this five or ten times every morning—just to remind yourself to hold a good pose throughout the day.

If you want to vary this correct posture a bit, you may flex one knee on occasions—it gives a graceful line to your clothes. You'll notice that all the movie stars, when having their photographs taken, flex the knee nearest the camera.

I think your sitting posture is probably worse than your standing posture, isn't it? I know that it's easier to stand properly than sit properly. Especially if you sit a great deal. In an office. It's almost impossible not to slump occasionally when you're working over a desk all day. But—if you'll

(Continued on page 98)

"Catchy" Fingertips-
WHY?

Those dry splinters of skin come from strong suds in your dishpan...

Change to IVORY for dishes (and all soap-and-water tasks) for a week...

Watch your hands smooth up. Ivory has no free alkali to dry and redden your hands. Although Ivory costs so little, it is pure enough for a baby's skin . . . 99 44/100 % Pure.

IVORY SOAP
prevents "Housework Hands"

THE Lure OF LOVELY EYES

can be yours with

Maybelline

Eye Beauty Aids

Now obtainable in 10c sizes

Maybelline

Maybelline Eyelash Darkener instantly darkens eyelashes, making them appear longer, darker, and more luxuriant. It is non-smarting, tear-proof and absolutely harmless. The largest selling eyelash beautifier in the world.

× ×

Maybelline
EYEBROW PENCIL

Maybelline Eyebrow Pencil smoothly forms the eyebrows into graceful, expressive lines, giving a perfect, natural effect. Of highest quality, it is entirely harmless, and is clean to use and to carry.

× ×

Maybelline
EYE SHADOW

Maybelline Eye Shadow delicately shades the eyelids, adding depth, color, and sparkle to the eyes. Smooth and creamy, absolutely pure. Blue, Brown, Blue-Gray, Violet and Green.

× ×

Maybelline
Eyelash Grower

Maybelline Eyelash Grower pure and harmless, stimulates the natural growth of the eyelashes and eyebrows. Apply before retiring.

× ×

These famous preparations in 10c sizes mean simply that you can now enjoy complete highest quality eye make-up without the obstacle of cost. Try them and achieve the lure of lovely eyes simply and safely, but—insist upon genuine MAYBELLINE preparations—for quality, purity, and value. Purse sizes obtainable at all leading 10c stores.

MAYBELLINE CO., CHICAGO

DIRECTORY of PICTURES

● RECOMMENDED ● ● SPECIALLY RECOMMENDED.

AGGIE APPLEBY, MAKER OF MEN (RKO)—Yarn of a gal who likes her men to be tough. When her first love is sent to prison for beating up three coppers she takes on a wealthy scamp and develops him into her ideal. William Gargan, Wynne Gibson, Charles Farrell and Zasu Pitts. Quite funny—okay for youngsters over 14.

● ● ANN VICKERS (RKO)—Sinclair Lewis' novel has been made into an excellent drama. The story has been followed with (for the movies) rare faithfulness. Irene Dunne is splendid as the prison reformer and Walter Huston excellent, as usual, in the role of Judge Barney Dolphin. Splendid—not for children under 16.

● ANOTHER LANGUAGE (M-G-M)—Story of an interfering mother-in-law and a young bride who stands up for her rights as a wife. The late Louise Closser Hale, Robert Montgomery and Helen Hayes are in it. Very good—young folks under 16 will be bored.

● BEAUTY FOR SALE (M-G-M)—The lives and loves of several beauty operators, a successful business man and his fickle wife. Madge Evans, Alice Brady and Otto Krueger with an excellent supporting cast. Good—not for youngsters under 16.

● ● BERKELEY SQUARE (Fox)—A fanciful tale of a modern young man who is magically transferred to the 18th century. Leslie Howard is the modern and Heather Angel the exquisite little 18th century lady he falls in love with. A charming and different love story—dull for young folks under 16.

● THE BEST OF ENEMIES (Fox)—A mirthful and boisterous beer comedy. Joe Cawthorne, Buddy Rogers, Marian Nixon and Greta Nissen. An entertainer for the whole family.

BITTERSWEET (United Artists)—A rather dull romance of a wealthy and beautiful English gal who elopes with her music teacher. Not much interest for anybody.

THE BOWERY (20th Century)—There are some awfully good spots in this, mixed up with a great deal of vulgarity and considerable bad taste. Wallace Beery, George Raft and Pert Kelton are excellent. And Jackie Cooper, too. If you can shut your eyes to the vulgarity and bad taste, you'll enjoy this rough-and-tumble—and incidentally, nicely authentic—picture of New York's tough district in the Nineties. Good—a bit too raw for young children.

● THE BUREAU OF MISSING PERSONS (Warners)—About that interesting but little known part of the police department. Bette Davis, Pat O'Brien, Lewis Stone and Glenda Farrell. Informative and exciting in spots—children under 16 will not be interested.

● ● CAPTURED (Warners)—A powerful and moving war love story. Most of the action centers around a German prison camp. Leslie Howard, Doug Fairbanks, Jr., Paul Lukas and Margaret Lindsay. Very good—boring for children under 16.

● A CHANCE AT HEAVEN (RKO)—Vina Delmar's simple and delightful little story about a boy and a girl in love. Complications arise when a rich girl from the city appears. Entertaining—for everybody.

THE CIRCUS QUEEN MURDER (Columbia)—A murder mystery in a circus tent. Good mystery—too exciting for youngsters under 16.

● THE COHENS AND THE KELLYS IN TROUBLE (Universal)—Another of these comedy series with Charlie Murray and George Sidney. Good—particularly for kids.

● COLLEGE HUMOR (Paramount)—Laughs, crooning and plenty of entertainment on a college campus. Bing Crosby, Dick Arlen, Jack Oakie and Mary Carlisle. Good—for young folks, too.

● ● DINNER AT EIGHT (Fox)—A grand plot involving the exciting intrigues of a group of people invited to a fashionable dinner party. A superb cast with John and Lionel Barrymore, Billie Burke, Phillips Holmes, Madge Evans, Lee Tracy, Wallace Beery, Marie Dressler, Eddie Lowe, Jean Hersholt, Karen Morey, Franchot Tone, Jean Harlow and others. Excellent and sophisticated drama—send the kids to a Western.

DON'T BET ON LOVE (Universal)—Horse-racing and romance. Lew Ayres and Ginger Rogers. Fair—dull for youngsters.

● ● DOUBLE HARNESS (RKO)—A very nice girl (Ann Harding) tricks a devil-may-care bachelor (William Powell) into marriage in order to make him into a successful business man. Then she falls in love with him. When he discovers her trickery he leaves her for another woman—almost. Sophisticated entertainment—not for children under 18.

DOCTOR BULL (Fox)—Story of an old-fashioned but excellent doctor in a small town. He is the target of a lot of gossip and criticism because of bis disregard of petty conventions. Slow moving but good if you like Will Rogers—okay for tots.

● ● THE EAGLE AND THE HAWK (Paramount)—Drama of the horror and brutality of war. Fredric March, Cary Grant, Jack Oakie and Carole Lombard. See it by all means—but leave the very young folks at home.

● ELMER THE GREAT (Warners)—Joe E. Brown in a good baseball yarn. Take all the kids.

● EMERGENCY CALL (RKO)—Behind the scenes in a hospital. Bill Gargan, Bill Boyd, Myrna Kennedy and Betty Furness. Good of its kind—young folks under 16 will be bored.

F.P.1 (Fox-Gaumont)—Deals with a mysterious menace tbat hangs over an airport built in mid-ocean. Leslie Fenton, Conrad Veidt and Jill Esmond. A different and rather exciting picture for grown-ups—but not for tots.

EVER IN MY HEART (Warners)—Moving drama of an American girl (Barbara Stanwyck) and a German boy (Otto Krueger). Their marriage is sacrificed to the World War. There is a tragic ending. Good if you like this kind of tragedy—not recommended for children.

THE FIDDLIN' BUCKAROO (Maynard-Universal)—Ken Maynard as a government agent who joins up with a gang of thieves to get his man. Exciting Western—send the kids.

● ● FOOTLIGHT PARADE (Warners)—Another grand musical. You'll like it even better than "42nd Street" and "Gold-diggers." Ruby Keeler and Dick Powell, Joan Blondell and James Cagney and others make the superb cast. Excellent entertainment for everybody.

FROM ARIZONA TO BROADWAY (Fox)—A rather uninteresting crook story. Joan Bennett and Jimmie Dunn. Dull.

● FROM HELL TO HEAVEN (Paramount)—A good race track yarn. Carole Lombard, Jack Oakie, David Manners and Adrienne Ames. Take the whole family.

● ● GOLDDIGGERS OF 1933 (Warners)—A musical that people are still raving about. Keeler and Powell, Blondell and Warren William, Aline MacMahon and Guy Kibbee. Don't pass it up if you haven't seen it already—youngsters will enjoy it, too.

● GOODBYE AGAIN (Warners)—A sophisticated comedy about a brilliant author, his ex-gal friend, and his secretary. Wordy, but good—send the kids to a Western, though.

HEADLINE SHOOTER (RKO)—All about the exciting and hectic life of a newsreel man. Bill Gargan, Frances Dee and Ralph Bellamy. Several good shots of earthquakes, fires and floods—children will go for it.

● HER BODYGUARD (Paramount)—A peppy little yarn about a sugar daddy, his chorus girl sweetie and the bodyguard he employs to keep off his rivals. Eddie Lowe and Wynne Gibson. Good comedy—kids will laugh, too.

● HER FIRST MATE (Universal)—Zasu Pitts and Slim Summerville teamed again. One big laugh for everybody—see it.

HEROES FOR SALE (Warners)—A post war depression story about a veteran down on his luck. Dick Barthelmess' acting is excellent. Aline MacMahon plays opposite. Very depressing.

● HOLD YOUR MAN (M-G-M)—And how Jean Harlow holds him! Clark Gable is the man. Jean and Clark are topnotch as always. Good—not for those young folks under 16, though.

● I LOVED A WOMAN (Warners)—Drama of the power and influence a mistress wields over the man she loves. Kay Francis is the mistress, an opera singer, Edward G. Robinson the man and Genevieve Tobin his wife. Certainly worth seeing—not for youngsters under 16.

● ● I LOVED YOU WEDNESDAY (Fox)—People are still going to see this one. Very smart and sophisticated love comedy. Elissa Landi, Victor Jory, Miriam Jordan and Warner Baxter. Excellent—send the tots to a Western.

● I'M NO ANGEL (Paramount)—And she isn't! She's a lion tamer this time, and she tames 'em! Mae West at her best, this time as a sideshow burlesque queen who moves up in the world and finally marries a Social Registerite. You'll like it if you like Mae—pretty rowdy for kids of any age.

● THE KING OF THE ARENA (Maynard-Universal)—A good Western all about a cowboy who turns sleuth. Ken Maynard is the cowboy detective. Send tbe kids.

● ● LADY FOR A DAY (Columbia)—Apple Annie (May Robson) kids her daughter, away at school in Spain, into believing her mother is a social queen. When the daughter decides to come see her mama, things happen. Jean Parker, Warren William, Glenda Farrell, Ned Sparks and Guy Kibbee complete the cast. Swell—for grown-ups and tots.

● LOVE, HONOR AND OH BABY (Universal)—A struggling young lawyer and a pretty stenographer can't get married because they have no money. So they frame the girl's boss who is crazy about pretty stenographers for a breach of promise suit. A riot of amusement—kids will think so, too.

● MAMA LOVES PAPA (Paramount)—A comedy of married life. Mary Boland and Charles Ruggles. Very funny—older children will like it.

● MAN OF THE FOREST (Paramount)—Randolph Scott, Verna Hillie, Buster Crabbe, Noah Beery, Harry Carey and a very entertaining family of mountain lions. Good Western—take the tots.

● THE MAN WHO DARED (Fox)—A biographical sketch dealing with the life of the late mayor of Chicago, Anton Cermak. Preston Foster plays the role of Cermak and Zita Johann is bis wife. Good of its kind—too advanced for young folks under 14.

MARY STEVENS, M.D. (Warners)—Story of a woman doctor who rises above a very tragic love affair and wins out in the end. Kay Francis and Lyle Talbot. Fair—dull for all the children.

● THE MASQUERADER (United Artists)—Ronald Colman in a dual role involving politics and love. Elissa Landi plays opposite. Good—not for young folks under 16.

● THE MAYOR OF HELL (Warners)—James Cagney and Frankie Darro in a yarn about a lot of tough youngsters in a reform school. Good—kids will enjoy the excitement.

THE MIDNIGHT CLUB (Paramount)—All about a gang of high powered London jewel thieves. Clive Brook, Helen Vinson, Alan Mowbray, Allison Skipworth and George Raft. Fairly amusing—not for anyone under 16.

MIDSHIPMAN JACK (RKO)—A story of naval cadets. Bruce Cabot is the upper classman who doesn't always practice what he preaches. Betty Furness plays opposite. Good of its kind—for everybody.

● ● MORNING GLORY (RKO)—Katharine Hepburn in a vital drama of a wistful little country girl who becomes a great actress. Adolphe Menjou, Doug Fairbanks, Jr., and Mary Duncan complete the cast. Don't miss this one—but send the children under 16 to a Western.

● MY WEAKNESS (Fox)—You see Lilian Harvey for the first time in this one. An excellent little musical with some grand numbers. An entertainer for everyone.

● ● NO MARRIAGE TIES (RKO)—That's what Richard Dix, a cagey, wise advertising man, decides. But that doesn't exclude love. Nor fast answers and amusing gags. Very good—not much in it for young children.

● ● ONE SUNDAY AFTERNOON (Paramount)—Gary Cooper and Neil Hamilton as rivals for Fay Wray. Cooper's revenge mounts for years after Neil wins her. And then, one Sunday afternoon, comes the crisis. Frances Fuller, a newcomer, is excellent. Excellent drama—not for children under 16.

● ONE MAN'S JOURNEY (RKO)—Story of a brilliant doctor who sacrifices a successful career to become a plain country practitioner. He gets his reward when his skill surpasses even the specialists' in saving the life of the girl his son marries. Lionel Barrymore, Joel McCrea, Dorothy Jordan and May Robson. Splendid drama—tots will not sit through this picture, though.

● PADDY THE NEXT BEST THING (Fox)—They just won't let Gaynor grow up. This time she is the romping young daughter of an Irish major. She saves her sister from marrying for money and repairs the family fortunes herself. Warner Baxter, Margaret Lindsay and Walter Connolly complete the cast. You'll like it—take the youngsters.

● PILGRIMAGE (Fox)—Deals with the everlasting remorse of a mother who sends her son to war to separate him from the girl he loves. Norman Foster, Marian Nixon and Henrietta Crossman. A woman's picture—very weepy.

● ● THE POWER AND THE GLORY (Fox)—A surprising and different picture beginning with a much hated railroad man's suicide. Then his life is told in flashbacks. Spencer Tracy and Colleen Moore. You will be interested in this one—too advanced for anyone under 16.

PRIVATE DETECTIVE (Warners)—A not so hot crook yarn. Only the excellent acting of William Powell recommends this. Fair—young folks will be bored.

● PROFESSIONAL SWEETHEART (RKO)—Ginger Rogers is a radio entertainer who is billed as America's Purity Girl. This bores her no end, until she falls in love with a hick admirer, Norman Foster, who believes she's really as pure as the publicity department states. Good—for the whole family.

● THE PRIVATE LIFE OF KING HENRY THE VIII (United Artists)—The colorful life of this much married king of England. You'll he crazy about Charles Laughton as Henry. By all means see this one—take the kids along.

● RAFTER ROMANCE (RKO)—When a couple of young things can't pay their rent, an obliging landlord figures out a way to help them. He rents the same room to the chap (who works all night) and to the girl (who works all day). George Sidney, Norman Foster and Marian Nixon. Go and take the tots to this comedy.

● ● REUNION IN VIENNA (M-G-M) — Very sophisticated comedy about exiled royalty and mad, romantic love. John Barrymore and Diana Wynyard, with an excellent supporting cast. Superb. You can see this twice over—but put the young folks to bed first.

ROME EXPRESS (Universal) — Melodramatic love yarn on a continental express train. Conrad Veidt and Esther Ralston. Kids will like it.

● SATURDAY'S MILLIONS (Universal)—All about a cocky football star who wins the game in spite of a broken hand. Robert Young is the star, Leila Hyams provides the heart throbs and Mary Doran the complications. Andy Devine, Mary Carlisle and Johnny Mack Brown complete the cast. The kids will think it's swell.

SECRET OF THE BLUE ROOM (Universal)—Whoever sleeps in a certain room of a certain castle is murdered. Very scarey. Lionel Atwill, Paul Lukas and Gloria Stuart. There is plenty of mystery to the very end in this one—not for the very young tots.

SHANGHAI MADNESS (Fox)—Spencer Tracy as a United States Army officer who disobeys an unfair order. He is discharged. Goes to China, gets mixed in a war and falls in love. Only fair—children over 14 will enjoy the excitement.

● SOLITAIRE MAN (M-G-M)—Speed, action and plenty of mystery in the cabin of a fast traveling airplane carrying a gang of jewel thieves. One of the most exciting and thrilling mysteries in a long time—kids will go for it in a big way, too.

● SONG OF SONGS (Paramount)—An extremely emotional love drama. Marlene Dietrich and Brian Aherne. Some will like it—not for young folks under 18.

THE SONG OF THE EAGLE (Paramount)—A rather dull beer story. Dick Arlen and the cast do all they can with the plot. Boring.

S.O.S. ICEBERG (Universal)—The adventures, the extreme privations and dangers endured by a scientist and his expedition in Greenland. Rod LaRocque, Leni Riefenstahl and Ernst Udet. The spectacular Arctic scenery recommends this picture—educational for children.

● ● STAGE MOTHER (M-G-M)—An unsuccessful actress determines that her daughter shall be a great star at any cost. The mother almost sacrifices her daughter's love and marriage but she relents in the end. Alice Brady and Maureen O'Sullivan are superb as mother and daughter. Franchot Tone and Philip Holmes are also in the cast. Excellent—not for the young folks under 16.

● STORM AT DAYBREAK (M-G-M) — Walter Huston, Kay Francis and Nils Asther in a vigorous war love drama. Good drama—those under 16 will be bored.

(Continued on page 98)

1 "Get wise, sister! Stop yearning for a complexion like mine. Why not use the same pure soap I use?"
IVORY
2 "Yes, and don't forget to use Ivory for your bath, too. Winter's so tough on your skin."
3 "Whew! I'm glad she got rid of her fancy 'beauty' soap. Now that she's using Ivory her skin will stay smooth as a baby's."

Don't dilly-dally another minute, if you yearn for a baby-smooth, baby-clear complexion. These raw wintry winds can make a girl's face like sandpaper, if she's not careful. So start your Ivory beauty treatments today. Ivory won't dry up the natural oils that keep your skin silky-smooth.

Ivory, you know, is so pure that doctors recommend it even for tiny babies. Surely the soap that is best for a baby's sensitive skin is safest for your own complexion.

And . . . stay far, far away from "beauty soaps" that may hide impurities behind fancy perfumes and lollipop colorings.

And be a baby about your bath, too! Hot, dry rooms—raw, chilly winds! These days, your skin all over needs Ivory's soothing, gentle care more than ever. Hop into your odorless Ivory bath. Hop out feeling smooth all over. And thank your lucky stars that fine white Ivory costs you only a few pennies at any grocer's.

Ivory Soap

99 44/100 % pure • It floats

Lashes

WERE MEANT TO BE

Curly!

NO HEAT

NO COSMETICS

NO PRACTICING

No one knows why that long, upward sweep of feminine lashes has always seemed so enchanting to the masculine mind—but it's so. And it used to be that (like curly hair) a girl either was born with the right kind or else—. Now there's a gadget: Kurlash. Slip your lashes in, and press the handles. That's all. Kurlash won't break the lashes or hurt them in any way. In fact, it's used by a great many movie stars. If it isn't at your favorite department store, drug store or beauty shop, send $1 with the coupon. And after you've curled your lashes, you'll probably want to take other steps too.

Kurlene: keeps your lashes and brows in condition. 50 cents and $1.

Shadette: gives mystery, depth to the eyes; four shades, brown, blue, green, violet. $1.

Lashtint: darkens your lashes; waterproof. $1.

Lashpac: compact mascara. Three shades. $1.

Tweezette: to arch your brows painlessly. $1.

Kurlash

The Kurlash Company, Rochester, New York
Gentlemen: Here's one dollar. Please send Kurlash and a copy of your booklet, "Fascinating Eyes."
In Canada, Kurlash Company of Canada, Toronto.

Name________ Street________
City________ State________

Dick Cromwell Surprises You

(Continued from page 42)

"Joan Crawford was really responsible for my going in pictures. She never knew it. I never told her. But this is what happened.

"Like most kids, I was unhappy with what I was doing. I didn't know what I wanted. I wasn't getting anywhere. And then—one night—I sat in a theatre and saw Joan Crawford in 'Untamed.' I never dreamed then that I'd ever meet her, but something came out to me from that screen. She created excitement. She made me want to accomplish something.

"I went looking for picture jobs right after that. But if it hadn't been for seeing Joan in 'Untamed' I never would have done it.

"Shortly after I had gotten into pictures I met Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and a few nights later I went to a preview of Joan's picture, 'Paid.' I had never met her but I saw her in the lobby of the theatre and I wanted to tell her how much I'd liked 'Paid' but I felt she'd think me just another fan and pay no attention.

"And then I saw her coming over to me. I should have congratulated her on the picture. Instead she said, 'I want you to know how happy I am about your success. Douglas told me and I read in the papers about "Tol'able David." My name's Joan Crawford.'

"Shortly after that she called me up and asked me to go with her and Douglas and Vincent Allan to the opera. Instead of having a secretary or someone do it, she called me herself.

"The opera was dull. We left early and I asked them if they'd stop by my house. They did and we sat there and talked until morning.

"Every now and then I want to write Joan a letter—when I don't see her for a long time—and tell her what a great person I think she is and maybe that I've thought she was fine in a certain picture, but she always answers those notes herself and I know how busy she is, so I hate to take up her time.

"Tallulah Bankhead is another of my favorite people but she is completely mad. I had heard about her first from a lot of friends who said, 'Oh, you must know Tallulah.' You know those people. I thought I wouldn't like her.

"And then, one night, when I was in bed, my doorbell rang. I was annoyed—as who wouldn't be?—and, groggy with sleep, opened the door a little way and yelled, 'Who's there?'

"Before I had an answer the door was pushed open and in walked a couple of friends of mine and Tallulah. Before we were introduced she walked all over my apartment saying, 'Well, my dear, it's just too divine.' And then she turned to me and said, 'Don't you think I'm divine?'

"If any other woman would say that you'd hate her—but with Tallulah it's different. I've seen her sit by the mirror for ages and then turn and say, 'Don't you think I'm beautiful?'

"Tallulah is one of the most supreme egotists, but because it is Tallulah and because she has so much real charm it's okay. It is a part of her like her beautiful eyes and you accept it as such.

"One day I went to see her and found her curled up on a couch, very contrite about something. 'Listen,' she said, after she had asked me if I didn't think she was divine, 'I've a secret to tell you, but don't tell Edie.'

"Edie is her companion-secretary and is the one person of whom Tallulah is afraid. Tallulah, who is lord of all she surveys and when she walks into a room takes it by storm.

"'Listen, I lost a thousand dollars gambling last night. Edie would be furious. I can't think why I lost it. I can't think why I'd gamble that much. But I really did it to impress the people who were standing around watching.'

"It sounds incredibly mad but that's Tallulah. Once she said, 'When I'm with nice people, sane people, I'm nice and sane, but when I'm with mad fiends like you—who do insane things—then I'm a fiend, too.'

"TALLULAH is always cynical, witty and bitter when she is in a group. Egotist that she is, she cannot help showing off before a crowd. She is nicest when she is with just one other person. Then she is utterly charming."

Dick paused for breath. I suddenly remembered I had a tea date—but I didn't care.

"And now?" I asked, "Who's next?"

"Hepburn—Katharine Hepburn. I want to meet her."

"Good luck," I said. "And more fine stories."

Two weeks later, the papers reported that Clara Bow and Rex Bell were about to separate and that one of the contributing causes was young Dick Cromwell.

Here's what Dick has to say about Clara. "She was swell when we worked together in 'Hoop-la.' I think the reason that someone decided the worst about us is that a smile from her is like a kiss from anybody else. She has that tremendous personality that magnifies her every gesture. I think she was pleased that I didn't make her nervous. When it came to our love scenes, it looked like the real thing to some gossips and they started the works. A crack came out in the papers and was denied by the Bells. Rightly, too—for when Clara and I did the scene where she seduces me in the picture, Rex Bell was right there on the stage."

So what can you do with a boy like that? For one thing you need never let anybody tell you again that he is a shy, country lad who goes around with the home town gals and is terrified of sophisticated, glamorous women.

Between You and Me

(Continued from page 10)

and, thanks to the great Garbo, that incomparable team, Garbo and Gilbert, are together again. There never has been a pair quite like these two. I have always championed John Gilbert and feel sure he will make a great come-back. Then, those who thought he was through for always will doubtless say they knew all along he'd return to his former place on the screen. Well, I suppose that is only human nature asserting itself and, after all, nothing succeeds like success.

Incidentally, why do you suppose Garbo persists in her refusal to have informal sentimental pictures taken of herself and Gilbert?

(Your question may be answered in "Garbo Falls in Love" in this issue of MODERN SCREEN.)

OTIS COOPER of Stamford, Conn., writes:

Have just seen "Night Flight" and am full of praise for it. I hope every fan sees it. Lionel Barrymore is overshadowed by John in this, Myrna Loy and Bill Gargan give excellent accounts of themselves and Leslie Fenton makes one hope to see more!

EVELYN McCLATCHEY of Riverton, N. J., says:

When it comes to handing out orchids, mine go to Jack Oakie for his comedy work in "College Humor" and "Too Much Harmony." His southern dialect in the latter was simply priceless. Jack is certainly a picture-stealer.

VIRGINIA DUBBS of Cairo, Ill., writes:

Why don't they make "The Sheik" again with Ramon Navarro and Myrna Loy in the leading roles? They were splendid together in "The Barbarian" and are just right for colorful, romantic stories. By the way, the "Wax Museum" was both thrilling and interesting.

ELIZABETH ROBERTSON of Little Rock, Ark., says:

Let's cheer Jean Harlow for her success in "Bombshell," which proves she can make clean pictures if they'll only let her. That was one that could be graded on its acting and not on its eye appeal, which is a rare treat.

BARBARA WOODWARD of Bridgewaters, N. Y., writes:

Fay Wray deserves a medal for her picture progress. She has developed into a fine little actress through a series of mediocre roles. And another thing:—Miss Wray has managed to keep her private life to herself, which is something of a novelty in these days of newspaper headlines divulging celebrities' most intimate and revealing moments!

How Betty Found Fame and Romance in Hollywood

I COULD MAKE THAT GIRL A STAR IF HER SKIN COULD STAND A CLOSE-UP!
DARLING IF YOU'LL FOLLOW MY ADVICE YOU CAN CLEAR UP YOUR SKIN IN NO TIME!
OH, PLEASE TELL ME HOW!
AND YOU REALLY BELIEVE YEAST FOAM TABLETS WILL HELP MY COMPLEXION?
DRUGS
I'M SURE OF IT! I'VE SEEN WONDERFUL RESULTS AND THIS KIND OF YEAST IS SO EASY TO TAKE!
6 WEEKS LATER
THERE'S JUST THE TYPE IF SHE ONLY PHOTOGRAPHS WELL!
WHO-ME?
LET'S TRY HER, CHIEF—COME HERE BETTY!
SHE'S MARVELOUS AND BOY—WHAT SKIN!
HURRAY! SHE'LL BE OUR NEXT BIG STAR!
SUCH SKIN-AND THEY SAY SHE'S ENGAGED TO HER LEADING MAN!
YOU WERE WONDERFUL DEAR!
ISN'T SHE LOVELY?
PREMIERE TO-NITE!

WHAT YEAST FOAM TABLETS did for Betty's skin, they should do for yours. A blotchy, unattractive complexion is usually caused by faulty elimination or a nervous, run-down condition. Your trouble is internal and requires internal treatment. That is what YEAST FOAM TABLETS provide.

YEAST FOAM TABLETS contain rich stores of vitamins B and G which strengthen your digestive and intestinal organs, which give tone and vigor to your nervous system. With the true causes of your trouble corrected, eruptions and blemishes vanish. Your skin becomes clear and smooth. Indigestion, constipation and nervousness all go. You enjoy new health, and new beauty.

Don't confuse YEAST FOAM TABLETS with ordinary raw yeast. This yeast has a rich, appetizing, nut-like flavor. And it cannot cause fermentation because it is scientifically pasteurized. Many American universities and various laboratories of the United States government use this new-type yeast in their vitamin research. All druggists sell YEAST FOAM TABLETS. The 10-day bottle costs only 50c. Get one today.

FREE TO MOVIE FANS!

Here's something every movie fan goes wild about. A brand new Movie Diary! Think how many times you have asked yourself: "What was the name of that picture?" "Who played in it?" "Where did I see it?" Here you can keep a record of everything you want to remember. Room for 66 pictures! Also for "Pictures I Intend to See." Another section tells hundreds of fascinating "Facts About the Stars." Yet the Diary is small enough to carry in your pocket or purse.

You can get the Movie Diary absolutely free! Just send an empty carton of YEAST FOAM TABLETS (50c size) with the coupon below.

NORTHWESTERN YEAST CO. MM1
1750 North Ashland Avenue, Chicago, Ill.
Enclosed find an empty Yeast Foam Tablet carton (50c size). Please send me the new Movie Diary as per your special offer.

Name____________________________________

Address__________________________________

City________________________State___________

Miss Marjorie Sheerin of Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:—

"My cough is gone already—
"I'm so glad I took my Doctor's advice!"

● "I had to stay home from the office," writes Miss Sheerin, "my cough was so bad. So I called the doctor. He said, 'Take Pertussin—it's the best thing there is for a cough.' Am I glad I did!... Next morning my cough was gone!"

MILLIONS OF GLANDS—like tiny water faucets—inside your throat and bronchial passages keep the tissues healthily moist.

But when you "catch cold" these glands clog up with thick, infected mucus! Your throat feels tickly—dry. You cough and cough, but you can't "raise" a thing.

You must get those little moisture glands back into action, to stop a cough. And Pertussin does just that!

Doctors have found that a spoonful or two quickly stimulate the glands to start pouring their natural moisture out into your throat. Germ-laden phlegm is loosened. Your throat feels soothed and relieved. Pertussin is actually helping Nature herself to cure your cough!

Pertussin is the scientific extract of a medicinal herb famous in treating the most severe coughs known. It contains no narcotics, no harmful drugs. Get a bottle today!

●

DOCTORS PRESCRIBE Pertussin for babies, too—it's so safe. "It's the best remedy I know for coughs," writes one doctor. "I use it for my own family," another states. It won't upset the digestion.

PERTUSSIN

has been prescribed by doctors for 30 years . . It works safely!

Jean Harlow's Trousseau

(Continued from page 27)

night. You want to be exciting and glamorous, then."

As if in direct answer to that last sentence, The Wonder appeared. Jean named it that at first glance. It was an evening ensemble of that very new "sauvage" velvet in a luscious deep green jewel shade. The kind of costume that speaks for itself in soft-shaded hours. There's something about a princesse frock with a train that makes you remember romance isn't just an illusion. This one was cut to the waist in back, moulded, and had a draped-shoulder effect. The only ornament was a jeweled buckle in front. The sleeveless coat accompanying it also held to the princesse line but fell in gentle folds to the ankles. Around the armholes were corded rolls of the sauvage velvet.

"Oh, oh!" came an exclamation from beside me, "there's my formal 'picture' gown." Every trousseau needs one. For those occasions when you want to be outstanding at a large ball or at the theatre. And there simply isn't anything like corded gold lamé. It's striking without doing sharp things to the figure. And pictorial—oh, my dears! Especially when it just hints at being an Edwardian court dress like this one. Get out the plush album and look at those pictures of mother-as-a-girl. Likely as not she'll have buttons skipping down the front and a ruffle around the bottom. Then look at the 1933 version of an old and honored style—"zipped up" to be in tune with modern times. Tantalizing, isn't it?

IN this case the buttons skip down the back with only the top one actually buttoned—and they emphasize the very snug fit of the gown. Adjustable kinds of necklines are the newest thing for both day and night. With this gold lamé, you can either close it high in front or leave it to fall into a soft rever that ends in a sun-pleated ruffle. You have to be well poised to wear a gown of this variety with distinction. All picturesque gowns demand poise and good posture. So do trains. Ah, these trains. You find them on house coats and long sleeved dinner dresses as well as formals.

The best way, if they're not too long, is to catch the dress in back just above the knee and lift it until the train is out of harm's way when you dance. Otherwise carry them over your arm. The ruffled fish tail kind that adorns Jean's "picture gown" is particularly popular. And that little shoulder wrap would add an exciting touch to any frock. It's straight cut, you see, and folded over on one side for about three inches. The idea is to join it high in front and let it drape, cowl fashion, down the back. The stiffer the material, the better the cowl effect.

Naturally, as soon as Jean saw that black velvet and ermine creation it was as good as sold. She can't resist it. Ah me, who could? Charming . . . dramatic . . . dazzling. That's black velvet with touches of white fur!

First of all it has that stunning new décolletage that rises serenely about the throat under the chin and goes sliding down to the waist in back. It's slit in such a way that you can wear it open for dancing and closed for dinner. A rhinestone clip gives the bodice a very slight draped look. And notice those dropped shoulders again. They're considered a shade smarter than bare shoulders. The gown smoothly suggests that you've been poured into it and tapered off—until you come to the bottom, which ends in a devastating train. There are two startling slits in the front hem which make it even more exciting but they have a very practical purpose—to give you freedom of movement. And don't overlook that huge double bow in back. It's grand to effect lissom lines on slender people—but if you're a bit thickish through the hips better leave it off. The sandals you see Jean wearing are black and silver.

Usually, for evening, you want to look so poised—at your glamorous best. Then let me tell you, get either one of the latest fascinating "monk's capes" that hint that you're in a dashing mood, or a three-quarter length fitted coat similar to Jean's black velvet. Yes, it's part of the above mentioned ensemble but you can wear it as easily with pale chiffons or slinky white satin. The ermine collar has self buttons and there are magnificent ermine cavalier cuffs.

You see, short jackets and flares are young and sprightly. Perfect for co-eds who want to look perky enough to capture football heroes. But hardly in keeping with the "grand dame" air.

LOOK how youthful and seventeen-ish Jean appears in that cocktail suit of Rodier gold tweed. The high collar of the mink-brown satin blouse is the one sophisticated thing about it. Tweed and satin! They're doing astonishing things together this winter—and going innumerable places. To luncheon, on to the matinée and tea, to make that Sunday afternoon call when you don't want to look too "dressed up." The suit has a soft, not-so-tailored look. Padded shoulders, wide lapels, a single link button closing the coat. And an unusual stitched treatment that winds up in three inverted pleats in front makes the skirt different. A tiny mad hat with a band of mink around it strikes a corresponding note with the mink muff.

Oh, there are a lot of things you can do with a suit like that. Have you noticed the coat is collarless—which means your fox skin can swirl around it one day and your neat little kidskin jabot set it off the next. Or you might just let it serve as a complement to the collar of your blouse as Jean does.

Collars—dress necklines—they do for your face what frames do for pictures.

The thought crystallized suddenly when I saw Jean in that little black velgrana frock with its small stand-up collar accented by the most feminine of fly-away lace bows.

But supposing you wanted to give a worldly wise air to the frock. Take off the lace. Supplant it with a daring flare of ribbon or one of these white satin collars that goes off at bizarre angles and has equally bizarre cuffs.

With a little imagination, there's no end to what a bride can do with her trousseau.

But let's be quite frank for a minute. No clothes in the world will give charm unless there is personal daintiness. Elsewhere in this magazine there is a whole department devoted to it. An expert advises on the finest method of cleansing the skin, of arranging the hair, of using depilatories.

"Personally, I believe more thought and money should be spent on interesting daytime clothes than on formal ones," observed Jean. "Somehow, evening things always manage to look intriguing—but it's difficult to make everyday ones romantic!" Which was why she decided on that scrumptious Scotch plaid and logwood seal outfit.

It's the sort you'd choose for gala days with him. Comfortable and just right to put you in a gay gypsy mood. The swagger coat is of the seal, lined with plaid woolen to match the wrap-around skirt. Then, just to retaliate, the skirt sponsors a pocket trimmed with a band of the logwood seal. The angora sweater blouse is the last word in slipovers. And have you noticed that most of the sports hats are brimmed now? That brown felt one is and young Mrs. Hal Rosson certainly knows how to wear it at a dizzy angle!

"Hal and I actually fell in love during our first golf game together," mused Jean. "I think I'll get that green wool golf suit to commemorate the occasion!" It would be a tribute to any such occasion—that suit. So trig and tailored with its wide stitched collar and trim lines. Jean wears the newest type of oxfords with it, those with side closings, and her sweater is of green angora with two-tone crochet ties.

She bought the accessories along with each costume—which, after all, is the most satisfactory way to shop. It occurred to her that a brown corded wool suit she had purchased needed a very special kind of topcoat—and she found it in a loosely woven tweed in brown and white check. An awfully swanky coat that flared around the bottom and tucked snugly under the chin.

Then came the riding habit. Unquestionably they do bring out a certain fascination in a girl! Jean's final choice was beige and brown. A beige suede slipover that fastens down the front, with brown leather buttons and has the new laced collar and cuffs; a coat of the same suede that has enormous buttons and patch pockets; beige cavalry twill breeches; brown boots that match the buttons and ribbon on the hat—and you have symphonic splendor for the bridle trails!

And so we came to the end of a glorified day—and Jean's glorified trousseau.

HINDS CREAM
HINDS CREAM
NRA

GIVE YOUR HANDS, TOO, A LOVELY COMPLEXION!

Allure starts at the finger-tips. Only lovely, smooth hands invite caresses! How vital they are to screen stars ... how much more vital to you! For your romance is real romance. And it's so simple to give your hands a lovely complexion, in spite of work and weather. After exposure, after your hands have been in water, and always at night, smooth on Hinds Honey and Almond Cream. Other lotions that are thick, gummy, quick-drying, merely "varnish" the surface. Hinds heals, softens, protects, because it is a rich, penetrating cream in liquid form. And it costs so little!

NOW IN A SMART NEW BOTTLE

Lovely DOLORES DEL RIO has exquisite hands. With Raoul Roulien in R.K.O.'s film, "Flying Down to Rio."

Try Hinds Cleansing Cream, too ... by the same makers. Delicate, light ... liquefies instantly, floats out dirt! ... 10c, 40c, 65c.

Reduce YOUR WAIST AND HIPS 3 INCHES IN 10 DAYS OR . . . it won't cost you one penny!

• This illustration of the Perfolastic Girdle also features the new Perfolastic Uplift Bandeau.

TEST . . . the PERFOLASTIC GIRDLE . . . at our expense!

"I REDUCED MY HIPS 9 INCHES," writes Miss Jean Healy . . "I reduced from 43 inches to 34½ inches" . . . writes Miss Brian.

● So many of our customers are delighted with the wonderful results obtained with this Perforated Rubber Reducing Girdle that we want you to try it for 10 days at our expense!

Massage-Like Action Reduces Quickly!

● The Girdle may be worn next to the body with perfect safety for it is ventilated to allow the skin to breathe. It works constantly while you walk, work, or sit . . . its massage-like action gently but persistently eliminating fat with every move you make.

Don't Wait Any Longer . . . Act Today

● You can prove to yourself quickly and definitely in 10 days whether or not this very efficient girdle will reduce your waist and hips THREE INCHES! You do not need to risk one penny . . . try it for 10 days . . . at no cost!

SEND FOR TEN DAY FREE TRIAL OFFER!

PERFOLASTIC, Inc.
Dept. 531 41 EAST 42nd ST., New York, N.Y.

Please send me FREE BOOKLET describing and illustrating the new Perfolastic Reducing Girdle, also sample of perforated Rubber and particulars of your 10-DAY FREE TRIAL OFFER.

Name ____________

Address ____________

City ________ State ________

Use Coupon or Send Name and Address on Penny Post Card

If You Met Max Baer

(Continued from page 33)

everyone shouted. "How do you know?"

"I just been watching her all morning," Max answered.

They wouldn't believe him until he had told them exactly what scenes had been taken and what costumes she had worn. They checked up with the assistant director and found it was all true.

This is how it happened: Max had thought it might be amusing to watch Garbo work. He didn't know one had to have a drag with the heavenly fathers to be allowed on her set. So he just went up to the door of the stage and asked to go in. The guard on the door explained that there was no admittance. And then Max looked at the guard and the guard looked at him and suddenly they began shaking hands and thumping each other on the back. Seems the guard had once been Max's sparring partner, so he said Max might go in and look at the set but the minute Garbo and the rest of the company arrived he must leave.

Max promised, but he had no more than gotten inside when Garbo appeared. He hid behind a flat and stayed there all morning peeping out at intervals to see The Garbo emote. And what was the poor guard to do? Go in and haul the future champ off the set? Well, it didn't seem feasable—so Max, his second day in Hollywood, saw what few people who have been in the studio eight years have ever seen.

MAX fought his first fight when he was nineteen. It was an impromptu battle at a school dance. He knocked his opponent out and the next day bought a sandbag and boxing togs. With these came his decision to become a fighter. In Oakland, California, he trained at the famous old Jimmy Duffy Gymnasium and while there was picked up by a manager. In his first professional fight—with an Indian, incidentally—he knocked the fellow to the floor four times in the first round and knocked him out in the second. Altogether he has fought forty-seven ring battles. Thirty-five were won by knockouts, seven he won by decisions and five he lost.

Jack Dempsey is Max's closet friend. Dempsey tells him what to do—as much as anyone can tell him what to do.

In the ring Max has one idiosyncrasy. If he sees a pretty girl at ringside he can no more help showing off before her than his friend, Garbo, can help running from people. So he prances around and looks over his shoulder to make sure she's watching his every move. In doing that he leaves himself wide open to his opponent's fists. But instead of being a bad thing, it's a very good thing. When he is actually hurt he begins to get mad and when he's mad he forgets the girl and starts in to fight.

On the set, during the first scene, he and Carnera played like a couple of kittenish lions. Max is a great one for a joke and thinks it's a scream to put tacks in the director's chair and things like that.

They told him—just before the divorce—that he was talking too freely about his wife, that it was wrong for him to say she was jealous of his career and older than he, etc., etc.

Max was surprised.

"I shouldn't talk like that?" he repeated.

"No, you shouldn't," his adviser said.

"Okay," said Max. "My mistake. I'll never do it again."

Head of the Family

(Continued from page 67)

case, it didn't happen. Mr. and Mrs. Pat O'Brien met the little girl, fell in love with her and gave her pretty dresses. Then Nancy Smith, a top-notch publicity woman, ran across the family and volunteered her services. When Cora Sue finally got her "break," it came through a stranger. A year after Mrs. Collins had come to Hollywood, she was standing on the Boulevard one day with Cora Sue. A woman touched her arm and asked, "Is the little girl in pictures?" Mrs. Collins confessed that was why she had come to California.

"Wait a minute," said the woman. Stepping into a drugstore, she telephoned Alice Calhoun. In a few days Cora Sue had an agent. And, within a few more, he had given her a chance at a part. Mrs. Collins was selling stockings when the call from the studio came, and the little girl had her first interview with a casting director alone. She vamped him shamelessly! And got the part.

And, of course, then other casting directors saw her on the screen—and other offers came.

Not that all these tales you hear of Hollywood's rich rewards are true. No. Cora Sue still lives in a tiny apartment and rides on street cars. But they're happy, that family. Cora Sue chatters of the day she will buy a home for her mama, a course at an art school for her sister and a trip to Europe for all of them. Six years old, she answers her fan mail herself, sitting at her own desk and using her own fountain pen. She has a kitten named Cuddles and a boy friend who lives next door. But, though romance is all very well, she has her career to think of, Cora Sue feels.

"Well, goodbye," she says abruptly to her beau. "I have a call in the morning and must get my sleep."

All of which tells you that she's a sweet lamb. But which does not tell you where she gets her astounding ability. As for that, there's no telling. She's a born actress, that's all there is to it, I guess.

Garbo Falls in Love

(Continued from page 12)

a man who had once loved her as few men have loved any woman. And who now, once more, but in such a different way, was dependent upon her for his life—for with Jack, his professional life is vital.

How different this is from the days when Gilbert and Garbo made "Flesh and the Devil," "Love" and "Woman of Affairs." Then he was in love with her, and he thought she returned his love. It was not difficult, then, to perform love scenes convincingly.

But now, when he is not before the camera, he sits in a far corner of the set and watches, watches this woman now so obviously, so intensely, in love with another man. And she does not care that he notices, even seems to flaunt this thing before him.

He can tell himself that it no longer matters to him what Garbo does, whom she loves. He has a devoted wife of his own. But say what you may, it is a keen, crushing blow to his vanity, and no one has ever said that Gilbert is not vain.

M-G-M holds an option on his services in case his performance in "Queen Christina" is successful. Will it be? Can the fire that he once possessed spring up again under such disquieting circumstances? Well, already they are talking of casting him in "The Merry Widow," for which Maurice Chevalier is scheduled.

But time alone will tell!

Clothes the Stars Wear

(Continued from page 71)

be possible that the Claudette Colbert dress would be among them?

Her trembling fingers reverently pushed back one dress after another where they hung on the rack. She expected, it must be confessed, any moment to be waked from her dream. And there—the last one—believe it or not, was the Claudette Colbert dress with all the cuts and stitches just as Claudette had worn it. But, of course, Polly knew she could never afford it. Her slender clothes allowance only admitted of a fifteen dollar dress now and then—perhaps, sometimes, for a very special occasion, she could go as high as twenty. So, pondering and longing, she fumbled for the price ticket.

Then she felt certain she must be dreaming. She couldn't believe her own eyes—$15.75. She was sure it said that. But she'd make certain. She wasn't going to make a fool of herself right out in public.

She dropped the tag like a hot potato and timidly, almost beseechingly, she begged the salesgirl near her, "Please tell me the price of this dress?" she asked. That was the price, the same one she had seen on the ticket.

The Smartest Women Use
FAOEN BEAUTY AIDS

—yet they cost
ONLY 10¢

FAOEN
FAOEN
FAOEN Poudre

You can pay $1 or more for your lipstick, rouge and face powder. BUT, you cannot buy greater purity or finer quality than that found in Faoen Beauty Aids at 10¢! Does that sound unbelievable? Then read this report from a famous Research Laboratory:—"Every Faoen product tested is as pure and fine as products of like nature sold for $1, $2 or $3." No wonder, in this new age of common-sense buying, smart women everywhere are turning to Faoen Beauty Aids!

FAOEN PERFUMES, No. 3, 12 and 19, are captivating odeurs that have the long-lasting quality of expensive imported perfumes

● CLEANSING CREAM • COLD CREAM
FACE POWDER • ROUGES • PERFUMES

PARK & TILFORD'S
FAOEN
(FAY-ON)
Beauty Aids

10¢ each at
the better 5 & 10¢ Stores

TO STOP A COLD QUICK

—Treat it in the First or Dry Stage!

A COLD is nothing to treat lightly. It may end in something serious. A cold is an internal infection—keep that in mind. It is an infection that usually passes thru three stages.

The first—the Dry stage, the first 24 hours. The second—the Watery Secretion stage, from 1 to 3 days. The third, the Mucous Secretion stage.

The 4 Effects Necessary

The thing to take upon catching cold is Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. It is expressly a cold remedy and it does the four things necessary.

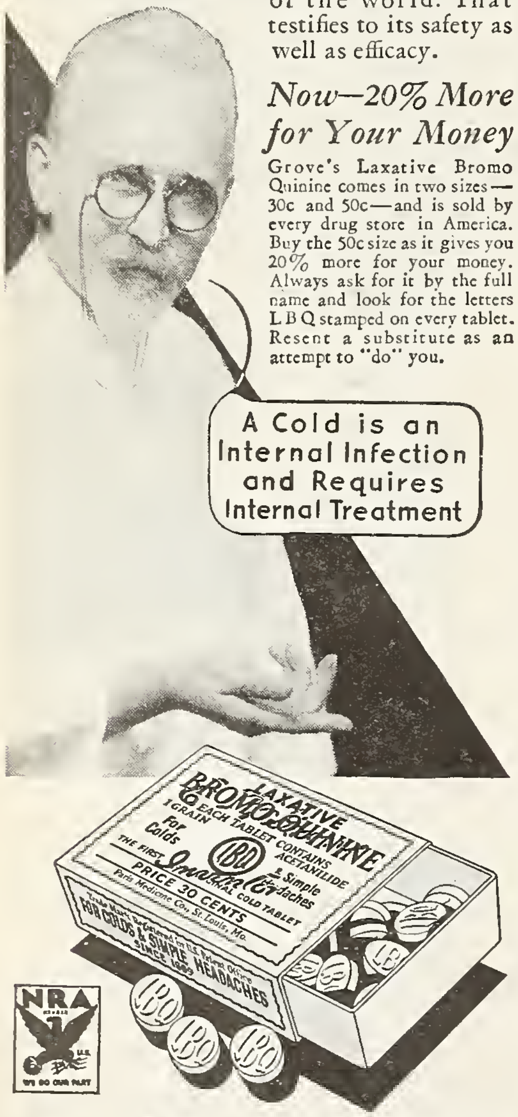
First, it opens the bowels, gently, but effectively, the first step in expelling a cold. Second, it combats the cold germs in the system and reduces the fever. Third, it relieves the headache and that grippy feeling. Fourth, it tones the system and helps fortify against further attack.

This is the treatment a cold requires and anything less is taking chances.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is utterly harmless and perfectly safe to take. It is, and has been for years, the leading cold and grippe tablet of the world. That testifies to its safety as well as efficacy.

Now—20% More for Your Money

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine comes in two sizes—30c and 50c—and is sold by every drug store in America. Buy the 50c size as it gives you 20% more for your money. Always ask for it by the full name and look for the letters L B Q stamped on every tablet. Resent a substitute as an attempt to "do" you.



GROVE'S LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE

"Does it come in size 14?"

"Yes, certainly," was the prompt reply.

Well, that evening, Polly's family looked upon her with a new respect. She had got her wish, and in spite of themselves, her folks could not help but admire her appearance. She had been right after all, had chosen well, and more than that she did look a little like Claudette Colbert, though they hated to admit it.

WHAT was more, Polly Smith knew in her heart that this wasn't the last movie star's dress she would own. She meant to go on indefinitely dressing as the movie actresses dressed. There was that shop and there she would do her buying, or she'd know the reason why, for every last stitch she wore from that day on.

Polly had a lot of sense, really, for behind the creation of the star's wardrobes lie a lot of skill, originality and knowledge of what is good taste in style. It must be so, for they lead the younger world of fashion and they cannot afford to make a misstep. Young American eyes are too quick to pick a flaw, too sensitive to any lack of style sense.

Over this broad American country are scattered three hundred and fifty cinema shops, tucked away here and there in larger emporiums, shining like jewels in varied settings. There you can find selected fashions from popular screen plays—something, many things, in fact, to suit the types of all of you. And you can be certain of their fashion rightness. No need to ponder over that. They have the sanction of fashion wise people behind them. They have been worn by those who know how to choose and how to carry them. They are right from every angle.

They say, in these shops, that customers come in with pages from MODERN SCREEN gripped in their hands, asking, "Do you have this dress or that, shown in the illustration?"

What a relief to have fashion responsibility removed from your shoulders. Another thing! Stars' clothes are not necessarily seasonal, meaning that as far as style is concerned, they can go on from summer to winter and through the between seasons. You see, the movies are that way. They're produced in the North, the South, the East, the West, throughout the period of a year, maybe two. The clothes the stars wear must be so fashion-right that they will be knockouts over all that area and period.

I hate to say, "I told you so," but that is what I have always been preaching. If a dress is absolutely O.K. for style, it will last. You don't have to be so horribly seasonal when you know your style. Well, the stars and their fashion advisers really do know, so all you have to do is to follow the lead, and that's a happy enough thing. You want to do it, so enjoy yourselves. Now it can be done.

When you realize that most of the dresses in these Cinema Shops (and don't forget there is one near you) can be bought for from ten to twenty dollars—a few go as high as thirty-nine fifty, then you know they are in your class, and perfect they are in every detail.

If you want to know the name of the Cinema Shop in your own neighborhood, or the prices of the frocks shown on these pages, write to Margery Wells, MODERN SCREEN, and the information will be sent to you.

With Heartbreak Between the Lines

(Continued from page 56)

perseverance that he found him. For the young man turned out to be not a travelled cosmopolite at all, but the son of an obscure butcher, a boy who never had crossed the boundaries of his native state.

Are this young letter-writers' phrases the phrases of someone else which have appealed to him, or is he so drenched in the travel magazines he reads that he knows intimately both things and places he never has seen? It would be difficult to say. But this much seems certain:

Hungry for intellectual companionship and eager for stimulating contacts, this young boy writes Miriam hoping to establish a correspondence with her which will in some measure compensate him for the limited boundaries of his existence.

Human beings hunger for other things than food.

Any number of charities, for instance, offer shelter and medical care to people who are in need of these things. But charity robes at best are ugly. And young girls long for soft, fine things. So, like all the rest, these two write to the movie stars in Hollywood, that land of plenty.

"Dear Marlene Dietrich," their letter goes:

> "We are a couple of poor girls and we have been in a sanitorium for a year. Our parents haven't been working since the depression started. We are in need of clothing that you wear in a sanitorium, for instance, bath robes, pajamas, sweaters and etc. Things that you don't need. Will you kindly notify your friends and see if they could spare a few things. We will appreciate it very much if you do us this favor.
>
> ____________"

Sometimes letters come from men and women a little mad. Like the man who writes Myrna Loy insisting he is a descendant of a high priest. He claims to have received messages to the effect that Myrna is the reincarnation of a princess dead for centuries. It is vital, he says, that he be near her inasmuch as her people constantly send her messages and letters through him.

THERE are begging letters by the hundreds. Some of them come from professional beggars. Others come from men and women in need. Like the man who wrote Richard Dix.

"Dear Sir," his letter read:

"Please do not be angry when you read this letter as I am not what you might think. I have a nice job coming up the 15th of this month. Which will be the first steady job in 14 months. The job calls for neatness and fairly good clothes. Will be running an elevator, wages $100 per month.

"I beg you to loan me enough to get myself in shape so I can accept the job. I know I am taking a desperate chance by doing this, but I have nothing except what is on my back.

"I really need a pair of shoes. And I could get a suit of clothes for $11.90. I don't think your clothes would fit me as I am only 5 ft. 4½ inches in height, 47 years old.

"If you think you can help me by sending me enough to get myself in shape for the job I will be ever thankful to you. Whatever amount you send me I will pay back part of it twice a month.

"Won't you please give me a fighting chance to get out of the breadline and back in life where I belong.

"Yours respt.

————."

SOMETIMES a secretary is so touched by a letter that the star to whom it is addressed sees it. Occasionally this letter will make an equally strong appeal to the star, it will be investigated, and something done about it.

Not long ago Mary Pickford received an air-mail letter from a woman in an eastern state. This woman wrote that she had been awakened at midnight and advised by the press that her son in Los Angeles had shot himself. She pleaded with Mary to go to see her boy, to try and cheer him up. She wrote Mary, she explained, because she always had been impressed with Mary's love for her own mother.

Immediately Mary wired that mother, penniless and powerless in her little eastern village, that she would do what she could. She put her secretary to work locating the boy. Eventually they found him in the psychopathic ward of a Los Angeles hospital. When he recovered sufficiently Mary arranged for him to work on the United Artists' lot and finally for him to return east to his mother.

Other stars have done similar things.

Marie Dressler is very careful about answering the scores of letters she gets from young girls asking her advice in regard to their personal problems.

The late Louise Closser Hale received innumerable letters from elderly people. Women mostly.

"Dear Mrs. Hale," one mother wrote:

"I am writing to ask if you could get me some work to do in the

Charlie Chase and a player in "Arabian Tights"

"Ah, Sahib, you Legionnaires are so Mysterious!"

SHE: . . . Tell me, how did you ever come to join the Foreign Legion and forsake your pleasant country for this hot desert?

HE: That, mademoiselle, I can never divulge. And please don't speak of it again, for I am trying hard to forget. I have cut myself off completely from my native land, and I want nothing to remind me of it.

SHE: Absolutely nothing?

HE: Well—er—nothing except my monthly copy of

FILM FUN

The Screen's Only Humor Magazine

Attention! Don't forget to buy your January issue now at the nearest newsstand

PEGGY GETS REALLY KISSED

SATURDAY
GOOD NIGHT . . . SEE YOU NEXT WEEK–
PECK!
–THOUGHT–
HE KISSES ME LIKE I WAS A POST . . . AREN'T MY LIPS ATTRACTIVE?
SUNDAY
JEAN SARGENT, THE BROADWAY STAR, SPEAKING– "FOR ALLURING LIPS THE MOVIE STARS AND THE GIRLS IN THE BROADWAY SHOWS USE A SPECIAL LIPSTICK . . . CALLED KISSPROOF . . . THEY COULD PAY ANY PRICE . . . YET YOU CAN GET KISSPROOF LIPSTICK IN THE 10¢ STORE JUST TRY IT!"
SHE DECIDES TO TRY KISSPROOF
NEXT SATURDAY
OH, I COULD EAT YOU UP . . . YOUR LIPS ARE IRRESISTIBLE TODAY . . .
WELL, DEAR, THEY'RE THE KISSPROOF KIND . . .

Try the Stage and Movie Lipstick

Have the same "lip appeal" that the movie stars and Broadway actresses have. Use the same lipstick! It is the new KISSPROOF Indelible Lipstick—Special Theatrical Color! This lipstick is so wonderful, it has been placed by the make-up experts in the dressing rooms of the Hollywood Studios and New York Theatres! Price is no object here—but the experts have found that inexpensive KISSPROOF gives matchless allure to the actresses. It will do the same for you.

Use it tonight! You will be thrilled! You can get it in all shades, including the new Special Theatrical Color, at any toilet goods counter and at the 10¢ stores.

Kissproof
Indelible LIPSTICK

movie studios. I could play mother parts. I am sixty-eight and have white hair.

"My two sons are married. I don't see much of one because he lives in Canada and has two children and he can't afford to come to see me. My other boy does well but his wife is selfish and I know he has a hard time even to spare me what little he does.

"I am not afraid of hard work. We never had much money, but I used to manage so we could live in a good neighborhood and my boys could have a nice home. My boy met his wife in that neighborhood I saved to live in. I'm not narrow, but it worries me to see the way things are going. They drink too much. It would be better all around if I could earn a little something for myself.

"Please excuse this letter, but I had to write to someone and I can't let my friends know the way I feel. Sometimes they criticize my daughter-in-law and I have to stand up for her. My boy loves her.

"Your Friend,

——————."

So it goes. . . .

There is the weary wife, sick at losing her husband's love, seeking to recapture her lost beauty. . . .

There is the once popular girl of seventeen unable to leave a farm now because she must do the work of a hired man and she has no pretty clothes. . . .

There is the obscure butcher's son who dreams of the sights and tastes and smells of far lands. . . .

To look into the stars' mail-bag is to find heartaches between the lines.

Hollywood Charm Gossip

(Continued from page 74)

● While we're on the subject, Mary Brian, whose gorgeous violet eyes have enchanted many a lad, believes a natural eyebrow line is more becoming to her type of person than the narrow plucked eyebrow. This latter, she believes, should be worn only by exotic gals like Marlene Dietrich and Jean Harlow. Mary's eyebrows are quite wide and, incidentally, always innocent of any makeup.

● Joan Crawford's favorite gown is plain satin in that new luscious shade called Wild Blackberry . . . Carole Lombard has a pair of gloves to go with every costume, usually made of the same material . . . Jean Harlow has a beaded evening bag shaped like a miniature muff . . . Irene Dunne fastens a twisted gold chain at her neck, with two clips, to lend decoration to a severe street outfit.

● Fay Wray's new earrings are really a sight to behold. Platinum encrusted with diamonds and emeralds. They extend all the way around the ear, following the natural curve of the ear. Naturally, when Fay dons these sumptuous ear gadgets, her hair is worn well back of her ears.

● Open-work sandals continue to be the smart footwear for evening, even though it be winter. Gold and silver are the most popular, and are worn with any and every shade of gown. The heel is getting much attention. Rhinestone or diamond studded ones are gudgeous for evening, and colored ones are good for either evening or daytime. Marlene Dietrich has a pair of black patent leather shoes with spiked red enamel heels that are veddy smert.

● Dolores Del Rio wears two rings, exact duplicates, one on each hand . . . Pert Kelton has a new snappy little hat patterned after the football helmet. It's called the Gridiron Bonnet . . . Ann Harding has a green wool street dress with the hugest metal buttons in Hollywood. They're exactly four inches across.

● We can't figure out why, but we know for a fact Dorothy Tree (Columbia's new protegé) dabs a wee line of rouge from the tip of her nose to the top of her upper lip.

● Mae West in full formal attire—now that's something to walk a mile for! She appeared at the Colony Club in a black net gown that sprayed out over the arms and around the bottom and set off the West—er—personality to distinct advantage. The bodice and flares were studded with rhinestones and she wore an ermine wrap lined with silver crepe.

Not long after that, your "look-out" spied her at a very swanky party given by a studio executive. She was poured into a pomegranate red velvet that had one of those push-up bosoms (Mae hasn't gone in for high necks, you know) and a train that she carried attached to a little loop about her wrist when she danced. That loop demanded investigation. Mae told us she has them snapped on to all her trains so that it's a simple matter to handle them when the music starts.

● Seen at the races: Lyle Talbot in a long, belted swagger coat of brown antelope suede. Warren William in a checkered cap and the loudest of red scarfs, tied bandana fashion around his neck. (Why is it the most conservative of men like brilliant colors?) Clark Gable in a yellow sweater vest and dark brown suit. And over against the rails, Joan Crawford, shouting encouragement to her favorite, was in a black wool jacket that was all ridged and puckered. It accompanied a black wool frock and her ascot scarf was brilliant red.

The Modern Hostess

(Continued from page 76)

canned chicken with tomato soup, noodles, mushrooms and half a dozen other things, that dish has graduated and it is now something which, far from being made on the spur of the moment, is fixed ahead of time.

"Another of Bill's triumphs involves eggs and canned corned beef hash," continued Bill's wife. "This dish is made by removing the hash from the can so that it comes out in one piece. Then you cut it into slices about an inch and a half thick. Butter these slices on each side and fry them and, when they are done, park a poached egg on top of each slice. With this, serve plenty of chili sauce and hot rolls."

"And don't forget my Chili Con Carne. Why that dish is a stroke of pure genius!"

SO, you'll find it in this month's collection of Modern Screen Star Recipes, which includes, besides the Quick Chili Con Carne and the Corn and Tomatoes, a recipe for a really easy dessert—Apple Butter Roll. Everyone in the family will adore this and the Chicken à la Gargan pictured at the beginning of this article.

Doubtless you will discover that the secret of the success of these dishes is seasoning.

Not only are there many canned foods, but many ways in which they can be pepped up. Canned cream soups, for instance, attain instant magnificence when topped with a spoonful of salted whipped cream and a dusting of minced parsley or paprika. Canned spaghetti achieves distinction with the addition of bits of chopped celery, green pepper, pimiento or onion, and a sprinkling of grated cheese.

Combinations are important, too, such as serving noodles with chipped beef, peas with creamed canned salmon on toast, brown bread (which can be purchased in a can) with baked beans. These are but a few suggestions for quick, hunger-satisfying meals.

HERE is a recipe for an excellent luncheon, supper or late-at-night dish. But don't forget, there are four more recipes just waiting for that coupon. We're sure you'll enjoy each and every one of the Gargan treats and that you will find them useful every time you want to assemble something tasty in a short time. So be sure to send for them now.

ASPARAGUS AND EGGS PIQUANTE

Canned asparagus
Poached eggs
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1½ cups scalded milk
¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ cup grated cheese
Toast
Canned pimiento

Are You A COLDS-SUSCEPTIBLE?

Do You CATCH COLD Easily?

Do Your Colds Hang On ..AND ON?

If you have one miserable cold after another—if you have four or more colds a year—you're what medical authorities call a "Colds-Susceptible." Very important to you, then, is the new aid in preventing colds, Vicks Nose & Throat Drops. Used at that first nasal irritation or sneeze, they aid in avoiding many colds altogether.

If you have much trouble in 'throwing off colds . . . you're a Colds-Susceptible! To help reduce the severity and duration of a cold, use the modern method of treating colds—Vicks VapoRub. Just rub it on throat and chest at bedtime. Like a poultice it "draws out" tightness. And all night long its medicated vapors bring soothing relief.

To PREVENT Many Colds

VICKS NOSE DROPS

Welcome News For COLDS-SUSCEPTIBLES!

In thousands of clinical tests . . . supervised by physicians . . . Vicks Plan for better Control of Colds has greatly reduced the number and duration of colds, has cut their dangers and expense. The Plan is fully explained in each Vicks package.

To END a Cold Sooner

VICKS VAPORUB

VICKS PLAN FOR BETTER CONTROL OF COLDS

Want Some Money?

Decorate Art Novelties at Home

Our big FREE Book in colors tells how. New methods of home decoration simply explained so anyone can learn quickly without previous training. Book contains many handsome color illustrations. Our system is amazingly easy to learn and profits are larger than in almost any other business. You can produce beautiful, finished art objects right from the start by our new three step method. We show you how to begin making money at once.

No Canvassing New "Automatic Salesman" furnished you. No selling or canvassing necessary. Assures immediate income opportunity up to $35 a week and more. Everything furnished including Complete Artist's Outfit FREE OF EXTRA COST. Write now for Book and full details—absolutely FREE. Be the first in your community!

FIRESIDE INDUSTRIES
Dept. 147-A Adrian, Mich.

THE INSULT THAT MADE A MAN OUT OF "MAC"

LISTEN—I'LL WINK AT YOUR GIRL ANYTIME I FEEL LIKE IT! I'D SMASH YOUR FACE, SKINNY—ONLY YOU MIGHT FALL APART!
THE BIG BULLY! I'LL GET EVEN SOME DAY.
OH, DON'T BOTHER, "LITTLE BOY"!.... WELL, GOODBYE.
DARN IT! I'M SICK OF BEING A SCARECROW! CHARLES ATLAS SAYS HE CAN GIVE ME A REAL BODY. I'LL GAMBLE A STAMP AND GET HIS FREE BOOK!
BOY! IT DIDN'T TAKE ATLAS LONG TO DO THIS FOR ME! LOOK HOW THOSE MUSCLES BULGE!...... THAT BIG STIFF WON'T DARE INSULT ME NOW!
WHAM!—NOW IT'S YOUR TURN TO "FALL APART." NOW BEAT IT!
OH MAC! YOU ARE A REAL MAN AFTER ALL!
CHARLES ATLAS
(Actual Photo)

This 97-lb. Weakling Became "World's Most Perfectly Developed Man"

They used to think there wasn't much hope for me. I was a 97-pound scarecrow. Then I discovered Dynamic-Tension. It gave me the body that twice won the title, "The World's Most Perfectly Developed Man." Now I'll give you PROOF in just 7 days that my same method can make YOU a NEW MAN of giant power and energy

I'LL PROVE You Can Have a Body Like Mine!

No "ifs"—"ands"—or "maybes." Where do you want powerful muscles? Are you fat and flabby? Or skinny and gawky? Are you short-winded, pepless? Do you hold back and let others walk off with the prettiest girls, the best jobs? Give me just 7 days! I'll PROVE that Dynamic-Tension—without any pills, or unnatural dieting or weights and pulleys—can make you a healthy, confident, powerful HE-MAN! Mail Coupon NOW for my illustrated book. Address me personally: CHARLES ATLAS, Dept. 87-A, 133 East 23rd St., New York City.

CHARLES ATLAS, Dept. 87-A,
133 East 23rd Street, New York City.

I want the proof that your system of Dynamic-Tension will make a New Man of me—give me a healthy, husky body, and big muscle development. Send me your free book, "Everlasting Health and Strength."

Name..
(Please print or write plainly)

Address..

City................................State....................

© 1933, C. A. Ltd.

Repenting at Leisure

(Continued from page 57)

or how—he would come home. He had had innumerable automobile accidents. Judith was frightened stiff every time she knew he was driving a car. One of the accidents ended in a manslaughter trial—to which Judith went with him—and stuck by him—and helped him in every way she could.

Argue with him she would, of course. There was the time for instance, when he came home eager with enthusiasm.

"Listen, baby," he said to her, "I'm going to be rich. You're going to be wearing diamond bracelets up to here—and you'll be swathed in sables. We've got to take all the money we have and put it in a fine investment that a friend of mine just let me in on."

With her heart sinking Judith asked, "What is the investment, Gus?"

He smiled—that charming, ingratiating smile. "I know it sounds like a sucker game, baby. But this one is on the level. It's a marvelous gold mine!"

The next morning she was out early consulting with their lawyer. He began work on it immediately and in a couple of days she had all the data to show Gus that it was just a fantastic scheme.

She had the absolute proof. But would he believe it? Would he believe her? He would not! Time and time again he invested his money in fake schemes.

NOTHING could dampen his good spirits. Each time he had an accident, each time he lied to Judith, each time he made her hopelessly miserable by staying out all night, each time he lost his money he would promise solemnly that this was the last time.

At first she believed him. She would say, "He has changed—I know it." And for a few days he would be an angel. But he could only keep his promises for a few days. And those maddening nights when she was alone and the ring of the telephone sent a knife of terror through her heart would begin again.

Then she knew that she must do something to make a living so she could leave him. She went back to dramatic school. She wanted nothing, as I've said, but a home and a good husband and children. But these things apparently were not to be for her.

Gus disapproved of dramatics. He wanted her to go on parties with him all the time. He couldn't understand why she insisted upon studying. And all the time she was learning an art that would, she felt, eventually release her from the bondage of marriage to such a charming but thoroughly irresponsible person, her heart was torn by the continual uncertainty of life with Gus.

She had married in haste—fallen for his sweetness and charm. She was repenting now.

It was while she was in New York trying to crash Broadway that she secured a screen test. And that led to a contract with Paramount. Then—at last—she was free. She was independent of him. She could get a divorce without having to accept alimony.

But was she free? How could she be sure? Gus had promised to give her her freedom. But Gus had promised so many things—and had kept so few.

In this state of mind she arrived in Hollywood. To the studio she explained the situation and they told her it was best to keep quiet about her marriage.

ONE day she met Gary Cooper on the lot. She saw him several times at the studio and chatted with him and he seemed to be a nice sort of lad—quiet and understanding. So one night, at a party, she sought his advice.

She told him something about Gus and asked him, "Do you really think the studio is doing right in demanding my silence? You know much more about Hollywood than I do. I don't want to jeopardize my career when it's only just beginning!"

Gary sided with the studio. He thought a policy of secrecy was best.

But while they were talking a photographer snapped their pictures together. You could tell by that picture that they were in earnest conversation and since every time Gary Cooper is photographed with a new girl, it's news—that photograph went out over the country and was printed (with appropriate captions) in most of the newspapers and magazines.

In the East Gus saw it and read the caption: "Gary Cooper's new flame." "Hollywood's latest romance," etc., etc. And the next thing that happened was that Gus appeared in Hollywood.

For he had not believed Judith when she said that she wanted her freedom. He had thought that this going to Hollywood was just a lark and that, of course, she would come back to him.

When he saw the picture of her and Gary in the paper he thought that it was time to stop this Hollywood lark. But when he arrived in Hollywood he found that Judith had changed. She was no longer the little wife who would forgive him his lies.

She was free now—and independent. She had made a remarkable success, considering that she had been in Hollywood so short a time. This was what she had been waiting for, for two years—this moment when she could assert her freedom. And there was no budging her now—no matter what he did.

So, at last, Judith is free. Living a new life. And although she is free from worry, one could not say she is happy.

Two years of misery and unhappiness she has had and although she is her own woman now she has been left embittered.

"I repented at leisure," she said. "I know something about marriage I didn't know before. I am skeptical of everyone. I believe nothing. Perhaps I'll change—but right now I feel that I never, never want to be married again."

Ten Hollywood Stories

(Continued from page 17)

through stating my side and then I'll lisshen to you. You go 'round saying you know more people in this club than I know, don't you? Just answer me that!"

"Why, I never said any such——"

"Kindly lemme get a word in edgeways, if you please," said the actor with elaborate politeness. "You say you know more members of thish club 'en I do—more than anybody knows? A'right, then, you answer me thish: Do you know Jerome Lawrence—he'sh member here?"

"Certainly I know him," said the badgered one. "As it happens, I also know his brother, Oscar, who looks so much like him."

"Ah, hah!" exulted the intoxicated one, with the air of having led an unwilling witness into a damaging admission. "You say you know Jerome Lawrence and you say you know his brother Oscar that looks so much like him? Well, then you know so mush, tell me thish: Whish one of 'em looks the most alike?"

● For two hours, pausing only to catch his breath, a certain he-idol of the silver screen told Frank Case of the Algonquin Hotel, how good he, the said he-idol, was. The subject seemed to fascinate him. He went on and on and on, for reel after reel, relating the picturesque details of his glamorous career, describing the high lights of his own overpowering personality, listing the tally of his own successes, quoting from memory copious extracts out of favorable press notices. Finally the patient listener began to fidget.

"And now, Mr. Case," exclaimed the actor, "I've talked long enough about myself! It's your turn to give me your views. Tell me, what do you think of my latest picture?"

● As one may gather who reads the despatches from Hollywood, not all the kings and queens of the movie world are heavily burdened with education. In fact, I violate no confidence but merely reveal a somewhat commonly known trade secret when I say that some of our screen stars really do not write the articles on art and culture and kindred subjects which appear from time to time in moving picture magazines under their famous names. The press-agent does the work; they merely take the credit for it.

There is one rarely beautiful creature whose earlier mental cultivation was somewhat neglected. There are still a good many topics upon which she is ignorant. In fact, one man said of her once that the only word of two syllables that she knew, was fillum; and another, who had known her before she became illustrious, declared that they had to burn down the schoolhouse in order to get her out of the second grade.

This young woman was sitting in a Beverly Hills restaurant giving the

Now a Concentrated Antiseptic Mouth Wash

Five Star
ANTISEPTIC
For MOUTH WASH, GARGLE and general use. A powerful, safe antiseptic in powdered form. Penetrating, pleasant-tasting . . . combats halitosis.
JUST MIX WITH WATER
MAKES ONE PINT
A WILDROOT PRODUCT

10c MAKES A PINT

A WILDROOT PRODUCT
—tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau.

You Mix It With Water At Home

Thousands no longer pay high prices for mouth wash. They have learned that Five Star Antiseptic is safe, pleasant tasting, amazingly effective, yet goes three to ten times as far.

Scientists who tested this new discovery against other well-known antiseptics were amazed at its extraordinary penetration.

A leading bacteriologist said: "Five Star Antiseptic not only kills germs rapidly, but has a far more lasting effect in preventing bacterial growth in the mouth."

Yet because it is a powder—you mix it with water yourself—Five Star Antiseptic costs you only 10c a pint. Get a package today!

SHE stared into the muzzle of his gun and her eyes were dark with excitement. Her lips were slightly parted, the nostrils dilated.

"A stick-up?" she asked.

"A stick-up," he answered, "and if you'll be so kind, please hand over that purse."

She made a little grimace.

"Why pick on me?" she asked. "There are so many others who have more and . . . "

He pushed the muzzle of the gun towards the bare flesh of her perfectly formed throat.

"No argument," he said. "Pass over the purse."

She handed it to him. Her fingers went to the clasp of a diamond ornament.

He shook his head.

"No," he said, "you may keep that."

Her eyes showed astonishment.

His left hand extracted a lacy handkerchief from the purse. His eye caught the embroidered letter.

"Your initial?" he asked.

"Yes, of course," she said. "It's A for Anita."

"Ah! And the last name?"

"Is that," she asked, "any of your business?"

He bowed and his even, white teeth glinted under the line of his black mask.

"It is always so much more satisfactory," he said, "to know the identities of the persons one robs."

"I feel under no obligations to add to your satisfaction," she told him icily.

"Very well," he said, prowling around in the purse, "perhaps I can find a card. Ah, here. Miss Anita Sendwick."

She gave him an icy stare of disdain, doing nothing to acknowledge or deny her identity.

He took the card and the handkerchief, dropped both in his pocket, closed the purse and returned it to her.

"All right," he said, "you may drive on."

Her face showed utter incredulity.

"Drive on where?" she asked. "You're not taking me with you?"

He shook his head.

"You don't mean," she exclaimed, "that this is all you want?"

What was his reply? And what did this amazing stick-up man really want? Yau'll find the thrilling answer in "Behind the Mask," a complete navelette in the December issue of ALL DETECTIVE MAGAZINE. Get a copy today and enjoy the many other first-rate detective staries in this absarbing magazine. It's at the nearest newstand now—and only 10c. Ask for ALL-DETECTIVE!

Hands That He Adores — Cherish Their Charm!

Always, men are sensitive to the allurement of soft, fair, smooth-textured hands . . . Wise is the woman who keeps her hands at their loveliest, no matter how busy they may be!

With Pacquin's, that is easy! This marvellously penetrating cream actually restores to the skin the natural softening oils which are constantly being lost by exposure to water and weather. You'll be delighted at the way it preserves the supple, youthful texture and fairness of the skin! (Doctors and nurses, whose hands need constant sterilization, use Pacquin's for its soothing, softening protection.)

Try Pacquin's for a week. You'll find it different from all ordinary hand creams—and surprisingly economical because a little pat goes so far!

don't try to hide your hands—use

Pacquin's
Pacquin's
HAND CREAM

In convenient sized jars, priced 10¢ to $1.00. Also Pacquin's Cold Cream, Vanishing Cream, Lemon Cream, and Cleansing Cream.

Pacquin Laboratories Corporation, New York

crowd, as the saying goes, an eyeful. Her fragile loveliness showed to particular effectiveness in the costume she wore.

A professional rival was stirred by the spectacle to pay the vision a sincere compliment. She arose from her place, crossed the room and, bending over the star, said to her:

"My dear, you look tonight like a bit of Italian Renaissance."

"Is that so?" snapped back the beauty. "Well, just lemme tell you something—you don't look so doggone good your own-self, neither!"

● Into the "brain room" of his studio marched a celebrated independent producer and on the table before his staff of directors, editors and technicians, he slapped down a thick sheaf of typewritten sheets.

"Gentlemen," he said impressively, after a short but dramatic pause, "in twenty years experience producing moving pictures, this is unique. This here is absolutely, positiffly the only poifect script I have ever seen in my life. And I tell you that before we start altering it!"

● At one of the big plants they were making a movie dealing with Scriptural times. One scene showed the court of a savage potentate. For the role of the monarch a huge, coal-black Afro-American was selected. He made his entrance, scantily garbed in barbaric trappings. For added realism, it was decreed that over his shoulders should be draped a live leopard. Just before the animal was brought out of her cage, her trainer gave her a shot of morphine to keep her docile and quiet. She was a lady-leopard.

A small negro, newly arrived in California from Texas, was detailed to accompany the giant on his triumphant entry and to fan him with a huge ostrich-plume fan. The costume of this supernumerary consisted of a breech-cloth and an ankle-bracelet. He took himself and his role very seriously, which, of course, was exactly what the director desired. In advance, he was warned that no matter what happened, he must continue to fan the savage king until ordered to leave off. A slip on his part might ruin the whole film.

Midway of the scene, the leopard suddenly woke up. Presumably, the dope was dying out in the spotted beast. She emitted a snarl and began to wiggle off her perch upon the big black man's shoulders. With one hand he grabbed her by the neck and held the spitting, squalling creature at arm's length.

There was an instantaneous scatteration. The director, the cameraman and the supporting members of the cast, beat it for places of safety. Only the little darky held his ground. Mindful of his instructions, he continued the fanning operation; but the fan trembled and quivered in his grip, and his rolling eyes were focussed on the struggling leopard, and out of the corner of his mouth, with all the fervor of which he was capable, he entreated the big negro over and over again in these words:

"Do not cast her aside, brother! Tha's all I asts you—do not cast her aside!"

● Probably most of the readers of this periodical are familiar with the story of the negro who worked as an extra at one of the Hollywood studios, and who, in the filming of a scene purporting to show an African jungle, was called upon to enter a camouflaged cage containing a performing lion. The prospect did not appeal to the candidate. He demurred.

"What's the matter with you?" said the assistant director. "That lion's not going to hurt you. That lion was brought up on milk."

"So wuz I brung up on milk," said the unhappy darky, "but I eats meat once in a while now."

Martyrs to Ambition

(Continued from page 34)

the other absent person.

I have no doubt that all these lovely and talented young women are very much in love with their absent husbands, but I am wondering how long it can last. After all, habits are so easy to form. You can make the habit of getting along without the person you love best in the world. You can forget each other's language. And you can find that, after all, the major part of your existence is your work, your own set of friends, the language they talk, and your ambition—while love and a husband can prove to be only a minor affair, an interlude—charming, delightful and exciting, but just an interlude.

You can't think in terms of—I—I—I—which is the language ambition speaks and not sacrifice both love and friendship. Friends, perhaps, will understand, they will know the job comes first. But the man you marry won't understand. How can he? It is ingrained in man's nature to believe, whether he knows it or not, that the marriage must come first, the man, the home, the children. And, after all, whether you agree or not, it is a pretty sound idea, for it is the idea which has kept the world turning for a number of centuries.

AND here's another case, an interesting one, which has nothing to do with love. It's the case of Garbo. If, as has been said, she suffers from that shyness, that authentic fear of people which is a disease to which the medical men have given the long term of agoraphobia, then her career must be a torture to her. Never to have any privacy save that for which she fights! Never to have any real holiday away from the curious, save those spent in Sweden! She spent a while at home not long ago, didn't she? But she came back. Of course she came back! Ambition is a bright torch burning through her lovely body and in her strange eyes. She would rather suffer than give up that ambition.

But I am not concerned so much with the stars. I am concerned with the people who never reach headlines, and rarely get work, the people no one knows, the hundreds of people driven by ambition, who suffer and sweat and fail. The girls and boys who leave home, family, friends, jobs, for ambition. Who very often sacrifice moral standards to ambition. Who give up everything and get nowhere, martyrs to ambition, misguided, pathetic, tragic.

Ambition is good. It can be a clean flame. But never let it consume you. And I recently came to the conclusion, after reading many biographies of great people, that the happiest person in the world is the obscure person, living a balanced, hard-working, serene and normal life, the person whose ambition will never lead him or her into the dangerous byways and highways upon which so many great men and women, and men and women not so great, have been led; and upon which not a few of them have perished.

Reviews

(Continued from page 8)

MAN'S CASTLE (Columbia)

Excellent. Directed by the same master hand that turned out "Seventh Heaven," this film is another beautiful, poignantly human romance. A bouquet to Frank Borzage for another masterpiece.

Spencer Tracy plays Bill, the happy-go-lucky chap who works just long enough to provide himself with a roof over his head and a good meal now and then. Luxuries he knows nothing about. In the park, while feeding the pigeons, he meets Trina (Loretta Young). Her pathetic, "Wish I could get down there with the pigeons" softens his heart and he takes her to a restaurant . . . . and later to his shack in Shanty Town, which becomes their "castle." They marry . . .

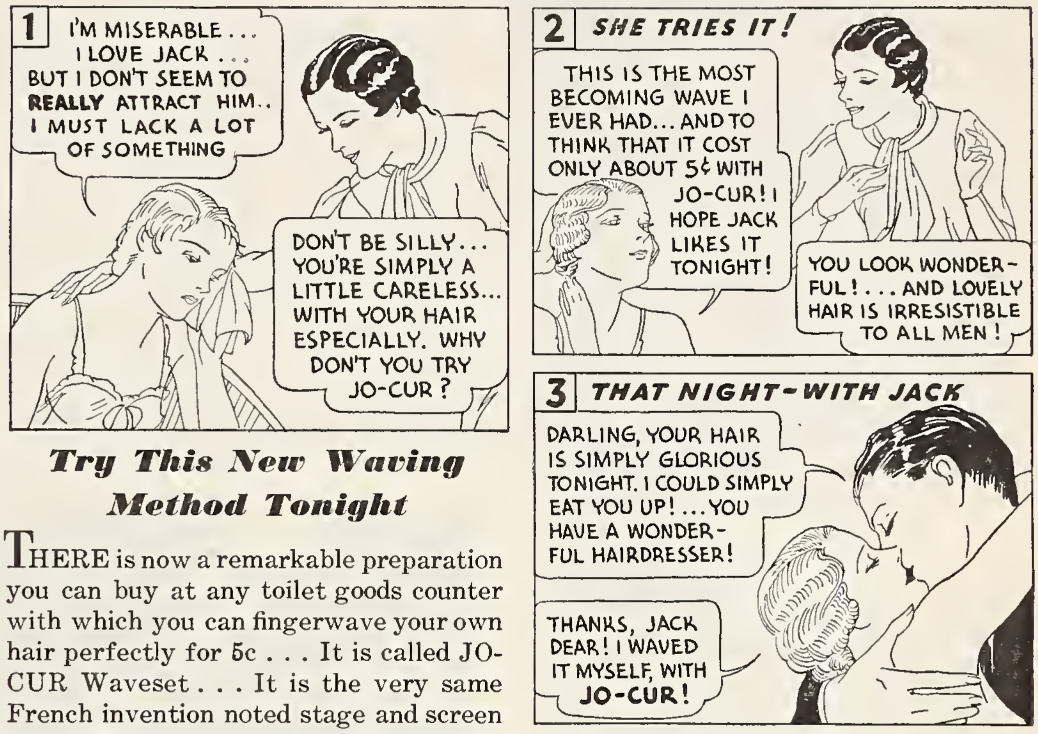
Spencer Tracy gives a sincere, natural performance. He makes the character of Bill so real that you feel you have known him all your life. Loretta Young's Trina is her best. She gives a brilliant and inspired performance which she has never before equalled.

DESIGN FOR LIVING (Paramount)

Swelegant. A rollicking comedy, chuckful of delightful banter, amusing situations and perfectly grand acting. Ernst Lubitch's latest rates top in entertainment.

Gary Cooper, an artist, his playwright pal, Fredric March, and Miriam Hopkins, also artistically inclined, live together after first making a gentlemen's agreement that sex shall not en-

What Jo-cur Did for "Discouraged JANE"



1
I'M MISERABLE . . . I LOVE JACK . . . BUT I DON'T SEEM TO REALLY ATTRACT HIM.. I MUST LACK A LOT OF SOMETHING
DON'T BE SILLY . . . YOU'RE SIMPLY A LITTLE CARELESS . . . WITH YOUR HAIR ESPECIALLY. WHY DON'T YOU TRY JO-CUR?
2 SHE TRIES IT!
THIS IS THE MOST BECOMING WAVE I EVER HAD . . . AND TO THINK THAT IT COST ONLY ABOUT 5¢ WITH JO-CUR! I HOPE JACK LIKES IT TONIGHT!
YOU LOOK WONDERFUL! . . . AND LOVELY HAIR IS IRRESISTIBLE TO ALL MEN!
3 THAT NIGHT-WITH JACK
DARLING, YOUR HAIR IS SIMPLY GLORIOUS TONIGHT. I COULD SIMPLY EAT YOU UP! . . . YOU HAVE A WONDERFUL HAIRDRESSER!
THANKS, JACK DEAR! I WAVED IT MYSELF, WITH JO-CUR!

Try This New Waving Method Tonight

THERE is now a remarkable preparation you can buy at any toilet goods counter with which you can fingerwave your own hair perfectly for 5c . . . It is called JO-CUR Waveset . . . It is the very same French invention noted stage and screen stars use to give their hair the alluring waves you admire so much.

Instead of paying $2 or more to an expensive hairdresser, try this remarkable discovery yourself. All you do is just wet your hair with JO-CUR and then with a comb and your own fingers you set your hair into perfect waves! In a few minutes . . . you can have the most becoming wave you ever had—literally double the attractiveness of your hair in this easy way!

Remember that JO-CUR is different from any other waveset known. It has a quinceseed base—which eliminates all stickiness, all gumminess, and will not leave white flakes in the hair. And a JO-CUR wave lasts 7 full days. Try one today. You can get JO-CUR at any drug or department store and at the 10c stores.

Jocur
WAVESET
FINGER WAVING
WATER WAVING

Jo-cur
PRONOUNCED "JOKER"
WAVESET

Flaming Hearts—and Flaming Pistols!

Good news! December WESTERN ROMANCES is on the newsstands, bringing you hard-riding, adventurous stories of the colorful west touched with the glamor of young love. It's the perfect combination! And when you've read these thrilling, punch-packed yarns, you'll call it the perfect magazine. Get your copy today.

WESTERN ROMANCES

At All Newsstands - 15c

Don't miss William Freemont Hough's latest novelette, "Savior of San Remo," complete in this issue!

"Don't they look like NEW SHOES?"

They're really a year old - but REALSHINE keeps them just like new. I use it for all my shoes.

ONLY 10¢ AT YOUR 5 and 10¢ STORE

Realshine SHOE POLISH

REALSHINE CO., Inc. GALVESTON, TEXAS

Every Drop a Real Shine

REDUCE 3 LBS. A WEEK OR NO COST!

No pills or tablets, no starvation diets, no strenuous exercising, no salts. Send for free trial of Dain Tea. Just drink it with your meals. Watch ugly, unhealthy fat disappear. Your request for free trial brings trial supply by return mail and full $1.00 treatment which you may try under our 10-day refund guarantee. Try Dain Tea at our risk.

DAIN TEA CO., DEPT. I, BALTIMORE, MD.

NO MORE Cold Feet

Peds—cozy, concealed footlets, slipped under or over your sheerest hose, will end all cold feet worries. Peds—made of mercerized lisle, are worn by smart women for business, shopping, at home and for all winter activities. • Remember, too, Peds save mending—a fact every thrifty woman appreciates. Buy Peds today at the hosiery counters of the better 5c and 10c stores, or send 20c with correct stocking size to RICHARD PAUL, Inc., Cooper Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal., Dept. M-4

Buy Wool or Silk PEDS at leading Department Stores and Specialty Shops.

peds TRADE MARK REG.

SAVE ½ ON HOSIERY BILLS, TOO! 20¢

ter into their design for living. All's well until March leaves and Gary and Miriam are thrown together—more closely. Miriam solves the problem by contending she's no gentleman so the agreement doesn't hold after all! When March returns, she realizes she loves him, too. So she runs off with Edward Everett Horton!

The four principals turn out delightful performances. Gary Cooper shows a surprising talent for comedy. He's excellent. Miriam Hopkins gets better and better. March is at his best and Horton delivers, as usual.

THE WORLD CHANGES (Warners)

Splendid. Another picture that deserves superlatives. It can be called the American "Cavalcade" and is placed in the same ranks as the original picture by that name. It is another triumph for Paul Muni who handles his role, which ranges from youth to old age, like a master.

BROADWAY THROUGH THE KEYHOLE (20th Century)

Entertaining. The first picture ever to come close to backing up sensational advance publicity. Hollywood says the front page headlines on the Jolson-Winchell fight were worth a million dollars. If so, the picture should be worth considerably more!

Story is about a gangster (Paul Kelly) in love with a night club entertainer (Constance Cummings). When their lives are endangered by his rivals, he sends her to Miami, where she meets and falls in love with Russ Colombo.

Kelly does some admirable work. Colombo is as good an actor as he is a singer, which is plenty good. And Constance Cummings, beautifully photographed, does her best to date.

Enter Joan Crawford's "Dancing Lady" Contest!

(Continued from page 43)

of a Max Factor make-up kit. Sixth, five prizes of $10 each, And seventh, ten prizes of $5 each. In case of ties, duplicate prizes will be awarded.

Now—where's the little chore you have to do to win one of those elegant prizes? Just turned back to pages 44 and 45. There you'll see a number of cut-up pictures. They are four scenes from Joan Crawford's latest picture, "Dancing Lady." You are to put the pictures together again, like Humpty-Dumpty, arrange or number them in the proper order (the order in which the scenes take place in "Dancing Lady." See the synopsis on page 45.)

Then, if you have not already put together the pictures in last month's MODERN SCREEN (December issue), look below on this page and also on page 96 and cut out those reproductions and arrange them in the correct order. All of these pictures—when in order—will tell the story of "Dancing Lady." Then, write a description of Joan Crawford—in ten words or less. Send the eight stills, together with your ten-word description of Joan Crawford to the Joan Crawford Contest, MODERN SCREEN Magazine, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

All entries—remember, the complete eight pictures and description—must be mailed before midnight of Jan. 15, 1934.

Quill

THE PERFECT INK FOR YOUR PEN

© 1933 QUILL INK CORP.

PERMANENT, yet EASILY WASHED FROM HANDS AND CLOTHING
THE PERFECT INK FOR YOUR PEN
INK FOR YOUR PEN

PERMANENT yet
WASHABLE

QUILL INK cannot be chemically eradicated from paper, yet, it washes from hands, rugs, all fabrics, etc., with plain soap and water.

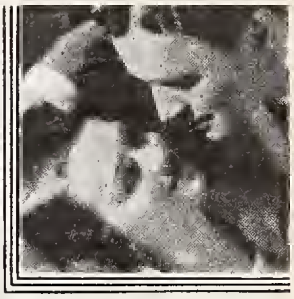
SOLD AT YOUR 10c STORE

"Lady Lillian" Contest Winners

First Prize, $150.00, Edith Robertson, Rockford, Washington. Second Prize, $75.00, Mrs. E. M. Harvey, San Francisco, California. Third Prize, $25.00, Margaret Acker, Rocky River, Ohio.
50 other contestants won $5.00 each.

Northeastern Laboratories, Inc.
Boston, Mass.

The Secret of a New Enchantment



RADIO GIRL

PERFUME and FACE POWDER Enhance your loveliness by the glamorous fragrance of RADIO GIRL Perfume and Powder. Fine essential oils imported from France, but compounded in this country, bring a truly modern, French odeur at a price for thrifty Americans. . . . And, you will adore the exclusive new shade of face powder—Dermatone—that blends with every type complexion. Get your free sample.

Use this COUPON for FREE SAMPLE

BELCO CO., ST. PAUL, MINN. M-1
Send me FREE Regular Size Radio Girl Perfume and Trial Size Radio Girl Face Powder. I am enclosing 10c (coin or postage) to cover cost of mailing.

Name..............................
Address..............................
City..............................State..............
(Print name and address plainly, please.)

BOBBY LOX hairpins

Have the Smoothest Enamel
Strongest Grip . Longest Life

Beauty Shops use and sell more Bobby Lox Hairpins than any other make. You, too, should demand Bobby Lox at your chain store. You pay for Bobby Lox features, so why not have their ultra-smooth enamel inside and out, rounded ends and permanent spring. Test these claims—mail the coupon—specify Black, Brown, Blonde or Grey.

Scolding Locks Corporation, Appleton, Wis.

SEND FOR FREE 10¢ CARD

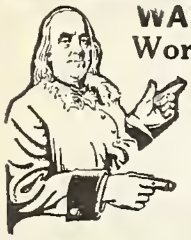
Scolding Locks Corporotion, Appleton, Wis.
Please send me free a regular 10c card of Bobby Lox Hairpins in following color ......
MM4
Name..................................
Address...
City.....................State.....................
I usually buy in tbe store cbecked below:
☐ S. S. Kresge
☐ S. H. Kress Co.
☐ W. T. Grant Co.
☐ G. C. Murphy Co.
☐ Scott Stores
☐ F. W. Woolworth Co.
☐ McLellan Stores
☐ McCrory Stores
☐ Grand-Silver Stores
☐ Neisner Bros.
☐ J. J. Newberry Co.

$3 EFFECT FOR 10¢
VIVANI
FACE POWDER
ROUGE
CREAMS
LOTIONS



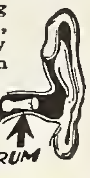
WANT A STEADY JOB?
Work for "Uncle Sam"
$1260 to $3400 Year

MEN—WOMEN 18 to 50. Common Education usually sufficient. Short hours. Vacation with full pay. Write immediately for free 32-page book, with list of positions and full particulars telling how to get them.

FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. S-318 Rochester, N. Y.

DEAFNESS IS MISERY

Many people with defective hearing and Head Noises enjoy conversation, go to Theatre and Church because they use Leonard Invisible Ear Drums which resemble Tiny Megaphones fitting in the Ear entirely out of sight. No wires, batteries or head piece. They are inexpensive. Write for booklet and sworn statement of the inventor who was himself deaf.



A. O. LEONARD, Inc., Suite 986, 70 5th Ave., New York for Burns

SEALTEX bandages burns, cuts, bruises or sprains without string, pins or sticky tape. Can't hurt. Won't stick to skin or hair. Neat, sanitary, water-proof, comfortable. 10c, 25c and 50c sizes. All Kresge stores and drug counters everywhere.

SEALTEX

Directory of Pictures

(Continued from page 81)

● SUNSET PASS (Paramount)—Pep, action and excitement. A good Western—kids will okay this one.

● ● THIS DAY AND AGE (Paramount)—Vigorous and dramatic action takes place when a crowd of high school kids take the law into their own hands. Charles Bickford, Richard Cromwell and Judith Allen are included in the excellent cast. Extremely good picture—for young and old.

● ● THREE CORNERED MOON (Paramount)—A family of snobbish, spoiled brats find out what real life is when their dear mama suddenly loses the whole family fortune. Claudette Colbert and Richard Arlen are the lovers. Mary Boland is the mother. Tom Brown, Wallace Ford and William Bakewell are in it, too. A hilarious entertainer for everybody.

● TOO MUCH HARMONY (Paramount)—Zip, pep and wisecracking tuned up with Bing Crosby's crooning. Jack Oakie, Skeets Gallagher, Judith Allen, Lil Tashman and Ned Sparks complete the cast. Worth seeing—kids will think so, too.

TO THE LAST MAN (Paramount)—A Western dealing with family feuds. A boy and girl of enemy families love each other but are true to their traditions until everyone is killed off but themselves. Esther Ralston and Randolph Scott are the lovers. Fair—only the young kids will enjoy the excitement of this Western.

● ● TURN BACK THE CLOCK (M-G-M)—Which goes to prove you would never be any happier if you had your life to live over. One man gets just such a chance and finds out it is far from what he planned or expected. Lee Tracy, Peggy Shannon, Otto Kruger and Mae Clarke. Very good—too advanced for children under 16.

● ● VOLTAIRE (Warners)—A biographical sketch of the great writer, wit and cynic of the 18th century. George Arliss, Reginald Owen, Allan Mowbray, Doris Kenyon and Margaret Lindsay. Very good—nothing in it for youngsters under 16.

● ● THE WAY TO LOVE (Paramount)—Maurice Chevalier as a carefree tramp of Paris whose chief and only ambition is to be a guide. Love interest develops when he rescues a little waif from her employer in a knife throwing act. Excellent entertainment plus some knock-out musical numbers—for the whole family.

● ● WHEN LADIES MEET (M-G-M)—Two very intelligent and lovely women and two attractive men make this picture a delightful and most sophisticated love triangle. Ann Harding, Myrna Loy, and Frank Morgan are the triangle. Robert Montgomery and Alice Brady provide amusing comedy. Be sure to see it—young folks under 16 won't understand it.

● WHEN STRANGERS MARRY (Columbia)—Story of a spoiled society deb and a young engineer. Good—not for the tots.

● WILD BOYS OF THE ROAD (Warners)—Bands of depression-bit youngsters who take to the highway when there are no jobs and their parents cannot support them. The tragedy of these youngsters make you stop and think for a moment. See it and take the children—it will be good for them.

● THE WOMAN SPY (RKO)—A thrilling and romantic war story. Connie Bennett as a Russian spy and Gilbert Roland as an Austrian spy fall desperately in love. Then they learn each other's identity. You will enjoy finding out the ending of this one for yourself. Very good—not the kind for children under 16, though.

Beauty Advice

(Continued from page 79)

concentrate upon it, you'll find that you won't be nearly as tired at the end of a day.

Look at Dorothea Wieck again. She has obviously been interrupted by the cameraman in the reading of her letter or telegram or whatever it is. She had been leaning forward while she was reading. But notice how she leans forward. Her back is straight. She does not—as many of us do—slump in the middle and bend the shoulders and head forward.

NEXT, there is the little matter of holding the head up. Many otherwise good figures are spoiled by that ungraceful ducked-forward position of the head. Watch it—this winter—when you are tempted to shrivel down inside the collar of your coat, and avoid the cold. Watch it when you're reading or sewing—hold your book or your work up to you. Don't bring your head down to meet what you have in your hand. You see, pushing the head forward makes that little bone stick out on the back of your neck. Later on in years, when you may put on weight, that bump becomes covered with fat and makes a very ugly line. You've noticed it, surely on older women. Bad, isn't it?

Here are the posture exercises.

Stand facing a mirror, with your back against the wall—head, shoulders, buttocks and calves touching the wall. Knees should be easy and relaxed, not stiff. Now do the "growing tall' business. Return to original position. Stomach should be pulled in, of course. How do you look in that position? Better? Go through the following exercises five times each, every day for a week, and then check up on yourself again and see if you haven't improved.

Stand about eighteen inches from the wall. Place palms of hands on the wall, fingers pointing toward each other, elbows bent at shoulder height. Push against your hands with your body. At the same time resist the push with your arms. This strengthens and straightens backs.

Stand with the feet slightly apart. Drop your body, from the waist up, down, down, down—so that your head bobs against your knees. Swing your body—slightly—keeping relaxed—just as limp as a rag doll. Now begin to pull your upper body up. Begin the pull right at the base of your spine. Lift, lift, lift—very slowly—until you are back in standing position again. Stretch—hard—then relax. And repeat.

Sit down in a straight chair. Your stomach should be pulled in, your back lightly poised against the back of the chair, your head up. Now rise, without looking down at your feet, without changing the position of your upper body. Stretch, return to correct standing position and sit down again.

Stand and drop your head back—absolutely relaxed—between your shoulders. Rotate it in a complete circle—several times. If you feel dizzy, reverse the rotation.

There—as usual, I've talked too much. I promised to tell you about some new preparations, didn't I? And I've left myself very little space. So I'll have to make it short and snappy.

In the first place, there's a new miniature lipstick set—three lipsticks selling for the price of one good one—that ought to provide you with a lot of fun. Three different shades—a gay one for daytime, a glamorous one for evening and a third one—for a change. Makes a nice gift package or prize, too.

There is a complete beauty kit available in the very reasonable price range. It contains all the essentials for freshening up—and making up—attractively packaged. The sizes are generous.

Then, there is a more expensive—but still reasonable—beauty kit containing fourteen beauty essentials in a very well-known brand. Very compact and convenient and the pouch container is gay and smart.

I've come across a paste rouge that is easy to apply. Really. Comes in an attractive pottery container and the grandest shades. Not cheap—but one purchase will last you a long time.

Have you noted down my new address? It's MODERN SCREEN, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y. Cheerio!

I've Dressed Them All

(Continued from page 63)

She is always cold and shivering.

The first time we made clothes for her she stood for a fitting in an extremely décolléte evening dress. She was wearing a gold locket, about the size of a dollar.

"Of course, the dress will look better," I said to her, "without the locket—or perhaps a more elaborate necklace."

Sylvia smiled at me very sweetly, but answered firmly, "I always wear this locket with everything."

I still wanted to argue. "But not with an extreme evening dress like this. In the first place it would be out of character."

"It doesn't matter," she replied. "I have always worn it in every scene and I'd be afraid to take it off."

She never would tell me its sentimental significance, but I later learned that that locket had been the despair of every director for whom she has worked.

Sylvia does things which many people don't understand. Once she told me a strange thing that had happened to her.

One night she had been lonely and got into her roadster and went for a long drive. In a particularly deserted section of the country she ran out of gas. No one, these days, dares to stop at midnight when someone signals.

Sylvia stood for a long time, but dozens of cars passed her up. At last, when she had no success, she started to walk to the nearest town. A rickety old wagon caught up with her. She hailed the driver. Politely he stopped and waited for her to climb upon the seat beside him. It was not until they had started off that she realized she was sitting beside an old colored man. For miles the two rode together, chatting in the glow of a California moon. And he never knew who she was. I cannot imagine independent little Sidney being frightened of anything but a draught.

IT'S a curious thing about Ruth Chatterton. I know her well and am very fond of her, but I never call her anything but Miss Chatterton. It isn't that she is snooty. She just has a certain dignity that commands respect.

One afternoon about two years ago I went to Ruth Chatterton's house with a saleswoman, two of my mannequins and an assortment of our newest models. Her house was an ideal place in which to show clothes. The girls dressed in her bedroom upstairs, came down a winding stairway and made their entrance into the salon, where Miss Chatterton sat.

On this day there were two visitors present—Lois Wilson and Helen Hayes, whose first picture had but recently been released. They were about to leave when we arrived but, like most women, couldn't tear themselves away from the treat of an impromptu fashion show.

When a dress appeared, Helen Hayes would say, "Now, that's no good for me, but it would be just right for Lois." Or Lois would say, "There's a good dress for you, Ruth." Once Miss Chatterton said, "That's the kind of thing I've always loved, but I don't dare wear it. My husband hates to see too much bare back—and there's practically no back in that."

Ruth Chatterton is one of my greatest favorites. That old word "intelligent" is so often loosely thrown about, but it is the only word which defines Chatterton's attitude toward everything with which she comes in contact. She has the logical reasoning of a business man and is rarely wrong in her decisions. She is inordinately fond of two widely divergent things—travel and the peace and quiet of home-life. She likes people for their accomplishments and for what's inside their heads, which has made a great many people who can do nothing and who think about nothing, believe she is a snob.

It is quite a jump in personalities from Ruth Chatterton to Mae Murray, but both names appear in my book. Mae Murray hasn't been in pictures for a long time but she keeps her name in print for it seems as if she is always being sued or is suing someone.

She made a long-to-be-remembered visit to my shop. She was sent by a studio to choose a chiffon dinner gown. She found a dress she liked and asked to have it copied in black, in white and in a color.

WHEN Miss Murray came for her first fitting she gave orders that no underslips were to be made. She informed the fitter that she was not going to wear a slip, but a brassiere and pair of trunks, spangled with sequins! That practically threw the fitter into a

"POWDER GOES ON SMOOTHER THIS NEW WAY!"

New Velour Powder Puff Amazes Beauty Experts!

AT last science has developed a new puff—a puff that spreads powder smoother . . . feels softer . . . lasts longer!

MILLIE Powder Puffs, the new creation, are just what you've always wanted. Made from a specially prepared New Velour material, they do everything claimed by more expensive puffs. Even beauty experts are amazed by the remarkable service MILLIE Puffs give. Yet they cost so little, you can always afford to carry a few "extras". MILLIE Puffs come sterilized and cellophane wrapped . . . for your protection. Both 5 and 10c sizes.

NRA

At Your 5 and 10c Store

millie Powder Puffs

BECOME AN EXPERT

ACCOUNTANT

Executive Accountants and C. P. A.'s earn $3,000 to $15,000 a year. Thousands more are needed. We train you thoroughly at home in spare time for C. P. A. examinations or executive accounting positions. Previous bookkeeping knowledge or experience unnecessary. Training given by C. P. A.'s. Write for free book, "Accountancy, the Profession That Pays," and learn about opportunities in this growing, profitable field.

LaSalle Extension University, Dept. 1318-H, Chicago

The School That Has Trained Over 1,200 C.P.A.'s

PINS FOR YOUR CLASS CLUB OR SOCIETY

LOWEST PRICES...BIGGEST CHOICE!

35¢ UP

High Quality - Low Price; the combination that has kept Bastian, the club pin pioneer, out in front for 37 years! Clean cut work and wearing quality distinguish a Bastian pin anywhere.

BASTIAN BROS. CO

98 Bastian Bldg., Rochester, N. Y.

Write For our FREE CATALOG

Over 300 Designs

Color Illustrations

Keeps WORKING HANDS Soft and White

HESS
WITCH HAZEL CREAM

Whether you do housework or office work, you can keep your hands soft, smooth and lovely with Hess Witch Hazel Cream. This different type lotion penetrates both the outer and inner layer of skin, relieving the cause of chapping, roughness and dryness. Just a few drops at a time does the work. No stickiness — gloves go on easily.

Try Hess at once. Sold in Dime, Drug and Department stores—10c, 25c and 50c sizes. Sample Free on request. (19)

E. E. HESS COMPANY

16 Main Street Brook, Ind.

HESS Witch Hazel Cream

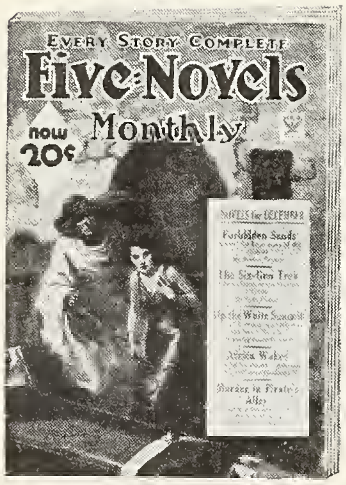
5
SUPERB
novels in one magazine!



Do you want hours and hours of perfectly grand reading? Do you want romance, adventure, mystery? Do you want a realistic tale of the sidewalks of New York, and then, perhaps, a glamorous love story of the Sahara? It's all yours for the asking, in that delightful magazine,

Five Novels

Ask your newsdealer today for the new December issue. And then enjoy:

ROMANCE!......"Forbidden Sands"
THE WEST!......"The Six-Gun Trek"
SPORT!....."Up the White Summit"
ADVENTURE!......."Africa Wakes"
MYSTERY!.."Murder in Pirate Alley" case of nervous prostration, but since Miss Murray was the customer, she did not argue.

At first fittings the wisps of material are always held together with basting threads and pins, so that changes can be easily made. The fitter changed her pins on one side, taking in the dress where it needed to be taken in. She then moved around to the other side and began alterations.

Slowly, methodically and for the moment unknown to the fitter, Miss Murray began pulling out the pins and dropping them to the floor. The fitter began to wonder why the dress sagged and crawled on her knees to the side she had first worked on.

Unable to believe her eyes and thinking, perhaps, that she was going mad she saw no pins in that side at all. Again she did not question—just put more pins in. During this time, Miss Murray was busy taking out the pins on the other side, so that the fitter was going around in circles trying to put the pins in faster than Miss Murray could pull them out. The episode remains the high point in my fitter's career and yet it is not so mad as it sounds for, I have known women who liked to do their own fitting. It is, I suppose, a form of back-seat driving, a mania which eventually sends the real driver into a lamp post.

Joan Crawford is probably the most thoughtful person who has ever come into my shop. So many stars have their secretaries call and say, "Please send some dresses out for Miss X to try on this evening." Others are considerate enough to send their own chauffeurs for the things. But often when the clothes are returned there is not so much as a little note saying, "I'm sorry but none of the dresses suited me." Sometimes the chauffeur is not even given a message to deliver. He simply dumps the gown—wrinkled and turned inside out—upon a chair.

Joan goes to the other extreme. She even sends regrets when she finds that she will be unable to attend a public opening to which she has been invited.

I know that Joan has changed a lot in the last five years, but she has always been a thoughtful person. Years ago she was sent to the shop to pose in some of my gowns for publicity purposes. She was much more excitable then than she is now. She had less poise. Her hair was bobbed short and she had a cute tom-boyish way of tossing her head but even then she was patient and did not complain during the task of getting from one dress to another, waiting for lights to be shifted and cameras set up. Afterwards she asked me to pose with her and now one of my most prized possessions is a picture of the two of us with Joan—in this day of long skirts—looking almost grotesque in the sadly "dated" frock of five years ago. (See page 62.)

I'VE dressed numbers of opera stars but Lily Pons is the most glamorous and dynamic. I know she isn't a movie star and perhaps the editor will bawl me out for including her here, but I feel that enough people have heard her over the radio to be interested in her.

Lily is a great shock at first because one thinks of opera singers as being robust and dramatic. Pons is very tiny—I think her actual weight is a hundred and five pounds—and she is as quiet and as shy as a mouse.

She was brought into my shop by Jetta Goudal and all during that session the two of them conversed in French. I designed a dress for Mlle. Pons to wear at her Los Angeles concert and, after the order had been placed and the measurements taken, we discovered that none of the dummy figures—upon which the clothes are draped—were small enough.

When the dress was finished I sent one of my fitters to the theatre so that she could see that everything was all right before Mlle. Pons stepped on the concert stage.

This is a little honor which we usually save for brides—having the fitter who made the bridal dress on hand to pat into place the last fold of the bridal train.

Mlle. Pons came back after her first series of songs and said to my fitter, "But I cannot find my voice. I do not know what is wrong." To the audience, her voice was as brilliant as usual, but there did seem to be a change during the second half of the program. Pons became radiant and sang so beautifully that the audience almost stampeded toward the stage.

When she finished the concert she came back to her dressing-room and sank down upon a chair. She confessed, to my fitter, that during each concert she often lost as much as five pounds—from worry and exertion!

* * * * * *

Next month Howard Greer continues his fascinating memoirs. Almost every star in Hollywood—the great, the near-great and the once-great—has crossed the threshold of Greer's shop. Now he's confessing all the secrets of the fitting-room. Don't miss it!

WHAT WILL HAPPEN TO THEM IN 1934?

Marriage, divorce, scandal, accident, death!

For Jean Harlow, Greta Garbo, Joan Crawford, Mae West, Katharine Hepburn and others, the stars hold some happiness, some dire misfortune in the next year.

Read about it—in Dareos' Prophecy for 1934.

IN OUR NEXT ISSUE

Clara Bow Goes Garbo

(Continued from page 13)

When she was in man-trouble it was some unknown man who had, shabbily, passed himself off as unmarried.

This luscious, red-headed, brown-eyed girl never goes to parties, never gives them. She said to me, "I don't know how to act when I'm with people I don't know awfully well. I feel self-conscious. I feel embarrassed.

"I don't say, 'I tank-I-go-home.' I just go home and stay there. That's where I like to be best of all. I always do what I like to do. I always obey my own impulses, my own instincts, my own desires. I don't know whether this is commendable or not. I don't care. I used to care. I'd be hurt when unkind things were said about me and written about me and plenty have been. Now, I am simply leading my own life in my own way and I can't help what people say about me.

"I like to be home because there I can be myself. I never wear make-up off the screen. I wear old clothes. I never curl my hair. I don't care how I look. I've just learned that, from now on, I'll have to wear glasses. An astigmatism. I don't care about the glasses. I do care because I may not be able to read very much any more.

"I always go to bed at ten o'clock. I've never found anything worth staying up for after that. If we ever do anything at all we have a couple of old friends in for bridge or rummy. I love the few really old friends I have. I can't make new ones. I've lost the knack." (Ah, Garbo!)

"A man from the Fox publicity company happened in on me the other night. He found me as is, without make-up of any sort, neither mascara nor lipstick nor rouge. My hair was straight. I had a house dress on. He didn't know me. My eye-lashes are long, you see, but rather pale. My eyebrows are light, too. I haven't much color in my lips. The result was that he told me I looked like some young school-marm or the wife of a local Babbitt. I know that I bear, in real life, no physical resemblance to the Clara Bow of the screen. This goes for more ways than the merely physical——"

ON the set where Garbo works at M-G-M there is that sign which reads NO VISITORS. It means what it says, that sign. Madge Evans, also on the Metro lot, recently stumbled by mistake onto the Garbo set. And Madge or no Madge, she was forcibly and forthwith ejected.

On the Fox set where Clara Bow works there is the same sign—and it means what it says, too. It is as fearfully and as scrupulously observed as ever the Garbo sign was, or is.

Clara said to me, "I really hate to talk about things like these because I know people will say I am trying to copy Garbo. Nothing could be farther from the truth. If I tried to copy anyone it would be, more typically, Mae West. Certainly I've always done her sort of thing on the screen, more or less. I've always been like this, only—I haven't always been able to have my own way.

"I simply have to have, I absolutely demand privacy before the camera. When a scene is finished in my picture, when the other players have said their last lines they must leave the set immediately and stay away until they are needed again. If I could work with a troupe of robots I'd like it better and give better performances.

"I like all of my fellow players. It isn't that. Preston Foster, who plays the spieler with me in 'Hoopla,' is a grand person. Richard Cromwell who plays my sweetheart is a lamb. And Minna Gombel is a pal of mine—but I can't have them watching me while I work. I like the extras and the electricians, too, but I do not want them peeking at me. Their eyes would tear holes in whatever I was trying to do. If a stranger comes on the set, I go cold all over. I can't 'give' one single thing. We tried it for one whole day at the beginning of the picture and it was one of the most miserable days I ever lived through—I had to 'go Garbo' and put down my foot, both feet, on any more visitors of any sort or kind.

"I think the basic reason for this is —not that I am temperamental—but that I am telepathic. I always have been and I've always known it. I've studied mysticism for a long while and I know what I'm talking about. I can tune in on the thoughts of other people. I've been able to do this, to some extent, ever since my childhood. When I am surrounded by a crowd, particularly when I am working, I get the thoughts of the spectators as easily as I can tune in on a radio station.

I'M making these statements to you now because I may never say them again. I may never say anything again —for publication. I don't know. I never know what I am going to do from day to day or from week to week. That's why I wouldn't sign a contract for more than two pictures at any one time on any one lot for all the money in the world. I can't depend on myself, how can I hope or want any company to depend on me? I walked out on 'Hoopla' for a week. I'm apt to do the same thing tomorrow, I simply have to feel free, to come and go, to work when I want to work, to be idle when I want to be idle. I have to feel independent. The usual arguments can't prevail with me. I mean, if some agent or some producer tells me that I should do such and such a story, whether I like it or not, because 'it would do me good,' I won't do it. The kind of 'good' they mean doesn't mean anything to me. Fame? Money. Publicity.

"I never go to openings because I'm afraid of crowds. Though I did go to 'Hoopla.' After all, I had a right to be curious about that. But there was

Cleanse YOUR SKIN as STAGE STARS do

Actresses of stage and screen use a special cold cream formula for removing stage makeup and for cleansing the skin. They know what is best for this purpose.

DIXIE DEB THEATRICAL CLEANSING COLD CREAM is the same formula used by stage and screen stars. It is extra pure and safe, and a wonderful cleanser. Cleanse your own skin with this wonderful cold cream and see why actresses prefer this kind. You'll love it—like thousands of other girls.

3 OZ. CAN 10¢

AT BETTER CHAIN STORES

Dixie Deb
Theatrical Cleansing
COLD CREAM
DIXIE DEB
NEW YORK ATLANTA
NET WEIGHT 3 OZ.

Such a low price for this big size is only possible because we sell such enormous quantities.

DIXIE DEB

Quality Cosmetics

ATLANTA, GA. HARRISON, N. J. DALLAS, TEX.

NOW! THE GIANT TUBE

ZiP

PERFUMED DEPILATORY CREAM

ZIP EPILATOR—IT'S OFF because IT'S OUT

PERMANENTLY DESTROYS HAIR

"THE GREAT GOD STUDIO"

A grand story. About Hollywood's most merciless tyrant who knows no pity nor tolerance

FAT SPOTS VANISH

Win health and a beautiful body with a HEMP MASSAGER.

Takes off fat just where you want. Relieves headaches, nervous tension, sore muscles and many bodily ailments. Only instrument that massages like human hands. Light convenient, uses no electricity. Order yours direct from this ad.

HEMP MASSAGER

Complete professional set and book on massage. Sent C. O. D. $4.75

CONLEY COMPANY, Inc. 503 1st. Ave. N. Rochester, Minn.

1¢ A WEEK
for deep lustrous
WAVES..!

NEW! Hollywood Method
Costs Less . . . Lasts Longer!

THINK of it! A typical "movie star" wave only 1c a week. Done right at home, too. without fuss or bother. The new Hollywood wave. Simply mix a tablespoonful of Stylset in half a cup of hot water. Dip comb in and apply to hair. Then merely set your waves. You will be amazed at the lovely, lasting results. Watch flat, straggly hair come to life in soft, alluring waves. Greaseless, non-alcoholic. 10c buys a big 4 oz. bottle. Garry & Co., 104 5th Ave., N. Y. City.

STYLSET sold at 5 & 10¢ stores 10¢

TYPEWRITER only 10¢ a Day

Not used or rebuilt. A new Remington Portable. Carrying case free. Use 10 days without cost. If you keep it, it's yours for only 10c a day. Write today. Say: Tell me how I can get a Remington Portable on 10-day free trial offer for only 10c a day. Remington Rand Inc., Dept. S-803, Buffalo, N. Y.

Make Money at Home! Grow Mushrooms IN YOUR CELLAR OR SHED
Experience unnecessary, we tell you how. Big demand! Write for Mushroom Book free.
American Mushroom Industries, Ltd.
259 Woolnough Bldg., Toronto, Ont.
EARN up to $25 A WEEK or More

350 LITTLE BLUE BOOKS 5¢ EACH
Send postcard for our free catalogue. Thousands of bargains. Address:
LITTLE BLUE BOOK CO., Catalogue Dept., Desk 226, GIRARD, KANSAS

KEEP LAMP & RADIO WIRES OFF FLOOR
New Easy Way
FITS BACK OF BASEBOARD OR MOULDING
JUSTRITE PUSH-CLIP
10 Cents at KRESGE'S
Amazing invention guarantees neat, quick job. No damage to woodwork. No tools needed. Improve appearance of your rooms—keep all wires off floors with JUSTRITE PUSH-CLIP. Economical. Set of eight colored clips to match your cords, 10c.

Law!
STUDY AT HOME
We guide you step by step—furnish all text material, including fourteen-volume Law Library. Training prepared by leading law professors and given by members of the bar. Degree of LL.B. conferred. Low cost, easy terms. Get our valuable 64-page "Law Guide" and "Evidence" books free. Send for them NOW.
LaSalle Extension University, Dept. 1318-L Chicago

that telepathic fear again. I nearly die of embarrassment. I hate to stand in a theatre lobby and autograph albums.

"I never go to movies. I've seen one picture in the past two years. And that one was Mae West's 'She Done Him Wrong.' I only saw that because I happened to be at Mr. Sheehan's house one night and he ran it in his private projection room.

"I don't go to movies chiefly because I'm afraid I'd lose what I have. I mean, I'm a natural mimic and I know that if I saw a Katharine Hepburn or any star do some particular bit of business, use certain mannerisms, I'd copy them. I always do. If someone comes to our house and spends the evening and talks in a deep voice I go about with a baritone for days afterwards. Then, too, my yen for the old days and the old ways and the old stars comes in again. I used to love Norma and Constance Talmadge and Florence Vidor and Valentino and all of them. I miss them. I can't make new friends—even on the screen. There, too, I've lost the knack.

"I don't care anything about money. I don't know anything about it. I like to have enough to feed my dogs properly and to have a few nice, pretty dresses. That's absolutely all I expect from life.

"I'm crazy about my little boy cousin who is living with me. I hope to keep him for always and I will unless he gets homesick. I like to talk to him, to play games with him, to make friends with him. At first he felt about me as I feel about other people, strangers. He'd never met me until I took him. He'd heard me talked about as an actress. He's seen me on the screen. He couldn't get used to—me. It was hard for him to forget the screen me and be natural and at ease with the real me. I'll feel more sheer triumph out of making this boy feel close to me than I could possibly feel out of any screen achievement or triumph. I'd love to have kids of my own for the best of all possible reasons—I love 'em.

"I've got what I want out of life. I've got things arranged the way I like them. I never have to go anywhere. I never have to meet people. I work only when I feel like working. I haven't 'gone Garbo'—I've gone Bow and now I can—and will—stay here."

Could You "Take It"?

(Continued from page 47)

"I don't think Groucho really expected it, either. He stood there looking down at me, absolutely speechless, and with tears running down his cheeks from suppressed laughter!

"When the scene was finished, I didn't say a word. Just walked away from him and up to my dressing room. He followed, apologizing between chuckles.

"'Tootsie,' he insisted, 'that was an accident. I didn't think I could do it. Honest, Tootsie, I swear it was my new shoes!"

Do you remember the scene at the bridge game with Harpo and Chico, that ends in a free-for-all?

"Every time we played that scene, Harpo managed to throw me about four feet. One night, I threw first, and down he went! It was very pretty. Climbing back on his feet, he rushed for me and we went into a clinch.

"'Gosh, Toots!' he hissed over my shoulder. 'Don't be so rough!'"

HARPO, Miss Dumont assures me, is the most mischievous of the lot. One evening, he received an unexpected invitation to a masquerade. It was too late to rent a costume and he wanted to go badly. What to do?

After the show, Miss Dumont went to her dressing room to change into street clothes. There were no street clothes. Immediately realizing what had happened, she grabbed a dressing gown and dashed out. Harpo, wearing her dress, hat, and slippers, was just hurrying out the stage door!

"Harpo!" she called excitedly. "You come back here! My dress. . . !"

"Yeh," the culprit grinned with beautiful nonchalance. "It's a little long, isn't it? But it'll do. Thanks." And he kept on his merry way.

"Come back here!" she begged. "What do you suppose I'm going to wear home?"

"You've got a fur coat, haven't you?" Harpo tossed over his shoulder. "That'll cover you. Don't be fussy, Toots." And he was gone. Leaving the statuesque Miss Dumont to get home as best she could, wearing a flimsy pair of wardrobe pumps and with nothing but a lacy slip under the none-too-long fur coat!

"I can't get angry with them," she confided, as we sat in her dressing room on the Paramount lot. "They're just like a bunch of school boys. Not in the least malicious. Everything they do is in the spirit of fun and I always try to be a good sport, even though I generally get the worst of it. Honestly, I enjoy every minute of it!"

They were rehearsing a scene in "Duck Soup," their most recent production. Groucho is on his knees before Miss Dumont, proposing to her—as he usually is. Chico enters, looking for Groucho.

"Oh . . . there you are!" Chico explains. And, during the several rehearsals, Groucho merely turned quickly, giving the intruder a startled look.

But, in the recorded shot, at Chico's "Oh . . . there you are!" Groucho took a flying jump into Miss Dumont's lap, nearly knocking the surprised lady over.

Everyone on the set doubled up in soundless hysterics. But one member of the crew could not contain himself. He turned loose a rousing guffaw that nearly shattered the sound mechanism and, of course, ruined the take.

Life, on a Mad Marx Brothers' production, is just full of those things.

Not all the horseplay occurs on the set, however. When they were coming out from New York, they kept the entire train in an uproar.

One evening, Miss Dumont was in her drawing room, preparing to retire, when the door burst open and three of the pajama-ed brothers, Groucho, Harpo and Chico, fell in. Ignoring the lady's protests, they all piled into her single berth and settled themselves for the night!

Tootsie begged, pleaded, cajoled, and even called in a porter but, through it all, the harum-scarum brothers snored away peacefully.

"When they make up their minds to cut a caper," Miss Dumont raised helpless hands, "you might as well resign yourself to the inevitable! Cross them and they only redouble their efforts!"

The "Duck Soup" company rented a beautiful Pasadena estate for some impressive exterior shots in the picture. The wealthy and genteel owner kept a watchful eye on proceedings, from a safe distance.

Between shots, Miss Dumont and Groucho rested in two comfortable chairs on the verandah. Suddenly, Groucho flung a leg across Tootsie's knees.

"Scratch my leg!" he murmured wearily.

At the other end of the verandah, the owner observed the indignity with amazed eyes.

"If I had refused," Tootsie deplored, "Groucho would simply have shouted: 'What's the idea? You've scratched it before. Don't be coy, Tootsie!' So—I scratched it!"

Her embarrassment was not lessened in the least, when she heard the dignified owner remark to a servant:

"You see what's going on over there? That's why show people have such bad reputations!"

A great many people are under the impression that Miss Dumont is Groucho's wife. Such is not the case. When the company made a personal appearance in Detroit, a local paper carried an article verifying their "marriage," in private life.

That night, Miss Dumont, commenting on the story, remarked that it was a trifle embarrassing.

"Embarrassing?" Groucho exclaimed. "I've just written a story about my wife and the magazine's running a picture of her. I'm liable to be hung for bigamy!"

Miss Dumont wouldn't change places with Greta Garbo. Life, with the Marx Brothers is, verily, a psychopathic shambles. But—thanks to a grand sense of humor—she can take it!

How a Star Was Created

(Continued from page 50)

been lenient with its stars and given them the privilege of selecting their vehicles, much grief had resulted.

Margaret cocked her pert little head with its mass of wavy brown hair and eyed me suspiciously. "Now you're making a noise like a motion picture executive," she said, "and we know each other much too well to hand out lines."

I knew that no amount of persuasion would alter her attitude. I knew that she had already turned down offers from Paramount and Columbia because of the long-term contract bugaboo. She would rather remain on the stage for one-tenth of the salary she would earn in pictures than be handed parts for which she was unsuited. Naturally I was aware of the fact that Junior Laemmle would never agree to such an arrangement as the adamant Miss Sullavan was demanding, especially from an unknown player, but so convinced was I that this girl had the stuff of which great screen stars are made that I decided to spend some of the company's money in testing her.

"What's the use of wasting the money?" she said. "They won't take me and, besides, if they do want me, they will have to accept me at my terms and I'll have to know what part I'm going to play first."

I CEASED arguing and began to tell her what I had up my sleeve. I told her about a part as big in emotional scope as "Madelon Claudet"—the part of the heroine in "Only Yesterday." I began to tell her the story and as I went on describing scene after scene she dropped her casual air and became intensely interested. When I was finished she was on her feet, enthusiastically asking if she could play the part. I told her I was not sure, but it was my fondest hope that she would play it; that aside from Helen Hayes (whom the studio could not obtain), she was the one person who could do it.

Like the good little trouper that she is, Margaret took home scenes from "Only Yesterday" and studied them day and night. Finally the test was made and it was truly magnificent, because Margaret had put her heart and soul into it. I wired Laemmle, Jr. A few days later, after the test had been sent out to the studio, Junior wired me to start negotiations with Miss Sullavan. However, John Stahl, the famous director of a number of pictures, "Back Street" among them, was not thoroughly convinced that Margaret was the right heroine for "Only Yesterday." He would not agree to her as a final selection until she had come to the coast for additional tests. So eager was Margaret to do the picture and so imbued was she with my confidence that she would secure the part, that—wonder of wonders—she left for Universal City.

It was no surprise to me when two

I CAN'T ENJOY THIS MOVIE - I'VE GOT HEARTBURN
DON'T SUFFER..TAKE TUMS
NRA

Don't Let Acid Indigestion Spoil Your Fun!

LIFE is too short to let one evening after another be spoiled by heartburn, gassy fullness and sour stomach. Do as millions do, keep a roll of Tums on hand in purse or pocket. Tums contain no soda or water soluble alkalies, only soothing insoluble antacids that pass off undissolved and inert when the acid conditions are corrected. They're refreshing, pleasant. No bad taste, no after-effects. 10c at all drug stores.

Free Beautiful new gold and blue 1934 Calendar-Thermometer. Also samples TUMS and NR—Just send name and address, enclosing stamp, to A. H. LEWIS COMPANY, Dept. AY-19, St. Louis, Mo.

TUMS FOR THE TUMMY

TUMS ARE ANTACID . . NOT A LAXATIVE

EAT LIKE CANDY
TUMS
STOMACH DISTR
10¢

HANDY TO CARRY

For a laxative, use the safe, dependable Vegetable Laxative NR (Nature's Remedy). Only 25 cents. NR

Stay Sweet with "HUSH" Cream DEODORANT

PREVENTS ALL BODY ODORS

Quick and easy to use. . . . Absolutely pure, cooling and soothing—non-irritating. FOR UNDERARM PERSPIRATION.

If your favorite toilet goods counter cannot supply you, write for handbag size, 10c, enclosing stamps or coin.

10c SIZE AT MOST 10c STORES

25c 50c

HUSH CO. 116 Market St., Phila., Pa.

ABOUT THE DIRECTORY OF PLAYERS AGAIN—

●

We have had to omit it. But you may obtain it—neatly made up in a little four page folder—by writing to this office and asking for it. Send no money, no stamps—nothing except your request, with your name and address.

●

Remember—our new address is 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

weeks later I heard from the studio that Margaret had come through her additional tests with flying colors and was set for the leading role in "Only Yesterday." Her contract provided that she was to do that film and one other picture, the story of which she must approve. The contract contained additional options, but in every instance she had partial approval of her stories and furthermore, it contained a clause giving her the privilege of returning to New York and appearing in one Broadway play each season. Quite an unusual contract for a totally unknown stage player, yet it was the only one Margaret Sullavan would sign and Universal needed her so much that they quickly acceded to her demands. If they had not come to terms Margaret would have just as readily kept on playing in the theatre and possibly gone into some stock company for the summer, as she had done in seasons past, at a weekly salary of twenty-five or thirty dollars a week. She worked fourteen weeks in "Only Yesterday" and earned $25,000.

HER attitude is difficult for the layman to understand. It is totally impossible for picture executives to comprehend. They do not seem to realize that an actress, if she is truly an artist and sincere about her work and her career, must have the satisfaction of appearing in roles which give her pleasure and an opportunity to develop. Margaret means to get to the very top of the acting profession. Money itself holds no lure for her and in her efforts to acquire the place she already has in the theatre she has undergone struggle and privation—and would cheerfully do so again.

The daughter of Cornelius Hancock Sullavan, a broker, and Garland Councill, a lovely Southern belle, Margaret made her first appearance in Norfolk, Virginia, on May 16, 1911.

Even in her early days at the Walter Taylor grammar school, the redoubtable Peggy had determined upon becoming an actress. She kept her ambition pretty much of a secret because her parents had a holy horror of stage folks.

They spent money lavishly on her education and fondly hoped that when she was "finished" she would marry one of the nice young men who beaued her about. To this end they sent her successively to St. Georges private school, Chatham Episcopal Institute and finally to Sullin College at Bristol, Va., where Margaret majored in art, dramatics and studied dancing.

After she had finished at Sullin's, Margaret calmly announced that she was going on the stage. Her father and mother stormed and protested to no avail. They found they could not break down her determination.

Finally, they effected a sort of compromise and Margaret was permitted to go to the Copley Theatrical School in Boston. She was an exceptional pupil and worked industriously day and night to learn all she could about the technique of acting. E. E. Clive, the director, was so pleased with her sincere efforts that he helped her secure a job with the University Theatre at Cape Cod, Massachusetts.

About this time, her father and mother worried themselves sick over the idea of their daughter prancing about on a stage, and they decided to take drastic action. They appeared in Cape Cod and practically forced her to come home.

Without funds, as she had earned practically nothing from the Cape Cod engagement, and without further support from her folks, a strangely silent Margaret Sullavan returned to Norfolk and spent one solid year as a dutiful daughter.

It took that year for Margaret to convince her parents that her place was in the theatre. Rather hopelessly, they finally recapitulated in the face of her continued and persistent pleadings and soon thereafter Margaret was on her way to rejoin the University players in New York. Later on in the season she was engaged by Brock Pemberton to go on a tour of the South as Isobel Parry in "Strictly Dishonorable."

TO retrace our steps a bit . . .

While she was at Cape Cod, there was a young actor in the company by the name of Henry Fonda who fell madly in love with her. He was tall, dark, slender and he more than appealed to Margaret.

Because their interests were the same, because they felt that together they could rise to the heights, they made the mistake of believing they were ideally mated. They were married. Now they are divorced. No one quite knows why.

Margaret's eyes grow soft and misty when she speaks of Henry and she always praises him in the highest terms and he speaks tenderly of her and is deeply sorry that they could not make a success of it. Neither will say more than that. No one will ever know whether it was just another case of a youthful romance gone on the rocks, or if it was the age-old problem in the theatre—that of two artists unable to remain married because of professional jealousies in their work.

And now Margaret Sullavan has put all thought of marriage aside until her career has reached the lofty heights to which she is gravitating. Romance thrills her and there is another man at the present who holds her admiration and respect and possible love. But her career comes first.

While she was in Hollywood during the making of "Only Yesterday," she did not engage a swanky mansion in Beverly Hills with a series of hot and cold running servants, marble swimming pools and cooks imported from Paris. Instead, she lived very modestly and quietly in an apartment in the Garden of Allah, which in spite of its name, is really a very sedate hotel with community swimming pool and tennis court.

INTENSELY disliking the manner of picture making because of the long tedious "takes" and "retakes," the dreary and uncomfortable business of trying to emote under hot lights, Margaret was, however, resigned to her fate and because she liked her part she put her whole heart and soul into it and tried hard not to complain. However, one day she and John Stahl, the director, had a fierce argument and Margaret

"DO UNTO OTHERS"

THIS will be the happiest Christmas for many people. Laughter will have a new ring, voices a new confidence. Share some of your joy by using Christmas Seals on your letters, packages, gifts, and cards. The gay little stamps will brighten your message. The funds they provide will help prevent, find, and cure tuberculosis throughout the year.

1933
Christmas
Greetings

The National, State and Local Tuberculosis Associations of the United States

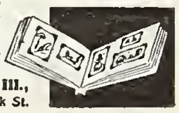
BUY CHRISTMAS SEALS

New! Engel Pocket Art Corners

ACTUAL SIZE

The real thing for mounting Snapshots, Cards, Stamps, etc. No paste needed. Neat, - easy to use for mounting prints tight or loose. Sold at photo supply and album counters or send 10¢ today for pkg. of 100 and free samples.

10¢ BUYS 100



Engel Art Corners Co., Chicago, Ill.,
Address Dept. 63 N - 4717 North Clark St.

NO JOKE TO BE DEAF

—Every Deaf Person Knows That

George P. Way made himself hear, after being deaf for 25 years, with Artificial Ear Drums--his own Invention. He wore them day and night. They stopped head noises and ringing ears. They are invisible and perfectly comfortable. No one sees them. Write for his true story, "How I Got Deaf and Made Myself Hear". Also booklet on Deafness. Address

Artificial Ear Drum

GEORGE P. WAY, INC.
717 Hofmann Building Detroit, Michigan

NEW LOW PRICES on GOODRICH·Firestone GOOD YEAR U.S., FISK and OTHERS $2.15 29 x 4.40 - 21

SAVE ON YOUR TIRES

And we defy anyone to excel our quality. Every standard brand tire reconstructed by our superior modern method is positively guaranteed to give full 12 months' service under severest road conditions. This guarantee is backed by the entire financial resources of an old reliable company. Member N R A. Today's lowest prices.

YOU CAN'T BEAT OUR PRICES

BALLOON TIRES

Size Rim	Tires	Tubes
29x4.40-21	$2.15	$0.85
29x4.50-20	2.35	.85
30x4.50-21	2.40	.85
28x4.75-19	2.45	.95
29x4.75-20	2.50	.95
29x5.00-19	2.85	1.05
30x5.00-20	2.85	1.05
28x5.25-18	2.90	1.15
29x5.25-19	2.95	1.15
30x5.25-20	2.95	1.15
31x5.25-21	3.25	1.15
28x5.50-18	3.35	1.15
20x5.50-19	3.35	1.15
30x6.00-18	3.40	1.15
31x6.00-19	3.40	1.15
32x6.00-20	3.45	1.25
33x6.00-21	3.65	1.25
32x6.50-20	3.75	1.35

Reg. CORD TIRES

Size	Tires	Tubes
30x3	$2.25	$0.65
30x3½	2.35	.75
31x4	2.95	.85
32x4	2.95	.85
33x4	2.95	.85
34x4	3.25	.85
32x4½	3.35	1.15
33x4½	3.45	1.15
34x4½	3.45	1.15
30x5	3.65	1.35
33x5	3.75	1.45
35x5	3.95	1.65

All Other Sizes

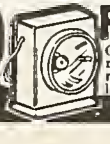
WE WANT DEALERS

All TUBES GUARANTEED Brand NEW

SEND ONLY $1 DEPOSIT on each tire ordered. We ship balance C. O. D. 5 per cent discount for full cash with order. Any tire failing to give 12 months' service replaced at half price.

GOODWIN TIRE & RUBBER CO. Dept. 473
1840 S. MICHIGAN AVE. CHICAGO, ILL.

12 MONTHS WRITTEN BOND GIVEN WITH EVERY TIRE



FREE "RAY-O-VAC" Flashlight Lantern With Order for 2 Tires

Complete with batteries and bulb, ready to use. Household and automobile necessity. Gives 600 foot light beam. Adjustable handle.

MEMBER N.R.A

determined to leave the place and the picture flat. She walked off the set, leaped into her battered old Ford, drove to the Garden of Allah, packed her belongings, drew her money out of the bank and was engaging passage on an airplane to fly East when a perspiring Universal official caught up with her and literally, on his bended knees, begged her to return.

The upshot of it all was that Margaret did return. And won her point, apparently, because after this incident she and Stahl worked together amicably.

In spite of Margaret Sullavan's firm conviction that she will never make a popular screen star, it is my opinion that "Only Yesterday" will bring an immense public to her feet. In spite of what Margaret has to say against herself, a new star has been born to sit in the starry firmament beside such foremost and outstanding luminaries as Garbo, Hepburn, Hayes and other glittering goddesses of the cinema whose astounding salaries you help to pay.

We predict that the little Southern girl who fought so hard to become an actress, and whose ancestors way back in Ireland turned Episcopalian and changed the family name to Sull*a*van in defiance of the banshees or something, will not stand for long in bewilderment and wonder at the thing which has happened to her. After she has carefully thought it out with her good sound reasoning, she will, like her ancestors, defy the banshees of doubt and take her rightful place on the screen.

No Romance Ballyhoo, Please!

(Continued from page 15)

The frantic manager trailed them shouting, "What is the meaning of this?"

"I'll tell you," said Frances, "if one word is said about Joel and me and our feelings for each other, or mention is made of 'another Hollywood romance,' neither of us will set foot on this stage. We are willing for the master of ceremonies to say anything about our careers or what he thinks of us personally—but no romance ballyhoo."

And what's more, she meant it and has gone on meaning it. They won't have pictures taken holding hands, no interviewer has been able to get a story "Love As We See It," not a single pet name has been published. And when the studio suggested a film story in which they would co-star—because it would be such a "natural" tied up with their private life romance—both Frances and Joel vowed they would tear up their contracts first.

DOES Frances think ballyhoo romances in the past have turned out badly or does she believe that her private life is her own and nobody else's business? This is what she says:

"It isn't that I feel Hollywood love has been talked about too much or that my private life is my own business. I don't believe any actress can think that. We are public servants, working for the entertainment of the public and they are rightly entitled to know as many of the details of our private lives as we can tell them.

"That's just the point with me. I can't tell anything that is close to me. It just isn't my nature. Ever since I was a little girl, I've found it impossible to communicate things that belong to my inner self. Not even to my mother or my closest friend have I mentioned how I feel about Joel. The giving of confidence is something I have never learned. And if this is true with my most intimate friends, how could I possibly discuss for publication what is close to my heart?"

Though Frances would tell you nothing of this, the McCrea romance started at the studio during the filming of "The Silver Cord."

And somehow Hollywood knew that this was different from the other McCrea romances. He has been Hollywood's official beau for years. He has escorted almost every glamorous, exciting star in the colony to openings, to the Mayfair, to the Cocoanut Grove. But all the time that he was playing Beau Brummel he was stoutly maintaining, "I'll never marry an actress. Those glamorous women are exciting to take around. It's thrilling to be seen with them. And I've found them grand company and very regular people. But no actress is the type of girl I'd marry."

Shortly after he met Frances he said (and didn't have any idea he was giving away a romance secret), "Of course, I would marry an actress if I could find a girl who would share my views of not leading a Hollywood life. If she would be content to live on my new ranch and forget there was such a place as Hollywood after the day's work was done. If she wouldn't be swayed into doing exactly what everyone else was doing just because 'it was being done.' If I were lucky enough to find such a girl, I would certainly beg her to marry me, for I would know that she would be one in a million."

He didn't realize, when he was saying this, that everyone knew he was giving a perfect picture of Frances.

And now they are married. And now they are back in Hollywood. And still they are stoutly sticking to their original code—no romance ballyhoo.

And, maybe I'm just an old romanticist, but I feel, somehow, as if this marriage has a better chance than most of those Hollywood weddings. Both Frances and Joel are so sane, so sensible and—whether they'll tell you about it or not—so much in love.

All you have to do is to look at their faces when they look at each other to know that. They don't have to pose for pictures in each other's arms to prove it.

A LOVELY COMPLEXION that nothing will remove

Would you like a lovely skin? A complexion that won't come off—a radiant color all your own? If constipation is the cause of your troubles give your system the little calcium that it needs—and note the immediate improvement.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers help Nature to quickly rid the system of impurities and poisonous wastes that cause pimples, blotches, acne and other skin blemishes. A week-end's use will frequently work a wondrous change. From the very first day you should see and feel the difference.

Bright, sparkling eyes! Clear, satin-smooth skin free from faults! Nails and hair alive and glossy with sound growth! And a warm flush of natural color radiating from within—refreshingly lovely color that no rouge can imitate, and nothing can remove. Try them this week-end.

STUART'S CALCIUM WAFERS
AT ALL DRUG STORES: 10c and 60c

FREE SAMPLE COUPON

A sample package—sufficient to prove the value to you of Stuart's Calcium Wafers—will be sent to you, if you mail this coupon to the Stuart Co., Dept. 32-F Marshall, Mich.

Name ....

Address ....

Town ....

Brand New AS LOW AS $19⁷⁵
TYPEWRITER
Guaranteed by REMINGTON

Sensationally new low price and easy terms. Standard 4-row keyboard—fully guaranteed by Remington Co. Choice of Colors.

Send No Money, 10 Day Trial

Send for new literature and easy pay plan—only $1.00 down, then 10¢ a day. Also bargains in Standard size refinished office models, sent free. Write for details and special money-making opportunities.

International Typewriter Exch., 231 W. Monroe St. Dept. 161, Chicago

ANY PHOTO ENLARGED

Size 8x10 inches or smaller if desired. Same price for full length or bust form, groups, landscapes, pet animals, etc., or enlargements of any part of group picture. Safe return of original photo guaranteed.

47c

SEND NO MONEY Just mail photo or snapshot (any size) and within a week you will receive your beautiful life-like enlargement, guaranteed fadelsss. Pay postman 47c plus postage—or send 49c with order and we pay postage. Big 16x20-inch enlargement sent C. O. D. 78c plus postage or send 80c and we pay postage. Take advantage of this amazing offer now. Send your photos today. Specify size wanted.

STANDARD ART STUDIOS
908 West Lake Street, Dept. 1324-A. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

AMAZING REDUCING DISCOVERY FROM ENGLAND
Absolutely harmless—No thyroid—No physics

NOW famous LACEY'S MEDICATED REDUCING GUM, imported direct from England, is available to Americans. Recommended and approved by British Doctors. Testimonials prove LACEYS succeeds where other methods have failed. "I have tried many advertised reducing remedies without success," writes Mrs. E. S. P. "I then tried LACEYS and lost 15 lbs." Simply chew a piece of LACEYS after meals to reduce without risk to health. Success certain. Satisfaction guaranteed. REDUCE AND REJOICE WITH LACEYS. Only 75c a box postpaid. Remit to LACEYS, P. O. BOX 123, Seattle. (In Canada at all druggists.) Write for free circular, "BE SLIM AND ENJOY LIFE."

Old Money and stamps WANTED

POST YOURSELF! It pays! I paid J. D. Martin, Virginia, $200 for a single copper cent. Mr. Manning, New York, $2,500 for one silver dollar. Mrs. G. F. Adams $740 for a few old coins. I want all kinds of old coins, medals, bills and stamps. I pay big cash premiums.

WILL PAY $100 FOR DIME
1894 S. Mint; $50 for 1913 Liberty Head Nickel (not buffalo) and hundreds of other amazing prices for coins. Get in touch with me. Send 4c for Large Illustrated Coin Folder and further particulars. It may mean much profit to you. Write today to

NUMISMATIC COMPANY OF TEXAS
Dept. 456 . . . . FORT WORTH, TEXAS
(Largest Rare Coin Establishment in U. S.)

The Private History of a Crooner

(Continued from page 31)

jackets in town. His preference in hats ran to straws with bright bands. Even before his grammar school days were over, Dick Powell was a leading "jelly bean."

HE had been graduated from grade school with the highest honors they could confer. He was pledged to the P. I. E., which meant (believe it or not) Perfect in Everything. And do not think that this honor sat lightly on him. Combined with the thrill of his first pair of long trousers, it developed such a case of swelled head on the Powell shoulders that he flunked all four subjects during his first half year in high school!

Gone were those days of tender musings, philosophy and ambition. Mrs. Powell's little boy was himself again as he rounded the corner into sixteen—a very cocksure young gentleman who considered himself quite the largest "spud" that ever hung around a drugstore corner and watched the girls go by. It was his own private opinion that he was quite a devil with the ladies. The fact that he could get his father's car every evening greatly increased his popularity with the local belles. Though it never occurred to the head-swollen Dick that it was the car, not the boy that went over so big.

ONE evening, parked cozily on the side of a road that lead out of Little Rock, a pretty little blonde nestled in the crook of his arm, Sheik Powell tilted back his head and began to sing softly to the moon—or was it to the lady? It sounded so good, even to him, that he repeated the chorus several times. "Say," remarked the little blonde, "you sing real well. Did anybody ever tell you?"

Practically the same idea had been dawning pleasantly upon Dick. No, strictly speaking, no one had ever thought anything about his voice.

The idea that he might actually have a voice was so novel and pleasing to the young man, that he perfunctorily kissed the blonde good-night and returned home to mull over the possibilities it presented.

The day following Armistice Day he was kicked out of high school. He and a couple of other fellows had swiped a car for the purpose of riding in the parade. The school simply couldn't get it through their head that they were planning to return the vehicle. So out they went. Because several football stars were among those kicked out, they decided to organize their own professional football club. A club which advocated smoking for football players—just to spite the coaches.

Dick's father was furious and his mother broken-hearted at the action the school elders had taken. When they heard additional news that their pride and joy was not only out of school by invitation but was actually a member of the Smoking Football Team (professionals at that), they nearly died of humiliation.

"Your conduct is making your mother frantic," stormed Powell père as he strode up and down in front of his son. "Are you going to spend the rest of your life getting in and out of mischief? Haven't you any ambition?"

"I'd kinda like to sing," he offered softly, lest this wild suggestion should bring a premature stroke on his already angry father.

"Sing?" repeated Mr. Powell in amazement. "Can you sing?"

"I think I could if I studied. . . . I mean. . . . I think maybe it might be something to occupy me now that I've been kicked out of. . . . I mean now that I have so much spare time on my hands. Maybe I could get a job singing in the choir . . . or something."

That crack about the choir had merely been a shot in the dark—a reference of "refinement" which might pacify his family. Not only did it pacify them, but his pleased mother and father actually promoted a choir job!

It was the beginning of Dick Powell's singing career in Little Rock. Every Sunday morning his clear tenor voice rang out over the Presbyterian congregation ($15 per Sunday). Every Friday night he sang at the Jewish Synagogue which netted him $10 and on Wednesdays at the Scottish Rite Consistory for another $10. Besides these, there would be an occasional funeral or wedding which meant $5 a song.

HIS church singing was proving very lucrative. Money was coming easy to young Powell. Truly, he was becoming a man-about-Little Rock. He went to dances at the Capital Hotel, sent his girl friends corsages, bought a saxophone and played in the jazz band.

He became so ambitious that he actually wanted a daytime job—and got it with the Cox Grocery Company. He did so well by the grocery company he was offered the management of one of their branch stores, but by this time a job with "more dignity" had presented itself and Dick turned it down. For one entire summer he was secretary-office boy to Gilbert T. Owens, state senator. When fall came on he was so burning with ambition that he consented to enroll in the Little Rock College Catholic Military School, where he played in the band and studied voice.

Vacation time came and Dick once more found himself a daytime job at the power house. Though his first work consisted of drilling holes through concrete, he was later promoted to testing meters. Evenings, he would sing at public places and once he even organized his own jazz band called the Peter Pan Orchestra. "It was," he says, "as lousy as it sounds."

But bad as it was, Dick's singing attracted the attention of a small time booking agent who arranged for him to make a trip to St. Louis in a real honest-to-goodness professional theatre. Along with the act went two other local Little Rock "artists," the Allen Sisters.

They departed in a blaze of glory for St. Louis. It was the biggest moment of young Powell's life.

Came the big night of his first theatrical debut!

Of course, an open air picture show wasn't exactly what he had planned for himself—but anyway, it was a theatre and beginners couldn't be too choosey, he assured himself.

So he sang and sang well. By the time he finished he could hear the burst of applause in advance! They'd probably go crazy about him (he decided) as he drawled out that last "you." He finished . . . he bowed . . . and he waited!

Exactly three sets of bored hands applauded. He swears he counted them. Just three . . . and a very feeble three.

It wasn't until later, discouraged and blue, in his dressing-room that he discovered they had been holding a singing contest at that same theatre for three weeks . . . and those folks were just all worn out with singing, good or otherwise. The manager was sympathetic. He said, "Kid, don't feel bad. You've really got a future. You'll get along."

But for the moment the cocky Mr. Powell was defeated!

It was years later that Dick Powell of "Forty-second Street" and "Golddiggers of 1933" fame returned in person to that same theatre and met that same manager. Only now it is the largest picture show in St. Louis and Dick Powell was getting $3500 per week for his personal appearance there.

Don't miss the second installment of Dick Powell's fascinating life story. Read how he loves—and loses love. Read the inside story of his amazing rise to overwhelming success. And—is there another romance? In our next issue!

Printed in the U. S. A. by Art Color Printing Company at Dunellen, N. J.

COULD YOU LOVE TWO MEN

...at the SAME time?

GILDA COULD . . . AND DID!

"I love you, Gilda," said Tom.

"I love you, Gilda," said George.

"And I love you both," said Gilda . . . but she married Max!

Which was very disturbing for the boys, highly gratifying to Max, and perfectly screaming for the world at large.

The same world has been enjoying itself immensely ever since Noel Coward revealed his hilarious "Design for Living", the gayest, most amazing romance that has ever come your way.

Miriam Hopkins, Gary Cooper, Fredric March, and Edward Everett Horton are currently delighting motion picture audiences with this very amusing story—and at the same time, the latest SCREEN ROMANCES brings you the complete story of the picture!

You'll howl at this eternal triangle which became a quadrangle! And you'll gulp a little at the underlying sincerity beneath the hectic love-lives of these amazing Bohemians. Read this perfectly swell story; there may never be another like it! And enjoy as well the complete stories of eleven other new motion pictures in the same issue of the screen's only story magazine:

ENJOY these 12 screen stories in the January issue of SCREEN ROMANCES

1. Design for Living—Gary Cooper, Fredric March, Miriam Hopkins
2. Hoopla—Clara Bow, Preston Foster
3. If I Were Free—Irene Dunne, Clive Brook
4. Counsellor-at-Law—John Barrymore, Bebe Daniels
5. A Man's Castle—Spencer Tracy, Loretta Young
6. Tarzan and His Mate—Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan
7. Meet the Baron—Jack Pearl, Jimmy Durante, Zasu Pitts
8. The Cat and the Fiddle—Ramon Novarro, Jeannette MacDonald
9. Female—Ruth Chatterton, George Brent
10. The Kennel Murder Case—William Powell, Mary Astor
11. Blood Money—George Bancroft, Frances Dee, Judith Anderson
12. College Coach—Pat O'Brien, Ann Dvorak

All Stories Profusely Illustrated with Scenes from Hollywood Productions!

Screen Romances

12 COMPLETE SCREEN STORIES IN EVERY ISSUE!

IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVES

TO BE A FOOTBALL REFEREE

(Above) IF YOU WANT TO SEE nerve strain, look at "Mike" Thompson's job—refereeing tons of football brawn, seeing every detail but never getting in the players' way!

Steady Smokers turn to Camels

M. J. ("Mike") Thompson, football's most famous referee, is a steady smoker who has to keep healthy nerves. He says:

"Because nothing can be allowed to interfere with healthy nerves I smoke Camels. I have tried them all—given every popular brand a chance to show what it can offer. Camels don't upset my nerves even when I smoke constantly. And the longer I smoke them the more I come to appreciate their mildness and rich flavor."

* * *

Many smokers have changed to Camels and found that they are no longer nervous... irritable... "jumpy." Switch to Camels yourself. Smoke them steadily. You will find that Camels do not jangle your nerves—or tire your taste.

How are YOUR nerves?

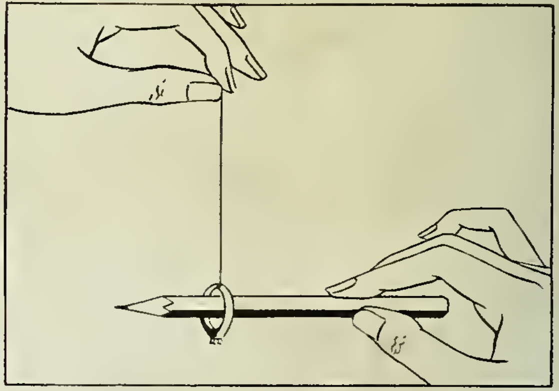
TRY THIS TEST



Fasten one end of a short string to a finger ring. Have a second person hold string at arm's length above shoulder. The test is for you to make a full-arm swing downward and up... and try to put a pencil, held 3 inches from the point, through the ring. Good performance is being successful once in the first 3 tries.

George Santelli, (Camel smoker), champion fencer, did it on the first try.

Copyright, 1933, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

CAMEL'S COSTLIER TOBACCOS

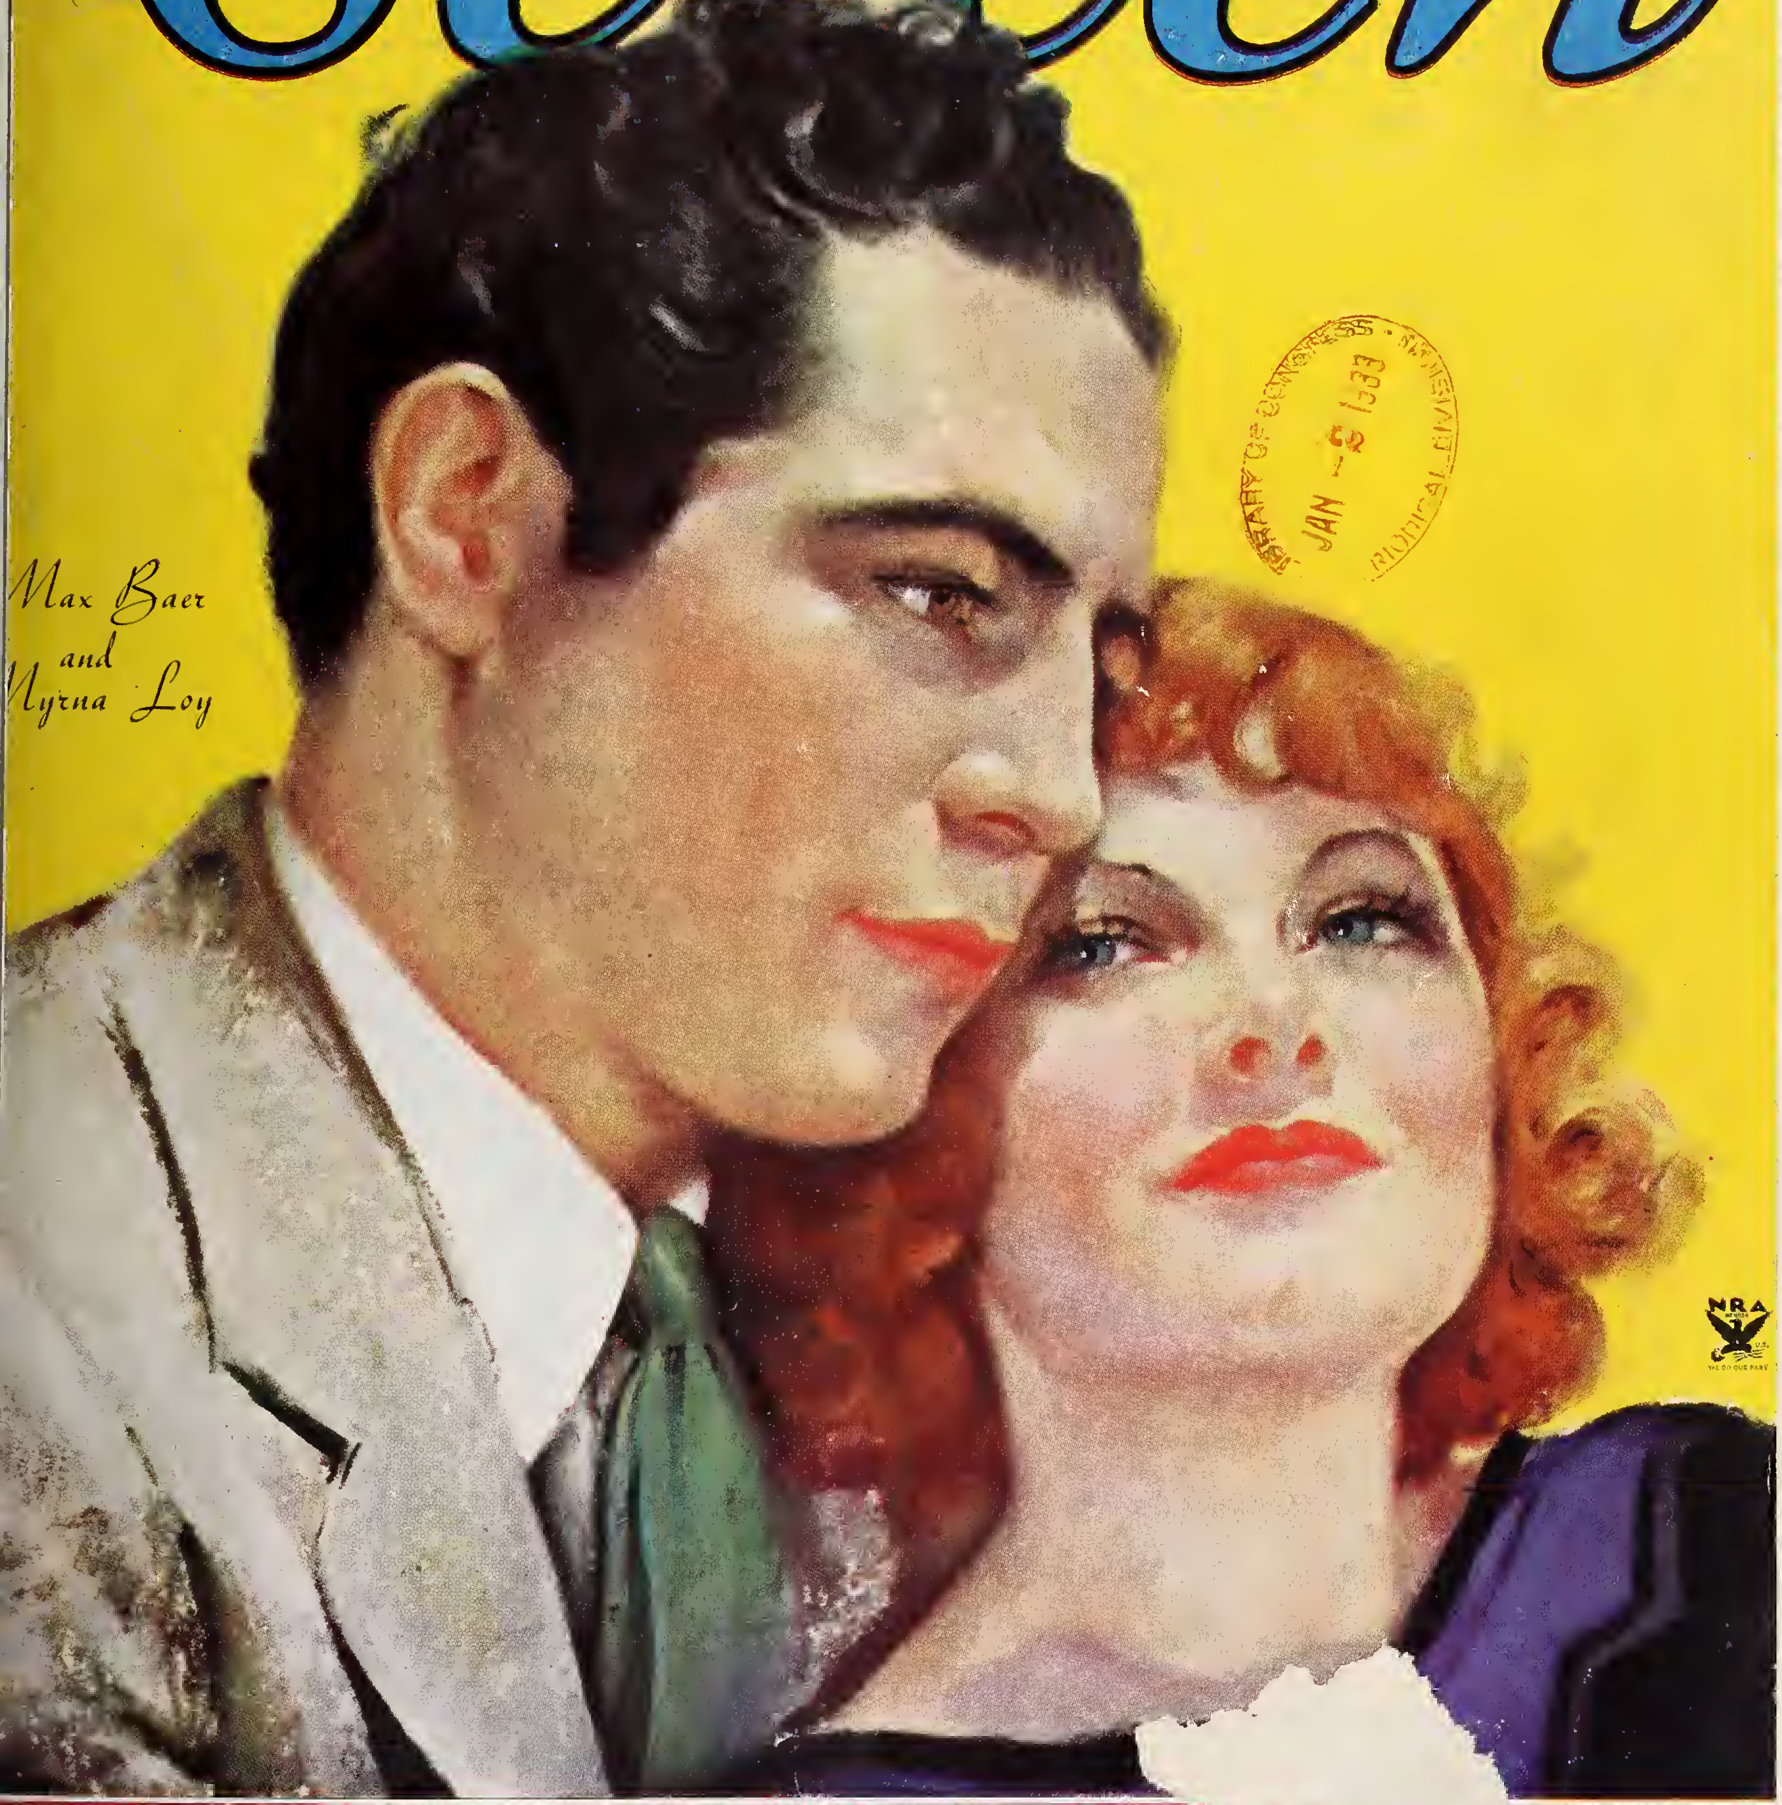
CAMEL
TURKISH & DOMESTIC BLEND
QUALITY

—THEY NEVER GET ON YOUR NERVES

10 cents

February
34

MODERN Screen



Max Baer
and
Myrna Loy

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS · PERIODICAL DIVISION
JAN -5 1933

Marriage? Divorce? Scandal? . . . Dareo's' Startling 1934 P[illegible]ns for

GARBO · HARLOW · HEPBURN · MAE WEST and many others—see page 26

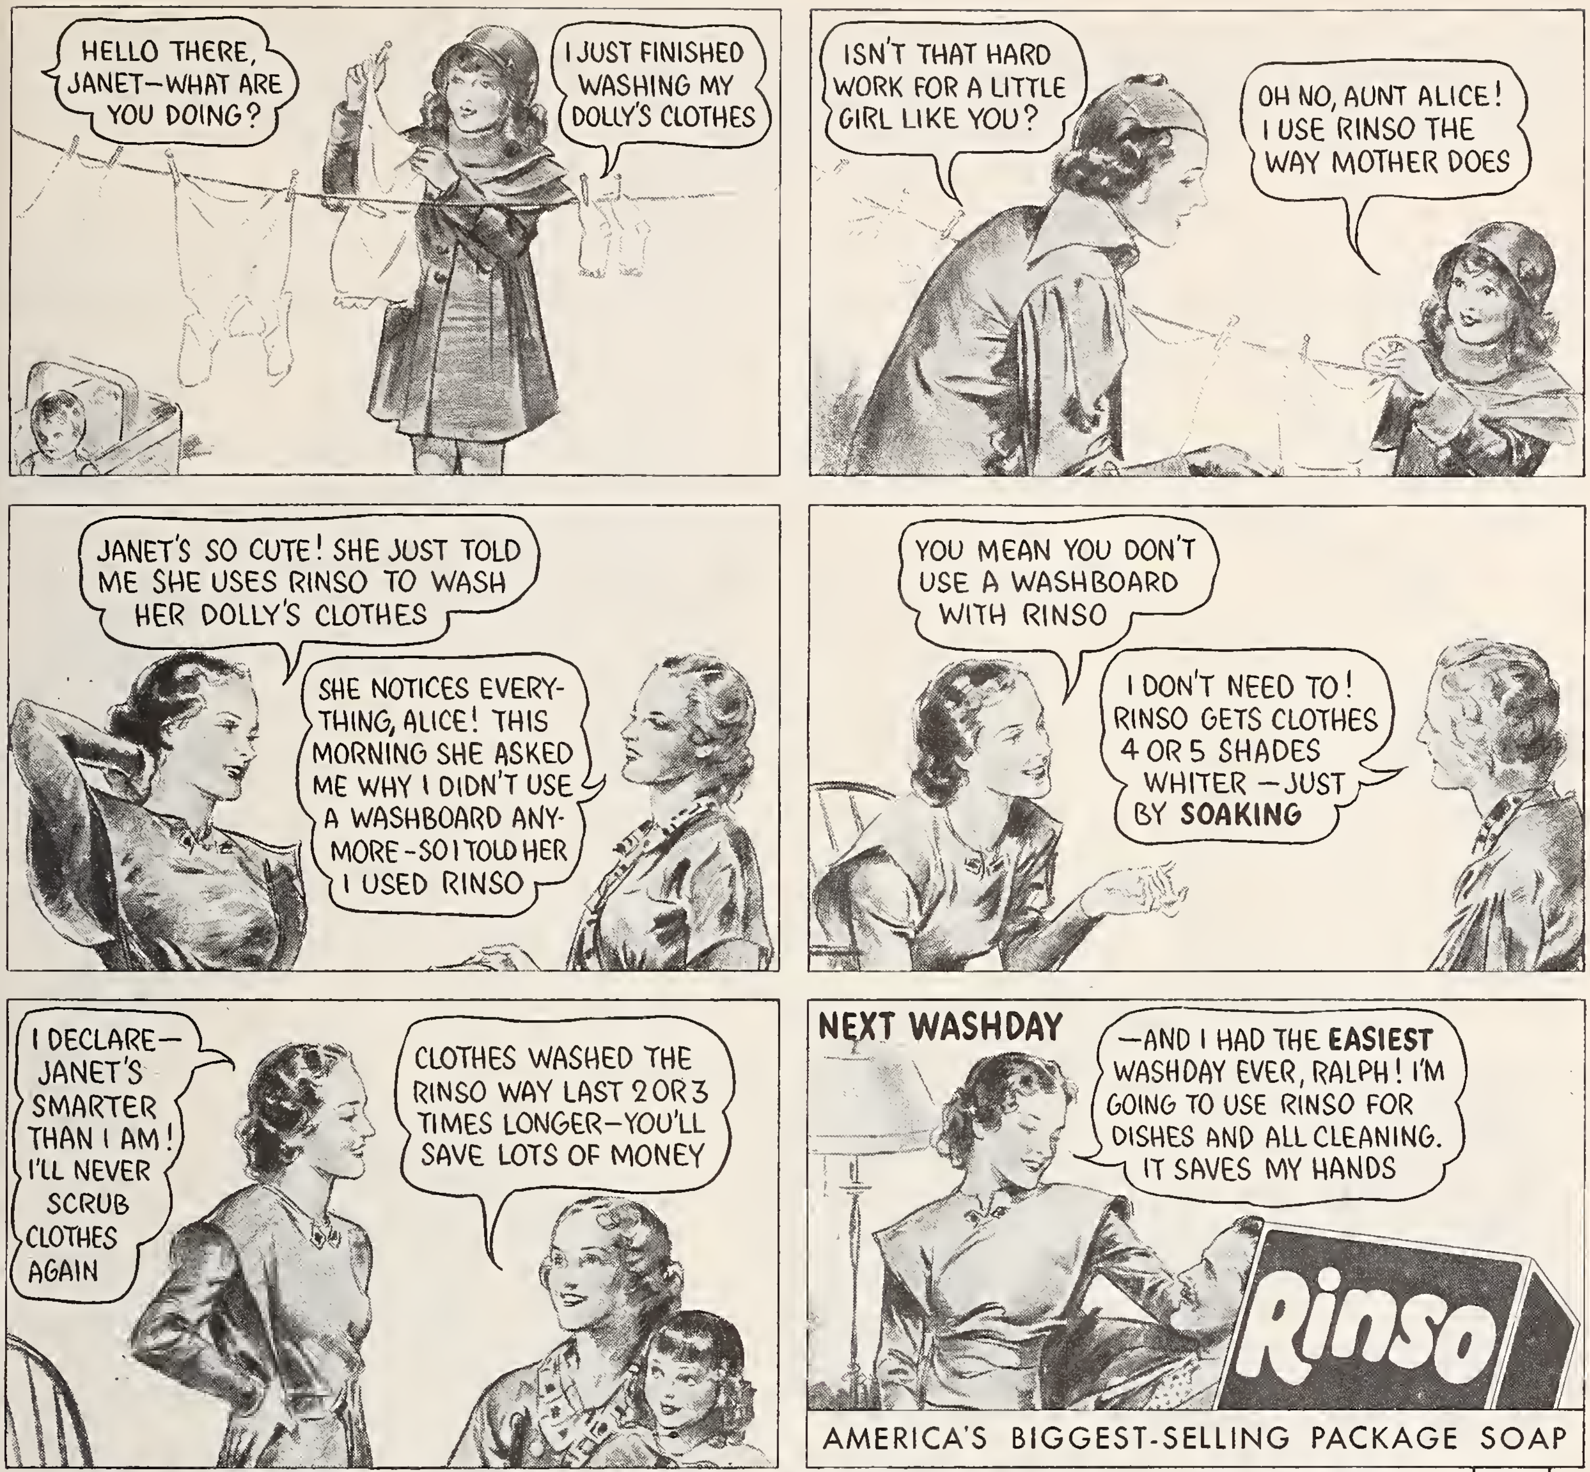
LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION OF ANY SCREEN MAGAZINE

GARBO'S TRIUMPHANT RETURN TO THE SCREEN

GRETA GARBO in "Queen Christina" with John Gilbert, Ian Keith, Lewis Stone, Elizabeth Young, A Rouben Mamoulian Production, Associate Producer, Walter Wanger

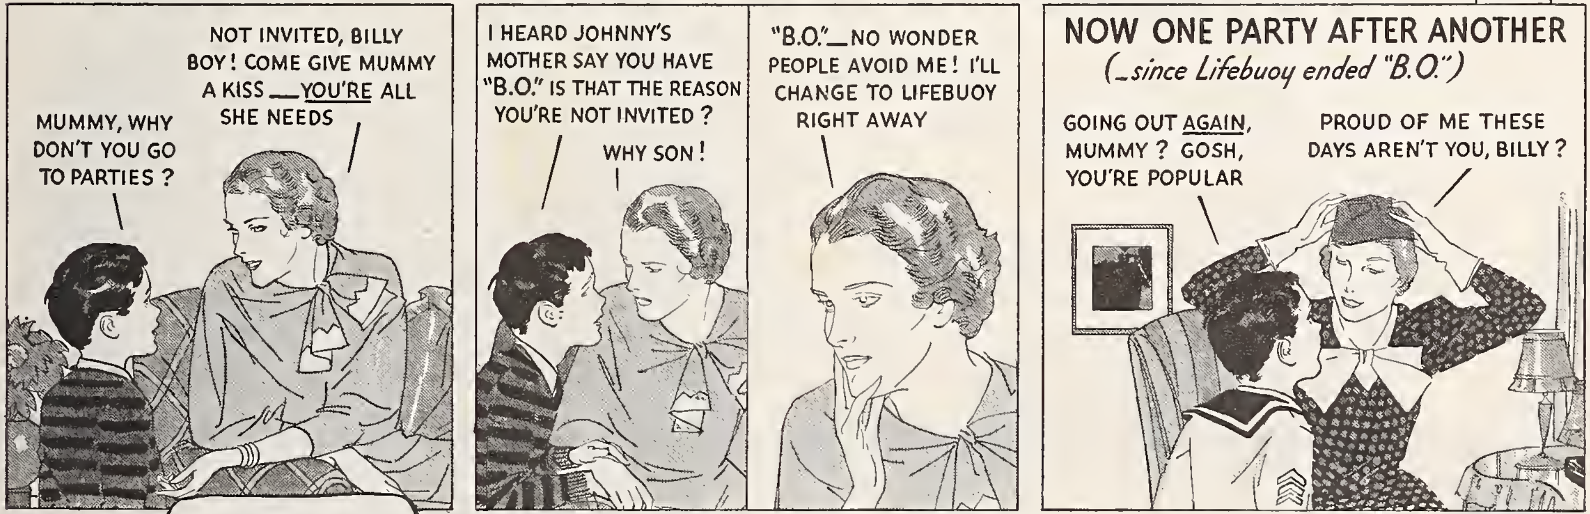
The Garbo thrill is back in your life! The Garbo beauty, the soul-stabbing allure of the greatest screen personality of all time! Millions have waited, and they will be joyful that her first glorious entertainment "QUEEN CHRISTINA", a drama of exquisite passions, is unquestionably the most romantic story in which she has ever appeared.

METRO · GOLDWYN · MAYER



HELLO THERE, JANET—WHAT ARE YOU DOING?
I JUST FINISHED WASHING MY DOLLY'S CLOTHES
ISN'T THAT HARD WORK FOR A LITTLE GIRL LIKE YOU?
OH NO, AUNT ALICE! I USE RINSO THE WAY MOTHER DOES
JANET'S SO CUTE! SHE JUST TOLD ME SHE USES RINSO TO WASH HER DOLLY'S CLOTHES
SHE NOTICES EVERYTHING, ALICE! THIS MORNING SHE ASKED ME WHY I DIDN'T USE A WASHBOARD ANYMORE—SO I TOLD HER I USED RINSO
YOU MEAN YOU DON'T USE A WASHBOARD WITH RINSO
I DON'T NEED TO! RINSO GETS CLOTHES 4 OR 5 SHADES WHITER—JUST BY SOAKING
I DECLARE—JANET'S SMARTER THAN I AM! I'LL NEVER SCRUB CLOTHES AGAIN
CLOTHES WASHED THE RINSO WAY LAST 2 OR 3 TIMES LONGER—YOU'LL SAVE LOTS OF MONEY
NEXT WASHDAY
—AND I HAD THE EASIEST WASHDAY EVER, RALPH! I'M GOING TO USE RINSO FOR DISHES AND ALL CLEANING. IT SAVES MY HANDS
Rinso
AMERICA'S BIGGEST-SELLING PACKAGE SOAP

PROUD OF HIS MOTHER NOW



MUMMY, WHY DON'T YOU GO TO PARTIES?
NOT INVITED, BILLY BOY! COME GIVE MUMMY A KISS — YOU'RE ALL SHE NEEDS
I HEARD JOHNNY'S MOTHER SAY YOU HAVE "B.O." IS THAT THE REASON YOU'RE NOT INVITED?
WHY SON!
"B.O."—NO WONDER PEOPLE AVOID ME! I'LL CHANGE TO LIFEBUOY RIGHT AWAY
NOW ONE PARTY AFTER ANOTHER
(since Lifebuoy ended "B.O.")
GOING OUT AGAIN, MUMMY? GOSH, YOU'RE POPULAR PROUD OF ME THESE DAYS AREN'T YOU, BILLY?

ITS PURIFYING LATHER IS FINE FOR THE SKIN, TOO

Its quickly-vanishing, hygienic scent tells you Lifebuoy lather is extra cleansing. Rich, creamy, penetrating, it purifies face pores and body pores alike. Clears and freshens dull, sallow skins to glowing health. Stops "B.O." (body odor).

These winter months, watch out! Windows are kept closed; rooms get hot and stuffy. The merest hint of "B.O." is quickly noticed. Play safe—bathe regularly with Lifebuoy. Refreshing, delightful—and it gives extra protection.

LIFEBUOY HEALTH SOAP

©CIB 210838

JAN -2 1934

MODERN Screen

It can't be done!

—BUT MODERN SCREEN DOES IT!

Does what? Why, gets a story from Norma Shearer that no one ever expected to get. No one ever expected Norma Shearer to talk so honestly and bravely about certain definite physical handicaps which she has overcome.

But—for MODERN SCREEN—Norma has talked about these things. And just how fearlessly she has talked you can discover for yourself on page 14.

Watch for another "It Can't Be Done" story in MODERN SCREEN. The most daring film magazine series in years!

FEATURES

NORMA SHEARER'S PERSONAL REVELATION .... Maude Lathem 14
A story we never expected to get! Norma talks more frankly about herself than ever before

BEHIND THE NEWS OF GARY'S ENGAGEMENT .... Katherine Albert 17
The lone wolf, Cooper, and Sandra Shaw are engaged. But—now what?

WHAT WILL HAPPEN TO THEM IN 1934? .... Harry Lang 26
Some of Dareos' prophecies are almost unbelievable! But see how accurate he was about 1933

OUR MODERN MARRIAGE

IT'S A GREAT MISTAKE,' SAYS CLAUDETTE COLBERT .... Adele Whitely Fletcher 30
So says this lady of her "separate establishment" marriage

IT'S OKAY, SAYS NORMAN FOSTER .... Katherine Albert 31
So says this gentlemen of his "separate establishment" marriage

NEW MEN! WHERE ARE THEY? .... Faith Baldwin 40
Oh, yes, there are a few new male attractions. But they lack something. What is it?

YOU LEARN TO KNOW THEM—WHEN THEY'RE CLOTHES SHOPPING
You bet you do! And the famous designer has sold clothes to them all! Howard Greer 44

LEE TRACY'S EXCLUSIVE STATEMENT TO MODERN SCREEN 47
His straight-from-the shoulder opinion about himself and that Mexican business

THE GREAT GOD STUDIO (Illustrated by Jack Welch) .... Gladys Hall 54
The demands of this deity are always met—or else!

WHAT GINGER OWES HER MOTHER .... Jim Tully 56
What doesn't she owe this devoted pal and parent!

MYRNA LOY IN MARBLE .... Jack Hill 59
She was perpetuated in a beautiful monument. And she never said a word!

BEHIND THE SCENES OF "ALICE IN WONDERLAND" .... Jack Jamison 62
One of the sweetest stories that ever came out of Hollywood

JOE SAYS A MOUTHFUL! .... Nanette Kutner 65
Joe E., of the slapstick Browns, is a very different chappie offscreen

THE PRIVATE LIFE OF A CROONER .... Walter Ramsey 66
Concluding the adventures, romantic and financial, of Dick Powell

WHAT IS THE SECRET OF THESE CHARMED GIFTS? .... Virginia T. Lane 69
It isn't a coincidence when it happens a dozen times!

DOUBLE-DUTY OUTFITS .... Margery Wells 72
Make your clothes serve you twice over. It's really easy!

DEPARTMENTS

BEAUTY ADVICE .... Mary Biddle 6
Some plain talk about escaping plainness

THE MODERN HOSTESS .... Phyllis Deen-Dunning 8
What to serve when the gang drops in after the party

BETWEEN YOU AND ME 10
What the fans think

THE HOLLYWOOD TIMES 35
We hold the presses for this news page

GOOD NEWS! 36
All the Hollywood chatter that's fit to print

REVIEWS—A TOUR OF TODAY'S TALKIES 48
Read 'em before you spend your money on movie-going

ALL JOKING ASIDE 50
Bet you didn't know these facts before!

MODERN SCREEN PATTERNS 74
Designs you'll simply ache to try for yourself

LET'S TALK ABOUT HOLLYWOOD 78
More news from the battle line

DIRECTORY OF PICTURES 82
Brief reviews—to keep you posted

DIRECTORY OF PLAYERS 84
Where they work and all the other facts about them

And also: Portraits, 19; Boy! Are they Happy!, 29; It's Always Summer at Palm Springs, 32; Love Birds, 42; Gallery of Honor, 51; Lovers, 60; What Lovely Clothes, Sylvia! 70.

ERNEST V. HEYN, Editor

MARY BURGUM, Associate Editor ABRIL LAMARQUE, Art Editor WALTER RAMSEY, Western Representative

Published monthly and copyrighted 1934 by Dell Publishing Company Incorporated. Office of publication at Washington and South Avenues, Dunellen, N. J. Executive and editorial offices, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; H. Meyer, Vice-President; M. Delacorte, Secretary. Vol. 7, No. 3, February, 1934. Printed in the U. S. A. Price in the United States $1.20 a year; 10c a copy. Canadian subscriptions, $2.40 a year. Foreign subscriptions, $2.20 a year. Entered as second class matter September 18, 1930, at the Post office at Dunellen, New Jersey, under act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material.

GOOD NUMBERS FROM PARAMOUNT

"FOUR FRIGHTENED PEOPLE"

Four frightened people fleeing into a tropical jungle to escape from a plague-ridden ship . . . shedding their good manners with their clothes . . . casting civilization aside, being once more, "Male and Female." The people—Claudette Colbert, Herbert Marshall, Mary Boland, William Gargan. The director—Cecil B. DeMille.

"SIX OF A KIND"

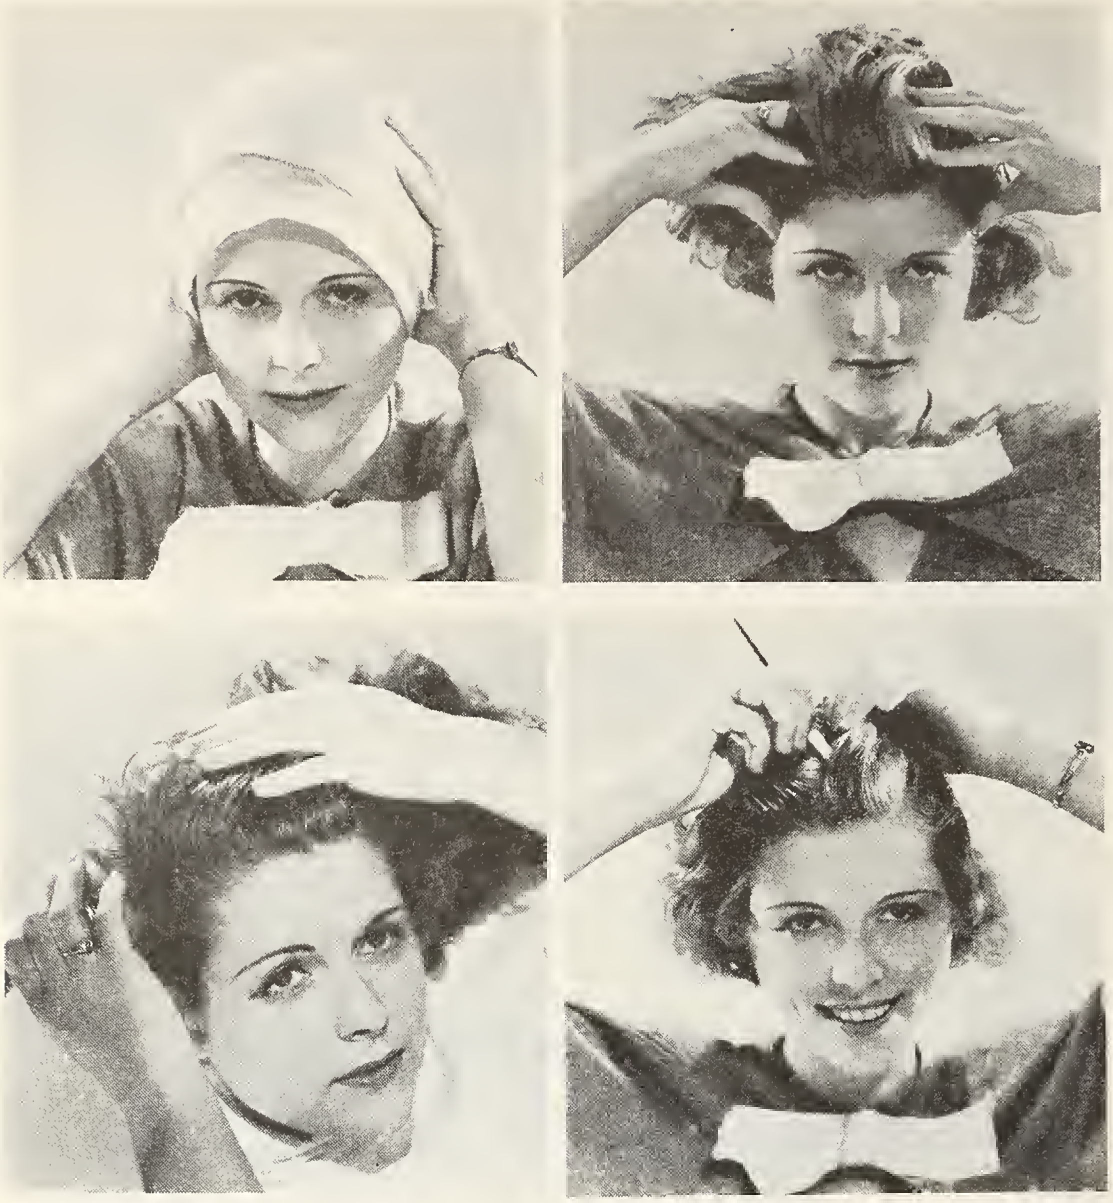
Six riotous comedians, out for fun . . . six larcenous picture-snatchers, stealing laughs from each other, six grand mirthmakers in a story made for mirth. The six—Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland, W. C. Fields and Alison Skipworth, George Burns and Gracie Allen. The director—Leo McCarey.

NO MEN ALLOWED

"EIGHT GIRLS IN A BOAT"

Eight lovely girls in a school where men were forbidden. Eight girls dreaming spring dreams . . . a lover looked in at the window and then there were seven. The eighth girl—Dorothy Wilson . . . the lover — Douglas Montgomery. The director—Richard Wallace.

if it's a PARAMOUNT PICTURE, it's the best show in town



At our left, we have an illustrated primer of hair beauty. Pretty Irene Hervey shows you the neatest and most efficient way to apply hot oil to your scalp—with a cotton-wrapped stick. Then, she massages that oil well into the scalp. Third, she steams her hair in a hot towel. And finally, after her shampoo, she rinses away every particle of soap with a handy hand spray.

Write to Mary Biddle about your own beauty problems. She'll be delighted to help you in working them out. Address
Mary Biddle,
MODERN SCREEN,
149 Madison Avenue,
New York, N. Y.
Enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope.

BEAUTY ADVICE

By MARY BIDDLE

I AM wondering if, maybe, the Mae West vogue and the interest in 1890 attire is going to do anything to styles of headdress. It's just an idea of my own, by the way. I haven't heard anything from Hollywood or seen anything in the papers about pompadours coming back in style. I've just been wondering, that's all . . .

You see, hair has remained about the same for quite a spell now. There have been minor changes—from extreme bobs to softer, more feminine bobs; bangs; foreheads and ears have been exposed to view and covered up again. But there has been no big, radical change in hair style as there undoubtedly has been in dress style. And so, I was just wondering . . .

I was wondering if maybe it wouldn't be smart if we started in to pay a whole lot of attention to our hair. Don't let's be satisfied with a minimum of hair beauty and hair chic. A that's-good-enough attitude. As I have said before, nothing can more easily make a plain girl pretty or a pretty girl beautiful than a really scrumptious head of hair. And vice versa. I know a very pretty girl whose hair usually looked like a golliwog's—and one day I saw her with the old topknot beautifully waved and groomed and she was a hundred percent more beautiful.

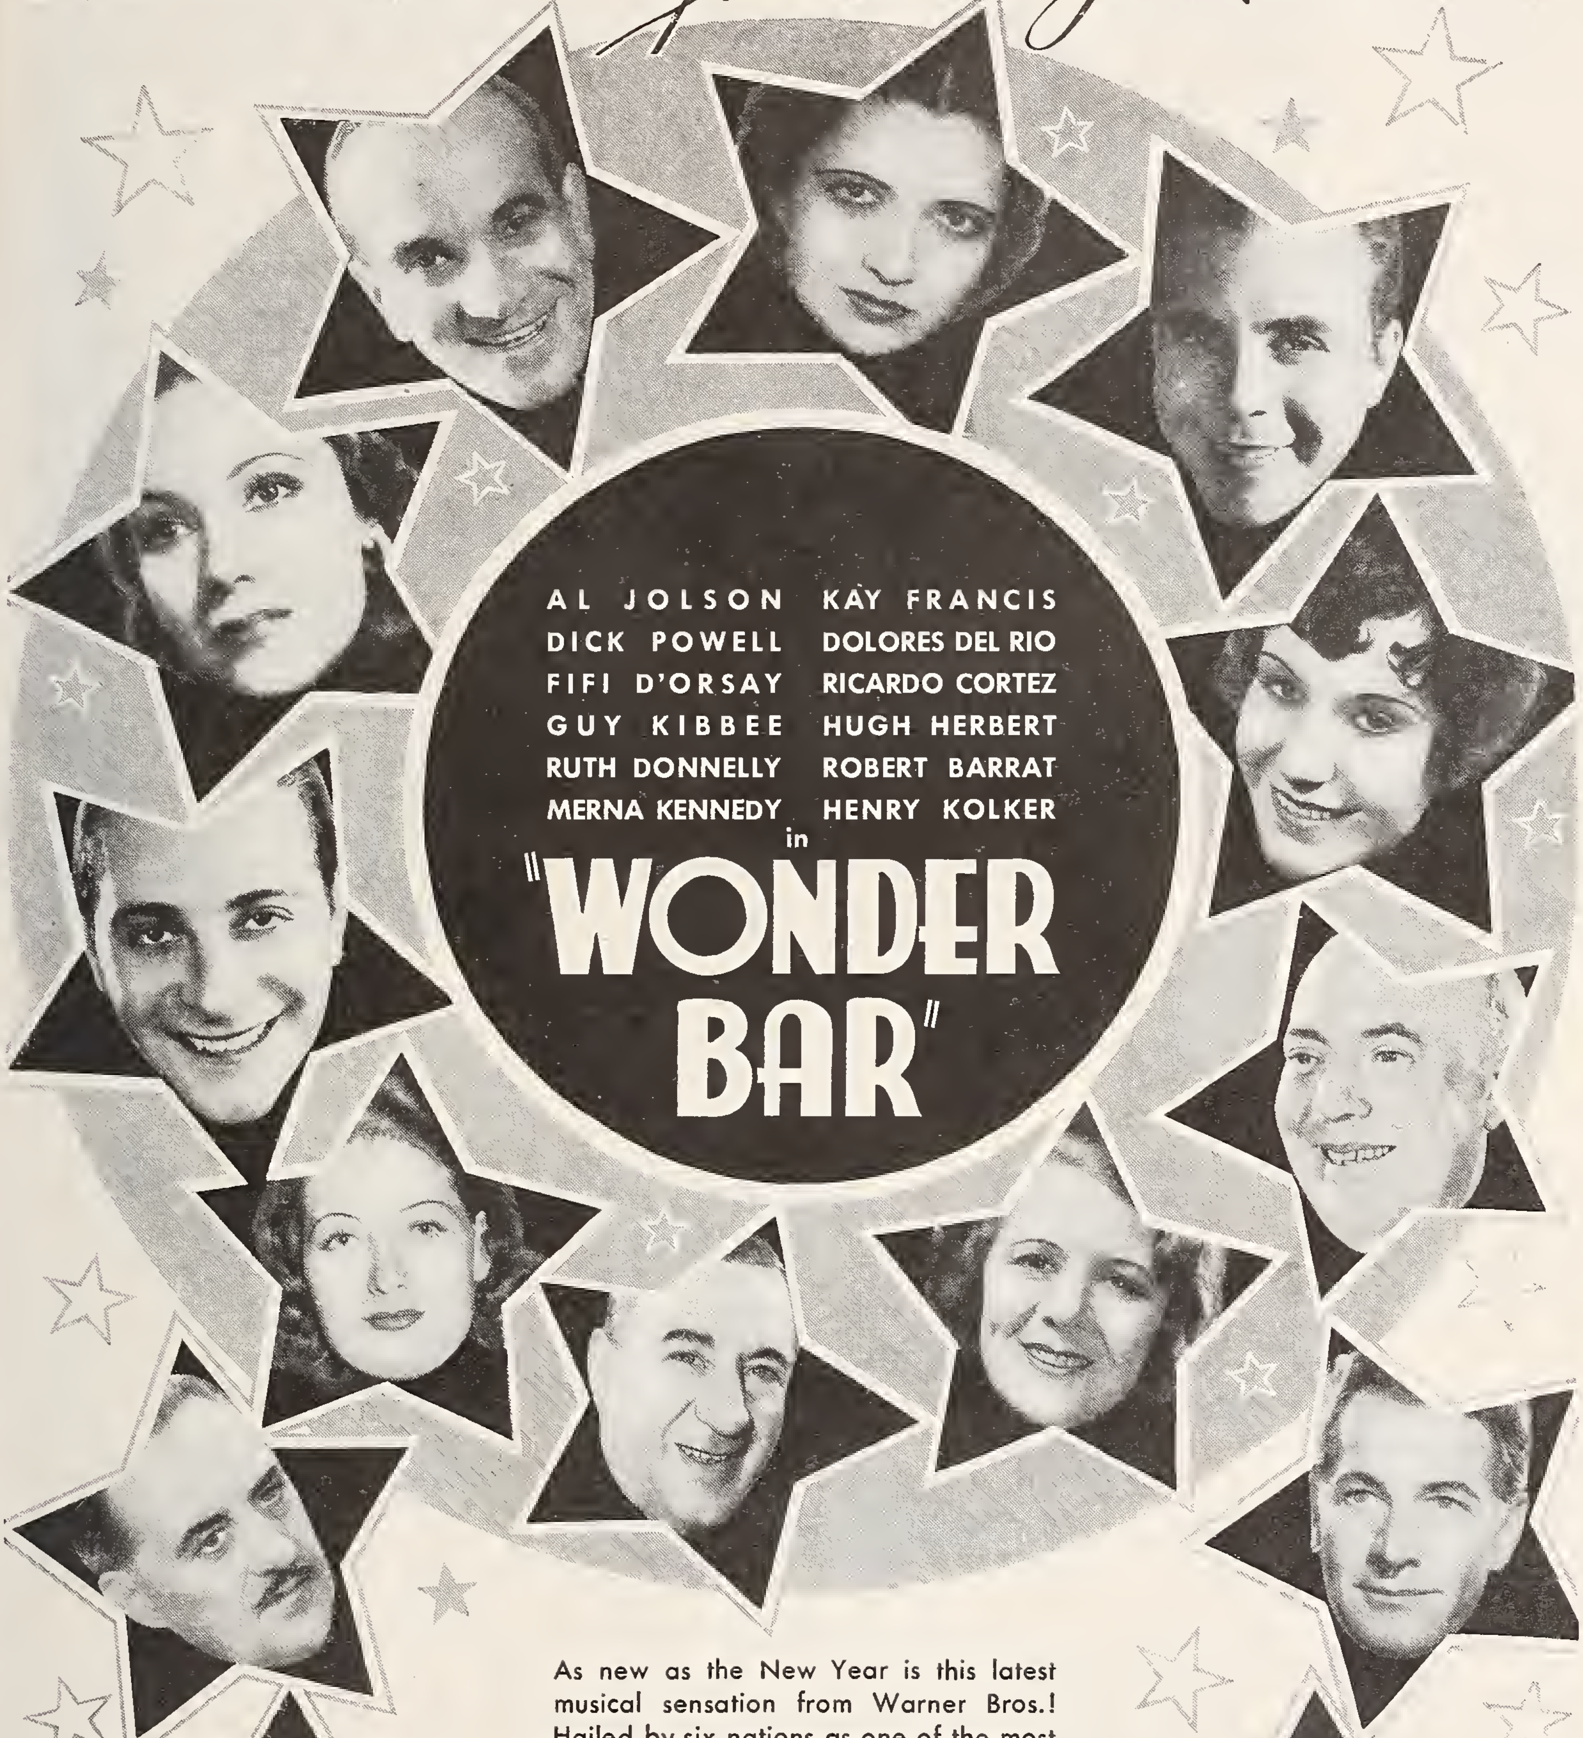
Mark my words: you can have attractive hair, no matter how hopeless it seems at the start, if you'll only keep working at it. And it's much easier to work on than a bad skin or a lumpy figure, too.

You can see "by de pitchers" on this page four fundamental steps toward hair beauty. First, Irene Hervey—a cute new M-G-M player—is applying warm oil to her scalp in one of the two correct ways. She has wound a swab of cotton on the end of a stick. With this she is parting her hair—closely, all over the head—and applying oil to her scalp. The other way is to moisten a sponge of cotton in the oil—quicker, but slightly messier.

Then, the sensible girl massages her oiled scalp with her fingers. She ruffles the hair up so that it stands on end. She may even pull it a little—pulling in moderation is good for the hair and the scalp. Then she ties a hot turkish towel around the old bean and leaves it there as long as there is any heat in it. In beauty parlors, they turn the drier whoozit on your oiled self and leave you to your own devices for ten (Continued on page 112)

HAIR-CHATTER AND SCALP-TALK—AND HINTS FOR GREATER HAIR BEAUTY

Now see all these Warner Bros. stars in one glorious picture....



AL JOLSON
KAY FRANCIS
DICK POWELL
DOLORES DEL RIO
FIFI D'ORSAY
RICARDO CORTEZ
GUY KIBBEE
HUGH HERBERT
RUTH DONNELLY
ROBERT BARRAT
MERNA KENNEDY
HENRY KOLKER
in

"WONDER BAR"

From
the Directors of
"Footlight Parade"—
LLOYD BACON and dance numbers created and directed by
BUSBY BERKELEY

As new as the New Year is this latest musical sensation from Warner Bros.! Hailed by six nations as one of the most novel of all stage hits, now at last it comes to the screen, bringing with it an utterly different conception of pictures with music! All the flash and glamor of "Gold Diggers" and "Footlight Parade", plus scores of surprise features! Your theatre will announce it soon as its most important attraction in years!

5
Brilliant New Songs
by "42nd Street's"
Famous Composers—
AL DUBIN and HARRY WARREN
A First Nat'l Picture

THE MODERN HOSTESS

(Above) You can imagine just how long that famous raisin-squash pie lasts when Dick is in the party. (Right) You certainly better have an extra supply of these little sandwiches on hand, for when your guests once taste them—

Beechnut Packing Company

By Phyllis Deen-Dunning

OUR own parents were so imbued with the idea that the hours after midnight are steeped in sin that, whenever their darling chee-ild stayed out after that hour, they had themselves a snappy time pacing the floor while they restrained one another from rushing out into the night or organizing searching expeditions. While all this was going on, we would be sitting calmly and contentedly in some bean wagon or lunch room, happily consuming scrambled eggs and discussing the night's doings. Really odd, that bean wagon complex—as we've grown older we have frequently wondered why it is that people of all ages joyously sweep into quick lunch places late at night when nothing short of acute starvation could induce them to enter one in the daytime. Of course, there's nothing wrong about it, but there are pleasanter surroundings amid which to satisfy the nocturnal craving for food which inevitably besets one after a dance or the theatre.

So, if you are a parent given to agonizing over the delayed home-comings of a son or daughter, or if you are the one being agonized over, or if you are just one of those sensitive souls who rebels at the unaesthetic atmosphere of a lunch cart, harken to the words of Richard Cromwell whose favorite place in which to partake of midnight snacks is his own home.

As you probably know, Dick has a charming new house up on a mountain top, where his sister Anne keeps house for him. Dick's and Anne's conception of the perfect way to wind up an evening's merry making is to invite the gang up to their house for something to eat. And don't get the notion that there is anything fancy about the food provided, either. As Dick says, "About the only things anybody ever wants to eat late at night are hamburger, eggs or cheese and so Anne's specialties play up these favorites in a big and, incidentally, a slightly different, way. The things she can do with them are nobody's business."

"WELL," we replied, "we intend to make them our business. And," we continued challengingly, "we want to know what you can possibly do with hamburger except put onion in, or leave onion out?"

Dick smiled pityingly.

"You can make really grand sandwiches out of hamburger by adding other things besides onions—the way Anne does," (Continued on page 101)

MODERN SCREEN STAR RECIPES

HOME SERVICE DEPARTMENT
MODERN SCREEN Magazine
149 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y.

Please send me the recipes for February, 1934.

Name........................
(Print in pencil)

Address........................
(Street and Number)

....
(City) (State)

Dick Cromwell gives you some swell new ideas for those midnight snacks

"Save Your Hands!"

Avoid careless use of Steel Wool and prevent scratched fingers and infection.

To get the greatest benefit from Steel Wool in scouring pots, pans, aluminum utensils, enamelware, glass dishes, knives, forks—everything scourable, use

SKOUR-PAK

THE STEEL WOOL BRUSH

Handy rubber holder enables you to use SKOUR-PAK down to the last inch. No waste. A little pack yet it outlasts two packs of ordinary steel wool.

Sold at 5 and 10¢ stores.

RIDGWAYS INC.
60 Warren St., New York City

NRA
MEMBER
U.S.
WE DO OUR PART

BETWEEN you AND me

Marvelous!
LEO TOM
OTTO
GEORGE
500

$250 for Tom and $250 for George

EDITH CLAPP of Washington, D. C., wonders what it's all about and writes to ask why:

Maybe I am a little slow—and let's say for sake of argument that I am. But, nevertheless, why do movie companies buy plays and books and then deliberately turn around and produce them in a manner which bewilders the author?

"Design for Living" was a lot of sweetness and light when it reached the screen. They even changed the names of the two leading male characters from Leo and Otto to Tom and George. Why?

(Probably so that some enterprising adaptor could earn his $500 per. Or are we being too hard, too?)

"Duck Soup" Gets D-Minus

RUTH MILLER of Newark, N. J., turns amateur critic and writes:

Well, as the girl said to the soldier, "I may not know art, but I know what I like!" And "Duck Soup," the Marx Brothers most recent celluloid effusion—or offense—is a dish I could do without. In fact, could I locate those four bright boys en route from Hollywood to New York, I would present a subpoena apiece to 'em by way of a belated Christmas gift. Then they'd have a chance to be presented at court—and believe me, it wouldn't be the Court of St. James—and tell the judge why innocent bystanders should be separated from part of their weekly salaries in exchange for this quartet's "entertainment."

Of all the stupid slapstick stuff replete with hackneyed situations and time-worn gags, "Duck Soup" takes the consommé. It is as unfunny as it is vulgar and elicited so few laughs from the audience that a morbid Russian "meller" might have been being enacted on the screen.

Who Isn't?

BABY LEROY FAN of Connellsville, Penna., is positively popping with adoration:

This is a very sappy letter. I can't say anything except "Isn't Baby LeRoy adorable?" And that doesn't make very exciting reading, does it? But isn't he adorable? And he's getting so big. I bet when he grows up he'll be a great big husk, don't you think? Oh, my! This letter is so fatuous. But all my friends are getting sick of my raving about the old precious—so I'll just have to rave to you.

(It's okay by us, Fan. We feel the same way. The walls of our office are actually plastered with pictures of 'im.)

Dear Friends,

I've been asked by Film Daily to list my choice for the Ten Best Pictures of the Year.

Since I'm limited to films released between November 1, 1932, and October 31, 1933, I can't include "Little Women" or "The Prizefighter and the Lady." Remember that, when you start raking me over the coals. But write me and tell me which of mine you'd have left out, which you'd have added in their place: "Cavalcade," "Private Life of Henry VIII," "Maedchen in Uniform," "State Fair," "Stranger's Return," "42nd Street," "Lady for a Day," "Sign of the Cross," "Farewell to Arms," and "Blonde Bombshell."

Would you have included "I Am a Fugitive"? How about "Hold Your Man" and "She Done Him Wrong"? (I liked them all.) Space prohibits my telling you here why I left out "Christopher Strong," "Topaze," "The Story of Temple Drake" and "Voltaire." I didn't see "Zoo in Budapest," but perhaps you'd put it on your list. Let's hear from you.

The Editor

Sorry darling!

From "The Other Side"

PATRICIA BRYANT of London, drops us a line:

I want you to publish this about Alison Skipworth. Isn't she marvelous and can't you imagine how lovely she must have been a few years ago?

While walking down Piccadilly last week, we were thrilled to meet H. B. Warner and he was so very sweet about being held up for his autograph. Rather different from Charles Laughton, whom we saw in Hyde Park. All he did was to rush past saying, "Sorry, darling, I never give autographs."

(That was naughty of him, wasn't it? But these artists must be humored we suppose.)

Just Sweet Enough for Her Taste

LILLIAN RALSTON of Cooghan, N. Y., finds only one incongruity in "Little Women."

I have just seen "Little Women," and it is simply grand. That childhood story with its adult philosophy unreels enchantingly and convincingly. Surely much credit is due the director and scenarist for turning out such a vibrant, vital piece of work that could have gone saccharine and sentimental in the wrong hands. The cast was uniformly excellent, I think, with the possible exception of the mother, who was a bit maudlin and therefore, out of tune with the piece.

However, the one incongruous note in an otherwise perfect production was the scenery of the playlet the March girls put on, and the beautifully printed program. How could they have obtained them? Couldn't possibly!

(We agree with you. The fans generally have criticized this obvious error. Maybe the wealthy Mr. Lawrence sent to the city for "them thar props.")

We Can't Keep the West Letters Out

C. R. DOOLEY of Miami, Florida, is slayed:

I'm slayed. Positively slayed! By none other than Mae West. Just roll Theda Bara, Pola Negri, Clara Bow, Connie Bennett and Garbo into one big roll and start them down the hill

(Continued on page 12)

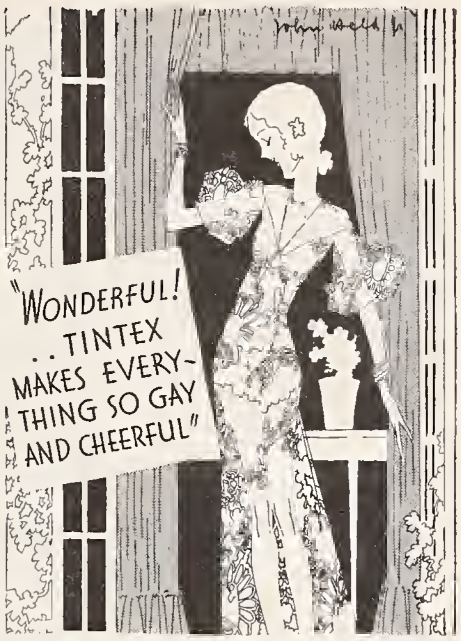
"ISN'T IT A LOVELY COLOR? TINTEX DID IT!"

Banish Faded Color with TINTEX!



"WONDERFUL! . . TINTEX MAKES EVERYTHING SO GAY AND CHEERFUL"

● These famous Tints and Dyes bring New Color Gayety to your Wardrobe and Home Decorations

HERE'S how Tintex works! It's easy . . . a child can use Tintex. It's quick . . . takes but a few minutes. It's perfect . . . only expensive professional work can equal its results.

●

Now—here's what Tintex does! It restores the original color to any faded fabric, or it gives an entirely different color, if you wish. There are 35 brilliant, long-lasting Tintex colors from which to choose.

●

And—here's what Tintex is for! Use Tintex for dresses, coats, sweaters, stockings, underthings, negligees, children's clothes, etc , etc. For curtains, drapes, table-scarfs, dinner-cloths, cushion covers, etc., etc.

●

There's color-beauty and money-saving in every package of Tintex!

"TINTEX HAS TINTED IT JUST-LIKE-NEW!"

On sale at drug stores and notion counters everywhere

PARK & TILFORD, Distributors

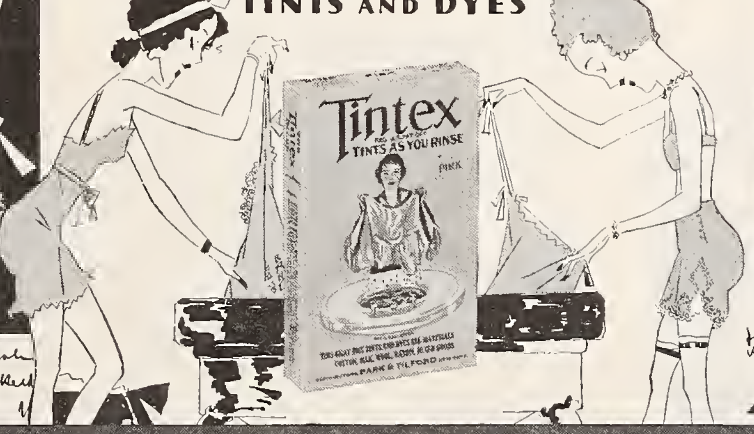
Tintex
TINTS AND DYES



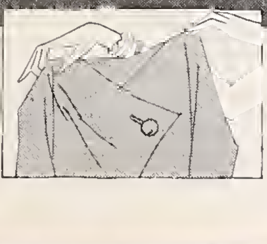
Tintex
TINTS AS YOU RINSE
PINK

"TINTEX IS SIMPLY PRICELESS!"

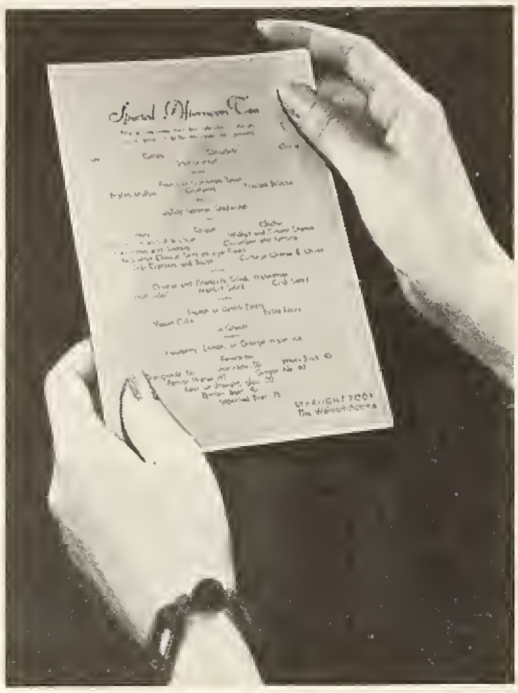
To Change Dark Colors to Light—use Tintex COLOR REMOVER

Supposing you have a dark dress (or any other dark-colored article) and are pining for a lighter colored one . . .

Tintex Color Remover will safely and speedily take out all trace of color (including black) from any fabric . . .



Then it can be redyed or tinted with Tintex Tints and Dyes in any new shade to suit yourself—either light or dark.



... and his eyes are saying—

"What Lovely Hands!"

In all the sum total of a woman's charms, what is more alluringly feminine than the soft loveliness of fair, smooth-textured hands!

Now, with Pacquin's, even busy hands may have the beauty men adore and women envy. Because Pacquin's unlike most creams, doesn't vanish — it penetrates, carrying into the skin precious natural softening oils, so necessary to keep your hands youthfully smooth and supple. It counteracts the drying, oil-robbing effect of exposure to water or weather—the chief enemy of hand beauty.

Try Pacquin's for a week. You'll rejoice at the way it softens and whitens your hands—you'll find it different and pleasantly economical, because a little pat goes such a long way. Don't try to hide your hands—use

Pacquin's

Pacquin's
HAND CREAM

In convenient sized jars, priced 10¢ to $1.00. Also Pacquin's Cold Cream, Vanishing Cream, Lemon Cream, and Cleansing Cream.

Pacquin Laboratories Corporation, New York

Between You and Me

(Continued from page 10)

into the discard—or the bay. And give me just Mae West.

Reader Does a Faith Baldwin

MISS JERRY PETTIT of Flint, Michigan, would like to meet:

Joan Crawford—because she is my favorite actress.

Frances Dee—because she's so sweet and pretty.

Franchot Tone—because he's a very good friend of Joan Crawford. (Friend, sez you? Sister, it's more than friendship!)

Bing Crosby—because he thrills me so with his singing.

Jackie Cooper—because he makes me cry—and I love it.

Dorothy Jordan—because she has such a sweet face.

Greta Garbo—because I would like to find out for myself just how mysterious she really is.

Mae West—because she makes me laugh, even though she is very naughty.

One of Hollywood's Best-Dressed Men Gets a Rave

GEORGE SWEETMAN, Yonkers, N. Y., thinks Monsieur Powell is elegant:

Here's to Bill Powell! In my opinion, a marvelous actor. Not boisterous, nor one who uses he-man tactics, but the cool, calm gentleman always. I am anticipating with great eagerness seeing his forthcoming picture, "King of Fashion."

Bravos for a New Baritone!

LILLY D., of Astoria, L. I., is glad that America discovered Columbo:

Congratulations and three hearty cheers to the one and only Russ Columbo. Folks, there's a crooner for you. His singing comes straight from the heart. He was a sensation in "Broadway Through a Keyhole."

She's Worried About Gable

JENNIE MAY W. of Toronto, Canada, thinks he's had a raw deal:

Up pops the biggest box office sensation since Valentino. He's no second Forbes-Robertson when it comes to acting, but he has appeal, vitality and under a capable director he turns in a good performance. What's most important, he's exciting —after a long, dreary run of namby-pamby movie men. What happens? He gets a few good pictures—then he's pushed into supporting roles. Even those get weaker and weaker. Why, you'd hardly know the old Clark Gable today! It makes me mad. Why is M-G-M wasting this good man in poor roles?

. . (There's a powerful lot of truth in what you say, m' dear. We suspect M-G-M wanted to "build him up"—in other words, they didn't want to ruin him by starring him too quickly. They've gone to an extreme in doing this. However, chirrup—chirrup. Clark really gets a chance to do "China Seas" after all this time.)

Just a Few Prejudices

JOHN HENRY of New York City talks out in meeting:

Maybe I'm getting to be an old crab, but, honestly, I'm getting awfully sick of some of the movie people and some of the types of pictures that others continue to rave about. F'rinstance: I'm tired of musicals. Never did like 'em much, anyway. I admit the new crop are one hundred percent better than the old, but they're all the same. And I'm tired of Lionel Barrymore. He's always the same. I think he can do excellent work—I've seen him do it. But it's time for a change in style now. And I'm not impressed with huge, stellar casts unless the people in them do stellar work. I thought "Night Flight" was a great waste of money.

Who's a Big Bad Wolf? Garbo

JERRY HERR of Philadelphia, Pa., says:

I have just read an article in MODERN SCREEN that human beings frighten Greta Garbo. Well! Isn't that just too bad. If you want to ask me, I think that big bad wolf, Greta, frightens us. Especially when she wore that short dancing dress with her long, lanky legs, and feet like canal boats in "Grand Hotel." And when Garbo did that dance and flitted around like a long giraffe our whole party laughed out loud. I would like to shoot the guy that picked Garbo for that kind of a role, or any role. Take her away, I tank you send her home.

Believe It or Not, She Likes Bow

MARLENE SMITH of Detroit, Mich., sends highest praise:

Orchids to the one and only Clara Bow. Have just seen her latest picture, "Hoopla," and I certainly don't think anyone could have been any sweeter or more adorable than Clara was. She has such beautiful and expressive eyes. But what's the use of description and praise, I couldn't put into words my true opinion of that gorgeous star. If Clara Bow should ever leave the screen, as rumored, I should feel as though I had lost someone whom I loved dearly. Beautiful, adorable, alluring Clara Bow.

Let's Go Natural for a Change

ELLEN HONE of Cleveland, Ohio, storms at us in this letter:

I am just sick and tired of reading praises, praises and more praises for every kind of garden and hothouse variety of actor and actress of the screen. Every darn movie fan magazine that one picks up reveals nothing but how wonderful they all are. Really, one would never guess that these people are truly human. That they have any of the natural emotions that are the very opposite of praise begetting. I'll bet plenty of them slap their kids in a fit of anger (that isn't artistic temperament, either) and scream at their husbands and wives. All the pretty-pretty pictures and all the pretty-pretty stories get just a bit nauseous at times.

Wants Serials Back in the Picture Diet

MARY CUSHING of Chicago, Ill., makes a plea:

I have been a great movie fan for many years. I see all the shows. Why not change the movies once in a while? Why not bring back some of those serials, good clean pictures like "Dollar Down," starring Ruth Roland. Let's have a good old serial anyway. The public needs a change. Why not give it to them?

Well, for Art's Sake!

MARGARET TEDFORD of Santa Ana, Calif., thinks a little goes a heck of a way:

Except for the occasional picture, I do not believe in the following out of the expression "art for art's sake." Once in a while a production, such as the unforgettable "Sunrise," is made in which artistic photography, mood and story are perfectly harmonized; art becomes the primary interest and no one would question its right to supremacy. The forthcoming "Alice in Wonderland" will be, by the nature of its subject matter, fantastically imaginative and primarily artistic. It is impossible to conceive of its being handled in any other manner.

As a rule, however, I am convinced that art as it is used in motion pictures should not be isolated from life. Rather, it should express and interpret life and be in some way definitely connected with human experience, either physical or mental.

Which Comes First—Star or Story?

LILLIAN CORDWELL of New York writes:

Give us more stories and pictures like "Back Street," real, honest-to-goodness, possible pictures.

Star our own Irene Dunne and Warner Baxter in such pictures. The stars playing in a picture make or mar the whole story.

And This Means Somep'n—When You've Seen 'Em All

C. R. DOOLEY of Miami, Fla., writes us:

Well, suh—I've seen it all! Yes, suh, everything!

When those "can't-be-beat" producers way out there across the continent make more brilliant productions than "42nd Street, "Gold Diggers of 1933" and "Footlight Parade,"

(Continued on page 116)

Kleinert's
THRIFT
GUARANTEED
MADE IN U.S.AMERICA
JIF 3 390

Kleinert's
DRESS SHIELDS

give all your dresses guaranteed protection • • •

You—as well as Hollywood stars—will find that any intense emotion instantly increases underarm moisture even in the coolest weather.

Kleinert's Dress Shields protect your frocks not only in such emergencies but also from the friction of daily wear and the deteriorating effects of strong underarm astringents.

It is the truest kind of economy to insist on this guaranteed protection — especially when 25¢ will buy genuine Kleinert's Dress Shields in the store where you purchased this magazine.

Kleinert's
T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
GUARANTEED DRESS SHIELDS

as low as 25¢ a pair

NRA MEMBER U.S. WE DO OUR PART

Today, she is unquestionably one of the screen's loveliest ladies.

NORMA SHEARER'S personal REVELATIONS

FOR several years all of us in Hollywood have known what terrific handicaps Norma Shearer has had. We have known that Norma was not always the beautiful, radiant, glamorous woman you now see on the screen. Her muscular legs and upper arms, her long neck, her crooked teeth and the cast in her eye—yes really!—were things we who know the stars so well had whispered about.

But, of course, it never occurred to any of us that she, herself, would ever talk about these handicaps. Stars are supposed to be perfect. They cringe when their defects are even hinted at. It's supposed to be bad business. Therefore, I want to say that Norma proved herself the courageous, honest, fine person she is when she frankly discussed these things with me. My hat's off to her, for she has talked for what I think is a noble reason. She has talked to me, told me things that editors have said for years it would be impossible to get her to admit, for one reason only. Because I told her that if she allowed me to write about the struggles she has had, with her handicaps and the marvelous way in which she has overcome them, it would inspire others, would show the thousands of women readers of MODERN SCREEN that one should not be discouraged by physical defects and that they can be overcome.

She was anxious that, in quoting her, I did not make her sound sure of herself. She is not sure of herself, not setting herself up as a perfect example by any manner of means. Merely this—she started out in pictures with more physical defects than almost any star has had. She has overcome them with courage and fortitude and, because I think her story told in her own words is a beautiful message of hope, I am going to pass it on to you.

Spectacular as this story is, amazed as other fan magazines will be to see it here, it is printed, I assure you, for one reason only—because it is an inspirational document. Norma would not have talked thus to be sensational. She has told the truth about herself at last because I said that you and you and you would be encouraged in your own daily struggles by it.

So this is Norma's story.

"I don't mind at all talking about the kind of fight I have had, if it will help anybody else with their problems.

"The biggest trouble I have had is that I was an athletic girl. Most English girls are. I came from Canada and I had a brother who thought it was fine for me to match my physical strength against his, and I was proud of the muscles I developed. I played tennis like a fiend. I golfed and walked and ran and skated and swam, which gave me a pair of biceps a prize fighter might have looked

You thought she dare not—but at last this great star frankly discusses her

The teeth she straightened!

The eyes she had to control!

It can't be done!

—BUT MODERN SCREEN DOES IT!

You thought: "It can't be done; Norma Shearer would never talk frankly and fearlessly on the delicate subject of the physical handicaps she overcame."

But Norma Shearer does—exclusively for MODERN SCREEN.

When you and Hollywood say, "It can't be done!" MODERN SCREEN does it. Watch for the next feature in this thrilling series.

By MAUDE LATHEM

at with envy and the muscles of my legs were all out of proportion.

"In addition to this, I am fairly tall. When I decided to try my luck at pictures I hadn't the remotest idea of what was ahead of me. Of course, I knew I was not beautiful but I thought then, and I think now, that that indefinable something which we call charm is so much more important than mere beauty. I thought maybe I could cultivate charm.

"When I got one look at my first screen test, I discovered as ungainly a sight as you can imagine. It was not so much that the features of my face were magnified into something terrible. There was nothing special about the face one way or another. Of course, it wasn't a stylish face, but I hoped by and by the screen would use more than one type of face—which they now do.

"But my figure and walk! I, being the athletic type, love the long stride and easy walk of the athlete, but for a girl who might aspire to ingénue rôles on the screen then, this was out. I wouldn't advise any girl to do strenuous athletics while in her teens, if she plans a screen career later. Of course, if you mean to be an eccentric dancer like Charlotte Greenwood or if you are born with the glamor of a Garbo, that is okay. But I didn't come under either head. I simply had a muscular figure and an ungainly walk—on the screen!

"You may think dieting to reduce weight is pretty bad, and I agree with you, but it is nothing compared to trying to get rid of muscles and at the same time to eat a sufficient amount of tissue-building foods so your resistance and vitality are not lowered.

THIS was one of the greatest battles of my life. There were days when I thought I simply could not go on, days when I thought no goal would be worth the fight.

physical handicaps—so that her methods of overcoming them may help you

"You have read the criticisms of my ugly legs, haven't you?" asks Norma—the girl to whom a handicap is a challenge.

Of course, there was never a moment when I was not conscious of gnawing pangs of hunger, but, in addition to this, I could take no exercise except the simplest stretching movements about ten minutes in the morning. I, who had walked miles every day of my life!

"It seemed as if my arms and legs would atrophy from disuse. But I did keep on. If I meant to be a picture player, I must go on.

"When the muscles of my legs were shown at the wrong angle, a storm of criticism followed. You have read the criticisms about my ugly legs, haven't you?"

We were stretched out on the sand by her swimming pool. I turned to look at her in her vivid yellow and blue bathing suit and it occurred to me that I had never seen a lovelier pair of legs than those belonging to Norma Shearer.

"So many of my scenes," she continued, "were ruined because I forgot to cross my legs properly or place them in the right position to hide the muscles from the camera. This was no easy task, because sometimes dresses were short and anyway it was hard always to think about your legs.

"I would tell the director I didn't think I had done my best with a scene, and ask to be allowed to take it over. In reality, I remembered that the legs had probably ruined the scene. Of course, every time there was a chance to wear a longer dress in a scene, I did so.

"My upper arms were large enough to the naked eye, but you should have seen what the camera did to them! I always planned dresses that had a portion of a sleeve so the upper arm would be covered. I was so sensitive I didn't want to talk to the wardrobe woman about it. I would say I didn't like the color of the dress, or the texture or make any criticism, while I was hastily looking over everything else in the wardrobe (then I was not a star and I took what the wardrobe had) until my eye lighted on one with sleeves or half sleeves. I always begged for that one, no matter what the cut of it was. The wardrobe woman must have known, but she never said a word.

IT was three years before those muscles in arms and legs actually gave way. Three years of almost starvation and inactivity. I had begun to think I would give way before the muscles did. Then as the muscles softened, they had to be gently massaged so they wouldn't sag. After all these years of struggle you can imagine what a thrill it gives me when someone I meet for the first time says, 'My how small you are. I never dreamed you were so tiny.'

"Another great battle I had was with my teeth. As I grew up, I took good care of my teeth and it didn't disturb me that the two little teeth on either side of my front teeth were somewhat irregular. In fact, in real life I rather like a slight irregularity in the teeth, similar to Marilyn Miller's. I think it gives one personality. But when I saw myself on the screen I knew what had to be done. The other teeth had to be pulled back so these smaller teeth could fit perfectly into their rightful places. You know the kind of braces children sometimes have to wear to adjust their teeth. Oh, if I'd only worn braces when I was a child! I was about twenty when I began.

"When you can wear the braces continuously, as the dentists always insist that children do, the pain becomes almost negligible after a few days, for putting in the brace is what causes the hurt. But in my case, I couldn't wear the brace during the day because of working or trying to get work. I could only put them on at night which meant, while I did not lose all of the effect during the day, each night the pain was as great as the first night I put the brace on. As I look back now, I know only youth and a good constitution would get one through that. Just imagine putting your head on a pillow and making yourself sleep, with a throbbing toothache every night of your life.

"I started the dental work in New York and came to Hollywood and had a fearful experience. There weren't so many dentists familiar with orthodontia then as now and the man to whom I went put braces on my teeth that just reversed the process. The teeth were actually drawn back together as they were in the first place!

"When I sat in the projection room one day looking at some rushes and saw some peculiar shadows cast across my front teeth which made them look as if they were out, I was frantic. I could endure anything while I was getting results, but when I discovered that all my suffering had been for nothing I was half crazy.

EVENTUALLY I found a marvelous orthodontist who gave me proper braces, but so much harm had been done by that time that I had to wear a brace on the lower teeth as well in order to get best results.

"Eight long years it took me to gain a semblance of regularity. Eight years of terrific pain every night, because the braces had to be removed when I was working!

"But this is just a part of the struggle. I have a funny, long neck. At one time photographers said that kind of neck and shoulders indicated youth. What I saw my neck look like on the screen was enough to make one jump into the river. Every time I had an emotional scene (I will never get over feeling my scenes) I found myself becoming so tense that the muscles of my neck became taut and stood out like whipcords.

(Continued on page 108)

BEHIND THE NEWS OF GARY'S ENGAGEMENT

. . . They're engaged, yes. But will they marry? Hm—well, here's our guess! And what's yours?

Mr. Gary Cooper of Montana and Hollywood. Miss Sandra Shaw of Park Avenue and Southampton. Is their engagement a "hush press" measure?

By KATHERINE ALBERT

MAYBE in a couple of months I'm going to feel so doggone silly for speaking out in meeting like this and telling you exactly what I think about the Gary Cooper-Sandra Shaw romance. And maybe MODERN SCREEN is going to have to do a lot of plain and fancy word-eating, but I do want you to know all of the inside facts in the case and then you can do what I've done—draw your own conclusions.

Despite the fact that metropolitan newspapers carried large, toney announcements of the engagement of Veronica Balfe (Sandra Shaw to Hollywood and Walter Winchell) to Gary Cooper, and despite the fact that said announcements were accompanied by large, toney photographs of Miss Balfe—or Miss Shaw, as you will—I think there's a strong possibility that they may never be married. Gosh! How wrong I may be. But if I'm wrong, I'm in good company. For the famous psychic, Dareos, says in his story on page twenty-six of this magazine that, despite all rumors, Gary Cooper will remain single, at least for another year. And an awful lot can happen to an engagement in a year, when one of the parties is a famous male star and the other is a daughter of Park Avenue.

Now I'll tell you what I know of the behind-the-scenes story of Gary and Sandra.

It's hard enough to get that strong, silent gent, Gary Cooper, to tell you he thinks it's a pleasant day. Imagine, then, how infinitely more difficult it is to make him talk about what lies closest to his (Continued on page 110)

YOUTH ROMANCE

Jesse L. LASKY'S I am Suzanne!

Lilian HARVEY · GENE RAYMOND

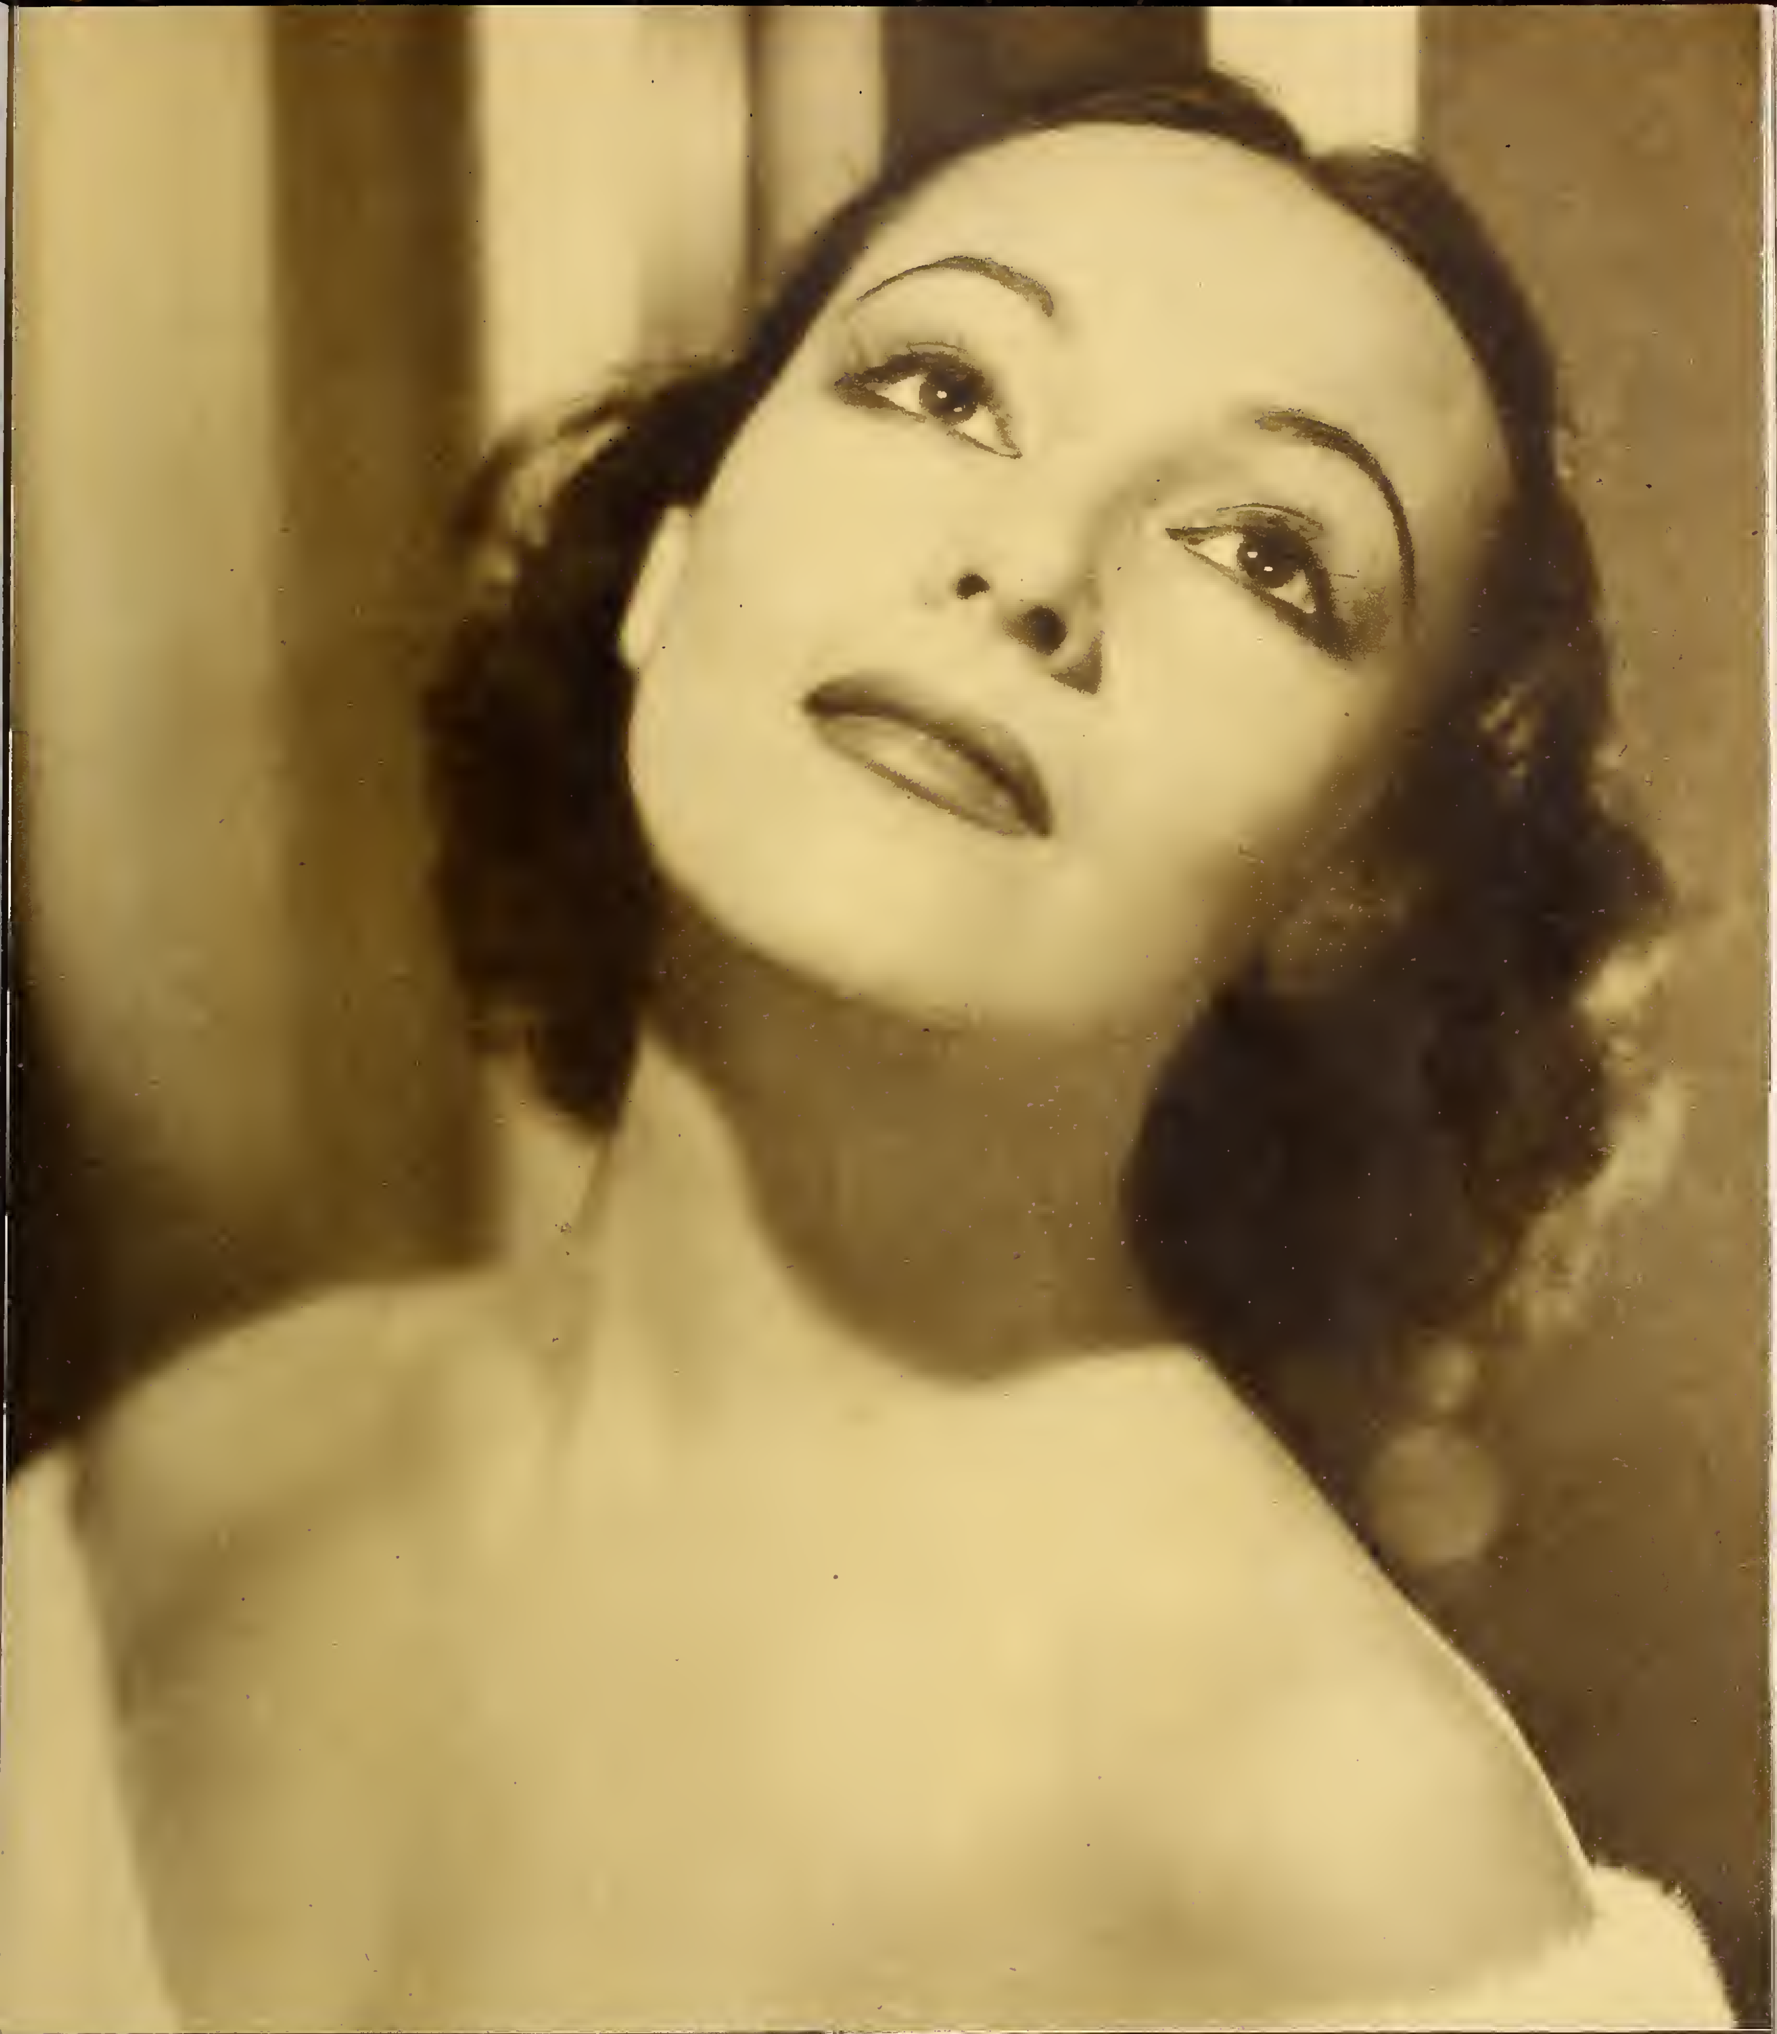
LESLIE BANKS

PODRECCA'S PICCOLI MARIONETTES

Directed by Rowland V. Lee

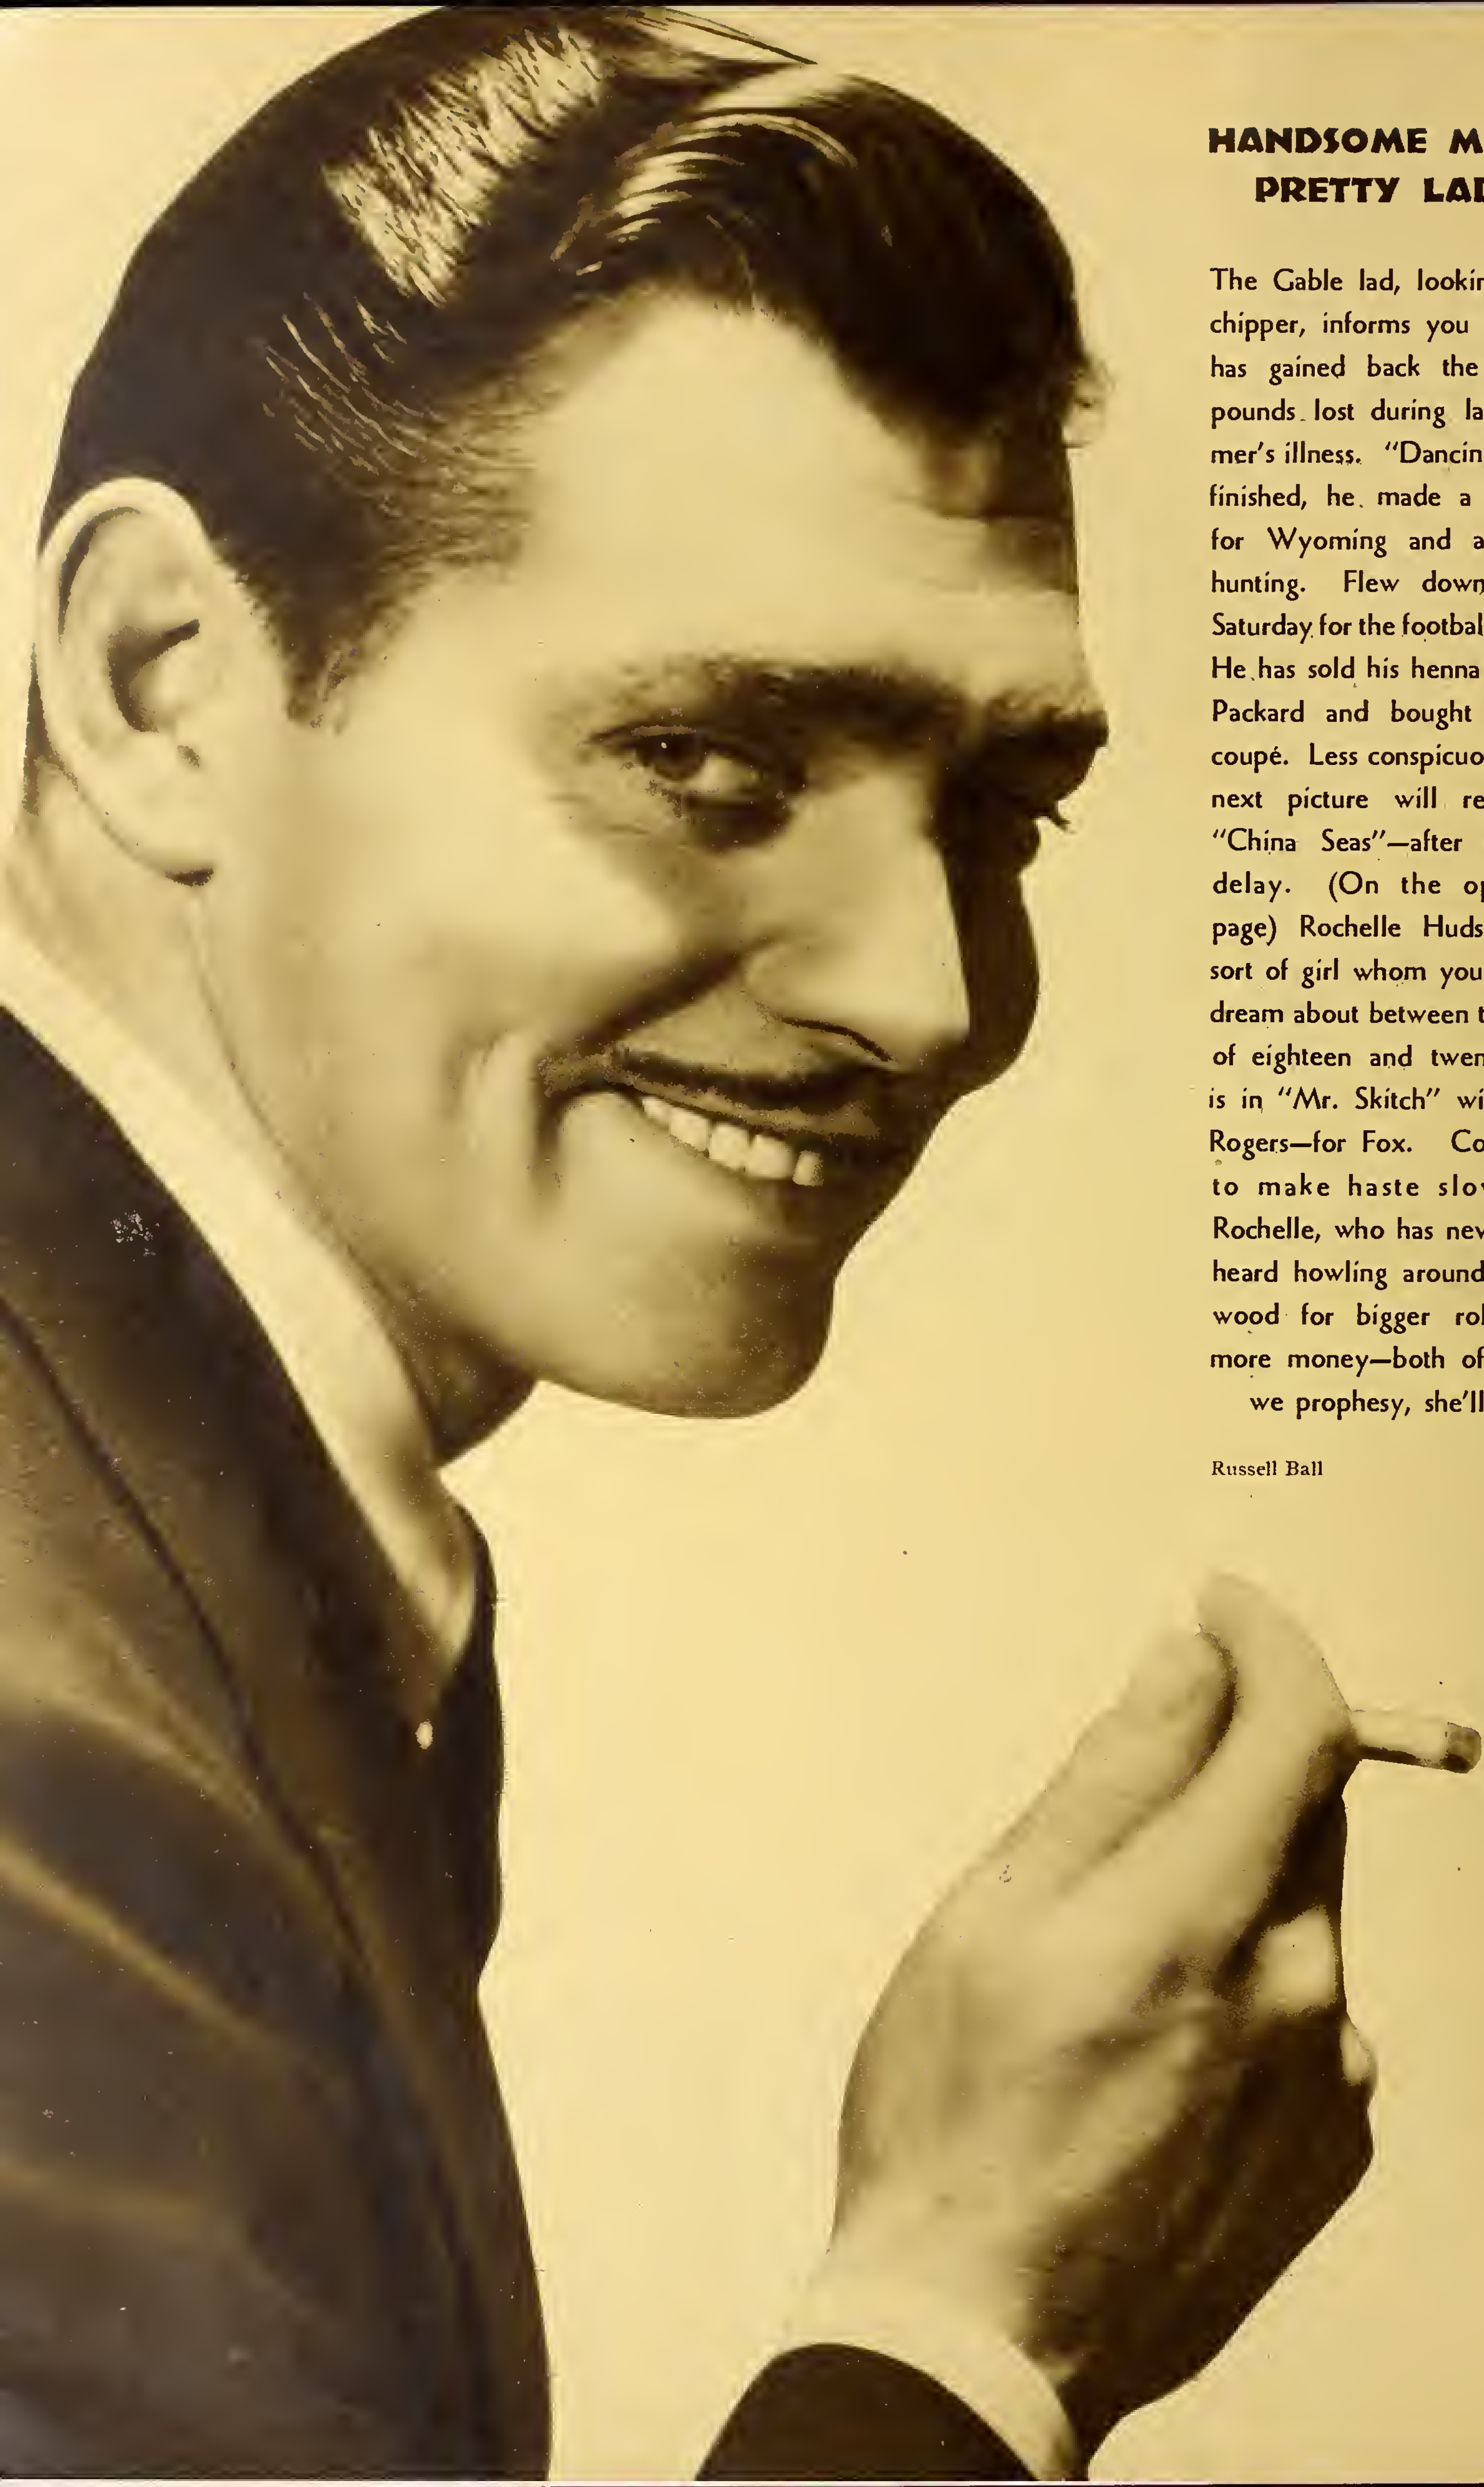
Romance—tender, heart-warming as "Seventh Heaven"! Your heart follows the lovers down the shining path of their romance . . . While your eyes light up at the grace of beautiful girls, gorgeous dancers, human marionettes . . . and your ears tingle to the lilt of tuneful melodies . . . Truly great entertainment—a love story that lives and throbs against the world's strangest background.

FOX



Portraits

The beauteous Dolores Del Rio is the cameraman's idea of a picnic. She photographs perfectly, you see, from any angle whatsoever. She has the most pampered dog in Hollywood. There's a special trainer, if you don't mind, to keep him physically fit. Dolores wears no make-up off screen. She dresses very plainly, sticking pretty closely to black and white. With "Flying Down to Rio" completed, Dolores is doing "Dance of Desire" with Joel McCrea.



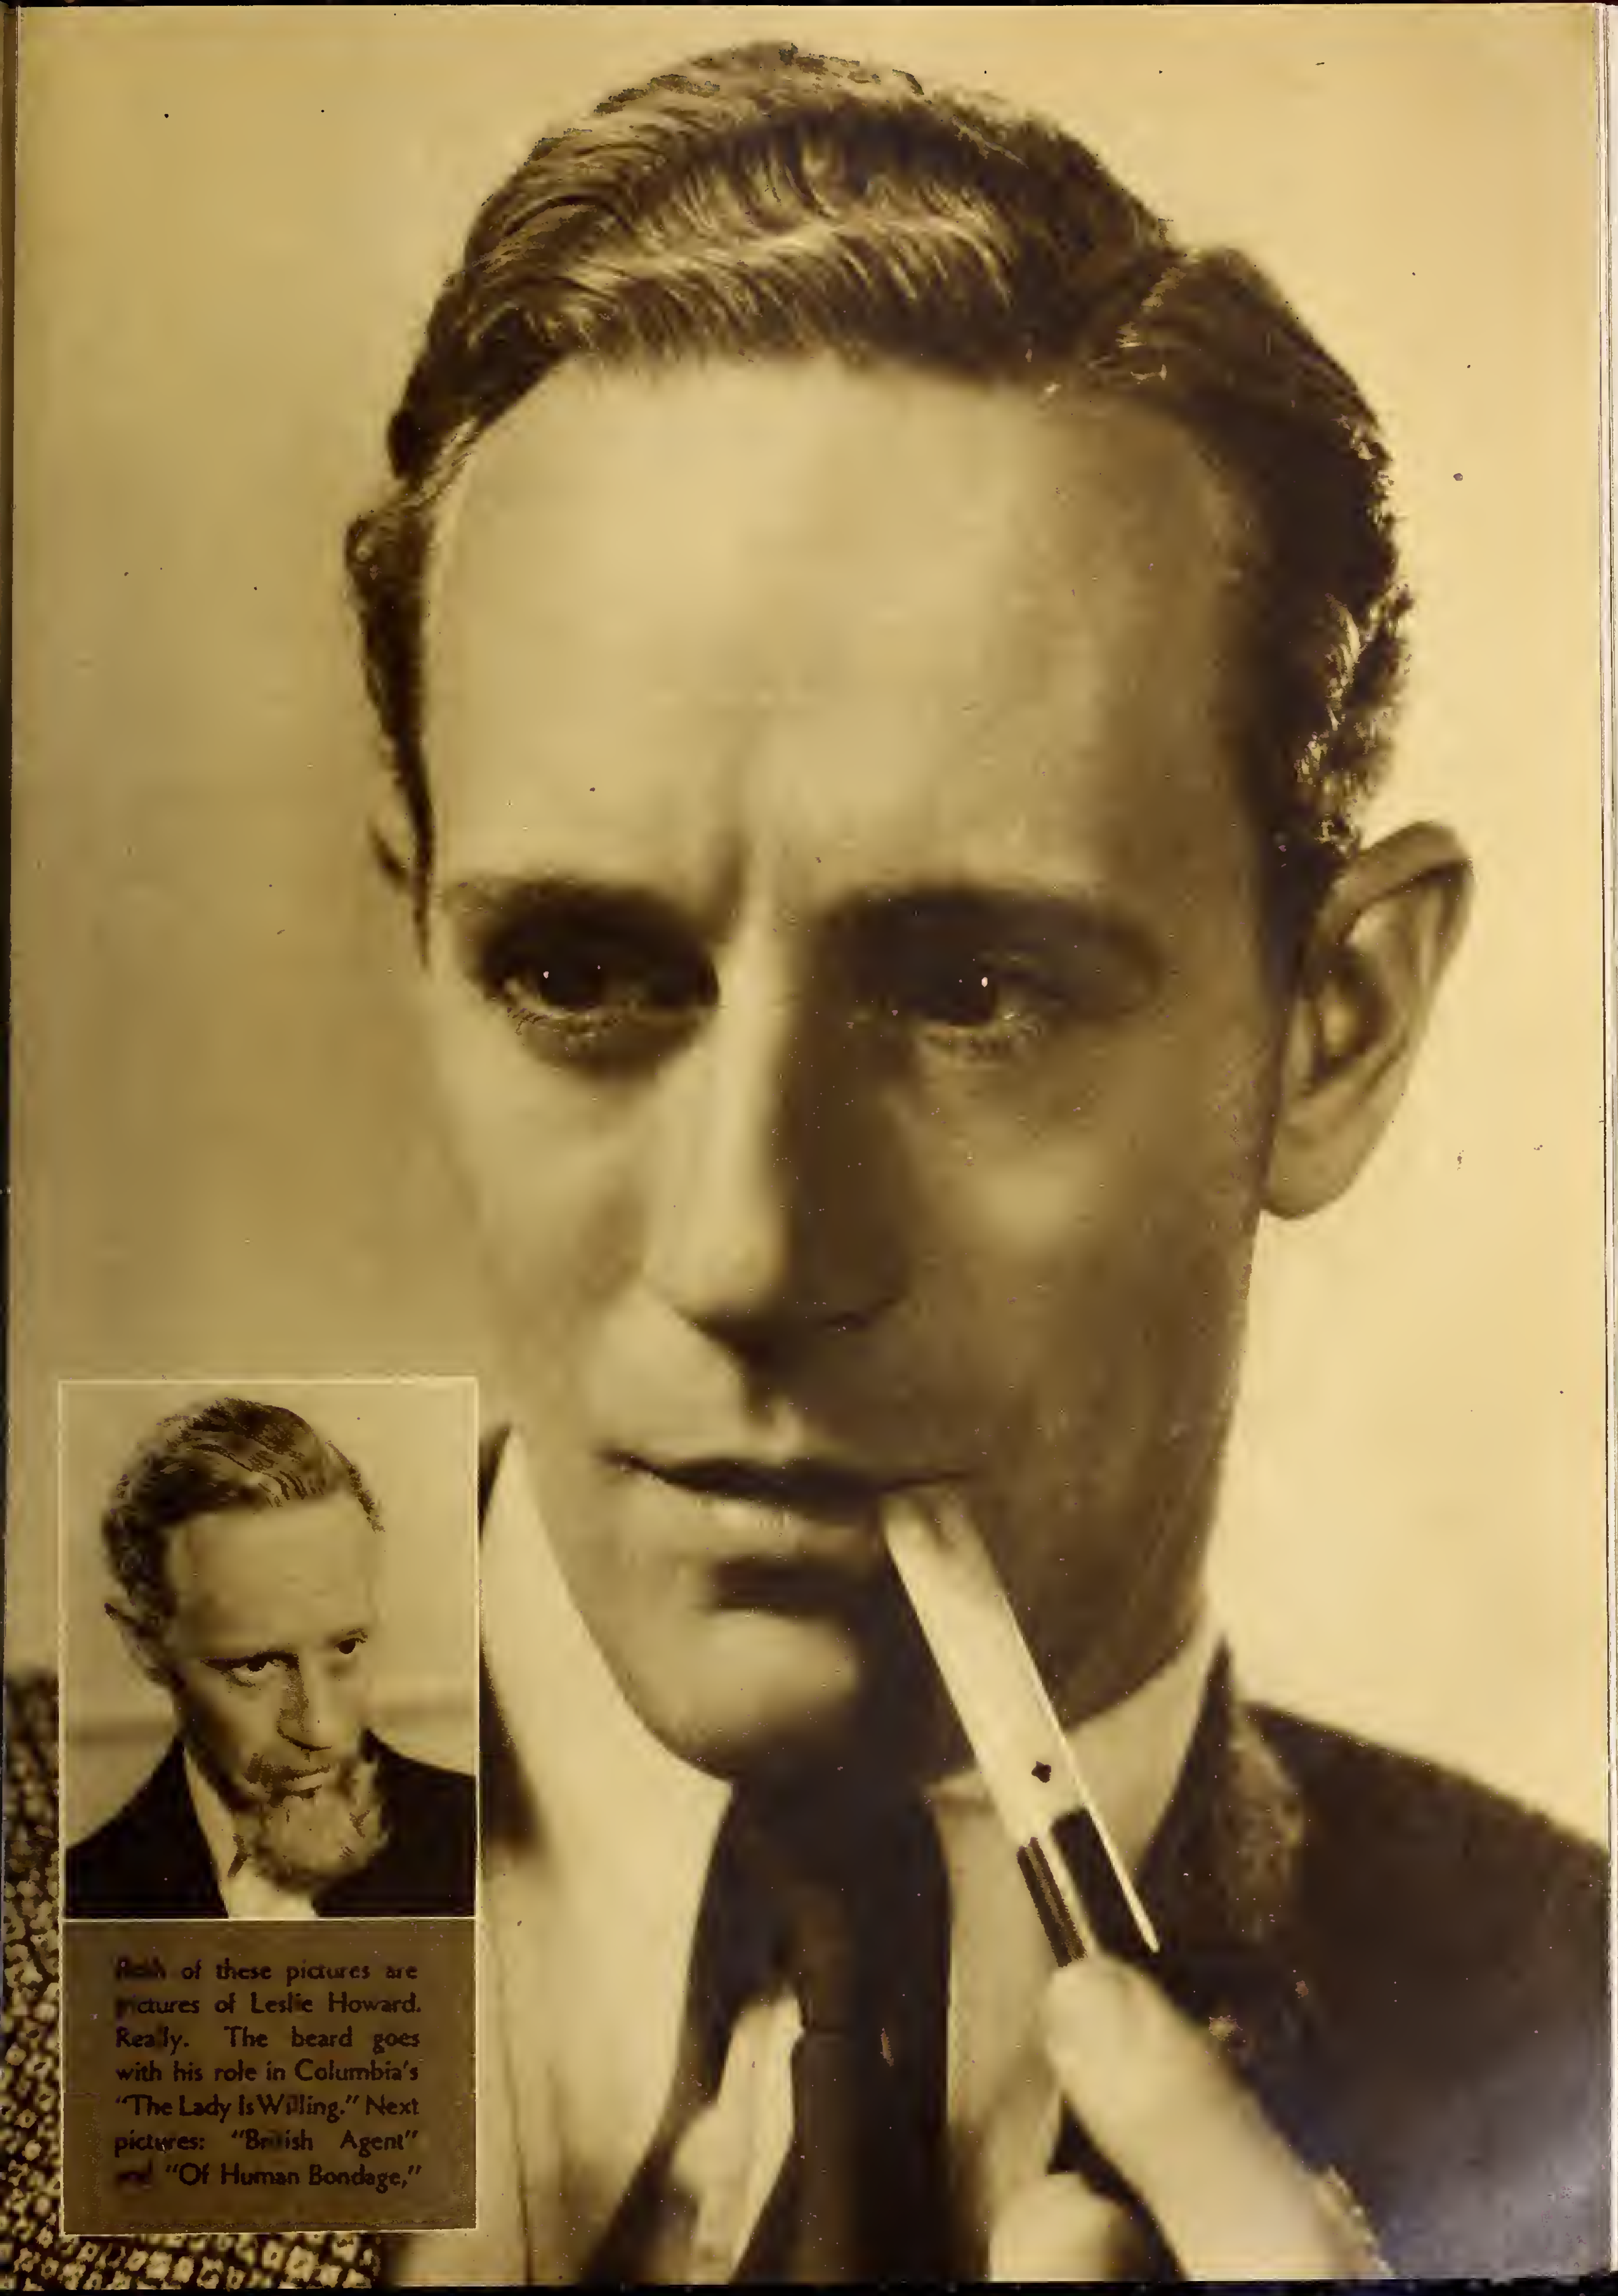
HANDSOME MAN--PRETTY LADY

The Gable lad, looking quite chipper, informs you that he has gained back the twenty pounds lost during last summer's illness. "Dancing Lady" finished, he made a beeline for Wyoming and a bit of hunting. Flew down every Saturday for the football games. He has sold his henna colored Packard and bought a Ford coupé. Less conspicuous. His next picture will really be "China Seas"—after all this delay. (On the opposite page) Rochelle Hudson, the sort of girl whom young men dream about between the ages of eighteen and twenty-four, is in "Mr. Skitch" with Will Rogers—for Fox. Contented to make haste slowly, is Rochelle, who has never been heard howling around Hollywood for bigger roles and more money—both of which, we prophesy, she'll get.

Russell Ball

WHAT SEX APPEAL!

The blond sort—as portrayed by Carole Lombard in "Bolero"—and the brunette sort—as portrayed by Lupe Velez in "Joe Palooka" and "The Hollywood Party,"



Both of these pictures are pictures of Leslie Howard. Really. The beard goes with his role in Columbia's "The Lady Is Willing." Next pictures: "British Agent" and "Of Human Bondage,"

Our motto is: At least one picture of Baby LeRoy in every issue! And when it's a picture like this, with the darling clasped in the arms of lovely Dorothea Wieck—who's allowed to hold him in "Miss Fane's Baby Is Stolen"—well!

GIVE YOUR HANDS AN ALLURING WINTER COMPLEXION

Hands as soft and lovely as flowers . . . reaching out for romance and love. Do you play up your hands the way screen stars do? Keep them alluringly smooth, even in Winter? It isn't so hard as you think! Simply refuse to let work and cold weather coarsen them. Before and after exposure, after your hands have been in water, and always at night, smooth in HINDS HONEY AND ALMOND CREAM. Hinds is much more than a finishing lotion. It is a rich, penetrating cream in liquid form, that smooths, softens, and protects. And it's so inexpensive!

NOW IN A SMART NEW BOTT

How enchantingly WYNNE GIBSON'S lovely hands play their role!
With CHARLES FARRELL in RKO's film, "AGGIE APPLEBY."

Try Hinds Cleansing Cream, too...by the same makers. Del cate, light...liquefies instantly, floats out dirt! 10c, 40c, 65

RETIREMENT ?

SCANDAL ?

SUCCESS ?

NO MARRIAGE ?

WHAT WILL HAPPEN TO THEM IN 1934?

By HARRY LANG

Illustrated by FLOHERTY, JR.

UNLESS Dareos' survey of the planets is all haywire, then 1934's going to be the dizziest year Lil Ol' Dan Cupid has ever had in Hollywood!

Between marriages on the one hand and divorces on the other, Cupid is going to be busy. He's going to score some big shot hits with those marital arrows of his—Carole Lombard, Janet Gaynor, Bill Powell, even Joan Crawford, among others, face new weddings in 1934 or early 1935. But—at the same time, the divorce judges are going to give Danny the toughest sledding in all his Hollywood experience.

All that—and plenty more—is part of the 1934 cinemaland prophecy of Dareos, that famous Hollywood fortuneteller whose annual forecasts in MODERN SCREEN for the last two years have been correct to an amazing degree.

By this time, certainly, you don't need to be told who Dareos is—the man to whom more Hollywood stars have gone for advice and predictions than anyone else in movieland. If you want to see how Dareos' past prophecies have hit the ball, take a look at the summary on page 30 of his last year's prognostications in MODERN SCREEN and how they clicked.

And now look at what he promises will happen in Hollywood in the twelvemonth to come:

First, about that marriage and divorce business. He lists in detail in this story some ten to twelve startlingly interesting marriages that will occur, say the planets, either in 1934 or very early in 1935.

But—even the sensational divorce record that 1933 hung up will be utterly eclipsed by the wave of divorces and separations that 1934 will see in Hollywood! Two famous, beautiful stars—one a decided blonde, the other an equally decided brunette—both of whom have consistently and vigorously denied that divorce is even possible in their homes, will file divorce suits in 1934 against their hubbies. And for a clue, neither of those hubbies is a screen player now. Besides these two outstanding ones, there will be a perfect Niagara of 1934 divorces among outstanding film players, including three other top-ranking female stars, and two male stars of the first magnitude. Hollywood's 1934 divorce total will far exceed 1933's.

(Incidentally, if it interests you, this divorce wave will be not purely a Hollywood manifestation, but will be reflected in a nation-wide sweep of divorce, smashing all previous annual divorce records in the United States, says Dareos.)

SOMEWHERE in this welter of marrying and divorcing, Cupid will have time to conspire with his old buddy, Doc Stork, who will, as a result, visit quite a few star homes. And—if not before the end of 1934, certainly before 1935 is three months old—there will be three sets of twins born to prominent picture people, says Dareos, after his squint at the planets. To whom? To Clara Bow! And to John Gilbert! And to Stu Erwin and wife June Collyer!

What else?

Garbo will retire forever, either in late 1934 or early 1935, and go back to solitude in Sweden.

Jean Harlow hasn't yet escaped woe, and 1934 is cloudy for her happiness.

Doug Fairbanks, Jr., will quit England and return to Hollywood and picture-making.

(Turn to page 28)

Amazing prophecies for 1934 by Dareos, the uncanny seer of Hollywood

FATHER OF TWINS?

THREATS?

ILLNESS?

MARRIAGE?

Some of Dareos' Amazing 1934 Predictions

Twelve interesting marriages
Garbo's final retirement
Unprecedented number of movie divorces
Scandal rivalling the Arbuckle case
Trouble for Jean Harlow
Three sets of twins by early 1935 to very prominent players
Death for three of the best loved players on the screen
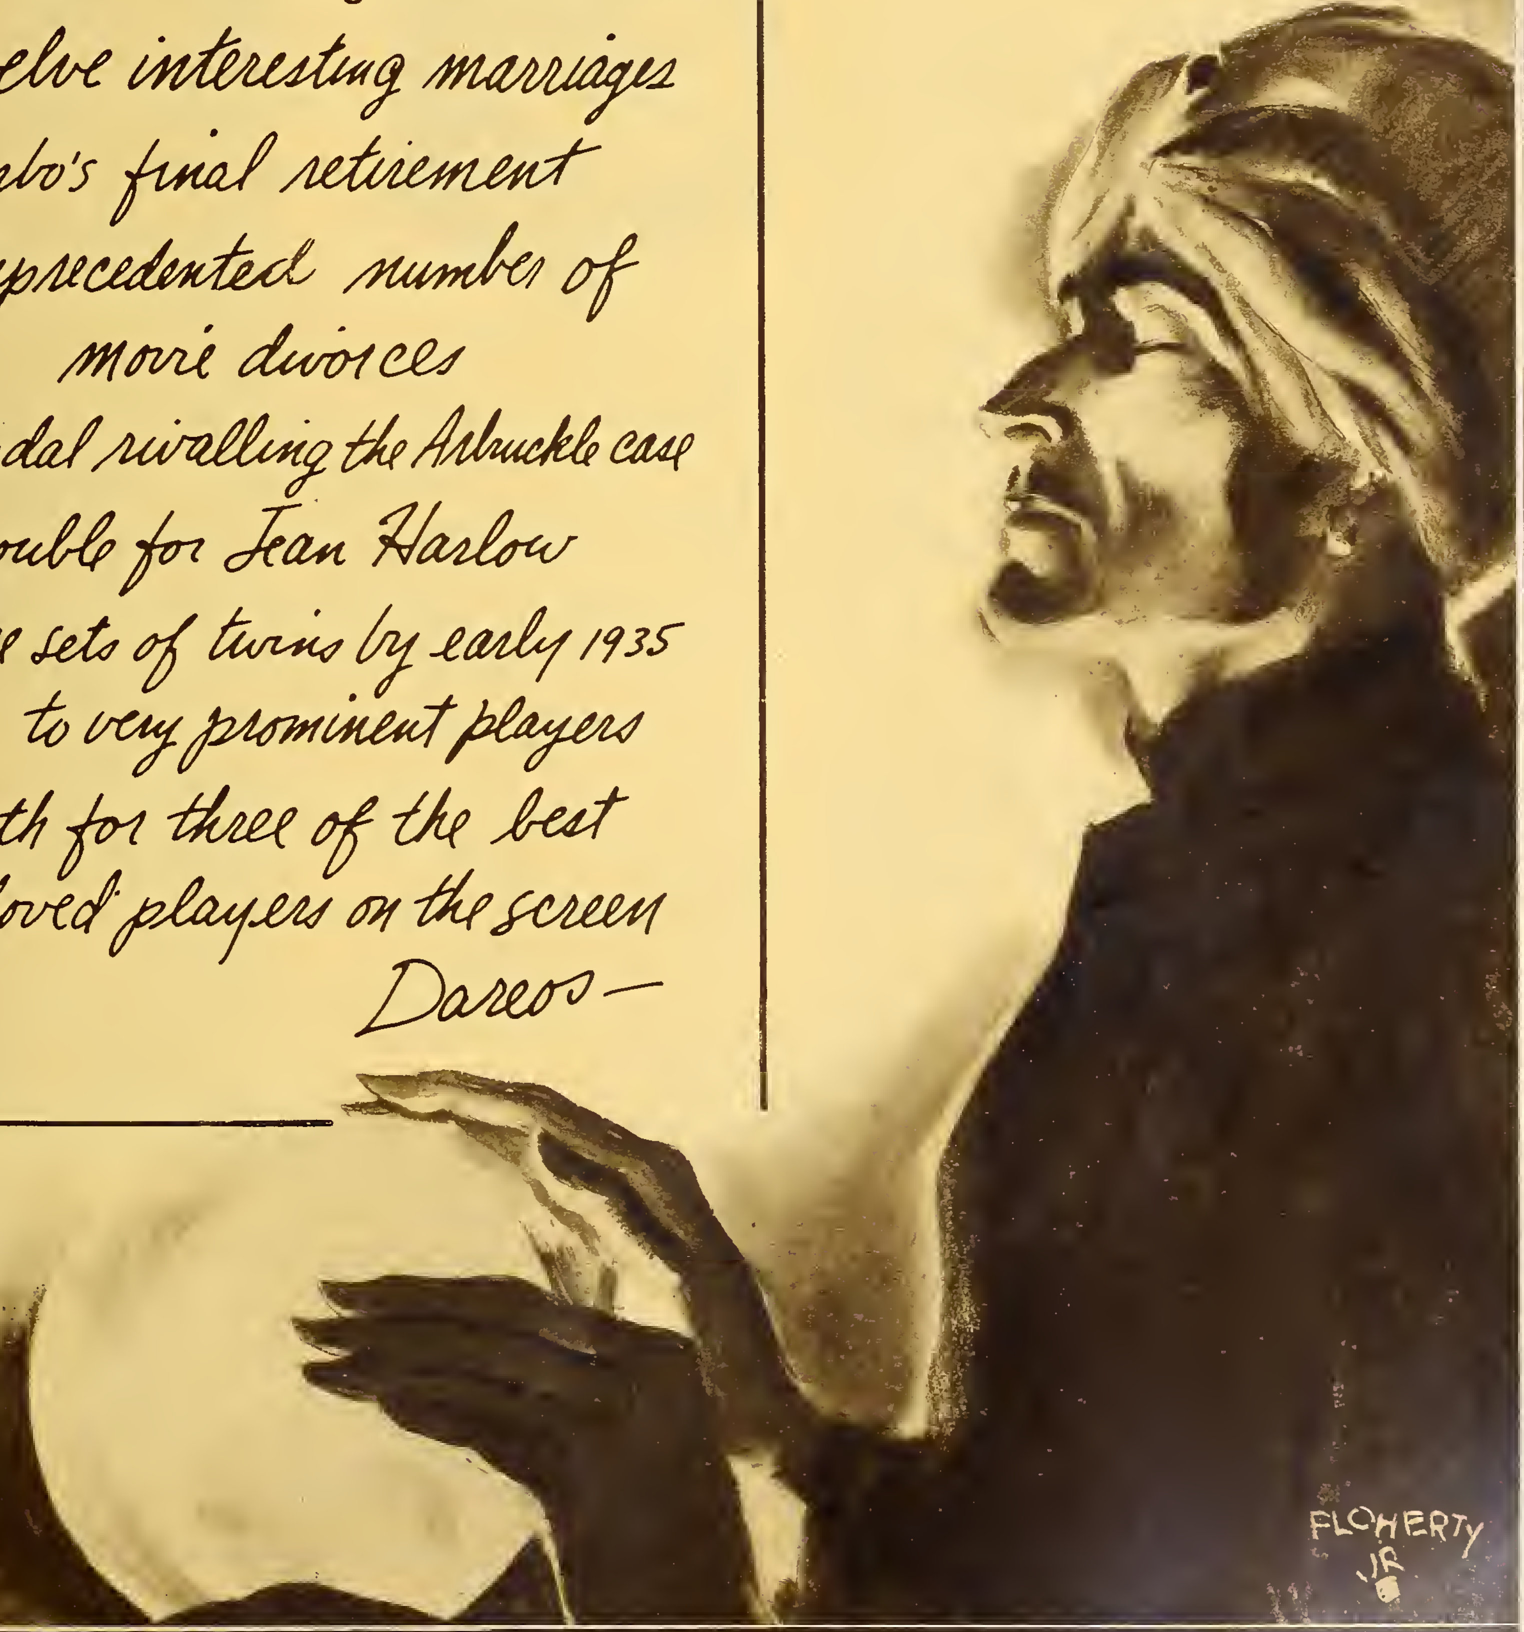
Dareos—



What portent is in the stars for your favorites? This man tells you

Aviation accidents menace Gary Cooper; and Lilyan Tashman and Edmund Lowe face a possibility of being very seriously injured in one plane crash. They can, of course, avoid this by staying out of planes.

Scandal looms hugely, with all likelihood of a scandal-burst that will rival the famous Arbuckle case in that it will center about one of the most famous stars in the industry (the stars don't show now if it's to be a man or woman). It will be as headline-messy as was the Arbuckle case, and with the same result—that the involved star will be forever banned from the screen.

On the business front, 1934 will gladden the hearts of executives, for the year will at last see the return of prosperity to the industry. There will be new companies, new stars, work for many extras who have been starving, black ink in the ledgers instead of red—in short, a tremendous renaissance of the movie industry, after these long, lean years.

But, blackly tragic against that background of business brightness, will come Death, stalking three of the most prominent and best loved players on the screen today. Also, one of the top-rank producers will pass on.

There in summarized form, is an outline of what 1934 will bring to Hollywood's people, according to Dareos' interpretation of occult signs.

AND now, let's get down to brass tacks, and find out what the prophecies are for specific individuals you all know:

For Carole Lombard, 1934 is a new year of romance. Her love-life is surrounded with good omens. More than one offer of marriage will come to her, one of them from a prominent producer official. However, when she does marry—and it will be in 1934 the stars say definitely—the man to whom she gives her heart and hand will be one whose interests lie entirely outside of the movie game. And Dareos adds a bit of advice to Carole: "By the stars, it is shown that your marriage will be even happier if it takes place during the last three months of 1934, rather than earlier."

And strange as it may seem, 1934 has the (Continued on page 98)

WHAT DID DAREOS PROPHESY FOR 1933? AND WHAT CAME TRUE? COMPARE—AND SEE FOR YOURSELF HOW AMAZINGLY ACCURATE HE IS

What Dareos Prophesied	What Happened
Two "star" divorces.	Of all the 1933 divorces, two and only two involved "star couples": The break-up between Joan Crawford and Doug Fairbanks, Jr., and the Lombard-Powell split.
At least five other big name divorces.	Dareos was right—but too moderate. There were more than five—all involving big names on either side. Dix, Eilers, Nixon, Gaynor, Ayres and Holt, for example.
Two violent deaths of picture names.	Not true as this is written.
One noted star to die.	Correct—but, again, an underestimate. Fatty Arbuckle and later, Renée Adorée died.
One movie executive to die.	Sam Rork, producer of Clara Bow's pictures, passed away.
Two married women to be publicly talked about because of their "goings-on" with male actors. One of these marriages to break up.	Connie Bennett was so talked about when she went around with Gilbert Roland that she even sued certain publications which noted it in print. The Adrienne Ames-Bruce Cabot-Stephen Ames triangle did end in divorce—and remarriage for Adrienne.
Studio fire early in 1933.	Universal had a disastrous fire which cost five figures in damages.
Seven scandals, of which hush-up methods might keep all but one out of open court.	Because of libel laws, those in the Hollywood know cannot list the instances which show how right Dareos was. The Claire Windsor scandal broke in open court, however. And you know about Lee Tracy and his Mexican trouble!
Attempt to kidnap female star in middle part of the year.	Because of kidnap threats against herself and her adopted daughter, Lupe Velez for months was forced to go armed and protected by armed escorts.
Change in production line-ups.	Assuredly correct. The most outstanding change involves the formation of Twentieth Century Pictures.
Joan Crawford: Continued professional success. Scandal-talk involving actor. Sudden and great trouble. No baby in 1933. No divorce from Doug, Jr.	Right on success. Much talk about Joan and Franchot Tone. "Sudden and great trouble" was her own characterization of the divorce. No baby. Wrong on divorce.
Doug Fairbanks, Jr.: year not so good professionally.	Correct.
Garbo: Return to M-G-M; personal life to continue as is, with no romances. Health in danger. Attempt to kidnap her near the end of the year.	She did return. There is much talk of her romance with Rouben Mamoulian. No danger to her health or person as this is written.

What Dareos Prophesied	What Happened
Dietrich: Continued success. Much gossip about her. Professional parting with Von Sternberg. Remain Mrs. Rudolph Sieber despite rumors. To visit Germany.	Almost 100 percent correct. She went to Europe but did not visit Germany—because of conditions in her country.
Gable: Professional career okay. Threat of accident. Probability of divorce, with Dareos warning strenuously against it.	Right on professional status. Accident may have been his breakdown in midyear. No divorce.
Jean Harlow: One new love. Two proposals—one from an actor, one from non-actor. Possibility of wedding late in year. New heights attained in career.	Virtually 100 percent correct. We say "virtually" because it cannot be told whether she got that proposal from an actor or not. She probably did!
Marie Dressler: Uneventful year, with great necessity of guarding health.	Correct.
Maurice Chevalier: Complete letdown in popularity. Resentment against him even in his own Paris.	Correct.
George Raft: To be one of the foremost stars of 1933. To have a big love.	Only half right. He didn't click that big professionally. But the romance. . . . Ah, there, Margery!
Sylvia Sidney: To have the big romance of her life, to go on long sea voyage. Accident or illness during year.	Quite correct.
Gary Cooper: To make good screen come-back after 1932 fade. Heart affairs to be complicated. Danger of being named in divorce case. May wed toward end of year.	Right on screen record. Varied talk of heart affairs. He was named in print in connection with the Lombard-Powell split. But that was undoubtedly gossip as is self-evident since his engagement to Sondra Shaw. So that may come true, too.
John Gilbert: Through as great actor. Danger of domestic stress.	Career still problematical, in spite of break in "Christina." No sign of domestic woe.
Clara Bow: To make two more pictures because of public demand, even though she'd rather not. Marriage happy. No more scandal headlines.	Correct.
Janet Gaynor: No divorce. Death of relative or dear friend.	She did divorce Lydell Peck, Mr. Dareos! Relative in the East passed away.
Mary Pickford: No great screen success in 1933.	Correct.
Doug Fairbanks, Sr.: Health threatened.	Yes—he has not been well, although there has been no serious illness. (Dareos failed to predict the Pickford-Fairbanks split.)
Ann Harding: A new romance, the man to be a non-professional. Possibility of marriage. Talk of reconciliation with Bannister, but nothing doing.	There was talk of reconciliation and it came to nothing. Ann is rumored that way about a writer. No marriage as this is written.

SUMMARY: In Dareos' predictions for 1933, there were 68 items. Of these, 48 came true. 8 were incorrect. And 12 are inconclusive as this is written. Dareos' score: 70½% correct; 11¾% wrong; 17¾% inconclusive.

Boy, are they happy!

(Above and right) Marie Dressler's birthday party. Russell Hardie celebrates with Madge Evans and Una Merkel. Miss Dressler getting attention and a kiss from Clark Gable and Joe Schenck. Her two good friends, Carrie Jacobs Bond and May Robson, were there. (Left) Mary Pickford and Charles Farrell at the party given Grace Moore after her appearance in "Pagliacci." (Below) Hey! Hey! Repeal party at the Vendome. Gregory Ratoff with June Gale and Hoot Gibson. Mike Farmer, Gloria Swanson, Jeanette MacDonald and Lila Lee.

Scott

• • OUR MODERN

a great mistake—Claudette

By ADELE WHITELY FLETCHER

BEING a modern woman, being independent financially and socially, maintaining (as she does) a separate establishment from one's husband, Claudette Colbert insists is a mistake. A great mistake. All of it. Or any part of it.

According to Claudette, the modern woman is out on a bad limb . . . and she knows it.

"In our desire to be modern and independent," says Claudette, "we women have given up more than we realized. Actually, we have sacrificed our rightful realm. And now—too late—we're aware, subconsciously if in no other way, that we've made a bad bargain."

I could scarcely credit my ears. This from Claudette, of all people, a modern among moderns, was amazing.

It started like this.

Claudette, her mother, and I were waiting for Norman Foster to arrive for dinner. The living-room in which we sat was very lovely, with its white walls, its pale gray rug, the chairs and sofa upholstered in light grays and champagnes, with white lamps, with white taffeta curtains drawn across the French windows, and a bright fire burning.

It might have been a scene from one of Noel Coward's smart drawing-room dramas. The attractive modern wife waiting for her husband to come from his separate establishment. The correct butler. All that sort of thing. I couldn't help marking what a very delightful and apparently thoroughly satisfactory pattern of sophisticated living Claudette had evolved for herself. I marvelled at the long way the former little French tutor had come.

Where Mrs. Colbert, an extraordinarily beautiful woman, sat, the firelight cast warm shadows on her white hair.

It was Mrs. Colbert who started it really, and innocently enough.

"The new clothes remind me of my youth," she said, smiling, setting her ruby cocktail glass on a little satinwood table and smoothing the folds of her long, flowing black gown reflectively. "Taffeta petticoats. And high waistlines. Boas. Low décolletages."

CLAUDETTE laughed.

"The couturières are very wise," she said. She planted her heels on the edge of her deep chair and encircled her blue pajamaed knees with her arms. "They knew that, fed up with our independent attitude, we women would revel in clothes so romantic that, being the born actresses we are, we'd simply have to forget our efficient gestures and be romantic when we wore them.

"Are you serious, Claudette?" I wanted to ask. "Do you truly think modern women rue their bargain? Do you? Personally?"

But at this moment Norman Foster arrived from his house at the beach, and dinner was announced.

It wasn't until a few days later that I had another chance to talk with Claudette alone.

"Did you mean what you said the other evening while we were waiting for Norman?" I asked. "About modern women finding the independence they were so eager to have, something of a burden?"

"I did," Claudette said emphatically. "None of us go around making nearly as many fine speeches about there being no reason why women shouldn't have the same freedom men always have

(Continued on page 103)

MARRIAGE • •

it's O'Kay — Norman

By KATHERINE ALBERT

YOU'VE just read Miss Fletcher's amazing story about Claudette Colbert in which Claudette admits, for the first time, that her modern marriage with Norman Foster was a mistake — that she would have been better off had she been completely feminine, less independent and more romantic—that living in a separate home from her husband is nice and modern but that she missed a great deal by so doing.

It takes a big person to admit a mistake and Miss Fletcher has given you an unforgetable picture of the crisp, modern, independent woman—Colbert—who wants more romance in her life than she has.

But what is the other side of the story? What is Norman Foster's side? Does he feel that being a pal to Claudette instead of a cavalier is wrong? Or is he satisfied with things as they are?

Foster and I were speaking one day of travel—a hobby of his—and of the wonderful journey he and Claudette took when, just at the height of their careers, they chucked it all and went on a tramp steamer around the world.

"That's the only way to travel with a woman," said Norman, "just bumming around. And you mustn't let her take too many clothes. They'll drive you crazy—women will—packing and unpacking their damn trunks, if you'll let 'em. When you go on a trip with the average woman, what do you see? A couple of smart bars, the swankiest hotels and clothes, clothes, clothes. They pack all the time. Drives you nuts. I wouldn't let Claudette do that when we took our jaunt. That's what made it so swell.

"We had a grand time. Adventure. Excitement. Seeing new things. Grand. Claudette stepped on a snake once in India. Most women would have yelled their heads off and gone into hysterics for an hour. Claudette didn't. She just stepped off the snake again. Later we discovered that it was the most deadly snake known in India. She said it made her a little sick when she found that out, but she wasn't a bit afraid at the time.

IN Shanghai we went to the Zoo. I was looking at one of the big chimpanzees. I got too close. It reached out and grabbed me. Did Claudette yell and make a fuss? You bet she didn't. She just ran and got the keeper of the Zoo to help me. Before they got back I was out of the chimp's arms. He was just playful, that's all. But Claudette didn't know that. Most women would have carried on like hell."

Now what do you get from these anecdotes, told in Norman's own words? Don't you see that while Claudette is languishing by her own lonely hearthstone, wishing that she had leaned upon her husband like the clinging vines of the 'nineties; while Claudette is adoring feminine clothes—the kind you've got to have a lot of those "damn trunks" to hold—her husband is admiring her greatly for the very thing she doesn't want, her independence, her lack of feminine wiles, her modernity in her relationship to him.

Norman is an impatient, decided young man. His hates far outnumber his likes. "I can't stand all the bunk in Hollywood," he said. "Actors—God!—I hate actors, riding around in their swell cars, strutting around in their swell clothes, putting on a lot of ritz they don't know in the least how to use.

(Continued on page 87)

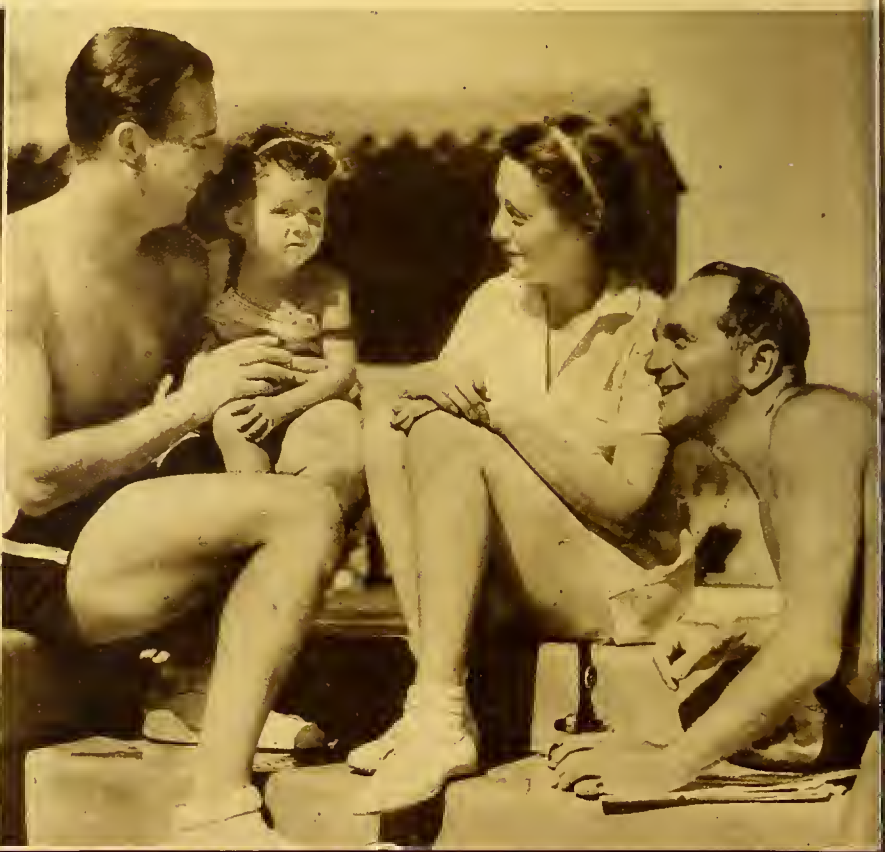
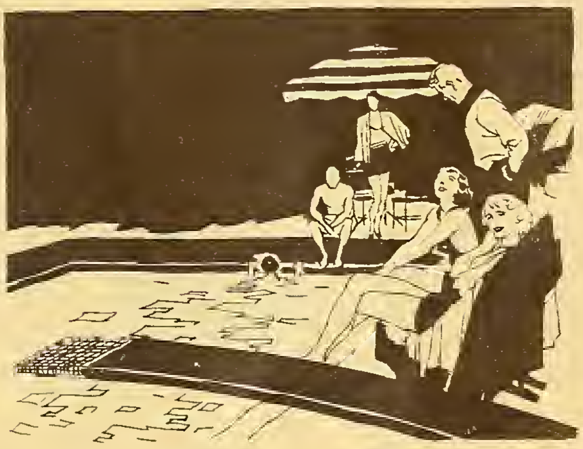
IT'S ALWAYS SUMMER

Scotty, our exclusive cameraman, loaded all his traps onto the old bus and popped off to Palm Springs to see what the "between picture" stars were doing. He found (above) the Richard Arlens en famille—Joby, Dick, Jr., and papa—having a swell time in front of their bungalow. Also, Johnnie and Lupe Weissmuller, looking like a staid old married couple. There's a name for you, incidentally. Lupe Weissmuller. Let's hope if they ever have a daughter they don't name her Conchita. (Below) The Harry Joe Browns—Sally Eilers as was—ambling comfortably around, near the Desert Inn, in their ol' clo'es. Also, the Ben Lyons, with Al Jolson at hand to sing a mammy song if necessary. Barbara Bebe gets cuter every day. Do you think she resembles papa Ben or mama Bebe most?



AT PALM SPRINGS

(Above) Just a pair of young, attractive women—but, there, ladeez and gentleman, is a powerful lot of high-C power. Lili Pons, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Jeanette MacDonald; cooing over a couple of armfuls of chow puppies at the El Mirador. To their right, Miss Barbara Bebe Lyon again, with a young swain named Duke Gallagher, son of Skeet. When questioned by reporters, they said that they were very good friends but as for any talk of a romance—well, their parents thought them a little too young. (Below) That charming actor from Budapest—Paul Lukas, holding hands quite unashamedly with Mrs. Paul Lukas. And to their right, Dick Arlen is proudly demonstrating to you that his son isn't a bit afraid of the water. Shouldn't be surprised if he were a second Weissmuller, Dick.



(Above) Well, if it isn't Connie Bennett on one bicycle and Gilbert Roland on another! They had a bungalow apiece at the El Encanto. Connie had Master Peter and his nurse with her. Kept the child closely guarded from reporters, of course. (Left) "Who's Afraid of the Big, Bad Wolf?" So sing the three gentlemen under the shower—Buster Collier, Al Jolson and Ben Lyon. (Below) Cary Grant and Virginia Cherrill. Next, Sidney Blackmer, Mae Clarke and Alan Edwards. And last, the harmony kid himself—Bing Crosby, umpiring a baseball game.

EXTRA

The Hollywood Times

Modern Screen's Last Minute News

THE VERY LATEST NEWS

VOL. 3, NO. 5

HOLLYWOOD, JANUARY, 1934

NEWS SECTION

ALICE WHITE AND CY BARTLETT WED IN MEXICO

Alice White and Cy Bartlett have gone and done it. Taken that trip up the bridal path at last.

The tying of this marital knot did not come as a surprise to their intimates, for Alice and Cy have long been that way.

Only one minor rift occurred to interrupt their long-time friendship, during which time Miss White went about with John Warburton—which she later learned to regret—and Writer Bartlett consoled himself in the company of the lovely Boots Mallory, since become Mrs. Bill Cagney.

The newlyweds took the vows in Magdalena, Mexico, with Gov. Rodolfo Calles and Mayor Robert Urias as guests

Joan Blondell and Also Richard Dix Convalescing

A new high in devotion was hit lately when George Barnes rented a room in a Hollywood hospital in order to be near his wife, Joan Blondell.

Joan's appendix became obstreperous at a most inopportune time and, after working with an icebag at her side to complete a picture, an operation was vital.

Richard Dix, too, has been on the sick list this past month. The star has been confined to his home with pneumonia, but is now on the road to recovery.

Lilian Harvey Sues Her Producing Company

Lilian Harvey has a couple of complaints to register against Fox and recently took her grievances to court.

Item Number One is in regard to foreign versions of her films. The diminutive star does not want to make French and German recordings of pictures originally done in English.

Secondly, there is that little matter of billing. It seems Lilian was promised stellar type and didn't get it.

Wide World

The collegiate gentleman is none other than our own Jackie Coogan, all set to make a series of two-reelers during vacations from Santa Clara College

Wide World

Hollywood Boulevard, looking for all the world like Santa Claus Lane, during the exciting Christmas season. This brilliant picture was taken at the height of a nightly celebration

BREAK FOR KATHARINE HEPBURN'S HAIRDRESSER

The Hepburn is a true girl scout for, if she can't get around to doing a good deed every day, she makes up for it by doing a swell one whenever the opportunity arises.

Katie's hairdresser out at RKO has always expressed a desire to see Broadway, little old New York's Main Street. And so, when the star got settled in New York and began rehearsing "The Lake," the stage play in which she is appearing, she sent for the gal who wields the curling iron so expertly. Wotta thrill! And what a considerate and generous action.

Flashes from Here and There

Donald Cook has suddenly found himself in a breach of promise suit for $100,000. Maxine Lewis claims the actor promised to marry her last August, but now refuses to do so.

Joan Crawford was having a grand time in New York recently, while the folks back home in Hollywood whispered that she was seriously ill in a Connecticut sanitarium.

Sue Carol and Ken Murray are soon to wed; that is, as soon as each becomes legally disentangled, which is to be in the not-distant future.

Sylvia Sidney's real father, Victor Kosow, has dropped his "adoption" suit without receiving any money.

Clara Kimball Young, old-time cinema siren, is to play Jackie Coogan's mother in his two-reel collegiate shorts.

Jack Oakie and his mother are vacationing in Hawaii.

MARY FILES SUIT FOR DIVORCE AGAINST DOUG

It has, as you know, happened at last. Mary filed papers with the Los Angeles Superior Court for a divorce from the man she has loved for thirteen years—Douglas Fairbanks. She charged mental cruelty and desertion, citing the many instances when Doug had left her completely alone for many months and the humiliation and embarrassment she has suffered on his account. It all came out—all the heartbreaking, soul destroying experiences Mary has covered up and gallantly lied about for so many years.

Pickfair is up for auction. Doug, they say, will wed Lady Sylvia Ashley as soon as she can obtain a divorce from Lord Ashley.

Lee Tracy Under "Gentleman's Ban," Hays Office Admits

Lee Tracy is going to take time out to cool his heels and behave as a good boy should. If he comes through this "ordeal" like a little gentleman, all may be forgiven.

Tracy is under what is called a "gentleman's ban" by the Hays office at present.

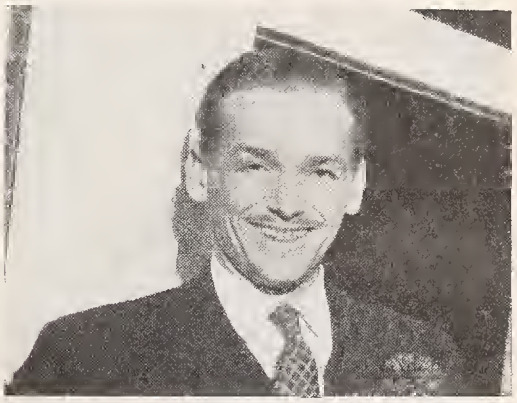
Meanwhile, the rumor that Lee is playing in "The Baby in the Icebox" for Paramount is erroneous. However, his Hollywood friends gave Tracy many cheers and no razzes on his return from Mexico.

Dorothy Jordan, Mother-to-be, Now in Social Register

Dorothy Jordan, who is Mrs. Merian Cooper in private life, has stepped right into the Social Register.

The young lady left her home in Tennessee but a few short years back, joined a Broadway chorus, journeyed to Hollywood, gave a good account of herself in the Camera City, married a wealthy and influential producer and is expecting a blessed event.

Now comes the Blue Book listing.



Wide World

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., recently returned from Europe, snapped as the Bremen docked. Doug, Jr. will make "Success Story" for RKO

Good

ONE of the most gallant girls in Hollywood is Isobel Jewel. Maybe you don't even know who she is but she deserves a hand for loyalty. She is Lee Tracy's sweetheart. She had a minor role in Lee's "Blessed Event"—when the romance began. Just before Lee became involved in that trouble in Mexico, she had signed a contract with M-G-M—Lee's studio, as you know. She had longed for that contract for months, but when Lee was severely chastised by his studio and his contract taken away from him, Isobel stood by him, putting her own career in jeopardy.

She has made no bones about how she felt, either. She is for Lee first, last and all the time and his trouble is hers, his heartaches are hers to share. Recently Lee has been ill. Isobel has been constantly at his bedside and no film role, no matter how great, could tear her away.

Scott

HE CAME RIGHT OVER.

YOU must see "Queen Christina," if for no other reason than to see Garbo laugh. This is the first time the Swede has ever laughed outright in a film and it was only through scheming and planning on the part of the director that she does here.

The scene in which Jack Gilbert's carriage gets stuck in the mud called for a hearty laugh from Queen Christina. However, no amount of persuasion could get her even to chuckle. Finally, Mamoulian, the director, had an idea. "All right," he said to the star, "go ahead with the scene without laughing."

The cameras began clicking. Came the close-up—and lo, Garbo laughed!

It was a frame-up but it worked! Unknown to Garbo, Mamoulian had instructed the ten extras attending the carriage that during the close-up of the Swedish star, they were to start making funny faces at her. They proved so funny that Garbo laughed merrily. She realized the trick but had the presence of mind to go on with the scene, perhaps the best in the entire picture.

THE only reason Mae West did not accept the offer to appear at the San Francisco automobile show for $20,000 for five days was that

Scott

LOYAL SWEETHEART

The lady bundled up in a boa is Suzanne Kaaren. Born in Australia and reared in Brooklyn. She'll be in "Sleepers East" for Fox. (Above) Adolphe Menjou and Veree Teasdale are distinctly bill-and-cooish. 'Dolphe recently defied speed laws for one hundred miles—just because Veree wanted his advice about sump'n. (Right) Isobel Jewel, Lee Tracy's heart, welcoming the naughty boy when he returned from Mexico City. Read how loyal Isobel has been.

News!

. . . And hot news—and every single bit of news that's fit to print—from Cinema City!

she had another offer. It was from a civic organization in a small town in California to stage a benefit show (eight vaudeville acts and a picture show) remuneration to be the glory of being escorted all the way from the station to her hotel by a motorcycle cop.

LUPE and Johnny have the Hollywood photographers to thank for a happy ending to their first fight after becoming Mr. and Mrs. Said fight started the day before Lupe was to go on an Arizona location trip. For two days the fiery Velez raved and ranted, with Johnny maintaining a Tarzan-like silence. The trip to the station was made in stony silence.

Just before Lupe had a chance to board the train, the picture snappers pounced on the newlyweds, insisting they pose for pictures. They posed . . . but looked ever so grim.

"Hey, come on, loosen up," yelped one of the boys. "Johnny, be a sport and put your arms around Lupe—and you, Lupe, how about giving the Old Man a beeg kiss?"

There was an embarrassed hesitation. Then Lupe flung her arms around Johnny's neck. Johnny grinned. And all was forgiven!

WHEREAS those newlyweds, Joel McCrea and Frances Dee, still refuse to make a picture together, those other newlyweds, Bruce Cabot and Adrienne Ames, have actually begged the studio for just this chance. "I do my best work when I can be natural," explained Bruce, "and working with Adrienne would give me an opportunity to be that."

Wide World

IS THE DAY SET?

PITY the poor press agent who had to explain to fifty or more irate newspapermen, photographers, reporters, etcetera that Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bell were not Gary Cooper and Sandra Shaw but actually Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bell.

It seems that said press agent had learned that a couple by the name of Bell was on the plane headed for Los Angeles from Las Vegas, Nevada. Following a hunch, he radioed the operator and inquired if Mr. Bell was Gary Cooper. Misunderstanding the word "Cooper" for "copper," and knowing Mr. Bell was connected with a copper mine, the answer came back "yes." Then came the fireworks and the ultimate letdown when the wrong couple stepped off the plane at Los Angeles, met by fifty or more disappointed people!

P. S. The boys shot a picture anyway, just for luck.

Scott

PRIVATE PREVIEW

Scott

DRESSLER PARTY

(Top) Mr. and Mrs. John Barrymore—Dolores Costello on her birth certificate—at a private preview of Jawn's "Counsellor-at-Law. (Middle) Polly Moran and Monty Malone, her new husband, at Marie Dressler's birthday party. (Bottom) They say they'll wed. Ricardo Cortez and Mrs. Christine Lee.

ACCORDING to news rumors, Joan Crawford's reason for going to New York was to meet Papa and Mama Tone. Franchot did the honors.

Meantime: "Are you married to Franchot Tone?" "Are you going to be married to Franchot Tone?" These are the questions Joan Crawford answered upwards of a thousand times while she was vacationing in New York. Well, it did look serious. Franchot spent his vacation in New York, too, and the couple were constantly together, but MODERN SCREEN can answer those questions for you.

They are not married now—obviously, since Joan's divorce from Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., is not final until the early part of April and Joan says she has no craving to be a bigamist—it would be so awkward!

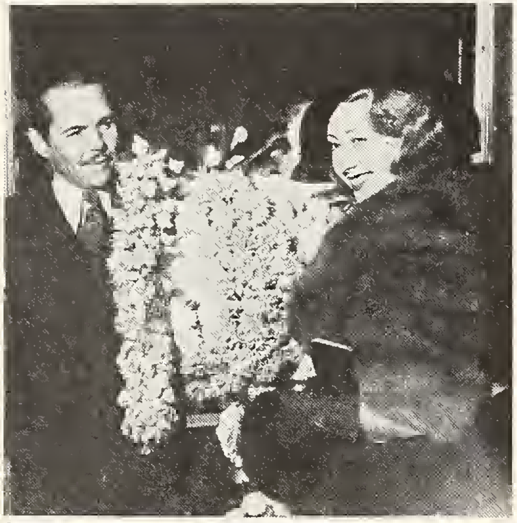
Good News!

Lowdown on Tone

Acme

Scott

Scott



Scott

Scott

Wide World

(Start at the top right picture and read across and down) The now formally engaged Sandra Shaw and Gary Cooper—at the Club New Yorker. Next—whadya know? Katie Hepburn poses for our Scotty, sharing the snapshot with Elissa Landi, at the United Airport just afore her trip East. Then, Joan and Franchot on their way to the theatre—in N'Yawk. Fourth, Joan Blondell and husband George Barnes—at the Grove. Fifth, Ann Harding in her cyar, leaving the Domino Club tea. And last, Lupe kissing Johnnie as she took for an Arizona location.

"Are they going to be married?" Well, that's another question. Franchot frankly admits that he hopes so, that he has proposed a thousand times but that Joan won't give him an answer. Joan, having been so bitterly disappointed by one marriage, says she is afraid to take another chance. But this much you can be assured of—when they are married, or if they have any definite plans for marriage, MODERN SCREEN will be the first to know all about it and will give you the inside story.

AS this is written, Marie Dressler is seriously ill again. You know, some months ago she had a terrific operation in an effort to save her life. The operation was pronounced successful, but Marie has not been entirely well since. Some folks claim that she dabbles too much in astrology and that she is guided too completely by the heavenly stars. She is in almost daily consultation with a woman astrologer who tells her when the stars say she will be sick and when they say she will be well.

Her birthday party, attended by many loving friends, took place before her relapse.

SPEAKING of Miss Dressler's party, the most interesting fashion note at the party was Norma Shearer's unique costume. A gold cloth dress with high neckline and long tight sleeves, topped by a jaunty, very peaked hat of black with a brazen gold quill that extended several inches into the air. Only Norma could have worn it.

CLARA BOW is still—well, Clara Bow. She was the bright spot at the popular Colony Club t'other night, all decked out in a bright green frock, loud orange elbow-length gloves, and topped by very red hair!

MADGE EVANS wants to notify everyone at large that her romance with Tom Gallery is still on. Madge and Tom have been inseparable for ages. The other night when she appeared at a party with Russell Hardie word went around that she and Tom had phiffed. But Russ was merely "subbing," Tom being away.

YOU'LL soon see Jackie Coogan on the screen again. Not the little chap of "The Kid." Jackie's a big strapping college lad now. He plans to make his come-back in a series of collegiate shorts to be filmed during vacations. He has no intention of giving up college.

WHEN it comes to love Cary Grant is old-fashioned. Before popping the question to Virginia Cherrill, he hopped over to London to first win the consent of her parents.

Scott

Jean Harlow was hostess at Hollywood's Domino Club tea. There she is with that grand old lady, May Robson, and Anna Q. Nilsson, one of your favorite old-timers.

Wide World

The Thalians, a toney Hollywood social organization, had their annual frolic at the Cocoanut Grove. There's Mae Clarke with Sidney Blackmer. They say they'll wed.

NEVER able to get anything but a picture of Hepburn covering her face with her hands, the photo-snappers had a rare treat just before Katie boarded the plane that carried her to New York recently. She posed most graciously for each and every one of the many photographers. Just as they were all beginning to think that the Hepburn gal was all right after all, Katie flung out: "The only reason I'm doing this is because I'll be gone for six months. Just try and get me when I come back!" So you see Katie is still Katie.

And here's further proof. She worked one day over-schedule on "Trigger," her latest. She demanded —and got—$10,000 for that day.

INCIDENTALLY, Elissa Landi was also at the airport, seeing her mother off. Elissa and Kate looked like twins, almost—both sporting identical brown ermine fur coats cut along swagger lines. Our cameraman, Scotty, snapped the two gals for us, as you can see by the picture hereabouts.

By the way, Elissa will have no more cold, dignified roles now that she's a Columbia star. That studio believes she has all the fire and sex appeal of Harlow, maybe more. They are at present dickering with M-G-M to buy the screen rights of "Congai," which was at one time considered a Jean Harlow vehicle. And a Jean Harlow vehicle always has plenty of heat!

WONDER what Kathryn Carver (Adolphe Menjou's ex-wife) could have meant when, upon being queried about her romance with Serge Mdivani, she replied: "Oh, this has been going on for years. Poor Adolphe!"

Why "poor Adolphe"? He seems to be getting along very nicely with Veree Teasdale—who, it is stated, will be the next Mrs. Menjou.

Here's a cute story about Adolphe and Veree:

Veree was heard humming in her dressing-room one day. Officials were so impressed they asked her to do some of it before the camera the next day. Never before having lifted her voice in song before an audience, Veree was faint with nervousness. She rang Adolphe Menjou long distance and poured out her troubles.

"Never mind, dear," said Adolphe, "I'll be right over." "Right over" meant traveling exactly one hundred miles during the night. Menjou was vacationing at Palm Springs.

IF his estranged wife agrees, Richard Dix will have his own child appear with him in his next film. This is not at the studio's suggestion but at Dix's own request. He would be thrilled to death, of course, to have his one-year-old daughter, Mary Ellen, make her debut with him.

LITTLE Anita Louise knows from experience that absence does not make the heart grow fonder. She recently made a trip to New York with the result that she almost lost her boy friend, Tom Brown. Jean Parker was the gal who almost stole Tom's heart. However, now that Anita's in town again, Tom's more attentive than ever and Jean claims she never was really in love with Tom, anyway.

EVER since that interview with Dick Powell in which he enumerated his requirements for the ideal girl, young Powell has been deluged with bids from gals all over the country. On his thirtieth birthday, he received thirty proposals.

However, it looks like Dick will do his own proposing to Gwen Heller.

ON the heels of the report that Max Baer and his ex-wife, Dorothy Dunbar, may kiss and make up, comes the report that the handsome fighter-actor is contemplating matrimony with Edna Dunham, New York socialite. Following this news, comes another rumor that he is escorting Estelle Taylor (the former Mrs. Jack Dempsey) to the fights. And Estelle used to hate fights.

MORE GOSSIP ON PAGE 78

NEW

WHERE ARE

. . . Where are the big "box office" successes among today's movie heroes? What is it these new and popular young Romeos lack? Why are there no male Hepburns, Harlows, Sullavans, Wests?

I WONDER if you have noticed, as I have, the amazing dearth of brilliant, sparkling, vital young men on the screen. I wonder if it has occurred to you—as it has to me—that Hollywood is a matriarchy wherein the rulers are decidedly queens instead of kings and where all the glamor and excitement centers around the sleek heads of the women stars.

Of course, there are a few exciting male stars. John Barrymore, Ramon Novarro and, in some measure, Fredric March and Leslie Howard. There is also Gary Cooper and certainly there is Clark Gable, although I think the romantic makings have been lost in Gable's case. He has been cast again and again as male lead for the most glamorous women stars and in this position has shone in their bright reflections. Whether or not he could hold his own in a story in which the male part is the most important role and opposite a more or less unknown young woman, is a question.

However, none of the men I have just mentioned are new. Not since Gable's sudden and electric flash of first popularity has there been any male "box office sensation."

Perhaps you're going to tell me that this is a sterile time for new talent. But consider the women stars. Consider for a moment Katharine Hepburn. And that's something I love to do. Less than two years ago she was an obscure stage actress. Now she threatens Queen Garbo's throne. There are no such threatening male stars. Nor are there any kingly thrones to threaten.

While Katharine Hepburn was climbing that glittering stairway to triumph, Jean Harlow was carving out a niche for herself. She is, in a way, a new star, since it was long after the release of "Hell's Angels" that her full talents were realized. It was in the last year-and-a-half only that she was swept to the dizzy heights.

And, of course, there's Mae West. Voluptuous, tantalizing, sparkling Mae West. Was there ever a greater "box office sensation?" Do you realize that she has appeared in but three films and her name is a household word. Well, maybe not quite anything so prosaic as a household, but certainly her name is more famous—and certainly her face and figure are better known—than Queen Mary's.

And others, too—girls coming up. The lovely Dorothea Wieck and the amazing Margaret Sullavan. Are there any MEN! THEY . . . ?

By FAITH BALDWIN

On the opposite page, Gilbert, Fairbanks, Sr., the immortal Valentino, John Barrymore, Novarro, Barthelmess, Francis X. Bushman and Wally Reid, all box-office champs. On this page, some of our new men. Good—capable—but, alas! not one of them "box-office" on his own. Bruce Cabot and Preston Foster. Paul Kelly and Cary Grant. Kent Taylor and Victor Jory. Ralph Bellamy and Otto Krueger.

male prototypes? Are there any young men who remotely compare in box office appeal to these women I have mentioned?

Well, let's see. Let's look for new young men.

There are Ralph Bellamy, Bruce Cabot, Bing Crosby, Preston Foster, William Gargan, Cary Grant, Victor Jory, Otto Krueger, Francis Lederer, Douglass Montgomery, Randolph Scott, Lyle Talbot, Kent Taylor, Gene Raymond, Robert Young. Should I go on? Should I name any more? I could, for there are plenty of them. There are dozens of handsome, personable young men in Hollywood. And some of them are darn good actors, too. But is there, in that entire list, any for whom you'd wait in line hours to see? Yet in New York I saw a cue of men and women over a block long outside the theatre where Katharine Hepburn is starring in "Little Women." And it was as much as your life was worth to get in to see "I'm No Angel."

Of course, Cary Grant was in "I'm No Angel" with Mae. But those people weren't clamoring to see him. Mae West was the attraction. They liked Cary well enough when they saw him, but he wasn't creating the furore.

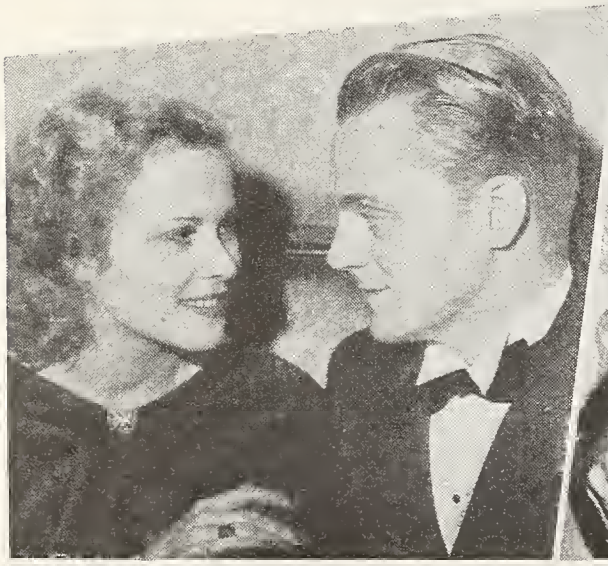
I wonder why. You can't find anything wrong with these young actors. Both from a standpoint of performance and background they're perfectly okay. They just don't seem to click sufficiently to be box office successes on their own.

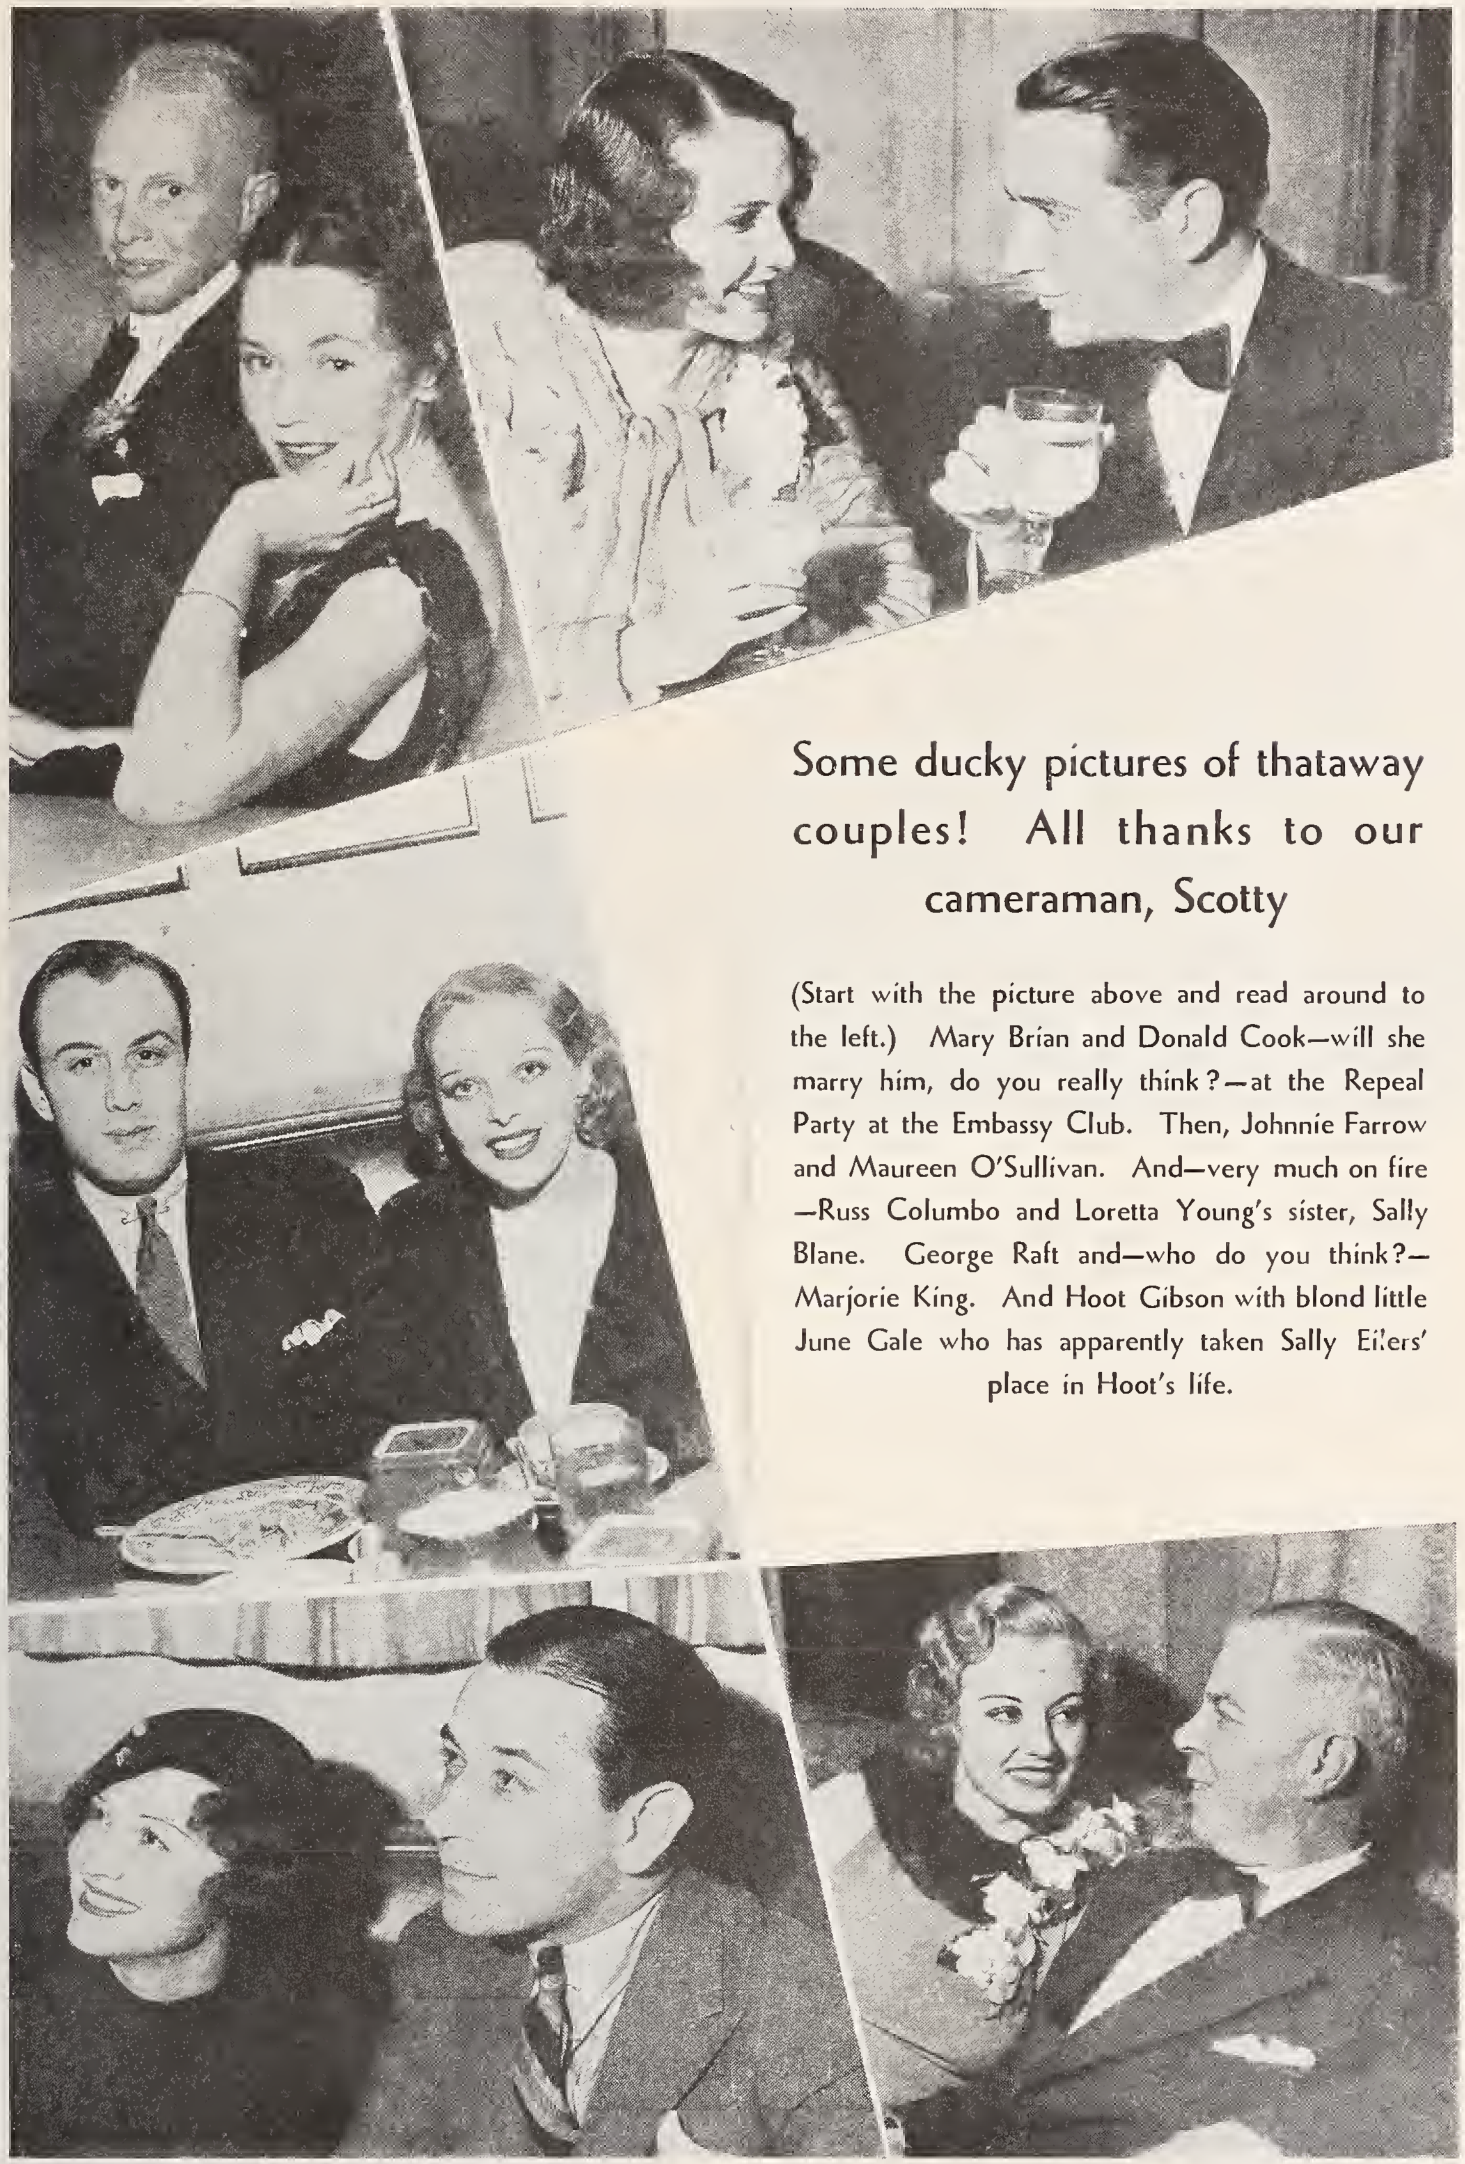
THE lives of these fellows are quite as entertaining as the lives of the women. Ralph Bellamy was a Chicago lad who felt the urge for acting so strong within him that he ran away from school to trod the well-worn boards. He has fascinating stories to tell about those troublous and adventurous days.

Bruce Cabot, born Jacques de Bujac, was first exploited in Hollywood as one of the old Boston Cabots—you know, the folks who speak only to the Lowells. His real history is a hundred times more exciting. He is French, Irish and—honest!—Indian. There's an Indian Princess in his family tree. His education was completed in France but he, like Bellamy, ran away to become a ranch hand. He did some professional boxing, broke his nose (which was straightened later) and stopped (Continued on page 118)

Love Birds

Here, on this and the next page, is more concentrated romance than you'll see for some time to come. (Start above and read around to the right.) First, Dick Powell and Gwen Heller. She's a niece of the brothers Warner. Ver' pretty. Then, Randolph Scott and Vivian Gaye— still under the infloonce of Cupid. And Jimmie Dunn with Nora Lane, his latest heart. Then, that devoted Darby and Joan—Ruby Keeler and Al Jolson. And finally, who else but Boots Mallory Cagney and husband Bill.





Some ducky pictures of thataway couples! All thanks to our cameraman, Scotty (Start with the picture above and read around to the left.) Mary Brian and Donald Cook—will she marry him, do you really think?—at the Repeal Party at the Embassy Club. Then, Johnnie Farrow and Maureen O'Sullivan. And—very much on fire—Russ Columbo and Loretta Young's sister, Sally Blane. George Raft and—who do you think?—Marjorie King. And Hoot Gibson with blond little June Gale who has apparently taken Sally Eilers' place in Hoot's life.

YOU LEARN TO KNOW THEM— WHEN THEY'RE CLOTHES SHOPPING!

(Above) It happened the day that Irene Dunne simply had to have a fitting while on location. Mr. Greer, perched in the tree, certainly suffered that time. (Right) Mr. Greer rid Ann Harding of her inferiority complex about clothes. (Further right) Read about the time Clara Bow nearly gave the fitter fits.

It is quite unusual to get any star to admit that she doesn't know how to wear clothes. As I look over my famous autograph book of all the stars who have come into my shop and whose clothes I have made either for personal or professional use, I discover that most of them are not only interested in clothes, but feel that they know almost as much about them as the designer.

Not so Ann Harding—whose signature strikes my eye as I sit here thumbing the pages of the book and telling you everything I have learned about the stars I have known.

Ann Harding came into my shop one day in search of clothes for her picture, "The Animal Kingdom." After awhile she said, "Oh, what's the use! They're all lovely, but I'm just not a clothes-horse. I never have been, I never will be, and the clothes won't look as they look on the mannequins when I wear them."

We tried to encourage her and I must say that the fittings went very well. We were careful to keep her in dark colors and simple lines—she cannot wear anything extreme—and she began to be enthusiastic about the

. . . A further installment in the fascinating series, "I've Dressed Them All." See your favorites' fads and foibles revealed by one of Hollywood's ace designers

By HOWARD GREER

(Above) Can you imagine Lil Tashman being nervous? Just because she had to model some wonderful gowns? Lil who adores clothes—and wears 'em like nobody's business? Well, she was nervous. In fact, she was petrified. (Left) A girl who honestly and truly doesn't give a whoop for clothes—Barbara Stanwyck. Which doesn't prevent Mr. Greer from liking her a whole lot.

clothes and to lose her inferiority complex about them.

As soon as the picture was finished she came back to the shop and bought a great many things for her personal wardrobe. Some time later she called me one noon and said, "I've just found that I have a ten-day vacation, so I'm going to fly to Havana. If you can possibly finish the navy blue polka-dot with the hat and gloves to match, I'd like to wear them on the plane this afternoon."

We had had two fittings and there was very little finishing to be done. Miss Harding came in about three o'clock. We dressed her and she left the shop very gay and cheerful, little suspecting that during her holiday her life was to be endangered when—for hours and hours—she, her secretary and Alexander Kirkland drifted on a wrecked fishing boat upon a sea infested with sharks.

In fact, it was one of our dresses which made the unfortunate trip with her on the fishing vessel. Perhaps you remember the account of how Kirkland had her take off her skirt so that he could wave it and signal a passing boat. It was this signal that brought their rescue. And had this been a theatrical drama instead of a real one the program note would have read—"Gowns by Greer."

Years ago, when at Paramount I made a great many of the clothes which Clara Bow wore in her earlier pictures, I shall never forget the first time she came on the lot. Then, she was comparatively unknown, and Victor Fleming was testing her for a part. She went on the set and Fleming gave her instructions. Instead of doing what she was told, she raced before the camera, vaulted a chair, ran her hands through her wild hair and acted like a real tomboy.

THE rushes of that test were thrilling. They caught the spirit of the Bow that was to be—and Fleming was one of the first to realize what could be done with her.

Years later, after all her troubles, when she was attempting a come-back in "Call Her Savage," we made clothes for her. The appointment was made for a Saturday afternoon. The shop is always closed on that day, but it was the only time during the week that Clara could give us. My fitters were in the workroom waiting and I was in one of the upper salons. I had left the front door open so that Clara could get in without difficulty.

POLLY MORAN—YOU'RE A BAD GIRL!
ANNA MAY WONG — YOU'RE SMART!

Suddenly I heard a deep bass voice calling, "Is anybody here?" I leaned over the balcony rail, peered down into the darkened foyer and asked, "Who's there?"

"Mrs. Bell," the voice answered, and it was a few seconds before I understood that it was Mr. Bell announcing Clara. It always seems strange to hear an actress, whose name is known the world over, called by her married name. Yet Ruth Chatterton is called Mrs. Brent and Kay Francis is known as Mrs. McKenna to a number of people.

During the following week we had occasion to go to Clara's house for another fitting. It was a huge estate, situated in vast lawns and avenues of trees high above Hollywood. The interior of the house did not live up to the exterior by any manner of means. It was heavily and ornately furnished, for Clara had rented it "as was" for a few months.

[illegible] were taken upstairs to Clara's bed- [illegible]

[illegible] only time I [illegible] mannequin than my girls that afternoon was when Lilyan Tashman modeled at one of my openings. I begged her to appear only for the one "grand opening day" and she graciously consented.

One of my regular mannequins had a slithery black evening dress and I duplicated it in white for Lilyan. The two of them appearing on the little stage together and the effect was as startling as it was novel. There was also a street suit of black and white on a mannequin and on Lilyan I did the same model in white and black. She wore, in all, eight different gowns during the performance. At the opening were not only all of the big stars, but my Pasadena and Santa Barbara customers as well.

When the salons were full, I went backstage to tell the girls that they could begin and I found Lilyan walking the floor in an agony of stage fright, with her teeth chattering violently. Imagine Lilyan Tashman—the poised, the sophisticated, the woman of the world who has faced hundreds of cameras—behaving this way. Never in her entire career, she confessed, had she ever known such terror. No stage or screen

(Continued on page 90)

Lee Tracy talks to you frankly, honestly, about that much publicized "insult" to Mexican cadets. I think, because of the great expense to M-G-M in scrapping work done on "Viva Villa," the actor involved should have a chance to "talk up." Thank you, Lee. —The Editor

LEE TRACY'S EXCLUSIVE STATEMENT TO YOU

To the readers of MODERN SCREEN:

I have no apology to make to anyone.

In the first place, Mexico has forgiven and forgotten my hilarious conduct while a guest in their country. Mexico actually is unable to understand the unforgivably bad publicity meted out to me by uninformed members of the press.

Hollywood, however, is not quite so charitable. Making mountains out of mole-hills, creating rumor stories out of thin air seems to be the favorite indoor sport of our best gossipers.

I have always considered Hollywood a town of fair, regular people, willing at all times to come to the aid of a fellow associate and friend. I have changed my mind about that now but to my few staunch friends and the readers of MODERN SCREEN I want to make the following statement.

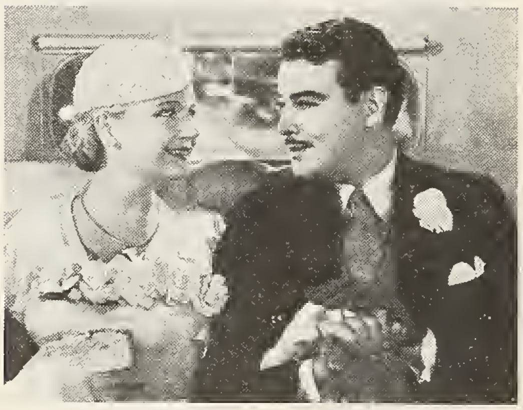
I did nothing shameful or disgraceful while in Mexico. I was fully clothed. There was no balcony.

I was in a hotel room seven stories above the ground, peering over an iron grating that reached to my chest.

Thanks to MODERN SCREEN for their usual gesture of fairness in allowing me this opportunity of thus speaking my heart to their large body of readers. I hope I have assured my friends that my actions while in Mexico were the careless and natural actions of a hilarious young fellow who should have known better.

Lee Tracy

Reviews —A TOUR OF TODAY'S TALKIES



(Above) Eddie Cantor and Gloria Stuart in "Roman Scandals." (Left to right) Joan Crawford, star of "Dancing Lady" with Franchot Tone. Ann Harding and Nils Asther are to be seen in "The Right to Romance." Robert Young is also in the cast. Next, our own Jimmy Cagney with Mae Clarke in "Lady Killer." Rowdy, but funny.

By WALTER RAMSEY

•• ROMAN SCANDALS
(GOLDWYN-U.A.)

Eddie Cantor, Veree Teasdale, David Manners, Gloria Stuart.

TREMENDOUS: This picture cost $1,000,000—and it looks like a million dollars. Give producer Sam Goldwyn credit for going so far out of his monetary way to give us such an expensive and beautiful picture in these times. A bouquet for Eddie Cantor, too, for taking a chance with such a departure from the usual routine in musical comedy. He did a swell job!

Beautiful girls (in fact a million dollars worth of them alone), gorgeous backgrounds, exceptional photography, funny situations (instead of gags), a new slant on ensembles, a whole company of creole cuties (the real thing) and two hit songs: "Build a Little Home" and "Young and Beautiful." That's what you are going to see when you pay your money for "Roman Scandals" and the laughs are so good they will tide you over for a couple of weeks.

Of course, it takes place back in B.C. and the action is all done up in those cute union suits the gents used to parade around in plus the flowing robes of the gals. And a chariot race! There's something you'll be sure to remember for a long time.

Eddie does an even better job than his last smash hit, The Kid From Spain—and those of you who laughed through that picture will know what we mean. Gloria Stuart, Veree Teasdale and David Manners contribute their bits in swell fashion.

We can't recommend this one too highly. It merits your patronage and we're sure it will get plenty of it. See it!

•• COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW
(UNIVERSAL)

John Barrymore, Bebe Daniels, Doris Kenyon, Onslow Stevens, Melvyn Douglas, Isobel Jewel.

EXTRA SPECIAL: "Better than the stage play," seems to be the opinion of all who see this exceptional picture. That's saying a lot. The story was brought to the screen by Elmer Rice, the author of the stage version, and he does himself proud.

John Barrymore as the "Counsellor" is superb. The story shows the reaction of the lawyer, who started from the lowest of beginnings, to his sudden power and riches gained from his legal practice. The action takes place in the expansive suite of offices in which Barrymore and his partner welcome the rich and poor alike. The story is about the various clients, some fabulously rich, others terribly poor, gangsters and crooks.

The Counsellor has married into society (Doris Kenyon) but his natural tendency towards the people of his former background turns her against him. She plans divorce. Not being able to face the defeat (after his other successes), the lawyer attempts suicide. He is saved by his secretary, Bebe Daniels, and in the end it really looks like the middle-aisle for them.

Universal has done a fine job on this picture, sparing nothing to make it a real success. The actors are all perfectly fitted for the story (even to casting Lee Tracy's girl friend, Isobel Jewel, in the role of the switch-board operator, the part she played on the stage in Los Angeles) and we're sure

DON'T MISS—

Eddie Cantor in "Roman Scandals"

John Barrymore in "Counsellor-at-Law"

James Cagney in "Lady Killer"

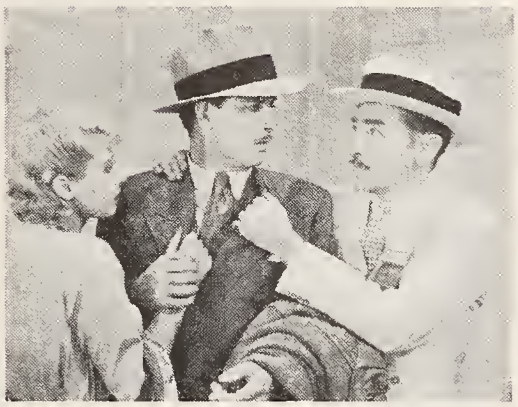
Alice Brady and Lionel Barrymore in "Should Ladies Behave?"

Ann Harding in "The Right to Romance"

Joan Crawford, Clark Gable and Franchot Tone in "Dancing Lady"

Adolphe Menjou in "Convention City"

Joe E. Brown in "Son of a Sailor"



(Above) Bebe Daniels and John Barrymore appear in "Counsellor-at-law." (Right to left) Lionel Barrymore and Alice Brady in "Should Ladies Behave?" Joan Blondell, Gordon Westcott and Adolphe Menjou in "Convention City." Jack Oakie and Roscoe Karns as Tweedle-Dum and Tweedle-Dee, and Charlotte Henry is the heroine in "Alice in Wonderland."

you'll remember her fine performance.

You're a cinch to like this one. It has everything to make it top-notch entertainment. Don't miss it.

•• CONVENTION CITY
(FIRST NATIONAL)

Adolphe Menjou, Guy Kibbee, Joan Blondell, Mary Astor, Frank McHugh, Dick Powell.

SCREAMINGLY FUNNY: Here's a picture that will drive away the depression blues. It's a laugh riot and the situations come so fast that you hate to see "The End" flash on the screen.

It seems that all the salesmen for the Honeywell Rubber Co. are going to Atlantic City for a convention, the main business of which is to elect a new sales manager. Guy Kibbee might have gotten the job if his wife had been allowed to stay and watch over him, but Menjou sends her a fake wire and that leaves Kibbee the "prey of the dames!" It looks as though the job is all sewed up, but when the announcement is made by the president, Frank McHugh is given the job. The reason he is promoted is so funny that we wouldn't want to spoil your evening by revealing it here.

Menjou, Kibbee and Joan Blondell divide the honors. The story and the acting, the laughs and the situations will give you one of the most enjoyable hours you've had at the movies in a long time. Run, don't walk!

• SHOULD LADIES BEHAVE?
(METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER)

Alice Brady, Lionel Barrymore, Mary Carlisle, Conway Tearle.

MARVELOUS ENTERTAINMENT: Alice Brady at her very best, excellent dialogue, a story that will send you from the theater still smiling over the hilariously funny situations and delightful performances.

Married to a man much older than herself, Alice Brady is hoping that she can save her daughter (Mary Carlisle) from the same fate. Mary, however, happens to have a falling-out with her youthful boy friend just as Conway Tearle arrives on the scene. It appears, for a time, that daughter will fall for Conway (mean-old-mans) Tearle and thus do a repeat on the Brady-Barrymore "May-and-December" business.

While not quite as sophisticated as When Ladies Meet, we are sure you will find Should Ladies Behave? just as entertaining. Actress Brady is even more gushy and brimming over than she was in her former sensational performance. You'll really like her a lot.

We advise you not to miss this one—and you can even take the kids if they are old enough to enjoy it.

• DANCING LADY
(METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER)

Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, Franchot Tone, May Robson, Fred Astaire, Ted Healy

GOOD MUSICAL: When one finds Clark Gable and Joan Crawford together with Franchot Tone in the same picture, it looks like a "natural." Add to this, however, May Robson, the dancing genius of Fred Astaire and the fun of Ted Healy and his stooges and you have a string of naturals. It's the old back-stage theme, but Dancing Lady has so much more honesty than most of its predecessors that it all but heads the list. You have a hunch you

(Continued on page 80)

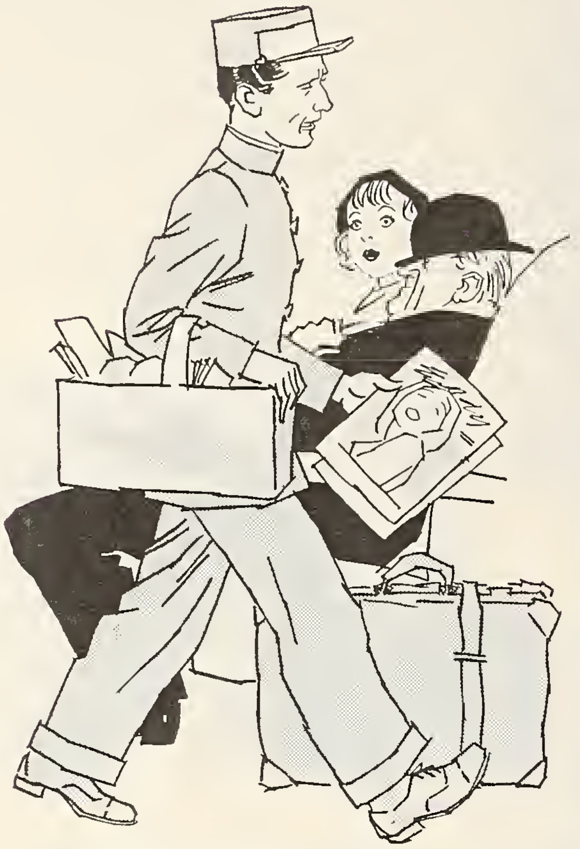
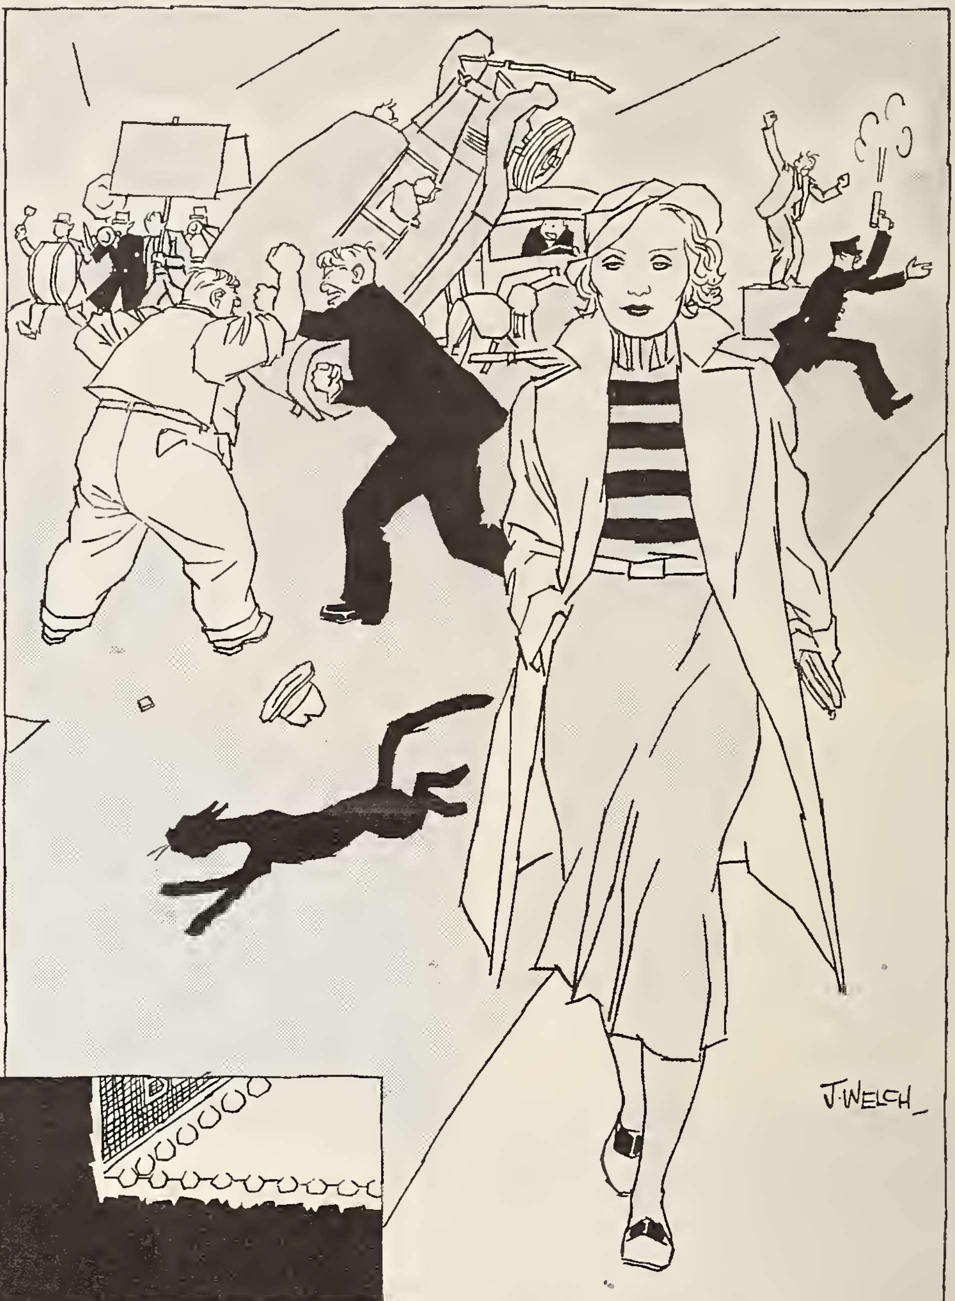
ALL JOKING ASIDE—By JACK WELCH



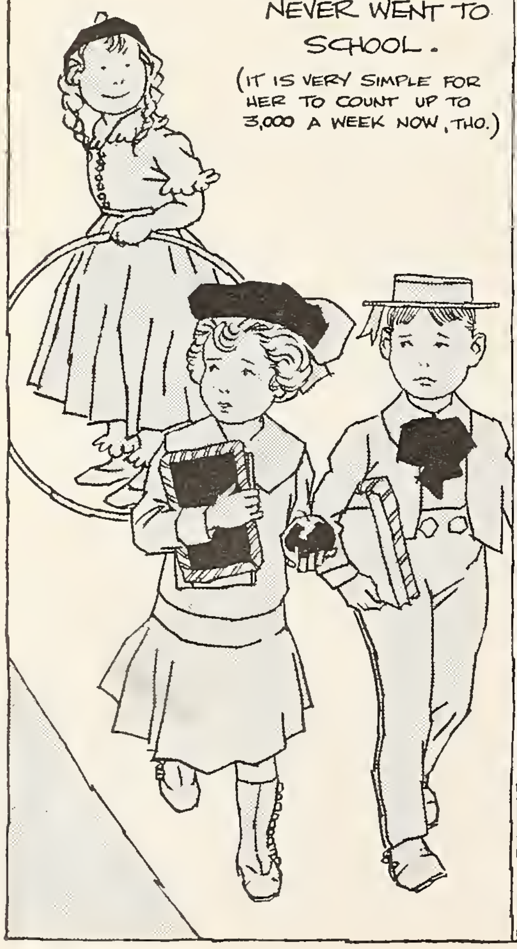
LIKE EDISON, VICTOR JORY ONCE WORKED AS A NEWSBUTCH ON A TRAIN.

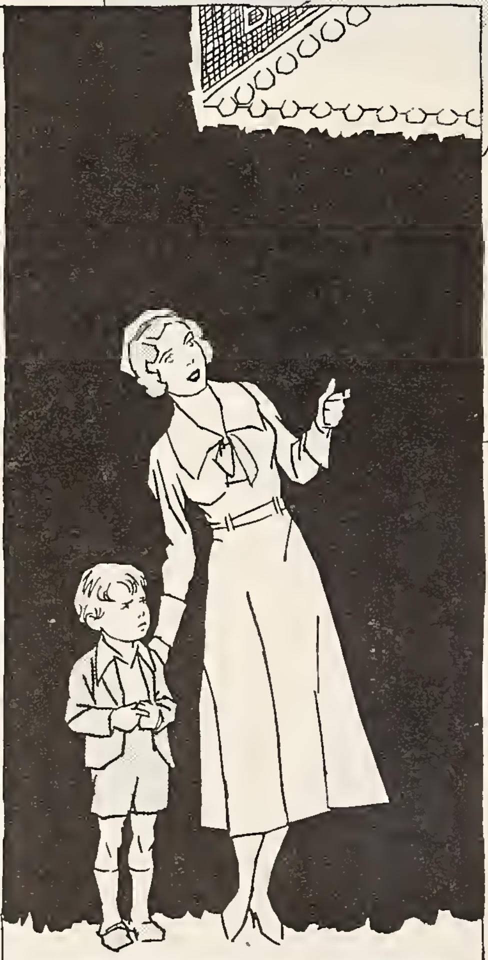


IT TAKES MORE THAN A MINOR STREET ACCIDENT TO GET MARLENE DIETRICH'S ATTENTION WHEN SHE IS OUT FOR A WALK ... HER EYES ARE ALWAYS STRAIGHT AHEAD.

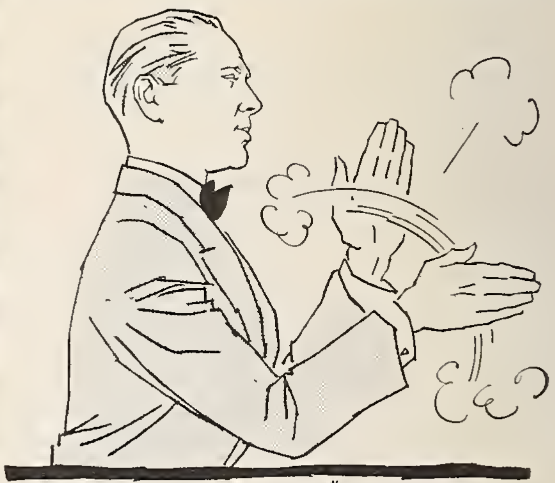
MARIE DRESSLER NEVER WENT TO SCHOOL.

(IT IS VERY SIMPLE FOR HER TO COUNT UP TO 3,000 A WEEK NOW, THO.)





BUSTER PHELPS, 6, LEARNED TO SPELL OUT HIS NAME FROM SEEING IT IN LIGHTS.



JAMES DUNN MADE $10,000 SELLING LUNCH WAGONS IN NEW YORK — AND LOST IT IN 10 MINUTES IN THE STOCK MARKET.

MODERN SCREEN'S

Gallery of Honor

We honor the earthy Mala and Iva—played by Lotus Long—his lovely bride, in W. S. Van Dyke's beautifully produced "Eskimo."

(Above) Gloria Stuart, you're lovely. Eddie Cantor, you're so amusing. Congratulations too, upon movie-conferencing with President Roosevelt. Ruth Etting, you sing so beautifully. We honor you all—you've made "Roman Scandals" a rare treat. (Below) We haven't seen Katharine Hepburn in "Trigger." But we hear tell she's as magnificent as she was in "Little Women."

(Left) John Barrymore, we're glad you were given the role in "Counsellor-at-Law" which Paul Muni played on the stage. It's the "take-the-stage and steal-the-scene" sort of part you deserve. And you're swell in it. (Right) And you—Alice Brady — everything you've done has been gudgeous. "Broadway to Hollywood." "Stage Mother." And now you're grand in "Should Ladies Behave?"

THE GREAT GOD STUDIO

By
GLADYS HALL

THERE was once the Great God Baal. His demands were rapacious, omnivorous—and always gratified.

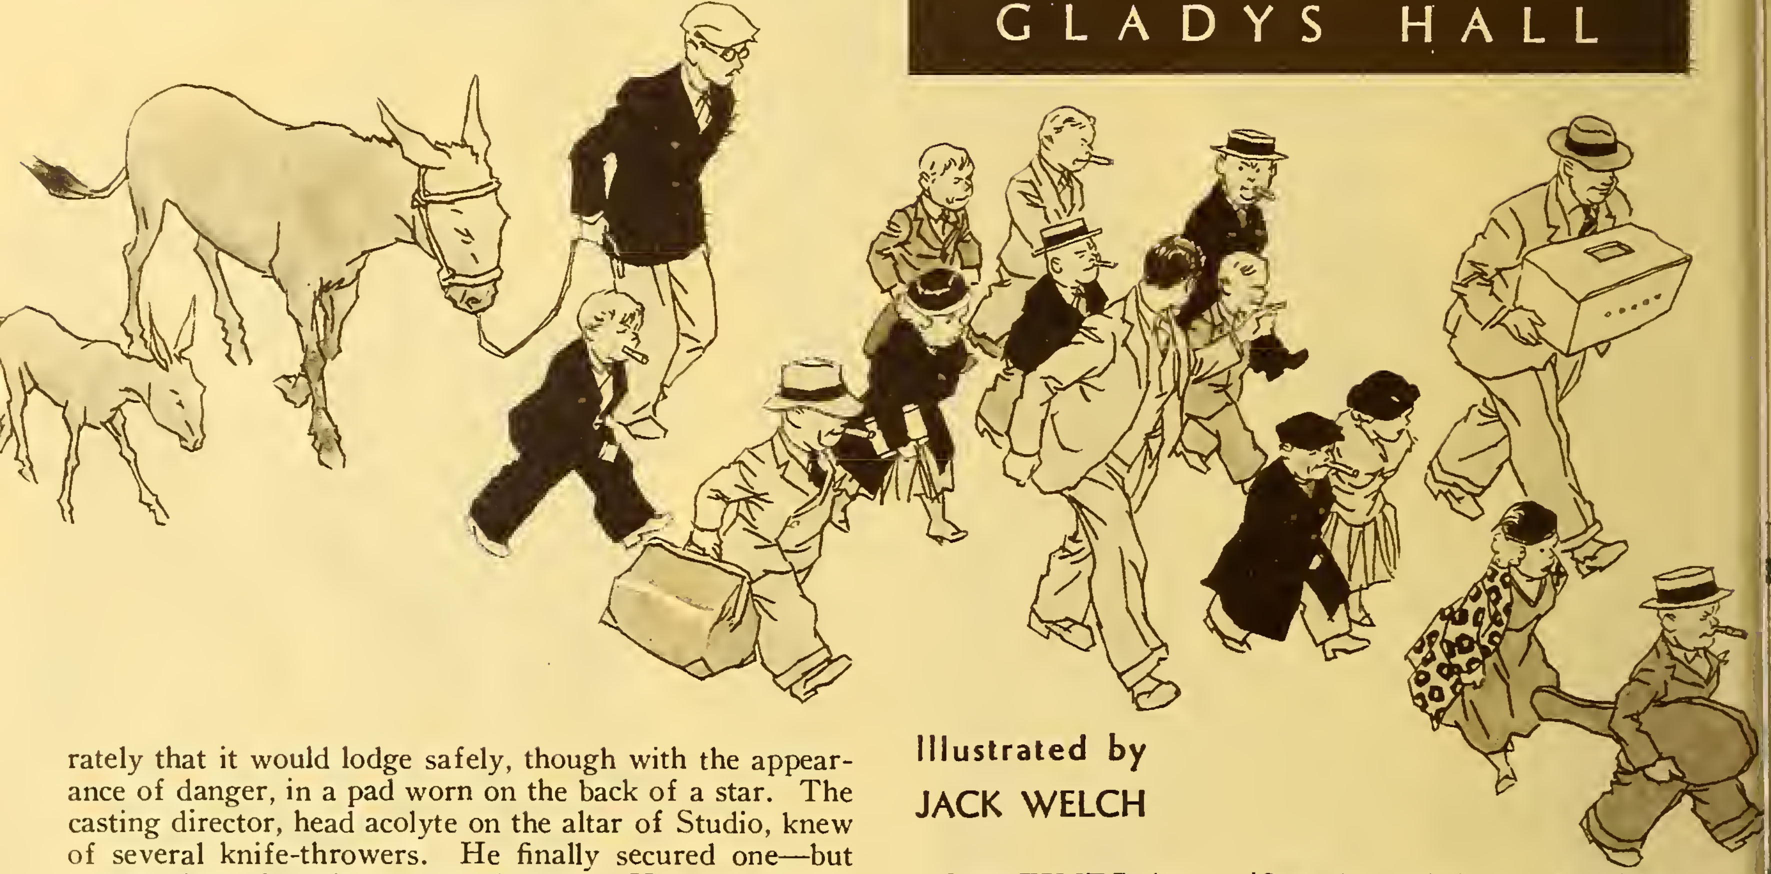
Today—we have the Great God Studio.

His demands, too, are rapacious and omnivorous and sometimes very strange. He, too, is always gratified.

Sometimes the demands of the Great God Studio are amusing. The god is in a playful mood. As when M-G-M was making "Today We Live" and an order came through for cockroaches, for giant cockroaches, for cockroaches that would not require the extra footage of close-ups to disclose their identities. The prop men, who are among the acolytes on the altar of Studio, were hard put to it. Cockroaches of easily photographable dimensions are not prolific.

It then occurred to one bright lad to breed for a bigger and better race. The cockroach family reproduces rapidly. Two specimens of Herculean proportions were acquired. And only two. These two were bred. The Mendelian theory, or what have you, worked correctly. In no time at all a strapping family of cockroaches sprawled, with gratifying prominence, before the cameras.

Came the day when Studio demanded a gentleman who could throw a knife with unerring accuracy. So accurately that it would lodge safely, though with the appearance of danger, in a pad worn on the back of a star. The casting director, head acolyte on the altar of Studio, knew of several knife-throwers. He finally secured one—but not at the price his budget allowed. You see, knife-throwers use a fine discrimination as well as a fine blade. They suit the price to the person knifed. They will throw knives at a stunt man, or stunt woman, for five dollars per day. They will throw knives at an extra for ten dollars per day. But they charge from fifteen to twenty-five dollars a day for throwing knives at a star. And the price that they demand for knifing a star depends upon the importance of that star. Their reasons are sound as well as purely psychological. They figure that a stunt man has iron nerve; that he will neither wince nor swerve to one side, thus running the risk of the knife lodging otherwhere than in the pad he wears for that purpose. They figure that extras are hardy stock, desperate for work and liable to follow directions explicity. They also figure that if any extra should be injured production would still go on. But if a star should wince or swerve to one side—then woe to the knife-thrower! Woe, also, to the cost of production. And they figure that a star is the worst risk because of the sensibility and delicate fibre of the stellar race.



Illustrated by
JACK WELCH

SOMETIMES the sacrifices demanded by the god are sacrifices indeed. As the time when he felt a yen for a man with hair all over his body, like a bear's. The casting director and all of his assistants thumbed their call books in vain and in pain. They sent forth their emissaries upon the face of the earth. They found, after weeks of fine-combing, such a man selling groceries in an open air market. They spotted him first because of the air of great dejection he wore and also because his limply open shirt collar revealed bristles of hair that, surely, answered their god's demand. This man was about to lose his job, he told them. He had his mother to support. He also had a sweetheart, it was revealed, of a most romantic turn of mind. She favored such smooth and golden lads as Phillips Holmes. He had long kept the secret of his bearish hairishness from this fair maid of his heart. If he appeared in a motion picture—Well, he had, then, to make a choice. He must sacrifice his personal vanity and his sweetheart or he must sacrifice his mother's comfort and peace of mind. He succumbed to the god and pride bowed to filial duty.

Along about the same time came a call for a man who, when sitting on a chair, would resemble any man of normal proportions but who, when he rose from a chair, would tower some six foot six or seven in the air. He had to have, you see, abnormally long legs and an abnormally short torso. Such a man was found, amusingly enough, in the collection department of a large department store. By such a simple psychological feat were recalcitrant customers frightened into paying their past-due bills. They would be summoned to the collection department to account for their delinquencies. They would find an average looking man seated behind the desk. They would attempt to bluster and brazen it out. Then, silently, the man would rise and a giant would tower formidably over them. It appears that the trick was sound. The startled customers would open their purses and check books and offer up the arrears to the Gargantuan man.

There was the time when the god called for a man who would be a crack shot. He must be able, rumbled the deity, to shoot a cigarette from out the mouth of a star at any given number of paces decided upon by the director. Such a man, said the acolyte, was easily procurable. He had the best to be had right in his call book.

The acolyte telephoned the crack shot. Only to learn that he had just shot a cigarette out of his wife's mouth that very morning—and had (Continued on page 96)

"Bring me some pigs who will not grow!" cries the god. And, lo! The pigs appear. Or it may be a man with a body all covered with hair, a double of Lloyd George, or three Negroes with Harvard accents. He gets them!

WHAT

(Opposite page) Lela and Ginger. (Above, left and right) Ginger at seven. When she and her mother were living in Kansas City. The other picture was taken when she was three—just about the time of the kidnapping. (Left) Sitting pretty for "Sitting Pretty."

GINGER OWES HER MOTHER . .

By JIM TULLY

. . . Cheerfully—almost blithely—Lela Rogers fought the world for Ginger. It was a battle which demanded brains and good old-fashioned grit

HER right name is Virginia Rogers. She is called Ginger. Her father's parents were aristocratic slave owners in Missouri. They disapproved of their son's marriage to Ginger's mother.

The inevitable happened.

Seven months before Ginger was born, her parents separated. Lela, her mother, was under twenty years of age. A country girl from Iowa, she decided not to return home, but seek a living elsewhere as best she could.

With ten dollars and a battered valise, she left quietly one evening at dusk. Her destination was Independence, Missouri, fifty miles away.

The car stopped in front of the court house, and the expectant young mother left her valise in the care of a kindly cigar store attendant, and walked about the small pastoral town until she came to a small, quaint house that had a "for rent" sign near the door. It was owned by the lady next door, and the rent was $20.00 per month.

The young mother of the future screen star paid $5.00 to bind the bargain, and went to purchase her few necessities, and obtain her valise.

That night there was a terrible storm. The rain lashed against the windows, and when it abated, the young woman heard a scratching at the window. It was a black cat. Lela opened the window and took it in. The cat purred in gratitude. She called it Ebony. They began life over again together. It was present in the house seven months later when Ginger was born, and became jealous of the baby; but that, as Kipling would say, is ahead of the story.

WHEN the girl went in search of work next morning, she passed a newspaper office and asked the owner for a job.

Surprised, he at first refused her. Later, as they talked, he offered her the position of soliciting advertising, and reporting the stray activities of the little town. Her salary was to be $8.00 per week.

Overjoyed, she went to work.

None of her family knew what had become of her. As her marriage had become impossible, neither was her husband aware. She often thought of telling her mother, but by some strange quirk, decided to fight it out alone.

She become a favorite in the town. The owner of the paper and his wife treated her as a daughter. As month followed month, and the time for Ginger's birth drew near, no one asked questions. Fine tribute to the chivalry of the inhabitants of that little Missouri town.

Six weeks before the child was born, the mother was sent to cover an art exhibit in Kansas City. While waiting for a street car she accidentally met her father and mother. They accompanied her home, where Lela remained until the child was born. Complying with her mother's entreaties, the young wife consented to a reconciliation with her husband.

He came to Independence. Through his wife's influence in the town, he was given a position, which he held eight weeks. In the five years of their married life, he had twenty-eight jobs.

Soon her life in the little town was over. With tearful farewells she accompanied her husband to Texas, where he had been given a job as strike-breaker.

Daily, the mother lived in fear that her husband might be killed by irate strikers. At last, when Ginger was three years old the mother again left the husband and went with the child to Dallas, Texas.

In a few days she made a bargain with the owner of a hotel. He would allow her a room and board if she did the stenography and book-keeping for the hotel. Given credit for a desk and typewriter by local merchants, she was soon established in the lobby of the hotel as a public stenographer. Ginger played for hours in the lobby, while her mother worked.

A year passed and the young woman was again making a success of life alone and all unaided.

ONE day her child was stolen from the lobby of the hotel. The frantic mother did not know which way to turn for help. When all efforts to find the child had failed, the mother received a letter which said, "Surely you are not the bad woman your husband paints you, or your baby girl would not cry for you all the time." The letter was unsigned, but it told where the child could be found.

The mother engaged an old man as driver of an automobile, bought a revolver and went in search of her child.

Arriving at the town and locating the house, she waited patiently nearby until her husband left. Then, after a desperate struggle with her husband's mother, she obtained the child by force, and hurried in the waiting automobile from the town.

Hiding in a secluded place by a river, she bathed and soothed the child, and pondered on her future.

She would leave the Texas town, and hide herself and child somewhere else.

But first, she must return for her few belongings. As she arrived in the town at dusk, an evening newspaper carried a photograph of mother and child, and the story of its being retaken by the mother.

Late that night, with the help of a few friends, she left secretly for Kansas City, where, save for some months in Washington during the World War, she remained with Ginger until the future actress was about eight years old.

When word came that Ginger's father was quite ill, and the young girl pleaded to see him, the mother forgot all her fears, and took the child to him. It was not for long. Within a week, with his wife and child again near him, he was dead.

Strengthened by the impulse of her daughter, and by having helped her wandering husband in his last hours upon earth, the mother decided to return to Dallas with Ginger.

She sent a letter to the hotel proprietor who had been so considerate years before. And the mother and child boarded a train, which was to take them not only to Dallas, but to a destiny undreamed.

They were met at the station by two men and a woman, the hotel proprietor and his wife, and the aging man who had helped Lela to recover Ginger.

Mrs. Rogers returned to her stenographic work in the hotel. She had always loved to write, and now, with Ginger in school, she tried her hand at short stories. After constant effort and much discouragement, the young widow sold a story to a national woman's magazine.

In the meantime, she had gathered the threads of her life together. The editor and his wife who had been so kind to her in Independence still corresponded with her. The editor read her story, and wrote to his friend, the editor of a Dallas newspaper, telling of her ability and of her work while in Independence.

Much to her surprise one day, she received a letter from the Dallas editor, offering her a position as reporter.

Quite a contrast, these two pictures—what? The small one was taken in 1926 when Ginger was thirteen—and a Charleston contest winner.

DURING the years of stress, a great comradeship had grown between mother and daughter. That night they discussed the future. Should Lela take the newspaper job or not? She was happy in her work at the hotel.

"I'd go to see him, mother," said Ginger, "you can never tell what's around the corner."

Just then the bell rang. The friend who had helped Mrs. Rogers find Ginger entered. The woman and the girl discussed the problem with him. He looked kindly at Mrs. Rogers.

"You ain't losin' your nerve, are you?" he asked.

The question settled the matter.

She accepted the editor's offer.

In eighteen months she was promoted to the position of dramatic editor of the paper.

In this new work, Ginger accompanied her mother to the theatre whenever possible.

Then a vaudeville dancer of no great ability, whose name is now unknown, (Continued on page 86)

The "Spirit of Education" group outside the Venice Polytechnic High School in Los Angeles. The lovely central figure was modeled by Myrna Loy—five years ago. (Above) A head of Myrna Loy, done by H. L. Winebrenner, the sculptor of the "Spirit" group.

MYRNA LOY IN MARBLE

The fascinating revelation of one star who is immortal—because of a great monument. An unusual story which you cannot afford to miss

By JACK HILL

A BEAUTIFUL screen actress in classic marble! For five years, her figure has been the central figure of California's one and only allegorical group—admired by countless thousands—and she has never said a word about it.

And Hollywood, which believes that publicity is more important than the vitamin family—A, B and C combined—is stunned. The cinema village is accustomed to secrets—secrets about engagements, marriages and divorces—yet expects even these guarded facts to find their way into print. And they do!

That any Hollywood-broken star or featured player would deliberately, and for five long years, conceal material that would merit center position in rotogravure sections the world over, seems incredible to the picture boys and girls who consider first page photos better art than Mr. Rembrandt's very best and most famous efforts.

"Why, Myrna!" gasps Hollywood. "Why did you—how could you?"

And in answer, Miss Loy smiles calmly, enigmatically, and goes serenely upon her mysterious way.

And if Hollywood is stunned, consider the officials of the big celluloid factory where Miss Loy faces the grinding cameras. For five years the beautiful statue has stood almost within the shadow of the studio—so close in fact, that one could have batted a golf ball from the statue through the windows of the publicity department. And never a word about it—because no one knew.

Which just isn't like Hollywood.

MISS LOY'S silence might be better understood if other screen favorites had been perpetuated in classic Carrara. But she alone enjoys that distinction. Any other actress would have (Continued on page 91)

Lovers

Lovers, we hasten to add, for screen purposes only. For otherwise, it wouldn't be quite right for Johnnie Weissmuller to let Maureen O'Sullivan, in "Tarzan and His Mate," cling to him in such a way (on the opposite page) while (above) his new wife, Lupe Velez, is evidently having a high old time in "Joe Palooka" with James Cagney's brother, Bill. To Lupe's right, Miriam Hopkins and Fredric March are considering seriously the import of the picture's title—"All of Me." (Right) Mae Clarke is doing her best to vamp Jimmie Cagney for the purposes of "Finger Man." (Below) George Raft and Helen Mack in "All of Me." And Katharine Hepburn and Robert Young in "Trigger."

BEHIND THE SCENES OF

. . . Come backstage into fairyland! Get the surprise of your life when you see "big names" delighted with bits! And marvel at the sweet and friendly spirit "Alice" has brought to Hollywood!

By JACK JAMISON

THERE is a story behind every picture, but what a sweet story—what an unbelievably sweet story, for hard-boiled Hollywood!—lies behind "Alice in Wonderland"!

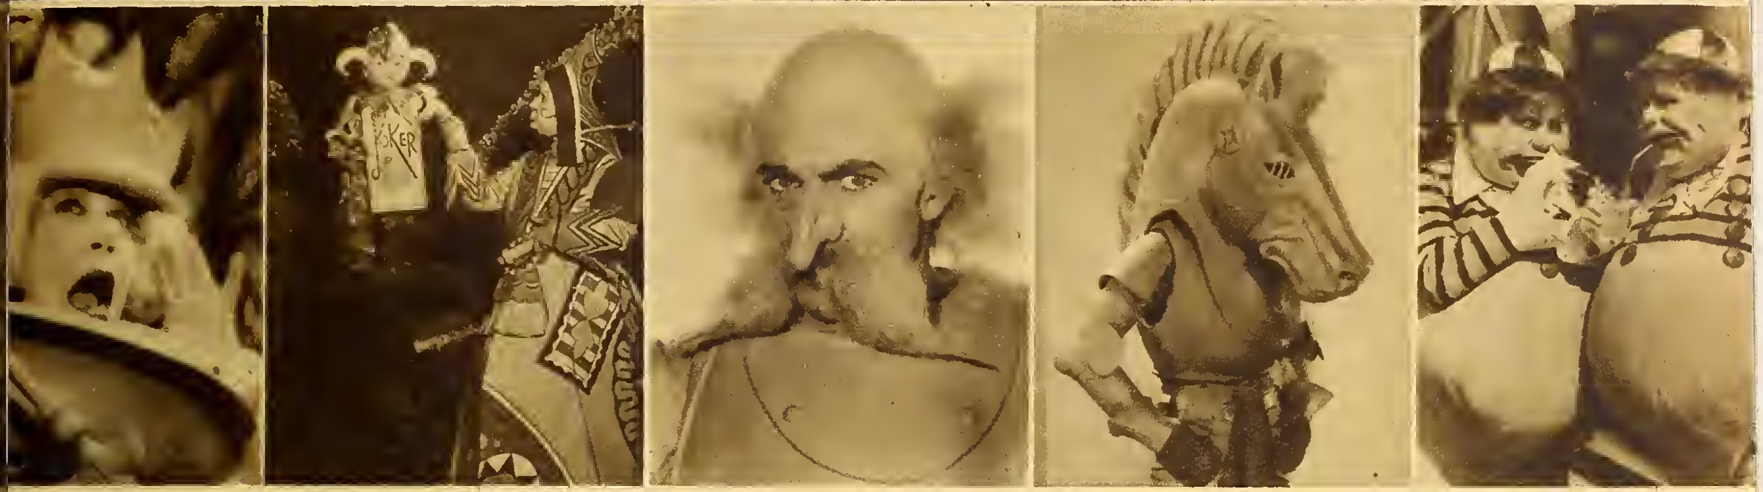
How did a studio ever happen to decide to make a sentimental, fantastic, nursery tale picture like "Alice"? A story written by an English mathematician and scholar, Charles Dodgson, sixty-odd years ago. Written out painstakingly, in longhand, for a little girl who was a friend and neighbor of his—a little girl really named Alice.

Gangsters, musicals, comedies, sex appeal, yes. Eddie Robinson, the Marx Brothers, Mae West, yes. But—a delicate, sweet story, all whimsy and fancy and delicate nonsense.

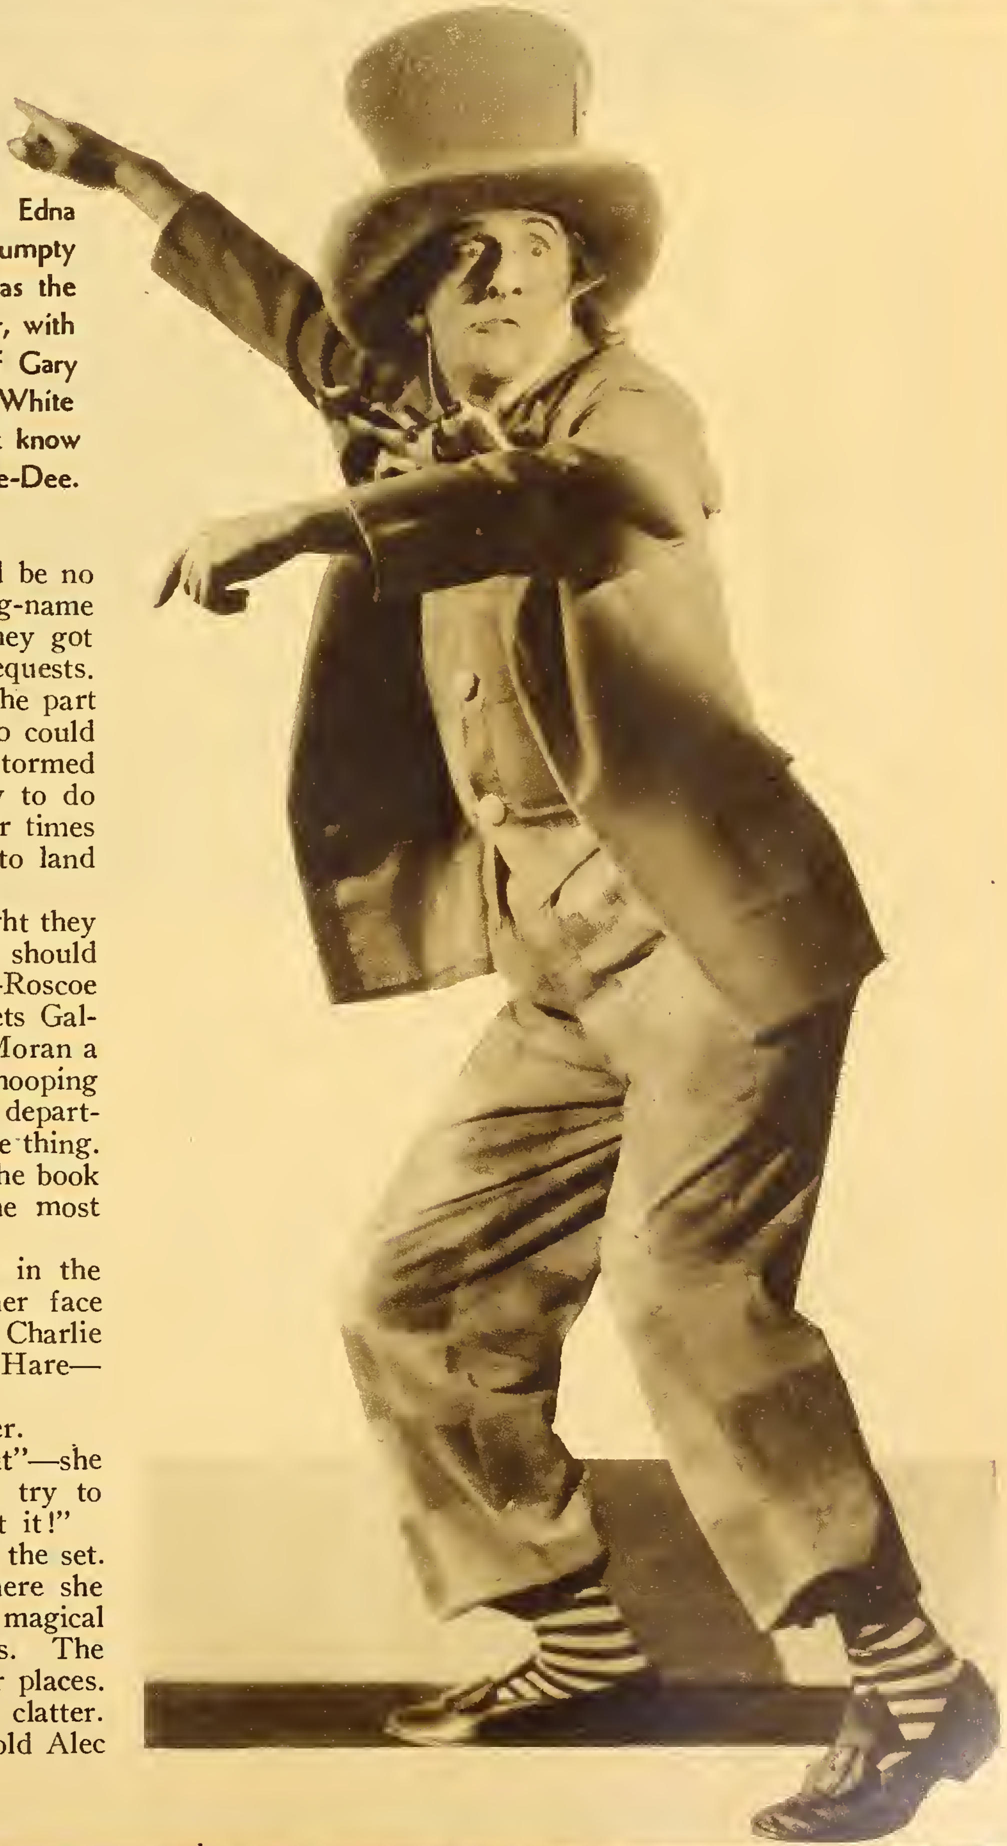
"I was interested in the possibilities of making a picture from the book for years," Louis Lighton, associate producer for Paramount, told me, to my surprise, when I asked him. "I had brought up the idea before, and this time I kept at it until it was finally accepted." Nobody was sure just how the picture ought to be made—a musical, an extravaganza, or what. About making it, in one shape or another, there was no doubt. A dozen hard-boiled studio business men, sitting around a conference table, all wanted to make the picture!"

And, as soon as they decided to go ahead and make it and lose their money, it turned out that there were simply dozens of people who had dreamt of a movie of "Alice" for years and years. Norman McLeod almost got down on his knees to beg them to let him direct it. Norman McLeod, who turned out Marx Brothers comedies! But fully ten years ago, when Norman was a struggling artist drawing the little cartoons that used to appear on the old Christie Comedy subtitles, he pleaded with the Christies to make "Alice in Wonderland." The Christies came within an inch of doing it, too. And no sooner was Norman given the chance he begged for, his life-long ambition, than the studio got another surprise.

"ALICE IN WONDERLAND"



On the opposite page, Charlotte Henry as Alice. (Below) Mr. E. E. Horton gets a kick out of his role of the Mad Hatter. Across the top of the two pages: Charles Ruggles as the March Hare. Ford Sterling as the White King. Roscoe Ates as the Fish. Edna May Oliver as the Red Queen. W. C. Fields as Humpty Dumpty. Louise Fazenda, swathed in inner tubes, as the White Queen. Baby Le Roy—the lamb!—as the joker, with May Robson, the Queen of Hearts. Two pictures of Gary Cooper—you'll have to take our word for it—as the White Knight. And Roscoe Karns and Jack Oakie—we don't know which is which, either—as Tweedle-Dum and Tweedle-Dee.



THE casting office announced that there would be no starring part in the film—only bits. What big-name actor or actress would play a bit? And then they got their surprise! They were simply flooded with requests. There were sixty-eight hundred applications for the part of Alice. Every famous actor in the country, who could get free, volunteered for smaller parts. They stormed the studio. They volunteered to take any salary to do anything. Dick Arlen, for instance, drove in four times from Palm Springs, a hundred miles each way, to land the part of—a cat!

And when they got their parts, you'd have thought they were a lot of kids on the last day of school! You should have seen them, as I did, getting their costumes—Roscoe Ates a fish, W. C. Fields Humpty Dumpty, Skeets Gallagher a white rabbit, Mae Marsh a sheep, Polly Moran a dodo bird, Ned Sparks a caterpillar! Kids! Whooping and yelling at each other! Even the wardrobe department and the make-up men caught the spirit of the thing. The costumes follow the original illustrations of the book down to the tiniest detail. The make-up is the most miraculous you've ever seen.

Alison Skipworth swept out of the wardrobe in the cumbersome robes she wears as the Duchess, her face hidden under a grotesque, heavy, airless mask. Charlie Ruggles—looking equally silly as the March Hare—laughed and gave her a poke in the ribs.

"What d'you think of it, Skippy?" he asked her.

"Young man, it's Hell. H, E, double L! But"—she glared at him—"just you let me see somebody try to take this part away from me, now that I've got it!"

I don't think I will ever forget the first day on the set. The scene was the interior of Alice's room, where she falls asleep and, in her dream, steps into the magical world of wrong-end-to, behind the looking-glass. The huge lights blinked on, and the director called for places. The scurrying grips and propmen hushed their clatter. Behind the cameras, out of the way, stood dear old Alec (Top, left) On the set. Jackie Searle as the Dormouse. Alice. Make-up expert Wally Westmore touching up Mad Hatter Horton. And Charles Ruggles without his March Hare head-piece. (Top, right) Alice walks through the enchanted forest, with Baby Billy Barty in her arms. (Circle) Alison Skipworth offers her Duchess mask some refreshment.

B. Francis, Edna May Oliver, and Ford Sterling, watching. They were all in costume. Alec, as the King of Hearts, wore the robes you can see on any playing card. Ford and Edna, as the White King and the Red Queen, were togged out as chess pieces. The cameras rolled. Alice stepped through the looking-glass, into a room in which—because it was on the other side of a mirror, supposedly—everything was backwards. The titles on the books ran backwards. The clock ran backwards. Everything—just as the gentle Charles Dodgson, who called himself Lewis Carroll so his fellow scientists wouldn't laugh at him for writing fairy-tales, thought it up for his little friend Alice, in England so long ago. And Alec, and Edna May Oliver of slapstick humor, and Ford Sterling, who started as a Keystone Cop, hardly breathed! So delicate was the creation being wrought before them, they were afraid to move for fear of shattering it. Their eyes were far away, looking back into the years of their own childhood. Only when the scene was done did they stir. And then white-haired Alec Francis sighed, and whispered:

"Beautiful!"

Just that one word.

YOU have probably heard about how little Charlotte Henry got the coveted role of Alice. A small part in a picture called "Courage," and another in "Huckleberry Finn" made the sum of her Hollywood experience. She is seventeen. (She looks fourteen.) There were not only the sixty-eight hundred applications, but six hundred interviews and fifty-two screen tests already made. Other tests were coming in from England and Canada. She came into the studio, and the production staff took one look at her and gasped. They thought the Alice of the book was coming to life right before their eyes. After they saw Charlotte, there was never any question as to who would get the part—and that's a fairy-tale story, too.

The picture took two months to finish—two months of work that went on day and night. So unusual were the trick shots called for by the script that even Paramount employees were barred from the vast, cloth-roofed arena where most of the scenes were taken. Two policemen stood at the door, always. I spent several days with the company, and I should like, here, to thank the studio for its courtesy to MODERN SCREEN's readers. I consider it a privilege to have come in contact with one of the finest things Hollywood has ever done—for "Alice in Wonderland" is all of that!

Everybody in the company felt—just as I did—that they were being granted one of the rarest experiences they had ever had, or ever would have. I visited the set again in the fourth week, after a month of gruelling work had been done, and made the rounds. I chatted with person after person, asking them what they thought of it. They were tired—terribly tired—and there was still a full month to go. But May Robson told me—she was celebrating her fiftieth year on the stage at the time—"This is the nicest anniversary present I've ever received." Gary Cooper said, "Playing the White Knight is the biggest thrill I've had since I've played in 'Wings.' No matter what I ever do, from now on this is it!" Louise Fazenda was positively glowing. "I would have turned down ten pictures for this. Everybody has caught the spirit of the thing. It's marvelous, the way we're working together." The wife of Hal Wallis, production chief at Warners, Louise doesn't need to act for a living. She was playing the White Queen because she loved it; had loved the book ever since she was a little girl. Everybody was like that.

Including the set-designing (Continued on page 113)

JOE SAYS A MOUTHFUL!

. . . The first time he saw his mouth on the screen, he shouted, "It's a lie!" But it's made him rich and famous Joe E. Brown with one of his lovely little daughters, Mary Elizabeth, and their pups.

By NANETTE KUTNER

JOE BROWN, not any Joe Brown, but Joe E. Brown, invited me to breakfast.

Over the telephone, his manager delivered the invitation.

"He'll be there, right on time," said the manager. "You'll recognize him, won't you?"

"How can anyone help but recognize him with that mouth?" I retorted.

The manager laughed. At the time I did not know why. I know now. You see, I failed to recognize Mr. Brown.

The restaurant where we planned to meet is one of the oldest in Chicago. I sat near the front tables. Only one was occupied. I watched for Joe E. Brown. Presently, my eyes wandered over to the sole eating occupant.

He was a neat-looking young man. His brown suit was neat. His dark hair was neatly parted in the center, and plastered down upon his head. His mouth was a long neat slit above his chin.

A cashier, standing near-by, and seeing me stare, smiled. "I wouldn't have known him in a thousand years," she said.

Then, suddenly, I knew. The neat-looking, pleasant-faced young man was none other than Joe E. Brown.

But where, I wondered, where in the world was his mouth?

Later, I asked him that question.

THANKS for the compliment," he said. "The first time I saw myself on the screen, I wanted to get up and holler, 'It's a lie!'" He winked, and continued seriously. "I get my effects by playing up to my mouth, by exaggerating it. I twist my mouth, in fact, I twist my whole personality to fit whatever part I'm playing. I know that sounds trite, and perhaps it's silly, but it's true. I once did a sketch in the Greenwich Village Follies. It was an adaptation of that O. Henry story—the one about the man who wants to go to jail and can't get arrested. Up to the last bit I clowned around, but at the final curtain, when I was supposed to be out in the street and cold, I paused for a silent second, the lights dimmed, up went my coat collar, and believe me, I actually felt cold! It's just as important to feel a funny part as a dramatic one, and don't kid yourself about that!"

"How did you happen to capitalize your mouth?" I wanted to know.

(Continued on page 105)

The Private Life of a Crooner

By WALTER RAMSEY

In his Toluca Lake home, where, believe it or not, Dick Powell spends more evenings than he does in the night spots of Hollywood.

DICK POWELL, who puts an end to the idea that a man can't have curly hair, a high tenor voice and play "romantic juveniles" without looking silly, was born in Mountain View, Arkansas, long enough ago to make him twenty-eight years old last November 14. He began to howl the second he was born and kept it up for the early years of his life. As soon as he stopped howling, he began demanding money—for chopping wood, for singing "Casey Jones" to the aged station master, for anything and everything he did.

The Powell family (there were two brothers—Howard and Luther) moved about Arkansas during Dick's early life, finally settling in Little Rock. Dick went through the usual boy phases—the bad phase, the thoughtful phase, the movie-struck phase, the studious phase. Ending with the sheik phase. And what a sheik he was! It was while he was out a-Romeoing one night that he first became conscious of his voice. A little blonde remarked about it in admiring terms. So, when Master Richard was kicked out of high school, he forestalled paternal wrath by hastily announcing that he'd kinda like to study—er—singing.

It worked—and Dick joined the choir, sang at weddings and funerals and made out pretty well. He bought a sax and played in the local hotel orchestra. He organized an orchestra of his own—the Peter Pan. It was, he says, terrible. The "big chance" came—an offer to go to St. Louis to sing in a real professional theatre. He went—and his act flopped colder than yesterday's pancakes. The audience, it seemed, had been judging singing contests for three weeks. But it was all very depressing, just the same.

THE return to Little Rock, after the disastrous appearance in St. Louis, was a blow to the Powell pride as well as his glowing ambitions. It was the first real opposition to his plans he had encountered, and it temporarily soured him on the artistic career of a tenor. He was glad enough to accept the $125 monthly job with the local telephone company in the commercial department. He began to have definite ideas of eventually rising to the vice-presidency of the Amer-

. . . Dick Powell as a young business man. And as a young husband. The big break—and the break that was bigger still. Good-by to romance! And tips on keeping one's head in Hollywood ican Telephone and Telegraph Company from this lowly beginning. He preferred the vice-presidency to the presidency as it had always seemed to him a more high-falutin' title.

At the age of twenty, Dick was hitting the high spots of Little Rock night life pretty speedily. His income from his job plus the added boon of his choir and solo work (which he had kept up in spite of the St. Louis fiasco) netted him a pocketful of spending money every thirty days. He considered himself, and was considered, quite the Man-About-Town with his vivid, low-swung roadster, his elaborate and colorful wardrobe and his speaking acquaintance with every maître d'hotel in town—both of them. Though his world was not, perhaps, the sensationally successful existence he had planned before he took off for St. Louis, it nevertheless had a definite oyster flavor. He was satisfied, if not exactly exuberant.

It was with a perfectly clean and untroubled outlook that he started out one Spring evening to the monthly P. I. E. (Perfect In Everything) dance. How was he to know that before that fateful evening had passed, disaster would set in; that an armful of calamity named Mildred Maund was due to completely upset his peace of mind and his happy, self-centered existence?

HE saw her the minute he entered the room. He couldn't have missed her. In the first place she was a stranger in the group, and as such, stood out like a beacon light among the familiar local debs. But far more important, she was the most gorgeously beautiful girl he had ever seen. It was typical of the Powell confidence, that as king bee of the stag line, he cut in on her long before someone got around to formal introductions. She raised her dark, soft eyes and drawled, after the manner of Southern belles, "Aren't you a little previous?"

"No," he replied, "I'm years too late." He added the popular slang phrase of the hour, "Where have you been all my life?"

It turned out she had been in Louisiana—that she was in Little Rock visiting her aunt—and that he could call her Mildred. But such statistics were irrelevant and unimportant compared to the antics of the Powell heart. He had heard of love at first sight, but he'd never believed in it. Now it had happened to him like a ton of bricks . . . like an earthquake . . . like an internal volcano.

During the Richard E. Powell, Tenor, phase. When he was singing at the Kentucky Hotel in Louisville. And a young wife was being very lonely.

No one else danced with Mildred Maund that evening. By some improper maneuvering he even talked her original escort out of taking her home. Long before he left her at her aunt's modest little cottage, he knew he was completely torpedoed.

The next three weeks he was worth about $.25 of the $125 the telephone company paid him. Out of office hours he was constantly with Mildred and during office hours he conversed with her over the telephone. It had been a source of great irritation when he discovered she was on a party line. With his pull in the company he had it switched to a straight line immediately.

Just three months before Dick turned twenty-one they eloped!

It was all as romantic and glamorous and exciting as their whirlwind courtship had been. Dick's pal, Jimmy Burnett, had been going with Mildred's girl friend. And one night, over ice cream sodas, the four decided to make it a double wedding the next afternoon. But when it came right down to the time and hour, Jimmy and the girl friend were not so sure. Dick and Mildred were. They were sure that this blinding infatuation, this electric attraction between them, was the sturdy stuff which bound lives together—forever. Whether or not they were temperamentally suited, just what plans they had for their life, where they were going from there—all those matters were of no importance compared to the ecstasy of their emotions.

In the late afternoon of May 28 they were married in the court house at Benton, Arkansas, by the Justice of the Peace. No one knew of the marriage—not even their families. They returned to Little Rock the same afternoon and were so anxious to keep the Big Step a secret that they didn't see each other for three days.

But this was not the Powell idea of a honeymoon and at the end of the third day he told his family of his marriage, fully expecting the roof to fall on his head. It didn't. His father said, "Well, son, you know best about that."

And his little mother said, through a misty smile, "I should think you'd bring my new daughter home to me."

For the first time in his life Dick became aware that his mother and father were persons as well as parents. And pretty darn sweet, understanding persons, too.

With this expected hurdle of family opposition safely and calmly passed, the young Powells decided to go on a honeymoon. Dick had $150 in cash and a brand new Ford roadster. Their destination was Memphis, Tennessee; where they planned to visit Mildred's relatives.

THEIR first night at a hotel along the way, Dick, a blushing groom, signed the register with his name only. The clerk looked at him oddly. "Well, what about the girl?' Red with embarrassment, Dick added "Mrs." to the book. It was his first realization of being truly a married man.

They never reached Memphis. It was clear in the second stop-over that their $150 would never stretch that far. Neither of them had ever before tried to make $150 reach anywhere. They decided to use their remaining $35 for the return trip to Little (Continued on page 94)

(Above) The Royal Peacock Orchestra, which was responsible for taking Dick away from the Little Rock Telephone Company into the Big Time. Dick is 'way over on the right, nursing a trumpet. (Right) Dick, with Mary Astor and Adolphe Menjou, in "Convention City," Dick is delighted with his chance to do other than singing roles.

Dot Wilson, ex-typist, has one.

. . . Just a long black cigarette holder. The late Edgar Wallace would give one to a person he liked. What magic is in them that they should have affected their owners as they did?

Joel McCrea's was thrice-lucky.

WHAT IS THE SECRET OF THESE charmed GIFTS?

By VIRGINIA T. LANE

A miraculous escape, Mr. Dix.

AT first, of course, all of us thought it was due merely to coincidence. But you don't have the same coincidence happening eight, nine and ten times.

What is back of it all? I can't tell you. I can only relate what actually happened and let you judge for yourself.

Some time ago, an amazing man came to Hollywood. He set every writer agog by casually turning out during a single week-end four of the best scenarios ever handed a producer. Edgar Wallace was noted for being the most prolific scribe in the world. Imagination? I've heard him spin yarns that would raise the hair on the back of a rhinoceros. He had the reputation of being able to dictate three different stories to three stenographers during the course of a morning's work. He would tramp up and down the room, switching from one story to another without a break.

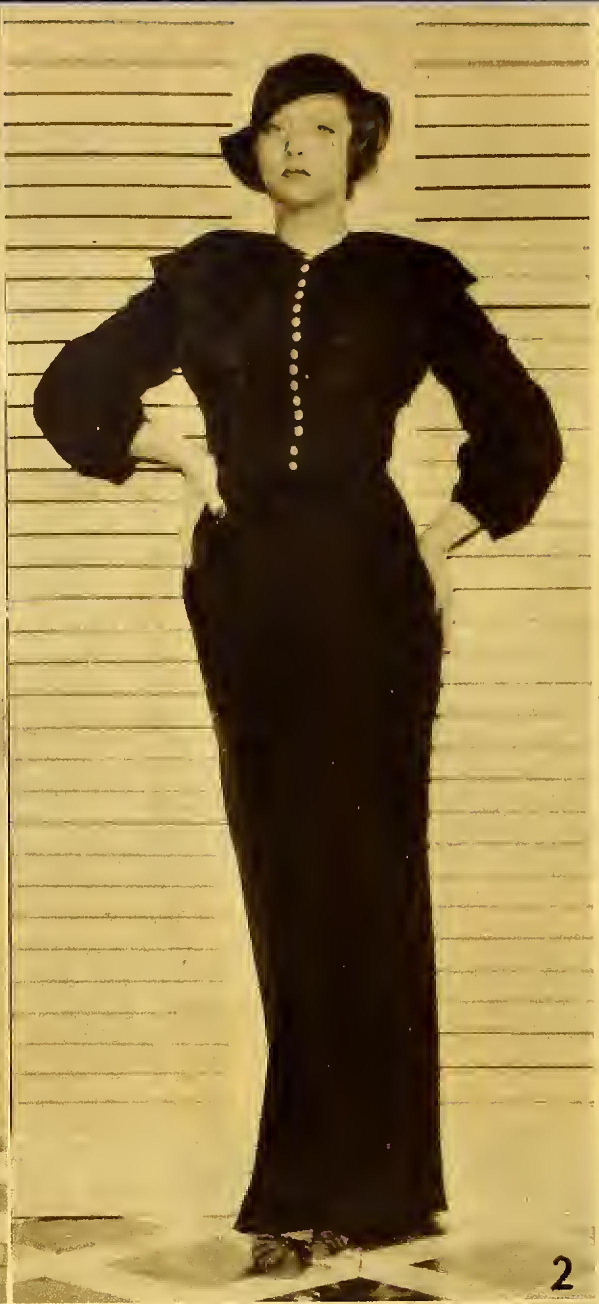
I suppose he walked from ten to fifteen miles over that carpet every day. Pacing . . . pacing. And always puffing at a cigarette. He never took time to brush away the ashes and, so that they would not fall on his vest, he had black cigarette holders made, eighteen inches long. Hundreds of them. If he liked you, he'd give you one as a memento. Here in Hollywood he must have given away fifteen or so. After his sudden death they became the treasured possessions of the friends he had made around the studios. He had a knack of making friends, this bland, mild-mannered Englishman. Looking at him, you would never suspect him of being the author of those grand keep-you-awake-at-night books. Nor would you think of him in connection with mysterious adventures in Africa and breathtaking Arabian escapades. But he could scent out adventure even on the most prosaic corners in the world. He was that type. He had a flair for living, for bringing good fortune to those with whom he was associated.

And after his death this quality lived on. Every person who received one of those long ebony cigarette holders experienced some marvelous piece of luck during the year following his death.

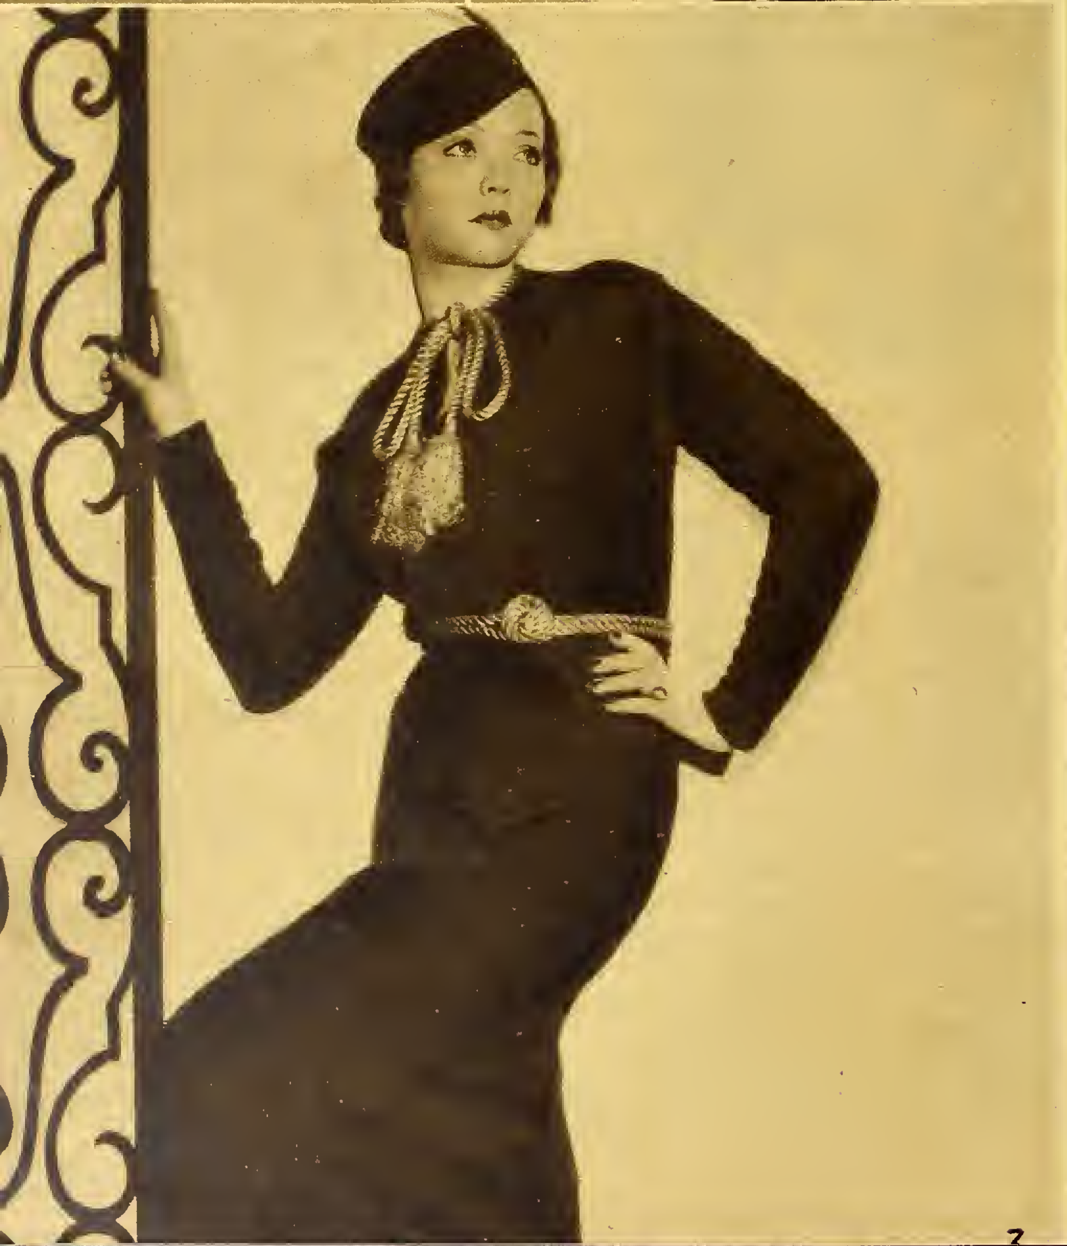
IT sounds fantastic. But it's the truth. Each holder has become a sort of talisman that you couldn't get the owner to part with for thousands.

There was Dorothy Wilson's strange case, for example. She was called in to do typing for Wallace. A neat, personable girl, Dorothy. But not essentially different from millions of other stenographers. She was careful with her work. She took pains with it. Wallace, in appreciation, gave her a tip—and a black cigarette holder. At the time, she thought nothing of it. Just tucked it away in her dresser drawer. (Continued on page 88)

1



2



3

WHAT lovely CLOTHES, SYLVIA!

Sylvia Sidney is a living and pictorial example of the girl who wears her clothes to perfection. Her taste is beyond reproach. 1. Attired with all formal dignity in one of the long, Victorian looking, sheer wool wraps. 2. A cocktail or dinner dress in velvet, trimmed with a simple row of rhinestone buttons. 3. Sylvia's frock of dark red nubbly wool, caught quite simply at waist and neck with heavy gold cording, is a strictly daytime dress. (On the opposite page) 4. A velveteen suit in dark red with a Queen Elizabeth collar setting off Sylvia's piquant face. 5. Now see her change her character completely in the Grecian evening dress of silver-shot blue crepe, girdled with a long dark red sash. 6. A black velvet hostess gown brings out all the demure qualities in Sylvia. Finally, in pictures 7, 8 and 9, you can see other views of the gowns Sylvia wears at the top of the page—other views which show the great variety of charm which each well chosen costume is capable of creating.

4

5

6

7

8

9

DOUBLE-DUTY outfits

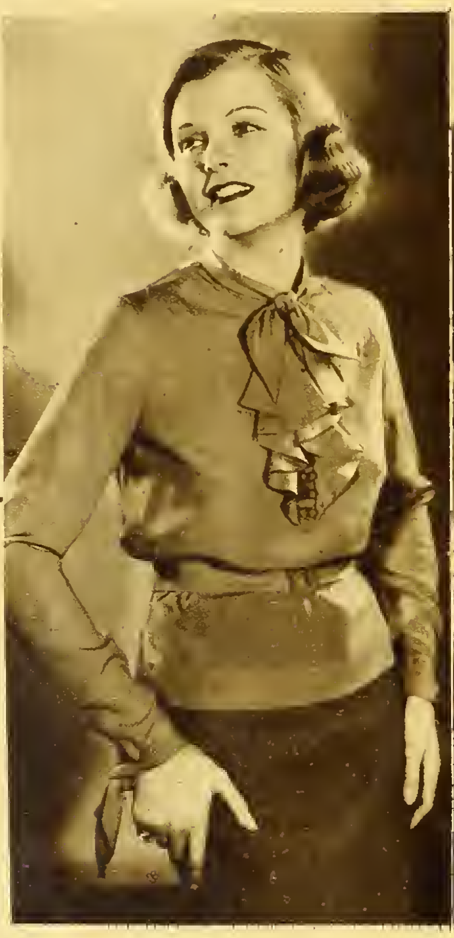
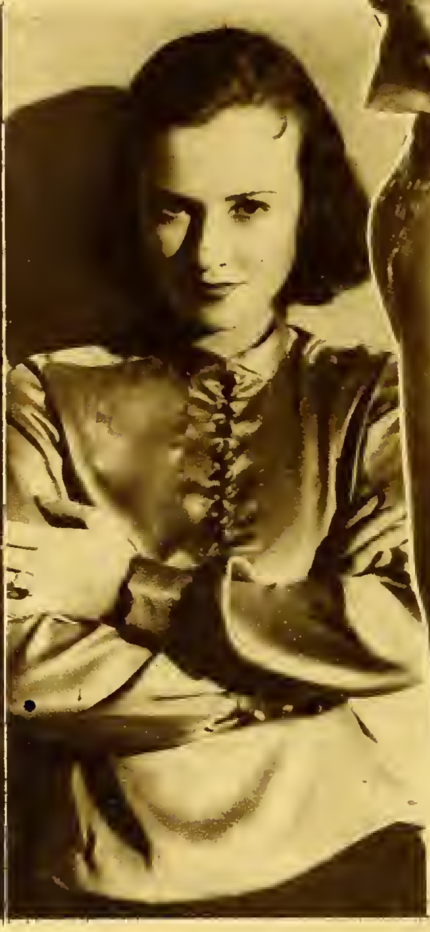
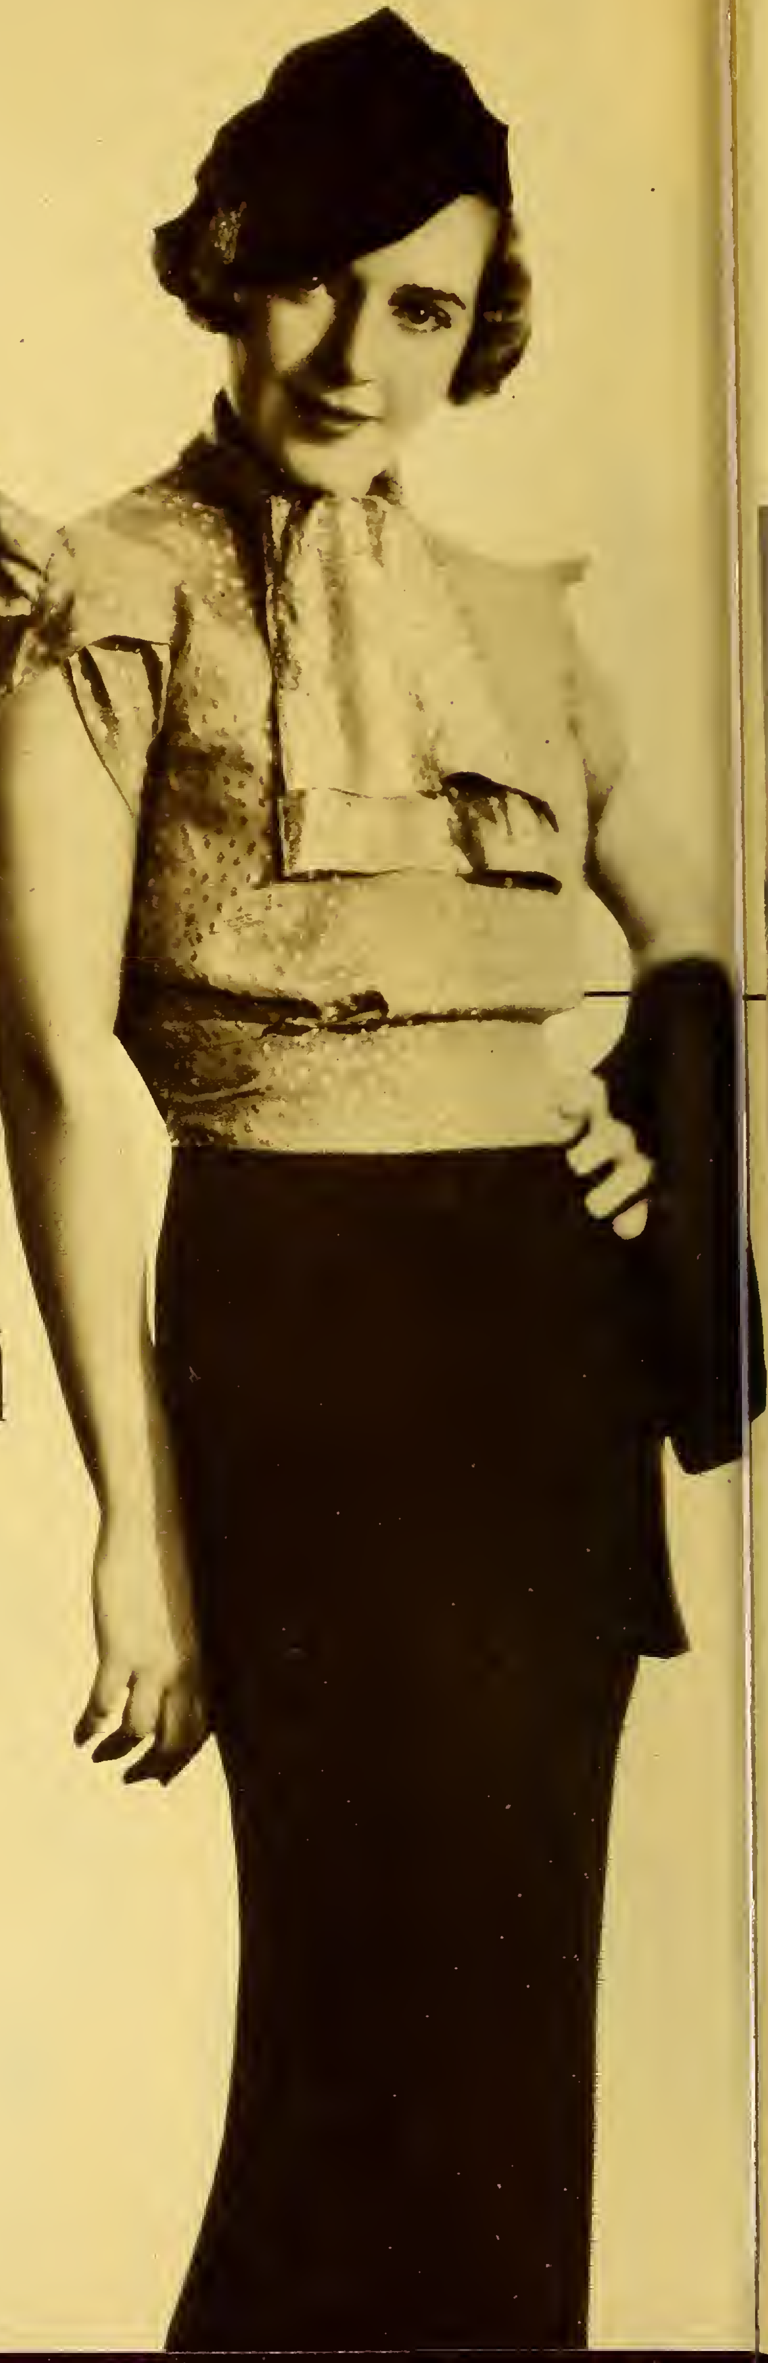
By MARGERY WELLS

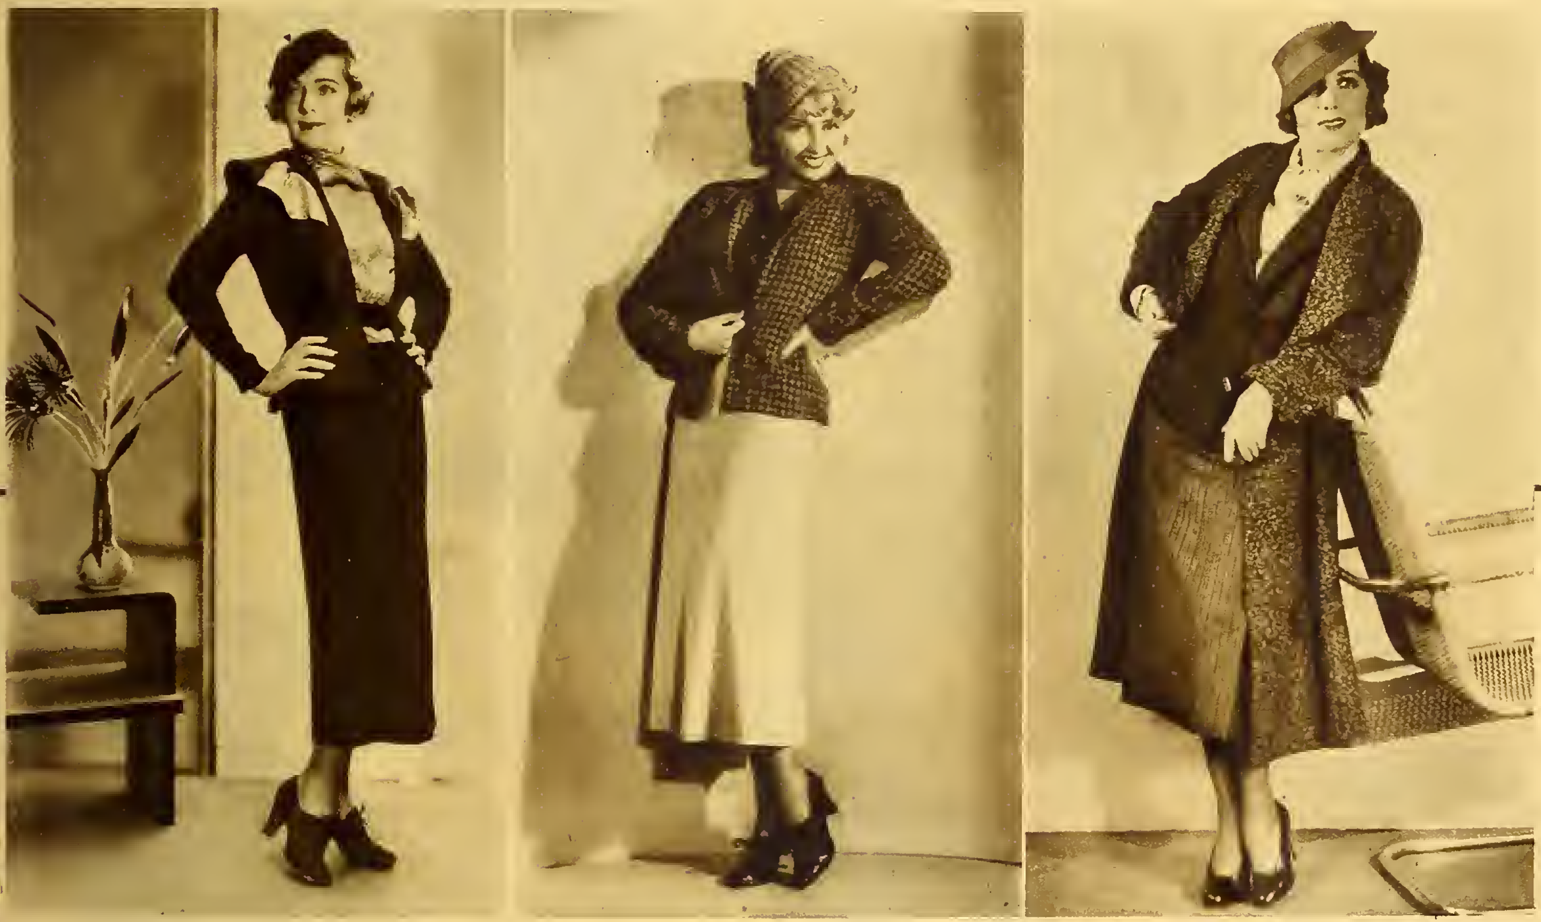






(Above, left to right) Jean Muir, one of the new Warner players, wears a blouse of flat crêpe. You can see at a glance that it is adapted from the 1890 shirtwaist which gave the girls of that day their historical distinction. There is the jabot, the high neck (not too high) and the—well, you know—regular shirtwaist sleeves. Much of the old charm remains and even much more of modern fascination is added. Then Margaret Lindsay does her satin blouse in more tailored fashion. She'll wear it with a tailored skirt or suit. Now Ruby Keeler, once and for all establishes the beauty and smartness of the shirtwaist formal frock. Silver brocade bodice with black velvet skirt—and that's just all there is to it except the dash and newness of the cut.

(Below, left to right) To make the silver brocade bloused evening dress into a truly acceptable restaurant dinner dress, Ruby Keeler has had the taste to add a jacket of velvet specially designed so that the ends of the scarf fall through large buttonholes. Then she adds a wide belt of velvet to give the jacket form and shape. Joan Blondell adapts the blouse idea to an informal plaid sport coat worn over a brown silk blouse and with a tan flannel skirt. Again, the shirtwaist idea comes into its own with strictly classic tailored togs as worn by Mary Brian. Her suit is composed of a striped gray skirt and solid gray jacket, while the top coat is one of those gray tweed mixtures. And the whole covers a blouse which has an ascot tie for a finish.



Some elementary clothes arithmetic! One skirt multiplied by two blouses plus one jacket equals three or four costumes

TWO dresses where originally but one bloomed—maybe three dresses, even four. That's the way a blouse has with a costume. And it comes like an angel bearing gifts just at this season. For haven't the prices of dresses soared? Then juggle your blouses in combination with a skirt and, behold! you are presenting a new appearance each time you step out.

Don't think for a moment that economy is the only factor. Not at all! The blouse and skirt combination is high, high style. Better to break your color and material in the middle for any outstanding style of the day than to let it flow in an uninterrupted line—unless you are too, too rotund.

The accepted procedure goes like this: buy a two-piece dress or a single skirt. See that its fabric is beyond reproach, guaranteed for a long life and a hard one. For this time of year—yes, almost any time of year, the fabric should be a light-weight woolen of some dark or neutral tone—black, brown, gray or tan.

Now, go creative on your blouse combination with this self-same skirt. The possibilities are limitless. You can be restrained and inconspicuous in the mornings with a blouse of rough crepe, to match or to contrast, simply made; giddy in the afternoons with one of satin in a lighter tone; flamboyant toward cocktail and dinner time in one made of glistening brocade. You can even be sporting in a blouse of striped or plaid cotton—all with the original skirt.

Take the black beginning

(Continued on page 92)

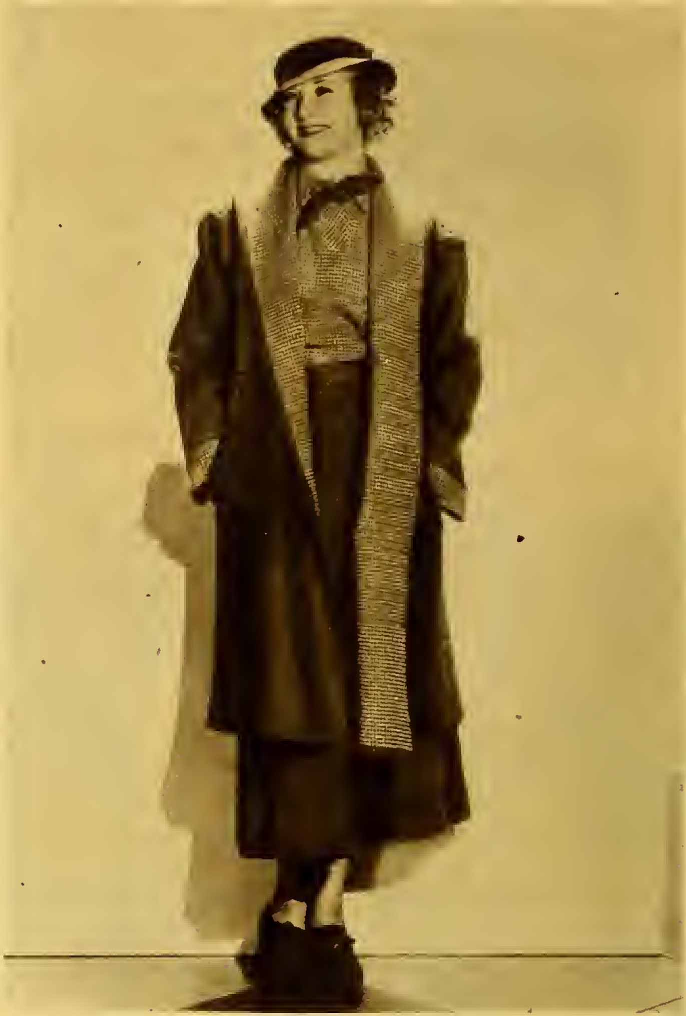
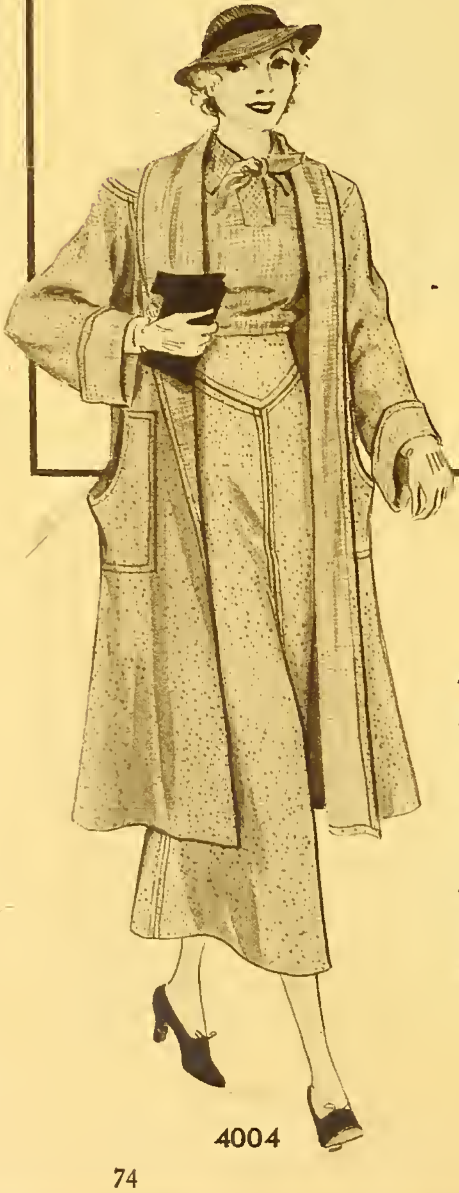
Patterns



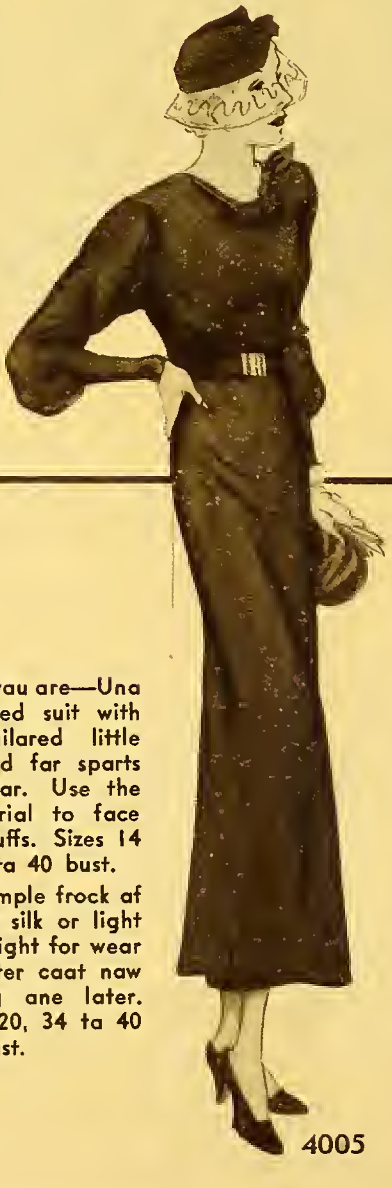
(Right) Una Merkel's most useful swagger suit. We have had a pattern of this suit cut for you.

IMPORTANT NOTICE!

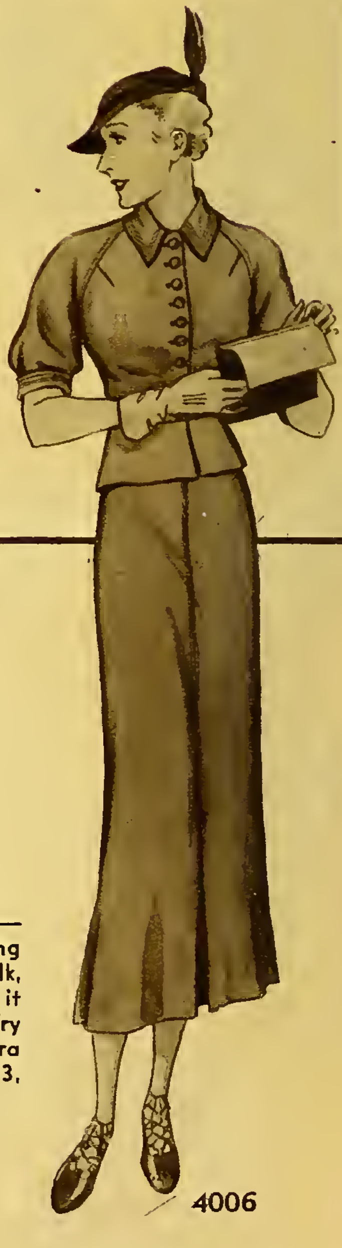
The patterns are fifteen cents each. The book is fifteen cents when ordered separately—it is ten cents when ordered with a pattern. You may send stamps or coin—coin preferred. If you live outside of the United States, the patterns cost twenty cents each, the book twenty cents separately and fifteen cents when ordered with a pattern. No foreign or Canadian stamps will be accepted. Orders should be addressed to MODERN SCREEN Pattern Service, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y. In ordering, be sure to state size wanted.



4004



4005

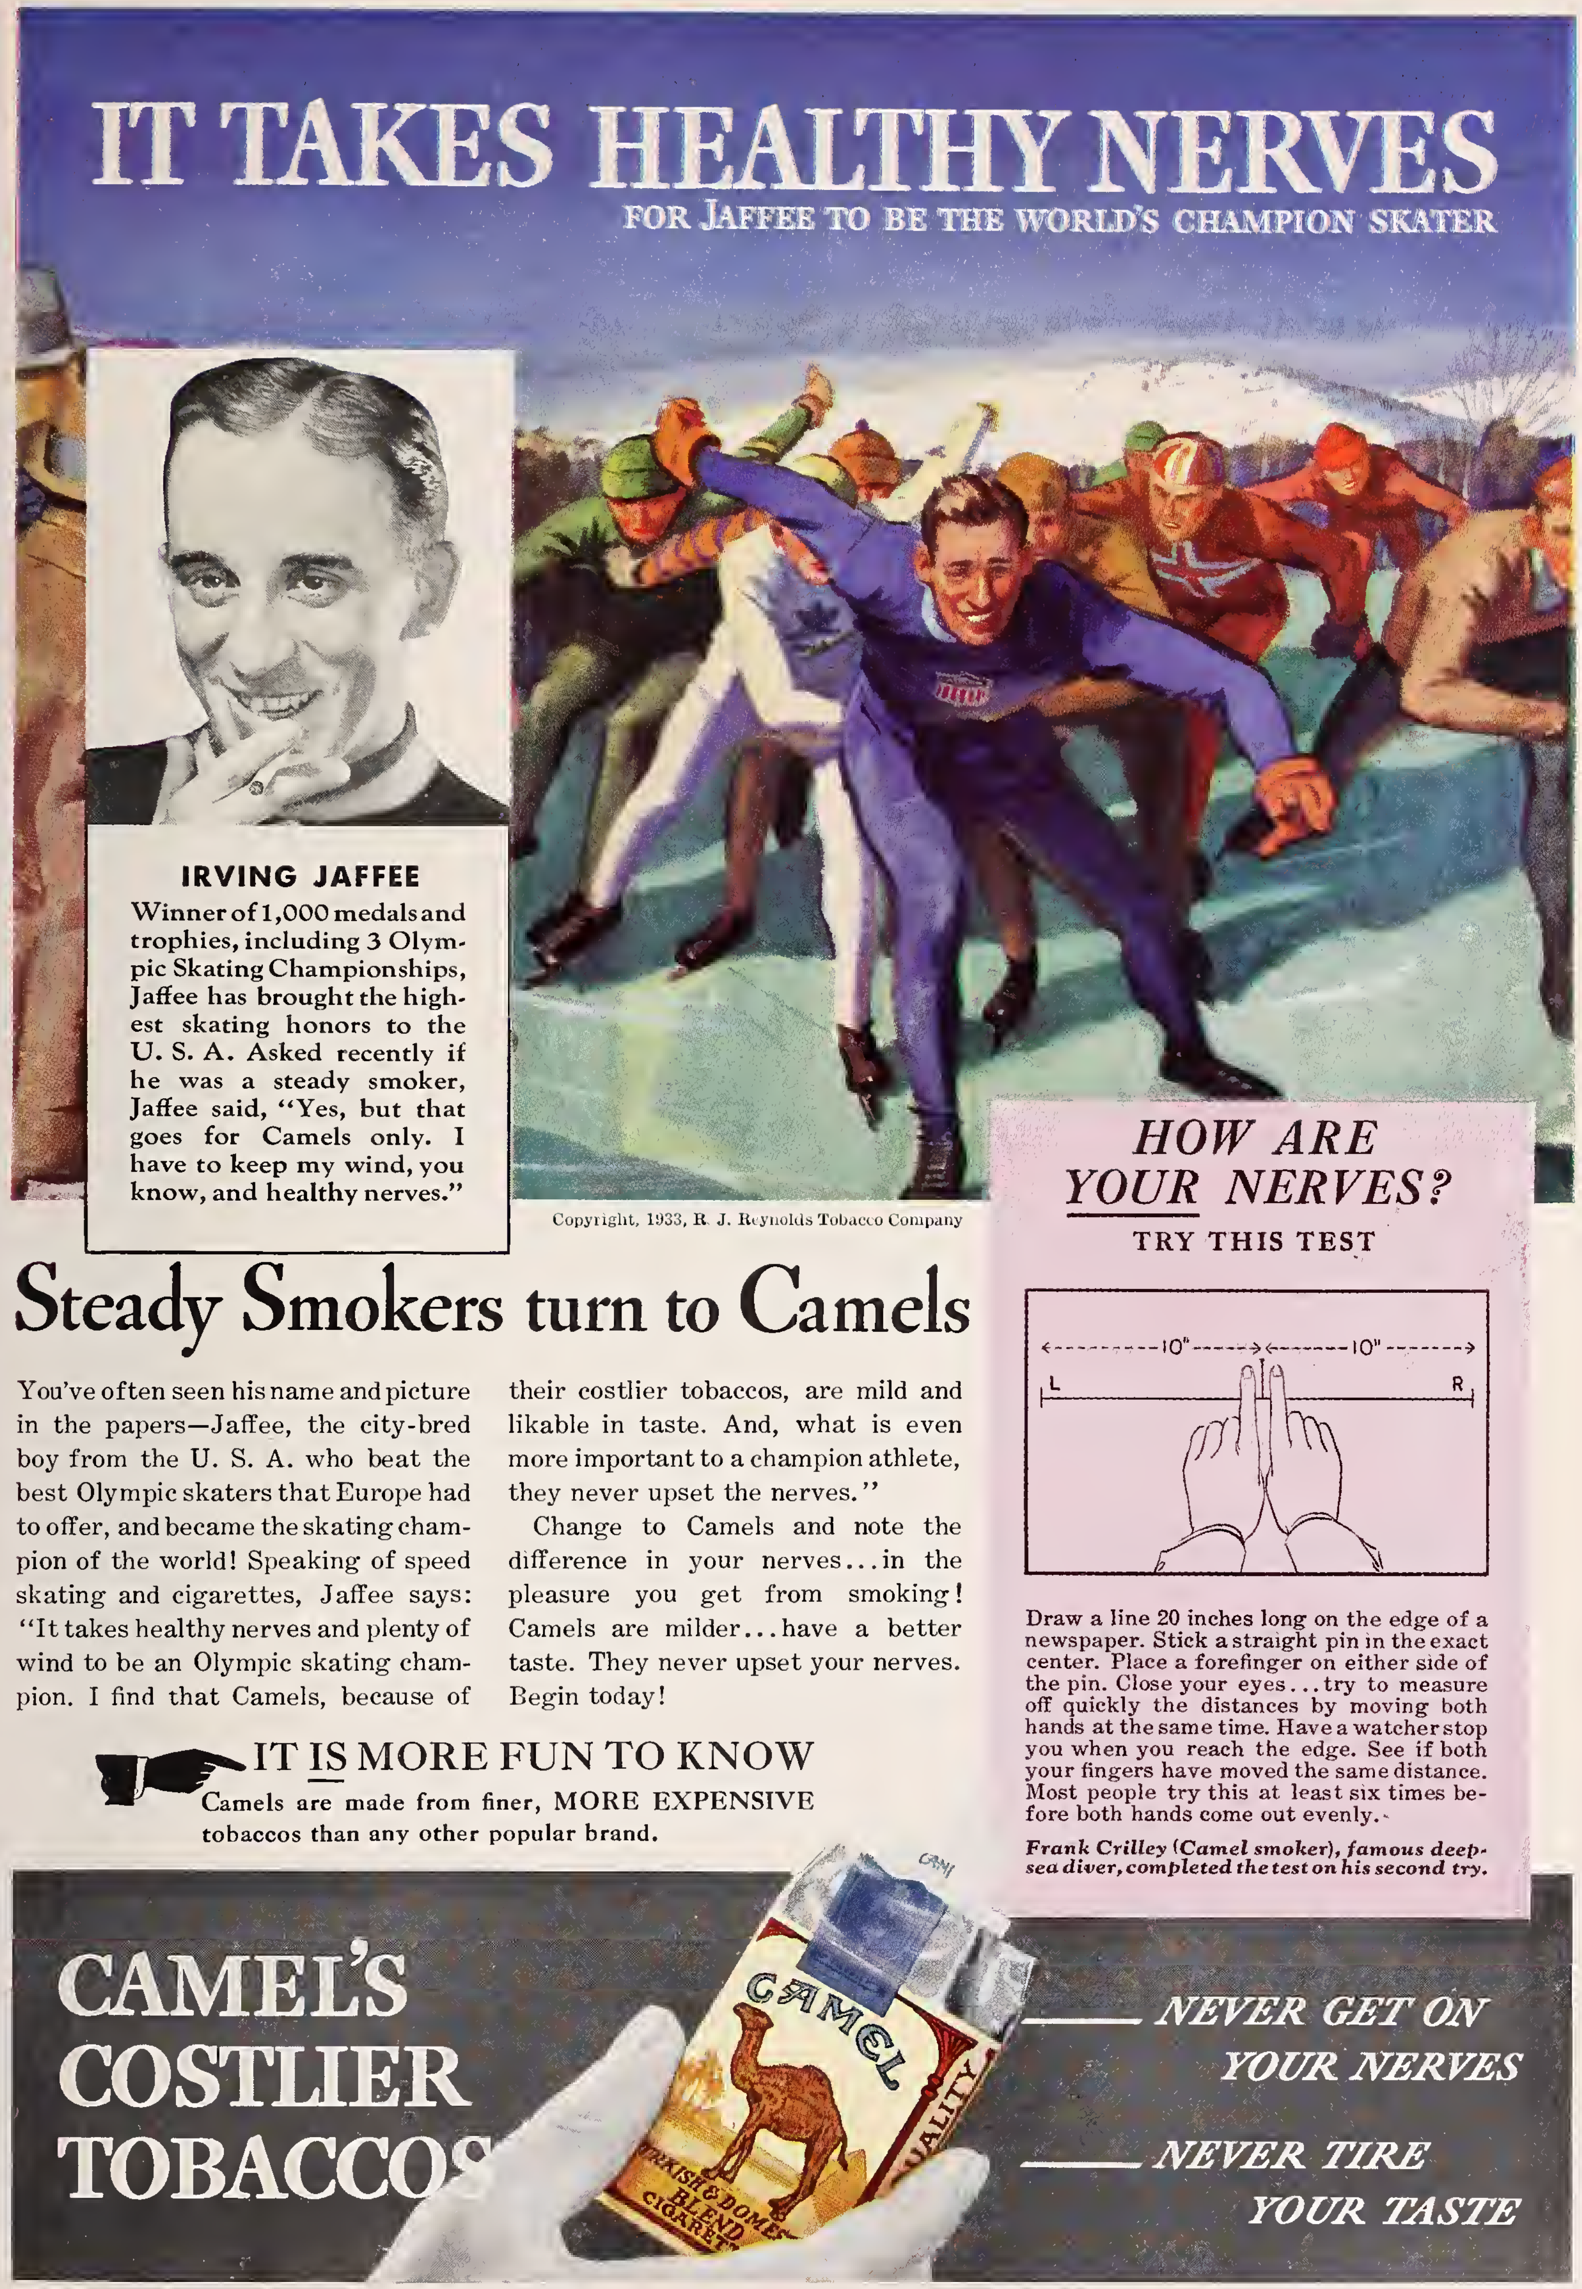


4006

4004—Here you are—Una Merkel's tweed suit with its very tailored little blouse. Good for sports or street wear. Use the blouse material to face collar and cuffs. Sizes 14 to 20, 34 to 40 bust.

4005—The simple frock of bright toned silk or light wool is just right for wear under a winter coat now or a spring one later. Sizes 14 to 20, 34 to 40 bust.

4006—Blouse and skirt—accepted lines for spring shirtwaist attire. In silk, cotton, linen or wool it makes up beautifully. Try it in necktie silk for ultra smartness. Sizes 11, 13, 15, 17 and 19.



IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVES

FOR JAFFEE TO BE THE WORLD'S CHAMPION SKATER

IRVING JAFFEE

Winner of 1,000 medals and trophies, including 3 Olympic Skating Championships, Jaffee has brought the highest skating honors to the U. S. A. Asked recently if he was a steady smoker, Jaffee said, "Yes, but that goes for Camels only. I have to keep my wind, you know, and healthy nerves."

Copyright, 1933, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company

Steady Smokers turn to Camels

You've often seen his name and picture in the papers—Jaffee, the city-bred boy from the U. S. A. who beat the best Olympic skaters that Europe had to offer, and became the skating champion of the world! Speaking of speed skating and cigarettes, Jaffee says: "It takes healthy nerves and plenty of wind to be an Olympic skating champion. I find that Camels, because of their costlier tobaccos, are mild and likable in taste. And, what is even more important to a champion athlete, they never upset the nerves."

Change to Camels and note the difference in your nerves...in the pleasure you get from smoking! Camels are milder...have a better taste. They never upset your nerves. Begin today!

☛ IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

HOW ARE YOUR NERVES?

TRY THIS TEST

Draw a line 20 inches long on the edge of a newspaper. Stick a straight pin in the exact center. Place a forefinger on either side of the pin. Close your eyes...try to measure off quickly the distances by moving both hands at the same time. Have a watcher stop you when you reach the edge. See if both your fingers have moved the same distance. Most people try this at least six times before both hands come out evenly.

Frank Crilley (Camel smoker), famous deep-sea diver, completed the test on his second try.

CAMEL'S COSTLIER TOBACCOS

——— NEVER GET ON YOUR NERVES

——— NEVER TIRE YOUR TASTE

Clarence Sinclair Bull

The most human picture of Garbo that we have ever seen! What is making her look so serene? Is she that glad to be back at work? Is the talked-about romance with Rouben Mamoulian flourishing? It's good, Greta Garbo, to see that tragic look gone from your eyes!

TWO-SKIN treatment solves age-old problems

Wrinkles now known to begin in UNDER SKIN

Dryness corrected by treating OUTER SKIN

UNDER SKIN
WHERE WRINKLES START
OUTER SKIN
WHERE DRYNESS STARTS

Mrs. Henry Field of Chicago. Thrillingly beautiful, one of Society's smartest women, Mrs. Field uses Pond's Creams. She keeps her under skin firm with Pond's Cold Cream, her outer skin soft and smooth with Pond's Vanishing Cream.

You have TWO SKINS!

That's the surprising fact which explains where skin faults really begin. The skin faults you dread most. Lines. Wrinkles. Dryness. Roughness!

In your under skin, lines and wrinkles have their earliest beginnings. By the proper care of this skin, you can prevent them.

In your Outer skin come dryness, roughness, chapping. You can keep this skin moist, satin-smooth by using a cream made especially for it.

Here's the way:

Oil Cream for the Under Skin—Because your under skin shrinks when its oil glands fail, your outer skin falls into little lines and creases—eventually wrinkles! For this under skin Pond's Cold Cream was made. Oil rich. And penetrating! This glorious cream sinks deep, reaches the under skin. Supplies the oils it lacks. Soon your under skin grows firm. Little lines smooth out—as if by magic!

Because this cream is rich in oils and penetrates so deep, it is a marvelous cleanser. Your skin feels wonderfully fresh and clean, as well as toned after using it.

Greaseless Cream for the Outer Skin—To keep your outer skin moist and smooth, an entirely different cream was made—Pond's Vanishing Cream. Quite greaseless, this cream contains a marvelous substance which actually restores moisture to the skin. It smooths away roughness in one application, and is a godsend for preventing or healing chapping. Being greaseless, it makes a heavenly overnight cream. It is the most delicious foundation cream—holds your powder beautifully.

Use these wonderful creams day and night just the way beautiful society women do. Soon see your complexion glowing with life and vitality—satin-smooth and free of lines!

POND'S
Liquefying Cream
POND'S
Cold Cream for Cleansing

For your Under Skin—Pond's delicious Cold Cream, or, for those who prefer a cream that melts more rapidly, Pond's Liquefying Cream.

POND'S
Vanishing Cream
Finishing

For your Outer Skin—Pond's Vanishing Cream, greaseless, corrects dryness.

SEND FOR 3 DAYS' TREATMENT

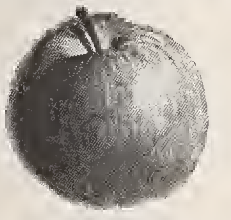
POND'S EXTRACT CO., Dept. B, 136 Hudson St., New York City
I enclose 9¢ (to cover postage and packing) for samples of Pond's Three Creams and six different shades of Pond's Face Powder.

Name____________________________

Street____________________________

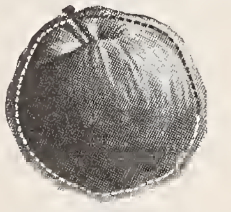
City__________________State__________

THE APPLE TELLS THE STORY



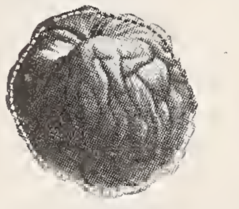
SMOOTH—GLOSSY

1 At its peak, the inner and outer skin of the apple are both firm and smooth—perfect!



SOFT—SPONGY

2 A little past its prime, the inner tissue of the apple has shrunken away from the outer skin.



WRINKLED—DISCOLORED

3 Later, the outer skin has wrinkled to fit the shrunken under skin. This causes wrinkles in human skin, too!

TUNE IN on the Pond's Players Fridays, 9:30 P. M., E. S. T. WEAF, NBC Network

Copyright, 1934, Pond's Extract Company

MRS. F. COOK of Verona, N. J., writes:

"Baby's Cough soon stopped — thanks to the Doctor's advice!"

● "My poor little baby coughed night after night," writes Mrs. Cook. "It was awful. Then doctor said to give her Pertussin. I did—and it was wonderful how soon the hard cough stopped."

THE tissues of your throat and bronchial tubes are kept moist and healthy by millions of glands—like tiny water faucets. But when you "catch a cold" these glands clog up.

Thick mucus collects. Your throat feels tickly—dry. You hawk and you cough, but nothing is "raised."

To stop a cough, you must get these little moisture glands working again. And Pertussin does just this!

Just a spoonful or two of Pertussin, doctors have found, stimulates the glands—starts up the flow of their natural moisture. Germ-laden phlegm loosens—your throat feels soothed and relieved. Nature, with the help of Pertussin, has started to cure your cough!

Pertussin is the extract of a medicinal herb used by doctors for years, even for the worst of all coughs. It won't upset the digestion. It contains no narcotics, no harmful drugs.

Won't you get a bottle of Pertussin right away?

●

BABIES NEED PERTUSSIN when they cough. And it's so safe! "I use it for my own family," one doctor writes. "It always does the work," writes another. Try it—you'll like its taste!

PERTUSSIN

has been prescribed by doctors for 30 years . . It works safely!

Let's Talk About Hollywood

Sylvia's "parent" trouble . . . Diamond Mae's heart of gold . . . Mr. Arliss' synthetic furs . . . and other camera coast news and chatter and such

BARBARA STANWYCK is fighting desperately against permanent lameness as she prepares for her next picture, "Gambling Lady."

Although Barbara absolutely refuses to talk about her present trouble—and few, if any of her friends are aware of her battle against pain and the possible lasting effects of two studio accidents—it is known that she is in possible danger of having to sacrifice her career to lameness.

Two years ago, while making a picture, one of the huge studio overhead lights fell and struck her on the head and her back was injured when she was accidentally dropped while being carried to the studio hospital. Shortly after that, she was thrown from a horse while making another picture. This also affected her back. These two injuries have kept her in constant pain ever since and recently she suffered further from a complete collapse while on personal appearances in Boston.

Being a great little trouper, however, Barbara is making a valiant attempt to regain her health so that "the show may go on." She sleeps strapped to a specially-designed board which relieves pressure on the injured bones and spends four hours daily under special lights and X-rays. It is generally understood that unless the injury is carefully treated, it might result in a shortening of one leg and a permanent lameness.

Those who know of her painful injury and her game fight to overcome the handicap are praying that she will not overdo in making this picture. We're pulling for you, Barbara. We want you to keep on making swell pictures for a long time to come.

Baby LeRoy's vocabulary, which up to now consisted of the word "Nuts," now includes "Oh Boy" and "Hot Dog"!

SYLVIA SIDNEY'S real father, unheard of for over fifteen years, recently turned up to haunt her successful days with demands for money, a new home for his present wife and children OR ELSE!

Sylvia was born "Sylvia Kosow" one year after her mother married Victor Kosow. The marriage lasted only a few years when Mrs. Kosow sued for divorce. In 1919, Sylvia's mother married Dr. Sigmund Sidney and in 1922 they adopted little Sylvia as their own daughter.

"The first time I met my father since I was a small child was in 1932," says Sylvia, explaining her present position. "I came to New York to see his attorney. Father was late to the appointment and we greeted each other coldly. Father said that I would have to help him. He wanted a home, said that I could buy him one for about $15,000. and I refused. I offered him sums of money to be paid from time-to-time, but he refused even this.

"All during the time that my mother and I were in desperate need of help, Mr. Kosow was nowhere to be found. Not once did he offer any help or even come to see us. Now, that we are rather successful, he comes to haunt us with threats to set aside the adoption on the grounds that he was never served with the proper papers. He told me that if I didn't 'come through' that he would make it hard for me, saying that he had several friends who were newspaper writers or columnists. I don't think I owe him a thing. My real father is Doctor Sidney as he is the only one who has ever treated me like a father should."

Sylvia won the suit.

Five years ago Joan Crawford said, "I wish I could really wear clothes in a smart, nonchalant manner." Look at her now!

MRS. BING CROSBY isn't tempted to do any professional singing these days—by request. Indeed, by her crooning husband's request.

When last the popular pair visited New York, the former Dixie Lee entertained a friend by playing a record she made for an important phonograph company. During the process, Bing's heavily lathered face emerged from the bathroom.

"Listen, Dixie, are you going to do the singing for this family," he demanded, "or am I?"

"You, Bing dear," replied the little woman who, like all little women, has a way of knowing the right answer.

"Very well," quoth her lord and master, who forthwith raised the record over his head and brought it down on the victrola in a hundred pieces, "I guess that settles it!"

It did.

"WHERE are those pictures you were going to send me?" wrote Mrs. Harvey to her famous Lilian recently. Which request concerned the star greatly, for the "still" department had received orders to send a copy of each photograph taken of her to England.

Investigation proved that the instructions had been carried out. Lilian wrote

(Continued on page 122)

"Her headaches and tired feeling disappeared—" reports the famous

DR. OLIVIER TAILLANDIER of the Salpêtrière Hospital, Paris

● Dr. Taillandier—gastro-enterologist—noted contributor to the French "Bulletin de la Société de Biologie"...

Below, this authority describes a typical case from his practice. He then adds:—

"When intestines grow tired, poisons seep into the blood. The effects are often noticed in headaches, loss of energy . . .

"We have at hand a remarkable food—yeast—with an astonishing effect on constipation. Yeast stimulates Nature to do her own work in purifying the system . . . Improved general health results."

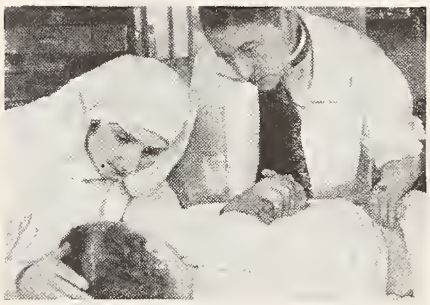
● Dr. Taillandier is consultant at l'Hôpital de la Salpêtrière, Paris. He describes a typical case from his own practice, below.

● "This patient had headaches and tiredness. The whites of her eyes were yellowish...

● "Her tongue was coated. She confessed to me that she had been using cathartics . . .



● "Manual examination and X-rays showed she was constipated. I prescribed yeast . . .

● "It restored her elimination to normal. Her headaches and tired feeling soon disappeared."

"It did me more good than all the pills and laxatives I'd tried—"

"I'd always lived an active life," writes Mrs. Lee Steil, of Seattle. "Then, marriage—and home duties. I lacked exercise. I developed sick headaches. My skin was bad. I read what doctors said about Fleischmann's Yeast, and started to eat it. My appetite picked up. The headaches stopped. My skin cleared."

DID you know that headaches—like indigestion, bad skin, a coated tongue, that "tired feeling"—may mean nothing more or less than an unclean condition of your intestines?

If your head aches often, go to see a doctor, by all means. BUT—if you are at all constipated—don't wait to start eating Fleischmann's Yeast. Probably it's just what you need!

Eaten regularly—3 cakes a day—Fleischmann's Yeast actually "tones" and stimulates your "tired" intestines. It also softens the wastes that have accumulated there.

Then, as your bowels start to function normally again, you feel so much better. Digestion improves. You have more energy. You look better, too, the minute the clean condition of your intestines begins to reflect itself in your skin.

Isn't it well worth the effort? Then do try it. You can get Fleischmann's Yeast, you know, at grocers, restaurants and soda fountains, and each cake is rich in three health-giving vitamins—B, G and D.

Just eat it before meals, or between meals and at bedtime—plain or in a third of a glass of water. Starting now!

EAT 3 CAKES EVERY DAY
FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST
VITAMINS B G D
IT IS HEALTHFUL
NRA

Copyright, 1934, Standard Brands Incorporated

INTRODUCTORY OFFER

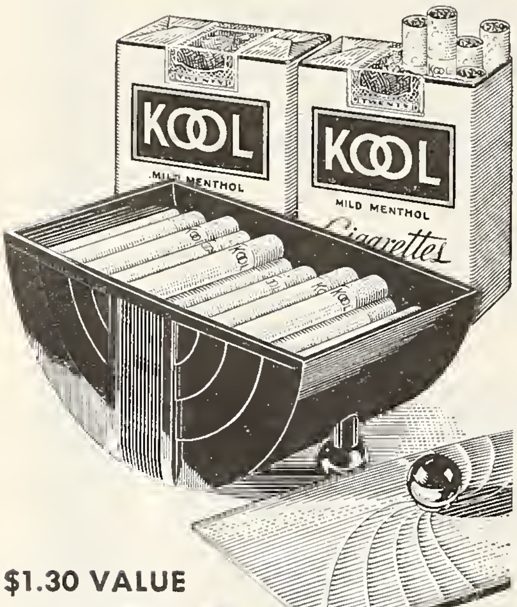
STUNNING NEW CIGARETTE BOX

and

TWO PACKS OF

KOOL

CIGARETTES



$1.30 VALUE
for only 50¢

THIS cigarette box is a beaut! Sleek lines, dashing color combination. It's an eye-catching ornament in a living-room or on an office desk. Holds 70 to 80 cigarettes.

It sells for a dollar in high-class specialty shops along Fifth Avenue and Michigan Boulevard. Body lustrous jet-black General Electric Textolite; lid contrasting jade green; legs and knob silvery chromium-plated balls. (Lid fits snug to keep cigarettes fresh.) Makes a wonderful gift. No advertising on it.

KOOLS are mildly mentholated by a special process that actually cools the smoke to prevent throat dryness, but doesn't interfere with the full flavor of the fine tobaccos. And KOOLS are cork-tipped; won't stick to lips.

The supply of boxes is limited. You will save 80 cents if you act immediately.

BROWN & WILLIAMSON TOBACCO CORP.
Dept. I., Louisville, Kentucky

Enclosed find 50¢ (stamps or money-order or coin—if latter, please protect) for which send me—postpaid—KOOL Cigarette Box (no advertising on it) and two 15¢ packs of KOOL CORK-TIPPED CIGARETTES.

Name__________________
(print plainly)

Address__________________

City__________ State________

Good in U. S. A. only

Reviews—A Tour of Today's Talkies

(Continued from page 49)

are getting the "lowdown" rather than a flock of hokum—more humor and realism than ever before.

Joan plays the young dancer who places her career ahead of marriage. She starts as a "strip-tease" in a burlesque and works up by sheer hard work and courage. Gable is the stage producer, who finally gives her a break after she has pestered him almost to death. Joan doesn't know that playboy Tone is really backing the show and so promises him that if she fails in this opportunity she will marry him. He shuts off the supply of money and of course the show can't be produced. Gable finally pulls the game out of the fire by putting his own money into the deal.

Joan looks gorgeous and dances and acts well enough to make you forget her last few attempts. Gable, whose illness almost kept him out of the picture, brings a note of realistic irritability to the tired and harassed producer. Franchot does well, especially with the Crawford love scenes, and you're sure to like him.

Of course, you'll go to this one (who would miss a chance at Joan and Clark). It's good!

• BLOOD MONEY
(20th CENTURY)

George Bancroft, Frances Dee, Chick Chandler, Judith Anderson Blossom Seeley.

GOOD ENOUGH PROGRAMMER: Here we have George Bancroft—back again after a too-long absence—in a story that just misses being a great one. It has action, comedy and everything to make it click big, but the audience is left to figure things out too much for itself.

Bancroft is a bail bond expert, a "front" for the underworld. Your peep into the inside of this racket will leave you with the feeling that you've "been places." He has always been in love with a gambling Queen, Judith Anderson, but along comes a society gal, Frances Dee, and through her love for excitement and her penchant for stealing and lying, she puts Mr. Bancroft's heart behind the eight ball. In fact, he almost loses his head, heart and body behind the eight ball!

The Queen's brother, however, sticks up a bank and George is asked to put up bail. He does and while Chick is "out" he takes George's new society gal away from him. There is where the fun starts. Bancroft quits the underworld, turns to the law and starts to clean up the town. The way the gang finally tries to put him on the spot is thrilling and when the Queen saves him, you're glad they've got back together again.

This little picture won't start any conflagration, but we have a hunch you'll enjoy it just the same. It's not particularly for the kids. See if you're not wondering where Frances Dee has been all your life, she's that surprising!

ALICE IN WONDERLAND
(PARAMOUNT)

All-Star Cast

MAYBE, MAYBE NOT: The press preview of this little "epic" was too long drawn out and a final cutting may help a lot. As it stands however, everyone works hard, gives their "all" and you feel like saying: "So what?"

It seems that we've had so much ballyhoo on this picture that we are expecting a lot. Maybe too much! Anyway, in the form we saw it, it isn't what we'd call good entertainment because, while many of the individual scenes are swell, the complete picture is rather gawky and trying on the nerves!

They say they "tested" 10,000 girls to get Charlotte Henry, that they were using every star on the lot (they did use Gary Cooper, Jack Oakie, Alison Skipworth, Charlie Ruggles, W. C. Fields, Polly Moran, etc.) but it didn't seem to make any difference! They all work hard, do their stuff well, but the results left us cold.

What we saw was a jumble of cartoons, parts of Alice In Wonderland, and a lot of other things mixed together. Nothing convincing at all. Those few incidents that were sure to go over big were too drawn out to result in anything but yawns! The parts about Humpty-Dumpty and the White Knight—the story of the Walrus and the Carpenter all suffered alike.

We understand that they have cut this considerably since we saw it and improved it tremendously. So we hope you'll have a better time than we did.

• RIGHT TO ROMANCE
(RKO)

Ann Harding, Robert Young, Nils Asther, Sari Maritza

GOOD ACTING: The theme of this picture doesn't measure up to the fine acting and the excellent dialogue, but we think you should see it.

Ann Harding, as the over-worked plastic surgeon who is "seemingly never out of her uniform," yearns for romance. While on a vacation, she allows youthful Robert Young to fall in love with her and then tries to halt the romance by returning to her job in New York. You guessed it! Bob, follows her by airplane and they marry. The marriage breaks up Bob's romance with Sari Maritza and Chemist Nils Asther, who has been silently in love with Ann for years, is flabbergasted. Bob, however, is too "hey-hey" for surgeon Harding and the marriage fails to take. Harding looks particularly lovely and does a fine job. Robert Young is good and Sari Maritza is gaining ground. The only false note in the casting is Nils Asther. He's all too romantic for a "silent lover type." If you can pass up a fairly skimpy story in favor of good acting, we advise this one but the kids won't like it.

SITTING PRETTY
(PARAMOUNT)

Jack Oakie, Ginger Rogers, Thelma Todd, Gregory Ratoff.

THIS movie of a couple of song writers in Hollywood has, as its chief merits, some swell songs and a really marvelous fan dance number staged against a background of mirrors. There is little else. The cast is hampered by the poor story. You may find this a bit dull.

• SMOKY (FOX)

Victor Jory, Irene Bentley, "Smoky."

THE star of this picture is a horse, "Smoky." We meet him first as a colt and follow him through his tragedies and his final wind up at the slaughter house. The story is well told and the picture beautifully handled. Even the most hard-hearted will shed a tear or two. Cast consists of Victor Jory, a cowboy, Irene Bentley and Frank Campeau. Children and horse lovers will enjoy this immensely.

THE FRONTIER MARSHALL
(FOX)

George O'Brien, Ruth Gillette, Irene Bentley

DIFFERENT from the usual horse opera in that there's more downright enjoyable and very competent acting and less cross country gallops. George O'Brien is the young "dude" who, by a flash of courage, becomes marshal of the little hamlet, "Tombstone." He starts a general "cleaning-up" and winds up by exposing the real villain, the town mayor, of all people. Ruth Gillette is the heart-throb, Irene Bentley the vamp, Berton Churchill the mayor, Alan Edwards the meanie and George E. Stone the owner of the town Emporium. O'Brien followers will want to see it.

MASTER OF MEN (COLUMBIA)

Jack Holt, Fay Wray, Walter Connolly

IN his latest picture, Jack Holt portrays an ambitious steel worker who gains success through hard-hearted tactics, even robbing his friend of his business. Fay Wray, his wife, and Walter Connolly finally make a human being out of him, after first causing his financial downfall. Outside of Walter Connolly, the players are stiff and unreal. Story is old stuff.

• DUCK SOUP (PARAMOUNT)

The Marx Brothers

ANOTHER goofy Marx Bros. comedy. This time the locale is a mythical kingdom, the Republic of

(Continued on page 115)

YOU WILL FIND OUR BRIEF REVIEWS ON THE NEXT PAGE

"Why doesn't my MANICURE last longer?"

Strong suds
in your dishpan
peels the polish,
spoils the cuticle...
makes nails brittle
Ivory Soap
costs so little to use...Why spoil your hands with strong suds?

Try Ivory Soap for dishes (and all soap-and-water tasks) for a week. See how much longer a manicure lasts, how smooth your hands look. Ivory is kind to busy hands because it is pure enough for a baby's skin . . . 99 $^{44}/_{100}$ % Pure.

IVORY SOAP
prevents "Housework Hands"

FOR ABSOLUTE SAFETY

in darkening your lashes use genuine, harmless

Maybelline

NON-SMARTING, tear-proof Maybelline is NOT a DYE, but a pure and highly refined mascara for instantly darkening and beautifying the eyelashes.

For over sixteen years millions of women have used Maybelline mascara with perfect safety and most gratifying results.

Pale scanty lashes are instantly transformed into the appearance of long, dark, luxuriant fringe with Maybelline mascara—by far the largest selling eyelash darkener.

Have lovely lashes safely and simply with Maybelline mascara. Black for Brunettes, Brown for Blondes. 75¢.

The perfect Mascara

SOLD BY REPUTABLE TOILET GOODS DEALERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

DIRECTORY of PICTURES

Movie-goer: "Is the feature any good?" Ticket-seller: "We suggest that you read MODERN SCREEN'S Directory—and find out for yourself!"

● RECOMMENDED ● ● SPECIALLY RECOMMENDED

ALICE IN WONDERLAND (Paramount)—Reviewed in department on page 48.

● AFTER TONIGHT (RKO)—A romantic war love story in which Connie Bennett is a Russian spy and Gilbert Roland an Austrian spy. Good—though not the usual Bennett style—young folks under 16 will be bored.

AGGIE APPLEBY, MAKER OF MEN (RKO)—Rowdy little comedy of a gal with a flare for roughneck sweeties. And if they aren't rough and ready she makes 'em that way. Wynne Gibson is Aggie, William Gargan, Charles Farrell and Zasu Pitts complete the cast. Good amusement—the kids will think it funny, too.

● ● ANN VICKERS (RKO)—Sinclair Lewis' novel adapted to the screen. Irene Dunne as the ambitious prison reformer and Walter Huston as Judge Barney Dolphin. Excellent—not for children under 16.

● ANOTHER LANGUAGE (M-G-M)—A tense little triangle of a determined young bride, her husband, and his interfering and dominating mother. Helen Hayes, Robert Montgomery and the late Louise Closser Hale. Quite good—young folks under 16 will not think so, however.

AS HUSBANDS GO (Fox)—Reviewed in department on page 48.

● BEAUTY FOR SALE (M-G-M)—The picturization of Faith Baldwin's novel which proves again that it pays to have ideals. Action centers around a young beauty operator, a successful business man, and his neurotic wife. Madge Evans, Otto Kruger and Alice Brady. Good—for those over 16.

● ● BERKELEY SQUARE (Fox)—From this imaginative picture you find out how you would feel if you suddenly were transferred to the 18th century. Just that happens to Leslie Howard. Heather Angel is the fragile little lady of that century with whom he falls desperately and tragically in love. Exceedingly delightful—youngsters under 16 will be bored.

● THE BEST OF ENEMIES (Fox)—Hilarious and boisterous beer comedy. Joe Cawthorne, Buddy Rogers, Marian Nixon and Greta Nissen. Amusement for everybody.

BITTERSWEET (United Artists)—A young and beautiful English gal elopes with her music teacher. Not so sweet and plenty dull.

BLOOD MONEY (20th Century-United Artists)—Reviewed in department on page 48.

THE BOWERY (20th Century)—A vulgar and rowdy, yet nicely authentic, picture of the tough districts of New York in the Nineties. Wallace Beery, George Raft, Pert Kelton, Fay Wray, Jackie Cooper and others make up an excellent cast. Good if you can overlook the rawness—not for children under 18.

● ● BROADWAY THROUGH A KEYHOLE. (20th Century)—Winchell is the author of this one. A narrative of a gangster who buys his chorine a night club. And then, when she falls for a crooner, the gangster magnanimously steps aside with congratulations instead of bullets. Good—but leave all the kids at home.

● BUREAU OF MISSING PERSONS (Warners)—About that interesting but little known part of the police department. Bette Davis, Pat O'Brien, Lewis Stone and Glenda Farrell. Good—but no interest for young folks under 16.

● ● CAPTURED (Warners)—A gripping war love story. Leslie Howard, Doug Fairbanks, Jr., Paul Lukas and Margaret Lindsay. Very good—not for children under 16.

● A CHANCE AT HEAVEN (RKO)—Vina Delmar's little story transferred to the screen. Boy and girl love that is almost wrecked by a wealthy city gal. Good—take the kids along.

● CHRISTOPHER BEAN (M-G-M)—Marie Dressler plays the role of a faithful servant in the Hackett family. When a dead Hackett's formerly despised paintings turn out to be valuable, the family is thrown into an uproar of greed and hatred. Lionel Barrymore is Dr. Hackett, Beulah Bondi his wife, Helen Mack and Russell Hardie carry the love interest. Very entertaining for everybody.

THE CIRCUS QUEEN MURDER (Columbia)—Murder mystery in the big tent. Good if you go for this kind of pix—too exciting for youngsters under 16.

● THE COHENS AND THE KELLYS IN TROUBLE (Universal)—Another of these comedy series with Charlie Murray and George Sidney. Good—kids will think it great.

COLLEGE COACH (Warners)—A football yarn all about an unethical coach, hired players and bribed profs. Lyle Talbot is a cocky player and Dick Powell a goody-good. Pat O'Brien is the coach and Ann Dvorak, his wife. Exciting—particularly for kids.

● COLLEGE HUMOR (Paramount)—A college campus entertainer. Plenty of pep, wise gags, laughs and crooning. Bing Crosby, Dick Arlen, Jack Oakie and Mary Carlisle. Routine—but good. Take the family.

CONVENTION CITY (First National)—Reviewed in department on page 48.

COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW (Universal) — Reviewed in department on page 48.

DANCING LADY (M-G-M)—Reviewed in department on page 48.

DARK HAZARD (Warners)—Reviewed in department on page 48.

● ● DESIGN FOR LIVING (Paramount)—Miriam Hopkins creates a new design of life for women in this picture. Learning to love more than one man, she discovers life far more happy and exciting when she lives with a couple of them rather than tying herself down to one. Gary Cooper and Fredric March are her lovers. Sophisticated entertainment.

● ● DINNER AT EIGHT (Fox)—A highly sophisticated drama about the guests invited to a fashionable dinner party. An all star cast including John and Lionel Barrymore, Billie Burke, Phillips

A "simply must see" picture for you all. "Little Women." With, of course, Frances Dee as Meg, Spring Byington as Marmee, Joan Bennett as Amy, Jean Parker as Beth and the superb Hepburn as Jo.

Holmes, Jean Harlow, Madge Evans, Lee Tracy, Wallace Beery, Marie Dressler, Eddie Lowe, Karen Morley, Franchot Tone and others. Excellent—not for kids under 16.

DON'T BET ON LOVE (Universal)—Horse racing and romance. Lew Ayres and Ginger Rogers. Fair—young folks will be bored.

● ● DOUBLE HARNESS (RKO)—A swell gal (Ann Harding) almost loses her man (William Powell) when he discovers she tricked him into marriage to make a successful business man out of him. But love plays a little trick on both of them. Excellent—not for children under 16.

DOCTOR BULL (Fox)—Story of a much criticized country doctor. His career is nearly wrecked by a lot of petty gossip when he defies conventions. Will Rogers is the doctor. Slow-moving but good—okay for tots.

DUCK SOUP (Paramount)—Reviewed in department on page 48.

● ELMER THE GREAT (Warners)—A baseball yarn with Joe E. Brown. Good—kids will go for it.

● EMERGENCY CALL (RKO)—Hospital story. Bill Gargan, Bill Boyd, Myrna Kennedy and Betty Furness. Good—dull for children under 16.

● ● ESKIMO (M-G-M)—A story of the simple and primitive life of the Eskimo and how it can be wrecked by the coming of the white man. The cast is all native as is also the dialogue. The subtitles are in English. Excellent shots of Arctic scenery. Very informative and educational.

EVER IN MY HEART (Warners)—A gripping little drama of an American girl and a German boy whose marriage is sacrificed to the World War. An inevitably tragic ending. Good if you go in for tragedy—send the kids to a Western, though.

● FEMALE (Warners)—Ruth Chatterton as a big factory executive who forgets her sex in the daytime but when the boys come around at night—George Brent plays opposite. Johnny Mack Brown, Ferdinand Gottschalk and Ruth Donnelly are also in the cast. Good—but not for young folks under 18.

THE FIDDLIN' BUCKAROO (Maynard-Universal)—Ken Maynard as a cowboy detective. Good Western—take the kids.

F. P. 1 (Fox-Gaumont)—An exciting picture all about an airport built in mid-ocean. Leslie Fenton, Conrad Veidt and Jill Esmond. Different. You might like it—tots will be bored.

● ● FOOTLIGHT PARADE (Warners) — Another grand musical. You will like this one better than ever. Ruby Keeler and Dick Powell, Joan Blondell and James Cagney and others in an excellent cast. See it by all means and take the youngsters along.

● FROM HELL TO HEAVEN (Paramount)—That's what happens to gamblers—sometimes. A good race track yarn. Carole Lombard, Jack Oakie, David Manners and Adrienne Ames. An entertainer for the whole family.

THE FRONTIER MARSHAL (Fox)—Reviewed in department on page 48.

GIRL WITHOUT A ROOM (Paramount)—Reviewed in department on page 48.

● ● GOLD DIGGERS OF 1933 (Warners)—And people are still talking about this musical. Keeler and Powell, Blondell and Warren William, Aline MacMahon and Guy Kibbee. If you've seen it once, see it again—and take the youngsters.

● GOODBYE AGAIN (Warners)—Warren William, Joan Blondell and Genevieve Tobin in that stage hit of the brilliant author, his blond secretary and his ex-passion. Sophisticated comedy—put the tots to bed that night.

● HAVANA WIDOWS (Warners)—All about two blond gold diggers (Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell) out to grab a Havana millionaire. When they grab Guy Kibbee, you get plenty of fun and complication. Frank McHugh and Lyle Talbot are also in the cast. Good comedy—take the family.

HEADLINE SHOOTER (RKO)—Yarn about the hectic and exciting life of a newsreel man. Bill Gargan, Frances Dee and Ralph Bellamy. Good of its kind—children will like it.

HELL AND HIGH WATER (Paramount)—Dick Arlen as a waterfront garbage collector who picks up a pretty dance hall chorine (Judith Allen) in his shore nets. She had tried to commit suicide. Little Robert Knettles plays the foundling who figures in their lives. Only Arlen's acting recommends this pix—nothing in it for the youngsters.

● HER BODYGUARD (Paramount)—A snappy little story about a pretty chorine golddigger whose sugar daddy employs a bodyguard for her. He expected to keep her all for himself that way. But the bodyguard is Eddie Lowe. Peppy entertainer for everybody.

● HER FIRST MATE (Universal)—Zasu Pitts and Slim Summerville teamed again. Darn good comedy for the whole family.

HEROES FOR SALE (Warners)—Story about a war veteran down on his luck. Only Dick Barthelmess' acting recommends this one. Very depressing.

● HOLD YOUR MAN (M-G-M)—It takes Jean Harlow to do it when Gable is the man. Good—but send the youngsters under 16 to a Western.

● THE HOUSE ON 56TH STREET (Warners)—Kay Francis, a chorus girl, is brought as a bride to this old family house of her husband. Through tragic circumstances, she is torn from her husband and baby and convicted of the murder of a former suitor. Twenty years later, under a very strange coincidence, she returns to this house and makes a supreme sacrifice for the child that has never known her. Very good—not for children under 16.

● I LOVED A WOMAN (Warners)—Drama of an idealist (Edward G. Robinson) who becomes a ruthless business baron under the influence of his opera singing mistress (Kay Francis). Genevieve Tobin plays his wife. Quite good—young folks under 16 will be bored.

● ● I LOVED YOU WEDNESDAY (Fox) Sophisticated love comedy. Elissa Landi, Victor Jory, Miriam Jordan and Warner Baxter. Excellent—send the tots to a Western.

● I'M NO ANGEL (Paramount)—Mae West is the whole show. This time she is a lion tamer and a burlesque queen. Men just come natural to her and she finally ankles to the altar with a millionaire—but it is for love and not his dollars only. Sizzling and rowdy and very good if you go for Mae—but be sure to put the youngsters to bed that night.

(Continued on page 107)

IVORY FLAKES
for Safe washing of fine things staged by WANAMAKER'S, New York, with the caution: "Wash lingerie with IVORY FLAKES"

If pretty lingerie is your weakness, you'll have a gorgeous time in Wanamaker's. See the tempting fashions above!

And Wanamaker's tells you how to keep them fresh and lovely. "Use Ivory Flakes and lukewarm water!" is very practical advice!

Buyers know the danger of using even slightly too-strong soap flakes. Colors go—silk is dulled. Only pure gentle soap will keep silk like new. That's why salespeople favor Ivory.

Ivory Flakes are curly flakes of pure Ivory Soap. They dissolve quicker than ordinary flat flakes. The danger of soap spots and fading is gone! The best comes last! Compare boxes, weights and prices — and you'll see that any other fine fabrics soap costs you too much. Ivory Flakes comes in bigger boxes that give you more soap!

Today's safest and biggest value in fine fabrics soap · 99 44/100 % pure

Good-bye COLD!

When You Take This Complete Cold Remedy

A COLD is too serious a thing to trust to half-way measures. Remember, a cold is an internal infection and must be got at from the inside.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is the thing to take because it is expressly a cold remedy and because it does the four things necessary.

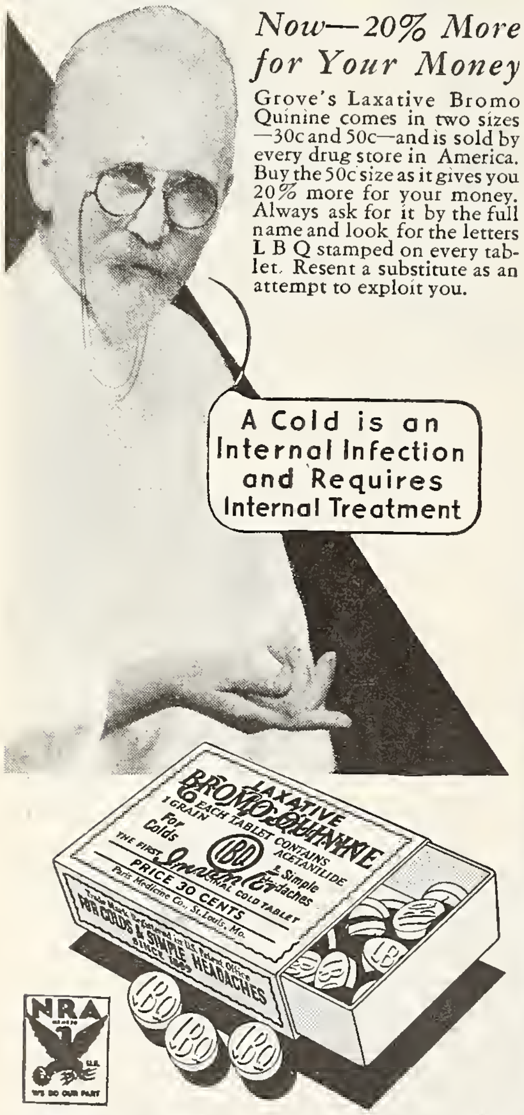
The 4 Things Necessary

First, Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine opens the bowels, gently but effectively. This is the first step in expelling a cold. Second, it combats the cold germs in the system and reduces the fever. Third, it relieves the headache and that grippy feeling. Fourth, it tones the entire system and helps fortify against further attack. This is the treatment a cold requires and anything less is taking chances.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is utterly harmless and perfectly safe to take. It is, and has been for years, the leading cold and grippe tablet of the world.

Now—20% More for Your Money

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine comes in two sizes—30c and 50c—and is sold by every drug store in America. Buy the 50c size as it gives you 20% more for your money. Always ask for it by the full name and look for the letters L B Q stamped on every tablet. Resent a substitute as an attempt to exploit you.



A Cold is an Internal Infection and Requires Internal Treatment
LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE
LBQ
PRICE 30 CENTS
FOR COLDS & SIMPLE HEADACHES
NRA
WE DO OUR PART

GROVE'S LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE

THE MODERN SCREEN DIRECTORY of PLAYERS

Columbia Studias, 1438 Gower Street, Hallywood, California.
Educational Studios, Santa Monica Baulevard, Hallywaad, California.
First Notianal Studias, Burbank, Califarnio.
Fax Studias, Movietane City, Westwood, Californio.
Samuel Galdwyn Studia, 7210 Sonto Manica Baulevard, Hollywood, California.
Metro-Galdwyn-Mayer Studias, Culver City, California.
Paramount-Publix Studias, Hallywood, California.
Radia Studias, 780 Gawer Street, Hallywaad, Califarnia.
Hal Roach Studias, Culver City, Califarnia.
Mock Sennett Studios, Studia City, Narth Hollywaod, Califarnia.
Warner Brothers Studio, Burbonk, Colifornia.
United Artists Studios, 1041 No. Formosa Avenue, Hollywoad, Califarnia.
Universal Studias, Universal City, Califarnino.

ALBRIGHT, HARDIE: Unmarried. Born in Charleroi, Pa., December 16. Write him at Warners. Free lance. Featured in "Song of Songs," "Three Cornered Moon," Paramount; "The House on 56th Street," Warners.

ALLAN, ELIZABETH: Married to William J. O'Bryan. Born in Skegness, Lincolnshire, England, April 9. M-G-M player. Featured in "No Marriage Ties," RKO; "Solitaire Man."

AMES, ADRIENNE: Married to Bruce Cabot. Born in Fort Worth, Texas, August 3. Paramount player. Featured in "A Bedtime Story;" "Disgraced;" "The Avenger," Monogram.

ANCEL, HEATHER: Unmarried. Born in Oxford, England, February 9. Fox player. Featured in "Pilgrimage," "Berkeley Square." "Charlie Chan's Greatest Case." Working in "Seven Lives Were Changed."

ARLEN, RICHARD: Married to Jobyna Ralston. Born in St. Paul, Minn., September 1. Paramount player. Featured in "Three Cornered Moon," "Golden Harvest," "Hell and High Water." Working in "Alice in Wonderland."

ARLISS, GEORGE: Married to Florence Montgomery. Born in London, England, April 10. Twentieth Century star. Starred in "The Working Man," "Voltaire," Warners.

ARMSTRONG, ROBERT: Divorced from Jeanne Kent. Born in Saginaw, Mich., November 21. RKO player. Featured in "Blind Adventure;" "Above the Clouds," Columbia. Working in "Joe Palooka," United Artists and "Search for Beauty," Paramount.

ASTHER, NILS: Divorced from Vivian Duncan. Born in Stockholm, Sweden, January 17. M-G-M player. Featured in "The Right to Romance," "If I were Free," RKO; "By Candlelight," Universal. Working in "Madame Spy," Universal.

ATES, ROSCOE: Married to Ethel Rogers. Born in Hattiesburg, Miss., January 20. RKO player. Featured in "Golden Harvest," Paramount. Working in "Alice in Wonderland," Paramount.

ATWILL, LIONEL: Married. Born in Croydon, England, March 1. Universal player. Featured in "Secret of the Blue Room;" "Solitaire Man," M-G-M. Working in "Nana," United Artists.

AYRES, LEW: Divorced from Lola Lane. Born in Minneapolis, Minn., December 28. Fox star. Starred in "Don't Bet on Love," Universal; "My Weakness." Working in "Cross Country Cruise." Universal.

BARRYMORE, JOHN: Married to Dolores Costello. Born in Philadelphia, Pa., February 15. M-G-M star. Starred in "Night Flight;" "Counsellor at Law," Universal. Working in "Long Lost Father," RKO.

BARRYMORE, LIONEL: Married to Irene Fenwick. Born in Philadelphia, Pa., April 18. M-G-M star. Starred in "Stranger's Return," "Christopher Bean;" "One Man's Journey," RKO; "The Vinegar Tree."

BARTHELMESS, RICHARD: Married to Jessica Sergeant. Born in New York City, May 9. First National star. Starred in "Heroes for Sale." Working in "Massacre." Next is "A Modern Hero."

BAXTER, WARNER: Married to Winifred Bryson. Born in Columbus, Ohio, March 29. Fox star. Starred in "I Loved You Wednesday," "Paddy, the Next Best Thing;" "Penthouse," M-G-M; "As Husbands Go."

BEERY, WALLACE: Married to Rita Gilman. Born in Kansas City, Mo., April 1. M-G-M star. Starred in "Tugboat Annie;" "The Bowery," 20th Century. Working in "Viva Villa."

BELLAMY, RALPH: Married to Catherine Willard. Born in Chicago, Ill., June 17. Fox player. Featured in "Blind Adventure," RKO; "Ever in My Heart," Warners; "House of Murder," Columbia; "Trigger," RKO.

BENNETT, CONSTANCE: Married to the Marquis de la Falaise. Born in New York City, October 22. Twentieth Century star. Starred in "Bed of Roses," "After Tonight," RKO. Working in "Moulin Rouge."

BENNETT, JOAN: Married to Gene Markey. Born in Palisades, N. J., February 27. Write her at RKO. Free lance. Featured in "From Arizona to Broadway," Fox; "Little Women," RKO.

BICKFORD, CHARLES: Married. Born in Cambridge, Mass., January 1. Write him at Paramount. Free lance. Featured in "This Day and Age," "White Woman," Paramount.

BLONDELL, JOAN: Married to George Barnes. Born in New York City, August 30. Warner Bros. player. Featured in "Footlight Parade," "Havana Widows," "Convention City." Next is "Hell's Bells."

BOLES, JOHN: Married to Marcellite Dobbs. Born in Breenville, Texas, October 27. Fox player. Featured in "My Lips Betray;" "Only Yesterday," Universal. Working in "Beloved," Universal.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. in the elegant costume of the London Film production of "Catharine the Great." Not the same picture, it is needless to say, as La Dietrich's "Catherine the Great."

BOW, CLARA: Married to Rex Bell. Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., July 29. Fox star. Starred in "Call Her Savage," "Hoopla."

BOYD, BILL: Married to Dorothy Sebastian. Born in Cambridge, Ohio, June 5. RKO player. Featured in "Emergency Call," "Flaming Gold."'

BRADY, ALICE: Divorced. Born in New York City, November 2. M-G-M player. Featured in "When Ladies Meet," "Broadway to Hollywood," "Stage Mother," "The Vinegar Tree."

BRENDEL, EL: Married. Born in Philadelphia, Pa., March 25. Fox player. Featured in "My Lips Betray," "The Last Trail," "Olsen's Big Moment."

BRENT, GEORGE: Married to Ruth Chatterton. Born in Dublin, Ireland, March 15. First National player. Featured in "Lilly Turner," "Female," "From Headquarters;" "Trigger," RKO.

BRIAN, MARY: Unmarried. Born in Corsicana, Texas, February 17. Write her at Columbia. Free lance. Featured in "Moonlight and Pretzels," Universal; "Fog," Columbia. Working in "The Criminal Within," Columbia.

BROOK, CLIVE: Married to Faith Evelyn. Born in London, England, June 1. RKO player. Featured in "Midnight Club," Paramount; "If I Were Free." Working in "Gallant Lady," 20th Century.

BROWN, JOE E.: Married to Kathryn McGraw. Born in Holgate, Ohio, July 28. First National star. Starred in "Elmer the Great," "Son of a Sailor."

BROWN, TOM: Unmarried. Born in New York City, January 6. RKO player. Featured in "Three Cornered Moon," Paramount. Working in "Wild Birds."

BUTTERWORTH, CHARLES: Married to Ethel Sutherland. Born in South Bend, Ind., July 26. M-G-M player. Featured in "Penthouse," "Hollywood Party;" "My Weakness," Fox. Working in "The Cat and the Fiddle."

CABOT, BRUCE: Married to Adrienne Ames. Born in Carlsbad, New Mexico, April 20. RKO player. Featured in "Aggie Appleby, Maker of Men," "Ann Vickers." Working in "The Criminal Within," Columbia.

CAGNEY, JAMES: Married to Frances Vernon. Born in New York City, July 17. Warner Bros. star. Starred in "The Mayor of Hell," "Footlight Parade," "Lady Killer." Next is "Heir Chaser."

CANTOR, EDDIE: Married to Ida Tobias. Born in New York City, January 31. United Artists star. Starred in "The Kid from Spain," "Roman Scandals."

CARRILLO, LEO: Married. Born in Los Angeles, Calif., August 6. Write him at Paramount. Free lance. Featured in "Moonlight and Pretzels," Universal; "Four Frightened People," Paramount.

CARROLL, NANCY: Married to Francis Bolton Mallory. Born in New York City, November 19. Paramount star. Starred in "Kiss Before the Mirror," Universal; "I Love That Man."

CAVANAGH, PAUL: Unmarried. Born in Chiselhurst, Kent, England, December 8. Write him at M-G-M. Free lance. Featured in "The Kennell Murder Case," Warners. Working in "Tarzan and His Mate," M-G-M.

CHAPLIN, CHARLES: Divorced from Lita Grey. Born in London, England, April 26. Write him at Charles Chaplin Studio, Hollywood. Producer-star. Starred in "City Lights."

CHATTERTON, RUTH: Married to George Brent. Born in New York City, December 24. Warner Bros. star. Starred in "'Frisco Jenny," "Lilly Turner," "Female."

CHEVALIER, MAURICE: Divorced from Yvonne Vallee. Born in Paris, France, September 22. M-G-M star. Starred in "A Bedtime Story," "The Way to Love," Paramount. Next is "The Merry Widow."

CLARKE, MAE: Divorced from Lew Brice. Born in Philadelphia, Pa., August 16. M-G-M player. Featured in "Turn Back the Clock," "Penthouse;" "Lady Killer," Warners. Working in "Nana," United Artists.

CODY, LEW: Widower of Mabel Normand. Born in Waterville, Maine, February 22. Write him at Paramount. Free lance. Featured in "I Love That Man." Working in "Sitting Pretty," Paramount.

COLBERT, CLAUDETTE: Married to Norman Foster. Born in Paris, France, September 13. Paramount Star. Starred in "Three Cornered Moon," "Torch Singer," "Four Frightened People." Working in "Night Bus."

COLLINS, CORA SUE: Child actress. Born in Beckley, W. Va., April 19. Write her at M-G-M. Free lance. Featured in "Jennie Gerhardt," "Torch Singer," Paramount; "Queen Christina," M-G-M.

COLMAN, RONALD: Divorced. Born in Surrey, England, February 9. United Artists star. Starred in "Cynara," "The Masquerader."

COOK, DONALD: Divorced. Born in Portland, Ore., September 26. Columbia player. Featured in "Brief Moment," "Fog," "Fury of the Jungle;" "The World Changes," Warners.

COOPER, GARY: Unmarried. Born in Helena, Mont., May 7. Paramount star. Starred in "One Sunday Afternoon," "Design for Living." Working in "Alice in Wonderland." Next is "The Man Who Broke His Heart."

COOPER, JACKIE: Boy actor. Born in Los Angeles, Calif., September 15. M-G-M player. Featured in "Broadway to Hollywood;" "The Bowery," 20th Century; "Lone Cowboy," Paramount.

CORTEZ, RICARDO: Widower of Alma Rubens. Born in New York City, July 7. Paramount star. Starred in "The House on 56th Street," "The Shakedown," Warner Bros. Working in "Mandalay," Warner Bros. Next is "Wonder Bar."

CRABBE, BUSTER: Married to Virginia Held. Born in Oakland, Calif., February 7. Paramount player. Featured in "To the Last Man," "The Thundering Herd." Working in "Search for Beauty."

CRAWFORD, JOAN: Divorced from Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Born in San Antonio, Texas, March 23. M-G-M star. Starred in "Today We Live," "Hollywood Party," "Dancing Lady."

CROMWELL, RICHARD: Unmarried. Born in Long Beach, Calif., January 8. Columbia player. Featured in "This Day and Age," Paramount; "Above the Clouds;" "Hoopla," Fox. Next is "House of Connelly," Fox.

CROSBY, BING: Married to Dixie Lee. Born in Tacoma, Wash., May 2. Paramount player. Featured in "College Humor," "Too Much Harmony." Working in "Going Hollywood." Next is "We're Not Dressing."

(Continued on page 120)

● "Got my foot on the first rung of the ladder, all right! Grandpa says it's kind of a hard climb. But not for athletic fellers like me! I'll get there!"

● "Oooh—going up! 'Course this stunt might bother some kids—but it's a cinch for me! No matter how hard I exercise, I never get chafed and uncomfortable, 'cause I use plenty of the best kind of baby powder—Johnson's!"

● "Wheee—right next to the man-in-the-moon! And I wasn't hardly half trying! My trainer certainly keeps me in championship condition with those Johnson Baby Powder rubs. And that reminds me—I've got a tip for all you Mothers . . ."

"Try different baby powders between your thumb and finger, just like this. Some of 'em feel gritty—but Johnson's is soft as silk! And our doctor told my mother, 'There's no zinc-stearate in Johnson's—and no orris-root.'"

• • •

Send 10c in coin for samples of Johnson's Baby Powder, Baby Soap and Baby Cream. Dept. 131, Johnson & Johnson, New Brunswick, New Jersey.

Johnson & Johnson NEW BRUNSWICK NEW JERSEY

NRA MEMBER U.S. WE DO OUR PART

JOHNSON'S Baby POWDER

Ashamed of your looks?
Sallow Skin?
Blemishes? Headaches?

STOP CONSTIPATION
THIS SAFE, SIMPLE, PLEASANT WAY

DULL skin, pimples and blotches, headaches, that "always tired" feeling—how often these are caused by constipation!

Doctors now know that in countless cases the real cause of constipation is insufficient vitamin B. If your constipation has become a habit, and fails to respond to ordinary treatment, a shortage of vitamin B is probably the true cause of your trouble. Supply enough of this factor and elimination becomes easy, regular and complete!

Yeast Foam Tablets furnish vitamin B in great abundance. These tablets are pure, pasteurized yeast—the richest known food source of the vitamins B and G. These elements stimulate the entire digestive system. They give tone to weakened intestinal nerves and muscles. Thus they promote regular elimination naturally, healthfully. Energy revives. Headaches go. The skin clears up. You really live!

All druggists sell Yeast Foam Tablets. The 10-day bottle costs only 50c. Get one today and check your constipation this simple, drugless way!

YEAST FOAM TABLETS

FREE: MAIL THIS COUPON TODAY
NORTHWESTERN YEAST CO. MM 2
1750 North Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill.
Please send free sample and descriptive circular.

Name________________________________

Address______________________________

City______________________State_________

What Ginger Owes Her Mother

(Continued from page 58)

fascinated the daughter of the newly appointed dramatic critic by doing a dance called the Charleston.

Next morning Mrs. Rogers discovered her daughter trying the different steps which she had seen.

Months passed, and the girl became more interested in the theatre than school.

The old man who had helped Mrs. Rogers recover her child had an unused barn on his small ranch at the edge of Dallas. Ginger had told him of her ambition. He constructed a stage in the barn. There, for months Ginger practiced many difficult dance steps. The old man had a crony who had danced fantastic steps as a clown with the Barnum and Bailey's "Greatest Circus on Earth." For ten years he had been unable to travel with the big tent show, and so, for months he eased the loneliness of wanderlust by teaching the ambitious girl the many dancing steps he had learned and seen in his wandering life.

When too tired to dance more, the girl would sit between the two old men in the shade of a large cottonwood tree by the side of the barn, while the ancient clown told of things he had seen in Europe, South Africa and other far places.

"You'll be a great dancer, little un." he used to say, "then you kin see all them places while I'll be pushin' the clouds."

The old clown's name was Barney Casey. As Ginger and her mother say, it deserves a place in the story.

When Ginger was thirteen, the manager of a Dallas theatre announced a Charleston contest.

Barney Casey, too crippled with rheumatism to walk, went to Mrs. Rogers' home one evening, driven there by his old friend.

"We want your permission," said he, "to enter Ginger in the contest."

"Why? Why?" The surprised mother was at a loss for words.

"There's no why about it, Mrs. Rogers," said the ancient clown. "She kin shake a mean pair of feet."

Mrs. Rogers gave her consent.

Three hundred and more had entered the contest.

Barney Casey's protégé came unheralded. "Your mother's not to be here," said Mr. Casey. "We want her under no strain of cryin' if you lose."

FROM miles and miles around the hundreds of contestants gathered. The city of Fort Worth sent fifty.

The Dallas contestants entered last, as a courtesy to those from other cities. Barney Casey had asked that Ginger come on near the last.

One by one the hundreds shook their feet. The judges made notes.

A certain woman dramatic editor, disobeying all orders given by a circus clown, sneaked in to see the contest from an upper box.

At last, when over two hundred and seventy-five had danced, a smiling young girl led the Dallas contingent. She bowed, and the contestants from Dallas began.

When Ginger's name was announced, she shook hands with her ancient teacher, and went, graceful as a fawn, to the centre of the stage.

A stillness, as of death came in the audience. Then her feet began to pound, rapid as machine gun fire.

She finished amid wild commotion. Old Barney Casey was in tears. His crony, hiding in the wings of the stage, could not believe that the child who had danced so magnificently before him was the same that he had dared so much to recover.

Another wave of applause followed. Ginger was dancing again. Barney Casey, his rheumatism forgotten, was living over again his days of circus glory. His feet tingled as they tapped the floor.

Her dance over, Ginger rushed to his arms, where she remained, while another silence came over the theatre.

The winners were about to be announced. Unable to endure the silence while the judges decided, the audience talked in low murmurs.

Finally, after what seemed an eternity, the judges, their deliberations over, walked to the center of the stage. The chief judge held his hand up. Old Barney Casey pinched Ginger's arm nervously.

Feet stopped scraping, voices were still as the judge said—

"We nominate for the winner of this contest," he stopped, while Barney Casey found himself unable to breathe, and Ginger swallowed fast and often—as her name boomed—"Virginia Rogers."

Not for this moment would old Barney Casey have traded all his circus memories.

Before long, a woman dramatic editor rushed upon the stage.

Barney Casey frowned at Ginger, saying, "You knew she was here all the time."

And Ginger answered, "So did you, Barney."

And—well, the rest is history.

In a few years Ginger was famous as the leading dancer of her type in New York, appearing in "Girl Crazy" at $1000 a week for forty-five weeks.

Film offers followed and she came to Hollywood, where, after appearing in a half dozen films, a check-up of her screen popularity was made by RKO, and as a result she was given a long-term contract.

Barney Casey has long since left Texas. He watches the sun sink in the blue Pacific from a California bungalow. His old crony is with him.

When a Ginger Rogers film is previewed, those two old men attend together.

Ginger and her mother remember!

"It's Okay!" says Norman

(Continued from page 31)

"I live just as I did before I made any money. A little differently, perhaps. Once in New York I very nearly starved to death. I'm not starving now. But I only keep one car and one servant. That's plenty for anybody. What's the use of all the show?

"I've got to get away from Hollywood every now and then. I like Honolulu. Go around dressed any way you please. Lie on the beach. Talk to a lot of army men about war. That's grand. I can't stand actors.

"Once, in New York, Katharine Hepburn was an understudy in a play I was in. She used to stand in the wings and watch us mugs on the stage—with those big eyes. You know, just as she did in 'Morning Glory.' Once I asked her why she didn't go down to her dressing-room and rest, why she stood there all the time and watched us so eagerly.

I'M trying to learn to act,' she said. I laughed at her. 'Then don't watch us, kid, if you want to learn,' I told her. 'You can't learn anything from an actor.'

"I'm always getting into fights on my lot. I hate acting. Want to direct. Gee, I'd love to direct. I think Claudette's good on the screen, but I wouldn't want to direct her. We'd fight like hell the minute she pulled some actress trick."

If you will stop to consider for a moment you will realize that "some actress trick" means "some feminine trick" since feminine women are all actresses at heart. It is just that—all the little feminine tricks—that Norman Foster hates. And it is just that—all of the little feminine tricks—that Claudette wants to use.

In Miss Fletcher's story she tells you that Claudette says, "Norman has often assured me that his attitude towards me would be very different if I'd permit it to be, if I wouldn't act so darn independent all the time." Claudette is right. His attitude would be different—he would probably ignore her completely, for if I have quoted him accurately, surely you see that here is a man who has no patience with a beguiling woman—a man's man, in other words—who will tolerate women as companions only if they behave like men.

It seems to me, therefore, that Claudette's and Norman's problem is not so much a question of the modern and the old-fashioned woman as a matter of individual tastes and temperaments. Claudette has shown herself as feminine as she says she wants to be by moulding herself to suit Norman, by being what he wants her to be. When you know Norman Foster you realize that if a woman were in love with him she would have to accept life and the marriage relationship upon his terms.

He's that kind of guy. He treads heavily upon life. He is impatient of

MILLIONS END UGLY SKIN FAULTS

with this famous "miracle cream"

•

LARGE PORES
BLACKHEADS
PIMPLES
OILY SKIN
RED ROUGH HANDS

•

YOU can be smartly dressed—you can have the most appealing personality—but if your complexion is blemished, coarse-textured, oily—or if your hands are red, rough and chapped, then much of your charm is lost!

That's why over one million of the smartest women in America today use Noxzema Cream regularly—on their faces and on their hands. For Noxzema is a "skin medicine" in cream form—designed especially to correct skin troubles and to restore the skin to normal, healthy beauty.

When you suffer from pimples, oiliness, large pores or blemishes, the trouble usually can be traced to poisoned pores. Ordinary creams cannot help this condition. A medicated cream is needed to purge the pores of clogging, festering impurities—to soothe tender, irritated skin—to refine and soften rough skin. That's where Noxzema and Noxzema alone helps.

Noxzema Skin Cream was originally prescribed by doctors as a greaseless, stainless remedy for skin irritations like sunburn, chapping, itching, etc. Nurses discovered how wonderful it was as a corrective beauty cream and for badly chapped hands. Today 10,000,000 jars of Noxzema are used!

HOW TO USE: Apply Noxzema every night before retiring after all make-up has been removed. Wash off in the morning with warm water—then apply cold water or ice. Apply a little more Noxzema when you powder as a protective powder base. For hands—see directions at left. If hands are very chapped apply Noxzema several times, as much as skin will absorb. With this scientific treatment every day—in 10 days you'll note a big improvement—and soon you'll glory in a skin faultlessly clear and lovely—hands delicately smooth and white.

WONDERFUL FOR CHAPPED HANDS, TOO

Make this convincing overnight test. Apply Noxzema on one hand tonight. In the morning note how soothed it feels—how much softer, smoother, whiter that hand is! Noxzema improves hands overnight

GREASELESS
NOXZEMA
Skin Cream

After you've tried Noxzema, get the new, big money-saving 50c jar

Special trial offer

Get an inexpensive jar of Noxzema today at any drug or department store. If your dealer can't supply you, send 10c to the Noxzema Chemical Co., Dept. 52 Baltimore, Md.—and you will receive a very generous trial jar of Noxzema—enough to make a real improvement in your skin.

NRA
WE DO OUR PART

NO MORE DATES WITH HER —SHE DOES NOTHING BUT POWDER HER NOSE ALL EVENING

Pretty As a Picture...

But This Fault Made Her Seem COMMON!

THE first man who ever really attracted her—and she knew she had lost him. She never dreamed of blaming her "eternal powder puff." She never realized it made him think her cheap, and gave him the impression she had a coarse, greasy skin that was —well, not well cared for!

Wonderful New Makeup Secret

But how lucky she was! She finally met him again—after she tried a wonderful new triple-fine powder a friend told her about. It was called Golden Peacock Tonic Face Powder. And it had two other amazing features. Instead of mixing with skin oils, it repelled moisture. It refused to clog pores; instead, by a certain secret ingredient, it actually worked to tone and refine the skin. It mantled the tiny blemishes, caused by ordinary, coarser make-up, as if they had never existed. And on their second date she hardly had to reach for her powder puff all evening. Her skin glowed with a fresh, natural peach-bloom softness that never betrayed a hint of shine. It entranced him!

Try this powder now! Get a box at any drug store—only 50c; or the purse-size package at any 10-cent store. See now how evenly it looks on your skin. If your dealer cannot supply you, just write, and get a generous sample—free. Specify your shade—whether White, Flesh, Light Brunette or Dark Brunette. Address Golden Peacock, Inc., Dept. B-202, Paris, Tenn.

Golden Peacock
Face Powder

GOLDEN PEACOCK

whatever he doesn't like. He's not sure that his way is always right but it's his way and if you want to string along with him, you'll play the game by his rules. If you don't like those rules you don't need to play. But he won't change his ideas.

AND although Claudette may take as much of the blame—if one calls it blame—as she likes for their modern marriage; although they both talk until they're as blue in the face as Walt Disney's wolf, everyone who knows them realizes that it was Norman's idea that they live as they do and that they continue to live that way.

It was because Norman couldn't stand to have a woman fussing around all the time, because Norman—whose constant companion is the wanderlust—wanted to pick up and go wherever he chose, whenever he chose, without making any explanations, that these two decided to live in separate establishments. Had Claudette not agreed, had she not decided to play the game by his rules, I'm sure there would have been a divorce. But Claudette loved Norman and would accept his terms to keep his love.

Now that she wants the peace of a staple fireside, the romance of a great and a tender love, gestures of chivalry made toward her—she thinks that she has made a mistake. But there was no other way, if she wanted to keep Norman.

For the only role a woman can play in his life (except a very fleeting one) is the role of pal, companion, good scout. He hates anything that smacks of feminine girlishness. He admires Claudette for this independence she has worn all these years for him. He thinks it is real.

"Claudette is a swell scout, a great pal. I like her." It is what he might say of his best man friend. It's a swell compliment, I think.

Norman has been kicked around too much; the realities of life have depressed him too long. He couldn't "go soft" now. For he can never forget those eight months in New York that he spent looking for a newspaper job—eight months of walking the street, wearing shoes the soles of which grew thinner by the day until he had to cover the holes with cardboard—eight months during which he considered himself lucky if he got a meal a day—eight months of dodging and stalling the landlady and sometimes sleeping in the park.

He wanted to become a journalist and his temperament is much more that of a newspaperman than an actor's. But he discovered an opportunity to go on the stage and—much as he hated it—it was easy and profitable and he took it.

Norman Foster is a man who bursts with virility. He is pleasant and thoroughly charming, but he likes man's talk and man's independence. If a woman is to string along with him, she must play the game his way or not play at all.

There is no way for Claudette to solve her problem. She may rave against modernity as much as she likes. It won't do her any good as long as she is married to a man like Foster—and as long as she stays in love with him—which is likely to be forever.

The Secret of These Charmed Gifts

(Continued from page 69)

Less than three months later Dorothy was transported from the typewriter to stardom.

You know her startling story. Selected for the lead in "The Age of Consent" by the merest chance. Hollywood's newest Cinderella. People said it was a fluke of fate. But was it?

And there was Merian C. Cooper, hailed today as one of the younger geniuses of filmdom. Just over a year ago he was known chiefly for his adventure pictures. I remember hearing him and Wallace concocting part of the "King Kong" tale at luncheon. It was to be a radical departure from ordinary films. Would it succeed? Radio was spending quantities of money on it; it was Cooper's big opportunity. You know the answer to that one . . . what a tremendous box office sensation the picture was, and how Cooper became the head of all Radio productions. It seems as if the movie world became Cooper-conscious over night. Everyone was talking of his sudden rise. . . . And among his cherished possessions you'll find a certain ebony stick.

And Richard Dix. He received one of the holders, too. And while Dix has been through a rather bad time with his marriage, in one very grave moment the genial spirit of Wallace seemed to be watching over him—to turn what might have been a tragedy into a lucky escape.

Dix told me about it.

"Driving up to Santa Barbara one week-end in that antique roadster of mine, I had a mishap that could have been bad. Still had the old set of tires on, you see, and I was doing around sixty-five when a rear tire blew out. The bus careened like a crazy thing and for an instant I thought she was going to tip over. By a miracle she righted herself just on the edge of a ditch."

"Did you," I asked irrelevantly, "ever know Edgar Wallace?"

"Why, yes," Rich looked surprised. "Great fellow, wasn't he? I've got a cigarette holder he gave me right here in my pocket."

WHEN celebrities come to California the first person to greet them is usually a publicity man. One of the most efficient of the "public relation" chaps was Ben Marksen. Not at all the mile-a-minute talker, but quiet and unassuming. We all like Ben. So did Wallace from the time he stepped off the train. Five days before he died he presented Ben with a complete set of his books, autographed—and one of the famous black sticks.

Now here's the odd twist to that. About two years ago Ben wrote a play. A clever play. I read it sitting in his office one morning and wondered why nothing had been done about it. The day after Wallace's funeral I was again in his office.

"What about your play, Ben?"

"The boss has it." The "boss" at that time was David Selznick. When I went back later in the week Ben had moved.

"Sure," grinned the information clerk, "he's in the scenario department now." So he was—at about five times his former salary. What's more, he was adapting his own play, "Is My Face Red?" for the screen. Ben has been hitting the high spots on the road to success ever since.

It goes on unbelievably, this tale of fortune attending possessors of those ebony cigarette holders.

Indeed the good luck charm has yet to fail its owner. In each instance, latent luck has aroused and asserted itself for the possessor of the gift.

The first day Wallace was on the Radio lot, he met Joel McCrea. He had not yet been assigned a place to work and Joel proffered his dressing room without knowing exactly who Wallace was. When he returned at the end of two hours, the writer had a story ready for Constance Bennett. That was the way he worked. Joel and he became boon companions, went everywhere together. And he gave young McCrea not only a black stick but a good many of his fascinatingly striped London ties.

What happened? Three things. Three of the most important things that could have happened to Joel. First, he was signed to a starring contract. And secondly, he achieved the ranch that has been his dream for five years. And third, he fell in love with and married one of Hollywood's loveliest girls, Frances Dee.

You're probably familiar with his passion for outdoor life. He has had this special 160 acres of land north of Malibu Beach spotted since he was a lost contract player. (Lost, because Joel was under contract to a major studio for a year without playing a single role.) In the beginning he didn't have the money for it. And after he could afford it, the property was tied up in litigation. It looked for a long while as if the estate never would be settled, or if it was, that the ranch would go to an heir who didn't want to sell. Joel had about relinquished all hope when his bid was taken up—and he was able to buy it at a bargain such as he never dreamed in his wildest fancies.

Strange? Yes, it's more than that. There's something uncanny about the way these charmed gifts work. As if, through them, Edgar Wallace was bestowing a farewell benediction on his friends to aid and help them.

"Keep colds and grippe outside by proper home disinfection"

© Lehn & Fink, Inc., 1934

Dr. Margaret B. C. Manus, leading physician of Amsterdam, on staff of Municipal Hospital, Boerhave Hospital, and State Hygienic Service.

"Ask your doctor whether there is a quick, magic cure for common colds, grippe and influenza, he'll answer promptly, 'No.' Those three highly infectious ills still baffle medical science . . . kill thousands . . . cost millions.

"Yet it is amazing how people still neglect one simple measure that fights off pernicious germs . . . that helps check dangerous epidemics . . . that makes the home a health resort instead of a hospital.

"In Holland, as in America, through four decades, leading physicians, hospitals and health authorities have waged war on disease germs by the "Lysol" method of personal and home disinfection. "Lysol" is the modern mother's weapon for protecting her home and family against disease and infection."

(Signed) DR. MARGARET B. C. MANUS

Lysol Disinfectant

Keep YOUR house clean with "Lysol." Wash clothes, especially bedding and handkerchiefs, with "Lysol." Use "Lysol" to wash the bathroom, tubs and tiling. After any illness, disinfect the bedroom, floors, woodwork and furniture, by washing with "Lysol." Use "Lysol" to disinfect basins and other sickroom furnishings.

"Lysol" for feminine hygiene

Physicians of leading nations have endorsed and recommended "Lysol" as a safe and effective method for feminine hygiene. "Lysol" kills germs anywhere . . . even in the presence of organic matter. Yet it is safe and gentle to the most sensitive tissue.

Send for the booklet—"Marriage Hygiene," with articles by leading women gynecologists.

"Lysol" kills germs. It's safe. It's an effective germicide at ALL times. For forty years it has had the full acceptance of the most prominent physicians, of the entire medical profession throughout the world. It's the standard antiseptic in modern hospitals everywhere. No other antiseptic enjoys such absolute trust, or is so generally recommended for home use.

GUIDANCE FOR WIVES AND MOTHERS

LEHN & FINK, Inc., Bloomfield, N. J., Dept. L-9
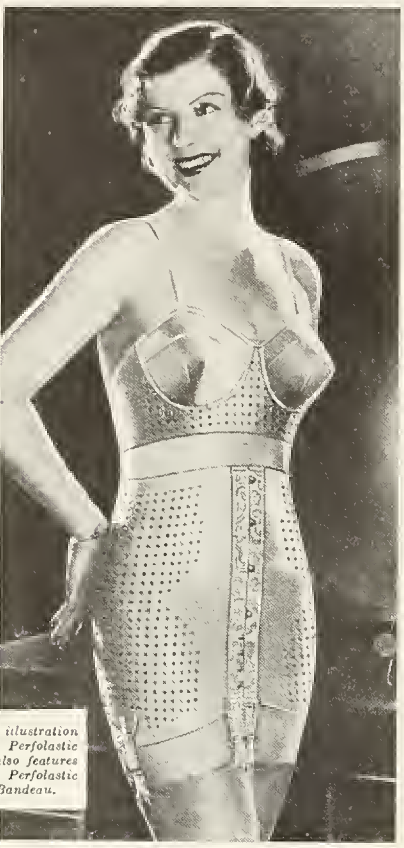
Sole Distributors of "Lysol" disinfectant
Please send me free the "Lysol" Health Library including—"Keeping a Healthy Home," "Marriage Hygiene," "Preparation for Motherhood."

*Name*____________________

*Street*____________________

*City*__________ *State*__________

REDUCE
WAIST AND HIPS
3 INCHES IN 10 DAYS OR
. . . it won't cost you one cent!



● This illustration of the Perfolastic Girdle also features the new Perfolastic Uplift Bandeau.

TEST . . . the PERFOLASTIC GIRDLE
. . . at our expense!

"I REDUCED MY HIPS 9 INCHES," writes Miss Jean Healy. . . . "I reduced from 43 inches to 34½ inches" . . . writes Miss Brian.

● So many of our customers are delighted with the wonderful results obtained with this Perforated Rubber Reducing Girdle that we want you to try it for 10 days at our expense!

Massage-Like Action Reduces Quickly!
● The Girdle may be worn next to the body with perfect safety for it is ventilated to allow the skin to breathe. It works constantly while you walk, work, or sit . . . its massage-like action gently but persistently eliminating fat with every move you make.

Don't Wait Any Longer . . . Act Today
● You can prove to yourself quickly and definitely in 10 days whether or not this very efficient girdle will reduce your waist and hips THREE INCHES! You do not need to risk one penny . . . try it for 10 days . . . at no cost!

THE COUPON BRINGS YOU FREE BOOKLET AND SAMPLE OF THE VENTILATED PERFOLASTIC RUBBER

SEND FOR TEN DAY FREE TRIAL OFFER!

PERFOLASTIC, Inc.
Dept. 532, 41 EAST 42nd ST., New York, N. Y.

Please send me FREE BOOKLET describing and illustrating the new Perfolastic Reducing Girdle, also sample of perforated Rubber and particulars of your 10-DAY FREE TRIAL OFFER.

Name ______
Address ______
City ______ State ______

Use Coupon or Send Name and Address on Penny Post Card

You Learn to Know Them—

(Continued from page 46)

performance had ever thrown her into such a state of nerves. When she made her first appearance, one could tell how tense she was. It was not until she had worn three dresses that she began to be at all calm. I never thought I should ever see Lilyan Tashman attacked by timidity.

One of the people who completely upsets my shop every time she enters it is Polly Moran. Well as I know her, I've never made any clothes for her. She always wants things in a great hurry and since we always ask at least ten days for the making of a dress, we have never been able to take her orders. But Polly is one of the most amusing women I know. Her humor at times smacks of the Barbary Coast, but it is humor.

ONE night at a party I put on an impromptu fashion show. Some of my guests, entering into the fun, were playing mannequin. I lined them up in an adjoining room and announced them by various names other than their own. Norma and Constance Talmadge put all the mannequins in Paris to shame with their undulations and exaggerated postures. May Sunday, Peggy Fears and Vivienne Segal were others who posed. I saved Polly Moran for the last.

It's just as well that I don't remember how I announced her, and probably better that I've forgotten what she said in answer, but I do know that in the midst of her posing she broke into a can-can and won the vote as the best mannequin of the evening.

It is a far cry from Polly Moran to Irene Dunne—but here's Miss Dunne's name and I must tell you about her. She often comes to us for clothes. One day she was on location in Pasadena and the only chance we had of fitting a dress which she needed for scenes the following day was on the location between shots.

A small temporary dressing room had been erected for her under a tree, but since it was too small for her to be fitted in, one of the property men stood a high mirror against another tree and we worked right out in the open. It occurred to Irene Dunne that this was a novelty worth capturing for a publicity picture. It is quite unusual for a star to think up her own press agent "gags," but she asked one of the still camera men to set up his camera and take her photograph in the act of having metal pajamas fitted under a spreading oak tree. And you can see the picture for yourself on page 48.

Miss Dunne stood before the mirror, the fitter knelt at her feet and I was told to perch in a fork of the tree, which brought my knees on a level with Miss Dunne's shoulders.

The camera man had some difficulty with his camera and I imagined that I felt something crawling across my lap. I stopped "posing" for a moment, looked down and there—like all Hannibal's soldiers crossing the Alps—I discovered six million black ants crawling across my trousers. I jumped down immediately, for by this time they were inside my trousers, and began to do a wild dance that no camera could record. Miss Dunne stood there and howled with laughter. "You're the first man I've ever seen literally living up to an old Hollywood expression," she said—which, it seems to me, shows that she has much more humor than she's given credit for having. And you can also see that being a Hollywood designer does not mean that one does nothing but design clothes.

One of the most curious jobs I've ever had was the making of a court dress—and I don't mean a white satin with a train and ostrich plumes in which to take a formal bow at Buckingham Palace. Sue Carol came in the shop one afternoon and asked to see the collection.

"I am having trouble with a contract which was made a long time ago," she explained, "and I have to go to court to get a release. I want something nice and refined which a lady would wear at court when she wants the judge to take her part." Nothing ever daunts or amazes us. We made her a simple olive-green crepe dress, without any adornment, and a small hat. Miss Carol appeared in court a few days later and, after a short interval, was released from the contract she felt was unfair. Apparently the dress—and Miss Carol—had done their stuff.

BARBARA STANWYCK'S name reminds me of a most disastrous—from a financial standpoint—experience. One afternoon she came for a fitting accompanied by her husband, Frank Fay, Ricardo Cortez, a chap named Eddie Kane (one of the wits of Hollywood) and another lad whose name I don't remember.

While she was being fitted, the four men sat in the large salon watching the mannequins displaying clothes. They were all in swell humor and made the most riotous wisecracks at the appearance of each dress. They reduced the mannequins to hysterics and two stately Pasadena dowagers—fearful of what the boys would say next—fled from the shop without making any purchases. That cost me plenty in un-made sales.

Barbara Stanwyck is a very calm girl—most of the time. She is almost entirely bored with clothes and is another of those cinema beauties who goes about in flat-heeled shoes and rolled-down socks. More than once I have had to fit long formal velvet evening gowns on her and had the shock of looking at the floor to discover, peeping out from under the velvet, dusty sports shoes and white woolen socks.

And now just one more thing before I end this installment. (I've more stories for your next month.) I want to tell you something about Anna May Wong. She hasn't gotten any real picture breaks lately, but I want to tell you how she selects clothes—just as a bit of advice to all women. Anna May is a dressmaker's holiday. She adores clothes and spends days making up her mind about a thing before she orders it —which is an excellent idea. But here's the real trick—she plans a coat that will not only match her suit but several dresses as well. She has jackets—often reversible—that can be worn over more than one dinner or evening dress. She keeps to a certain set of color schemes and suits her accessories to several costumes. She had a dozen changes where the average woman would have but four—and it's all because she uses her head and gives real thought to her clothes—something which every woman should do.

Not long ago she left Hollywood, Europe-bound, discouraged by the casting of Occidental players in Oriental parts.

"What's the use of being Chinese," she once said to me, "when they never pick a Chinese girl for a Chinese part? Instead, they take some girl in pictures, draw her eyebrows up with tape, put a black wig on her and expect her to be convincing. When she turns her face sideways to the camera, the illusion is always gone; for while you can make eyes look Oriental with make-up and tape, you cannot change a good old American profile!"

Next month, Mr. Greer concludes his fascinating series. He'll tell you many interesting and amusing anecdotes about the "old timers." The Talmadges. Corinne Griffith. Dorothy Mackaill. Betty Compson. Florence Vidor. And others whom you used to adore and have wondered about in late years.

Myrna in Marble

(Continued from page 59)

distributed autographed pictures of the statue with the same liberality and restless energy that Will H. Hays hands out statements. In fact, so beautiful is the "Spirit" of the marble group and so much admired that any woman in the world would be proud to be known as the original.

Los Angeles has long pointed to the beautiful marble group "Spirit of Education," which graces the broad campus of the $1,000,000 Venice high school. In the allegory are three figures, one typifying the "mental," another the "physical," and a third the "spirit" of education. Famous art critics have praised the central figure, the "Spirit" for its graceful poise and delicacy of outline. Throughout the art world, the allegory is well known, but Hollywood, busy with clothes, contracts and night clubs, hasn't had time to consider it. Besides, so far as any one knew, the group had no connection with motion pictures. But now, the cinema boys and girls are rushing down to look it over with the utmost enthusiasm.

EXTRA
CLOPAY NEWS
EXTRA
THE NEWS IS OUT...

...about the
NEW IMPROVED* CLOPAY WINDOW SHADES FOR 15¢ EACH!

A Revolutionary Advance in the Clopay Shades Approved By Millions of Women . . Added Durability and Extra Features Make Clopay at 15c a Greater Bargain Than Ever . . FREE Color Samples

YES, constant research and a mania for questioning users has at last accomplished the seemingly impossible—vastly improved Clopay Shades, which women always called perfect. Now, with the prices of ordinary cloth shades constantly rising, the new improved Clopays at 15c are positively the greatest value yet offered in window shades.

Never Before Such Shades!

The new improved Clopay Shades are heavier and stronger than formerly. A wooden slat at the bottom is included. And a molded shade button that makes trimming these full size shades for narrow windows much easier than ever before. Four new stunning patterns just added, too.

Surely there's no excuse now for you to put off replacing soiled or cracked window shades. So inexpensive—and such a blessed change besides —to have bright new Clopays at every window!

Send a 3c stamp (to cover mailing cost) and you will receive complete color samples FREE—a hint of what to expect in this unusual bargain value. Address: Clopay Corporation, 1222 York St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

NOTE THESE ADDED FEATURES
Heavier and Stronger
•
Wooden Slat at Bottom Included
•
Molded Shade Pull Button packed with each shade

At All 5c and 10c Stores and Most Department and Neighborhood Stores

CLOPAY WINDOW SHADES

Here's a Secret for SMART WOMEN

We'll show you how to get into this new, money making profession.

If you'll spend a few of your spare hours in delightful work right in your own home, you can

HAVE EXTRA MONEY

Money of your own—to spend as you please on the things you have always wanted but felt you could not afford. You can

WIN ADMIRATION

of men and women; astonish your friends; be known as a clever woman. You can

HAVE LOADS OF FUN

doing work so interesting and absorbing that hundreds of society women have made it their hobby.

YOU DON'T NEED EXPERIENCE

We'll show you how to decorate charming giftwares like those shown in the pictures, and hundreds of other artistic and exclusive Fireside articles—No tedious study—you learn to do by doing. We send you the secret of the "3 Step Method" at once. It's as simple as ABC. You start decorating immediately. You can make money almost from the beginning.

We Furnish Everything You Need to Start

We will send you at once a big wonder box of artist's supplies. We teach you exactly what to do and help you every step of the way to a big success.

No Canvassing—No Soliciting

Our plan is so simple. You are bound to succeed. We give you an absolute warranty of success and satisfaction backed up with a $1000.00 Gold Bond. Many earn from $15 to $35 a week for part time or a splendid regular income for full time.

Send for Free Book

Full of colored pictures! Tells you the secret. Shows you the wonderful things you can do and the money you can make. Now we need more women everywhere to join in this delightful work. Don't miss the opportunity. Be the first in your community. The book is free. Send for it. Mail the coupon today.

FIRESIDE INDUSTRIES
Dept. 147B, Adrian, Mich.

Fireside Industries
Dept. 147B, Adrian, Mich.

Without any obligation send me your Free Book that tells how I can join your Guild.

Name____________________

Street ____________________

City________________State__________

A mystery has always surrounded the alluring "Spirit." Often has the sculptor, H. F. Winebrenner, an artist of national renown and head of the Venice high school's art classes, been asked the name of his attractive model—the original of the "Spirit" — and just as often he has shaken his head and replied, "Some day she will tell you."

"In planning the group," says Mr. Winebrenner, "I had little difficulty in selecting the first two models. A football gladiator posed for the 'physical' education and a comely miss with high scholastic standing was the 'mental.'

"But the 'Spirit' was not so easy. It required a girl with a beautiful body, and from more than a thousand girls in our school we had many to choose, but the 'Spirit' had to be idealistic—it had to reflect spirituality—intelligent understanding—beauty—grace.

"While viewing an interpretative dance program, I discovered in Myrna Loy, one of my shy students, the model I was looking for. It required some persuasion to induce her to pose for the statue and then only upon a promise of secrecy until after the group was unveiled. For that reason the modeling was done in my home studio.

"On an autumn afternoon, more than five years ago, the 'Spirit of Education' was dedicated. Unnoticed—alone—on the edge of the throng attending the ceremony stood the quiet, thoughtful Myrna. She heard a dignified president of the University of California praise the statue's beauty and grace. But her real thrill came, she told me, when the venerable educator emphasized the high ideals the 'Spirit of Education' was to reflect: an inspirational message to youth—nobility of thought and purpose. And the young girl was impressed. She resolved to be worthy of her marble self. From me, she exacted a promise not to reveal the 'Spirit's' identity until its original had achieved something worth while in the big world she was about to face.

SCHOOL days completed, Myrna departed, the 'Spirit' still her guiding influence, so she told me. Other pupils came and admired the beautiful marble that guarded the campus. Many young girls emulated the 'Spirit's' graces and wondered if anyone so alluring had really lived. But to their questions I could only shake my head—I must keep the faith.

"The first recognition Myrna received was in a Hollywood theatre. On the screen was Chaplin's "The Gold Rush." Critics raved over the beauty and grace of a central figure in Mr. Grauman's prologue — a dancing elf, garbed in a bewildering cloud of white and shimmering silver. And Myrna was thrilled—for again she was a spirit—this time the Spirit of the Northern Ice! And it was as a spirit that Valentino and his wife, Natacha Rambova, first saw the girl. So impressed were they by her grace and charm that they became interested in her future.

"This was her first step toward an ultimate goal. The road was long and the detours many, but success finally came. Gatemen at the studio gate now bow as she passes in. And I feel that Myrna's ambitions have been realized, so I am brushing aside the years and revealing the statue's secret—my marble Spirit is Myrna Loy."

"I don't mind admitting it," smiled the actress when told what the sculptor had said. "In fact, I feel honored when Mr. Winebrenner identifies me as the 'Spirit' of his group. Many see in her only a marble figure, but to me she has always been a living, pulsating thing.

"Recently, I signed an attractive contract. That evening I told my 'Spirit' and my good friend, Mr. Winebrenner. I presume he feels my ambitions have been sufficiently realized for him to reveal the secret—I think, though, he should have waited. Before, the 'Spirit' was herself—now, alas, she's only me."

And Hollywood—see-all, know-all Hollywood—refuses to understand, probably couldn't understand.

Today, on the sight-seeing buses, the megaphone men have changed their travel talks. Formerly, passengers were told they were passing California's million dollar high school. Attention now is directed to the allegorical group of statuary, "The Spirit of Education."

"And, ladies and gentlemen," say the lecturers, "the central figure of allegory, 'the Spirit,' is the celebrated screen actress—Myrna Loy."

Double-Duty Outfits

(Continued from page 73)

—a soft homespun material or a slick broadcloth. For sports, a red and green plaid cotton blouse; for shopping, a green, Royal blue, or mustard colored crepe; for afternoons, one of eggshell satin; for later on, a red and gold or silver and white brocade. You can think up combinations as fast as you can write them down. Not so easy to attain? Well, one this month, one next, and so on, will string out the foundation skirt over a whole season—even longer.

And here are other color possibilities:

- Ensemble with brown:
  - Brown and green striped linen
  - Green flat crepe
  - Beige satin
  - Green and gold brocade
- Ensemble with gray:
  - Dark blue linen (plain)
  - Brown flat crepe
  - Pale yellow satin
  - Cloth of silver
- Ensemble with tan:
  - Yellow and brown plaid cotton
  - Flat crepe to match
  - Beige satin
  - Cloth of gold

SCREEN stars, always sensing the ways of fashion, with quick, sure instinct, have taken up the blouse ensemble idea with gusto. Here we have Margaret Lindsay in a perfect example of the satin blouse, good for afternoons, and a wonderful thing, too, to wear with a suit.

Also, Jean Muir in one of flat crepe, with its touch of the 90's in a soft jabot, illustrates the possibilities of ever so simple a shirtwaist idea.

Joan Blondell carries the same idea into the realm of the little coat and skirt. Underneath the gay plaid jacket, a light blouse with the skirt makes still another costume.

Even the three-quarter coat over a waist and skirt combination is perfect in style. On the pattern page—page 74—you will see one worn by Una Merkel. We have had a pattern of this cut especially for the readers of MODERN SCREEN, knowing that they may want to make themselves something that is right up to the minute in style and sponsored by one of the most popular of the movie actresses. That dress and coat could be done from two plain materials or the coat and skirt could be made of one material with a contrasting sweater or blouse. The possibilities of combining it in various ways are enormous.

Ruby Keeler's ensemble is an outstanding example of the way in which this combination blouse and skirt idea has been carried right into the field of formal clothes. It is not going too far to say that the most effective dinner dresses of this season are those constructed on this principle. And by the same token, variety in formal dressing can be economically achieved. One black satin or velvet skirt, reaching the floor, can carry a satin blouse, one of metal cloth, one of brocaded velvet, if you wish, and also a tightly fitted Victorian coat of heavy, corded bengaline, with long fitted sleeves.

It's really about the smartest thing you can do, if you go about a lot after dark, for you are obviously dressed for a party and still you have all the look of the most modern and sophisticated young person.

A little coat can cover the blouse as shown in Ruby Keeler's costume. And these jackets are quite as fascinating in their way as the blouses that grow underneath them. More possibilities for varying the look of the foundation dress.

Treat it all as a game—and use your head while you are playing the game. Plan before you shop—and you'll be surprised how varied and complete your wardrobe will become for a very modest financial expenditure.

In such a way, you can avoid the bugaboo of wearing "the same old thing" for one date after another. And do so without going to heart-breaking expense.

For there is nothing more important than being properly and appropriately dressed—and good taste and a cultivated clothes sense can accomplish more in this direction than money. Develop an interest in what you wear and, ten chances to one, you'll always look your best.

Meet the GIRL MEN Want to KISS

She knows how to Accentuate Natural Loveliness without risking that painted look

MEN don't want to kiss paint. Many a man has said: "It spoils all the illusion if you have to wipe your lips after kissing a girl."

So meet the girl men want to kiss. Her lips are neither a coarsening streak of paint, nor a faded, colorless line. Instead she has accentuated the cupid's bow of her mouth with a lipstick that gives the healthy, youthful glow that men admire without that painted look. Only Tangee could do this for only Tangee incorporates the magic color-change principle that makes it intensify natural coloring.

LOOKS ORANGE—ACTS ROSE

In the stick Tangee looks orange. But put it on and notice how it changes on your lips to the one shade of rose most becoming to you. No smearing, and no red spots on teeth or handkerchiefs when you use Tangee. Tangee becomes a very part of you, instead of a greasy coating, hence is longer-lasting than ordinary "paint" lipsticks.

Moreover, Tangee is made with a special cream base so that it soothes and softens lips while it adds to their allure. No drying, cracking or chapping of lips when you use Tangee.

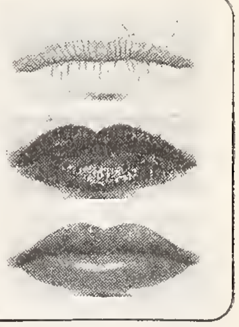
Get Tangee today—39c and $1.10 sizes. Also in Theatrical, a deeper shade for professional use. Or send 10c with coupon below for 4-Piece Miracle Make-Up Kit containing Tangee Lipstick, Rouge Compact, Creme Rouge and Face Powder.

Cheeks must not look painted either. So use Tangee Rouge. Gives you the same natural color as the Lipstick. Now in new refillable gun-metal case. Buy Tangee Refills and save money.

UNTOUCHED—Lips left untouched are apt to have a faded look . . make the face seem older.

PAINTED—Don't risk that painted look. It's coarsening and men don't like it.

TANGEE—Intensifies natural color, restores youthful appeal, ends that painted look.



World's Most Famous Lipstick

TANGEE

ENDS THAT PAINTED LOOK

NRA
WE DO OUR PART

Tested and Approved
Bureau of Foods Sanitation and Health

Don't be switched!

Insist upon Tangee. And patronize the store that gives you what you ask for.

TANGEE
TANGEE
TANGEE
TANGEE ROUGE

★ 4-PIECE MIRACLE MAKE-UP KIT—10¢

THE GEORGE W. LUFT COMPANY, Inc. MM-24
417 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Rush Miracle Make-Up Kit containing miniature Tangee Lipstick, Rouge Compact, Creme Rouge and Face Powder. Enclosed find 10¢ (stamps or coin).

Check Shade ☐ FLESH ☐ RACHEL ☐ LIGHT RACHEL

Name____________________________

Address__________________________

City________________ State__________

"I can't do a thing with my hair"

Oh Yes YOU CAN!

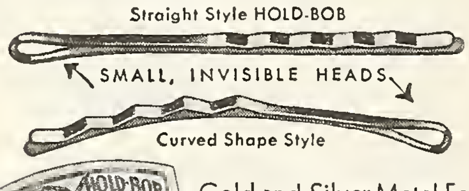
IN two seconds you can change that untidy disorderly hair to a smooth, trim, well-arranged coiffure. How? Just by using HOLD-BOBS.

But don't confuse HOLD-BOBS with ordinary bob pins that fall out as soon as you put them in. HOLD-BOBS stay! They hold each lock, or wave exactly as you want them. They never scratch your scalp or pull your hair—

Because only HOLD-BOBS have small, round, invisible heads, non-scratching ends, and flexible, tapered legs, one side crimped to hold every lock of hair securely. Insist on HOLD-BOBS always.

Made only by
THE HUMP HAIRPIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY
Sol H. Goldberg, Pres.
1918-36 Prairie Avenue, Dept. R-24, Chicago, Ill.

The Hump Hairpin Mfg. Co. of Canada, Ltd.
St. Hyacinthe, P. Q., Canada



Gold and Silver Metal Foil cards identify HOLD-BOBS everywhere . . . made in all sizes to meet every requirement. Also sold under these brand names: BOB-ETTES, CLIP-PER-ETTES and LOX-THE-LOCKS.

MAIL COUPON for Gift CARD

The Hump Hairpin Mfg. Co.
Dept. E-24, Chicago, Ill.
Please send me free sample card of HOLD-BOBS and the new booklet "The Quest for Beauty."

Name............

Address............

City............ State............

☐ Blonde ☐ Gray ☐ Brunette ☐ Gold

Copyright 1934 by The Hump Hairpin Mfg. Co.

The Private Life of a Crooner

(Continued from page 68)

Rock. Mildred felt so blue about it she went out and bought two pair of new shoes. Which reduced the bankroll to $18.75. The prodigals arrived in Little Rock minus a few meals, but happy.

They lived with Mildred's aunt for three weeks and with Dick's folks for two months.

On July 4, the Royal Peacock Orchestra from Indiana came to Little Rock for a five-week engagement. The event had been advertised weeks in advance. The Royal Peacocks were being paid plenty of money and it was up to them to deliver—and deliver something good. In fact, the boys of the band got so excited that exactly five hours before the grand opening number, the tenor soloist took down with an acute case of alcoholism. Some pickle for the Peacock leader, even if he was cold-and-worried sober! Like a frantic hen, he began scratching for local talent and what he dug up was Mr. Richard Powell.

He could have done a lot worse. As the evening and the enthusiastic hilarity wore on, it became evident that he couldn't have done better. The local boy was a hit with the big league orchestra. He was even better than that: he was a minor sensation. It was not a surprise to anybody when the Peacocks offered Dick a contract which called for a long engagement at one of the big hotels in Louisville, Ky. The magnificent sum involved was $60 weekly.

On September 21, Mildred and Dick left for Louisville, leaving their debts behind them. They were young, in love, and in the money.

As a full-fledged professional singer, he had calling cards made with the imposing name: Richard E. Powell, Tenor. He sang popular songs, sang over the radio and two weeks after the opening of the Louisville engagement, he became a crooner by the simple process of lifting a megaphone to his lips.

It was inevitable that before the year was out, the marriage of the popular little belle from the South and the music struck kid from Arkansas should begin to feel the strain of divergent tastes. Mildred had been petted, admired and rushed with more dates than there were evenings in the week. Now, as Mrs. Richard (Tenor) Powell, she lived an existence of lonely nights spent in hotel rooms, movie shows and visits to the circulating libraries. Dick's orchestra job kept him occupied from seven in the evening until one in the morning.

When the Peacocks suddenly found themselves minus an engagement, their life became even more of a spotty affair, with Mildred growing more and more miserable.

EIGHT vagabond months went by. Dick played the banjo and sang songs (for two weeks) in an Ohio theatre. There was an offer from a traveling "Student Prince" company that he didn't accept because he didn't like the looks of the chorus boys. Then a short Columbia Club engagement in Columbus, Ohio. Once he teamed up with a piano player with vaudeville in mind. They landed in Chicago, played a week and nearly starved to death for six. In a burst of discouragement Dick permitted Mildred to talk him into joining her uncle in the real estate boom then in progress in Florida.

But before they could arrive in Florida, the boom was over.

There were odd jobs, such as making victrola records at $50 a recording. They helped. One record, "Beautiful," was responsible for an offer which led Dick to a master of ceremonies job in Indianapolis. He was also to sing. With the $150 weekly salary that went with it, this was the best break for the young Powells since the Peacocks hit Little Rock. He had never master-of-ceremonied before, but it was not long before Dick and his megaphone were points of local interest in Indianapolis.

Good masters-of-ceremony are not born to blush unseen. There are too many theatre scouts on the look-out for them all the time. And when a certain scouting gentleman from the Warner Brothers Theatre chain just happened to drop into Indianapolis and heard the peppy, personality kid doing his stuff through a megaphone—that was the end of the Powell career in Indianapolis.

He went into the Stanley Theatre in Pittsburgh at a salary of $450 weekly, marquee billing, and an advance splurge of publicity that would have warmed the heart of Paul Whiteman.

Here was success in a big way. He was writing his own ticket; he was drawing more money than he had time to spend. But married life was growing more and more difficult.

Being a sensationally successful master-of-ceremonies in the "big time" took even more of his attention than he had devoted to his barnstorming days. He did six shows daily at the theatre. Now and then he donated the services of his band to charity activities. He loved it and it was good business. They'd heard of Crosby and Vallee in Pittsburgh, but the natives rated them bad seconds to Richard Powell. Mildred's unhappiness was the only hitch in the otherwise smooth oil of his existence.

"It was a terrible life for a girl," Dick explained. "It wasn't fair. Yet Mildred realized as well as I that there was no turning back from this line of work, now. It was definitely my field." They grew farther and farther apart. Eventually, though they remained friends, Mildred left on an extended visit to Houston, Texas.

Every week Dick was called into conference on the program of the build-up for the movie show that was to follow. He learned not only all the tricks of the trade—which included a "strong stage show for a weak picture" and a "take-it-easy stage show for a strong picture"—but he also learned Hollywood secrets that would have knocked several Hollywood stars for a loop. He learned that Joe E. Brown, Barbara Stanwyck, Joan Crawford, Marie Dressler and Wally Beery and Constance Bennett were hotter-than-hot—would fill a theatre every hour of the day or evening. But there were many other gilded and precious pets whom he knew to be drawing salaries way into the thousands who could be put over only by the finest vaudeville and stage shows Mr. Powell and the Stanley Theatre management could rake up. Long before Hollywood actually knew him, Dick Powell had Hollywood's number.

HE particularly enjoyed his work during "personal appearance" weeks, which brought Hollywood personalities to the stage of his theatre. He came to know Alice White, Jimmy Dunn, Buddy Rogers, Mary Brian, Jean Harlow and Lupe Velez as they appeared in Pittsburgh to say hello to their public. Jean Harlow's appearance was sensational.

"We did eight shows a day with Jean," Dick says. "The girl was a riot. I'll never forget her, either. It just happened that Pittsburgh was the first appearance she made on her tour. She was as nervous as could be. She showed up at the theatre at about eight o'clock the morning of her debut and showed me the little speech she had written. It was the old stereotyped stuff 'Hello, folks. . . . I'm so happy to be here . . . hope you'll like me,' etc. I suggested that we work out a little act together. Something different . . . something new. She was as tickled as a kid. So we got out the old joke book and began to fashion the cracks into new twists. I'm telling you the girl panicked 'em. I was very flattered when she told me she was going to follow the routine we had worked up all through her tour . . . and she did!" Incidentally, in the week Jean played Pittsburgh she broke a seven-year record held by Jack Dempsey.

It was colorful and exciting work and Dick began to have a hunch his reputation was getting beyond local bounds. He knew he could ask for, and receive, as much as $750 from the theatre. But ideas for bigger and better things were beginning to blossom in his fertile mind. If he asked for an increase, and got it, he would have to sign a contract. He had a hunch there was a better contract for him somewhere in the offing. While he was waiting, he played the stock market with such success he could have retired and lived nicely on the income from good investments. But he forgot to sell out. He awoke one morning to find himself financially flatter than a pancake, except for his salary.

It was the spring of 1932 the Warner Brothers Studio executives wired their Pittsburgh theatre manager they wanted to borrow Richard Powell for a movie test for "The Crooner." Inferiority never had been, and was not now, one of the Powell complexes, and he'd had

WHY BE SKINNY WHEN NEW WAY PUTS ON POUNDS —double quick!

Gains of 5 to 15 lbs. in a few weeks with new double tonic. Richest imported brewers' ale yeast concentrated 7 times and combined with iron

THOUSANDS who but a short time ago were "skinny", sickly and weak, no longer have to be ashamed of their scrawny figures and are making plenty of new friends. They have simply taken this new easy treatment that is giving hosts of thin people good solid flesh and attractive curves—in just a few weeks!

As you know, doctors for years have prescribed yeast to build up health for run down people. But now with this new discovery you can get far greater tonic results than with ordinary yeast—regain health, and in addition put on pounds of firm flesh—and in a far shorter time.

Not only are thousands quickly gaining beauty-bringing pounds, but also clear, radiant skin, freedom from indigestion and constipation, new pep.

Concentrated 7 times

This amazing new product, Ironized Yeast, is made from specially cultured brewers' ale yeast, imported from Europe—the richest yeast known—which by a new process is concentrated 7 times—made 7 times more powerful.

But that is not all! This marvelous, health-building yeast is ironized with 3 special kinds of iron which strengthen the blood, add new energy.

Day after day, as you take Ironized Yeast, watch flat chest develop, skinny limbs round out attractively, skin clear—you're a new person.

Results guaranteed

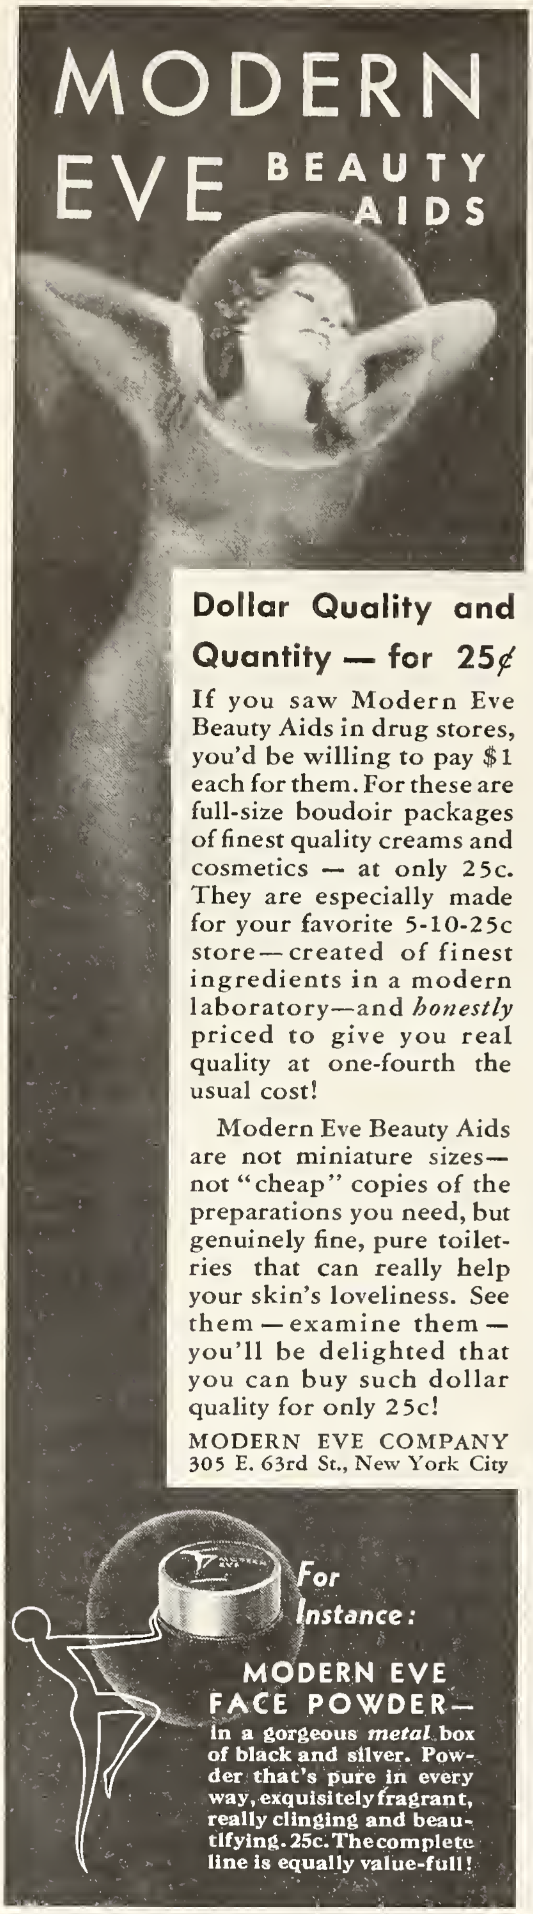
No matter how skinny and weak you may be, this marvelous new Ironized Yeast should build you up in a few short weeks as it has thousands. If you are not delighted with the results of the very first package, your money instantly refunded.

Only be sure you get genuine Ironized Yeast, not some imitation that cannot give the same results. Look for "IY" stamped on each tablet.

Special FREE offer!

To start you building up your health right away, we make this absolutely FREE offer. Purchase a package of Ironized Yeast at once, cut out the seal on the box and mail it to us with a clipping of this paragraph. We will send you a fascinating new book on health, "New Facts About Your Body", by a well-known authority. Remember, results are guaranteed with the very first package—or money refunded. At all druggists. Ironized Yeast Co., Dept. 32, Atlanta, Ga.

NRA MEMBER U.S. WE DO OUR PART



MODERN EVE BEAUTY AIDS

Dollar Quality and Quantity — for 25¢

If you saw Modern Eve Beauty Aids in drug stores, you'd be willing to pay $1 each for them. For these are full-size boudoir packages of finest quality creams and cosmetics — at only 25c. They are especially made for your favorite 5-10-25c store—created of finest ingredients in a modern laboratory—and honestly priced to give you real quality at one-fourth the usual cost!

Modern Eve Beauty Aids are not miniature sizes—not "cheap" copies of the preparations you need, but genuinely fine, pure toiletries that can really help your skin's loveliness. See them — examine them — you'll be delighted that you can buy such dollar quality for only 25c!

MODERN EVE COMPANY
305 E. 63rd St., New York City

For Instance:

MODERN EVE FACE POWDER—
in a gorgeous metal box of black and silver. Powder that's pure in every way, exquisitely fragrant, really clinging and beautifying. 25c. The complete line is equally value-full!

a hunch that something good was just around the corner. But the movies! You could have knocked him over with a canary feather.

The instructions read that he was to make the test in New York and then return to the theatre to "await word." He knew (long before he read in a syndicated column from Hollywood that David Manners had been signed for the part) that he would not play it. He had been too terribly nervous, too badly made up, in that hectic half-hour test in the New York studio. Dick was disappointed, but his respect for Hollywood casting judgment was definitely increased. New York shipped out his test and with Johnny Harris, manager of the theatre, he had a good laugh. The make-up made him look absolutely sappy.

One afternoon Harris came backstage with another telegram. The wire read: "WANT POWELL IN HOLLYWOOD IMMEDIATELY FOR ROLE OF SAPPY CROONER IN QUOTE BLESSED EVENT UNQUOTE TEST PERFECT FOR THIS ROLE."

Johnny Harris was laughing so hard at this unflattering offer he could hardly stand up. "My God," breathed Mr. Powell, who had just dropped a good-sized load of self-satisfaction with a terrible thud, "just wait until I get to Hollywood. I'll show 'em!"

Though it was necessary for him to play the role of the crooner in "Blessed Event" with a "sappy" effect, he did most certainly show them that the bad make-up had been responsible for their impression of him from that disastrous test. He clicked as a decidedly breezy and different screen personality from that first appearance; his agreement with the Pittsburgh theatre was cancelled and within a year he made "Too Busy to Work," with Will Rogers; "King's Vacation," with George Arliss; "Forty-second Street" and "Golddiggers of 1933," the two latter musicals bringing him to co-starring prominence with little Ruby Keeler. He started off nobly on his second year with "Footlight Parade" and his next two are "College Coach" and "Convention City."

NEVER for a moment did he feel like a stranger within the Hollywood gates. His long association with movie houses had familiarized him with the big personalities of the town long before he came here. He took up immediately his friendships with Joe E. Brown, Buddy Rogers, Mary Brian (to whom he was immediately rumored engaged), Jean Harlow and other of his personal appearance pets. Nor were his feelings ever hurt if any big star did try to shoot him. He could always think back on what rotten business their last picture had done in Pittsburgh.

As soon as he was settled in a small house in Beverly Hills, he sent for his mother and dad. He knew now that his marriage to Mildred was a thing of the past. Six months after he arrived in Hollywood he received word that Mildred had divorced him. Yet to this day they remain friends, frequently corresponding. As for his muchly-publicized romance with Mary Brian, Dick says it was never as serious as the gossip columnists would have you believe. "I liked Mary better than anyone I knew. I still do. I think that's about all I can say. Anything else would have to come from Mary." And Mary, apparently has decided the question by becoming engaged to Donald Cook.

New rumors would have us believe that Dick may marry non-professional Gwen Heller—the Warners' pretty niece. But, again, it's merely rumor.

For the most part, his life in Hollywood is a round of studio calls, golfing dates with Jimmy Dunn, family dinners with the Joe E. Browns, dancing dates with one or another Hollywood belle, and far more evenings than you would suspect spent in solitary study in his new home in Toluca Lake, where he recently moved from Beverly.

The Great God Studio

(Continued from page 55)

missed his mark. For the first time in his life. He had then shot himself. You see, he hadn't missed by accident. The god was, in this case, frustrated.

Again, the god expressed a desire for a frog that could croak in Gaelic. He wanted the froggie for Janet Gaynor's "Paddy the Next Best Thing." Now, said the casting director, the god had indeed asked the impossible. He had recently procured three negroes with Harvard accents; he had brought out of his hat an aged Chinaman with an English accent and an Eskimo with a fluent German vocabulary. But when he was asked for a frog that could croak in Gaelic, the grass grew green all around for all of him.

Director Harry Lachman insisted that such a frog could be found by any good, frog-minded man. Dialogue-director Edwin Burke swore that he had heard a frog croak in Gaelic in old Ireland. At last, worn down, a casting office sleuth was dispatched to the beautiful Japanese Gardens in Hollywood where frog families of all nations, dimensions and characteristics make their habitats. The sleuth, feeling, he said, like Simple Simon, lay under bushes and by the damp edges of rushy pools for whole nights through. The air was filled with the orchestration of froggy voices. And at last, asthmatic but triumphant, he offered a Gaelic croaking frog to the gracious god.

ONE warmish Sunday the god called for a jackass with a day-old colt. An altar boy was dispatched to the various stockyards and he looked at every lady burro in the pens without

NOW! THE GIANT TUBE
ZiP PERFUMED DEPILATORY CREAM
ZIP EPILATOR – IT'S OFF because IT'S OUT
PERMANENTLY DESTROYS HAIR

result. Animal men called and said, "If you can wait a while . . ." Studio can never wait. And finally the director, on his Sunday drive, noticed a Mexican leading an expectant burro to pasture. Mr. Lachman stayed on for the blessed event. The colt was born in due course on that day and the sequence was shot, as scheduled, on the day following.

When Studio is in a mood for animals he grows more whimsical than A. A. Milne at his best. Emboldened by his success with the Gaelic-croaking frog and the expectant burro, he now called for a brace of suckling pigs that would not grow. These, also, were for "Paddy." The pigs, it would appear, play an important part in this same picture. A short sequence in which they star had to be shot at various times over a period of six weeks because of the action of the picture. Now, pigs have a habit of growing apace. Pigs will be pigs. It was a knotty pig-problem. Finally, a professional pig-raiser was called into conference. The conference went on for hours, far into the night. And the result of it was that the pig-man agreed to keep the company supplied with a succession of pigs of the same size, color and weight throughout the run of the sequence.

Occasionally the god is seized with a craving for doubles, or resemblances. As once when he demanded a double for Mr. Lloyd George, a gentleman who would look so much like the ex-premier that his own daughter, Megan, would call him Daddy. Casting assistant Billy Gordon of the Paramount lot was detailed to bring forth this tid-bit for the god. He searched for weeks. He advertised. He thumbed his call book wherein were listed doubles galore for Lincoln, George Washington, Mahatma Gandhi, Aimee Semple MacPherson, Mussolini and others. In vain. Not a Lloyd George in the library of them. One night, returning from a fruitless day in Long Beach, he stopped at a tiny night counter café for a hamburger. In the rear of the dingy little place he noticed a man washing dishes—Lloyd George, in person, s'help him! At least, he knew, the god could never tell the difference.

Another resemblance demand was made, this time for a man who would perfectly duplicate ex-president Hoover. They had to have such a man for the Lew Ayres picture, "Up For Murder." They were informed that a man by the name of Patterson was in the Huntington Park Station and that he was a most perfect double. They were right—and Mr. Patterson was President Hoover for the duration of the picture—and his term in jail.

WHEN Cecil DeMille was making "The Sign of the Cross," Studio called loudly for a dozen women six feet tall. He wanted them for the arena scenes. Now, Hollywood is a town where women are demi tasse size, almost to a lass. Again advertisements were placed in all the papers. In almost every case the women who flocked to the casting office were wide instead of tall. They seemed to feel that dimension was the important factor. But "It's funny, Molly—Peggy's always loved the ride before. But she's been acting just this way for a whole week!"

"She's not hungry, either. I've found, Nan, that these symptoms mean it's time for a laxative. Give Peggy Fletcher's Castoria tonight."

"We want to report that Peggy's fine today—a perfect lamb! We both can't thank you enough for suggesting Fletcher's Castoria."

"A good laxative was all the child needed, Nan. And Fletcher's Castoria is made especially for children. It's easy to take—tastes good, and hasn't any of the strong drugs in it that make most grown-up laxatives so harsh. But one word of caution—make sure that the signature Chas. H. Fletcher is always on your carton!"

Chas. H. Fletcher. CASTORIA

The children's laxative

• from babyhood to 11 years •

Mother, whenever your child needs a laxative—for the relief of constipation, for colic due to gas, for diarrhea due to improper diet, for sour stomach, flatulence, acid stomach, and as the very first treatment for colds—give Chas. H. Fletcher's Castoria.

NRA WE DO OUR PART

GRETA discovers her "Hidden" Beauty

1
JACK SAYS YOU'RE SO STRANGELY ATTRACTIVE TO MEN, MARY! — TELL ME YOUR SECRET!
FRANKLY! SPECIAL CARE WITH THE HAIR... THAT'S THE ESSENCE OF "LURE". TRY JO-CUR-AND SEE WHAT HAPPENS!
2
SHE TRIES JO-CUR
3 THAT EVENING—
YOUR HAIR TONIGHT IS GLORIOUS! YOU'RE THRILLING! WHAT HAVE YOU DONE?
IT'S MY NEW JO-CUR WAVE I GUESS, JACK DEAR...

Have a Wonderful New Wave Tonight

INSTEAD of paying $2 or more to an expensive hairdresser, do this. Just wet your hair with the new discovery, JO-CUR and then with a comb and your own fingers you set your hair into perfect waves! In a few minutes . . . you can have the most becoming wave you ever had—literally double the attractiveness of your hair and for only 5c.

Remember that JO-CUR is different from any other waveset known. It has a quinceseed base—which eliminates all stickiness, and will not leave white flakes in the hair. And a JO-CUR wave lasts 7 full days. You can get JO-CUR at any drug or department store and at the 10c stores.

Jo-cur
WAVESET
FINGER WAVING and WATER WAVING

Jo-cur
PRONOUNCED "JOKER"
WAVESET

3 Perfumes
(Exquisite new odors)

SUBTLE, fascinating, alluring. Sells regularly for $12.00 an ounce. Made from the essence of flowers:— A single drop lasts a week!

Three odors:
(1) Romanza
(2) Lily of the Valley
(3) Esprit de France

Send only 30¢

To quickly introduce these new perfumes I'll send you with my compliments trial bottles of all three for only 30c (silver or stamps) to pay for postage and handling. Only one set to each new customer.

PAUL RIEGER
190 First St. San Francisco, Calif.

Studio is a choosey god. At last, after many snortings and bellowings and repeated and more explicit advertising, there came a rush of female six-footers to the front. They had, every one of them, come from Swedish massage institutions, from Swedish athletic clubs or from Swedish employment agencies for household help. (Ah, there, Garbo!)

There once came a call from the God's great lips for three hundred dwarfs. The patient acolyte of a prop man had twenty to thirty of these little people listed on his amazing call sheet. He collected these as a nucleus. He then contacted all of the booking agents in this country and the result was that the Great God suffered from acute indigestion. Three hundred dwarfs traveled to Hollywood from all points—north, south and east—and as they advanced upon Studio, they were six hundred strong—they had brought with them their wives and families!

At another time the order came through for a colored valet who would speak with a Jewish accent. Again it was Billy Gordon of Paramount who went forth. A friend of Billy's told him that they had some charming Jewish friends who had had a negro valet for years. In fact, they had had him ever since he had been a child. He was interviewed and, sure enough, the son of Africa spoke in the liquid tones of the Hebrew.

At times the god is kind to those he calls. When Fox Films was making "My Lips Betray" with Lilian Harvey, it was made known that the god would pay good money to such persons as could sit on the set with the English lassie and drink absolutely unlimited quantities of beer. More than two thousand letters of application were received. One man more than qualified by drinking one hundred and forty-eight pints in the record time of three hours.

It was our own Will Rogers who titillated Studio into requesting the three negroes with Harvard accents. He insisted upon having them for the porters in a train sequence of "Dr. Bull." He remarked, plaintively, that several times when he had been travelling in the Boston area, he had been assisted to his "bawth" by porters so cultured that they had given him an inferiority complex. Word was passed on to Central Avenue in Los Angeles, center of the black belt, and the next day, bright and early, the casting office was dignified by eight dusky applicants with bona fide Harvard accents on their lips and Harvard diplomas in their well-tailored pockets.

There was once the Great God Baal. Today we have the Great God Studio.

What Will Happen to Them in 1934?

(Continued from page 28)

possibility, say the stars, of bringing marriage also to Bill Powell, Carole's 1933 divorced husband. (Since that was a Reno divorce, you know, it's already final, and neither Bill nor Carole need wait a year before they can wed again.) Now, like Carole's, the portents indicate that Bill's marriage will be to a woman outside of pictures. It looks like a society woman. And this time—it'll be his third try—the signs say it will last, happily.

For Joan Crawford, 1934 will bring the peak of her picture career. After that, each successive year will be less brilliant—even 1935 may see her turn sensationally to the legitimate stage. The very apex of her screen life will be reached in one magnificently sensational film, sometime in 1934. Her love-life will not run smoothly in the year to come. The twelvemonth will bring to her not the one great love she believes is hers, but several flaming-and-dying loves. And, although the signs are propitious for happiness if she should marry in 1934, the signs also indicate that she probably will not, but that 1935 will see her again a wife. She will travel extensively in 1934—and either spring or fall will bring some critical trial of her nervous strength and health.

NATURALLY, mentioning Joan brings thoughts of Franchot Tone. "Although it is not utterly prescribed by the signs," says Dareos, "I doubt, weighing one set against the other, that Franchot Tone and Joan Crawford will ever be man and wife. They will be close companions, always—but I cannot see that companionship turning into marriage." Franchot must watch his health carefully in 1934, lest it wreck his career. If he guards it well, then he is destined for three finely successful picture years.

The never-married Mae West will remain single throughout 1934, too—even though to her it will be quite a year of romance. Many a man—some attracted by her wealth and fame, some by her personality, others by her sex-appeal—will take literally her famous catch-line, "Come up an' see me some time—any time!" But, says Dareos, Mae will walk 'em out as fast as they come in and remain Miss West. "She is still," says the prophet, "completely in love with her career, and her destiny admits no man taking that love's place, for the present." However—not in 1934 or in the next year or two, but later—Mae will marry. And when she does, she will spurn all the proposals from famous and rich and prominent men, and will marry an obscure man, much younger than herself, and utterly poor.

Professionally, Mae West's career will go on brilliantly and her 1934 work will definitely consolidate her standing as one of the stars of all-time. She will win the next Academy Award for the finest performance of the year. Financially, she must guard against self-styled friends who will try to induce her to invest unwisely. There will be a flurry in her life when a man from the past will pop suddenly and unexpectedly into her present—but there will be no serious results. She must guard, too, against some sort of underworld plot to put her on the spot. Too, there are signs of a possible auto accident.

GRETA GARBO'S stars portend no future greatness for her. The zenith of her career lies behind her, they portend. More, if Dareos reads them aright, either 1934 or 1935 will bring her final and permanent retirement from professional life, and she will return to Sweden.

Janet Gaynor will marry in 1934, say the signs! There is just one faint angle which says that the marriage will not occur until early 1935—but her definite betrothal announcement, at least, will come before 1934 ends. He will be a divorced man, considerably older than herself, and she will find lasting happiness as his wife. And she will have a baby in 1935. Professionally, she will continue to do her usual lovely work for two years—and then there is the possibility of retirement.

To Clara Bow, before the end of the year, Old Doctor Stork will whisper that early in 1934 he will bring her a baby. The child is predestined to be brilliant, but in what sphere that brilliance will lie—the stage or screen, or some other art—cannot now be devined. And now set yourself for a shock: before two years more will have passed, Clara will again be a mother—and this time she will present hubby Rex Bell with a pair of twins. Yes—Rex Bell will remain her husband always.

Over Jean Harlow's head, great storms of destiny rage throughout the future that is 1934. It behooves her, if she heeds the signs, to show great care in all her doings, be they professional or domestic, lest there come to her again the wreckage of something she now holds dear. Scandal threads hang over her, although from an outside source and not of her own doings, and her career will hang in the balance. If she passes through the danger unhurt, then two more brilliant screen years lie before her. "All I can say, and I say it with regret," says Dareos, "is that all the planets lie in opposition to her in the coming year, and are complicated by the fact that she is under the sign of hasty moves. She must watch carefully, step carefully, to avoid the dangers that beset her path."

FOR Constance Bennett, 1934 will be a year of strange developments. Romance will beckon strongly to her, from foreign shores. Whether there will be divorce for her, I do not wish to say; she might misunderstand that I am merely trying to translate what I read in the stars," says Dareos. "But I will say this—divorce for her in 1934 is not impossible." Because she was born under the signs which have made her the person she is, divorce would be no detriment to her, professionally or socially, if it comes. She is too capable of overcoming such threats. Scandal

"LOVER, I LONG FOR THEE"

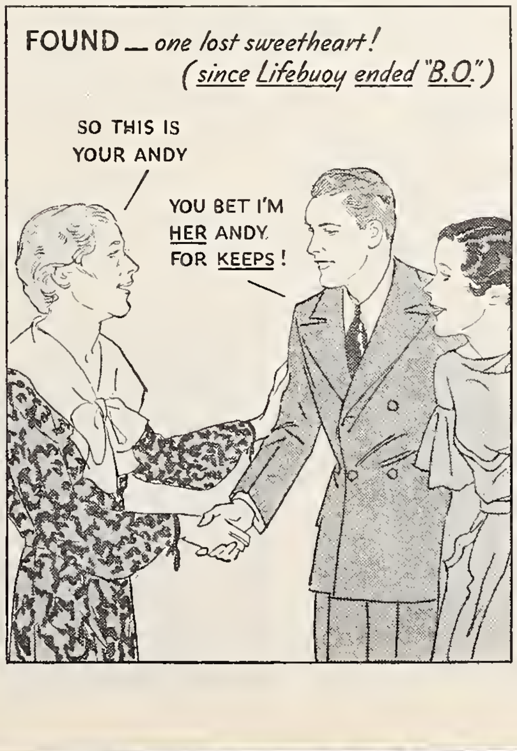
PLEASE LET ME TURN OFF THE RADIO, AUNT VI. I USED TO BE CRAZY ABOUT THAT SONG BUT NOW....
"LOVER, I LONG FOR THEE"? WHY, DEAR, DOES IT REMIND YOU OF SOMEONE?

OH, I SUPPOSE SO...A MAN I MET ON MY VACATION. HAD DINNER WITH HIM IN TOWN AFTERWARDS — JUST ONCE
ATTENTIVE OUTDOORS — INDIFFERENT INDOORS!! WAS THE RESTAURANT CROWDED AND STUFFY? DID YOU DANCE?

YES, BUT WHAT'S THAT GOT TO DO WITH ANDY'S DROPPING ME?
SIMPLY THIS, DEAR, TO BE VERY FRANK...

YOU SAY HE MIGHT NOT NOTICE IT OUT IN THE AIR, BUT INSIDE..... WHY, AUNT VI, YOU CAN'T MEAN I'VE BEEN GUILTY OF "B.O."
JUST A HINT, DEAR

LIFEBUOY'S THE NICEST SOAP! MAKES ME FEEL SO FRESH AND CLEAN. NO "B.O." NOW!



FOUND — one lost sweetheart! (since Lifebuoy ended "B.O.")
SO THIS IS YOUR ANDY
YOU BET I'M HER ANDY. FOR KEEPS!

"YOUR COMPLEXION IS SIMPLY RAVISHING"

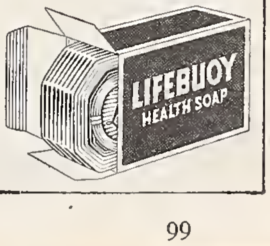
"I OWE IT ALL TO LIFEBUOY"

WANT your complexion to win compliments like this? Wash with Lifebuoy nightly—watch skin clear and freshen. Lifebuoy lather deep-cleanses pores. Leaves skin free to breathe —free to grow lovely!

"B.O." never warns

Any one of us may unknowingly offend. Play safe—bathe regularly with Lifebuoy. Its clean, quickly-vanishing scent tells you Lifebuoy lather deodorizes pores — stops "B.O." (body odor).

NRA WE DO OUR PART



LIFEBUOY HEALTH SOAP

Corns

SORE TOES
CALLOUSES—BUNIONS

MEDICALLY SAFE

Quick Sure RELIEF!

Lasting relief follows in ONE MINUTE after you apply Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads to corns, sore toes, callouses or bunions! Gone is the nagging friction and pressure of the shoe on the sore spot. The soothing effect of these thin, protective pads relieves the irritated nerves, heals inflammation and soreness; prevents corns, tender toes, blisters and abrasions from new or tight shoes.

Remove Corns and Callouses quickly and safely by using Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads with the separate Medicated Disks, included in every box. Double value now at no extra cost! Get a box at your dealers today!

Get the Corn Size for corns and sore toes; Callous Size for callouses and sore heels; Bunion Size for bunions and sore insteps; Soft Corn Size for corns between the toes.

Dr Scholl's Zino-pads

PUT ONE ON—THE PAIN IS GONE!

HAVE YOU OTHER FOOT TROUBLES?

DR. SCHOLL has formulated and perfected a Remedy or Appliance for every Foot Trouble, guaranteed to give relief. Ask your dealer. Write for valuable booklet on FOOT CARE to Dr. Scholl's, Dept. 34, W. Schiller St., Chicago.

Have You seen the NEW HESS Package

Yes, the same good Hess Witch Hazel Cream that softens, soothes and whitens skin as nothing else will, now comes in a beautiful new blue and white package. Look for it in the Dime, Drug and Department Stores.

Don't Let Chapped Skin Spoil Your Winter

Instead use Hess Witch Hazel Cream, a few drops at a time. It penetrates both the first and second layers of skin, correcting the causes of chap and roughness. Never leaves oily, sticky film on skin. Sample sent on request. Sold in 10c, 25c and 50c sizes.

E. E. HESS COMPANY
17 Main Street Brook, Ind.

(21)

HESS Witch Hazel Cream

will always mean little to her, for she is capable of rising above it as few women are. In 1934 her health will require great care, but she should avoid all suggestion of operation during the year, as signs are not favorable.

Interesting, what Dareos says about Katharine Hepburn. That is—"Don't be surprised if you find a sudden great friendship between her and Bill Powell. Don't be surprised if they are teamed in a great picture." Professionally, her sudden flare is not a fluke, for she will continue to climb, climb, climb—even despite the fact that sometime in 1934, that climb will be temporarily halted by a serious throat affliction, which, however, she will overcome. There will be a great personal sorrow for her in 1934.

"If I read the stars rightly," says Dareos, "then Charlie Chaplin is married right now to Paulette Goddard." That companionship will remain strong during 1934. But otherwise, the year is rife with chaos and trouble for Charlie; echoes from the past will torment him; his nerves will be sorely tried. He will make a worthwhile picture in 1934.

Dareos predicts these other interesting marriage probabilities in 1934: Mae Clarke will probably marry a man from a far-off land whom she does not now know. Alice White will marry Cy Bartlett. (Miss White jumped Dareo's prophecy by marrying during the last month of 1933.) Lowell Sherman will marry again and in 1935 will be the father of a girl destined to grow to fame.

For Loretta Young, 1934 offers signs of marriage, but with such attendant omens that Dareos advises her to wait until after that year. Adolphe Menjou's stars foretell his marriage again in 1934, to a woman outside of pictures, and to lasting happiness. Before the end of the year, Ann Harding will announce her engagement to a blond man, with a possibility that the marriage itself will take place before the year ends; but if not then, early in 1935, and the year 1935 will bring her a son.

For Bruce Cabot and Adrienne Ames, Dareos sees non-lasting happiness.

For Jimmy Cagney, the signs portend the end of his screen career, by his own choice, in 1934 or 1935, with Jimmy turning successfully to another field of endeavor. His marriage will go on happily.

Lilian Harvey will return to Europe in 1934. Douglas Fairbanks, Senior, will face heavy reverses and failing health. For Douglas Fairbanks, Junior, the year also brings his return to America—and romance. But, warns Dareos, the signs also say that if he marries in 1934, the marriage will be doomed again to an unhappy ending. Doug will eventually find marital happiness with a woman not of the acting profession. Over the house of Mary Pickford hang clouds of sorrow and tragedy, with losses in more ways than one, particularly toward the end of the year. She will turn to writing, and within two years, produce a marvellous book of memoirs. In 1934 she will make a picture—but it will not be a great one.

FOR Charlie Farrell, 1934 brings a happy return to screen brilliance; it also brings marital happiness unalloyed, for the period of threats and dangers is past. For Ruth Chatterton and George Brent, the year will bring recurrent rumors of their domestic break, with even a hint of its actual eventuation toward the end of the year—more as a result of the talk than of their own wish.

The health of Marie Dressler will be in as great danger as it is possible for any person's to be.

Edmund Lowe and Lilyan Tashman will go through the year still merrily wed—but they face the danger of a serious air accident, particularly if they acquire their own plane. It would mean either a very long hospitalization or crippling for one or both. (Stay out of planes, then, Lil and Eddie!)

As for Gary Cooper, he is, as you know, engaged to Sandra Shaw. Some say they are already married—secretly. But, says Dareos, the stars declare a state of bachelorhood for Gary Cooper throughout 1934. Gary is threatened with a bad aviation accident in 1934, and also with danger from some new friend. Some day Gary will acquire great wealth—but not from acting; instead from the ground—oil or mines.

Clark Gable will find his work trying and must beware of giving way to inclinations toward temperament. His health will be none too good. But, despite contrary rumors and gossip, his marriage will last.

For Spencer Tracy, Dareos warns great care in his personal life, which is threatened by the signs in 1934. Professionally, things are bright; but romantically, there are clouds. There is the sign of divorce, but Dareos warns against it unless it can be quietly and secretly done.

For John Gilbert, great happiness comes via the stork. "He was born to adore kids," says Dareos, "and his own will bring him intense happiness as life goes on. There is the possibility that he will be the father of twins, either late in 1934 or early in 1935. They will be girls, too. John will never see a male child of his own."

The health of Lionel Barrymore's wife will be in great danger in 1934. Over his own well being, too, lie shadows. To John Barrymore, the year is kinder—it brings continued professional success, lasting domestic happiness—and another baby.

And after Doc Stork has attended to the Barrymore order, he'll be busy at the Stu Erwin—June Collyer home, where Stu, Junior, (whom his parents call Billy) is already boss of the household, though not yet two years old. June, who underwent a Caesarian operation when Bill came, faces a repetition of her ordeal—another Caesarian—from which she will recover splendidly. And the result will be—twins! For Hubby Stu Erwin, the year is exceptionally bright with success.

The Modern Hostess

(Continued from page 8)

he replied. "She can make them up in about the time it takes to play a phonograph record."

We were frankly skeptical, but Dick turned out to be absolutely right. By using Anne's recipe we served a party of ten hungry midnight raiders in less time than it takes to tell about it. Then, too, we found this combination so good that we not only use it for a midnight supper but have taken to serving it with noodles and brown butter for a quick, cheap and satisfying dinner. It's just the sort of trick to have tucked up your sleeve to pull out on days when you're going to be terribly busy or out all afternoon.

Once our curiosity about the hamburger had been satisfied we went on to the next nocturnal standby—eggs.

"What is Anne's specialty when it comes to eggs?" we inquired.

"Western egg sandwiches!" Dick told us. "They are famous from here to there and justly so. Anne always appoints someone to help her make the toast, so that I can practically count on these sandwiches making an appearance when there is someone on the party she is particularly keen about. Either these or Welsh rarebit sandwiches, which also call for toast."

"Well, now I know why you and Katherine always offer to make them yourselves," interposed sister Anne who had stepped into the room for a minute.

"You must admit Katherine is a very efficient helper," declared Dick with conviction.

There seemed to be no argument about that. The Katherine of whom they were speaking is the lovely dark-eyed daughter of Cecil DeMille (who directed Dick not long ago in "This Day and Age"). We understand that Dick thinks Katherine is not only efficient but also one of the grandest people in the world.

So you see, girls, all you need is one of Anne Cromwell's recipes for these two sandwiches and an attractive apron to slip on over your party frock and you are all set to trap the man of your choice. Just get him out into the kitchen where he can watch you competently throwing together a tasty snack and you should be ashamed of yourself if you can't make him your willing slave. The Welsh rarebit sandwiches take a trifle longer to make than the Western egg variety, so decide on them if you feel you need a little extra time. The Welsh sandwiches require the slicing of a few tomatoes and the cooking of a little bacon. We recommend that the Welsh rarebit mixture, which is poured over the whole, be previously prepared and left in the double boiler to be reheated.

"Does Anne ever serve anything which involves other things besides hamburger, cheese or eggs?" we then wanted to know.

"Yes, she occasionally fixes up a plate of little sandwiches with assorted breads and fillings, which are served after a

"What would I do if he should catch a cold?"

Her first-born—so tiny and helpless! What would she do—if he should catch a cold?

Older and more experienced mothers answer her:

"Don't experiment with little-known or untried remedies. Use Vicks VapoRub — our family standby."

Two generations of mothers have proved Vicks VapoRub best for children's colds. It avoids constant internal dosing—which so often upsets delicate digestions and lowers vitality when most needed. VapoRub can be used freely—and as often as necessary—even on the youngest child. Absolutely safe—and its medication goes direct to the seat of trouble.

Just rubbed on throat and chest at bedtime, VapoRub acts like a poultice. It "draws out" tightness and soreness. All night long, too, its medicated vapors are inhaled direct to irritated air-passages, bringing soothing relief. Often, by morning, the worst of the cold is over.

VICKS VAPORUB

Follow Vicks Plan for Better CONTROL of Colds

To PREVENT many Colds

VICKS NOSE DROPS

Millions now have fewer, milder and shorter colds—by following Vicks Plan. In thousands of clinical tests, under medical supervision, the Plan has reduced remarkably the number and duration of colds—has cut their dangers and expense. The Plan provides proper medication, at the proper time, for every type and stage of a cold. (Full details of the Plan are in each Vicks package.)

... To END a Cold sooner

VICKS VAPORUB

"Maiden's Prayer"
...a soft smooth skin

● Maiden's prayer — matron's prayer, too, for that matter: "To have and to hold a soft, smooth skin."

Day in and day out—you must protect your skin against blemishes and ageing. And day in and day out, Campana's Italian Balm will guarantee you skin beauty that men will adore and women will envy.

This famous, original skin softener conquers chapping and roughness more quickly than anything you have ever used before. Perfectly safe, too. No caustic bleaches, no drying astringents. Here is a scientific blend of 16 ingredients—a formula invented by an internationally known, Italian dermatologist—that will keep your skin satiny smooth regardless of the weather or the tasks your hands must do.

Italian Balm spreads widely—lasts long. Every package—35c, 60c and $1.00 bottle, and 25c tube—bears the Good Housekeeping seal of approval.

CAMPANA SALES COMPANY, BATAVIA, ILLINOIS
CAMPANA CORPORATION, LTD., TORONTO

Campana's
ITALIAN
BALM
THE ORIGINAL
SKIN SOFTENER
Now also in tubes, 25¢

bridge party," replied Dick, helpfully. "Then," went on young Dick, "Mother, who lives with us, occasionally turns out a devilled crabmeat dish. I like this best when it appears in big sea shells with melted cheese over the top, but before we had the shells we used to have it served in little dishes and I seem to remember that it tasted just as good. I never noticed any one leaving any."

THE "little dishes" to which Dick referred are ramekins, but we noticed, when we made up the recipe, that the Cromwell Devilled Crabmeat is just as delicious served out of one big casserole. We've even spooned it directly out of a double boiler onto slices of toast and still no one has ever left a morsel. We've tried substituting lobster or eggs for the crabmeat and still the dish met with unanimous approval. We've served it for luncheon and Sunday night supper as well as late at night and on all occasions it has gone over with a bang. All in all, it's one of those extremely versatile dishes for which every hostess gives thanks and if you don't send for your copy of this month's MODERN SCREEN Star Recipe Folder which contains this recipe among others, you're just plain improvident.

"Do you ever have anything in the way of a sweet?" we wanted to know.

"Not often, but when we do it is something quite simple. But sometimes when we want something extra special Mother makes us a squash pie, and boy! oh boy! how it hits the spot, served with a good cup of steaming hot coffee. Mother is the only person I've ever discovered who puts raisins into squash pie, but she says the real reason her squash pie tastes different from all others is because she puts grated orange peel into it. It's all Greek to me, but it certainly gets results."

"How about something to drink with these midnight repasts?" we asked.

"Well, of course, most people want coffee. Others prefer beer or milk. Anne usually lets people take their choice. But sometimes, especially when we're playing bridge, Anne serves cocoa and believe it or not, everybody likes it. A good hot cup of cocoa with some tasty sandwiches and you forget to care whether you won or lost!"

There, you bridge fiends, how many of you have thought of that? Make your cocoa by allowing one tablespoon each of cocoa and sugar, half a cup of water and half a cup of milk and a few grains of salt for each person to be served. Boil the sugar, cocoa, salt and water together for about five minutes before you start your game. Then you have only to add the milk, bring the beverage to just this side of a boil, then beat it with an egg beater for two minutes and you are ready to serve. Some people like a spoonful of whipped cream or a marshmallow in their cocoa but leave the addition of this to the discretion of the drinkers themselves.

IN this month's specially prepared MODERN SCREEN Star Recipe Folder you will find the Cromwell recipes for Special Hamburgers, for Devilled Crabmeat, Raisin-Squash Pie and also four elegant new sandwiches to serve after your bridge bouts. One sandwich is made with chipped beef (marvellous!), another combines celery, olives and peanut butter. And that isn't all. Send for them and see for yourself how good they are. You can have these MODERN SCREEN Star Recipes free by filling in and mailing the coupon on page 12. I do hope you'll mail the coupon to us right away, for we're simply dying for you to try these recipes for your next party. And while you are waiting for your folder, brew yourself a batch of popularity by trying the following two on your friends, relatives and family (and be sure to cut out these recipes and save them).

WESTERN EGG SANDWICH

For each person to be served allow:
- 1 egg
- 1 tablespoon butter
- ½ tablespoon minced onion
- 1½ tablespoons thin cream or rich milk
- 1 tablespoon minced ham
- dash of salt and pepper
- 2 slices bread
- 1 pickle

Melt the butter in a frying pan and add the minced onion. Cover and cook very slowly until onion is slightly yellowed. Meanwhile beat together the eggs, cream, salt and pepper, using an egg beater. Add the ham and when onion is a delicate yellow, turn egg mixture into pan with onion and butter and cook over low flame, stirring constantly and slowly until mixture becomes firm but not hard. Serve between slices of hot buttered toast and garnish with a pickle. (Note: for large parties, make the toast under the broiler flame of the gas oven so that all the slices will be done at once and appoint some one to watch over the toasting process.)

WELSH RAREBIT SANDWICH

For each person toast 2 slices of bread. Spread with butter. Cover one slice with thin slices of peeled tomato and place on the tomato 3 strips of crisply cooked bacon. Cover with second slice of toast and pour over all a generous serving of Welsh Rarebit. Dust with paprika and serve at once.

WELSH RAREBIT MIXTURE

- 1 package Pabst-ett or Velveta
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 tablespoon flour
- ½ cup thin cream or milk
- ½ teaspoon dry mustard
- ½ teaspoon salt
- dash of cayenne pepper
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Melt the butter, add flour and mix well. Add milk and cook, stirring constantly, until smooth and thickened. Add cheese cut into small pieces and stir until melted. Add seasonings and serve. If desired, this mixture may be made up ahead of time and reheated in a double boiler. If it shows any tendency to lump, beat for a few seconds with your rotary egg beater.

"A Great Mistake!"

(Continued from page 30)

enjoyed, you will undoubtedly notice.

"Why? Because we've found out that there is a most excellent reason why women can't ever have that freedom. An insurmountable, biological reason! And having made this discovery, what can we do about it? We're trapped, if you should ask me. Or even if you shouldn't.

"We can't very well rush back into the old sheltered life women used to know. It no longer exists. Men's attitude has changed, for one thing. Men have finally become accustomed to women being jostled in subway trains and taking it. And you can hardly expect them to go on and on thinking of little blondes as fragile as porcelain, when for years little blondes have been going out of their way to prove they can do practically anything a man can do.

"Goodness knows," Claudette granted, "men were loathe enough to accept the new order. But things reached a pass where they simply had to adjust themselves to the modern, independent woman and the new pattern of living which evolved with her or appear ridiculous. And men, as you very well know, will do anything in the world rather than appear ridiculous.

"The modern woman," she went on, "thought of herself as liberated. Until slowly, and too late, she discovered that instead of liberating herself she had bound herself to be and do things she really didn't want to be and do at all—things it wasn't natural for her to be or do when you come right down to it.

"And we've always been so dramatic, so vehement, so determined about independence," Claudette sighed. "Constantly placing ourselves at a tremendous disadvantage. We lost track of fundamentals. There you have it! Of fundamentals and the important superficialities which go with them.

"We forgot to be beguiling, for one thing. For years it has been as if we no longer had any time or inclination for the old-fashioned flirtations and courtings. We allowed ourselves to be daring. And that was exciting enough to satisfy us until the novelty wore off. Then we came to our senses. Then we realized that we had been overlooking the fact that women primarily are meant to attract men, to appeal to their protective instinct, to marry them, and to bear them children. Some of us became a little bitter about men because they finally quit being protective and allowed us to shift for ourselves, in more ways than one. Many of us gave up marrying. Entirely too many of us gave up being mothers.

"For the last decade we've actually behaved as though we thought it would be possible for us to be greater than the very natural system of which we are a part.

We are paying very dearly for all the little mistakes in behaviorism that

The Smartest Women Use
FAOEN BEAUTY AIDS

— yet they cost
ONLY 10¢

It may be fun to be fooled—but it isn't smart. Especially when it costs you money. You can imagine you must pay high prices for high quality beauty aids. Or you can use Faoen Beauty Aids and know you are buying the finest for only 10¢! Here's the proof—from the scientific report of a famous Research Laboratory:

"every Faoen product tested is as pure and fine as products of like nature sold for $1, $2 and $3."

Do you wonder that thousands of smart women are changing to Faoen Beauty Aids every day?

CLEANSING CREAM • COLD CREAM
FACE POWDER • ROUGES • PERFUMES

10¢ each at
the better 5 & 10¢ Stores

PARK & TILFORD'S
FAOEN
(FAY-ON)
Beauty Aids

we've made. Jumping up and getting whatever we wanted for ourselves, for instance.

"Norman has often assured me that his attitude towards me would be very different if I'd permit it to be, if I wouldn't act so darn independent all the time. And I know it would be. I know the attitude of other husbands and beaus would be, too."

Norman and Claudette obviously have discussed this subject at length. She quoted him often that day.

"However," Claudette went on, with an understanding smile, "for all our independent gestures we remain women. And it happens that it's natural for women to be happiest, to come closest to contentment when there's romance in their lives, when by word and deed men pay them tribute. That's why I insist that, now the novelty of being independent has worn off, we modern gals find ourselves out on a limb.

"I mention the little attentions men have gotten out of the habit of paying women, not because they are so important in themselves, but because they are indications that men's very attitude towards women has changed."

"What started you thinking about all this?" I asked Claudette. "You of all people! You, as independent and modern as women come!"

She laughed.

"I suppose," she confessed, "that subconsciously, along with thousands of other women, I've been hungry for a little more romance and a little less independence in my life for a long time. It was, however, a conversation between Allison Skipworth and Arthur Byron on the set some time ago when we were making 'Tonight Is Ours' that brought me to my senses. With something of a jolt!

"They were reminiscing about a famous English beauty.

"'Ah,' Miss Skipworth said, 'when she stood in the drawing-room doorway in that black velvet gown that showed her beautiful white shoulders, her golden hair piled high upon her head, wearing pearls . . . she was magnificent!'

"'She was, indeed,' Arthur Byron agreed, enthusiastically. 'Magnificent. How long ago was that? Thirty years ago if it was a day. But how we both remember her. . . .'

"Now you know perfectly well," Claudette pointed out, "that we have no contemporary beauty whose entrance into any drawing-room will be remembered even five months from now. And it isn't that women aren't as beautiful as they used to be. It isn't that at all. It's just that they're modern. It's just that they rush into a room or slouch in, that they don't make 'entrances.'"

"And you think this is a pity?" I prompted her.

CLAUDETTE nodded. "From a romantic point of view," she said, "and I repeat that this is an important point of view for a woman, women being as they are. I wish I'd lived in the day Allison Skipworth and Mr. Byron were talking about. It must have been very nice. Beauties making entrances. Men flocking about, begging for the privilege of bringing an ice, fetching a gold chair, paying compliments to ladies instead of discussing finance and business eternally."

"But, Claudette," I protested, suddenly seeing the other side of the picture, "you'd be bored to tears with such a life. You're used to crowded, stimulating days. You're accustomed to going where you want to go and doing what you want to do, without fear of the social ostracism all of this previously would have caused you.

"Do you," I went on to tax her, "mean to sit there and tell me you feel you've made a mistake in being independent, supporting yourself, maintaining a separate house from Norman and all the rest of it?"

"I think," Claudette said, refusing to be ruffled by my attack, and thus convincing me of her sincerity, "if I was less independent and Norman, therefore, could be more protective, he'd probably be happier and I'd probably be happier. We'd be more the way a man and woman apparently were meant to be.

"I doubt, however, that either of us ever will know that particular degree of happiness and contentment. Having grown up in the years when I did, having become infected with the independent, modern woman virus there's nothing I can do now but continue to run my own affairs, live in a separate house from my husband, and look out for myself in a hundred little ways. I'm gaited that way now. There's not much, if anything, I can do about it."

"Wouldn't you advise the girls now growing up to follow in the footsteps of your generation of women?" I persisted.

She shrugged. "To advise girls growing up," she answered me "is dangerous business. I don't fancy it. You can't tell how things will go.

"For instance," she explained, "if women are going to keep on being as they are, then the old, romantic order of things is doomed and girls growing up will be wisest to move with their times. It's not a good thing to be out of step. Perhaps somewhere later on the new generation or the generation that follows it will find a new brand of romance, one I can't possibly anticipate, one which will compensate them for what we have lost.

"Certainly one individual here and there forsaking the life, manner, and outlook of the modern woman will gain nothing. Our old realm can be repossessed only if economic conditions change and women generally have the courage to admit they've made a mistake.

"I would, however, talking to a growing girl, tell her what I've been saying to you. I'd at least try to prepare her for the restlessness she'll be sure to experience sooner or later. I'd quote Anatole France to her. I'd say, 'On the domestic hearth, there only is real happiness.' But I'd also say: providing you aren't dated and an anachronism sitting by that old hearth, providing that, doing this, you're living up to the spirit of your times, and not going unhappily and uselessly against it."

Don't Tuck GRAY HAIRS Out of SIGHT

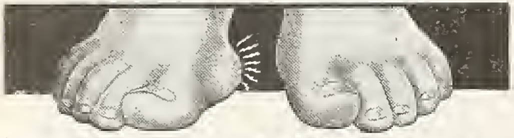
Touch them up with
FARR'S FOR GRAY HAIR
Manicuring and "facials" leave you only as young as your hair. Youthful clothes won't offset faded hair. FARR'S tints faded hair one even shade. Easy to use, without instruction in the clean privacy of home; odorless, not sticky; will not rub off or interfere with curling, marcel or permanent wave. Everyone glances at your hair if it's getting gray. Keep it lovely with FARR'S. $1.35. For sale everywhere.

FREE SAMPLE
BROOKLINE CHEMICAL CO. M.G.18
79 Sudbury Street, Boston, Mass.
Send for FREE SAMPLE in plain wrapping.
Name..
Street..
City..................................State.......................
STATE ORIGINAL COLOR OF HAIR

$3 EFFECT FOR 10¢
VIVANI
FACE POWDER
ROUGE
CREAMS
LOTIONS

DENISON'S PLAYS
57 YEARS OF HITS
Musical Comedies, Operettas, Vaudeville Acts, Minstrels, Comedy Songs, Make-up Goods.
Catalog Free
T.S.Denison & Co. 623 S.Wabash, Dept. 25, Chicago

Brand New AS LOW AS $19.75
TYPEWRITER
Guaranteed by REMINGTON
Sensationally new low price and easy terms. Standard 4-row keyboard—fully guaranteed by Remington Co. Send No Money.
10 Day Trial then 10c A Day
Send for new literature and easy pay plan—only $1.00 down, then 10c a day. Also bargains in Standard size refinished office models, sent free. Write for details and special money-making opportunities.
International Typewriter Exch., 231 W. Monroe St. Dept. 261, Chicago.



Torture of Bunions
Now Unnecessary!
The amazing action of Pedodyne is truly marvelous, and a boon to those whose bunions cause constant foot trouble and a torturing bulge to the shoes. It stops pain almost instantly and with the inflammation and swelling reduced so quickly you will be able to wear smaller, neater shoes with ease and comfort. Prove it by actual test on your own bunion. Just write and say, "I Want To Try Pedodyne." No obligation.
Pedodyne Co., 180 N. Wacker Dr., Dept. D-210, Chicago. Ill.

"You certainly picture the modern woman in rather a hopeless position," I told Claudette.

"That's exactly where the modern woman is, where she has been for a long time," Claudette insisted. "But the new clothes mother was talking about the other evening . . . they're going to be a help. They're a help already, as a matter of fact. I actually find myself looking forward to the evenings when I'll put on a gown that has a high waistline and a trailing skirt, a lavish evening wrap. And when, living up to these fashions, I'll put aside my brisk independence. For a few hours at any rate.

"In slacks and a sweater, I sprawl and reach out for whatever it is I want. But in my new evening gown that pours onto the floor and has a deep decolletage, I instinctively choose a higher, less casual chair, place my feet differently, use my hands differently, talk differently, feel differently, even think differently.

"Whereupon Norman's attitude towards me undergoes a change, too; whereupon he immediately becomes more protective and solicitous and—well, thrilling—than he's inclined to be when I'm sprawling in slacks and waiting on myself. So, for a few hours, at any rate, everybody's happier.

"Save evenings for romance. That's my slogan.

"This is pleasant enough in itself, goodness knows. And you can't tell what it may lead to later on."

Joe Says a Mouthful!

(Continued from page 65)

"In a purely accidental manner. It's an odd thing, I'm no Pollyanna, but whenever I'm the goat or get disappointed in any way, something good comes out of it. I discovered the comic possibilities of my mouth when I was playing the part of Lester, a bellhop, in 'Listen, Lester.' I was disappointed in the role. Its dialogue consisted of short sentences, mainly yes's and no's. The other characters had all the laughs. I was the goat. After the first few performances I didn't mind. When one of the characters said something and I answered with my no or yes, I, naturally, would first open my mouth to say the word, but I found that the audience was still laughing at my fellow actor's joke, so I'd have to hold my mouth open until the laugh was over, or my meek syllable would never have been heard.

"Pretty soon I discovered that the laugh was lengthening in minutes, and that the audience was commencing to giggle at me and the way I handled my mouth; the exaggerated opening and then the single little word no or yes were very funny.

YOU know that yell of mine. I discovered its power in an accidental way, too. It was about seventeen years ago. Mrs. Brown and I

HOW THE WRONG SHADE OF FACE POWDER CAN MAKE YOU LOOK YEARS OLDER

Pavlova's Experience

ANNA PAVLOVA, the great dancer, was giving two concerts in a distant city. The first night she looked gloriously young and vibrant. But the second night she was another woman altogether—she looked old and haggard. Something terrible had happened to cause the transformation. What was it?

Just this: By mistake the wrong colored spotlight was thrown on her. And the effect was that she appeared twenty years older. The audience whispered—"My, how old Pavlova looks." The right light was immediately switched on. But the damage was done! No one in the audience could be convinced that Pavlova hadn't grown old.

Your Face Powder Shade—Aging or Youthifying?

What holds for lighting holds for face powder shades, too. The wrong shade can make you look five to ten years older. Many women, choosing their face powder shade on the wrong basis, are victims of a decidedly aging effect. Could it be possible that you, too, are paying the penalty of the wrong shade of face powder? Look at the above illustration. It gives you some idea of the difference the right and wrong shade of face powder makes.

One Way to Tell

There is one way to tell which is the right shade of face powder for you—which shade makes you look young rather than old—and that is to try all the five basic shades. As Lady Esther has demonstrated and, as color specialists confirm, there are five basic shades which supply the needs of all types of women. One of these will prove the most flattering and—youthifying—for you. And Lady Esther offers you the opportunity of finding out that shade at her expense.

At Lady Esther's Expense!

Simply mail your name and address and you will receive a liberal supply of all five shades of Lady Esther Face Powder. Try them all on your face before your mirror and instantly one of these shades will prove the one for you. Mail coupon now for all five shades of Lady Esther Face Powder.

(You Can Paste This on Penny Postcard) FREE

LADY ESTHER, 2010 Ridge Ave.,
Evanston, Ill.

I want to find the right shade of face powder for my type. Please send liberal supply of all 5 shades of Lady Esther Face Powder free and postpaid.

Name..

Address..

City.......................... State..................

This offer not good in Canada. (3)

Make yours a
KISSABLE COMPLEXION
End blackheads, pimples

● Clear up your skin the way a doctor has proven you can do it quickly. Use Ambrosia, the liquid that cleanses pore-deep. Apply Ambrosia with cotton; you feel it tingle—you know it is cleansing as nothing has done before.

Doctor's tests prove the daily use of Ambrosia ends blackheads, pimples, closes large pores, clears up sallow complexions. An old French recipe, first made in this country only to private order, this pore-deep cleanser is really a 1-minute facial. Cleanses, tones, stimulates. Follow with Ambrosia Tightener for muddy, blemished complexions. You'll soon have the rose-petal skin that wins men's admiration.

Ambrosia Cleanser and Ambrosia Tightener at all 10c stores. Also in 75c and larger sizes at drug and department stores.

AMBRŌSIA
The Pore-Deep Cleanser

CONDON'S GIANT EVERBEARING TOMATO
"QUEEN OF THE MARKET!" Big Money Maker. Large, solid fruit; excellent canner. To introduce to you our Northern Grown Live Seeds and Plants, we will mail you 125 seeds of Condon's Giant Everbearing Tomato and our big 1934 Catalog of Seeds, Plants, Shrubs, FREE 200-Page Book tells how, and when to plant, Send 3c stamp to cover postage.

Prices Lower Than Ever Before
CONDON BROS., SEEDSMEN
BOX 157 ROCKFORD, ILLINOIS

EMBLEMS BASTIAN

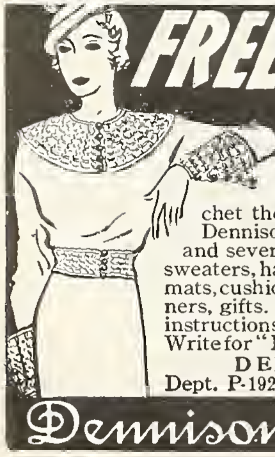
FREE CLASS & CLUB PIN CATALOG
Shows over 300 handsome, smart, up-to-the-minute designs. Many color Illustrations. Styles to meet taste of every club, class, school or society.

LOWEST PRICES-BIGGEST CHOICE-QUALITY MADE
Money-back guarantee covers every item we make. Deal with the firm that has led for 37 years and be sure of complete satisfaction.
Write today for our big FREE catalog
Bastian Bros. Co., 94 Bastian Bldg., Rochester, N.Y.



FREE! HOW TO MAKE THIS BEAUTIFUL SWAGGER SET

Four pieces—collar, cuffs, and belt. Crochet them from one fold of Dennison Crepe. Make this and several other styles. Also sweaters, hats, berets, rugs, table mats, cushions, lamp-shades, runners, gifts. Complete illustrated instructions for all are FREE. Write for "New Things to Make."
DENNISON'S,
Dept. P-192 Framingham, Mass.

Dennison Crepe

had leased a cottage at Toledo Beach. A friend of ours was stopping with us, and promised to go swimming with me at six o'clock in the morning, but my friend failed to make his appearance. There I was . . . the goat . . . up to my waist in ice cold water, and given a stand-up. I stood in the water, and called to him. My call was so loud that all the neighbors came running as they thought someone was drowning. When they saw that there was nothing seriously the matter, and when they watched my mouth as I kept calling him, they laughed."

"Do you get any of your picture laughs by accident?" I asked.

"Two of the biggest laughs came in just that way," he declared. "One was in 'Broadminded.' I was told to hide under the bed and stare at the other actors. At the same time I was supposed to be funny. Once more I seemed to be the goat. The camera commenced to grind. As I lay there, my face peering out, I felt something tickling my nose. Of course I looked, and it couldn't help but be a cross-eyed look. There was a fly sitting on my nose. So I brushed it off, and that was one of the biggest laughs in the picture. Just an accident.

"And in 'You Said a Mouthful,' they used a tank for some of the water sequences. To make it realistic they put a swordfish in the tank. Through some odd trick of the camera, when the fish swam by me, it looked like a shark! And that got a laugh."

HE smiled at me. "Not all my disappointments end in laughs. When I first moved to Hollywood, they sold me a dude ranch and an interest in a gasoline station. There wasn't much of a laugh in losing on those. At the same time, I honestly feel that those losses helped me to understand the worried men in the audience; the men who come to forget their financial troubles. A comedian has to be as real as the people he entertains."

By his attitude I could tell he is good-natured. There is nothing resentful about Joe E. Brown. He has the happy disposition of the athlete. He likes vacations, and does not hesitate to take them. One of his favorite recreation spots is Palm Springs. He excels in nearly every known athletic sport.

Children love tales about his career. The fact that he was a circus performer, and actually a baseball player in one of the big leagues, endears him in their eyes. Children are always first to sense the humane qualities of a person, and a great deal of Mr. Brown's fan mail comes from youngsters under twelve.

He showed me some of the letters. He opened them at random. One was from a child who offered to black his boots, if only Mr. Brown would take him to Hollywood. One was from a little boy, begging for a picture; another, from a little girl who wanted an autograph.

He is very sentimental. He is sentimental about his home. He is sentimental about his wife, to whom he's been married for nineteen years. He is sentimental about his children.

"Don't forget to get their names and ages right," he earnestly warned me. "There's Mike Frankovich. He's twenty-one, goes to college, and I consider him one of the family. Then there's Don, he's sixteen, and Jo, fourteen, and Mary Elizabeth, who's two. And now we have the baby, Katherine Frances."

KATHERINE FRANCES is adopted, and Joe assured me that she will have the same advantages his own children enjoy.

"She belongs to us. We love her just like our own," he said. Because he is sentimental, he is easily hurt. His feelings were hurt twice during his week in Chicago. Both hurts were due to newspaper stories. The first began the previous week, when in Detroit, the banks closed, and Joe came to Chicago carrying his Detroit salary in a neat package. At the station he sent for a detective, and had himself escorted to where he deposited the money. The newspapers hooted at this, and accused Joe of doing it as a publicity stunt. They claimed he had no money in the package, and the whole thing was just a means of getting his picture in the papers. This was not true. Joe was obliged to carry the money, and the way he did it was the only possible and sensible solution at the time.

The second hurt was due to the fact that the newspapers kept associating him with the "42nd Street Special," that carload of stars bound for the inauguration by way of publicity. Joe was also on his way to the inauguration, but on the special invitation of Franklin D. Roosevelt, because it was Joe who was elected Grand Marshal to welcome Roosevelt when the latter went to California.

He is the sort of man whom other men elect to do things. There is an attitude of humility about him. He does not brag about how hard he works to develop his gags. Still, you know he labors, and at the same time, you admire him for freely admitting the accidents of success. He is earnest in his attempt to understand a little something about this complicated life that so frequently turns disappointments into accomplishments.

He is very competent. You can tell that by the way he talks, and above all, by the way he lives.

In a recent novel by Chistopher Morley, there is a description that fits Joe E. Brown. It is this.

"In France he would have been a good Frenchman, in Turkey a good Turk, in an anthill a good ant."

His parting words, like most parting words, were typical of the man, I thought.

"My middle name is Evans. I can tear a telephone book in half, but you needn't tell them that. Just make them think I'm a human being."

And I hope I have succeeded.

Directory of Pictures

(Continued from page 83)

THE INVISIBLE MAN (Universal)—When a handsome scientist starts fooling around with the supernatural, he discovers how to become invisible. But he forgot to find out how to get back to visibility. And this causes plenty of complications. Claude Rains, Gloria Stuart and William Harrigan. You won't miss much if you go to bed instead of to the movies that night.

● THE KENNEL MURDER CASE (Warners)—The latest Philo Vance story. A couple of brothers are most ingeniously and diabolically murdered. There is no clew until a prize Scottie is found killed the day before the Kennel Show. Good murder mystery—too exciting for very young folks.

● KING FOR A NIGHT (Universal)—Helen Twelvetrees as an understanding sister who becomes the mistress of John Miljan, a fight promoter, to further her fighting brother's career. She kills Miljan when he threatens to tell her brother (Chester Morris). The brother takes the blame. A terrific punch in this pix but a tragic ending—not particularly recommended for tots.

● THE KING OF THE ARENA (Maynard-Universal)—Ken Maynard as a cowboy sleuth. Good Western—take the kids.

● ● LADY FOR A DAY (Columbia)—May Robson as Apple Annie, who keeps her daughter in an exclusive school in Spain. Annie pretends that she is a Social Registerite. Then said daughter decides suddenly to come home. There is plenty of complication, laughs and tears. Jean Parker, Warren William, Glenda Farrell, Ned Sparks and Guy Kibbee are also in the cast. You will go for this one—take the youngsters along.

LADY KILLER (Warners)—Reviewed in department on page 48.

● ● LITTLE WOMEN (RKO)—That old and beloved story now transferred to the screen. Katharine Hepburn is Jo, Joan Bennett, Jean Parker, and Frances Dee are Amy, Beth and Meg. Spring Byington is an ideal Mother March. Edna May Oliver, Paul Lukas, Douglass Montgomery and Henry Stephenson complete the cast. By all means see it and take the children.

LONE COWBOY (Paramount)—Reviewed in department on page 48.

● LOVE, HONOR AND OH BABY (Universal)—A young lawyer and a good looking stenographer need money for a marriage license. They make her boss furnish it in a very unique and amusing manner. Zasu Pitts and Slim Summerville again. Swell comedy—kids will enjoy it.

● THE MAD GAME (Fox)—A melodrama dealing with the kidnapping racket. A double-crossed beer baron, revengeful and hating the racket, gets out of prison and runs the mob down. Spencer Tracy, Claire Trevor, J. Carroll Naish. Good—not recommended for young folks.

● MAMA LOVES PAPA (Paramount)—Mary Boland and Charles Ruggles in a comedy of married life. Very funny—older tots will enjoy it.

● MAN OF THE FOREST (Paramount)—Speed and comedy in a fight over water rights. Randolph Scott, Verna Hillie, Buster Crabbe, Noah Beery, Harry Carey and a family of mountain lions. Very entertaining for everybody.

● THE MAN WHO DARED (Fox)—A biographical sketch of the life of the late mayor of Chicago, Anton Cermak. Preston Foster and Zita Johann. Good for those interested—too advanced for youngsters under 14.

● ● A MAN'S CASTLE (Columbia)—A simple little love story of a poor boy from Shanty Town who picks up a still poorer girl in the park. His shack becomes their castle. They marry and become truly happy. Spencer Tracy is excellent and Loretta Young is at her best. Glenda Farrell, Arthur Hohl, Marjorie Rambeau and Walter Connolly complete the cast. Very good—young folks under 16 will find it dull.

(Continued on page 117)

A remarkably fine picture of Dick Barthelmess in "Massacre."

This Caramel Pudding "makes itself"

MAGIC!
THE MOST AMAZING SHORT-CUTS IN COOKING

Eagle Brand

MAGIC CARAMEL PUDDING

Place one or more unopened cans of Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk in a kettle of boiling water and keep at boiling point for three hours, being careful to keep can well covered with water. Chill thoroughly. Open can . . . and see! A delicious caramel mixture! Blend with ¼ cup hot water, coffee or fruit juice and serve!

It's miraculous! Eagle Brand, in the unopened can, caramelizes to a lovely, rich, golden-brown color, a rich, true caramel taste! A grand pudding! Try it, too, for sauces, pies, frostings! (See booklet.)

But remember—Evaporated Milk won't—can't—succeed in this recipe. You must use Sweetened Condensed Milk. Just remember the name Eagle Brand.

FREE! "AMAZING SHORT-CUTS!"

Cut out that astonishing recipe above! Prove to yourself that it actually works. And here and now, mail this coupon, to learn a whole new kind of cooking!

The Borden Co., Dept. MM24, 350 Madison Ave., New York.
Please send me FREE booklet, "Amazing Short-Cuts."

Name..
Street..
City.............................. State..............
(Print name and address plainly)

BORDEN ASSOCIATED COMPANIES
Borden's 1857

NRA MEMBER U.S. WE DO OUR PART

WHAT ABOUT RUTH AND GEORGE AND RALPH?

Why, Ruth Chatterton, of course. And George Brent, her present husband. And Ralph Forbes, her ex-husband. This is one of the most fascinating trios in Hollywood. In our March issue, they reveal the true facts about their relationship.

MARCH ISSUE MODERN SCREEN—
On Sale February 1

Warm Luscious Lips

SO SEDUCTIVE
..SO KISSABLE!

PALE LIPS are cold lips! Your lips to be tempting and attractive to others, must radiate the pulsating color of youth.

Today, lovely women everywhere are choosing OUTDOOR GIRL Olive Oil Lipstick as the ideal make-up for their lips. Indelible and waterproof, this exquisite lipstick spreads smoothly and imparts to the lips a thrilling, natural glow.

OUTDOOR GIRL'S colors are pure and safe; contain no harmful ingredients. Its olive oil base keeps the lips from chapping or cracking. In 5 captivating shades. At leading drug and department stores—50c, 25c. Also at variety stores in miniature sizes for 10c.

OUTDOOR GIRL
OLIVE OIL LIPSTICK

CRYSTAL CORPORATION, DEPT. 50B
WILLIS AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY
Please send me a Free Trial Package of OUTDOOR GIRL Olive Oil Lipstick.

NRA MEMBER U.S. WE DO OUR PART

NAME..................
ADDRESS..................
CITY..................STATE..................

IF YOU HAVE
GRAY HAIR
and DON'T LIKE a MESSY MIXTURE.... then write today for my
FREE TRIAL BOTTLE

As a Hair Color Specialist with forty years' European American experience, I am proud of my Color Imparter for Grayness. Use it like a hair tonic. Wonderfully GOOD for the scalp and dandruff; it can't leave stains. As you use it, the gray hair becomes a darker, more youthful color. I want to convince you by sending my free trial bottle and book telling All About Gray Hair.
ARTHUR RHODES, Hair Color Expert, Dept. 3, LOWELL, MASS.

Be a Nurse
MAKE $25-$35 A WEEK
You can learn at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. Thousands of graduates. Est. 35 yrs. One graduate has charge of 10-bed hospital. Another saved $400 while learning. Equipment included. Men and women 18 to 60. High School not required. Easy monthly payments. Write us now.
CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 1492, 1601 Warren Ave., Chicago, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 32 sample lesson pages.
Name
City State Age

HOME-STUDY BUSINESS TRAINING

Your opportunity can never be bigger than your preparation. Prepare now and reap the rewards in earlier and larger success. Free 64-Page Books Tell How. Write now for book you want, or mail coupon with your name and address in margin today.

○ Higher Accountancy
○ Mod. Salesmanship
○ Traffic Management
○ Law: Degree of LL.B.
○ Commercial Law
○ Industrial Mgm't
○ Banking and Finance
○ Telegraphy
○ Rail. Station Mgm't
○ Railway Accounting
○ Paper Salesmanship
○ Business Mgm't
○ Business Corres.
○ Credit and Collection Correspondence
○ Modern Foremanship
○ Personnel Mgm't
○ Expert Bookkeeping
○ C. P. A. Coaching
○ Business English
○ Commercial Spanish
○ Effective Speaking

LASALLE EXTENSION UNIVERSITY
Dept. 2318-R, Chicago

Norma Shearer's Personal Revelations

(Continued from page 16)

"So that was just one thing more for me to labor over. I wonder that I ever did work that got by on the screen when I had so many physical handicaps to think about. Not only did I have to learn how to relax my body before each scene, but I had to take every kind of neck exercise to relax it and keep it relaxed when the scenes were made. Eventually, I learned how to do this.

"And why didn't you ask me about the cast in my eye? You knew I definitely had one, didn't you?"

I nodded, for too many times this had been visible on the screen and off and I had wondered how on earth she had managed to conceal it as well as she did. I knew she could not always be photographed so that it would not show, and yet as I looked at her it was not there—I could not detect it.

IMAGINE a girl trying to be a picture star with a cast in one eye! I'm afraid that I should have given up and admitted that there was something with which I could not cope. But Norma did no such thing. She assembled every film scene where the cast had photographed unusually vividly. She ran these films over and over again in the projection room all by herself, pondering in her mind the action of each scene, the emotion that had made the cast show. She discovered it was definitely the effect of an unusual emotion. She had the cast when she did a heavy dramatic scene, she had it when she was angry, she had it when she was excited.

"Then I knew," she told me, "that I had to control that cast by my own thoughts. And I began to do just that.

This gives you a rough idea of how Robert Young and Katharine Hepburn regard each other—in "Trigger," we hastily add. This is the next Hepburn film—and it threatens to be simply grand.

But just try it if you want a really tough job. Now I verily believe you can change the entire expression of your face by the way you think. But the deliberate effort sincerely to feel a part and yet keep the cast out of my eye was an undertaking that almost conquered me. You see, I had to try to give reality to my scenes and yet keep myself from getting worked up to the pitch of emotion that would show up the cast. You can know how happy I am that it does not appear any more whether I am on or off the screen.

"You see what I had to fight with the muscular arms and legs, the cast in my eye and the irregular teeth, but nothing was worse than my self-consciousness! Of course, I will never lose all of this, for I think fear motivates most lives.

"As soon as I finish a picture I begin to feel afraid that it is not so good as it should be, that my work might have been better and my mind goes running on to how I can improve my scenes in my next picture. You're always straining, always reaching ahead toward the things you haven't attained. Motion picture success is like a woman a man loves and never posesses. It is uncertain, always dancing ahead of you with new allure, making you afraid you may be dropped from the race. I am glad I am still afraid. A person who feels sure grows contented, then indolent, then careless. Besides, cock-sureness doesn't make people love you and I would far rather be loved than have my work perfect.

"But I have overcome my self-consciousness (another phase of fear) in a measure. I did it purely by interesting myself in other people. When you enter a room, if you can just put out of your mind the thought that everyone is looking at you; if you can yourself look directly at someone else in the room, admire her dress, her hair, her hands—or anything; if you can just do this, it will do more toward taking your thoughts off yourself than anything else. In a scene one can, of course, enter so into the character to be played that self slips aside.

"There may be people who feel sure of themselves; there may be people who know from the beginning that they are going to do great things, but I never did.

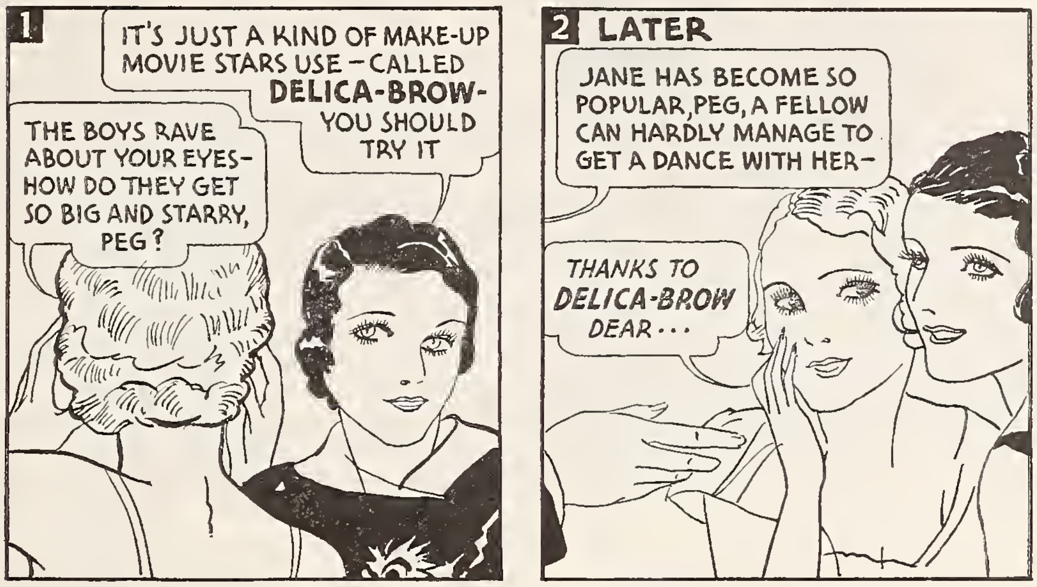
"I hoped by the grace of God that I would make the grade, but obstacles invariably seemed almost too much for me. If I have succeeded in a measure I hope this knowledge helps others."

Watch for another "It Can't Be Done!" story in MODERN SCREEN soon.

Remember—we're going after the stories everyone says can't "be had."

But we'll get 'em!

POPULAR PEG TELLS THE SECRET OF "MOVIE EYES"



1
THE BOYS RAVE ABOUT YOUR EYES—HOW DO THEY GET SO BIG AND STARRY, PEG?
IT'S JUST A KIND OF MAKE-UP MOVIE STARS USE—CALLED DELICA-BROW—YOU SHOULD TRY IT
2 LATER
JANE HAS BECOME SO POPULAR, PEG, A FELLOW CAN HARDLY MANAGE TO GET A DANCE WITH HER—
THANKS TO DELICA-BROW DEAR...

Have the Witching Eyes of the Movie Stars Tonight!

You can get exactly the same "eye-appeal" movie and stage stars do—instantly—by darkening the brows and lashes with the wonderful make-up discovery they use. With DELICA-BROW! Let DELICA-BROW make your eyes literally wells of allure tonight—bigger, brighter... irresistible, DELICA-BROW is waterproof, too. Remember the name.

Get it at any drug or department store and at the 10c store.

Delica-Brow
Delica-Brow
The Original Waterproof Liquid

SHARPEN UP THOSE PENCILS . . . AND HAVE AN ENJOYABLE CROSSWORD PUZZLE EVENING!

WINTER EDITION
CROSSWORD PUZZLES
10 CENTS
New
CROSSWORD PUZZLES MANY CASH PRIZES

- The Winter Edition of CROSSWORD PUZZLES brings you 50 tempting puzzles (and their answers) for only 10c! And there's a thrilling puzzle contest, offering a $50.00 prize, 61 other cash prizes and many free subscriptions to CROSSWORD PUZZLES.

- Stop at the nearest newsstand today and get a copy. It means hours and hours of real fun!

CROSSWORD PUZZLES

Winter edition on sale now everywhere—10 cents

"Here is the SECRET" says Mary Brian

Mary Brian in Columbia's "Fog"

MOON GLOW
NAIL POLISH
Beautifies Your Hands

YOU will be delighted with the smartness of your hands when you beautify them with MOON GLOW Nail Polish. Keep on your shelf all of the five MOON GLOW shades—Natural, Medium, Rose, Platinum Pearl and Carmine.

If you paid $1 you couldn't get finer nail polish than MOON GLOW—the new Hollywood favorite. Ask your 10c store for the 10c size or your drug store for the 25c size of MOON GLOW Nail Polish in all shades. If they cannot supply you, fill in the coupon below and mail today.

Moon Glow Cosmetic Co., Ltd., Hollywood, Calif.
Gentlemen: Please send me introductory pkg. of Moon Glow. I enclose 10c (coin or stamps) for each shade checked.
( ) Natural ( ) Medium ( ) Rose ( ) Platinum Pearl ( ) Carmine.
Name...
St. & No...
City........................ State............ (MS-A2)

FREE CHARACTER READING CHART Worth $1.00 Complete

• A "get acquainted" gift from REJUVIA, the favorite lipstick of more than a million women. A complete 17 x 22" scientific character reading chart absolutely FREE to you.
Study your sweetheart's character. • Analyze your friends • Learn what you are, and why you are • You will be amazed with the mysteries that this chart will reveal to you.
Mail your name and address on penny post card. No cost. No obligation. SEND NOW TO Rejuvia Beauty Labs., Inc., Dept. B-42, 395 Broadway, N. Y.

Try REJUVIA Lipstick today, velvet smooth, permanent waterproof, indelible, in correct shade for your individual complexion. A tested quality full size lipstick for only 10 cents at most 5c and 10c Stores.

KILL THE HAIR ROOT

D. J. MAHLER Beauty Specialist

My method positively prevents hair from growing again. Safe, easy, permanent. Use it privately at home. The delightful relief will bring happiness, freedom of mind and greater success.

We teach Beauty Culture. Send 6c in stamps TODAY for Booklet. For promptness in writing me, I will include a $2.00 Certificate for Mahler Beauty Preparations.

D. J. Mahler Co., Dept. 36B. Providence, R. I.

BLACKHEADS

DON'T SQUEEZE THEM! IT CAUSES SCARS! INFECTION! Dissolve Blackheads scientifically, refine Large Pores, stop embarrassing Greasiness, Shine", clear Muddy, Tanned skin with wonderful KLEERPLEX WASH. Marvelous pore-purifier. Renews! Lightens! Beautifies! Gets at the cause quickly—safely! See instant improvement! No chemicals. No staying home. Approved by health authorities, the Beauty Editor of this magazine and thousands of happy users—both Men and Women. Nothing like it! Send $1 TODAY for 2 mos. supply to KLEERPLEX (MR) 1W.34th St., N.Y.C. MONEY BACK GUARANTEE! C.O.D. 20c ex. Outside U. S. $1.25—no C.O.D.'s. Clip this Adv.

CATARRH and SINUS SUFFERERS LISTEN
Guaranteed Relief or no Pay

The only sensible way to treat catarrh and sinus trouble is to clear the blood. Build up your system and strengthen the lining of the nose and throat to fight the germs which cause catarrh (sinus trouble). Use Hall's Catarrh Medicine.

NEW TREATMENT CHART FREE
Let this chart guide you to relief. Write for it today. Don't be embarrassed by hawking, spitting or catarrhal bad breath. You can depend on Hall's Catarrh Medicine. Send now.

F. J. CHENEY & CO. Dept. 311 TOLEDO, OHIO
Sold by all Leading Druggists

Behind the News of Gary's Engagement

(Continued from page 17)

heart. Yet he will talk. He will talk—if urged and questioned—about Sandra Shaw and his first meeting with her.

The very first meeting was in a dark projection room where they had both been witnessing a film. When it was over they were introduced and said the usual "How do you do" and "How are you" business. And thought no more about each other until they met again at a friend's yachting party.

The boat lazed about the picturesque isthmus between Catalina Island and the Coast. Gary and Sandra don't remember where the rest of the party was.

All they know is that they two were sitting together on deck dangling their feet.

"WHAT did we talk about?" Gary said. "Oh, I don't know. What do people talk about? Well, she said, 'How do people amuse themselves in Hollywood?' And I said, 'Some of them have motor cars.' And she said, 'And some of them have boats.' I said that was right and we didn't talk for awhile. Then I said, 'Do you really want to be an actress?' And she said, 'No, I don't give a darn one way or the other. But I like Hollywood and I like Hollywood people.' I caught myself kind of hoping that was personal. Out of the corner of my eye I looked at her. She was so nice and calm, somehow. And I've known girls who weren't so calm.

"'Do you like to ride horseback?' I asked. 'Love it,' she said. 'Do you?' 'Unhuh,' I said. So we didn't talk much more for awhile. And then she said, 'You like mountains and ranches and hunting, don't you?' 'Sure,' I said, 'Do you?' 'Yes,' she said, 'Love all that.'

"Well, you asked for it. You asked me what we talked about and that's it. Not very exciting, is it?"

On the contrary, I thought it was very exciting, for in telling me about it Gary had shown that that first meeting had been important—much more important than what they said. They talked about motor cars and boats and horseback riding and hunting. They really—with their eyes and by their silences—told each other that they were rather intrigued with each other. And that's all it might have been—a charming girl, a handsome man, happily, gayly but not very seriously in love. That's all it would have been, had it not have been for the trip to Phoenix, Arizona.

After the meeting on the yacht, they went everywhere together, but there was no thought—nor talk—of marriage between them. They were just having fun. They had mutual interests. They liked each other. It was fun being together. And then they decided it would be fun to run over to Phoenix, Arizona. Gary carefully explains how well chaperoned they were. Jack Gilbert and his wife, Virginia Bruce, as well as Sandra's uncle went along. Gary and Sandra thought this trip—like the parties and luncheons and teas they had attended—would be just more fun. But the very word Arizona means "secret marriage" to the press. And when they got back from Phoenix, they were cross-questioned by dozens of reporters. Also there had been the rumor of the hotel register. It seems that it had been signed by Gary Cooper and then Sandra Shaw "Cooper"—just like that.

And this is what Gary said about that when they asked him. Without a flicker on his lean poker face, he blandly stated that the "Cooper" had been written after Sandra Shaw's name in order to save time when they returned next summer to be married! And whether he was kidding, or whether he was serious, or whether he just said the first thing that popped into his head, you can search me! And they told the reporters they were "engaged" and Gary bought Sandra a "canary colored" diamond. And they hoped that was the end.

NOW, that's the West Coast side of the story. There's a New York chapter, too. Rumors that they were already married were as thick as a wrestler's neck all over Manhattan. Long before the engagement was announced. One newspaper carried the line that Gary and Sandra would probably marry at the home of the Harry Whitney's—the day after a party given for Sandra and Gary at the Central Park Casino. There was another newspaper bit about Sandra receiving mail and packages addressed to "Mrs. G. Cooper." One can imagine that the telephone rang at Sandra's home and at Gary's hotel on the average of once per second. And one can imagine that all parties concerned finally became so frantic with all the fuss and bother that a formal announcement of the engagement of Sandra and Gary seemed the simplest way out, all round.

So, on November 28, at a Casino party given by Sandra's mother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. Paul V. Shields of 778 Park Avenue and Southampton, Long Island, the engagement of Veronica Balfe to Gary Cooper, film star, was announced. Later, at the Shields' home where other friends joined the party, the engagement was also announced. And now Gary and Sandra and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Shields and Miss Barbara Shields and all the other Shields and Balfes can get a little sleep nights and enjoy a little peace of mind. Their Veronica and that film actor are "engaged" and the newspapers have the story and everybody can sit back quietly and see what happens from that point on.

I don't somehow believe that they will marry. I don't think, in the first place, that it is that kind of a love affair. I think the two young people were having a lot of fun together and probably still would be, but they got themselves into a spot—where everyone was saying that they were married and where their lives were made miserable by reporters' questionings—and the simplest way out was to announce an engagement and be done with it.

And now perhaps you'd like to know something about the girl in the case. Here are a few facts.

Sandra's real name, as I have said, is Veronica Balfe and so far as Park Avenue society is concerned she's the real McCoy. It's not a publicity man's idea that Sandra is what she is. I'm telling you, she is!

Veronica's mother, after her divorce from her daughter's father, Harry R. Balfe, married again—this time the wealthy Wall Street broker, Paul V. Shields, who with the very nautical brother, Corny, are noted as amateur yachtsmen on Long Island Sound.

Veronica went to the fashionable Millbrook School in Westchester and, when she was graduated, made her début, but soon became bored with seeing her name in the society columns, with spending her summers in Southampton and with accepting the attentions of the young bloods in that effete resort.

In the meantime her father married again. His bride was Helen Meaney, the ex-Olympic diving champion, a girl only a few years older than his daughter. But this marriage ended disastrously and brought notoriety to the name of Balfe. That's why, when Sam Goldwyn offered Miss Balfe a chance to go to Hollywood as an actress, she changed her name to Sandra Shaw. Her New York friends still call her by her nickname, "Ronky."

From what different worlds these two come! Gary Cooper from Montana and Hollywood and Veronica Balfe from Southampton and Park Avenue. And it might have been just a lot of fun and parties if those marriage rumors hadn't started. But because of them, Sandra wears the lovely diamond Gary gave her and they have been entertained in New York by Sandra's elegant society friends.

And that's the story behind the news. Will they marry? Your guess is as good as mine.

I'll be as surprised as a kid who got an empty stocking for Christmas if they do get married. But I'm not infallible—Lord no!—and I'm just trembling in my shoes as I write this. Anything can happen. I may be as wet as Repeal Night. But a lady can't be shot for expressing her opinion, can she?

Little Alice White has been and gone and done it! We mean that she has finally married Cy Bartlett. Happy days, Alice and Cy!

Now a Concentrated Antiseptic Mouth Wash

Five Star
ANTISEPTIC
For MOUTH WASH, GARGLE and general use. A powerful, safe antiseptic in powdered form. Penetrating, pleasant-tasting . . . combats halitosis.
JUST MIX WITH WATER
MAKES ONE PINT
A WILDROOT PRODUCT

10c MAKES A PINT

At 5 and 10 cent stores

A WILDROOT PRODUCT
—tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau.

You Mix It With Water At Home

Thousands no longer pay high prices for mouth wash. They know that Five Star Antiseptic is safe, pleasant tasting, amazingly effective as a mouth wash or gargle, yet goes three to ten times as far.

Scientists who tested this new discovery against other well-known antiseptics were amazed at its extraordinary penetration.

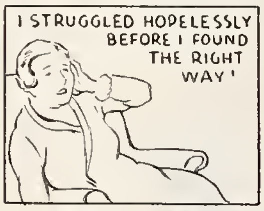
A leading bacteriologist said: "Five Star Antiseptic not only kills germs rapidly, but has a far more lasting effect in preventing bacterial growth in the mouth."

Yet because it is a powder—you mix it with water yourself—Five Star Antiseptic costs you only 10c a pint. Get a package today! Wildroot Co. Inc., Buffalo.

IN CANADA: Imperial Pint 15c, 3 Pints 35c, Wildroot Ltd., Fort Erie, N., Ont.

DARLING, PLEASE DON'T GET FAT!

MY HUSBAND'S GENTLE WARNING HURT ME SO..
IF HE ONLY KNEW HOW DESPERATELY I WAS TRYING TO REDUCE..
I WENT HUNGRY AT EVERY MEAL.. TRIED EVERY NEW REDUCING FAD..



I STRUGGLED HOPELESSLY BEFORE I FOUND THE RIGHT WAY!

"I Know It Has The Power To Reduce Fat!"

I WAS frightened. My husband thought that fat was unforgivable. Yet try as I would I could not get back my slender, youthful lines.

I tried almost everything before a friend suggested Marmola. I had heard of Marmola, of course, but I did not fully realize how effective it was.

How foolish I was to torture myself with diet, exercise, girdles and dozens of baseless fads, when Marmola employs a reducing principle that the whole scientific world recognizes. Why, doctors regularly prescribe the same ingredients. It is the outstanding fat-reducing method. It has stood test after test for years. Over 20 million boxes have been sold. Men and women swear by it. They ask for it in over 40 different countries.

And Marmola is so simple! No rigid diet watching, no exercises. Merely take 4 tablets a day. Why should anyone who wants to reduce—whether 40 pounds or 14—fail to try this delightful way that has been so thoroughly tested so many, many times? The formula is printed in every package. Ask for Marmola at any good drug store. Do not accept substitutes.

MARMOLA
The Right Way to Reduce

"POWDER GOES ON SMOOTHER THIS NEW WAY!"

New Velour Powder Puff Amazes Beauty Experts!

AT last science has developed a new puff—a puff that spreads powder smoother . . . feels softer . . . lasts longer!
DORA MAY Powder Puffs, the new creation, are just what you've wanted. Made from a specially prepared New Velour material, they do everything claimed by more expensive puffs. Even beauty experts are amazed by the remarkable service DORA MAY Puffs give. Yet they cost so little, you can always afford to carry a few "extras". DORA MAY Puffs come sterilized and cellophane wrapped . . . for your protection. THREE for 10c.

At Your 5 and 10c Store

Dora May
POWDER PUFFS
Dora May
Dora May
Dora May
3 for 10¢

GOOD SEED CHEAP

GOOD AS CAN BE GROWN. NONE BETTER AT ANY PRICE, 64 YEARS SELLING GOOD SEED

500,000 Satisfied Gardeners Annually. My 1934 catalog contains all the latest improved and standard varieties of Garden, Farm, Flower Seeds, Fruits, Bulbs and Shrubs. Over 800 illustrations with complete cultural directions for gardeners and home planters. I think it is the best catalog published in America today. Plan to have a big garden this spring. I want everybody to try my NEW SENSATION TOMATO, "King of the Earlies." Extra Large Solid Fruit, Deep Scarlet, Big Yielder, Disease Resistant. Write today for my Big 1934 Catalog and 125 seed of my NEW SENSATION TOMATO free. Send 3c stamp to cover postage.

R. H. SHUMWAY SEEDSMAN
Box 412, ROCKFORD, ILL. Established in 1870

BUNIONS Reduced Quickly

BUMP GOES DOWN!

Pain stops almost instantly! Then blessed relief. Fairyfoot gradually reduces painful, ugly bunions. Enables you to wear smaller shoes. No cumbersome appliances. No messy salves. Used on over 2,000,000 feet since 1897. Write for Free trial treatment. Fairyfoot Products Co., Chicago, Ill., 1223 S. Wabash Ave., Dept. 2712 FREE Proof

"ZORATOR"
Kills BATH ROOM Odors

Lasts several months. Sold in 10c Stores.

COSTS ONLY 10c

Simply hang Zorator inside toilet bowl, as pictured here. It quickly deodorizes air and keeps water sanitary. Patented hanger positively prevents clogging of passage should Zorator be accidentally dropped in bowl. Variety of colors and scents.

The Zoro Co., 361 W. Superior Street, Chicago

Beauty Advice

(Continued from page 6)

minutes. It's a swell idea to treat yourself to one of these professional ministrations occasionally, but for general purposes you can do it just as well as yourself.

THEN follows the shampoo—and if you don't know how to give yourself a proper shampoo after all I've told you, it's just too bad. Remember, three soapings aren't too many. I'm crazy about the soap I mentioned a month or two ago. It's a well-established brand which has just been newly packaged in a ten cent size—enough for two or three shampoos. There are six kinds to choose from, depending upon the color of your hair: blonde, brunette, titian, dark brown, medium brown and gray. Nothing in the soap, let me hasten to say, has anything to do with dyes or tints. It is simply that the blonde kind remarkably enhances the beauty of blonde hair and the other kinds do the same thing for the other kinds of hair.

I have arranged with the company which makes this soap to send you one of the small sizes—the same which are on sale in the dime stores—if you would like to try it. Please send the request to me and I will see to it that you receive your package. Be sure to mention the shade of your hair.

Some time ago, I read a most illuminating and fre-from-hooey article on beauty by a woman doctor. She stated that there is an untold amount of idiotic nonsense written and said about the hair. She claimed that you should wash your hair whenever you think it needs washing. And I'm inclined to agree with them sentiments. In fact, I've gone so far as to experiment. I have the sort of hair which looks its best right after a shampoo. When it's even mildly dirty, it has lost color and lustre and life somehow, no matter how much faithful brushing and massaging I give it. So, lately, I've been sticking it into the tub whenever I felt in the mood. And, for the life of me, I can't see that it's done any excessive drying-out and my hair certainly looks better.

Have you ever tried "making up" your hair? There's a fairly new product which is called just that—make-up for the hair—in the advertisements. It's a delightful non-sticky lotion which you comb or brush lightly through the hair and which gives your own hair-tints a much more exciting look. Comes in various tints and washes right out with the next shampoo.

WHEN you rinse your hair after a shampoo, you can do a great deal to insure its beauty for the days to come. The proper procedure is this: before you even start your shampoo, have your rinsing water all fixed. That is to say, in a jug or separate bowl, have some hot water and whatever you plan to use for that last exciting touch to the shampoo. It may be simply the juice of two lemons. Or a couple of tablespoons of vinegar. It may be one of the harmless tint rinses, all dissolved ready for use. It may be a bottle of perfume or toilet water to give a pretty scent to your hair. But have it all ready, whatever it is, so that you won't have to be groping about with your eyes full of soap, dripping water all over the floor. Rinse your clean head thoroughly under the shower or with a handy spray. Rinse it until it squeaks—actually. When you can rub your hand over your wet hair and arouse a sound that resembles a squeak, then you know it is thoroughly free from soap. Then, pop quickly from shower or spray to the wash bowl, pour in your rinse and dunk your head into it. Use the jug or bowl or glass or whatever you have at hand to pour the rinse repeatedly over your whole head.

I have been asked many times how to make the cute little feathery curls with which the movie actresses adorn themselves. Especially those attractive little curls in front of the ears. They're right nice, those little curls—they allow you to keep the rest of your coiffure rather severe by providing a softening effect that is just enough. Well, this is the way to make them.

Make a shallow half moon part from the lowest point of the temple to the point where your ear joins your hairline. Pin your long hair out of the way and hold the part you want to cut with your left hand. Now, with sharp scissors, ruff this strand of hair slightly, cutting as you ruff it. The hair should be two and a half or three inches long when cut. Wet these little strands and twist them round in a flat spit-curl. Pin through with one bobbie pin or invisible hairpin. Then, another pin is laced through the first and your curls stay firmly put until they are dry. Comb them out when they are dry—and there you are.

This has nothing to do with the hair—but have you yet tried the swell new skin cleaner I spoke about recently? It's a brisk, enlivening liquid which gets rid of oiliness and shine and treats blackheads as they deserve to be treated. In my grubbiest moments in this grubby city, it hasn't failed me yet. If you're interested, drop me a line.

Next month, I'm going to try something entirely new. You may think I've gone suddenly batty. But I'm going to write a beauty article for men. Yes, I am. And here's why I'm telling you about it: I don't for one moment expect many men to read it. They'd be too scared, the sissies. But I do expect wives, mothers, sisters and sweethearts to read it. It will contain some straightforward talk about skin and hair and keeping fit. And Lord only knows, the dear menfolks could profit by a little beauty advice, don't you think?

"Alice in Wonderland"

(Continued from page 64)

staff! The sets will take your breath away, as they took mine! Four whole fairy-tale forests were set up in the arena. Trees that grow into hands, with diamond rings on the third fingers. Trees with little staircases, windows with tiny curtains, chimneys and doors.

But—I'm sorry if I seem to harp on this, but I can't help it!—the wonderful thing about it, to me, was the way the picture seemed to open up people and let you see things in them you'd never known were there. When Gary Cooper talked to me about being the White Knight, I give you my word, he looked as if he were on his way to church. I remember, one day, strolling on to the garden set—rose trees, covered with huge red and white blossoms, fifteen feet tall. (To make Alice look tiny), Ray Hatton, Jack Oakie, and Polly Moran were sitting under one of the trees—Ray a mouse, Oakie in his Tweedle-Dum costume, about which more later, and Polly Moran covered with feathers and sporting a pair of wings. Oakie was holding Baby Le Roy—who plays the Joker in a deck of cards—on his lap. Holding Baby Le Roy, and discussing babies' diets with Polly! Oakie, the wise-guy!

FOUR weeks, five, six, seven—in the eighth week, finally, the picture was nearly done. The strain was beginning to tell. Everybody was ready to drop. But, from his canvas chair besides the cameras, Norman McLeod's voice was still coming quietly, gently—with what infinite patience. And infinite care! I saw him hold up one scene until the research department checked on all possible pronunciations of the word "brooch." I saw six three-minute scenes take three hours apiece to photograph. The dialogue was so tongue-twisty that the actors missed words; and, each time, there was a retake, so that it would be nothing less than perfection. The lines in the Mad Hatter's tea party scene, for instance, were enough to tangle anybody.

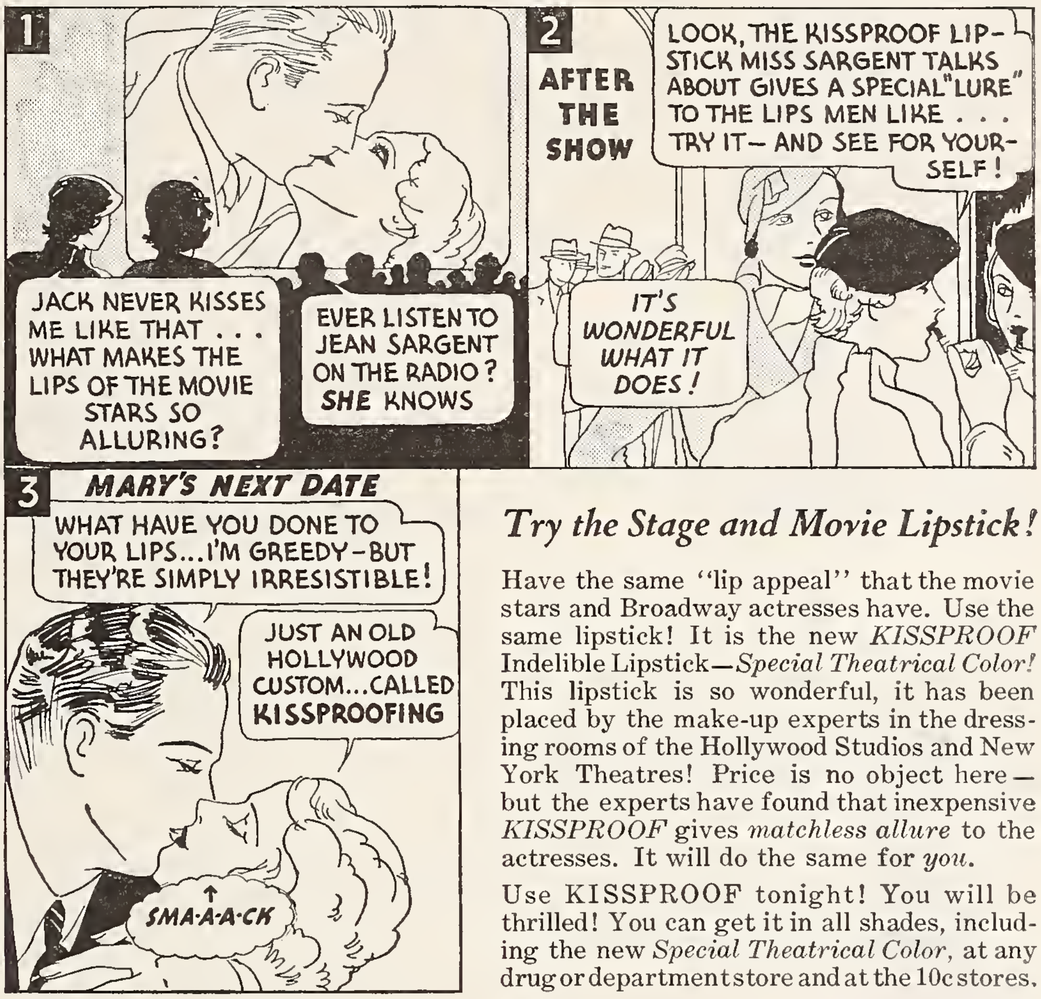
In the last week, Cary Grant showed up on the set and stood wistfully looking on from the side-lines. He had been working at another studio, and had missed out on a part. The director called him over. "Cary," he began, "I think maybe we need a man to play the Mock Turtle—"

That was as far as he got.

"What?" yelled Cary. "I'll put on a blonde wig and play Alice, if you'll let me!" He was out like a shot, on his way to the wardrobe for a costume.

Meanwhile, Louise Fazenda worked for a week straight in a costume made of rubber inner-tubes, so bulky that she couldn't sit down in it. Many of the costumes were like that, permitting no rest. Roscoe Karns and Jack Oakie, as Tweedle-Dum and Tweedle-Dee, wore pads and masks which let only their eyes show. Four days, they went,

Unkissed Mary gets "LIP ALLURE"



1
JACK NEVER KISSES ME LIKE THAT . . . WHAT MAKES THE LIPS OF THE MOVIE STARS SO ALLURING?
EVER LISTEN TO JEAN SARGENT ON THE RADIO? SHE KNOWS
2
AFTER THE SHOW
LOOK, THE KISSPROOF LIPSTICK MISS SARGENT TALKS ABOUT GIVES A SPECIAL "LURE" TO THE LIPS MEN LIKE . . . TRY IT— AND SEE FOR YOURSELF!
IT'S WONDERFUL WHAT IT DOES!
3
MARY'S NEXT DATE
WHAT HAVE YOU DONE TO YOUR LIPS...I'M GREEDY—BUT THEY'RE SIMPLY IRRESISTIBLE!
JUST AN OLD HOLLYWOOD CUSTOM...CALLED KISSPROOFING
SMA-A-A-CK

Try the Stage and Movie Lipstick!

Have the same "lip appeal" that the movie stars and Broadway actresses have. Use the same lipstick! It is the new KISSPROOF Indelible Lipstick—Special Theatrical Color! This lipstick is so wonderful, it has been placed by the make-up experts in the dressing rooms of the Hollywood Studios and New York Theatres! Price is no object here—but the experts have found that inexpensive KISSPROOF gives matchless allure to the actresses. It will do the same for you.

Use KISSPROOF tonight! You will be thrilled! You can get it in all shades, including the new Special Theatrical Color, at any drug or department store and at the 10c stores.

Kissproof Indelible LIPSTICK

MAYSIE GREIG

begins her greatest novel

"Chains of Desire"

in the February 20th

SWEETHEART STORIES

This amazing new writer, made famous almost overnight by her potent story-telling power, will completely captivate you. By all means, read "Chains of Desire." It's swell!

Delightful Love Stories

Sweetheart Stories

Combined with Cupid's Diary

10¢

Now At All Newsstands

Tint away the STREAKS of GRAY
(Test Bottle FREE)

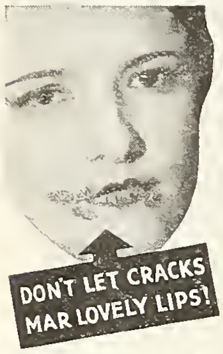
Have ever-youthful looking hair this SAFE way. Merely combing clear liquid through hair brings desired color: black, brown, auburn, blonde. Gray goes—streaks disappear. No fear of washing or rubbing off on garments. Hair stays soft, fluffy. Takes wave or curl. Ask druggist for full-sized bottle on money-back guarantee. Insist on Mary T. Goldman's. Or test it Free.

FREE TEST ~ We send complete test package Free. Snip off a lock of hair . . . Test it first this safe way. No risk. No expense. 3,000,000 women have received this test. Mail coupon.

MARY T. GOLDMAN
2321 Goldman Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

Name.......................................
Street.......................................
City..........................State.........
Color of your hair?...........................

MARY T. GOLDMAN'S
SINGLE LOCK TEST



DON'T LET CRACKS MAR LOVELY LIPS!

Treat That COLD SORE
QUICK EASY WAY!

JUST touch cracked lips and that cold sore tonight with antiseptic, penetrating Campho-Phenique. It starts to soothe pain and speed up healing instantly, and restore your lips their natural smoothness and ripe beauty. Protects against infection, too, not only on cold sores but on minor cuts, burns and similar hurts. Get a bottle of Campho-Phenique at any drug store—30c or 60c—or a trial size, 10c at any ten-cent store.

CAMPHO-PHENIQUE

DON'T CRY about CORNS

Rubbing pressure causes corns. Put a hole in springy SEALTEX bandage for the corn, wrap toe or foot. Pressure and pain go. SEALTEX sticks only to itself, not to hair, skin or cloth. 10c, 25c and 50c sizes. All Kresge stores and drug counters everywhere.

SEALTEX

My Teeth Sparkle
because I use
BORACETINE
TOOTH POWDER

STAIN DISAPPEARS LIKE MAGIC

You'll like Boracetine Tooth Powder better than any dentifrice you've ever used because, without hard brushing, this different tooth powder completely removes every trace of cigarette stain, discoloration and film. It releases harmless oxygen that safely makes teeth scrupulously clean and sparkling white. This same oxygen hardens the gums to keep them healthy.

Boracetine tastes good neutralizes acidity and goes three times as far as paste. A large 10c can, full to the top, can be purchased in any Kresge store.

Boracetine
TOOTH POWDER

(3)

Boracetine TOOTH POWDER

without taking a bite of solid food, sipping milk and soup through glass straws stuck through their masks. "I wouldn't ask my worst enemy to climb into this diving-suit," Oakie puffed at me. "But it's worth it."

And a script girl came up to Roscoe and asked, "May I have your autograph, please, Mr. Oakie?"

"How can you tell I'm Oakie?" asked Roscoe.

"By your eyes."

"O. K.," said Roscoe. "I'm not sure, myself." And he signed her book, "Sincerely, Jack Oakie."

Alison Skipworth, after wearing her breathless mask for five hours at a stretch, fainted just as she was starting a scene. They led her to a chair, and after a moment she said, "I'm all right." She stood up, and her legs gave way and fainted again. She had to go home for the day. Norman McLeod walked to the stage door with her.

"I'm terribly sorry it was so tough for you, Skippy," he told her, sincerely.

"How much more of this is there?" she asked.

"A whole day, I'm afraid."

A little pale, and more than a little shaky, Skippy gave him a grim smile. "I'll be here tomorrow!" she promised.

She was there. They were all there—and I mean that two ways!

TOWARD the very last, I talked to little Charlotte Henry—Alice. I got her off in a corner, sat her down, and said: "Now, tell me all about it."

"All about it?" She looked back toward the garden set, where a lone work-lamp gleamed, and sighed. "What can I tell you? I've been in a daze for eight weeks. Talk about Alice being in wonderland—I can't even believe it's happened to me, yet! They tell me I'm to have a trip to New York now. Tomorrow will be my first day off in two months. I'm going home and sleep, now, and tomorrow Mother and I are going to the beach and visit some friends." She smiled and looked thoughtful—if a baby in a puffed-sleeved blue organdie frock, with her hair down her back, wearing white cotton stockings and Mary Jane pumps, can look thoughtful. (She says the cotton stockings are cooler than silk and don't stick to your legs.) "I think what I'll remember longest is how sweet all the boys were to me. They played little jokes on me. Oh, funny things happened to other people, too." She giggled. "Louise Fazenda fell off her stool—they just had to prop her against it, in that costume—and she bounced all over, in those inner-tubes. She rolled around like a lost spare tire, and couldn't get up! But one of the things they did to me—I got a pebble in one of my Mary Janes, and I took it off when I went to lunch. When I came back I thought I was having a hard time getting my foot into it. They nailed it down to the floor, that's what they did!"

"I don' think that's very sweet!" I protested.

"Oh, but it was the sweet way they did it. Jack Oakie is the funniest man! I laughed and laughed at him. Once we were just getting ready to take a scene, and a light-bulb fell on the floor and blew up. It made a big bang. Just like that, Jack yelled: 'He went that way! Last I saw he was just going over that hill!' He's so quick."

Charlotte is a brave little trouper like all the rest. When they did the scene of her falling down the rabbit-hole she hurt herself, falling. Clear across the set, they heard the bone crack. "They thought they were going to have to get another Alice for sure," Charlotte relates it. They picked her up, and a prop boy went dashing away for the studio chiropractor.

"Doc!" he shouted. "That little girl in Stake 13's busted her neck."

"Then don't call me," growled the dour chiropractor. "Call the ambulance!"

It wasn't a broken neck, but she tore a ligament in her shoulder and wrenched a bone in her neck out of place. And—just like Skippy Skipworth!—Charlotte went right back to work, the moment they finished putting the adhesive tape on her.

But everybody really was sweet to her, she's right about that. Dick Arlen moved out of his dressing-room and put a pair of twin beds in it for Charlotte and her mother, so they wouldn't have to drive home every night. As Charlotte said—and it's all she needed to say, "He didn't have to do it."

Dick owns a warm spot in her heart.

"He's so sweet," she says. "You know, as the Cheshire Cat he looks just like my Pekingese puppy. His name is Puddles. My dog. I didn't want to call him Yum Yum or Fan Tan, so I named him Puddles because—well, I named him that. People say he's a very good dog, but I don't. I think he's just a mongrel. You know, when he wants to attract your attention he sits beside you and sneezes and sneezes—"

Oh, Sophisticated Hollywood!

Hollywood has shown a sweetness, a sincerity, a fineness we never knew was there. Nobody can ask for more.

WANT TO KNOW ALL ABOUT MICKEY MOUSE?

Well, you will, brethern and sistern, you will. In our next issue, we reveal the inside lowdown on the popular rodent. And, incidentally, the inside lowdown on his creator, Mister Walt Disney.

IN THE MARCH ISSUE OF MODERN SCREEN—DON'T MISS IT!

Reviews—A Tour of Today's Talkies

(Continued from page 81)

Freedonia—with Groucho as its dictator, Zeppo as Grouch's minister and Chico and Harpo (minus the harp) as spies. Harpo also does a "Paul Revere," but gets waylaid by a pretty blonde whose husband is out of town. Funniest scene: Groucho tucked in bed for the night (fancy night cap and all) eating crackers. Raquel Torres is the leading lady.

• LADY KILLER (WARNERS)

James Cagney, Mae Clark, Margaret Lindsay

JIMMY CAGNEY is at his breeziest in this fast-moving, highly-entertaining movie of a young chap who gets fired from his job as an usher and becomes a big racketeer. When his gang gets too rough he pulls out for Hollywood and joins the movies. He builds up his following by writing himself fan letters. When his old gang invade the colony and start a series of robberies among the stars, he's put on the spot as their "finger man." Mae Clarke is the moll and Margaret Lindsay the movie star. Both gals are swell. Rowdy, hilarious, blue in spots but Cagney fans are sure to like it.

AS HUSBANDS GO (FOX)

Warner Baxter, Helen Vinson

MOST of the snap and sparkle that made Rachel Crother's "As Husbands Go" good entertainment as a play was lost in bringing it to the screen, due mostly to poor direction. Production is lavish and gowns worn by Helen Vinson are particularly gorgeous, but outside of that it remains dull movie fare for the average theater-goer. The cast, including Warner Baxter, is never quite at home and therefore does not convince.

Children won't like it.

•SON OF A SAILOR (WARNERS)

Joe E. Brown, Thelma Todd, Jean Muir

A TYPICAL Joe E. Brown comedy with the star in the role of a swaggering young gob who has his big moment. Quite by mistake he finds himself the house guest of the Admiral, captures a couple of crooks (also by mistake) and becomes a national hero over night. Jean Muir and Thelma Todd contribute the fem interest. Johnny Mack Brown and Frank McHugh oke.

Young people will adore it.

LONE COWBOY (PARAMOUNT)

Jackie Cooper, Lila Lee

THANKS to Jackie Cooper, this emerges a fairly good Western. Show revolves around him as the kid whose father commits suicide and leaves him under the care of an old friend grown hard and bitter toward all mankind when his wife runs away with his foreman. In the end, Jackie wins over the old rancher and they become great pals. Lila Lee, Addison Richards and Noah Beery in the cast.

• THE THUNDERING HERD (PARAMOUNT)

Randolph Scott, Judith Allen

ZANE GREY'S story makes good Western entertainment. There are thrills aplenty, some swell battles with the Indians, fast riding, a mean villain, a gal and a hero. Randolph Scott, Harry Casey and Raymond Hatton are buffalo hunters. Judith Allen is the girl who is kidnapped and Noah Berry is the meanie. The ending is especially exciting.

GIRL WITHOUT A ROOM (PARAMOUNT)

Charles Farrell, Charles Ruggles, Marguerite Churchill

STORY of a country boy who wins a scholarship and goes to Paris to study art. He falls in with a gang of starving artists, gets ensnared by a scheming artist's model and finally clinches with a nice girl from Dixie. Charles Farrell plays the innocent art student, Marguerite Churchill is good as the girl from Dixie and Grace Bradley and Charlie Ruggles furnish the comedy. Ruggles is the best thing in the picture.

DARK HAZARD (WARNERS)

Edward G. Robinson, Genevieve Tobin, Glenda Farrell

THIS is not up to the usual Robinson vehicle. It's the usual story of a gambler, told in a spotty and uninteresting manner. Genevieve Tobin is his wife who takes the bumps along with him, but when it gets too tough, leaves him. Two years of ups and downs and they are reunited with Robinson promising to go straight. Edw. G. gives a fine, sympathetic performance and is ably assisted by Genevieve Tobin, Glenda Farrell and George Meeker.

"Set a Thief To Catch a Thief!"

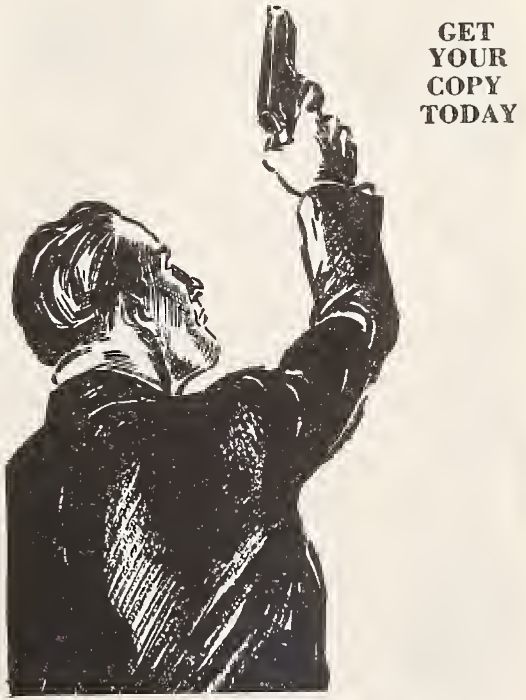
• That was sleuth Crowder's method. But how to catch a murderer . . .? A killer who deals death before your very eyes, yet leaves no trace!

• Could Bob Crowder continue his old crime-detecting method of fighting fire with fire?

• Earle Stanley Gardner gives you the amazing answer in his most hair-raising novelette, "Jack of Death," complete in the February

ALL DETECTIVE MAGAZINE

AT ALL NEWSSTANDS



GET YOUR COPY TODAY

Relieves Teething Pains
WITHIN 1 MINUTE

WHEN your baby suffers from teething pains, just rub a few drops of Dr. Hand's Teething Lotion on the sore, tender, little gums and the pain will be relieved within one minute.

Dr. Hand's Teething Lotion is the prescription of a famous baby specialist, contains no narcotics and has been used by mothers for almost fifty years. It is strongly recommended by doctors and nurses instead of the unsanitary teething ring.

JUST RUB IT ON THE GUMS

DR. HAND'S
Teething Lotion

Buy Dr. Hand's from your druggist today

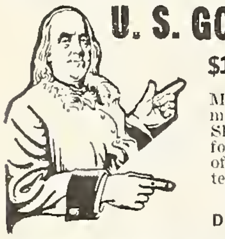
New! Engel Pocket Art Corners

ACTUAL SIZE

The real thing for mounting Snapshots, Cards, Stamps, etc. No paste needed. Neat, easy to use for mounting prints tight or loose. Sold at photo supply and album counters or send 10¢ today for pkg. of 100 and free samples.

10¢ BUYS 100

Engel Art Corners Co., Chicago, Ill.,
Address Dept. 63 P - 4717 North Clark St.



U. S. GOVERNMENT JOBS

$1260 to $3300 a year

MEN—WOMEN 18 to 50. Common Education usually sufficient. Short hours. Write immediately for free 32-page book, with list of positions and full particulars telling how to get them.

FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. T-315 Rochester, N. Y.

NEW LOW PRICES on GOODRICH · Firestone
GOOD YEAR
U.S., FISK and OTHERS

$2.15
29 x 4.40 - 21

SAVE ON YOUR TIRES

And we defy anyone to excel our quality. Every standard brand tire reconstructed by our superior, modern method is positively guaranteed to give full 12 months' service under severest road conditions. This guarantee is backed by the entire financial resources of an old reliable company. Member N R A. Today's lowest prices.

YOU CAN'T BEAT OUR PRICES

BALLOON TIRES

Size Rim	Tires	Tubes
29x4.40-21	$2.15	$0.85
29x4.50-20	2.35	.85
30x4.50-21	2.40	.85
28x4.75-19	2.45	.95
29x4.75-20	2.50	.95
29x5.00-19	2.85	1.05
30x5.00-20	2.85	1.05
28x5.25-18	2.90	1.15
29x5.25-19	2.95	1.15
30x5.25-20	2.95	1.15
31x5.25-21	3.25	1.15
28x5.50-18	3.35	1.15
29x5.50-19	3.35	1.15
30x6.00-18	3.40	1.15
31x6.00-19	3.40	1.15
32x6.00-20	3.45	1.25
33x6.00-21	3.65	1.25
32x6.50-20	3.75	1.35

Reg. CORD TIRES

Size	Tires	Tubes
30x3	$2.25	$0.65
30x3½	2.35	.75
31x4	2.95	.85
32x4	2.95	.85
33x4	2.95	.85
34x4	3.25	.85
32x4½	3.35	1.15
33x4½	3.45	1.15
34x4½	3.45	1.15
30x5	3.65	1.35
33x5	3.75	1.45
35x5	3.95	1.55

All Other Sizes

WE WANT DEALERS

All TUBES GUARANTEED Brand NEW

SEND ONLY $1 DEPOSIT on each tire ordered. We ship balance C. O. D. 5 per cent discount for full cash with order. Any tire failing to give 12 months' service replaced at half price.

GOODWIN TIRE & RUBBER CO. Dept. 573
1840 S. MICHIGAN AVE. CHICAGO, ILL.

FREE "RAY-O-VAC" Flashlight Lantern With Order for 2 Tires

Complete with batteries and bulb, ready to use. Household and automobile necessity. Gives 600 foot light beam. Adjustable handle.

12 MONTHS WRITTEN BOND GIVEN WITH EVERY TIRE

MEMBER N.R.A

Between You and Me

(Continued from page 13)

I'll go see 'em! But right now I am so content with having seen and heard those three musical numbers at a nominal fee, that wild horses couldn't drag me to a legitimate show again; not even the bald-headed row with a free ticket could tempt me!

Grrr!

FRANKLIN DAVIS of Charlottesville, Va., is that mad:

I'm mad, really mad! Why I'm astonished at the producers yelling for new faces for the screen when they've got loads of actors and actresses right in Hollywood with more ability than all the newcomers have wrapped together. All they need is a second chance. They had their first chance in the "silent" days and made good, but when the talkies came in the producers dropped the established players and grabbed all the stage players they could find. Just look at what they've got now. A bunch of dried up turnips! Give us back such stars as Alice Joyce, Charles Ray, Margaret Mann and Blanche Sweet, especially. Now come on, you producers, and give the old favorites a real chance again. You fans can also help by boosting them. They deserve it!

(Well, our movie stars have been called a heap o' names. But we'll bet turnip is something new.)

Do You Know the Name of a Good Laundry?

MRS. JAMES DAVIS of Syracuse, N. Y., thinks pictures should have their mouths washed out with soap:

How much longer before producers wake up to the fact that a whole lot of people are getting thoroughly fed up on the type of pictures that have been passed out of late?

Low, lewd, degrading, suggestive both in line and scene. The marriage ceremony is considered of no importance. Drinking and drunken orgies make many pictures absolutely disgusting. Has Big Chief Hays fallen down on the job?

(Well, lady, there is "Little Women." There is also "Alice in Wonderland." And, judging by their popularity, there'll be more like 'em, we're sure. By the way, what do you think of Mae West?)

And—On the Other Hand—

MRS. GEORGE B., of Utica, N. Y., admits she likes a spicy picture—if it's properly done:

I've been married twenty-nine years. I have two grown-up children. While I'm not strait-laced, I'm certainly not modern—as that overdone word is interpreted. Immorality and smuttiness make me shudder. But I do like Mae West—and so does my husband—and I don't care who knows it. We had a riot of a time at "I'm No Angel." The general consensus of opinion of the audience was "Well, she's just as lowdown as she can be. She says the most awful things! But she is as funny as the dickens."

And that, I think, is the whole situation in a nutshell. Mae can get away with it. She pulls some perfectly terrible, double-meaningful remark—and then makes a wisecrack about it just quick enough to take the bad taste away. I'm for her—and, believe me, I never thought I should be. What's her next picture?

("It Ain't No Sin" is the tentative—and beautifully suggestive—title scheduled at the moment.)

He Wants Wynyard!

FRANKLIN JONES of Seattle, Washington, writes:

Aw, shucks! A grand gal comes to Hollywood, makes a couple of pictures, and then scoots back to England. Diana Wynyard, I mean. She was a real actress. I go to the movies to see a good play with good people in it—not to gawp at some cutie and wish I'd meet a girl like her. Is Diana Wynyard ever coming back—and when?

(She's in Hollywood right this minute, Jones old chap. She's going to make a picture for RKO but what it will be we can't say as yet.)

A Carload of Orchids for Norma

ESTHER E. GROMLICH of Hamburg, Penna., would adore to meet her:

I have just read the article "What Stars Would You Like to Meet?" Gee, I certainly was disappointed in Faith Baldwin for not mentioning Norma Shearer. Why, if I had a chance to go to Hollywood, Norma would be the first star I'd want to meet. I admire her pluck for staying with her husband, walking away from the public as she did. If I ever get a chance to meet her, no cop in the country is stopping me!

Please address all letters to
The Editor, MODERN SCREEN
149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Ruth Chatterton, George Brent and Ralph Forbes give their answer in our next issue to Homer Croy's story on Hollywood feuds, which appeared recently in these pages. It's a frank, revealing answer—you'll want to read it!

Directory of Pictures

(Continued from page 107)

MARY STEVENS, M.D. (Warners)—Story of a gal doctor. Kay Francis and Lyle Talbot. Rather dull and tearful.

● THE MASQUERADER (United Artists)—Ronald Colman in a dual role involving politics and romance. Elissa Landi plays opposite. Good—children under 16 will be bored.

MASTER OF MEN (Columbia)—Reviewed in department on page 48.

● THE MAYOR OF HELL (Warners)—Yarn about tough youngsters in a reform school. James Cagney and Frankie Darro. Good—kids will think so, too.

THE MIDNIGHT CLUB (Paramount)—A little drama of London jewel thieves. Clive Brook, Helen Vinson, Alan Mowbray, Allison Skipworth and George Raft. Fair—nothing in it for the tots.

MIDSHIPMAN JACK (RKO)—A story of naval cadets. Bruce Cabot and Betty Furness. Good of its kind—for children and grown-ups.

● ● MORNING GLORY (RKO)—The backstage life of a little country girl struggling to become a great actress. Katharine Hepburn, Adolphe Menjou, Doug Fairbanks, Jr., and Mary Duncan. Excellent—send the tots to a Western.

● MY WEAKNESS (Fox)—A musical about a charming little Cinderella. She wins a bet and—love. You see Lilian Harvey for the first time in this. Delightful and entertaining for the whole family from oldest to youngest.

● MY WOMAN (Columbia)—A human little yarn about a devoted wife who gets her husband his "big chance." He becomes a terrific success. Then comes the usual complication of another woman. Helen Twelvetrees, Victor Jory and Claire Dodd. Rather good—boring for youngsters.

● ● NO MARRIAGE TIES (RKO)—Richard Dix as a cagy advertising man and a still more cagy bachelor. Very good—young folks under 16 won't care for it.

OLESON'S BIG MOMENT (Fox)—An apartment house, its janitor, lots of tenants, gangsters and a love affair make this a fairly enjoyable little comedy. El Brendel, Walter Catlett and Barbara Weeks. Good slap-stick comedy.

● ● ONE SUNDAY AFTERNOON (Paramount)—Rival love, hatred, revenge and a narrowly averted murder. Gary Cooper, Neil Hamilton and Fay Wray. Excellent drama—not for children under 16, though.

● ONE MAN'S JOURNEY (RKO)—Lionel Barrymore in a characterization of a doctor who sacrifices a brilliant career to practice in a little country town that needs him. Joel McCrea, Dorothy Jordan and May Robson complete an excellent cast. Splendid drama—rather dull for tots.

● ● ONLY YESTERDAY (Universal)—A terrifically human drama of a prewar romance. Comes the war. Finally its end and the return of the lover. But he doesn't even recognize his sweetheart nor know that he is the father of her child. Margaret Sullavan, a newcomer, is superb. John Boles plays opposite. Very, very good—nothing in it for any of the young folks.

● PADDY THE NEXT BEST THING (Fox)—Janet Gaynor in a very charming and impish role of the daughter of an Irish major. She rescues her sister from a marriage for money, falls in love with the suitor herself and saves the family fortune and face. Warner Baxter, Margaret Lindsay and Walter Connolly support her. Entertainment for everybody in the family.

● PILGRIMAGE (Fox)—Story of a mother's remorse for separating her son from the girl he loved. Norman Foster, Marian Nixon and Henrietta Crosman. Weepy.

● ● THE POWER AND THE GLORY (Fox)—Unusual picture. It begins with the suicide of an unpopular railroad man. Then the story of his life is told in flashbacks. The best thing Spencer Tracy has done. Interesting and different—too advanced for children under 16.

PRIVATE DETECTIVE (Warners) — The excellent acting of William Powell is wasted in this yarn about crooks. Only fair.

● ● THE PRIZEFIGHTER AND THE LADY (M-G-M)—The prizefighter walked off with another man's sweetie, but she walks out on him when success and feminine flattery go to his head. He flies into a rage and goes on a drinking orgy. Then comes the night of the big fight—. It's an old plot, but treated in a most refreshing way. You will enjoy this one with Max Baer and Primo Carnera in the ring. Myrna Loy is the girl. Verra good—kids will go for the fight.

● PROFESSIONAL SWEETHEART (RKO)—A radio entertainer is much publicized as America's Purity Girl. She isn't really, but how she wants to be when her Kentucky hick lover comes along. Ginger Rogers and Norman Foster. Good—for the whole family.

● ● THE PRIVATE LIFE OF HENRY VII (United Artists)—Charles Laughton portraying the riotous and colorful life of that much married and individualist king of England. You must see this one—and take the kids.

● RAFTER ROMANCE (RKO)—George Sidney, Norman Foster and Marian Nixon in a comedy about two young things who can't pay their rent. Roommate complications develop when an obliging landlord rents the same room to them both. Good amusement for everybody.

● ● REUNION IN VIENNA (M-G-M)—John Barrymore and Diana Wynyard in a very sophisticated comedy. Excellent—but put the tots to bed that night.

THE RIGHT TO ROMANCE (RKO)—Reviewed in department on page 48.

ROME EXPRESS (Universal) — Melodramatic love romance on a Continental express. Conrad Veidt and Esther Ralston. Youngsters will enjoy the excitement and action.

ROMAN SCANDALS (Goldwyn-United Artists)—Reviewed in department on page 48.

● SATURDAY'S MILLIONS (Universal) — Robert Young as a smart alec football star. Just before a game he is kidnapped, but he fights his way out and in spite of a broken wrist plays the game. Leila Hyams, Mary Doran, Andy Devine, Mary Carlisle and Johnny Mack Brown are also in the cast. Good football yarn—kids will think it swell.

SECRET OF THE BLUE ROOM (Universal)—There is a mysterious room in a castle and everyone who sleeps therein is murdered. Lionel Atwill, Paul Lukas and Gloria Stuart. Very scary—not for young tots.

SHANGHAI MADNESS (Fox)—Spencer Tracy as a United States Army officer who disobeys an unfair command and is discharged. Only fair.

SHOULD LADIES BEHAVE (M-G-M)—Reviewed in department on page 48.

SITTING PRETTY (Paramount)—Reviewed in department on page 48.

SMOKY (Fox)—Reviewed in department on page 48.

● SOLITAIRE MAN (M-G-M)—Story of a gang of high powered jewel thieves traveling in a fast passenger plane. Most exciting and thrilling—kids will like it.

SON OF A SAILOR (Warners)—Reviewed in department on page 48.

● SONG OF SONGS (Paramount)—Marlene Dietrich and Brian Aherne in an emotional love story. You might like it—not for the young folks, though.

S.O.S. ICEBERG (Universal)—A picture that gives you an idea of what explorers suffer and endure for the sake of science. This deals with an expedition to Greenland. Rod LaRocque, Leni Riefenstahl and Ernst Udet. Spectacular Arctic scenery—educational for children.

SPECIAL INVESTIGATOR (Universal)—A mystery that isn't solved even at the end of the picture in spite of the police department and a brilliant reporter. Skeets Gallagher, Alan Dinehart and Wynne Gibson. Weak and boring.

● ● STAGE MOTHER (M-G-M)—A daughter's happiness, love and marriage are almost sacrificed to a determined mother's desire that her child should become a great actress. Alice Brady and Maureen O'Sullivan give an excellent performance as mother and daughter. Franchot Tone and Phillips Holmes are also in the cast. Excellent—rather dull for youngsters under 16.

● SUNSET PASS (Paramount)—A peppy Western. Kids will okay this one with a bang.

● ● THIS DAY AND AGE (Paramount)—A vigorous and extremely emotional drama of high school kids who take the law into their own hands when the courts fail in meting out justice. Excellent—for young and old.

THE THUNDERING HERD (Paramount)—Reviewed in department on page 48.

● TOO MUCH HARMONY (Paramount)—Speed, action, gags and lots of crooning. Bing Crosby, Jack Oakie, Skeets Gallagher, Judith Allen, Lil Tashman and Ned Sparks. A good entertainer for the whole family.

TO THE LAST MAN (Paramount)—A Western dealing with family feuds. The love interest is provided by Esther Ralston and Randolph Scott. Only fair—tots will enjoy the excitement.

● ● TURN BACK THE CLOCK (M-G-M)—Story of a man who desires to relive his life. He suddenly gets his wish. But he soon finds out it is not all he wished and planned. Lee Tracy, Peggy Shannon, Otto Krueger and Mae Clarke. Very good—children under 16 will not understand it.

● ● VOLTAIRE (Warners)—George Arliss portrays that great writer, cynic and wit of the 18th century. Reginald Owen, Alan Mowbray and Margaret Lindsay are also in it. Very good—informative for children over 14.

● ● THE WAY TO LOVE (Paramount)—Maurice Chevalier in an exceedingly charming and suitable role as a lovable, carefree tramp of the streets of Paris. His sole ambition is to be a guide. He gets his wish and love thrown into the bargain. Swell entertainment and some knockout musical numbers—for everybody.

● ● WHEN LADIES MEET (M-G-M)—Not a love triangle but a quadrangle this time. Ann Harding, Myrna Loy, Robert Montgomery and Frank Morgan, with Alice Brady to make it all the more entertaining. Amusing and sophisticated comedy—not for children.

● WHEN STRANGERS MARRY (Columbia)—Story of a spoiled society deb (Fay Wray) and a young engineer (Jack Holt) who takes her to Africa. Good—not for youngsters under 16.

WHITE WOMAN (Paramount) Charles Laughton as a very repulsive Cockney who has become a power in the African jungle. He shelters criminals and escaped convicts only to use them for his own purposes. To his shelter come Carole Lombard, Kent Taylor and Charles Bickford. Monotonous and boring.

● WILD BOYS OF THE ROAD (Warners)—A tragedy of what happens to the youth of America during a depression. You should see this. Older children could be permitted to see it.

● ● THE WORLD CHANGES (Warners)—The story of a man's life. Beginning with his lowly birth in a log cabin, his eventual rise to great financial success and his marriage to an ambitious woman. Then come unhappiness and grievous disappointment in his good-for-nothing sons. The picture is concluded with his death. Paul Muni, Mary Astor, Aline MacMahon, Guy Kibbee, Donald Cook and Alan Mowbray. An excellent picture for the whole family.

THE WORST WOMAN IN PARIS (Fox)—She isn't so terrible. She is simply a kept woman who becomes bored with her lover and breaks with him. Falls in love with an innocent lad, but eventually returns to her old lover when he has a sudden financial failure. Benita Hume, Adolphe Menjou, Harvey Stephens and Helen Chandler. Only fair.

Prevent WINTER SKIN~ with these TWO CREAMS

Does your skin become chapped and rough—the natural oil dried out—during the winter months? Then start now to keep it soft and fresh with Dixie Deb Cold Cream and Dixie Deb Skin Nourishing Cream.

These two magic creams are used for these purposes by southern girls—famous for their lovely complexions. You'll see a change over night.

COLD CREAM
Dixie Deb
SKIN NOURISHING CREAM
Dixie Deb

10c EACH AT BETTER CHAIN STORES

Because we sell millions of jars of these exquisite creams we can offer these large sizes at this low price.

DIXIE DEB
Quality Cosmetics
NEW YORK ATLANTA DALLAS

Make Money at Home! Experience unnecessary, we tell you how. Big demand! Write for Mushroom Book free.
American Mushroom Industries, Ltd.
331 Woolnough Bldg., Toronto, Ont.
EARN up to $25 A WEEK or More

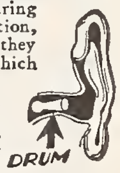
Grow Mushrooms IN YOUR CELLAR OR SHED

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

It peels off aged skin in fine particles until all defects such as tan, freckles, oiliness and liver spots disappear. Skin is then soft, clear, velvety and face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out your hidden beauty. To remove wrinkles quickly dissolve one ounce Powdered Saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel and use daily. At all drug stores.

DEAFNESS IS MISERY

Many people with defective hearing and Head Noises enjoy conversation, go to Theatre and Church because they use Leonard Invisible Ear Drums which resemble Tiny Megaphones fitting in the Ear entirely out of sight. No wires, batteries or head piece. They are inexpensive. Write for booklet and sworn statement of the inventor who was himself deaf.



A. O. LEONARD, Inc., Suite 986, 70 5th Ave., New York

REMOVE FAT

From any part you wish reduced. No Equipment necessary—Your money back if you are not satisfied.

A SAFE SURE WAY LANOLA CREAM AND METHOD quickly and safely reduces double chins, arms, bust, hips, legs and other parts of body.

LARGE JAR NOW ONLY 60c Two Jars For $1
NOTHING MORE TO BUY

LANOLA, Dept. K-6, 1851 Washington Ave., New York City. Please send Lanola Cream and Method at reduced price. I will pay postman 60c plus few cents postage. My money will be refunded if not pleased.

Name..
Address..

What Is Wrong with Your Skin?

Read This Beauty Secret

Does your mirror show that you have a dull or blemished skin? Any pimples?

What you may need is a little calcium. Taken in the form of Stuart's Calcium Wafers you have an easy way to correct faulty elimination of the bodily wastes which cause so much complexion trouble. These little wafers also act as a stimulus to skin vigor, help to make richer, redder blood and to give the soft, rosy effect of youth. Keep the skin clean outside but also let Stuart's Calcium Wafers do their work inside for beauty that can never be rivalled by "makeup".

Use them for a few days and learn by experience how quickly they may bring renewed charm and brilliance to your complexion. Try them without cost. Send the coupon.

STUART'S CALCIUM WAFERS
AT ALL DRUG STORES: 10c and 60c

FREE SAMPLE COUPON

A sample package sufficient to prove the value to you of Stuart's Calcium Wafers will be sent you if you mail this coupon to the Stuart Co., Dept. 32-G, Marshall, Mich.

Name ______________________

Address ______________________

Town ______________________

ANY PHOTO ENLARGED

Size 8x10 inches or smaller if desired. Same price for full length or bust form, groups, landscapes, pet animals, etc., or enlargements of any part of group picture. Safe return of original photo guaranteed.

47c

SEND NO MONEY Just mail photo or snapshot (any size) and within a week you will receive your beautiful life-like enlargement, guaranteed fadeless. Pay postman 47c plus postage—or send 49c with order and we pay postage. Big 16x20-inch enlargement sent C.O.D. 78c plus postage or send 80c and we pay postage. Take advantage of this amazing offer now. Send your photos today. Specify size wanted.

STANDARD ART STUDIOS
908 West Lake Street, Dept. 1324-B, CHICAGO, ILL.

Be Charming

A BOOKLET WITHOUT COST—

"The Smart Point of View"

Margery Wilson's personalized training by correspondence enhances personality, gives you poise, conversational ease, charming manners, finish, grace—the smart point of view.

To receive the Booklet and "Charm-Test" write to

MARGERY WILSON
1148 Fifth Ave. 4-B New York

How BLONDES hold their sweethearts

MEN STAY in love with the blonde who makes the most of her hair. She does it with Blondex, the powdery shampoo that sets light hair aglow with new lustrous beauty—keeps it golden-bright and radiantly gleaming. Brings back real blonde gleam to stringy, faded light hair—without injurious chemicals. Blondex bubbles instantly into a frothy, searching foam that routs out every bit of scalp dust—stimulates hair roots. Leaves hair soft and silky. Let Blondex make your hair unforgettably alluring. Blondex comes in two sizes—the NEW, inexpensive 25c package and the economical $1.00 bottle. Try it today and see the difference. At all good drug, dept., and chain stores. Have you tried Blondex Wave Set Powder? Doesn't darken light hair—not sticky—only 35c.

NRA
WE DO OUR PART

New Men! Where Are They?

(Continued from page 41)

fighting except purely in an amateur capacity. What a variety of jobs he had! In oil fields, on tramp steamers, in surveying parties and he even served in the National Guard. He is now, as you know, married to Adrienne Ames.

Bing Crosby's career, that finally shot him to the top as a radio crooner, is too well known to be repeated here. Odd jobs as a property boy in a Spokane theatre, law studies, glee club, dance orchestra, vaudeville engagements and then as one of Paul Whiteman's Rhythm Boys. His voice endeared him and made him famous, but on the screen one hears that voice, too. He is a handsome lad and a good comedian.

Preston Foster—a giant with a beautiful baritone voice—came from grand opera. William Gargan has a number of years of stock and Broadway productions to his credit. And then there is Victor Jory, born in Alaska and filled with a spirit of adventure that took him all over the country and made him at one time the lightweight champion of British Columbia. He was well known there as a boxer and wrestler. Varied and colorful were his adventures. He—this boxer and wrestler—once played the role of John the Baptist in the Hollywood Pilgrimage play. I'm sure you remember him in "I Loved You Wednesday" in which he displayed high calibre acting ability.

OTTO KREUGER is one of my favorite stage stars. He is possessed of a devastating smile and a beautiful speaking voice and is a splendid performer on both stage and screen. I remember him well in "Alias Jimmy Valentine" and in "Will Shakespeare," a short lived play which was one of the most beautiful things I ever saw. In it, too, I saw Katherine Cornell for the first time.

Kreuger's life has been exciting, for he has travelled much and seen active war service. In films he has had one rôle after another and in "The Prize Fighter and the Lady," I caught myself wishing that the Lady would return to him instead of the Prize Fighter. He also appeared, I am proud to say, in "Beauty For Sale," made from my own book, "Beauty."

And then there is the romantic young actor from overseas, Francis Lederer. Born of humble Czecho-Slovakian parents, he felt the urge for the theatre when he was thirteen, but his father and mother both announced that he was no son of theirs if he yielded to that urge. He got a job selling women's dress goods and tried to give his vitality to the organization of a pacifist party (his brother had been killed in the war) but he found few sympathizers amongst the fiery Czechs. His desire for self expression could not be stilled and in Central Europe, London and America he became a matineé idol. Now he is in Hollywood, hailed as a great romantic actor, yet in his first American film he disguises his handsomeness with the costume and hair dress of an Eskimo. That's in "Man of Two Worlds."

Douglass Montgomery—just recently the Laurie of "Little Women"—has the soul and fire of a poet. Los Angeles born and educated, a boy of good family, he deserted school to join the Pasadena Community Players when he was just fourteen. Randolph Scott is another young actor from this group. He was an engineer before he turned theatrical. He is a virile, dominant young man who, when he first arrived in Hollywood, set half of filmdom's feminine hearts to fluttering.

Lyle Talbot was romantically considerate enough to be born Lisle Talbot Hollywood. Yes, that is his real name. His parents were troupers and Lyle's youth was peppered by the thrills of the theatre where, during vacations, he played in one of his father's companies.

THE romance of chance has made Kent Taylor interesting. He was working in a business office in Los Angeles—an office organized by himself and his father, when he was asked to partake in a Paramount screen test as a favor. He did so and—P.S. He got the job, without having asked for it.

Then there's Robert Young, whose fine work you all love as much as I do.

I could tell you about more of these new men but what's the use? You can see that none of them lack anything, apparently, of which stars are made. They are all handsome, charming and they can all act. What is more their lives have been, for the most part, as adventurous and exciting and interesting as Clark Gable's. So what's the trouble?

Mind you, I'm not casting aspersions at any of them. I like them all, some better than others, perhaps, but I think they are all good. Why aren't they romantic material of the sensational "box office" variety?

There isn't one who is a potential Valentino. Not one who can ever hope to have the worship and adulation of women lavished hysterically upon him. Perhaps none of them want that. I don't know. I only know that something that Valentino had, they lack.

There isn't one who is a Wallace Reid, a Francis X. Bushman, a Ramon Novarro, a John Gilbert or a Richard Barthelmess—all actors who have been able to stand on their own feet as tremendous "box office" attractions.

What was it, for instance, that Valentino actually had? He wasn't better looking than a dozen others then and now. Nor was he so well built as many, as far as mere physique goes. He was distinctly Latin in type, a good actor, but not a genius by any manner of means. But there was something in his personality, some subtle force that emanated from the screen which made him appeal to the imagination of hundreds of thousands of women. Not so long ago the producers told you that George Raft would rival Valentino. Did he? Goodness, no; Johnnie Weissmuller, too, was touted as the great male box office bet. Well . . .

AND now the most promising runner-up is Max Baer. In one picture, "The Prizefighter and the Lady" he was great, because he was utterly natural. But can he enact any other type of rôle? I doubt it.

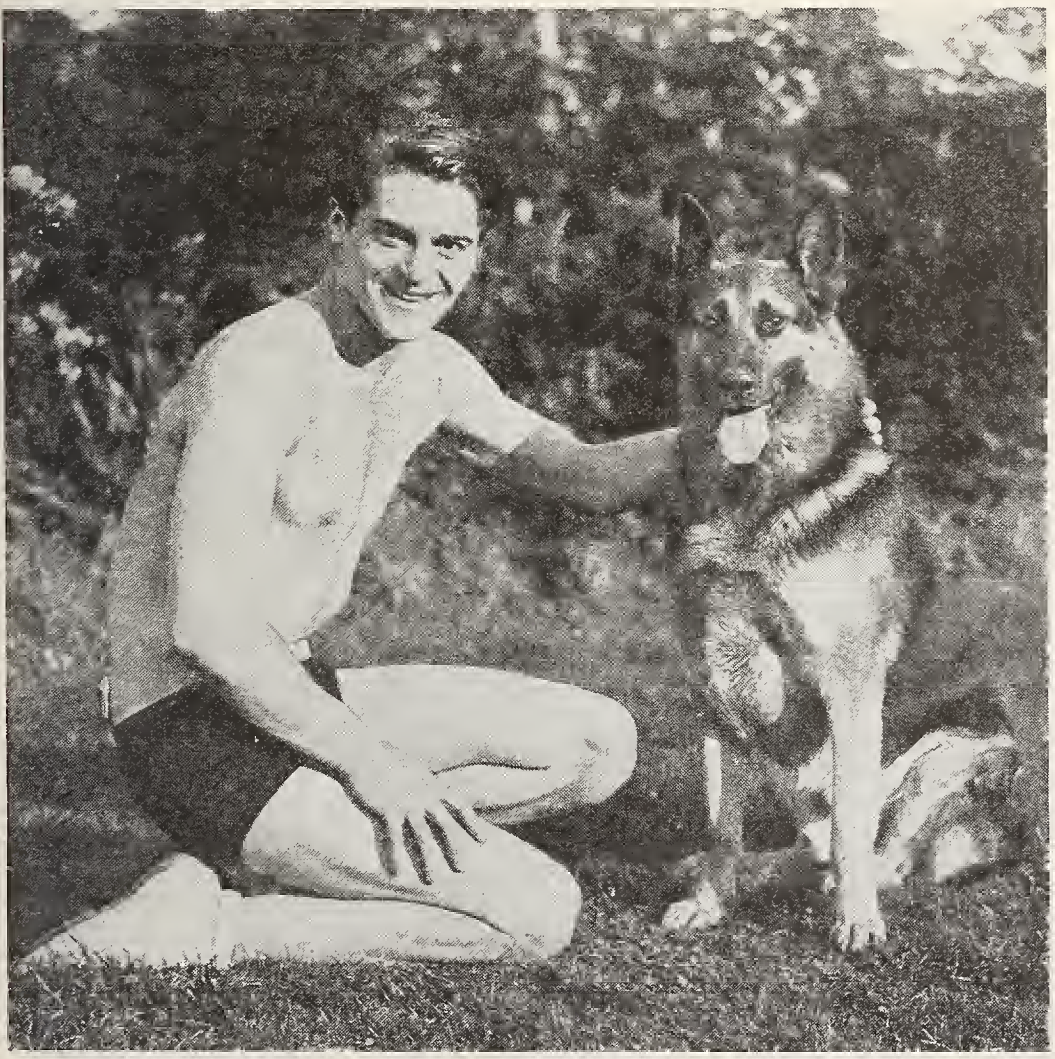
Handsome, strong and interesting as they are, the men of the screen pale into insignificance beside the stars whose leads they are. The lads play second fiddle.

Why? Why?

I believe it is because film audiences are mainly composed of women and we women are interested in our own sex. We like stories about us, films about us, experiences that touch us. We suffer with our women stars, fail with them, succeed with them, love with them and see ourselves in other circumstances through them. The male leads are all very well. They cause our hearts to flutter. No doubt, they have their fans and their fan mail and their pictures repose on dressing tables and hang on walls. But the audience is englamored by the women of the screen. Men are in the audience, too, of course (and they don't give a continental for the men players) but it's the women mainly who spend their money at the box office. The elderly woman who leaves the theatre—and perhaps she's myself—or the girl who leaves the theatre—and maybe she's you—have been seeing life through the eyes of the woman on that screen. We come to the theatre to see life through the star's eyes—a woman's eyes—and that's why the great smashing romantic box office successes in Hollywood are women. They don't have to be Hepburns either. They can be Dresslers. And how!

But new men . . . Where are they? . . . and if the studios find them, will it matter? Haven't we outgrown the Valentino days? Aren't women more concerned with the lives of women, shadows on the screen; my life, your life, as it might have been, as something one remembers, as something for which one hopes, or as something one dreads? There on that screen I am—and all women are—as I used to be, as I wanted to be. Memory. Frustration. Escape. And this is given us by the women stars. Not by the men. Perhaps we are returning to the matriarchy in which men are only secondary to women. Who knows. Personally, I hope not. But—

Where's your 1934 Valentino?



The gentleman in the trunks is Francis Lederer—the certified Czech. (So sorry!) The noble looking animal is his best pal. The M. Lederer, hailed as a European sensation, will have a chance to do his stuff for an American public in "Man of Two Worlds."

"nothing like it for keeping shoes NEW"

Economical
•
Easy to use
•
Does not rub off
•
7 popular shades

Realshine TRADE MARK BLACK SHOE POLISH

A few minutes a week keeps shoes ALWAYS NEW

Realshine

At Your 5 & 10c Store
REALSHINE CO., Inc.
Galveston, Texas

10¢

EVERY DROP A REAL SHINE!

Consult Yogi Alpha
About Your FUTURE

What do the next 12 months hold for YOU? Yogi Alpha, internationally known psychologist and astrologer, who has amazed thousands by his uncanny predictions, offers a 2500 word Giant Astrological Reading, based on your sign in the Zodiac, giving you predictions month by month with exact days, dates and happenings for 1934. Consult it before making any changes in business, signing papers, love, marriage, employment, speculation, health, accidents, lucky days, travel, etc. J. T. writes, "You have given me new faith and hope." M. B. writes, "Everything you predicted came true." R. M. writes, "Have found your forecast absolutely correct. It seems uncanny that one can have that power." Send only 50c and exact birth date for your complete Astrological Forecast. Numerology Reading will be included FREE. Money returned if not satisfied. Mail coupon NOW.

FREE
300 WORD NUMEROLOGY READING with order for Astrological Reading

Big 1934 Reading Only 50c

YOGI ALPHA, Box 1411, Dept. D-7, San Diego, Calif.
Enclosed is 50c for your Giant Astrological Reading for 1934. My money returned if not satisfactory. A 300 word Numerology Reading will be included FREE.
Name.................. Birthdate..................
Address..
City........................... State...........
If you have a friend who wishes a reading, send $1 for TWO Readings.

Directory of Players

(Continued from page 85)

CUMMINGS, CONSTANCE: Married to Benn W. Levy. Born in Seattle, Wash., May 15. Twentieth Century player. Featured in "Broadway Through a Keyhole." Working in "Trouble Shooter."

DANIELS, BEBE: Married to Ben Lyon. Born in Dallas, Texas, January 14. Warner Bros. star. Starred in "Cocktail Hour," Columbia; "Counsellor-At-Law," Universal.

DAVIES, MARION: Unmarried. Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., January 1. M-G-M star. Starred in "Peg o' My Heart." Working in "Going Hollywood." Next is "Operator 13."

DAVIS, BETTE: Married to Harmon O. Nelson. Born in Boston, Mass., April 5. Warner Bros. star. Starred in "Bureau of Missing Persons," "The Shakedown." Working in "Fashion Plate."

DEE, FRANCES: Married to Joel McCrea. Born in New York City, November 26. Fox player. Featured in "Little Women," RKO; "Blood Money," 20th Century; "Rodney," RKO.

DEL RIO, DOLORES: Married to Cedric Gibbons. Born in Mexico City, August 3. RKO star. Starred in "Flying Down to Rio." Next is "Wonder Bar," Warner Bros.

DIETRICH, MARLENE: Married to Rudolph Seiber. Born in Berlin, Germany, December 27. Paramount star. Starred in "Song of Songs." Working in "Catherine the Great."

DIX, RICHARD: Divorced from Winifred Coe. Born in St. Paul, Minn., July 18. RKO star. Starred in "The Great Jasper," "No Marriage Ties," "Forever Faithful."

DRESSLER, MARIE: Unmarried. Born in Cobourg, Canada, November 9th. M-G-M star. Starred in "Tugboat Annie," "Christopher Bean." Next is "Living in a Big Way."

DUNN, JAMES: Unmarried. Born in New York City, November 2. Fox player. Featured in "From Arizona to Broadway;" "Take a Chance," Paramount. Working in "Jimmy and Sally."

DUNNE, IRENE: Married to Dr. E. F. Griffin. Born in Louisville, Ky., July 14. RKO star. Starred in "The Silver Cord," "Ann Vickers," "If I Were Free." Next is "Age of Innocence."

DURANTE, JAMES: Married. Born in New York City, February 18. M-G-M player. Featured in "What a Liar," "Meet the Baron," "Hollywood Party;" "Joe Palooka," United Artists.

DVORAK, ANN: Married to Leslie Fenton. Born in Los Angeles, Calif., August 2. Warner Bros. player. Featured in "The Way to Love," Paramount; "College Coach." Working in "Massacre." Next is "Wonder Bar."

EILERS, SALLY: Married to Harry Joe Brown. Born in New York City, December 11. Fox player. Featured in "Made on Broadway," M-G-M; "Walls of Gold." Next is "Disillusion."

ELLIS, PATRICIA: Unmarried. Born in New York City, May 20. Warner Bros. player. Featured in "The World Changes," "Convention City," "Easy to Love."

ERWIN, STUART: Married to June Collyer. Born in Squaw Valley, Calif., February 14. M-G-M player. Featured in "Forever Faithful;" "Broadway Through a Keyhole," 20th Century; "Joe Palooka," United Artists.

EVANS, MADGE: Unmarried. Born in Los Angeles, Calif., July 1. M-G-M player. Featured in "Beauty for Sale," "Forever Faithful." Working in "Transcontinental Bus."

FAIRBANKS, DOUGLAS, JR.: Divorced from Joan Crawford. Born in New York City, December 9 Free lance. Starred in "Narrow Corner," "Captured," Warners; "Morning Glory," RKO. Making pictures in England.

FAIRBANKS, DOUGLAS, SR.: Separated from Mary Pickford. Born in Denver, Colo., May 23. United Artists star. Starred in "Robinson Crusoe." Making pictures in England.

FARRELL, CHARLES: Married to Virginia Valli Born in Walpole, Mass., August 9. Write him at Paramount. Free lance. Featured in "Aggie Appleby, Maker of Men," RKO; "The Shakedown," Warner Bros. Working in "Girl Without a Room," Paramount.

FARRELL, GLENDA: Divorced. Born in Enid, Okla., November 12. Warner Bros. player. Featured in "Havana Widows;" "Man's Castle," Columbia; "Dark Hazard." Working in "Hi, Nellie."

FORD, WALLACE: Married to Martha Halworth. Born in England. M-G-M player. Featured in "Three Cornered Moon," Paramount; "My Woman," "East of 5th Avenue," Columbia.

FOSTER, NORMAN: Married to Claudette Colbert. Born in Richmond, Ind., December 13. Fox player. Featured in "Rafter Romance," RKO; "Walls of Gold." Working in "Seven Lives Were Changed."

FOSTER, PRESTON: Married. Born in Ocean City N. J., October 24. Write him at Fox. Free lance. Featured in "The Man Who Dared," "Hoopla," Fox. Working in "Sleepers East."

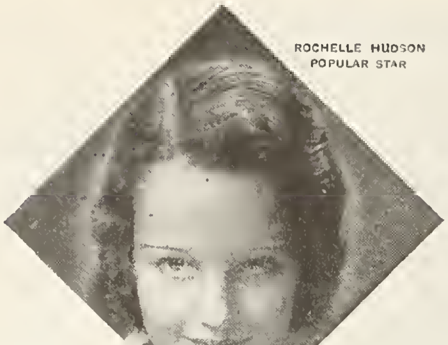
FRANCIS, KAY: Married to Kenneth McKenna. Born in Oklahoma City, Okla., January 13. Warner Bros. star. Starred in "I Loved a Woman," "The House on 56th Street." Working in "Mandalay." Next is "Wonder Bar."

GABLE, CLARK: Married to Ria Langham. Born in Cadiz, Ohio, February 1. M-G-M star. Starred in "Hold Your Man," "Night Flight," "Dancing Lady." Working in "Night Bus," Columbia.

GARBO, GRETA: Unmarried. Born in Stockholm, Sweden, September 18. M-G-M star. Starred in "As You Desire Me," "Queen Christina."

GARGAN, WILLIAM: Married. Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., July 17. RKO player. Featured in "Headline Shooters;" "Night Flight," M-G-M; "Four Frightened People," Paramount.

"What is Janet Gaynor's next picture going to be?" many of her fans are asking. "Carolina" is the name of it—and this is the first still from it. Richard Cromwell is her leading man.



Your hair can be
SWEET SIXTEEN
again...

Although your hair may seem dull and lifeless now, it can be lovely, youthful, sparkling....always! Golden Glint Shampoo works a miracle on every shade! It imparts a subtle "tiny-tint" and an exquisite finishing sheen. No one will guess what you have done, but they'll admire the new radiant beauty of your hair! 25c at your dealers', or send coupon below for free sample and letter of special advice.

FREE

J. W. KOBI CO., 602 Rainier Ave., Dept. B, Seattle, Wash. * * * * * Plaase send a free sample.
Name ____
Address ____
City ____ State ____
Color of my hair:

BECOME AN EXPERT ACCOUNTANT

Executive Accountants and C. P. A.'s earn $3,000 to $15,000 a year. Thousands more are needed. We train you thoroughly at home in spare time for C. P. A. examinations or executive accounting positions. Previous bookkeeping knowledge or experience unnecessary. Training given by C. P. A.'s. Write for free book, "Accountancy, the Profession That Pays," and learn about opportunities in this growing, profitable field.

LaSalle Extension University, Dept. 2318-H, Chicago
The School That Has Trained Over 1,200 C.P.A.'s

REDUCE 3 LBS. A WEEK OR NO COST!

No pills or tablets, no starvation diets, no strenuous exercising, no salts. Send for free trial of Dain Tea. Just drink it with your meals. Watch ugly, unhealthy fat disappear. Your request for free trial brings trial supply by return mail and full $1.00 treatment which you may try under our 10-day refund guarantee. Try Dain Tea at our risk.

DAIN TEA CO., DEPT. 20. BALTIMORE, MD.

350 LITTLE BLUE BOOKS 5¢ EACH

Send postcard for our free catalogue. Thousands of bargains. Address:
LITTLE BLUE BOOK CO., Catalogue Dept., Desk 227, GIRARD, KANSAS

Bald? Don't Lose Hope

Mr. R. E. Proctor, Cinco, W. Va., writes:

"I was partly bald for ten years. Recently I used 2 bottles of Japanese Oil and now have hair 2 inches long on the bald spots."

JAPANESE OIL, the antiseptic counter-irritant, is used by thousands for baldness where hair roots are not dead, falling hair, loose dandruff and scalp itch. Price 60c. Economy size $1. All druggists. FREE booklet, "Truth About the Hair"—write.

NATIONAL REMEDY CO., Desk M.M., 56 W. 45th St., N. Y.

FREE SALE CATALOG

FACTORY PRICES
are still the lowest prices

Send for FREE catalog showing lowest 1934 prices. 200 styles and sizes; Porcelain Enamel Coal and Wood Ranges, Combination Gas, Coal and Wood Ranges, Gas Stoves, Oil Stoves, Furnaces. Easy terms—year to pay. 30 days FREE trial. 24-hour shipments. Satisfaction guaranteed. Over 800,000 customers. 34 years in business.

Kalamazoo Stove Co. Mfrs.
405 Rochester, Ave.
Kalamazoo Michigan

Ranges $44.70 and UP

"A Kalamazoo Direct to You" Trade Mark Registered

GAYNOR, JANET: Divorced from Lydell Peck. Born in Philadelphia, Pa., October 6. Fox star. Starred in "State Fair," "Adorable," "Paddy, the Next Best Thing."

GIBSON, WYNNE: Divorced. Born in New York City, July 3. RKO player. Featured in "Her Bodyguard," Paramount; "Special Investigator," Universal. Working in "Sleepers East," Fox.

GILBERT, JOHN: Married to Virginia Bruce. Born in Ogden, Utah, July 10. M-G-M star. Starred in "Fast Workers," "Queen Christinia."

GOMBELL, MINNA: Married to Joseph Sefton. Born in Baltimore, Md., May 28. Fox player. Featured in "The Way to Love," Paramount; "Hoopla." Working in "Cross Country Cruise," Universal.

GRANT, CARY: Unmarried. Born in Bristol, England, January 19, Paramount player. Featured in "I'm No Angel;" "Born to be Bad," 20th Century. Working in "Alice in Wonderland." Next is "Come on Marines."

HAMILTON, NEIL: Married to Elsa Whitner. Born in Athol, Mass., September 9. Write him at Universal. Free lance. Featured in "One Sunday Afternoon," Paramount; "Ladies Must Love," Universal.

HARDING, ANN: Divorced from Harry Bannister. Born in Fort Sam Houston, Texas, August 7. RKO star. Starred in "When Ladies Meet," M-G-M; "Double Harness," "The Right to Romance." Working in "Gallant Lady," 20th Century.

HARDY, OLIVER: Married to Myrtle Lee. Born in Atlanta, Ga., January 18. Hal Roach star. Co-starred in "Dirty Work," "Sons of the Desert."

HARLOW, JEAN: Married to Harold Rosson. Born in Kansas City, Mo., March 3. M-G-M star. Starred in "Hold Your Man," "Bombshell," "Hollywood Party." Next is "Living in a Big Way."

HARVEY, LILIAN: Unmarried. Born in London, England, January 19. Fox player. Featured in "My Lips Betray," "My Weakness." Working in "I Am Suzanne."

HAYES, HELEN: Married to Charles MacArthur. Born in Washington, D. C., October 10. M-G-M star. Starred in "Night Flight," "Another Language." Next is "What Every Woman Knows."

HEPBURN, KATHARINE: Married to Ludlow Smith. Born in Hartford, Conn., November 8. RKO star. Starred in "Christopher Strong," "Morning Glory," "Little Women," and "Trigger."

HERSHOLT, JEAN: Married. Born in Copenhagen, Denmark, July 12. M-G-M player. Featured in "Christopher Bean," "Hollywood Party." Working in "The Cat and the Fiddle."

HOLMES, PHILLIPS: Unmarried. Born in Grand Rapids, Mich., July 22. M-G-M player. Featured in "Beauty for Sale," "Penthouse," "Stage Mother." Working in "Nana," United Artists.

HOLT, JACK: Divorced from Margaret Wood. Born in Winchester, Pa., May 31. Columbia star. Starred in "Tampico," "The Wrecker," "Master of Men."

HOPKINS, MIRIAM: Divorced from Austin Parker. Born in Bainbridge, Ga., October 18. Paramount player. Featured in "Strangers Return," M-G-M; "Design for Living." Working in "All of Me." Next is "The Man Who Broke His Heart."

HORTON, EDWARD EVERETT: Unmarried. Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., March 18. Write him at Universal. Free lance. Featured in "The Way to Love," "Design for Living," Paramount; "Easy to Love," Warner Bros. Working in "The Poor Rich," Universal.

HOWARD, LESLIE: Married. Born in England, April 24. RKO star. Starred in "Captured," Warner Bros.; "Berkeley Square," Fox; "The Lady is Willing," Columbia. Next is "Of Human Bondage," RKO.

HUDSON, ROCHELLE: Unmarried. Born in Claremore, Okla., March 6. Fox player. Featured in 'Dr. Bull," "Walls of Gold," "Mr. Skitch." Next is "Odd Thursday."

HUSTON, WALTER: Married to Nan Sunderland. Born in Toronto, Canada, April 6. M-G-M player. Featured in "Storm At Daybreak;" "Ann Vickers," RKO: "The Prizefighter and the Lady." Working in "Rodney," RKO.

HYAMS, LEILA: Married to Phil Berg. Born in New York City, May 1. Universal player. Featured in "Saturday's Millions," "Tin Pants." Working in "The Poor Rich."

JOLSON, AL: Married to Ruby Keeler. Born in St. Petersburg, Russia, May 26. Warner Bros. star. Starred in "Hallelujah, I'm a Bum," United Artists. Next is "Wonder Bar," Warner Bros.

JONES, BUCK: Married to Odille Osborne. Born in Vincennes, Ind., December 12. Universal star. Starred in "The Open Road," "Gordon of Ghost City" series.

JORDAN, DOROTHY: Married to Merian C. Cooper. Born in Clarksburg, Tenn., August 9. RKO player. Featured in "One Man's Journey," "Hide in the Dark."

JORDAN, MIRIAM: Unmarried. Born in London, England, March 3. Fox player. Featured in "Dangerously Yours," "I Loved You Wednesday." Working in "Let's Fall in Love," Columbia.

JORY, VICTOR: Married to Jean Inness. Born in Dawson City, Alaska, November 23. Fox player. Featured in "I Loved You Wednesday," "The Devil's in Love;" "My Woman," Columbia. Workin "Smoky."

JUDGE, ARLINE: Married to Wesley Ruggles. Born in Bridgeport, Conn., February 21. Fox player. Featured in "Flying Devils," RKO; "Sensational Hunters," Monogram. Working in "Trouble Shooter," 20th Century.

KARLOFF, BORIS: Married. Born in Dulwich, England, November 23. Universal star. Starred in "The Ghoul," Gaumont; "Patrol," RKO. Working in "A Trip to Mars."

KEELER, RUBY: Married to Al Jolson. Born in New York City, August 25. Warner Bros. player. Featured in "Forty-Second Street," "Gold Diggers of 1933," "Footlight Parade." Next is "Sweethearts Forever."

KENYON, DORIS: Separated from Arthur Hopkins. Born in Syracuse, N. Y., September 5. Write her at Universal. Free lance. Featured in "Voltaire," Warner Bros.; "No Marriage Ties," RKO; "Counsellor at Law," Universal.

KIBBEE, GUY: Married. Born in El Paso, Texas, March 6. First National player. Featured in "Footlight Parade," "The World Changes," "Havana Widows," "Convention City," Warner Bros.

KREUGER, OTTO: Married to Sue MacManamy. Born in Toledo, Ohio, September 6. M-G-M player. Featured in "Beauty for Sale," "Prizefighter and the Lady;" "Forever in My Heart," Warner Bros. Working in "The Comeback."

LANDI, ELISSA: Married to J. C. Lawrence. Born in Venice, Italy, December 6. Columbia player. Featured in "I Loved You Wednesday" Fox; "By Candlelight," Universal. Working in "Man of Two Worlds," RKO.

LARUE, JACK: Unmarried. Born in New York City, May 4. Paramount player. Featured in "To the Last Man;" "Kennel Murder Case," Warner Bros. Working in "Miss Fane's Baby is Stolen."

LAUGHTON, CHARLES: Married to Elsa Lanchester. Born in Scarborough, England, July 1. Paramount star. Featured in "King Henry VIII," Gaumont; "White Woman."

LAUREL, STAN: Divorced. Born in Ulverston, England, June 16. Hal Roach star. Co-starred in "Dirty Work," "Sons of the Desert."

LINDEN, ERIC: Unmarried. Born in New York City, July 12. Free lance. Write him at RKO. Featured in "The Silver Cord," "The Flying Devils," "Bird of Prey," RKO.

LLOYD, HAROLD: Married to Mildred Davis. Born in Burchard, Neb., April 20. Write him at Paramount Studio. Producer-star. Starred in "Movie Crazy." Next is "Cat's Paw."

LOMBARD, CAROLE: Divorced from William Powell. Born in Fort Wayne, Ind., October 6. Paramount player. Featured in "Brief Moment," Columbia; "White Woman." Next is "Bolero."

LOWE, EDMUND: Married to Lilyan Tashman. Born in San Jose, Calif., March 3. Columbia player. Featured in "Her Bodyguard," Paramount; "Dinner At Eight," M-G-M. Working in "Let's Fall in Love."

LOY, MYRNA: Unmarried. Born in Helena, Mont., August 2. M-G-M player. Featured in "When Ladies Meet," "Penthouse," and "The Prizefighter and the Lady."

LUKAS, PAUL: Married. Born in Budapest, Hungary, May 26. Universal player. Featured in "Secret of the Blue Room;" "Little Women," RKO; "By Candlelight." Next is "The Golden Fleece."

LYON, BEN: Married to Bebe Daniels. Born in Atlanta, Ga., February 6. M-G-M player. Featured in "I Cover the Waterfront," United Artists. Working in "The Comeback."

MACDONALD, JEANETTE: Unmarried. Born in Philadelphia, Pa., June 18. Paramount player. Featured in "Love Me Tonight." Working in "The Cat and the Fiddle," M-G-M. Next is "My Gal Sal," RKO.

MACK, HELEN: Unmarried. Born in Rock Island, Ill., November 13. RKO player. Featured in "Christopher Bean," M-G-M; "Aggie Appleby, Maker of Men." Working in "All of Me," Paramount.

MACMAHON, ALINE: Married. Born in McKeesport, Pa., May 3. Warner Bros. star. Featured in "Gold Diggers of 1933," "Heroes for Sale," "The World Changes." Starring in "Heat Lightning."

MANNERS, DAVID: Divorced from Suzanne Bushell. Born in Halifax, N. S., April 30. Write him at United Artists. Free lance. Featured in "The Devil's in Love," Fox; "Torch Singer," Paramount; "Roman Scandals," United Artists.

MARCH, FREDRIC: Married to Florence Eldridge. Born in Racine, Wis., August 31. Paramount star. Starred in "The Eagle and the Hawk," "Design for Living." Working in "All of Me." Next is "Death Takes a Holiday."

MARITZA, SARI: Unmarried. Born in China, March 17. RKO player. Featured in "The Right to Romance." Next is "Sea Girl."

MARSH, JOAN: Unmarried. Born in Porterville, Calif., July 10. Write her at Fox. Free lance. Featured in "Three Cornered Moon," Paramount; "The Man Who Dared," "It's Great to be Alive," Fox.

MARSHALL, HERBERT: Married to Edna Best. Born in London, England, May 23. Paramount player. Featured in "Solitaire Man," M-G-M "Four Frightened People."

MAYNARD, KEN: Married to Mary Leiber. Born in Mission, Texas, July 21. Universal player. Featured in "Strawberry Roan," "Rider of Justice." Working in "Wheels of Destiny."

MENJOU, ADOLPHE: Divorced from Kathryn Carver. Born in Pittsburgh, Pa., February 18. Warner Bros. star. Featured in "Morning Glory," RKO; "The Worst Woman in Paris," Fox; "Convention City," "Easy to Love."

MERKEL, UNA: Married to Ronald Burla. Born in Covington, Ky., December 10. M-G-M player. Featured in "Beauty for Sale," "Bombshell," "Forever Faithful." Next is "The Comeback."

MILJAN, JOHN: Married. Born in Leeds, So. Dak., November 9. Write him at Universal. Free lance. Featured in "The Mad Game," Fox; "King for a Night," Universal. Working in "Madame Spy," Universal.

MONTGOMERY, ROBERT: Married to Elizabeth Allen. Born in Beacon, N. Y., May 21. M-G-M star. Starred in "When Ladies Meet," "Night Flight," "Another Language." Working in "Transcontinental Bus." Next is "Rip Tide."

MOORE, COLLEEN: Married to Albert Scott. Born in Port Huron, Mich., August 19. RKO player. Featured in "The Power and the Glory," Fox. Next is "Nothing Else Matters."

MOORE, DICKIE: Boy actor. Born in Los Angeles, Calif., September 12. Hal Roach player. Featured in "Man's Castle," Columbia; "Cradle Song," Paramount.

MORGAN, FRANK: Married. Born in New York City, June 1. M-G-M player. Featured in "Broadway to Hollywood," "Bombshell," "Dancing Lady." Working in "The Cat and the Fiddle."

MORGAN, RALPH: Married to Grace Arnold. Born in New York City, July 6. Fox player. Featured in "The Power and the Glory," "The Mad Game," "Walls of Gold." Working in "Seven Lives Were Changed."

MORLEY, KAREN: Married to Charles Vidor. Born in Ottumwa, Iowa, December 12. M-G-M player. Featured in "Dinner at Eight."

MORRIS, CHESTER: Married to Sue Kilbourne. Born in New York City, February 13. Universal player. Featured in "Tomorrow At Seven," RKO; "Golden Harvest," Paramount; "King for a Night."

MUNI, PAUL: Married to Bella Finckle. Born in Vienna, September 22. Warner Bros. star. Starred in "I'm a Fugitive From a Chain Gang," "The World Changes." Working in "Hi, Nellie."

(Continued on page 124)

Prompt Relief from Skin Irritations

Pimples
Clogged Pores
Itching
Eczema
Chafing

Don't be a "stay at home", ashamed to go places, because your complexion is marred by pimples and blackheads—or because you are embarrassed by some itching condition of your skin. Adopt the safe, simple Resinol treatment as your external aid in restoring skin health.

Just cleanse your skin well twice daily with the pure, non-irritating lather of Resinol Soap. Rinse thoroughly, pat dry, and generously apply soothing Resinol Ointment to the broken out, smarting places. Then see how quickly the irritation is relieved and the skin becomes clearer, smoother and finer.

Use Resinol freely anywhere on the body—no parts are too tender, no surface too irritated to receive its soothing medication.

Your druggist sells Resinol Ointment and Soap. Get them, start the treatment today.

For a free sample each of Ointment and Soap write Resinol, Dept. 1-D, Balto., Md.

Resinol

KEEP LAMP & RADIO WIRES OFF FLOOR

FITS BACK OF BASEBOARD OR MOULDING

New Easy Way

JUSTRITE PUSH-CLIP
10 Cents at KRESGE'S

Amazing invention guarantees neat, quick job. No damage to woodwork. No tools needed. Improve appearance of your rooms—keep all wires off floors with JUSTRITE PUSH-CLIP. Economical. Set of eight colored clips to match your cords, 10c.

Tired..Nervous Wife

Wins Back Pep!

HER raw nerves were soothed. She banished that "dead tired" feeling. Won new youthful color—restful nights, active days—all because she rid her system of bowel-clogging wastes that were sapping her vitality. NR Tablets (Nature's Remedy)—the mild, safe, all-vegetable laxative—worked the transformation. Try it for constipation, biliousness, headaches, dizzy spells, colds. See how refreshed you feel. At all druggists'—25c.

FREE! New gold & blue 1934 Calendar-Thermometer — samples NR and Tums. Send name, address, stamp to
A. H. LEWIS CO.
Desk BF-77
St. Louis, Missouri

NR TO-NIGHT TOMORROW ALRIGHT

"TUMS" Quick relief for acid indigestion, sour stomach, heartburn. Only 10c.

Let's Talk About Hollywood

(Continued from page 78)

her mother about it and was somewhat surprised at the reply.

"Yes, I have received all the studio stills. But haven't you any little snapshots?"

MAY ROBSON and Marie Dressler have gone places and seen things together for years, which experiences have resulted in lots of reminiscences and anecdotes with which to regale their friends.

Among the Robson's favorites is the one about their travelling to England on a cattle boat during the eventful days of the World War. When they finally landed, Miss Dressler bought a London paper to see if their arrival had been mentioned. Bold face type announced the event.

"A large cargo of cows, May Robson and Marie Dressler arrived in town yesterday from New York City."

DIAMOND MAE'S heart is big, too. It seems that when la West was planning that personal appearance tour a year ago, she needed a maid. And, wishing to give a job to a member of the theatrical profession, she visited Equity and discovered Libby.

Libby was at one time a comedienne in minstrel shows and revues. Miss West hired her and later on, put her in the act. When the tour was over, she took Libby to Hollywood. And, when you see "I'm No Angel," you'll discover the sepia siren playing Mae's maid.

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE ARLISS wear synthetic furs.

No, it's not a scandal, just an attempt to cooperate with the Humane Society. This has led him to give support to the manufacture of synthetic fur. So, if ever you happen to meet Mr. Arliss wearing a seal-trimmed coat, don't make the mistake of rushing up and exclaim-

"Where the Ames speaks only to Cabot, and the Cabot speaks only of love." The newly married Adrienne and Bruce are very comfortably curled up in their new love nest, thank you.

SKIN ERUPTIONS
NEED NOT WORRY YOU

Pimples, eczema, itching, burning skin, undue redness, minor rashes and scaly scalp are no longer necessary when relief is so simple. Poslam will show what it will do for you in one application. Just apply at night and note improvement next morning.

JUST TO PROVE IT
we will send you a test package FREE
Simply send your name and address to:
POSLAM COMPANY
Desk 11-W, 254 W. 54th St., New York, N.Y.
You can get Poslam at any drug store, 50c

Stay Sweet with "HUSH"
Cream DEODORANT
PREVENTS ALL BODY ODORS
Quick and easy to use.... Absolutely pure, cooling and soothing—non-irritating.
FOR UNDERARM PERSPIRATION.
If your favorite toilet goods counter cannot supply you, write for handbag size, 10c, enclosing stamps or coin.
10c SIZE AT MOST 10c STORES
25c 50c
HUSH CO-116 Market St., Phila., Pa.

MICKEY MOUSE REVEALED!

Everything you want to know about your favorite movie star — and his cousins, the characters in the Silly Symphonies!

Do you know how Walt Disney's wonderful little masterpieces, such as "Three Little Pigs," are made? Do you know the amazing facts about Disney's salary? Do you know the real truth about his life and love story?

You can't afford to miss this brilliant feature about Mickey Mouse, the Silly Symphonies and their creator, Walt Disney.

Buy MODERN SCREEN, for March—Out February 1

ing, "What a beautiful seal he must have been! Did you kill him yourself?"

YOU probably have heard that John Barrymore is a doting father—and you've heard correctly.

A gushing gal, anxious to ingratiate herself, started a discussion on child-raising with the actor recently. Her queries turned to the subject of bathing infants.

"Just how do you tell what temperature the water must be?" she drawled.

By this time Mr. Barrymore was becoming better than slightly bored.

"It's really quite simple," he replied. "You toss the baby in and, if the little darling turns blue, you know the water is too cold. But, if he turns red—say, like a lobster—well, the water's too hot!"

Which answer had the desired effect by way of changing the subject.

ONE of the few laughing photographs of Garbo came about by accident.

It seems that the cameraman's youthful assistant, usually efficient in his work, becomes all thumbs when Greta steps around.

The star lately requested him to tune in some jazz music while she was posing. First, the poor boy dialed an effusion on the care of the stomach, then turned quickly to a sermon at Sister Aimee's Temple and quickly found another station just in time to hear the announcer say, "Good-night."

Garbo laughed gaily at his discomfiture and the photographer got a grand and unusual picture.

Except as a joke—made during the last year or so—Garbo never said those now famous words, "I t'ank I go home."

THE Paramount lot looks very empty these days. So many of their players are away on vacations. Miriam Hopkins, Frances Fuller and Gary Cooper are in New York. Miriam and Frances are appearing in stage plays and Gary, well it seems it's marriage plans he has. Then, over on the other side are Cary Grant (also with matrimonial ideas), Randolph Scott (ditto) and Charles Laughton. Adrienne Ames is honeymooning in Hawaii.

THE Three Little Pigs and the Big Bad Wolf are going abroad. Yep, they speak French and Spanish now and are going over there to amuse all the little French and Spanish kiddies—to say nothing of the grown-ups!

JEAN HARLOW'S latest flicker, "Bombshell," has been retitled "Blonde Bombshell" because most everybody thought it was a war drammer . . . causing the box-office receipts to be almost NIL! But now that they know it's all about sex and all that, everybody's happy.

SINCE Elizabeth Allan had that infection in her big toe, she has been unable to wear regular shoes. Therefore, out of necessity, she has had to wear nudist sandals with her evening gowns. Now everybody's wearing nudists' sandals with their evening gowns.

THE "Tarzan and His Mate" company continues to have trouble. First there was script difficulty. After weeks of shooting, Rod LaRocque was replaced by Paul Cavanagh, which necessitated retakes. Then Maureen O'Sullivan, the leading lady, was hit with appendicitis and rushed to the hospital for an operation. The company has to await her recovery before production can go on. With all this trouble, the picture ought to be good!

LOOKS like Paramount is about to lose some more of its talent. Gary Cooper will definitely not re-sign with them. Rumor is that he will go over to Sam Goldwyn and fill the vacancy recently left by Ronald Coleman. Fredric March is another who has left the home studio. Dissatisfaction over stories was his complaint. He has signed with Twentieth Century . . . at a very fancy figure they say.

THERE'S a bit of moving been going on around town. Clara Bow has taken over Marlene Dietrich's former palatial Beverly Hills home and Joel McCrea and Frances Dee are occupying Garbo's recently vacated house. The latter is merely a temporary abode until their ranch is fixed up.

YOUNG Master Richard Ralston Arlen is only six months old but already his "figger" is beginning to play a big part in his life. When his "curves" began developing into rolls of fat, the youngster was put on a diet. Less cereal and more spinach. But undaunted, the Ralston heir continued his progress toward more and more poundage. Now, he's under the care of a masseuse, the kind that slaps and pounds!

A COOLING romance! Sally Blane and Russ Columbo. Ricardo Cortez and Christine Lee romance is waxing warmer, with an old-fashioned wedding not far off. Helen Hayes and Charles MacArthur are expecting another "Act of God." Verna Hillie, one of Paramount's "Panther" women, recently married Frank Gill, Jr., radio announcer.

ALICE BRADY doesn't know whether to feel pleased or not. In a scene in "Miss Fane's Baby is Stolen," she was to scold little Spanky for wiping his dirty hands on her dress. In the midst of the "bawling out," Spanky rushed off the set and started sobbing. When asked what was the trouble, he cried, "She's too natural!"

LARRY CRABBE'S the name, folks. Used to be Buster Crabbe but that was before he became a married man and a dignified movie actor. The nickname, which his parents so fondly gave him when he was a youngster in safety-pins, has just recently been discarded in favor of his real name.

So, shake hands with the new Crabbe—Larry Crabbe, don't forget.

What's the Difference ?

between high priced complexion creams, and the popular VI-JON Creams used by thousands of discriminating women and girls? The difference is—40c or more per jar. In other words, just a difference in price. You get quality and quantity for 10c in a 3-oz. jar of smooth, full-bodied, nourishing VI-JON Cream. Try these famous creams and judge for yourself.

VI-JON CREAMS

VI-JON COLD CREAM

VI-JON VANISHING CREAM

VI-JON LIQUEFYING CREAM

At 5 AND 10 CENT STORES

R9

VI-JON LABORATORIES . . . ST. LOUIS

UP TO $15 A WEEK and your own DRESSES FREE

I need 350 ambitious women to demonstrate nationally known Fashion Frocks. Glorious new Spring Styles at unbelievable low prices. Sold with money-back guarantee. Guaranteed as advertised in Good Housekeeping Magazine.

NO CANVASSING

No experience necessary. No investment ever required. The work is easy, dignified and pleasant. Requires no canvassing. In addition to your weekly income you earn your own dresses absolutely FREE. Send no money. Write fully for this unusual opportunity giving your size and color choice.

as low as 3 DRESSES $3.95

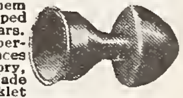
FASHION FROCKS, Inc.
Dept. BB-250, Cincinnati, Ohio

No JOKE TO BE DEAF

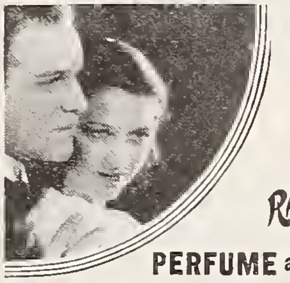
—Every Deaf Person Knows That

George P. Way made himself hear, after being deaf for 25 years, with Artificial Ear Drums--his own invention. He wore them day and night. They stopped head noises and ringing ears. They are invisible and perfectly comfortable. No one sees them. Write for his true story, "How I Got Deaf and Made Myself Hear". Also booklet on Deafness. Address

GEORGE P. WAY, INC,
717 Hofmann Building Detroit, Michigan



Artificial Ear Drum



UNSEEN BEAUTY is YOURS with RADIO GIRL

PERFUME and FACE POWDER

Enjoy this secret of charm—this bewitching fragrance that has all the glamour of costly imported perfume . . . RADIO GIRL Perfume, though made from French essential oils, is compounded in this country—for modern, thrifty American girls. . . . RADIO GIRL Face Powder has the same alluring fragrance. A flattering new shade—Dermatone—blends with all complexions. . . . Send for free samples.

Use this COUPON for FREE SAMPLE

"RADIO GIRL," St. Paul, Minn. M-2

Send me FREE Regular Size RADIO GIRL Perfume and Trial Size RADIO GIRL Face Powder. I am enclosing 10c (coin or stamps) for cost of mailing. This offer good in United States only.

Name....................................

Address....................................

City....................................

Directory of Players

(Continued from page 121)

McCREA, JOEL: Married to Frances Dee. Born in So. Pasadena, Calif., November 5. RKO player. Featured in "One Man's Journey," "Chance at Heaven," "Flying Down to Rio."

McLAGLEN, VICTOR: Married to Enid Lamont. Born in London, England December 10. Write him at Paramount. Free lance. Featured in "The Lost Patrol," RKO. Next is "No More Women." Paramount.

NAGEL, CONRAD: Married to Ruth Helms. Born in Keokuk, Iowa, March 16. M-G-M player. Featured in "Ann Vickers," RKO.

NIXON, MARIAN: Divorced from Edward Hillman. Born in Superior, Wis., October 20. Write her at RKO. Free lance. Featured in "Pilgrimage," "Dr. Bull," Fox; "Chance At Heaven," RKO.

NOVARRO, RAMON: Unmarried. Born in Durango, Mexico, February 6. M-G-M star. Starred in "The Barbarian." Working in "The Cat and the Fiddle."

OAKIE, JACK: Unmarried. Born in Sedalia, Mo., November 14. Paramount player. Featured in "Too Much Harmony," "Sitting Pretty." Working in "Alice in Wonderland," Paramount, and "Trouble Shooter." 20th Century.

OLIVER, EDNA MAY: Divorced. Born in Boston, Mass., January 12. RKO player. Featured in "Ann Vickers," "Only Yesterday," Universal; "Meet the Baron." M-G-M; "Little Women." Working in "The Poor Rich," Universal.

O'BRIEN, GEORGE: Married to Marguerite Churchill. Born in San Francisco, Calif., September 1. Fox star. Starred in "Life in the Raw," "The Last Trail." Working in "Heir to the Hoorah."

O'BRIEN, PAT: Married to Eloise Taylor. Born in New York City, September 1. Write him at Warner Bros. Free lance. Featured in "Bureau of Missing Persons," "College Coach," Warner Bros.; "Bombshell," M-G-M. Next is "Hell's Bells."

O'SULLIVAN, MAUREEN: Unmarried. Born in Dublin, Ireland, May 17. M-G-M player. Featured in "Tugboat Annie," "Stage Mother." Working in "Tarzan and His Mate."

PALLETTE, EUGENE: Divorced. Born in Winifield, Kan., July 8. Write him at Warner Bros. Free lance. Featured in "The Kennel Murder Case," Warner Bros.; "Shanghai Madness," Fox; "From Headquarters," Warner Bros.

PICKFORD, MARY: Separated from Douglas Fairbanks, Sr. Born in Toronto, Canada, April 9. United Artists star. Starred in "Secrets."

PITTS, ZASU: Divorced from Tom Gallery. Born in Parsons, Kan., January 3. Universal player. Featured in "Aggie Appleby, Maker of Men," RKO; "Dummy's Vote;" "Meet the Baron," M-G-M. Working in "Wild Birds," RKO.

POWELL, RICHARD: Divorced. Born in Mountain View, Ark., November 14. Warner Bros. player. Featured in "Footlight Parade," "College Coach," "Convention City." Next are "Sweethearts Forever" and "Wonder Bar."

POWELL, WILLIAM: Divorced from Carole Lombard. Born in Pittsburgh, Pa., July 29. Warner Bros. star. Starred in "Double Harness," RKO; "The Kennel Murder Case." Working in "Fashion Plate."

RAFT, GEORGE: Unmarried. Born in New York City, September 27. Paramount player. Featured in "Midnight Club;" "The Bowery," 20th Century. Working in "All of Me." Next is "Bolero."

RAYMOND, GENE: Unmarried. Born in New York City, August 13. Columbia player. Featured in "Brief Moment;" "The House on 56th Street," Warner Bros.; "Flying Down to Rio," RKO. Working in "I Am Suzanne," Fox.

ROBINSON, EDWARD G.: Married to Gladys Lloyd. Born in Bucharest, Roumania, December 12. Warner Bros. star. Starred in "The Little Giant," "I Loved a Woman," "Dark Hazard." Next is "Napoleon."

ROBSON, MAY: Married to Ora H. Brown. Born in Melbourne, Australia, April 19. M-G-M player. Featured in "Lady for a Day," Columbia; "Beauty for Sale," "Solitaire Man." Next is "Comin' Round the Mountain."

ROGERS, CHARLES: Unmarried. Born in Olathe, Kan., August 13. Fox player. Featured in "The Best of Enemies," "Take a Chance," Paramount.

ROGERS, GINGER: Divorced from Jack Pepper. Born in Independence, Kan., July 16. RKO player. Featured in "Rafter Romance," "Flying Down to Rio," "Hips Hips Hooray." Working in "Sitting Pretty," Paramount.

ROGERS, WILL: Married. Born in Okagah, Okla., November 4. Fox star. Starred in "State Fair," "Dr. Bull." Next is "Mr. Skitch."

RUGGLES, CHARLES: Married. Born in Los Angeles, Calif., February 8. Paramount player. Featured in "Melody Cruise," RKO; "Mama Loves Papa." Working in "Girl Without a Room."

SCOTT, RANDOLPH: Unmarried. Born in Orange, Va., January 23. Paramount player. Featured in "Man of the Forest," "To the Last Man," "The Thundering Herd." Working in "The Border Legion."

SHANNON, PEGGY: Separated. Born in New York City, January 10. Fox player. Featured in "Turn Back the Clock," M-G-M; "Fury of the Jungle," Columbia.

SHEARER, NORMA: Married to Irving Thalberg. Born in Montreal, Canada, August 10. M-G-M star. Starred in "Smilin' Through." Next is "Rip Tide."

SIDNEY, SYLVIA: Unmarried. Born in New York City, August 8. Paramount star. Starred in "Jennie Gerhardt." Next is "Good Dame."

SKIPWORTH, ALISON: Unmarried. Born in London, England, July 25. Paramount player. Featured in "Midnight Club," "Tillie and Gus." Working in "Alice in Wonderland" and "Six of a Kind."

STANWYCK, BARBARA: Married to Frank Fay. Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., July 16. Warner Bros. star. Starred in "Baby Face," "Ever in My Heart." Next is "Broadway and Back."

STONE, LEWIS: Married to Hazel Wolf. Born in Worcester, Mass., November 15. M-G-M player. Featured in "Bureau of Missing Persons," Warner Bros.

STUART, GLORIA: Separated from Blaire Gordon Newell. Born in Santa Monica, Calif., January 21. Universal player. Featured in "The Invisible Man;" "Roman Scandals," United Artists; "Beloved." Working in "I Like It That Way."

SULLAVAN, MARGARET: Unmarried. Born in Norfolk, Va., May 16. Universal player. Featured in "Only Yesterday." Next are "Good Red Bricks" and "Little Man, What Now."

SUMMERVILLE, SLIM: Married. Born in Albuquerque, N. M., July 10. Universal player. Featured in "Her First Mate," "Love, Honor and Oh Baby," "Tin Pants."

SWANSON, GLORIA: Married to Michael Farmer. Born in Chicago, Ill., March 27. United Artists star. Starred in "Perfect Understanding."

TALBOT, LYLE: Unmarried. Born in Pittsburgh, Pa., February 8. Warner Bros. player. Featured in Havana Widows," "College Coach." Working in "Mandalay."

TASHMAN, LILYAN: Married to Edmund Lowe. Born in New York City, October 25. Write her at Paramount. Free lance. Featured in "Mama Loves Papa," "Too Much Harmony."

TOBIN, GENEVIEVE: Unmarried. Born in New York City, November 29. Warner Bros. player. Featured in "I Loved a Woman;" "Golden Harvest," Paramount; "Dark Hazard," "Easy to Love." Working in "Let's Fall in Love," Columbia.

TONE, FRANCHOT: Unmarried. Born in Niagara Falls, N. Y., February 27. M-G-M player. Featured in "Stage Mother," "Bombshell," "Dancing Lady." Working in "Moulin Rouge," 20th Century.

TRACY, LEE: Unmarried. Born in Atlanta, Ga., April 14. M-G-M player. Featured in "Turn Back the Clock," "Bombshell;" "Advice to the Lovelorn," 20th Century.

TRACY, SPENCER: Separated from Louise Treadwell. Born in Milwaukee, Wis., April 5. Fox player. Featured in "Shanghai Madness;" "Man's Castle," Columbia; "The Mad Game." Working in "Trouble Shooter," 20th Century.

TWELVETREES, HELEN: Married to Frank Woody. Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., December 25. Write her at Universal. Free lance. Featured in "Disgraced," Paramount; "My Woman," Columbia; "King for a Night," Universal.

VELEZ, LUPE: Married to Johnnie Weissmuller. Born in San Luis Potosi, Mexico, July 18. M-G-M player. Featured in "Hollywood Party;" "Joe Palooka," United Artists.

WEST, MAE: Unmarried. Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., August 17. Paramount player. Featured in "She Done Him Wrong," "I'm No Angel." Next is "It Ain't No Sin."

WEISSMULLER, JOHNNIE: Married to Lupe Velez. Born in Chicago, Ill., June 2. M-G-M player. Featured in "Tarzan the Ape Man." Working in "Tarzan and His Mate."

WHEELER, BERT: Separated. Born in Paterson, N. J., August 31. RKO player. Featured in "Diplomaniacs," "Hips Hips Hooray."

WHITE, ALICE: Unmarried. Born in Patterson, N. Y., August 28. Universal player. Featured in "King for a Night." Working in "Cross Country Cruise." Next is "The Good Red Bricks."

WIECK, DOROTHEA: Married to Baron Ernst Von Decken. Born in Davos, Switzerland, January 3. Paramount player. Featured in "Cradle Song." Working in "Miss Fane's Baby is Stolen."

WILLIAM, WARREN: Married. Born in Aitken, Minn., December 2. Warner Bros. player. Featured in "Goodbye Again;" "Lady for a Day," Columbia; "Bedside."

WEINBRENNER, BABY LEROY: Child actor. Born in Los Angeles, Calif., March 18. Paramount player. Featured in "Bedtime Story," "Torch Singer," "Tillie and Gus." Working in "Miss Fane's Baby Is Stolen."

WOOLSEY, ROBERT: Married to Mignone Reed. Born in Oakland, Calif., August 14. RKO player. Featured in "Diplomaniacs," "Hips Hips Hooray."

WRAY, FAY: Married to John Monk Saunders. Born in Alberta, Canada, September 25. Twentieth Century player. Featured in "One Sunday Afternoon," Paramount; "The Bowery;" "Master of Men," Columbia. Working in "Madame Spy," Universal.

WYNYARD, DIANA: Unmarried. Born in London, England, January 16. M-G-M player. Featured in "Reunion in Vienna." Next is "Declasse." RKO.

YOUNG, LORETTA: Divorced from Grant Withers. Born in Salt Lake City, Utah, January 6. Twentieth Century star. Starred in "The Devil's in Love," Fox; "Man's Castle," Columbia. Working in "Born to Be Bad."

YOUNG, ROBERT: Married to Elizabeth Henderson. Born in Chicago, Ill., February 22. M-G-M player. Featured in "Tugboat Annie;" "Saturday's Millions," Universal; "The Right to Romance," "Trigger," RKO.

A noble, inspiring, gorgeous picture—don't you agree? It's Greta Garbo in "Queen Christina," of course. Garbo is regal enough for any queen. And the two Great Danes are pleased as Punch to appear with her.

Printed in the U. S. A. by Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N. J.

"MARRY MY KING,"

said his lips . . . but his eyes said, "Marry ME!"

• Did ever a woman have stranger lovers than Queen Christina? There was Magnus who loved her passionately . . . but advised her to marry Prince Charles, for his own good reasons!

• And there was Don Antonio, come from sunny Spain to ask her hand for his king, but now a slave to his own love for the woman who belonged to his monarch.

• Why did Magnus want Christina to marry Charles? And what choice did Antonio make between king and self? "Queen Christina" will tell you! The story of Greta Garbo's fascinating new motion picture will enthrall you. And SCREEN ROMANCES brings you that story complete in the February issue, which is now on sale.

• You will thrill to this beautiful tale of the Swedish girl queen who learned to know her people by traveling among them in man's garb. And you'll also enjoy the many striking illustrations in the story, dramatic stills of Garbo and John Gilbert reunited at last on the sets of Hollywood.

• But that isn't all the romance magazine of the screen offers you! In the same issue you will find eleven other complete stories of the latest and best motion pictures, all profusely illustrated by scenes from the screen productions.

• Join the wise screen and story lovers who have discovered this unique magazine, and give yourself a real treat. Today—at any newsdealer—ask for February

1. QUEEN CHRISTINA. Greta Garbo, John Gilbert.
2. FLYING DOWN TO RIO. Dolores Del Rio, Gene Raymond, Fred Astaire.
3. BY CANDLELIGHT. Elissa Landi, Nils Asther, Paul Lukas.
4. GOING HOLLYWOOD. Marian Davies, Bing Crosby, Stuart Erwin.
5. BEDSIDE. Warren William, Bette Davis.
6. FROM HEADQUARTERS. George Brent, Margaret Lindsay.
7. ALICE IN WONDERLAND. All-star, including Charlotte Henry, Gary Cooper, Richard Arlen, Jack Oakie.
8. I AM SUZANNE. Lilian Harvey, Gene Raymond.
9. MR. SKITCH. Will Rogers, Zasu Pitts.
10. HAVANA WIDOWS. Joan Blondell, Lyle Talbot, Glenda Farrell.
11. THE WORLD CHANGES. Paul Muni, Mary Astor, Aline MacMahon.
12. GIRL WITHOUT A ROOM. Charles Farrell, Marguerite Churchill, Charles Ruggles.

And Scores of Illustrations

Screen Romances

FEBRUARY ISSUE AT ALL NEWSSTANDS NOW!

LUCKY STRIKE
"IT'S TOASTED"
CIGARETTES
LUCKY STRIKE

THE HEIGHT OF GOOD TASTE

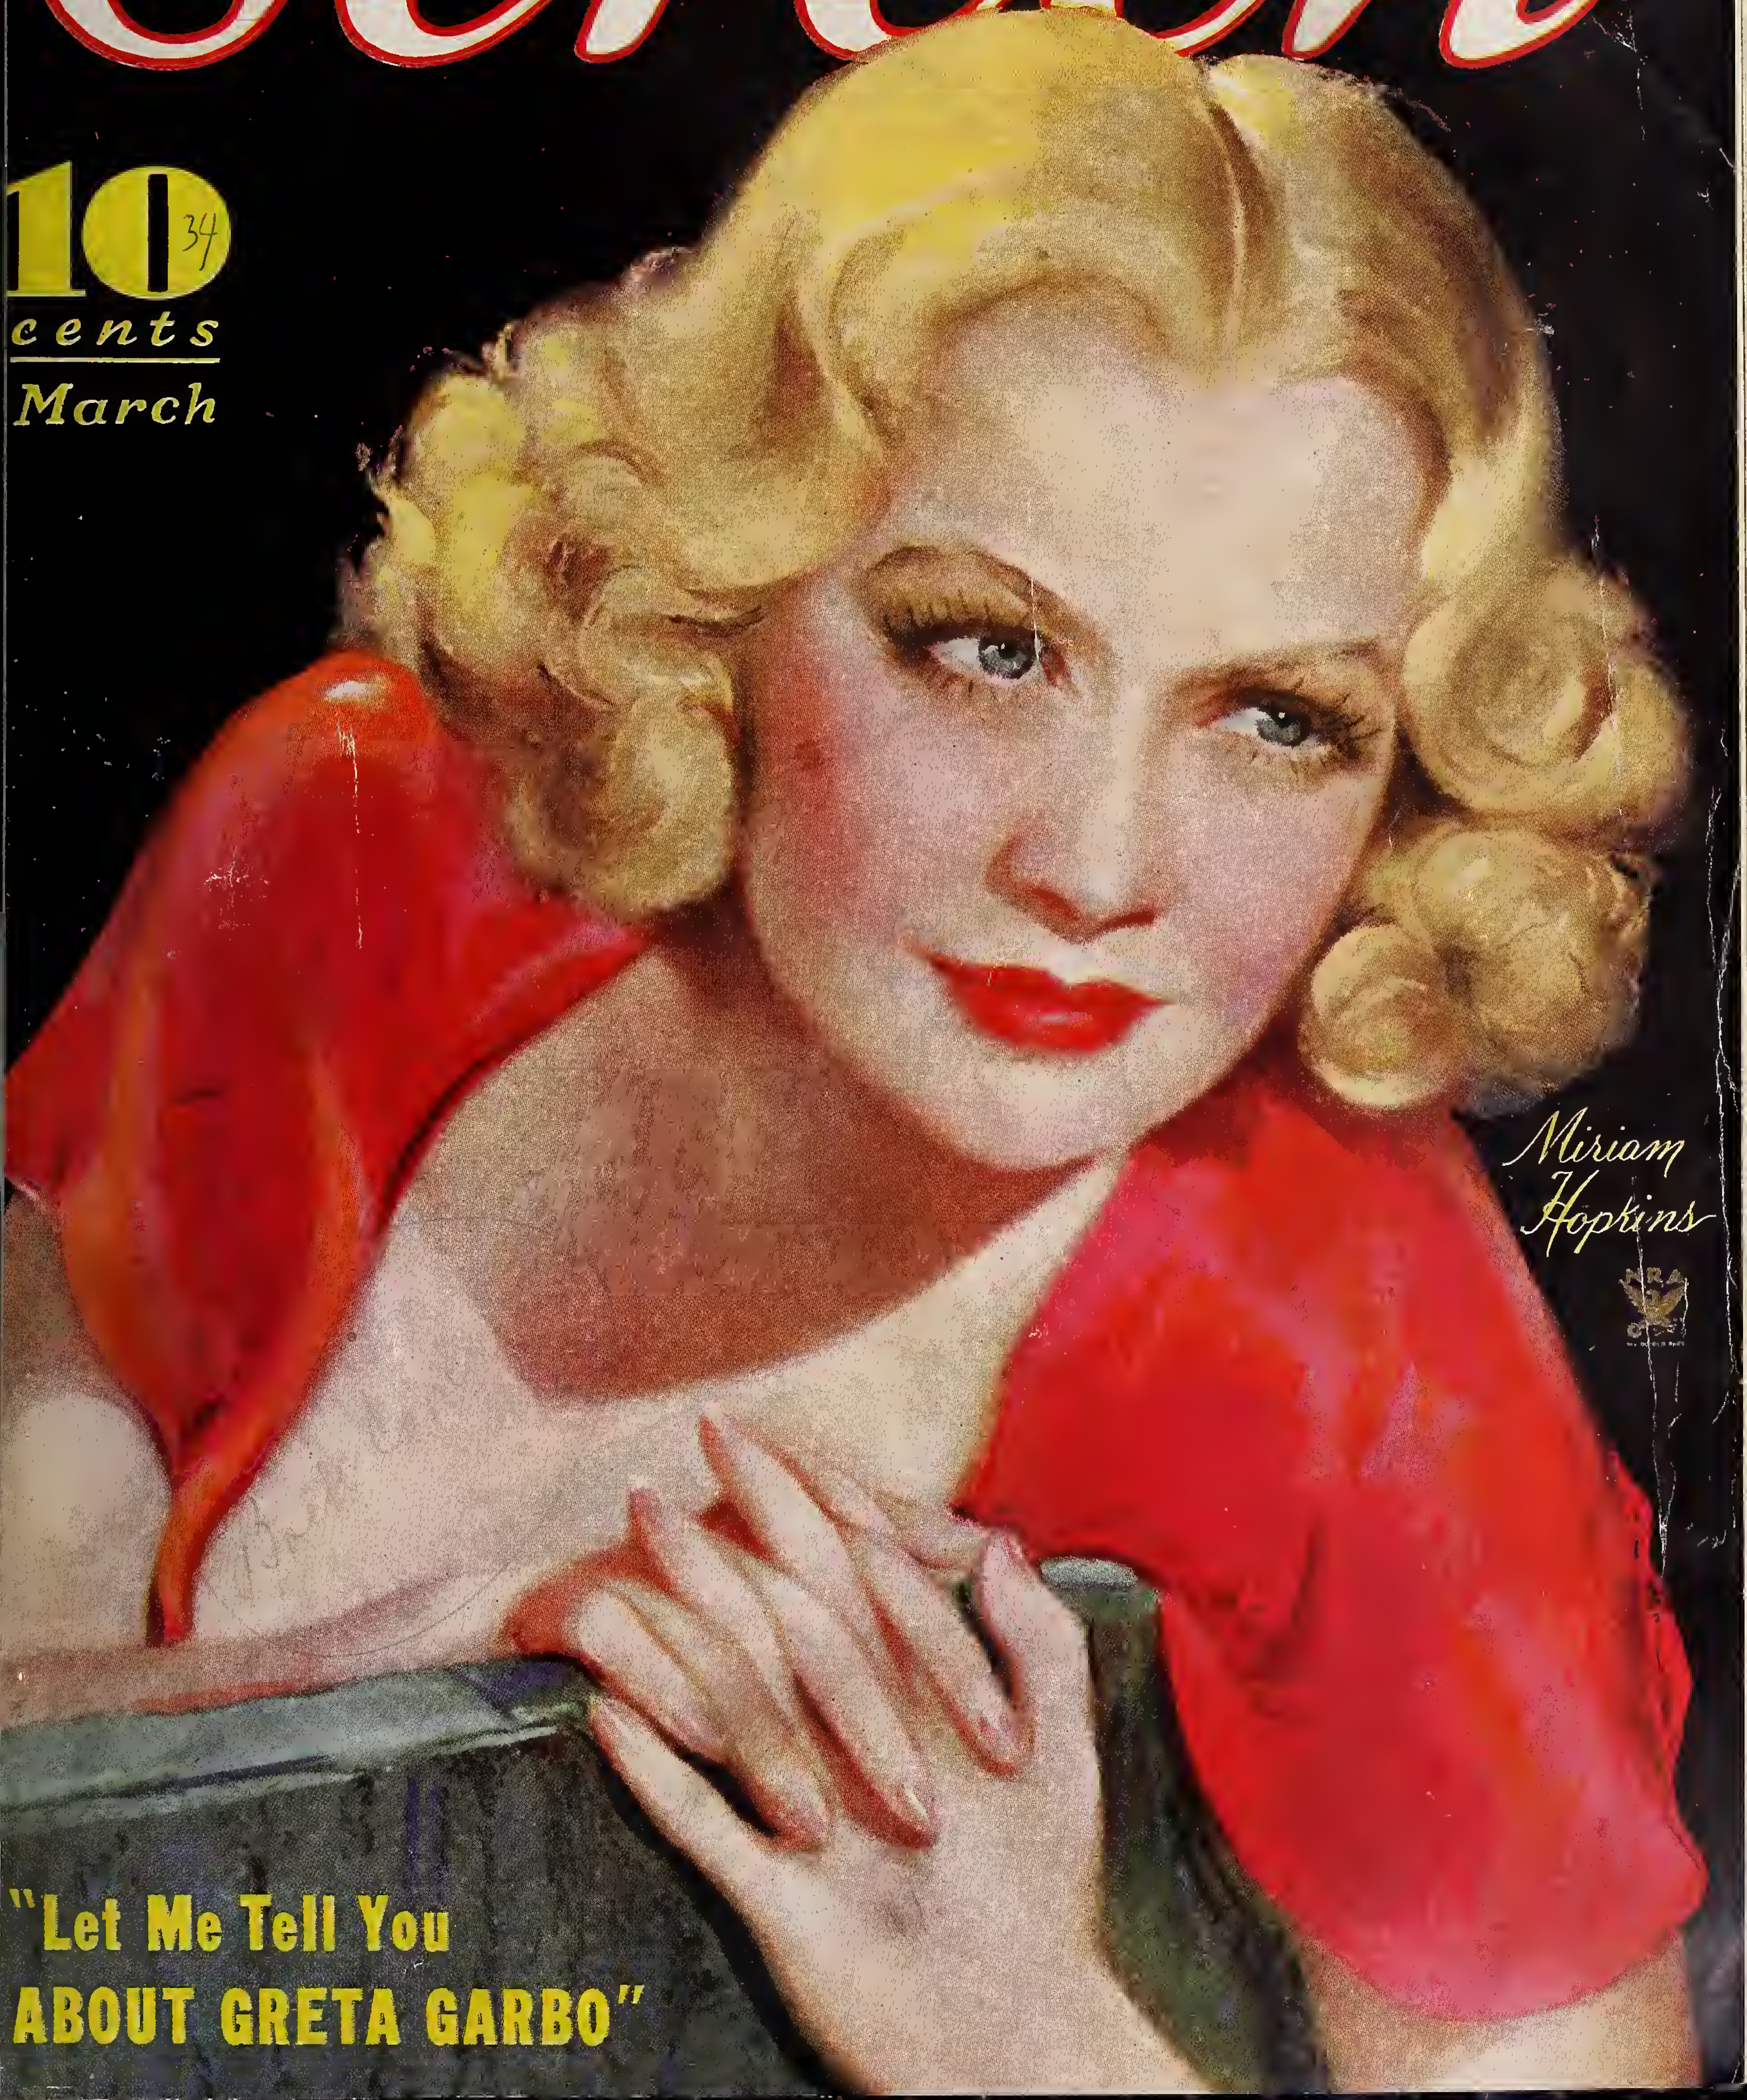
Reach for a Lucky, for always Luckies Please

Copyright, 1933, The American Tobacco Company

MODERN Screen

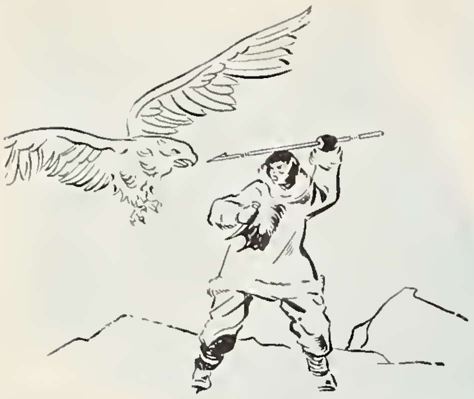
10 34 cents

March



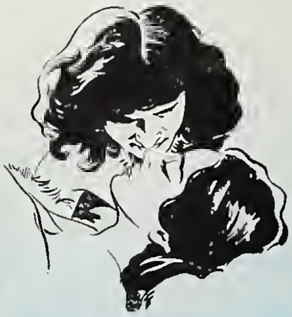
Miriam Hopkins

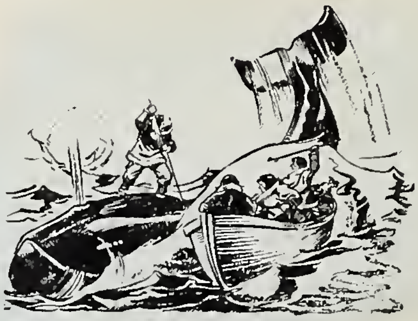
"Let Me Tell You ABOUT GRETA GARBO"



He must spear the wild bird or die of hunger!

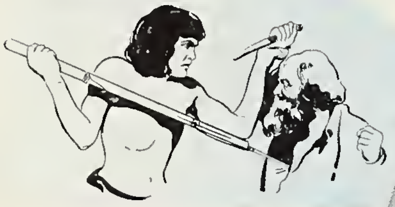
They loved, happy till the white man came!



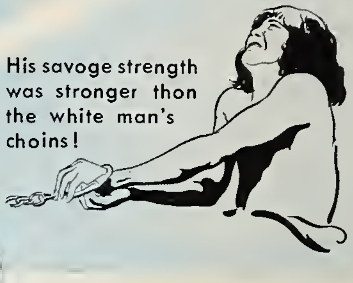


The fearless hunter leaps on the back of the whale!

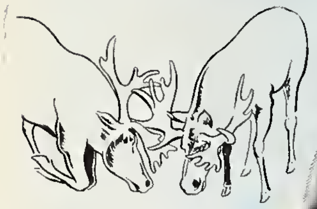
Robbed of the wife he loved, Mala seeks vengeance!



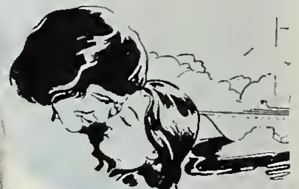
His savage strength was stronger than the white man's chains!



Stampede of thousands of caribou!



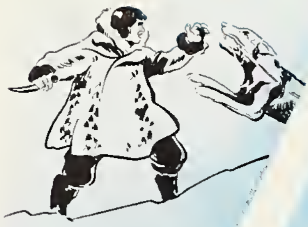
Starvation drives the Eskimo and his pretty women to the trader's ship!



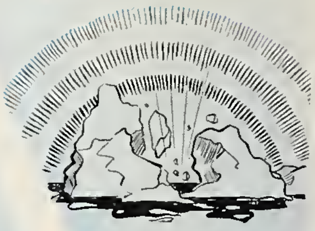
ESKIMO

Successor to "TRADER HORN" thrills!

Twelve months of danger filming in the Arctic—thrills never before attempted! Spectacular picturization of Peter Freuchen's "Eskimo"—romantic novel of woman and the strange moral code of the north.



Hand-to-hand fight with savage wolf!



Actual blood-curdling sounds of breaking of the ice floes!

Directed by W. S. Van Dyke who made "Trader Horn"... Associate Producer: Hunt Stromberg

A METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER Picture

Isn't it a Shame?

Pretty girl . . . pretty clothes . . . but she has cloudy teeth and tender gums!

Don't let "PINK TOOTH BRUSH"
ROB YOU OF YOUR CHARM

WHAT good company she'd be if people would only let her! Well read, quick of mind, entertaining, sympathetic. But the dingy shadow of neglected teeth dims all the rest of her very real charm. People can't see the personality for the teeth.

Yes, it is a shame. But it is more than that; it is a warning. Her "pink tooth brush" should tell her that brushing is not enough. Her tender, bleeding gums say that gingivitis, or Vincent's disease, or even pyorrhea may be on the way. Her flabby, sensitive gums must be restored to health.

It is so easy to have sparkling teeth and healthy gums, with your whole charm shining through. You needn't have a mouth that can't pass muster. Eat the tempting modern foods — too soft to keep gums firm. But clean the teeth, and massage the gums, with Ipana — and modern foods can do no harm.

A daily gentle massaging of the gums with an extra bit of Ipana gives teeth the lustre of health, and keeps "pink tooth brush" at bay, for Ipana helps keep gums firm. Try it for a month, and one worry will be gone.

DON'T TAKE CHANCES!

A good tooth paste, like a good dentist, is never a luxury.

IPANA
TOOTH PASTE

GOOD FOR TENDER GUMS
IPANA
TOOTH PASTE
BRISTOL-MYERS
NEW YORK

BRISTOL-MYERS CO., Dept. K-34
73 West Street, New York, N. Y.

Kindly send me a trial tube of IPANA TOOTH PASTE. Enclosed is a three-cent stamp to cover partly the cost of packing and mailing.

Name..........

Street..........

City.......... State..........

MAR -3 1934

Modern Screen

FOR MARCH

Special Features

LET ME TELL YOU ABOUT GRETA GARBO .... Elizabeth Young 26
How Elizabeth Young met her idol (as told to Dena Reed)

WHO'S CALLING? .... Jack Jamison 28
The studio operators must guard the stars with this constant query

THE CAREER OF AN UGLY DUCKLING .... Beatrice MacDonald 32
This story tells you the real truth about Hepburn's early life—why she is as she is today

THE LOWDOWN ON MICKEY MOUSE .... B. F. Wilson 58
The life story of Mickey Mouse, not to mention the "Three Little Pigs"

Features

LESLIE HOWARD DIDN'T WANT TO COME BACK .... Martha Kerr 16
Leslie Howard has a problem to solve. What would you do under the same circumstances?

MONTGOMERY—MAD AS A MARX BROTHER .... Carter Bruce 30
The likable Bob clowns his way through interviews

FOR ONCE—THE TRUTH ABOUT PICKFORD .... Mary Ann Stevens 40
"America's Sweetheart" debunked

WHY MEN FALL FOR MIRIAM HOPKINS .... Katherine Albert 42
Women want to know how she does it

I'VE DRESSED THEM ALL .... Howard Greer 48
Bringing to a close this famous designer's series of reminiscences

DON'T SEND GILBERT INTO EXILE .... Gladys Hall 60
Will you help save a man's life? You can!

WHAT YOU CAN LEARN FROM ALINE MacMAHON .... Faith Baldwin 62
She's not the wise-cracking gal you might think

THEIR "BEST ESTEEMED" STARS 63
Hawaiian school children tell you in their best English what they think of the stars

THE REAL TRUTH ABOUT RUTH, GEORGE, AND RALPH .... Homer Croy 64
Wherein the author "eats words" and apparently enjoys the dish

ALICE BRADY IS LIKE THAT? .... Hilary Lynn 68
Alice Brady is looked upon with amazement because she tells the truth

WHAT KIND OF A GIRL IS HEATHER? .... Caroline Somers Hoyt 74
How can she be so young and yet so wise?

NILS ASTHER, ENEMY OF HOOEY .... Walter Ramsey 77
You don't know Nils Asther, do you? You've never had a chance—till now

Fashion and Home

THE MODERN HOSTESS 8
Dick Powell is our guest this month. He has a thing or two to tell you housewives

HAVE YOU THE RIGHT BACKGROUND IN YOUR HOME? ..... Virginia T. Lane 70
Some excellent tips on interior decoration

ON DRESS PARADE .... Margery Wells 72
A new department which reviews talkie fashions

THREE STAR PATTERNS 73
Simple patterns for dresses worn by Bette Davis, Wynne Gibson and Ann Dvorak

Departments

BEAUTY ADVICE—FOR MEN THIS TIME 6
BETWEEN YOU AND ME 12
PICTURE NEWS 14
THEY VISIT NEW YORK 35
GOOD NEWS 36
REVIEWS—A TOUR OF TODAY'S TALKIES 44
THE BOOBY PRIZE 47
THE REPORT CARD 121

MARY BURGUM, Managing Editor

REGINA CANNON, Associate Editor   ABRIL LAMARQUE, Art Editor   WALTER RAMSEY, Western Representative

Published monthly and copyrighted 1934 by Dell Publishing Company Incorporated. Office of publication at Washington and South Avenues, Dunellen, N. J. Executive and editorial offices, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; H. Meyer, Vice-President; M. Delacorte, Secretary. Vol. 7, No. 4, March, 1934. Printed in the U. S. A. Price in the United States $1.20 a year; 10c a copy. Canadian subscriptions, $2.40 a year. Foreign subscriptions, $2.20 a year. Entered as second class matter September 18, 1930, at the Post office at Dunellen, New Jersey, under act of March 3, 1879. The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material.

Marlene Dietrich
in
"THE SCARLET EMPRESS"
(Based on a private diary of Catherine the Great) directed by JOSEF VON STERNBERG
A PARAMOUNT PICTURE

BEAUTY ADVICE

for men this time

By

MARY BIDDLE

The men of Hollywood must be well groomed, fit and attractive—or they lose their jobs. Their proper weight is stated in their contracts—and woe betide them if they "go over." Lew Ayres (above) probably never would be fat. But he plays tennis like fury—just in case, you know.

You all know that, when Johnnie Weissmuller was a kid, the doctors gave him up because he was so weak and thin. And just look what swimming has done for him! (Left) The rough jobs the Gable feller tackled in less fortunate days gave him his splendid muscular body and excellent health.

UH-HUH. I said last month I was going to write a beauty article for men—or, at least, for wives, sisters and girl friends to read for their men. And never let it be said that a Biddle broke a promise.

Seriously, though, it's high time the men did come down from their lofty masculine perch long enough to learn a few simple rules about caring for their skin and their hair. And — some of 'em — about keeping fit. That's all I'm going to talk about. Just grooming and keeping fit.

Men are a little bit afraid—a trifle scared of being thought sissies — when it comes to grooming. They're clean enough, Lord knows. If all the hours they spend under the shower were laid end to end—well, we'd be a couple of centuries ahead of hourselves. They stand there—under their old showers—letting the water run on their heads (washing all the oil out of their scalps, incidentally) and—what are they doing? Why, they're thinking that those blamed invoices must be checked today (or whatever one does with invoices) and they'd better call Bill Blither for lunch, wondering what in thunder causes that knock in the car, and singing "Did You Ever See a Dream Walking?"

I have made the astounding observation that nine men out of ten never really wash their faces! Fact. I'll repeat for you, word for word, a conversation I heard between a man and his wife.

Man: "Wish to heck I knew what causes these funny little black specks in my skin. I always look dirty."

Wife: "Well, maybe you are."

Man: "Listen to that! And I just this minute shaved."

Wife: "Shaving isn't washing."

Man: "What is it, then?"

Wife: (The light is beginning to dawn on her.) "Do you mean to say you just shave? Don't you ever scrub your face real good?"

Man: "No. Should I? I use soap when I shave, don't I?"

There—you see? And the guy wonders what causes "those funny little black specks" (blackheads to you and me) on his face.

Blessings, I say, on the make-up which we women wear! It does, at least, make us thorough with our cleansing routines.

ALL that masculine face needs to keep in the pink of condition is a good bland soap, warm water, and plenty of rinsing in cold, cold water. If the skin is hardy and doesn't get irritated easily, a vigorous scrubbing with a roughish wash cloth should be the order of the day. If the skin is delicate—and men can have delicate skins, just as we can—the fingertips should rub the lather well in—gently, but thoroughly. The oily skin should get a brisk slapping with witch hazel or a very mild after-shaving tonic. Beware of strong after-shave preparations. They're too heavy on the alcohol side. The dry skin would profit by having a little of sister's or wifie's hand lotion applied to it before venturing out into the out-of-doors. Any suggestion along that line might raise a squawk, but if you will persist in the idea, he will soon discover that your innocent hand lotion has no sissy odor to it—and he'll like it.

The treatment for blemishes and blackheads is the same as I have told you many times. Blackheads can be eradicated by using a pore paste to wash with—use it just like soap. I know one which has only the faintest medicinal (Continued on page 88)

Day-Dreams come True for Joan · · with her Lovely CAMAY COMPLEXION!

2 "I'm even pleased with myself! Now that my skin is lovelier, I can compete in looks with other girls."

1 "I've always wanted to be attractive to men, and to hold their admiration. But until I began using Camay, my skin was so dull that men never seemed to notice me. Camay has changed all that!"

Turn all your day-dreams into fact! Don't miss the good times that are due you! There's fun in life for the pretty girls—for the girls with Camay Complexions!

ALL LIFE IS A BEAUTY CONTEST

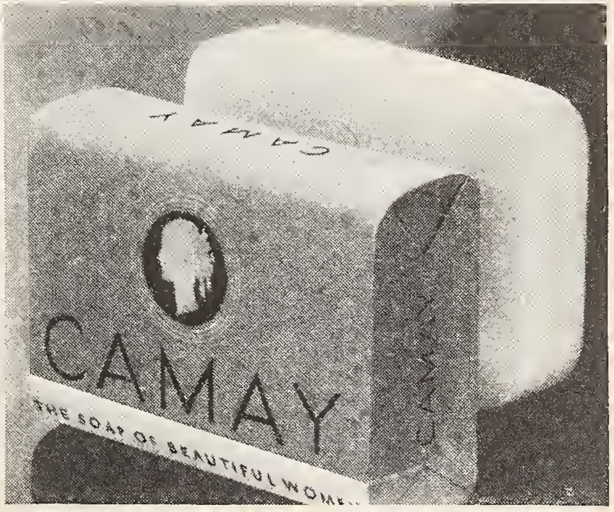
For—like Joan, the girl above—you, too, are in a daily Beauty Contest. At a party, a dance, as you walk down the street—wherever you go—your beauty, your charm, your skin are judged by the searching eyes of men and women.

So get yourself a Camay Complexion—a skin soft as petals and down. Then gallant remarks and sincere compliments will be a daily occurrence.

Camay, the Soap of Beautiful Women, is your ally. Use it faithfully for one month, and very soon you'll detect a new perfection in your skin.

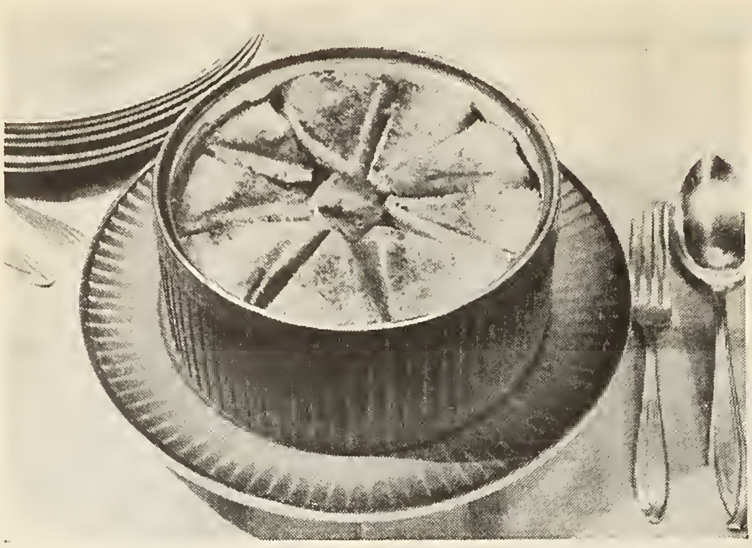
Get a supply of Camay today. The price is amazingly low!

Pure, creamy-white and delicately fragrant, Camay comes in a green and yellow wrapper, in Cellophane.



Copr. 1933, Procter & Gamble Co.

CAMAY The Soap of Beautiful Women



Courtesy Happy Wonder Bakers

Next time you're making Meat Pie, try baking this brown, crispy bread crust over it. Let us send you this recipe, as well as the others which Dick likes. They're all delicious.

The MODERN hostess

How'd you like to entertain Dick Powell? Well, here's what you'd serve him, if he ever visited you

MAYBE you've never thought about it, but the success of any party rests primarily with the hostess herself. A worried, nervous hostess can never put her guests at ease, no matter how bravely she sports her mask of strained gaiety. As Dick Powell expressed it, "There is something unmistakable about the gleam in a woman's eyes when she is worrying about the roast and wondering whether the asparagus is burning which makes me start sniffing the air and fidgeting in my chair."

When we heard him say that, we laughed aloud. We have always called that harassed expression the "burned potatoes look" and it gets us so that we usually end up by asking the poor hostess if she wouldn't like us to dart out into the kitchen and see if things are all right.

Now we don't think there is any excuse for letting a guest go out and help prepare the dinner. That's part of the fun of being a guest—not having to do anything about the food. And what with the way entertaining has been simplified in the last few years, there is no excuse for a hostess having to absent herself for more than a minute or two even though her kitchen be absolutely guiltless of servants. It's all a matter of organization and planning. Your oven and your refrigerator can help you serve splendid company meals, smoothly, comfortably and gracefully. So if you are really smart, you will plan your company menus around foods which can be prepared well in advance, tucked away in one or t'other of those two pieces of kitchen equipment and forgotten until it's time to whisk them onto the table. Thus will you have overcome the first obstacle in the pathway of the hostess who is also cook and waitress.

Take a look at that meal Dick Powell is getting ready to tuck away for instance. There you see a veal and mushroom pie, a casserole of vegetables and a display of stuffed baked potatoes. Could any hostess ask for a more satisfied expression on a dinner guest's countenance than Dick's? This particular combination of foods happens to be Dick's favorite dinner. The recipes for all these dishes are included in this month's little Modern Hostess Star Recipe folder which you can get free by filling in the coupon on page 8 and mailing it to us. There are other recipes included in the folder, too. For instance Dick Powell's favorite dessert, Chocolate (Continued on page 103)

MODERN SCREEN STAR RECIPES

HOME SERVICE DEPARTMENT
MODERN SCREEN Magazine
149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Please send me the recipes for March, 1934.

Name ....
(Print in pencil)

Address ....
(Street and Number)

....
(City) (State)

YOU'LL SEE TWO CONSTANCE BENNETTS . . .

in this intoxicating, spectacular romance with music! . . . the Connie you've always loved—blonde and enticing . . . And a new Connie—brunette, seductive and ravishing! . . . teamed with Franchot Tone to create "the perfect lovers" of the screen!

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK
Presents
CONSTANCE
BENNETT

MOULIN ROUGE

FRANCHOT
TONE
TULLIO CARMINATI
RUSS COLUMBO
BOSWELL SISTERS
Directed by Sidney Lanfield

20th CENTURY PICTURE

A DARRYL F. ZANUCK Production...Released thru UNITED ARTISTS

ALL THINGS CONSIDERED

by the Editor

DO you mind if I help myself to a page? I have felt rather cramped, sometimes, in the "Between You and Me" department. And you need all the space there for yourselves, anyway.

We are still right around the corner from each other. You'll find "Between You and Me" on page 12. And I think we will be able to chat quite comfortably over the advertising fence that separates us.

Here's something that set me thinking: the enormous success of "Little Women," and, on the other hand, of "I'm No Angel." What does the public want most—sex or sweetness? Or do they want both—provided the sex is sprightly and amusing and the sweetness is genuine and never mawkish?

Which do you suppose will gross biggest at the box offices during the next year—the sex or the sweetness? And which will you spend your money to see? I'm anxious to get the returns from your county.

Your editor has become a raving, tearing Garbo fan. I have always admired Garbo—yes. But I have never gone into the ecstasies of rapture that I have shamelessly indulged in since the première of "Queen Christina." It was her first scene, I believe, in that picture which made me feel this way. There is a "long shot" of her on horse-back, galloping furiously through the snow-hung forest. Up to the palace entrance she rides, flings her lithe, slender figure from the horse, goes up the steps and through the massive doors. All this time, one does not see her face. Only the tall, swinging figure, in the boy's clothes, the drooping hat pulled well down on her head. Through room after room of the palace she strides, men-at-arms saluting themselves silly as she passes. Then—into the council room. Lewis Stone, her chancellor, is waiting there for her. She has not turned her face to you yet. Then she speaks her first words—and turns. And a hard-boiled, critical and snooty bunch of New York première-goers applauded—furiously. I tell you, it was thrilling.

Calming down a bit—I am wondering if we are heading for a return of high romance in our entertainment. Costume pictures. Historical drama. Well-beloved stories of another day.

There is Dietrich's "Catherine the Great." There is the Russian newcomer, Anna Sten, in "Nana," with all its nineteenth century French furbelows. And RKO talks of "The Tudor Wench" for Katharine Hepburn, when her New York play has run its course. For Hepburn, too, they are considering Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice."

I'm delighted with the idea. Are you?

Warner Bros.' parade of stars marches to greater glory!..

"42nd Street"..."Gold Diggers"..."Footlight Parade" . . . and now the most spectacular attraction the show world has ever known —"Wonder Bar" Sensation of two continents on the stage, it comes to the screen in a blaze of unrivalled splendor to give you a gloriously new conception of musical screen spectacle!

"WONDER BAR"

Starring

AL JOLSON KAY FRANCIS
DOLORES DEL RIO DICK POWELL
RICARDO CORTEZ HAL LEROY
FIFI D'ORSAY GUY KIBBEE
HUGH HERBERT KATHRYN SERGAVA
RUTH DONNELLY ROBERT BARRAT
MERNA KENNEDY HENRY KOLKER

Directed by LLOYD BACON • Dance numbers created and directed by BUSBY BERKELEY • A First National Picture

between you and me

INSPIRING
DIV
BE
CH
G!
NG
NUTS!
VITAL!
IN ALLURING!
BEAUTIFUL!

. . . Fans, this page is all yours. Let us know what you think of this and that movie topic

WE WANT TRACY!

Adjectives, Adjectives and Some More Adjectives

E. BEARD, of St. Louis, Mo., wants to meet:

Nils Asther because he is handsome in a way that no one else in Hollywood is handsome and possesses a magnetism or male allure that can be compared only to the allure of the feminine possessed by The Garbo; because he is all fire and warmth like a smoldering volcano ready to erupt at any moment; because he is the only man I know who can be utterly villainous and adorable at the same time.

ZaSu Pitts because I know she is sweet simple and charming in real life even if she is nutty as the devil in her screen characterizations; because I know that she has a dramatic power that Hollywood refuses to recognize; and because with a smile that only she can smile, and with a motion of those ethereal hands, she can wring the heart of a stone with pathos that makes Chaplin look silly.

Buster Crabbe because he is one "lion-man" or "ape-man" who is really good looking; because he is formed like a human being of exceptional robustness, and not like an ape; because he's a better actor than others of his type. (Weissmuller fans, will you stand for this?)

Greta Garbo because no one is as vital as Garbo; no one is as divine as Garbo; no one is as inspiring as Garbo; no one is as unearthly beautiful as Garbo; no one is as alluring as Garbo; no one is as glamorous as Garbo; in short, Garbo is Garbo, and as such, is by that fact without equal or peer.

A Lady Talks

R. KING, of Cranford, N. J., is a lady. She says so.

If I hadn't been brought up to be a lady, I'd emit a few cuss words, because: 1. The "bit" players are being neglected. 2. There's too much fuss being made over Lee Tracy's "balcony" episode. 3. Marian Nixon is getting too many insignificant roles. 4. Ditto Ralph Bellamy. Why won't he cut out his "character" acting and settle down to a "type"? He's not a plausible villain. He's a hero. And let that be a lesson to him. 5. We're not getting enough of Edna May Oliver. (Oh, no? Wait till you see her with Edward Everett Horton in "The Poor Rich.") 6. Because you won't have males on your covers. Gene Raymond, for instance. (Well, you can't say we didn't give you half a cover. Max Baer with Myrna Loy on our February number, f'r'instance.) com'n up som'time

CENSOR

"We Want Tracy"

MRS. C. U., of Osceola, Indiana, is just one of Lee's many fans who feels this way:

I'm quite sure that the biggest majority of us are saddened by the episode in Lee Tracy's life that has made him an exile from the screen. We are appealing to Mexican fans as well as to American fans to help him by sending letters or telegrams to the Mexican authorities to relent and be a little more tolerant and kind. He never killed any of their citizens or did any unpardonable thing their own sons might not have done under the same circumstances.

M-G-M, Paramount, Fox, all of you, please remove the cruel wall you've built up keeping him on the outside—the unyielding wall that the fans are beating against so hopelessly. Most of us feel just about as sad as when some loved star has passed on into the Great Beyond.

So, fans, let's steal Eddie Cantor's song and sing: "We Want Tracy! We Want Tracy!"

O-o-h, What Harsh Words

JULIA L. EICHENBERG, of Cleveland, Ohio, says them:

How "I'm No Angel" ever passed the censors is beyond me but probably her "curves" appealed to them. As to her "curves," she's the next thing to a truck horse in my estimation. When a few other stars put on a little weight, they're put on a diet. Yet this Mae West person comes to Hollywood with her curves and bumps and not-so-youngish look and is said to cause a riot.

Hurrah for Toby!

PEGGY McNEIL, of San Francisco, Calif., thinks she's swell:

(Continued on page 15)

"I JUST COULDN'T GET ALONG WITHOUT TINTEX!"

Every Home Needs TINTEX!

These famous Tints and Dyes make faded Wardrobe and Home Decorations new again—at the cost of a few pennies

"I USE TINTEX ON ALL MY APPAREL!"

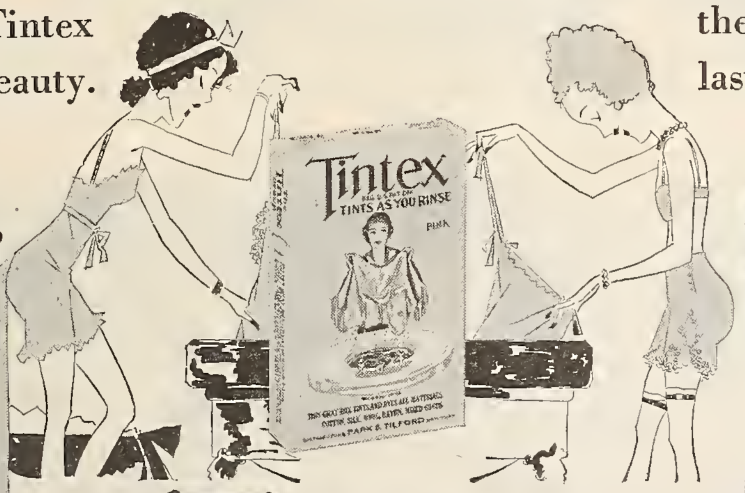
HAVE you a faded dress — or a sweater, stockings, underthings, or any other wearing apparel that's out of fashion in color? Tintex will restore its original color, or give it an entirely different color if you wish.

Have you faded curtains or drapes—or perhaps you are just simply tired of their present color? Let Tintex give them new color beauty.

That's the miracle of color that Tintex is performing in millions of American homes from Maine to California—and at a few cents' cost! New, fresh, scintillating color — for everything that's washable. So easy, so quick — so professionally perfect in results.

Start today. Choose your favorites from the 35 brilliant, long-lasting Tintex colors.

"ISN'T IT A LOVELY COLOR? TINTEX DID IT!"



Tintex
TINTS AS YOU RINSE
PINK
PARK & TILFORD

"TINTEX KEEPS MY WARDROBE SO FASHIONABLE!"

Tintex

..World's largest selling

TINTS and DYES

On sale at drug stores and notion counters everywhere

PARK & TILFORD, Distributors

To Change Dark Colors to Light—use Tintex COLOR REMOVER

Supposing you have a dark dress (or any other dark-colored article) and are pining for a lighter colored one . . .

Tintex Color Remover will safely and speedily take out all trace of color (including black) from any fabric . . .

Then it can be redyed or tinted with Tintex Tints and Dyes in any new shade to suit yourself—either light or dark.

PICTURE NEWS!

Scott

If you have wanted to know what Mrs. Otto Kruger is like, there she is (above) having a late snack, with her 'osband, at Hollywood's popular Russian Eagle. (Below) The photographers caught up with Gary and Sandra when Mr. and Mrs. Cooper checked into Arizona for their honeymoon.

Adolphe Menjou, after a spell in London, made the boat train at Waterloo just in time to catch the Olympic for home. (Below) A medal "For Distinguished Service to Children." Walt Disney, receives same from Mrs. M. S. Sabin of "Parents Magazine." Pres. Von Kleinsmid of S. C. U. looks on.

Wide World

International

Between You and Me

(Continued from page 12)

Even if she is nick-named after a horse that makes no difference. Toby Wing surely deserved the honor of being the prettiest chorus girl in Hollywood. And what a smile! I don't know how she would act, so I don't know whether I would like to see her in bigger roles or not. Toby was darling with Dick Powell in "Forty-Second Street." I saw that picture exactly twelve times. I mean it. And I could see it twelve more times.

A Couple of "Little Women" Raves

CYNTHIA, of New Bedford, Mass., is grateful for "Little Women":

Wasn't "Little Women" a delightful change? One realizes that not all movies are low life, or society, or sex. Several widely advertised pictures have left me unsatisfied, but this picture filled me with the content of perfect satisfaction. It couldn't have been improved in any way.

Now, may one of her admirers add another plea to the many already given for saner publicity for Katharine Hepburn. I've watched her four inspired performances and thrilled to her forceful personality. Then it's quite disillusioning to read about her crazy stunts. It seems to me that if magazines stopped printing crazy stunts, publicity agents might use wise publicity methods.

(Agree with you, Cynthia old thing—partly. If you will read the life story of Katharine Hepburn, which begins in this issue—page 32—we think you'll understand this girl and her crazy stunts a little better.)

WANDA CALLAHAN, of Terre Haute, Indiana, talks up, too:

I think that if there were more pictures like "Little Women," it would help the country more in love and courage. I certainly loved the characters and thought they were all fine. It has made me want to read the book all over again. And although I am only nineteen, I approve very much of the old-fashioned ways, even to the hoop-skirts and pantaloons. I sat from 4 o'clock until 9 o'clock through this show, so you know how much I liked it.

Garbo Is Just Too Mysterious for This Lady

MRS. LARRY GRAHAM, of Salisbury, N. C., holds Joan Crawford up as an example for Garbo:

What you said about Mae West twisting every possible situation into a sex gag exactly expresses my feelings about Garbo's "mystery" act. I went to see "Grand Hotel" because Crawford was in it and would have enjoyed it had it not been for Garbo's silly acting. When I see her cast in such grand and mighty roles, it amuses me as much as a real good

(Continued on page 123)

GREAT WEEK-END ISN'T IT? JIM'S NEW WIFE IS A PEACH!
YES..BUT I'M NOT SO KEEN ABOUT MOLLIE'S HOUSEKEEPING. JUST LOOK AT THESE SHEETS AND THINGS!

Everybody notices "Tattle-Tale Gray"

...and here's what to do about it

UM-M! I SMELL NAPTHA!

It's sad—but true! No matter how HARD some women work, their washes look simply awful! The clothes won't come white—they will come gray . . . People notice—and whisper! . . . What's the trouble? . . . Dirt still hiding in the clothes! They aren't really clean! That's what makes clothes tell unpleasant tales. But . . .

Change to Fels-Naptha Soap and say goodbye to "Tattle-Tale Gray." Unlike trick soaps, Fels-Naptha goes into every tiny thread and gets out all the dirt. Gets it out—because it brings you two cleaners instead of one. Rich golden soap—and added to that—lots of naptha. So much naptha you can smell it!

Surprise yourself! Get Fels-Naptha Soap today and see how dazzling white it gets your clothes. Learn how gentle it is—safe for daintiest stockings and lingerie. Easy on hands, too! In tub or washer, whether you soak or boil clothes, Fels-Naptha gives you extra help—sweet-as-clover washes!

BANISH
"TATTLE-TALE GRAY"
WITH FELS-NAPTHA SOAP

FELS-NAPTHA
FELS-NAPTHA

© 1934, FELS & CO.

LESLIE HOWARD DIDN'T WANT TO COME BACK

Leslie Howard bought a home when he visited England recently. He admits he spent far too much money having it remodelled. And—when will he be able to enjoy it?

By MARTHA KERR

NO—Leslie Howard didn't want to leave England. That is, his heart didn't want to leave. His head told him that he must return to the United States and Hollywood. And, as a matter of fact, his head wanted to come back. Because—well, I'm getting muddled. Let me tell the whole story properly.

One of the most important news items flashed across the cinema wires lately is the fact that Leslie Howard is on his way to Hollywood for the purpose of acting the chief role in Somerset Maugham's "Of Human Bondage." The perfect star for one of the great classics of modern years! Why it hasn't been grabbed up as a vehicle for some good male actor years ago, is one of the many film mysteries that will remain unsolved. When the officials of RKO had approached him with the reminder that he still had one picture to do for them under contract, Leslie felt that something drastic in the way of action on his part should be performed. He was smarting from the recent failure of the play he did in London—"This Side Idolatry." The piece had drawn from the London press unstinted praise for Leslie's artistry—but unfortunately, the play flopped.

"You know really," he said in telling the story, "I simply cannot understand what has happened to the theatre over there lately. They absolutely refuse to patronize anything that is serious. Revues, musical comedies, thrillers, and, above all, farces, seem to flourish like nothing you have ever seen. But when it comes to a drama of genuine merit—they just don't want to see it."

And you—readers—knowing Leslie Howard's work on the screen as you do, can understand how he'd feel about that.

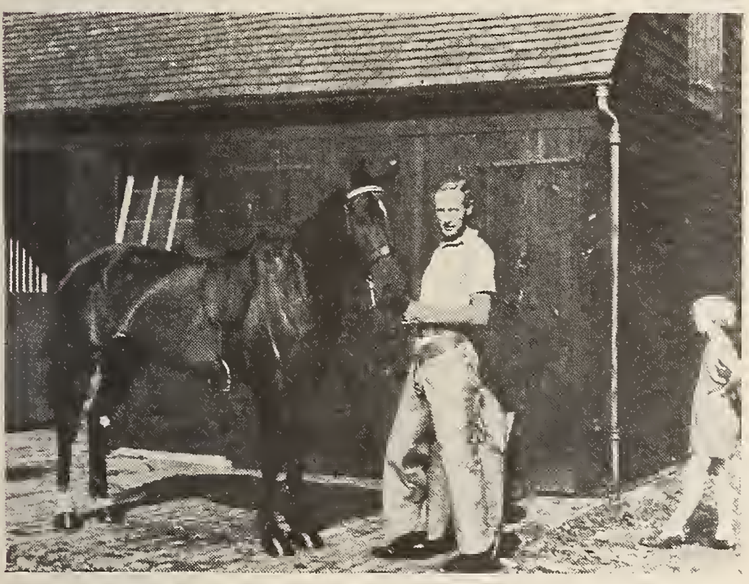
Nevertheless—

"When they told me I had to come back to America to do a picture, I felt pretty badly. I put it off, saying that they hadn't found anything suitable—any story I felt I wanted to do. They showed me script after script and finally in desperation, they asked me what—if any—particular story did I have in mind. As a matter of fact—it was more because I thought it would be impossible for them to get around the idea than anything else that I suggested 'Of Human Bondage.' Well, they got hold of the book, read it, became quite enthusiastic, decided I had shown excellent judgment and proceeded with negotiations to buy it."

He stopped. I had the feeling that he had memorized

. . . Everything closest his heart remains in England. But his driving ambition—his acting genius—can find fulfillment only in our country. And so, he spends part of each year before the cameras of Hollywood

With his daughter—called Leslie, after her father. Outside the former Elizabethan relic which Howard has turned into a beautiful country home. Even the plummy role he'll play in "Of Human Bondage"—which he has yearned to play for many years—cannot entirely still his homesick longings for the land across the sea.



that little speech—prepared it in advance for me, the fan magazine interviewer, to note down neatly for my story. Not that it wasn't, every bit, quite true. Not that he isn't vitally keen about playing the role of the sensitive hero of Maugham's story. But—I had the feeling that there was something else he had much rather be talking about. Then—just as if Hollywood and contracts and pictures didn't exist—he began to talk excitedly.

I WANT to tell you about my new home," he blurted out. "I have always wanted a home of my own in England. And this time when I went over I looked around for one. After quite a search I found an old workman's cottage—that is, it had been one originally, nearly four hundred years ago—but it had been added to and remodelled through the centuries, until now it is most picturesque. It's in Surrey. In the Surrey hills."

He radiated enthusiasm. One could see that his whole heart and soul lies in the land of his birth. He might just as well have been singing "England—My England" at the top of his voice from the expression on his face as he went on to describe his home.

"Of course, I spent much more money than I should have in fixing it up. I put in bathrooms. I added a wing for the children. I enlarged the stables and bought a few horses. There's about thirty acres of ground around it and I had to landscape them. One of the great thrills of my life came to me when I discovered the magnificent old wooden beams under the stucco. They must have been on the house when Queen Elizabeth reigned, so I had all the outside taken off in order that they might be seen. It's really a very nice house," he smiled shyly—just a little embarrassed at his own emotion—so un-British—about the place. "I had a perfectly grand time doing it over—and the children just adore it."

"I like to hunt very much," he continued, "and I hunted right up until the day I sailed for America. My little daughter, Leslie, hunts with me. She's nine and has turned out to be a great little horseback rider. We spend days out on our horses riding through the country-side. The boy doesn't seem to care so much for riding. He's more the studious type. But Leslie is a great companion and I miss her," he added.

"I talked to them both yesterday over long distance. They have their governess, a Miss Gospel (don't you love the name?) and she has been with them ever since they were born. We thought because they love the place so and the fact that they're both in school, they should be left behind."

There! Wouldn't you think it was any average father-away-from-home talking about his kids and how smart and cute they are? But Leslie Howard isn't any average father. He is— (Continued on page 119)

Janet GAYNOR
Lionel
BARRYMORE
"Carolina"

Robert YOUNG • Richard CROMWELL • Mona BARRIE

Henrietta CROSMAN • Stepin FETCHIT •

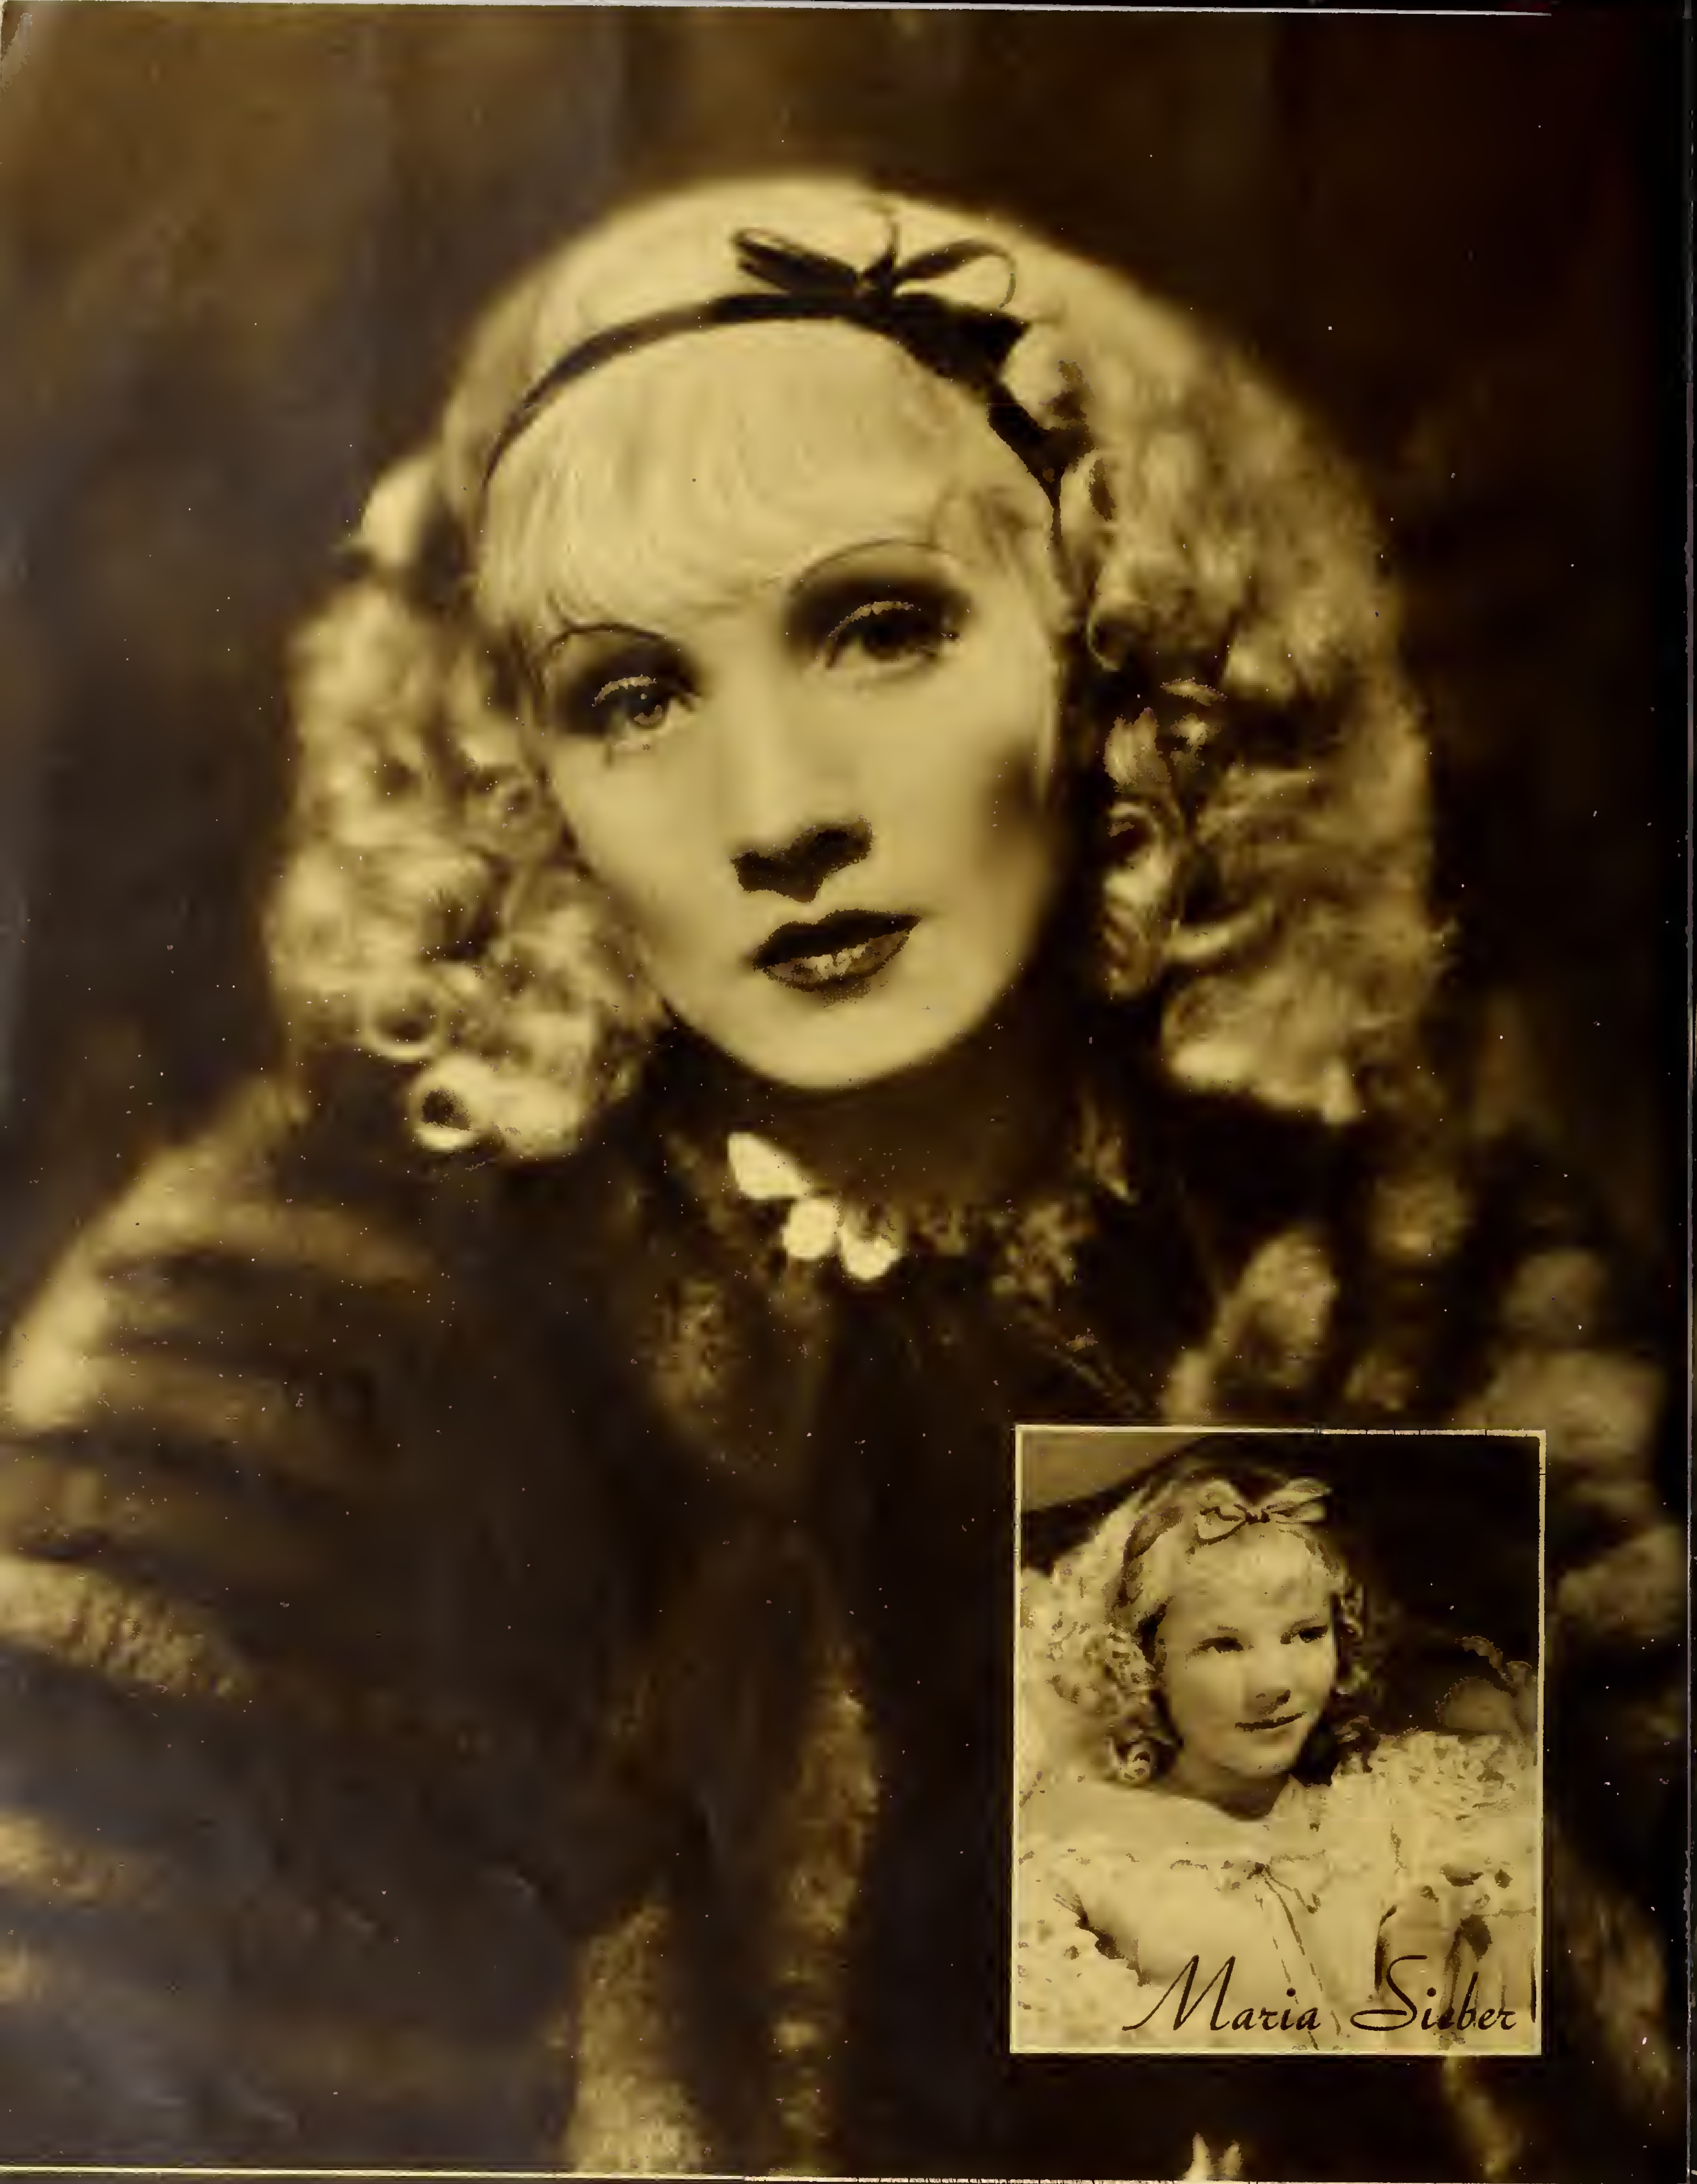
DIRECTED BY HENRY KING
SCREEN PLAY BY REGINALD BERKELEY
FROM "THE HOUSE OF CONNELLY" BY PAUL GREEN

Glorious love story in a setting vibrant with drama. Seven stars, the season's most illustrious cast, enthrall you as it unfolds. A human, pulsing romance that will be engraved in your memory for all of 1934.

FOX

Elissa Landi

Elissa Landi felt lonesome without her three thousand books, so her mother is bringing them over from England. The girl's fourth novel (when does she find the time?) will be out in the spring. "Ancestors" is the name. And the names of her latest pictures are "By Candlelight," for Universal, and "Man of Two Worlds," for RKO-Radio.



Marlene Dietrich

Isn't it uncanny? The likeness, we mean. Little Maria Seiber plays the very young Catherine in Mama Marlene's "Catherine the Great." Marlene is magnificent as the Empress who attached more lovers and more power to herself than any lady since Helen of Troy. Joseph von Sternberg directed this picture.

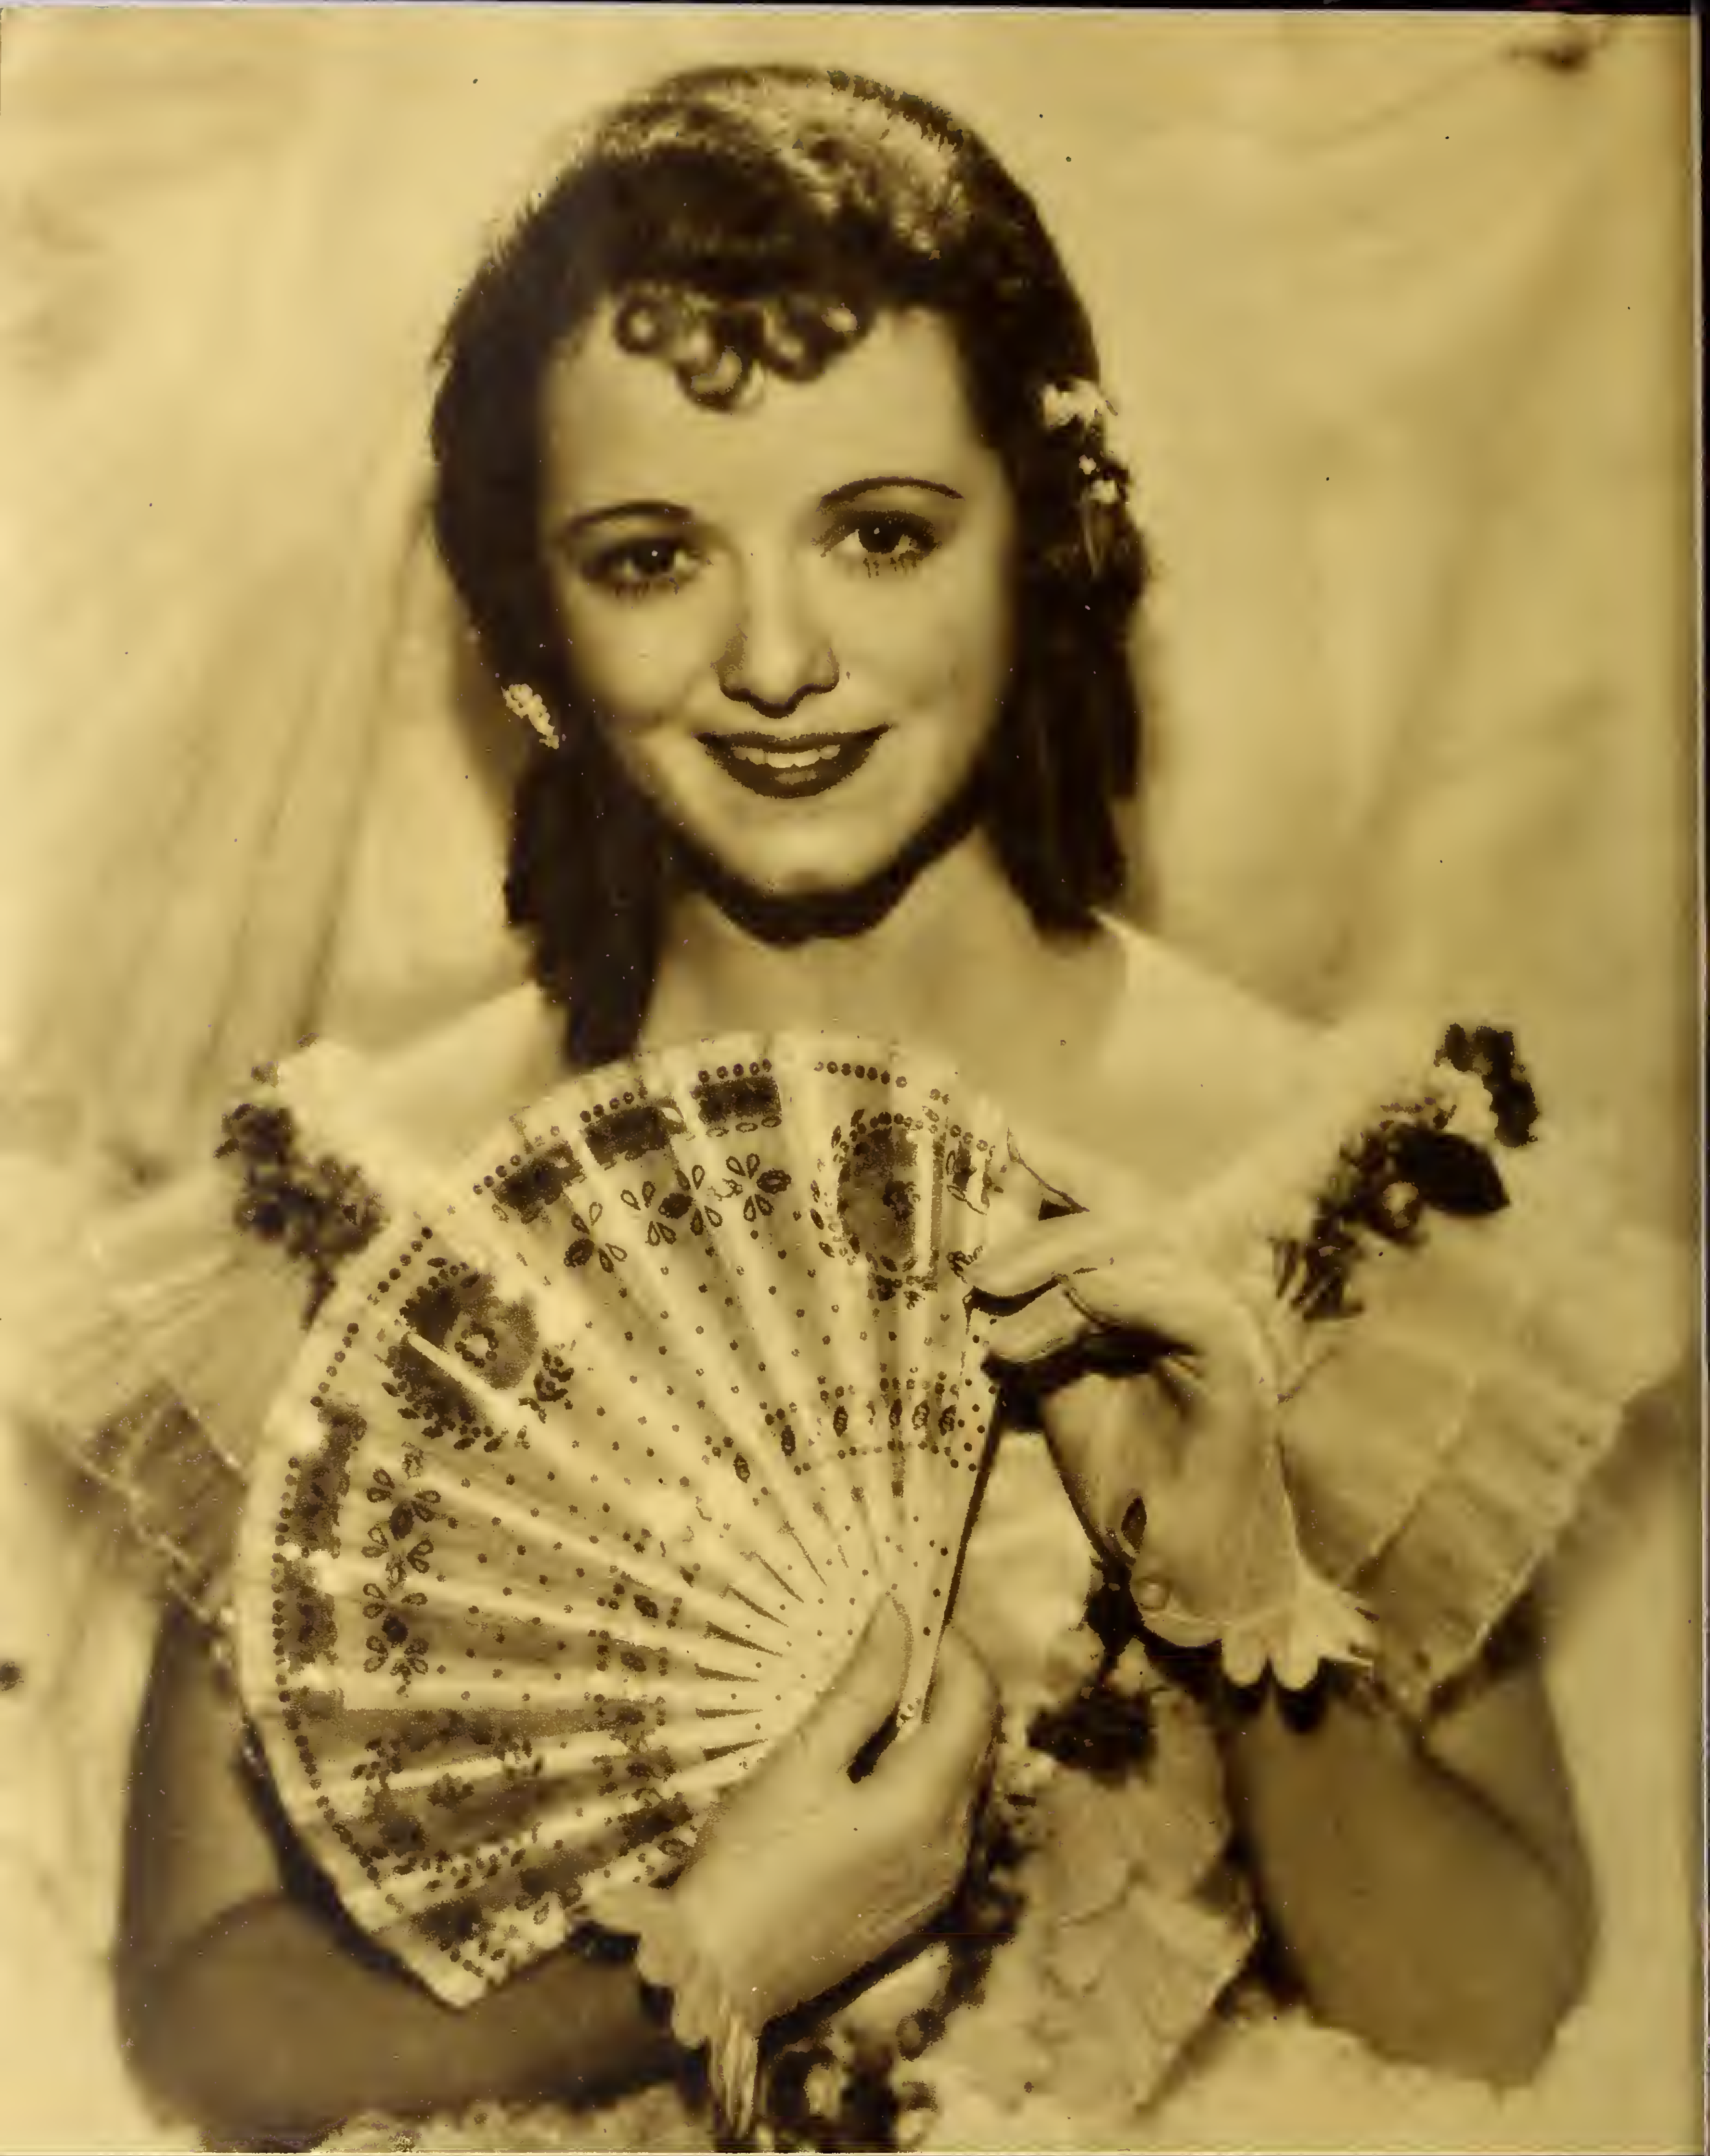
Isabel Jewell
Otto Kruger

Our entry for the most thrilling clinch of the month. Otto Kruger and Isabel Jewell in "The Women in His Life"—the story of a sensational lawyer. We're glad to see Isabel Jewell (Mrs. Lee Tracy to be?) getting a real break. She's a capable little actress. And she was so darn loyal a little while ago—remember? "Men in White" is her latest.

John Boles since "Beloved" has been working in three pictures. "Disillusion," "Bottoms Up" and the French version of "My Lips Betray." Being that busy, he is to be excused for saying he likes quiet evenings at home with a book. Because it's probably true, in his case. When he'll consent to step out, John is one of Hollywood's smoothest dancers.

Ann Dvorak

Ann Dvorak eats pie, potatoes and pâté de foie gras—and can't gain a pound. She has been conducting a nationwide search for her father, whom she hasn't seen since she was eight. Ann and husband Leslie Fenton live on a ranch and raise rabbits—which ought to be easy. Her latest picture is "Massacre," with Dick Barthelmess.



Janet Gaynor Janet Gaynor loves to visit Chinatown. Most of her close friends are non-professionals. She has been seen around quite a bit lately with Gene Raymond—but it's not a romance, so don't go starting any gossip. Janet has worked ten weeks straight without a day's rest on "Carolina." Dick Cromwell's in it, too. Next—"Movietone Follies."

MARY CARLISLE
in "SHOULD LADIES BEHAVE" with Conway Tearle
an M-G-M picture

SATIN-SOFT HANDS PLAY STAR ROLES IN LOVE

Satin-textured hands, laid confidingly on a man's sleeve . . . soft, white fingers, brushing a caress across his cheek . . . how they send up heart-beats! Learn from the screen stars, experts in love, the value of soft, alluring, white hands. So easy to have them! Every night, and after exposure or washing during the day, smooth in HINDS HONEY AND ALMOND CREAM. Hinds is much more than a finishing lotion. It is a rich, penetrating cream in liquid form, that smooths, softens, and protects. And it's so inexpensive!

NOW IN A SMART NEW BOTTLE

MARY CARLISLE'S lovely hands make her slightest gesture impartant! Shawn with Conway Tearle in Metra-Goldwyn-Mayer's picture, "Should Ladies Behave."

TRY Hinds Cleansing Cream, too, by the same makers. Delicate, light...liquefies instantly, floats out dirt! 10c, 40c, 65c.

Tune in on Radio Hall of Fame, featuring greatest stars of

You—who have always wanted to meet Garbo—meet a girl who did! And, more—one who worked, played, and talked with her!

LET ME TELL YOU ABOUT GRETA GARBO

By ELIZABETH YOUNG

as told to

DENA REED

WHEN I think that a few years ago I was in school and now I'm the girl who can talk about Garbo—actually do a "she said to me and I said to her"—it sends shivers of excitement up and down my spine. When I look at the stills of "Queen Christina" and see myself in scenes with her, playing the only other woman's role in the picture—that of her confidante and lady-in-waiting—I think, "Well, here's something to tell my grandchildren!"

I guess I've seen every Garbo picture. I admire her work tremendously. But that I should appear in one of Miss Garbo's pictures, much less joke with her between scenes and get to know the real woman, I never imagined in my wildest dreams. I had only been in a few New York plays before Paramount gave me a contract and I had appeared in only one picture, "The Big Executive," for my own studio. So when a Paramount official met me at the Cocoanut Grove and asked, "How would you like to appear with Garbo?" I naturally supposed he was teasing me. Everyone in Hollywood has to stand for a lot of ribbing—especially the newcomers. Soon several people told me that Metro was looking for a girl who was "the epitome of femininity" and Paramount was dickering with them for my services. It seemed the typical Hollywood joke, with me the butt. Even on the day I was summoned to the Metro office and Walter Wanger told me I was going into the Garbo picture, I thought he was still joking. But when they sent me to Adrian to have my measurements taken for costumes, I realized Metro wasn't going to spend good money to play a practical joke on Elizabeth Young. From the time I decided that it was all true, I went into a daze.

CONSEQUENTLY my first impression of Garbo is blurred. I know that I was thrilled to death when I met her at a dialogue rehearsal, and she said "How do you do" to me with gracious shyness as she did to everyone else she didn't know. Then we got down to the business at hand. After two weeks of rehearsals with Garbo becoming more and more friendly to me, I gradually emerged from my coma.

Reggie Owen with whom I had played on the stage, teased me a lot and Director Mamoulian, whom I am told suggested me for the part after having seen me on the Paramount lot, soon began his own teasing. He called me "The Funny One" and kept impressing upon me the fact that I was a light little butterfly who had to "float" through the picture. I was to be a sort of comedy relief, a foil for Garbo. But the first time I tried on one of my costumes (which, incidentally, cost fifteen hundred dollars) I told Mamoulian that no one could "float" in such clothes. They were frightfully heavy. Even Garbo couldn't take a step in hers without tottering. In fact, that first day we each went around clutching a bottle of smelling salts. I expected to faint any minute.

But Mamoulian insisted that "float" I must and every time a new man came on the set and I asked who he was, Mamoulian would reply, "He's your new floating instructor." Garbo thought it a great joke, since she could appreciate my predicament.

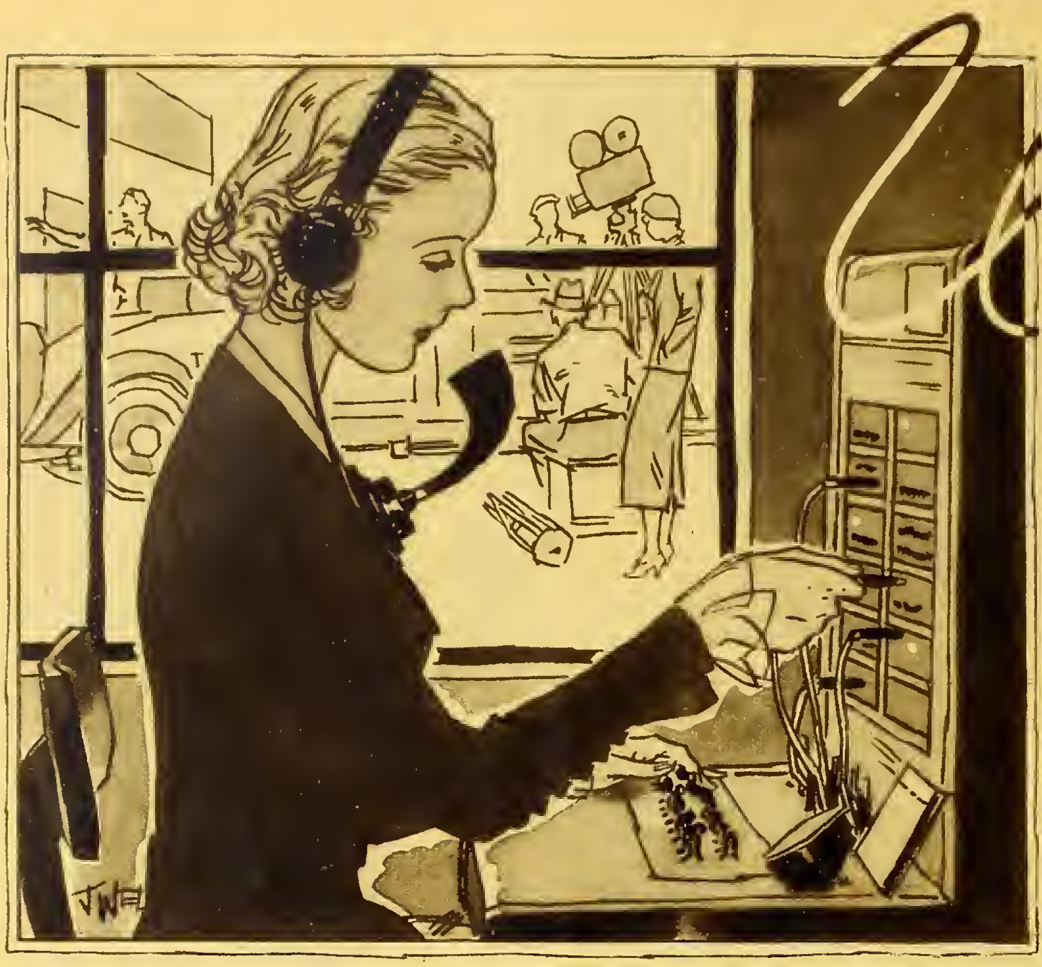
I had made up my mind that I wasn't going to gush and "Oh-Miss-Garbo" her. I realized, as every one else did, how much the picture meant to her. I knew she wanted to be alone to study most of the time and I figured that if she wanted to talk to me, she would do so without my pestering her. So I stayed with Reggie Owen and Lewis Stone and chatted and laughed on the sidelines. Often, I saw Garbo looking at us almost enviously. Garbo legend or no, she is honestly shy and finds it hard to join a group. I got a much better idea of her when she came over to talk to me when I was alone.

SHE began by discussing the picture. She was very intense and serious, both because it was a story of her homeland and because (Continued on page 90)

Who's

By JACK JAMISON

Illustrated by JACK WELCH



"What's Miss Crawford's charge account number?"

A GREAT motion picture studio is a machine and the metal heart of that machine, connecting all its various parts by nerves of copper wire, is the studio telephone exchange. There, in a small room walled in by the glossy black expanse of the PBX board, while the plugs shoot into their jacks as swiftly as deft fingers can direct them, amidst the twinkling flashes of light which glide over the board like fireflies, the heart of the studio beats out its hasty rhythm.

"I'll connect you with the casting office in just a minute. Will you hold on?"

"I'm sorry, but he isn't a star here."

"Miss Harlow, a man is on the wire saying he's your uncle."

"I'll give you the story editor's secretary."

"Hello, Chief. A yellow Packard will arrive at the gate in ten minutes. Let it in."

The lights twinkle, the deft hands move across the board, and the trained voices go on in a murmur which blends in a single drowsy hum. But the things which those operators' voices are saying, the noes and yesses, the questions and answers surging in and out along those wires, are charged with action. They are far from drowsy! They are the inner life, the very heartbeat of the studio!

The studio switchboards are usually tucked away in an old building somewhere on the lot, wherever room can be found for them. At MGM, for instance, you enter a door leading into what appears to be the make-up department, take an unexpected turn to the right, find yourself in what must have once been a dark hallway and, all of a sudden, see the tiny lights flashing, and hear the efficient voices. Three hundred calls an hour are humming in and out over that board. It is a link connecting a thousand studio telephones with every state in the Union, every nation of the world. And at the same time it is an electrified wire fence able, at will, to cut the studio off from the outside world as thoroughly as if it were suddenly moved to a desert island.

"Paris calling."

"I'm sorry, but we aren't allowed to give out that information."

IT is with information that can*not* be given out that the phone operators serve one of their most valuable purposes. Literally hundreds of doting mamas, for example, call the studios to say, "My little girl is only three years old, but all the neighbors say she can act just like Marie Dressler. I just thought I'd tell you, so you can give her a contract." Casting directors are busy men. If all the mothers who try to get in touch with them were laid end to end—well, if they were all laid end to end, the casting directors would get a lot more sleep. Here the phone girl steps in, explaining as tactfully as she possibly can that comparatively few motion pictures with children are made and that plenty of children are already available for them. A similar problem are the hundreds of tourists who call in to ask for the stars' telephone numbers. Here again the phone girls step in. Naturally the stars can't give their time to these chance visitors. Their phone numbers—changed every month or so, and kept on a secret list instead of in the regular phonebook—are never calling . . . ?

"She can act just like Marie Dressler. Really she can."

. . . The studio operator's constant request! And the replies? Pathetic, demanding, often ridiculous, they give keen insight into the hearts of the world and his wife

"He told me he was a director out there."

under any circumstances revealed, otherwise they'd never have a moment's peace to themselves. The phone girl explains this. But what fibs she has to listen to!

"I used to go to school with Miss Garbo. I know she'll be glad to see me."

"Why, I'm Bobbie Stanwyck's very best friend."

"Mr. Gable and I used to play on the same ball team. You'd better let me talk to him or he'll be awful sore."

"I'm Connie Bennett's niece from Brooklyn."

And the answer—it has to be—is always the same: "I'm very sorry, but we are not allowed to give out the stars' numbers."

Speaking of fibs, there was one man who called in who actually believed his fib. He phoned the studio demanding to be put on the wire to Robert Montgomery at once. "Just tell Bob it's his brother," he concluded casually.

The head operator at the board knew perfectly well that Bob didn't have a brother, but the man sounded so matter-of-fact that it befuddled her. The phone girl closed her key and, over another wire, called Bob's dressing-room.

"Nope, I haven't any brother," Bob told her.

That convinced the operator, but it did not convince the man waiting on the outside wire. He went into a sputter of honest indignation. "I guess I ought to know whether I'm his brother or not," he insisted. "I was brought up in the same house with him. We have the same mother. I ought to know!" He hung up, after five minutes of wasted time, still convinced that he was Bob's brother.

"I'd like to give my horse to Mr. Cooper."

CRAZY? There are a lot of crazy people not behind bars, maintain the studio switchboard girls.

Years ago a man called in and asked the operators to tell him which stars had canaries, cats or dogs. He owned a pet store and wanted to give pets to any stars who didn't already have them. Whether he was crazy or generous or wanted to build up some good-will in the movie colony doesn't matter. What matters is that he was only the first with the idea. As we say, that was years ago. Now not a day goes by but what at least one person calls in with the same offer. If the stars took all the pets offered them, every one of them would have to keep a private zoo in his back yard. Nor do these people, making such generous offers in the matter of wild life, ever pause to think that there may be a few stars, here and there, who don't like pets at all.

Recently one of these offers of a pet had a heartache behind it. A man, who evidently had seen Gary Cooper in Westerns, called in and asked if he might speak with him.

"I'm sorry, but we're not allowed to connect you with the stars' dressing-rooms," came the stock answer.

There was a moment's silence. Then, "Well, will you just take my number, please," came over the wire, in a voice that sounded as if its owner were close to tears. "I've got a good horse. I can't afford to feed it any longer. I know Mr. Cooper loves horses. He'd take care of mine and be good to it. I'd like to give it to him."

The telephone operators are no strangers to broken hearts. Every day some little extra calls in to ask for Mr. Smith, or Mr. Brown, "the director." The operators glance through their files of colored cards and regretfully report, knowing all too well what is coming, "Nobody by that name works here."

"But he must," comes the quavering voice. "Why, I met him at a party last night and he told me he was a director out there."

What tragedies of promise and deception lie (Continued on page 92)

You don't have to be goofy to be interviewed, but Bob finds it helps a shy feller no end

MONTGOMERY, MAD AS A MARX BROTHER

(Above) Remember "When Ladies Meet" and the way our Robert clowned his way through it? Well, he's a lot like that when he's being interviewed. (Left) Bob gently razzes Madge Evans during the filming of "Fugitive Lovers."

By CARTER BRUCE

YOU'VE heard about the fish that got away. Well, this is the interview that got away. The interview I never got.

Here's how it happened. I went to the studio to see Bob Montgomery. And I went to see him. And, just for a change, I went to see him again. And he was never there. One time he was home with a toothache. Another time he had an "important engagement." The third time (or maybe it was the thirty-third, I can't remember!) he slipped up and pulled the toothache story again. Then, being naturally bright, I caught on and knew he was dodging interviews. He's scared of them, really.

Well, to make a long story short, I finally did get Bob. I went to the studio when he wasn't expecting me! There he was, sitting in an office where a friend of his worked, twiddling his thumbs.

"Well, there you are!" I said.

He looked at me and groaned. "Here I am," he admitted.

"Bob, you oughtn't to feel this way about having stories written about you," I said. "Nobody's trying to bite you. People like to read about movie actors."

"But you ask such silly questions," he protested.

"They just seem silly because you don't like to be asked questions," I told him. "Now look. I don't think I've ever seen a story that really got you. The Bob Montgomery that your friends know just doesn't seem to come out. Well, this time I'd like to get the real Bob down on paper."

But I knew I was sunk right then, because that impish grin spread across his snub-nosed, likable face.

"I'll tell you the best way to get me down on paper," he said. "Just get a piece of paper and glue me to it. Then you can mail me around to people."

IT was my turn to groan. "Look, Bob, please. Now just answer a few questions, will you?"

"Sure. The more questions, the more I'll answer."

So I got out my notebook, with all the questions neatly written down in order. Question Number One was: "Bob, you don't seem to throw your money around the way so many stars do. What do you do with it—put it in the bank?"

"No," he replied, "I give it away. I walk down Hollywood Boulevard and every time I see a fire-plug, I put a thousand-dollar-bill under it for the firemen."

"I can just see you doing it," I told him. "And if you're telling me to mind my own business, the reason I asked is that you told me once you never sign checks, that your bank signs them all."

"Oh, I'll tell you why that is," he replied. "It's because I can't write."

I decided I had better drop the subject.

"All right," I began over again. "What sort of a home life do you have?"

"Awful!"

"Tell me the truth, now."

"I'm telling you. Mrs. Montgomery beats me with the poker every night. Then I beat her. We like it. We just do it for fun. Haven't you ever noticed what a funny-shaped head I have? That's from being pounded with the poker."

"How am I ever to write this story, if you keep fooling?" I asked in desperation.

"Who's fooling?" he (Continued on page 107)

(Above, left and right) "Morning Glory," oddly enough, was something like Katie's own story. With Robert Young in "Trigger." (Right) Jo of "Little Women" was rather Hepburnish, too.

THE CAREER OF AN UGLY DUCKLING

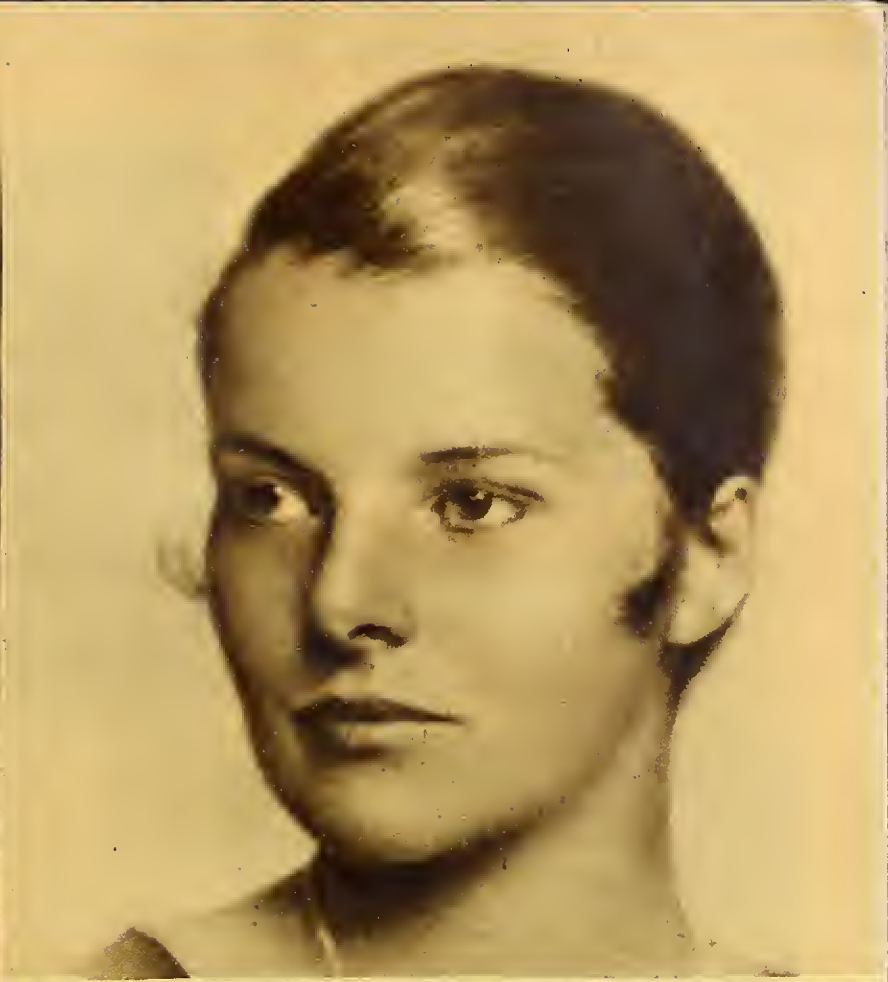
By BEATRICE MACDONALD

I MAY be wrong—but to my mind, the least important element of Katharine Hepburn's success has formed by far the largest part of the publicity she has received in the past year. Every newspaper reporter, each magazine scribbler, has stressed to the breaking point the strange, spectacular nature of the girl; her crazy impulses, her publicity-attracting stunts, her wild exhibitionism.

Of course she is an exhibitionist! She has always been.

I'll tell you why. Because Katharine was an ugly duckling. An ugly duckling who never dreamed she'd grow up to be the beautiful swan she is today. She was long and leggy and thin as a bean pole. She had innumerable freckles and hair which was too straight and too abundant and too unruly, even if it was a beautiful color. She had to do something to make up for her lack of beauty—to attract her share of attention and admiration—didn't she? And—to aid and abet this natural urge—Katie was growing up in a period when almost every girl in every small town was an exhibitionist of sorts. One had to be! There were always more girls than men—at parties, everywhere. Competition was too keen. You will remember—you girls who are Katharine's age now—that the general feeling was, "No matter what they say—no matter how they say it—just so they talk about me!"

At the Hartford Country Club, the girl who uttered the loudest damn was the one who naturally took preëminence over the others. "Here comes that crazy Katie Hepburn! Mother said I wasn't to speak to her." And of course the loud whisper was so much meat to eager ears, and Katie's every girl friend envied her. The next day, the same whisper would apply to some other girl who had been caught necking with a boy outside the Club during a dance. And so it went. The movies provided the chief source of supply for new stunts, and if this source fell down and imagination lagged, and one's reputation threatened to quiet down to normalcy—well, something had to be done quickly. Heroic measures were resorted to. Katie would enter the Club with a flying start, take a running leap across the lounge, and slide swiftly down the long polished top of the desk on her tummy.



You can see for yourself that the Hepburn of sixteen would never have won any beauty prizes.

"Here comes that crazy Katie Hepburn!" they used to say. And why did Katie behave the way she did—the way she still behaves? This story tells you

---

And then, one of her most intimate friends would pale this stunt by appearing that very night in a snakily fascinating red silk gown and smoking a cigarette in a long holder. Competition was very keen.

KATHARINE was born twenty-six years ago, the oldest of a brood of six children. One of them—Tom—died. She has two younger brothers, Robert and Richard. Her two sisters—one about sixteen, and the other fourteen—are Marion and Peggy. From her very babyhood, she had been brought up in a household where individualism was considered highly important, and self-expression the natural necessity of a child's training.

The family of kids seldom, if ever, heard the customary "don'ts" of average childhood. Mrs. Hepburn firmly believed in childhood rights, and while other mothers shook their heads in dismal prophecy at the "new-fangled child psychology" of Doctor Hepburn's wife, they—the children—managed to grow up ordinary in every way except for an unusually high intelligence rating.

Katharine grew up in the wholesome, everyday atmosphere of the average middle class American household. She fought with her brothers and sisters. They played the usual childish pranks on each other. From her two husky brothers, Katie learned to climb trees, run, jump, (Right) All togged out in best bib and tucker. Katharine—the biggest—has a firm grip on sister Marion's hand. (Below) Independence itself—at the age of four, or thereabouts.

skate and swim like a boy. She never walked—she loped. Her long, lanky body grew so rapidly that her clothes always looked too small for her. Her arms have always been unusually long, and as a child she seemed to take peculiar delight in using them to give grotesque imitations of animals.

Her pet distraction—perhaps a protest against the loneliness of her soul which no outsider was ever permitted to see—was to upset a tea-party given by other children of her own age, at which the little mothers sat serenely aping their elders, their dolls as honored guests. Katie would lope into the scene, swinging her arms like a chimpanzee, and making the most hideous faces—stretching her wide mouth to its utmost, and often driving the other little girls into hysterics with the aptly fitting wild animal sounds coming from her lips.

Her refuge from the world of girlhood which seemed so prosaic—so commonplace—and so indifferent to her own peculiar nature, was to outdo her brothers in their athletic prowess.

From the very beginning of her life, intelligence was stamped in her brain as a natural part of the order of things. In the household of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Hepburn, the mother was always active in some new form of advancement. She took a keen interest in woman suffrage. A graduate of Bryn Mawr College, she led the women of her community in progressive ideas. She legislated for birth-control. She knew the famous women of the country who headed movements of this and similar nature, and whenever a celebrated lady writer, or well known advocate of some feminine problem came to visit Hartford, they were always entertained at the Doctor's house.

EVERY summer, the whole family went to the seashore—to Fenwick, Connecticut. Here Katie formed little stock companies, and charged penny admission for the plays the child troupe put on in a barn back of the house. It was as natural for her to act the part of the Beast in "Beauty and the Beast," as it was for one of the curly-haired girls of her own age to play the more alluring character of Beauty.

As she grew older, her interest in the movies became deeper and more intense, and every penny she could scrape together went to pay for this delight or the purchase of screen magazines. She knew all the stars so well—everything that was written about her favorites was so eagerly absorbed—that if she had been suddenly transported into the house of a Beverly Hills dweller, she could have found her way around the place with the utmost ease—and would have startled the owner with the intimate details of his own life.

But—movies or no movies—education formed the most important part of the Hepburn background, and Katie had to go to school. She graduated from the Oxford School—the leading temple of learning for girls in Hartford in 1924. Her brothers entered other schools, taking preparatory courses for Harvard at which place both now enjoy student life. Of course, Katharine had to be sent to Bryn Mawr where her mother had studied, and in the fall of 1924, she found herself a freshman in that classic female training camp.

One of the most vivid memories her friends and contemporaries at that time have of the now famous star is the passionate longing which even then she had for the stage. Katie was never offered the opportunity to act in the local "amateur theatricals" put on by the younger generation during school holidays. And how she loved to act! But her appearance was decidedly against her. Any part in the production would be utterly unsuited to her thin, long body. She couldn't play the rôle of the heroine—she was far too homely. She couldn't act any of the other girl parts—she was either too tall—too ungainly—or too individual in appearance.

As she stood in the dressing-room watching a friend put on the grease-paint with hands that trembled from nervousness, Katie would (Continued on page 106)

They Visit New York

BY Regina Cannon

Left are three beautiful reasons why Max Baer loves a piano. Kay Francis is seeing New York night life and, despite her matrimonial split-up, seems to enjoy herself. Phillips Holmes arrives in town enroute to Europe.

Acme Photos

NEW YEAR'S EVE must come at least 365 nights a year for Max Baer. No one but Fifi D'Orsay and millionaire playboys have quite as much fun as our Maxie. For all the world's a stage or a prize ring or a night club to the pugilistic sheik. And, at the moment, it's the last-named.

The big, good Baer made such a hit in "The Prizefighter and the Lady" that he landed himself a Master of Ceremonies job in Broadway's Cafe de Paree. This is one of the swankier night spots of New York. Our boy friend Maxie, who can fashion an ascot scarf from a Turkish towel and flirt with two blondes while knocking out a contender, is there to provide "witty chatter and snappy sayings." He does. He's completely surrounded by cover charges and chorines. And can he take it? Don't anticipate us! And can he give it? Even Schmeling knows that!

* * *

Anyway, Kay Francis, most recent of Hollywood's "friendly separaters," likes to book herself a ringside table when she's in Gotham, as does Nancy Carroll, Colleen Moore and Irene Dunne. In fact, every star who visits the big town takes a look at the Empire State Building, the Aquarium and Maxie's night club.

Yes, Mr. Baer has just about everything but Edna Dunham, who goes to Phil Plant all wrapped up in gold tissue and legal knots very shortly. Of course, Max announced his engagement to the lady, but somehow she just didn't get around to accepting him.

Well, never mind Maxie, there's always Hollywood, Carnera, cauliflower ears and big cash prizes.

* * *

A BLIZZARD and Katharine Hepburn in "The Lake" arrived in old New York at the same time. No connection, of course, except this time Katie didn't have to arrange for the spectacle herself. The weather man came through like the proverbial million dollars—or at least that's what it cost the city.

It's a moot question whether the Hepburn—who has a string of accomplishments to her credit, ranging from shooting to stardom after one picture to pulling RKO out of the red—clicked on what was billed as her "triumphant return to the stage."

Some say, yes; the meanies say, perhaps and Walter Winchell reports "Me No Lake." Be that as it may, Katie drew a crowd that would make the mob scene from "Julius Caesar" look like a small gathering. You never saw so much sable and ermine and movie stars and Broadway first-nighters gathered under one roof!

Miss Hepburn had the wisdom to put $10,000 of her own cash into the production and the temerity to cast the play with such time-tested troupers as Blanche Bates and Frances Starr, who drew large audiences when she was in rompers toddling around Hartford.

However, Katie rated an ovation, a corsage of gardenias and enough money to buy blue denim for some snappy spring overalls. Yes, we're afraid la Hepburn is a success and, as the old adage says, there's nothing succeeds like it.

* * *

And while RKO's favorite child gathered unto herself laurels and shekels, "Queen Christina," the great Garbo's latest picture, drew an enormous crowd around the corner at the Astor Theater.

After combing the celluloid fields more or less thoroughly, the New York public evidently decided that there is only one Greta and, indeed, there is. The Swedish lady is more thrilling than an adventure story and bravos

(Continued on page 86)

Good

George Raft and Carole Lombard doing the "Raftero," a dance creation invented by Georgie himself. You'll see it in "Bolero." (Below) Well, anyway, Cary Grant and Virginia Cherrill talk it over. To wed, or not to wed, seems to be the question. Master Cary has been very sick.

THIS month Garbo has been cutting Hollywood capers and doing all sorts of un-Garbolike things.

First, she showed up at a beauty parlor and said she wanted her hair "dressed for evening!" The girls at the desk were so dazed they hardly knew what they were about. She arrived at the busiest time without an appointment, and while they had no intention of making her wait long, it was necessary to get one of those unimportant heads from under the dryer before Greta could be worked in. When she said she would wait, they nearly fell backward.

Picture, then, Greta Garbo sitting "up front" looking at a movie magazine waiting to have her hair frizzed.

Rouben Mamoulian, what have you done to our Greta!

THE second Garbo shock of the month was the Swede's attendance at both of the theatre previews of "Queen Christina." At the last preview, the theatre projectionist must have been so excited at unreeling the film for the star herself, that he went haywire and got it so balled up they had to stop the showing right in the middle.

THE third and final voltage occurred at the Hotel Ambassador when a very smartly gowned Greta showed up for lunch with Rouben Mamoulian. She wore a black suit, a small black hat with a veil and over her arm were two stunning silver fox furs.

Such goings-on from the lonely Swede are too much—much too much.

MAE WEST most certainly "was an angel" to various charity organizations during the holidays. Mae has been offered $5,000 for a single radio appearance and turned it down because, in her own lingo, "I gotta be seen to be appreciated."

When a charity institution went on the air recently, Mae offered her services gratis in order to plug the worthwhile propaganda.

Next to Marion Davies, whose charities are innumerable, Mae rates tops with the local institutions.

NOW that Ginger Rogers is forging to the front of the movie ranks she is dissatisfied with her name. That is, she doesn't consider the moniker, Ginger, sufficiently dignified and dramatic for her future screen career. As she says, "Ginger is all right for a comedienne, but is hardly appropriate for an actress who hopes to become identified with dra-

Acme

THEY ARE MARRIED

News!

. . . All the latest intimate gossip straight from the camera coast

matic characterizations."

They say Ginger rather has her heart set on the name Gloria. Well, that would save changing the monograms on her lingerie, anyway.

WITH the possible exception of Joan Crawford, no girl in Hollywood has know the bitter, defeated, cruel childhood that was Jean Parker's. Yet, something has survived those dark years and that is her romance with Pancho Lucas, sweetheart of her "little girl days." Now that Jean is on top of the heap, she is doing all in her power to promote a screen career for Pancho. Success crowned her efforts when M-G-M cast him in "Viva Villa" with Wally Beery.

HAVE you been going around humming "Have You Ever Seen a Dream Walking?"

Believe it or not, but nobody else but Ginger Rogers is responsible for the success of this song.

Ginger was supposed to sing a song called "Gypsy Lover" during the romantic interludes of "Sitting Pretty," but she had heard a new little ditty "something about a dream" fresh off the piano of the composer and not yet published, and had her heart set on singing it. The New York execs said, "No." Ginger put her foot down and finally they gave in. Now they are selling ten thousand copies of the sheet music daily in New York alone.

CLARK GABLE'S latest enthusiasm is horse racing. His two-year-older "Beverly Hills" made her first appearance on New Year's Day at Caliente.

RECENTLY, when Joan Blondell was too sick to go to the studio to emote, the crew packed up their equipment and moved into Joan's bedroom. It was the only shot needed to complete the picture and luckily it was a bedside scene. Still very weak, and many pounds lighter, Joan did her stuff with plenty of realism.

Scott

AT THE GROVE

Scott

LUPE MEETS MAMA W.

International

THEY ARE TWICE WED

(Reading up) Charles Beahan and Sydney Fox liked their first wedding so much that they decided to celebrate their first anniversary by having another—wedding, of course. And (center) Mama Weissmuller, son and wife Lupe. Doesn't Lupe look sedate? The Tom Meighans entertain lovely Diana Wynyard at the Cocoanut Grove (top picture).

BECAUSE he was too bashful, an extra muffed a chance for a big break. The director picked him from the ranks because of his doggy dress and seemingly suave mannerisms for a close-up bit with Sally Rand, hotsy café dancer. He was instructed to stick a roll of bills into her stocking (just above the knee) and say coolly, "There you are darling!"

After many retakes, during which the "man-of-the-world" perspired profusely, the director dismissed him on the ground that he was too nervous for the part.

SALLY RAND isn't like most gals who, after struggling for years to keep the wolf from the door, plunge into an orgy of spending the minute they get an income. Instead, Sally is taking the dough she has earned from her famous fan dance and invested it all in a modest little orange ranch on the outskirts of Los Angeles. "If the wolf should happen by my way again," says she, "I'll at least have a place to live—fans or no fans!"

RUDY VALLEE'S dog "Windy" doesn't think much of the Hollywood pooches. The first day

. . . Maybe Katharine Hepburn wasn't so generous to give that "grand"

Good

Scott

International

Scott

Scott

(Reading Down) Mike Levee had a party. Well, everybody does. See if you can find Fredric March, Michael Farmer, Harold Lloyd and Doug, Jr. Randy Scott, Paul Lukas and Dennis King return from a trip abroad. Mary Brian, Colleen Moore, Hedda Hopper and Dick Powell met at tea recently. And this group all broadcast recently. John Boles, Jeanette MacDonald, Clark Gable and Jean Harlow. But then, of course, you know 'em.

he was here he entered into a hair-raising battle with Jeanette MacDonald's "Captain" when the two met in a very ritzy hotel lobby. It took a police squad to separate them. The following day out at the Fox lot, he picked a fight with a director's Scottish terrier. But Windy has yet to prove himself a champ. Both times it was a draw.

GEORGE O'BRIEN was so tickled with the new suits his tailor made up for him in a jiffy just before Christmas that, wishing to show his appreciation, he told the little man if he had any kids he'd like to give them something for Christmas.

"Sure I got kids," said the seamster. There's little Reuben, Herman, Isabel, Isaac . . .

George was beginning to get weak.

". . . and Samuel, Aaron, Sarah, the twins and . . ."

But he never got to finish. George had swooned.

EDWARD EVERETT HORTON and Edna May Oliver were discussing a well known actor who has suffered an increase of hat size as the result of recent success.

"I never saw such a man," exclaimed Miss Oliver. "He won't work more than four hours a day. He has to have everything just so. He's certainly a candidate for the NRA. Why, that man already is working under a great big eagle."

"Big what?" asked Horton.

"Eagle."

"Oh, I thought you said Ego."

THE ladies will have a treat when they view Norma Shearer's picture "Rip Tide." For weeks Adrian has been designing creations for the star to wear which are said to be so advanced in style that they will positively startle the world. The studio is very secretive about it all, refusing to give out even a hint as to what trend the fashions will follow.

The difficulty Adrian has come across so far is that the models, which were originally supposed to be for Norma exclusively, made the other costumes look so dated and passé that he now has to "dress" the entire cast, including extras, in the new mode.

Incidentally, Lilyan Tashman plays Norma's sister in the picture. Now Lil has long held the record for being the best-dressed woman in pictures, so everyone's holding his breath. There's sure to be an explosion soon.

WARNER BROTHERS don't want Dick Powell to get married . . . and how they don't!

They're trying to get him to put it on paper and promise he won't hie himself altarward, at least until his contract has expired.

Dick says he doesn't mind waiting a year, but the idea is not at all popular with several cinema débutantes.

Mary Brian, for instance, says, "It's a great idea—if it works."

THE meanie old gossips have it that there is a little story back of that $1,000 check sent by Katharine Hepburn to the Community Chest before she departed for New York.

It seems that Katharine had one day's overtime work to be done on "Trigger." For this little service she asked, and received, the sum of $10,000. The only catch was that la Hepburn was to donate $1,000 of this amount to some local charity.

They say Hepburn first held out for the $10,000 clear and thought the studio should donate the $1,000 to charity. But she was finally made to see the light.

Then, the other side of the story is that Hepburn voluntarily offered to make the donation. That's the story that comes out of the publicity department and it's the one we'd like to believe.

W. S. VAN DYKE, M-G-M director, has a good memory.

Last Christmas, John Miljan bought a dilapidated T-Model Ford and had it delivered Christmas morning to the lawn of Van Dyke's

News!

. . . Is Rudy's romance on the wane? Doug, Jr. says he knows love at last home in Hollywood.

This Christmas, as a gag, one of Van's friends mailed invitations to every member of the movie colony to a Christmas party at Van's home. Acceptances poured in, much to Van's surprise, but he was determined to see it through.

In the meantime, he purchased a run-down fifty-passenger bus from a transportation company and had it deposited on the front lawn of Miljan's home.

But his chuckling was short-lived. Miljan showed up at Van's party with the bus filled to capacity—fifty in all!

SAW Ann Harding and her daughter lunching in Sardi's the other noontime and all those meanies who used to claim that Ann was a "dowdy dresser" should have seen her this day. The small green felt hat she wore was one of the brand new "turn back off the face models," extraordinarily becoming to Ann's classic profile. Her tailored suit was also green, and the scarf at her neck was a silvery grey fastened with a green pin. But even more important was the evidence of carefully applied make-up on her face. There was a time when Ann "never used a thing," but apparently those days are over. The lady looked grand.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, JR., has gone on record as stating, "There is no one I admire more than Franchot Tone." Mr. Tone, you will recall, is Doug's ex-wife's present fiance.

Wonder how it happens then, that Doug and Franchot were both shopping in the commissary of the popular Vendome café the other day without speaking to one another. Of course there was another customer in the shop, too, so perhaps they didn't see one another in the "crowd."

THE Vendome was the scene of another amusing highlight of the Hollywood month.

In a conspicuous booth in the front of the café the Countess di Frasso was lunching with a woman friend. Directly across from her sat Lupe Velez being interviewed by a newspaper woman.

A newsy stuck his head in the door, yelling: "Gary Cooper marries Sandra Shaw in New York. Read about it. Read about it."

Neither of the ladies looked up—and neither bought a newspaper.

DON'T be surprised if trouble breaks out in a fresh place between James Cagney and the Warner Brothers Studio.

Jimmy was pretty upset when he noticed the Warner Theatre in Hollywood had billed Joan Blondell's name above his in "Footlight Parade." What's more he engaged a cameraman to photograph the "evidence" of his breach of contract which stipulates "no one shall be billed before Cagney."

IT is no secret that Lilian Harvey is not the musical comedy sensation she was expected to be. For some reason the beautiful Lilian just hasn't clicked in either "My Weakness," or "My Lips Betray." Some people attribute this to the fact that Janet Gaynor "beat her at her own game" in "Adorable." Others insist the continental star "tries too hard" before the camera and this effort to succeed makes her work seem stilted.

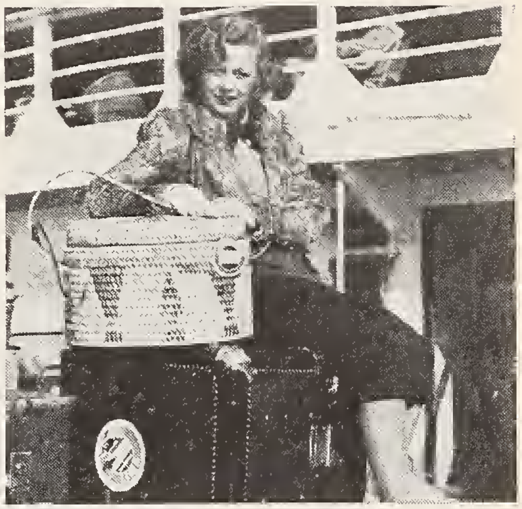
It was no surprise when Lilian and the Fox company began to have difficulties. The latest feud developed over Lilian's role in Rudy Vallee's picture. Lilian contends the part was so unimportant it was insulting and so she walked out. But now that Rudy's girl friend, Alice Faye, has been cast in the Harvey role you hear reports that the part is being "built up" to almost co-starring proportions. Is this the "freeze-out" for Lilian or not?

MORE GOSSIP ON PAGE 78

(Reading down) A new hot romance is Busby Berkley's and Merra Kennedy's. They're oh, so-o happy! And more good news is that of Maureen O'Sullivan's recovery. No more appendix trouble now! Margaret Sullavan recently landed in California by boat and is all set for her next picture. And—guess? Joan and Franchot Tone again with the latter looking adoringly, as usual, upon his sweet'n-heart'n.

Wide World

Acme

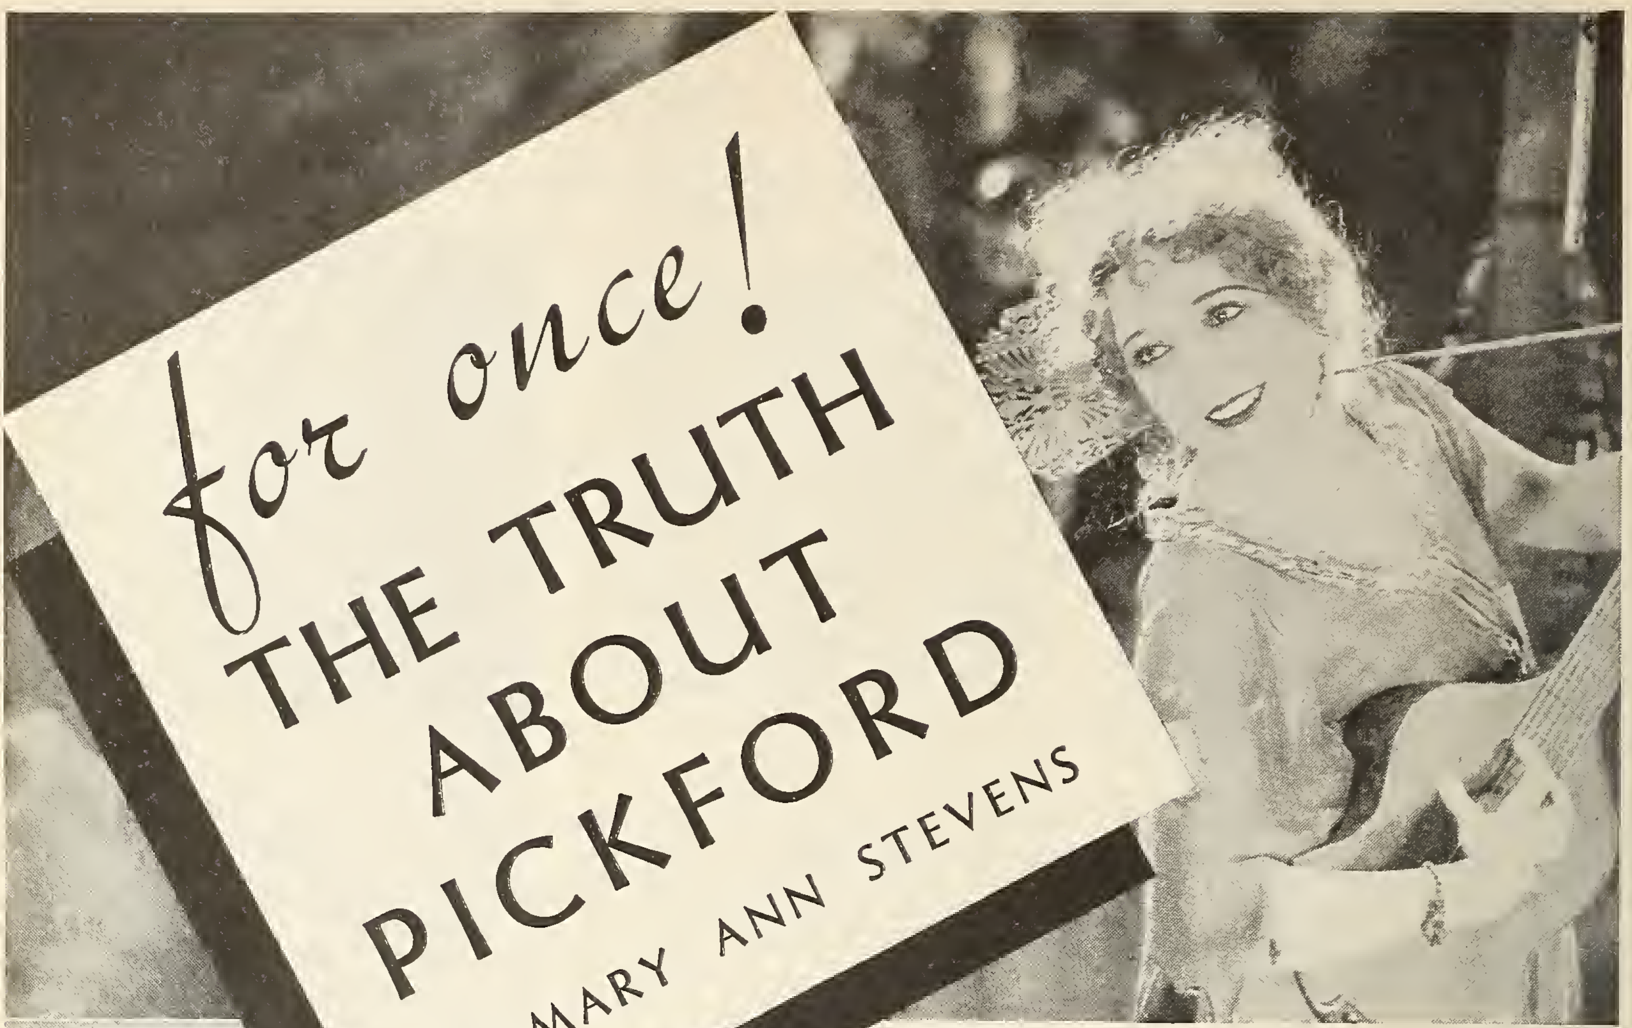


Scott

Scott

for once! THE TRUTH ABOUT PICKFORD

By MARY ANN STEVENS



(Above) Miss Pickford as "Rosita" and left, with Buddy Rogers, her rumored beau. (Opposite) Douglas Fairbanks in faraway St. Moritz—and his wife as the heroine of "Secrets."

WHILE you arose luxuriously late Christmas morning and leisurely untied holly-decked packages and deplored the fact that Aunt Emma could always be depended upon to give something of which you already had plenty, Mary Pickford prepared to play five shows at the Paramount Theater in New York City.

And as you carelessly threw caloric discretion to the winds and passed your plate again and later rhumba-d your way through a festive evening, America's Sweetheart sat in a whitewashed dressing-room waiting to be called for her fifth performance Christmas day.

For, even as the world and his wife decides to call a holiday once in a while, Mary Pickford, possessor of millions, a veritable female Croesus, elects to work.

As a child, work to her was a dire necessity; as a girl, it became a well-established habit; as a young married woman, it represented the thrill of achievement; and now, as a matron standing on the brink of divorce accompanied by disillusionment and a sense of futility, it appears as a boomerang. For Mary Pickford's capacity for accomplishment has struck deep at the roots of what might have been her happiness. It is responsible for her inability to play, to enjoy leisure, to make a success of her marriage.

That last, to the Pickford devotees, seems like a sweeping statement, for they will tell you—and rightly so—that in matters matrimonial Our Mary turned her cheek until she no longer could with any semblance of pride. She bent backwards in attempting to recapture the feeling Douglas Fairbanks once held for her. But it seems to be just another case of locking the stable after the

At forty Our Mary faces disillusionment and divorce. And, as usual, there's a woman to blame. But not the one you think horse is gone. For, years ago when her husband had taken all Hollywood could possibly offer—fame and money and social position of a sort, and a little more of each—he was ready to pull up stakes. Enough to Douglas Fairbanks was slightly better than a feast.

At the time, he urged his beautiful wife to call it a day cinematically, but Miss Pickford pleaded for "just a little while longer." And, to compromise, suggested that he take his next trip abroad alone. This, in view of the fact that it amounted to almost a boast at Pickfair that its owners never even danced save with each other.

CLOSE friends, realizing Mary's devotion and generosity to Doug, tried to point out that separation might mean the beginning of an estrangement, a gap in their lives that one day could not be bridged. But Miss Pickford, self-confident, a little autocratic and terrifically ambitious favored her even-then waning career.

Mary Pickford, undoubtedly, was the greatest personality the screen has ever seen. Her potent charm has always outweighed her histrionic ability. Her celluloid child sufferings touched a responsive chord in the hearts of the world. But when Our Mary grew up, her career began to hit the skids.

"Rosita," one of her earliest adult roles, did not come under the head of dramatic achievements. She made a pretty mediocre "Coquette" and a rather deplorable "Kiki." But pride and the insatiable desire for work kept her going and even after the first attempt at "Secrets" was shelved—at a breath-takingly stupendous cost even in an industry where money is thrown about recklessly—Miss Pickford began on it again. The picture, finally released, received but fair appraisal.

Meanwhile, the host of Pickfair was going places and seeing things. Foreign cities, big game hunts, titled ladies. And, ironically enough, Mr. Fairbanks' penchant for royalty was born and fostered in Beverly Hills. Literally, lords, dukes and even a prince or two were entertained at Pickfair. And Mary Pickford arranged it all.

She also arranged, in the early years of their marriage, that her leading-man husband be given a nice section of the United Artists lot for his productions, and, as the connubial bliss continued, Miss Pickford gradually took less and Mr. Fairbanks more of the space and privileges in the great organization. She wished it that way, for it was just another proof of her love and loyalty.

Mary has always wanted to do things in the right way, being fundamentally a stickler for good taste, ever ready to sacrifice fun to form. Whenever there was a tea thrown at Pickfair, one instinctively knew it meant Orange Pekoe with nary a potato chip in sight to encourage a thirst. For the hostess respected and liked convention. It contrasted with her early gypsy-like theatrical life, an era fraught with hard work and sacrifice during which she figured as the bread-winner for her family. Hard work that later could not enlist the interest of her brother Jack in the career she planned for him, nor induce her sister Lottie to divert her energy into profitable channels. Hard work that built the barrier between her and Doug.

And even when the barrier had been erected, Mary could not, and would not believe it. (Continued on page 117)

Fredric March is the recipient of all the glamor Miriam Hopkins has in "All of Me."

WHY MEN FALL FOR

WHEN "the girls" get together in Hollywood, one of the favorite topics of conversation is, "But, my dear, how does she do it? Really, aren't men fools—falling for that baby stare and that Southern accent."

The "she" referred to is Miriam Hopkins, most arch of charmers, most subtle of allurers. And you wouldn't suspect that she has the ability to make men get all flustered and jittery—just to look at her. She is pretty, yes, but certainly her beauty is not nearly so lush and lavish as that of lots of the stars. And it is an actual fact that Anita Loos fired her from her play, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," because her eyes weren't big enough.

That girl knows how to get her man. And the other girls don't know how she does it. When a certain director fell hard for her his wife said, "I don't understand it. Why, he actually thinks she's a little innocent ingenue."

Yet when that connoisseur of glamor, Cecil B. De Mille, was asked for his choice of the most glamorous lady of all the Hollywoodians, his answer was—and did it burn up the other women!—"Miriam Hopkins. Because she is subtle. Because she wears her glamor almost unconsciously like a rich cloak which she knows she has a right to wear."

And there you have some diversified opinions about Mariam Hopkins. Truly, she does know how to make men fall in love with her. And, truly, every time a romance has been brought to an end, it is Miriam who has done the breaking-off. So what of the girl herself? What is she really like and what makes her tick?

I, for one, am not baffled by her seductive abilities. I think when one analayzes her it is all plain enough. She was born in Bainbridge, Georgia, and even as a child with long, golden curls the boys carried her books home from school and willingly deposited their treasures—bits of string, marbles and broken pocket-knives—into her little white hands. There is something about long, golden curls that gives a girl the confidence and self-assurance that she is able to keep for the rest of her life.

Now—in her late twenties—she has more than just Like a certain other Hopkins, all the lads find Miriam too, too fascinating

By KATHERINE ALBERT

Miriam Hopkins

golden curls. With a curiously clear-eyed outlook on life she inspires men to friendship. They are taken off guard by the fact that she seems to be such a wonderful pal (she plays tennis, swims and rides horseback). Furthermore, she has a remarkable self-sufficiency, a capacity for being alone which prompts them to think, "Now here is a girl that one can be safe with, a good friend, a fine scout, a woman with every feminine charm but with the intelligence and outlook of a man."

Before they know it, the poor darlings have fallen head over heels in love with her and are begging her to marry them. This transition from friendship to love is not done by means of trickery but simply with her natural graces, the subtle quality of her face—a face where the mouth seems to be smiling and the eyes serious, calm and clear, with just the faintest trace of the sardonic in them. The men experience the vague feeling that she has not always been happy and that in spite of the fact that she and Austin Parker remain the best of friends, now that they are separated, that there must be something in her life which she wants to forget. They feel that they are the ones to make her do that forgetting.

THEN, of course, there is the matter of her adopted child. Surely, they figure, any busy woman who would undertake the rearing of a baby (he was only six days old when she adopted him) must be starved for mother love, must want to have babies of her own.

Miriam is a girl of many moods. Not long ago she said to me, "I'm in sort of a transition period now. I don't know what I believe. The things about which I was so definite a year or so ago I'm definite about no longer."

Men sense in Miriam some wild, free spirit. She is a creature of impulse, as witness her mania for renting houses, equipping them, hiring servants and then giving them up and moving to another place.

When she first moved to Hollywood she chose Garbo's one-time home. She left that for an apartment and then moved to Bel-Air. Not so long ago she came to New York to do a play. At one of the (Continued on page 118)

Is it that Southern accent? Is it that head of golden curls? This tells you Greta Garbo and John Gilbert make "Queen Christina" one of the year's distinguished pictures.

●● SPECIALLY RECOMMENDED
● RECOMMENDED

●● QUEEN CHRISTINA
(METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER)

Greta Garbo, John Gilbert, Lewis Stone, Elizabeth Young, Ian Keith.

TRIUMPH FOR GARBO! One of the great pictures of the past few years, this historical epic makes a sustained drive for artistry. Besides, we have Garbo and Gilbert together again —with Gilbert very good, indeed. But you know how it is when there has been a lot of criticism? You look for faults.

One of the best scenes discloses Garbo, travelling as a man, and stopping at a wayside inn, there to be placed in the same room with a nobleman from Spain (Gilbert) because all other rooms are occupied. (No reason to censor and every reason to try.) One does not resent the situation because it is so beautifully handled.

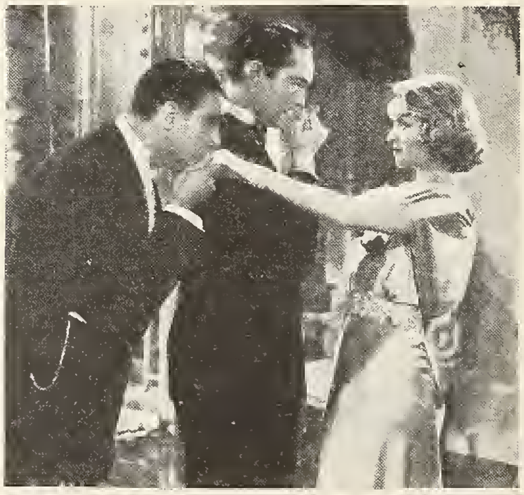
The picture is an unending series of exceptional scenes, packed with fine characterizations and good direction. A triumph for Garbo, a comeback for Gilbert with an orchid apiece for Messrs. Stone and Keith. The production is in a class by itself, so you cannot afford to miss it.

●● MOULIN ROUGE
(20TH CENTURY)

Constance Bennett, Franchot Tone, Tullio Carminati, Russ Colombo.

BENNETT SCORES! Indeed this is about the best picture Connie has ever made, which is praise aplenty. The heroine is a stage-struck wife, which husband Franchot does not like. However, a little thing like that doesn't stop her. She heads for the footlights

Dolores Del Rio and Gene Raymond in "Flying Down to Rio."



Tullio Carminati, Franchot Tone and La Bennett in "Moulin Rouge."

Paul Lukas and Elissa Landi appear together in "By Candlelight."

in brunette disguise and, of course, makes good.

Connie sings well, dances beautifully and dresses stunningly—and her husband, not knowing who she is, falls for her. In the end he claims he knew her all the time, which statement perplexes la Bennett considerably. (Shades of "The Guardsman.")

See this picture by all means. Mr. Tone becomes better in each new production and Russ Columbo warbles a tune or two.

• BELOVED
(UNIVERSAL)

John Boles and Gloria Stuart.

LADIES, PREPARE! This will give you what you want in the way of heart throbs. We follow John Boles, a composer, and Gloria Stuart, his wife, through an entire lifetime. After they have struggled for years, their adopted son makes a hit with the Paul Whiteman type of composing, which Boles (an old man now) claims has been lifted from his symphony.

The incidental music is by Victor Schertzinger and its loveliness will haunt you long after you have left the theater. See this one and weep.

• FLYING DOWN TO RIO
(RKO)

Dolores Del Rio, Gene Raymond, Ginger Rogers, Fred Astaire.

JUST MIDDLIN' GOOD. This one is about an orchestra leader (Gene Raymond) who is always losing jobs because of his penchant for lovely ladies. He eventually gets around to Dolores Del Rio, promptly falls for her charms and as promptly finds himself among the vast army of the unemployed. Hearing of a job in Rio, he grabs Dolores aboard a plane and they become stranded on an island near the landing field.

Ginger Rogers sings and Fred Astaire dances—and very nicely, too—and the picture is punctuated with catchy tunes. While it is not exactly tops insofar as musicals go, you're apt to get a bang out of it. And the Del Rio gal is surely sumpin' to look at.

• BY CANDLELIGHT
(UNIVERSAL)

Elissa Landi, Paul Lukas, Nils Asther.

VERY GOOD: You will enjoy every moment of this picture. It's a huge masquerade party, set in Vienna and Monte Carlo, in which Miss Landi, the maid in the house, decides to be the mistress for a few days. The butler (Paul Lukas) tries his hand at being master and the real prince (Nils Asther) getting into the spirit of the thing, plays his own butler.

Reviews

—A TOUR OF TODAY'S TALKIES

By WALTER RAMSEY

The cast and story are far better than the direction, which makes the picture just miss being excellent. It is the type of story that requires subtlety and deftness in making the clever situations unravel the idea. Individual performances are pretty swell and you are scheduled for several good laughs.

MASSACRE
(WARNERS)

Richard Barthelmess and Ann Dvorak.

PRETTY FAIR. You might like it. The story is rather slender and the theme rather depressing, which does not exactly make for entertainment. Barthelmess gives a good performance as the Indian boy who leaves the reservation to become a swaggering, conceited performer at the World's Fair.

When he eventually returns to the reservation, which is overridden with crime, he does an about-face and tries to help his own people. Ann Dvorak is adequate as an Indian girl. The youngsters will undoubtedly think they should see this, but we cannot recommend it to them.

I AM SUZANNE
(FOX)

Lilian Harvey and Gene Raymond.

FAIRLY GOOD-SIZED CHEERS. Yes, this picture is better than the usual run, a different sort of musical and one you will maybe enjoy. Lilian Harvey lives up to her European reputation with an appealing, emotional performance as the dancer whose career is halted by an accident. Befriended by a puppet master, she falls in love. Puppeteer Gene Raymond is too shy to mention his love and Lil thinks he cares only for the puppets! Drama is high in the scene where her jealous rage makes her shoot one of the puppet dolls through the heart. We like Raymond more each time and Harvey is making us wonder why her success has been so luke-warm.

CROSS COUNTRY CRUISE
(UNIVERSAL)

June Knight, Lew Ayres, Alice White, Alan Dinehart.

NOTHING SENSATIONAL. This little film rolls along at a pretty fast clip. It's another bus yarn with an exciting murder and crash in the finale. June Knight (you'll like her) is on her way to California because of marvelous pictures painted by villain Alan Dinehart. Lew Ayres follows June, much smitten. Minna Gombell is Dinehart's wife and helps the situation by keeping an eye on him, and Alice White is the hitch-hiker who gets a lift. This is the most believable bus picture of the month—with more to come, we hear.

Gene Raymond and Lilian Harvey in a new musical, "I Am Suzanne."

Richard Barthelmess and Ann Dvorak in a scene from "Massacre."

John Boles and Gloria Stuart co-star in "Beloved." Ver' sad.

(Left) Roscoe Karns, Irene Franklin and Otto Kruger appear in "Women in His Life." (Right) "Jimmy and Sally" brings a new team, James Dunn and Claire Trevor, to the screen, (Below) Zasu Pitts and Will Rogers combine to give you lots of of laugh in "Mr. Skitch."

THE SHAKEDOWN
(WARNERS)

Bette Davis, Ricardo Cortez, Charles Farrell.

GOOD CAST WASTED. It is really a shame to put such a fine group of players in a yarn so undeniably trite. The story is about a cut-rate drug racketeer (Ricardo Cortez) who uses a dumb chemist to make up inferior products which he sells under standard labels. All goes well until Chemist Charlie Farrell's wife (Bette Davis) and his baby fall victims of the bad remedies.

• JIMMY AND SALLY
(FOX)

James Dunn and Claire Trevor.

LAUGHS GALORE. Yes, ladies and gentlemen, this is a cute, fast-moving little comedy and a pleasant entertainment. Sally Eilers, however, was wise to turn it down. Yet, even though it wouldn't have done her any particular good, it does plenty for Claire Trevor. She certainly has a lot of what's-its-name. Jimmy Dunn is the publicity man for a meat company and Claire is his secretary as well as his inspiration until Harvey Stephens steps in and almost grabs her. Adults and youngsters alike will enjoy this one.

THE WOMEN IN HIS LIFE
(METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER)

Otto Kruger, Isabel Jewell, Una Merkel.

HARD TO TAKE. It's that old, familiar story about the criminal lawyer and his women and doesn't compare with the best of this type. However, it has its moments. Poor Otto Kruger wanders around in cemeteries in the driving rain, has races with death and his slow marches down the "last mile" are typical of the old silent days. However, when they give Kruger a chance (such as the sickbed scenes and his convalescence) he puts his heart into it and his swell acting triumphs. Isabel Jewel is good in a sympathetic rôle and Una Merkel and Roscoe Karns take expert care of the laughs. We'd like to see Irene Franklin some more. She was fine as the husband-shooting lady in deesa peecture.

GOING HOLLYWOOD
(METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER)

Marion Davies and Bing Crosby.

MIDDLING MUSICAL. They had a tough time dragging in the explanation of such gorgeous clothes for "poor girl" Marion Davies—and the story was kind of hokey and Bing Crosby steals whatever there is—but aside from that, a good time was had by all. It's a little ditty about a gal (Marion) who falls in love with a radio crooner's voice (Crosby's) and follows him to Hollywood, only to (strange, unusual plot) get the star's rôle in his picture. There are a couple of good tunes, too. We've never seen Marion look so beautiful, but whether it was the exceptional camera work or the fact that the cast of young ladies chosen to surround the star were so well chosen, we couldn't quite figure. Elaborate production and good ensemble numbers plus Bing's warbling make this worth your money.

• MR. SKITCH
(FOX)

Will Rogers, Zasu Pitts.

COMEDY and tears. Yes, the Fox Studio certainly rings the bell with this combination. It's funny that Will and Zasu haven't been thought of before. This opus concerns itself with the "repression" and how Will has to sell the furniture and pile Zasu, the twins, daughter Rochelle Hudson, a son and the dog into the rambling family vehicle and start out "traveling." Their destination is California, but there are several auto-camps, laughs and tears before they get there. We laughed at Florence Desmond and her imitations and loved Rogers in this human, natural rôle. Let's have more with Zasu Pitts and Will. The youngsters will love it, too.

• MISS FANE'S BABY IS STOLEN
(PARAMOUNT)

Dorothea Wieck, Alice Brady, Baby LeRoy, Jack LaRue.

VERY GOOD. Dealing with the timely topic of the kidnapping racket, this offering includes a fine story and grand acting. It may leave you a little limp—memories being memories—but we want you to see it. Dorothy Wieck is still a bit cold as the movie star whose baby is stolen, but Alice Brady has warmth enough for both of them, as she gives a grand performance of the simple soul (with a brood of children) who rescues the stolen baby and has a big moment as she rides into town with motor-cop escort. A good scene is the one in the kidnapper's shack when Baby LeRoy listens to his mother's voice over the radio. We defy John Barrymore to do the scene better. Jack LaRue and Dorothy Burgess click as "snatchers" and Spanky is adorable. We recommend this one highly . . . better see it!

BOMBAY MAIL
(UNIVERSAL)

Edmund Lowe, Shirley Grey, Ferdinand Gottschalk.

MAYBE we're fed up but anyway, it didn't click with us. Too many people bobbing in and out, confusing, and the plot didn't have much chance against it. Eddie Lowe, as the Inspector who tosses off the not-so-wisecracks isn't up to par. Shirley Grey is the gal and Ferdinand Gottschalk gets murdered while Hedda Hopper, his wife, stands by. Onslow Stevens is the suspect. You have to be very hot for mysteries to go for this one.

(Continued on page 120)

the BOOBY PRIZE

(Above) Lil Tashman (snapped with Dolores Del Rio and spouse Eddie Lowe) went haywire on that hat. (Right) Loretta Young has to be coaxed to pose with sisters Sally Blane and Polly Ann.

(Right) Lew, maybe Ginger wouldn't be too pleased to hear about that gal in the stationer's shop. (Below) Arline Judge (between Marian Nixon and Leila Hyams) was just a bit too nonchalant about the diamond brooch.

WANT to know what this page is all about? Well, listen: Each month, we shall pick out—from the pictures which we see and from the news which our spies gather for us—various things which we no likee. It may be a bit of ham acting from a player who should know better. It may be a bad boner in direction. And then again, it may have nothing to do with any movie—it may point out, instead, some ungracious or just-too-simply-ridik action on the part of one of your favorites.

It's all in a spirit of fun—with malice toward none (not much, anyway). And if you would like to join in the merriment—why, come ahead. Send your contributions to The Booby Prize, MODERN SCREEN Magazine, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

● A large, ancient umbrella goes to Greta Garbo as a booby prize—for appearing twice in the lobby of the exclusive Ambassador Hotel, wearing raincoat and galoshes—when it wasn't raining! Was she trying to disappoint the tourists?

● To Lew Ayres, we present a slightly used copy of Casanova for consistently trying to date a cute little gal in a local stationery shop—who wouldn't even give him a tumble.

● Dareos gets a textbook on astrology for predicting "no marriage" for Gary Cooper in the February MODERN SCREEN.

● Will Hays gets one year's subscription to "The Nudist" for holding up photographs until he decides whether the stars have enough clothes on. There is no truth in the report, however, that Mr. Hays wants Johnnie Weissmuller to wear modest leopard-skin overalls in "Tarzan and His Mate."

● Tullio Carminati—who sings just booful but who makes the most gosh-awful faces while he's doing it—gets a pocket mirror to practice with.

● The director of "The World Changes" gets a copy of Little Nellie's First Music Book for letting that piano player in the 1857 Wild West Saloon tickle the ivories in so 1933 a manner. Mercy, ragtime didn't appear on the scene until long after 1857—let alone Gershwin blue-notes.

● While we're on the subject, will directors in general do something about phony piano playing in general? Why, even in "Little Women" which was so perfect, one sees Paul Lucas seated at the piano, playing and singing a lovely—and difficult song. There's a shot of Lucas' hands—doing nothing whatsoever except bobbing up and down as if he were playing chopsticks.

● Lil Tashman gets D-minus for wearing a contraption on her head which looked like an inverted carpet sweeper. It was supposed to be a hat.

● Arline Judge gets one of Mr. Winchell's onions for this: she lost a $1500 brooch. And she merely tossed her head and said, "Oh, well, what of it?"

● Loretta Young gets stood in the corner for being so snooty about posing

(Continued on page 89)

. . . Boners of the month, pointed out for your amusement. All in a spirit of good, clean fun, you understand!

"I've dressed them all!"

(Above) Norma Talmadge threw a handful of loose diamonds on a jeweler's table, much to the amazement of the author. (Right) Wherever Betty Blythe goes, she's still the "Queen of Sheba"—even today.

By HOWARD GREER

IN telling you all I know about the stars whose gowns I have designed and who have signed my famous autograph book, I have selected the names about which to write at random.

I find now that those I have overlooked are the stars of a generation ago and I mean a movie generation, which is about seven years. But these players were so glamorous that I must tell you about them.

Here's a signature I prize. Picture stars may come and go but Norma Talmadge, whether she is on the screen or not, goes on forever. I have known her in Hollywood, New York and Paris and our experiences together have always been mad and bizarre.

Only last winter I met Norma in New York and we started on a shopping expedition which led us to the elegant show-

. . . The modiste is the privileged one who knows what makes the wheels go round in a star's mind—and this famous designer discloses to you the intimate secrets of Hollywood's great and near-great in his own chatty way room of Cartier's, one of the greatest jewelers in America. I was impressed when I saw a row of little carved tables behind which sat the most serious individuals selling beautiful jewels to beautiful women. One of the men, a stately moustached individual, arose and approached us. He had waited on Norma for years and knew every jewel she had.

(Left) Evelyn Brent is as extravagant as she is charming and as talented as she has lately become unlucky. (Above) Her beauty and ability triumphed over Dorothy Mackaill's penchant for make-up.

Norma sat before the little table, casually opened her handbag, took out a handkerchief, the four corners of which were knotted together, undid it and spilled upon the table a handful of loose diamonds. Little ones and big ones tumbled out and a few fell on the carpet.

"I want all this junk put into a pair of earrings," Norma announced. It suddenly occurred to me that there was something sensational about a woman who could be so unmoved by such a quantity of priceless stones. A momentary madness seized me. Everybody was being so nonchalant about all this wealth.

I was wearing an old polo coat which I flung on the thick carpet at my feet. Then, kneeling beside it—and by this time everyone in Cartier's was looking at me—I picked up a corner, peered beneath and said quite seriously to Norma, "The outside is sable all right. I'm convinced of that. But they've cheated on the lining. It's summer weasel."

Norma, seeing me behaving in this mad fashion, burst into a mild hysteria which so frightened the poor salesman that he immediately swooped up all the loose jewels and clapped them in a drawer for safe keeping. I'm sure they all thought that I was feigning insanity and would, at any moment, seize a tray of diamonds and bolt for the street. But Norma never tired of telling about how I completely upset the dignity of Cartier's.

MARGARET LIVINGSTON, now Mrs. Paul Whiteman and retired from pictures, was another girl with a marvelous sense of humor. She was once working in a picture supporting one of the greatest stars. We were having difficulty with the star's wardrobe and had tried this gown and that, but none suited. Finally Margaret said, "I think I know what that dame wants. She's mad for beads! Now I've got an old dress at home that's falling to bits, but it's covered with beads. Put some ostrich around the skirt and let's see what happens."

Well, we took the remains of Margaret's beaded dress. did as she suggested and presented it for the Great Star's approval. "But that's exactly what I want," she said. "It looks expensive but it should." Well, only Margaret and I knew what it really cost.

Dorothy Mackaill was adored (Continued on page 96)

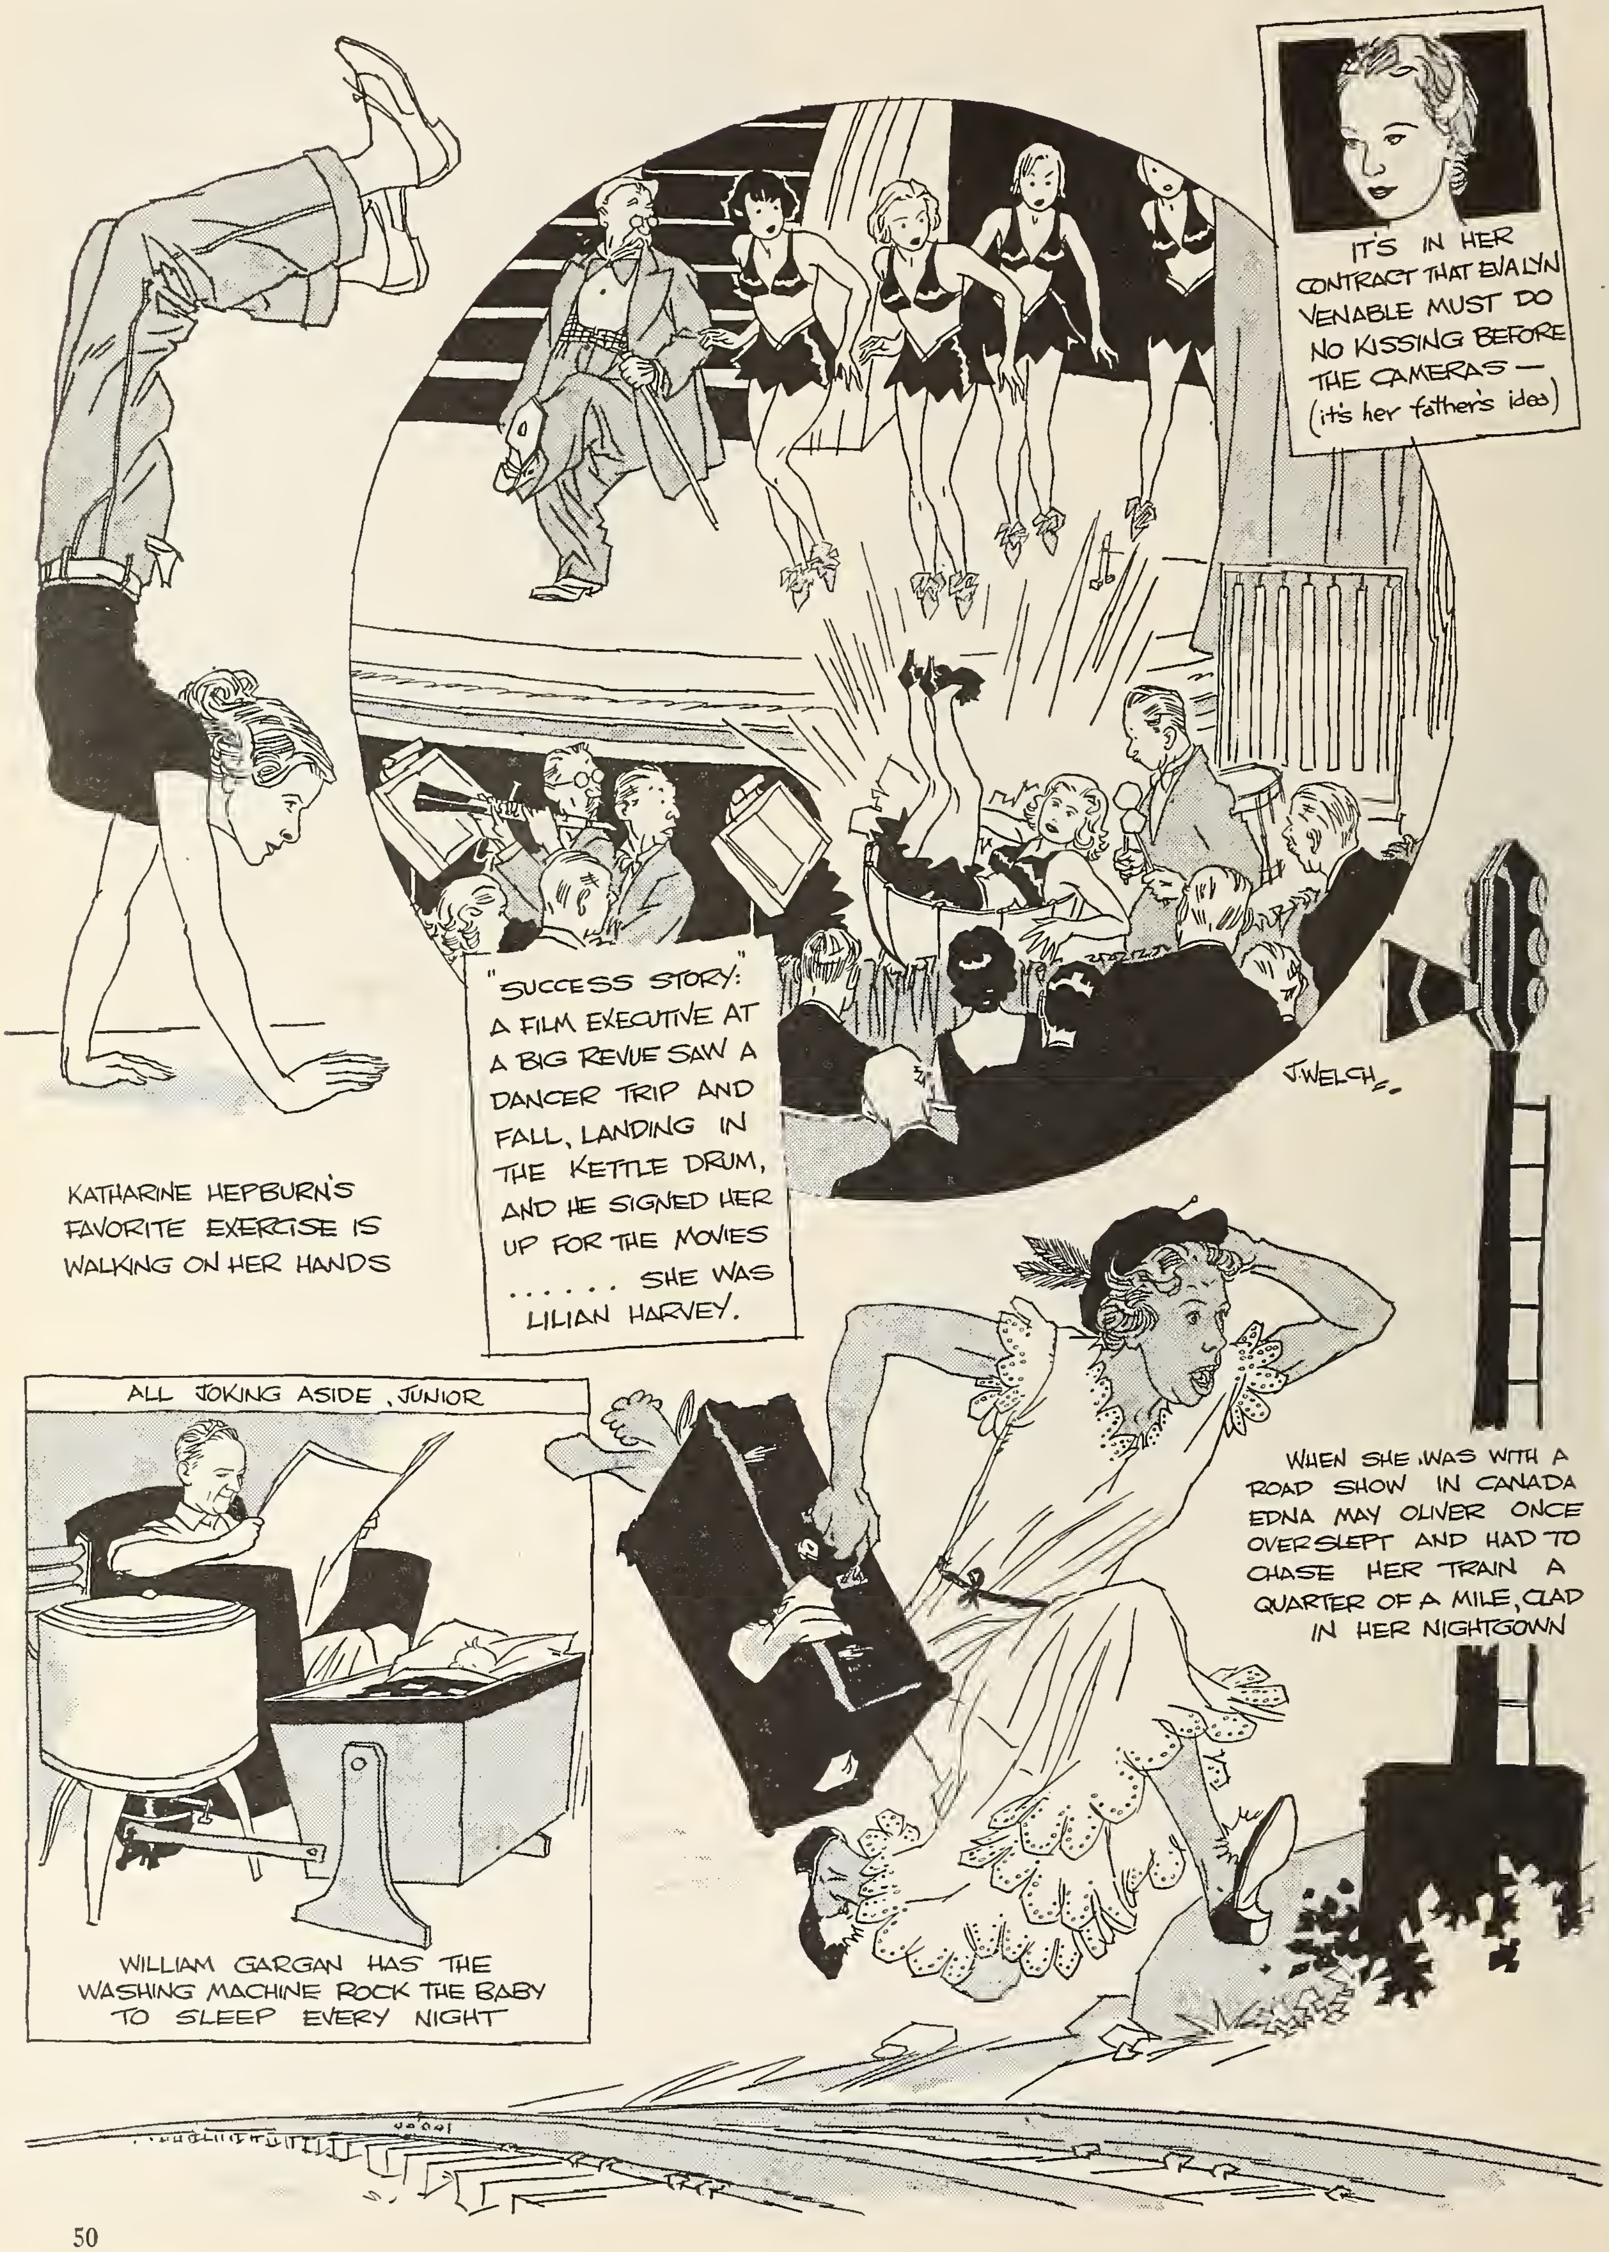
ALL JOKING ASIDE—By JACK WELCH



IT'S IN HER CONTRACT THAT EVALYN VENABLE MUST DO NO KISSING BEFORE THE CAMERAS— (it's her father's idea)

KATHARINE HEPBURN'S FAVORITE EXERCISE IS WALKING ON HER HANDS

"SUCCESS STORY:" A FILM EXECUTIVE AT A BIG REVUE SAW A DANCER TRIP AND FALL, LANDING IN THE KETTLE DRUM, AND HE SIGNED HER UP FOR THE MOVIES . . . . . . SHE WAS LILIAN HARVEY.

ALL JOKING ASIDE, JUNIOR

WILLIAM GARGAN HAS THE WASHING MACHINE ROCK THE BABY TO SLEEP EVERY NIGHT

WHEN SHE WAS WITH A ROAD SHOW IN CANADA EDNA MAY OLIVER ONCE OVERSLEPT AND HAD TO CHASE HER TRAIN A QUARTER OF A MILE, CLAD IN HER NIGHTGOWN

BABY LE ROY:

HA-TA-TA

BABY DURANTE:

HA-CHA-CHA

They speak the same language and do not go in for much Hollywood night life. In fact, the only matter that threatens the beautiful understanding between Messrs. Durante and LeRoy is the latter's likelihood to creep off with the coveted title of "Jimmy, the well-dressed man." Chevalier's choice will soon be seen in "Miss Fane's Baby is Stolen" and "Schnozzle" is ready with "Palooka" and "The Hollywood Party."

Anna Sten's chief worry since arriving in Hollywood has been how to teach her cook (colored) to prepare borscht and shashlik in true Russian style. Anna's first American picture, "Nana," has suffered long delays—but all say it's superb. Her husband, Dr. Eugen Frenke, is in Hollywood with her.

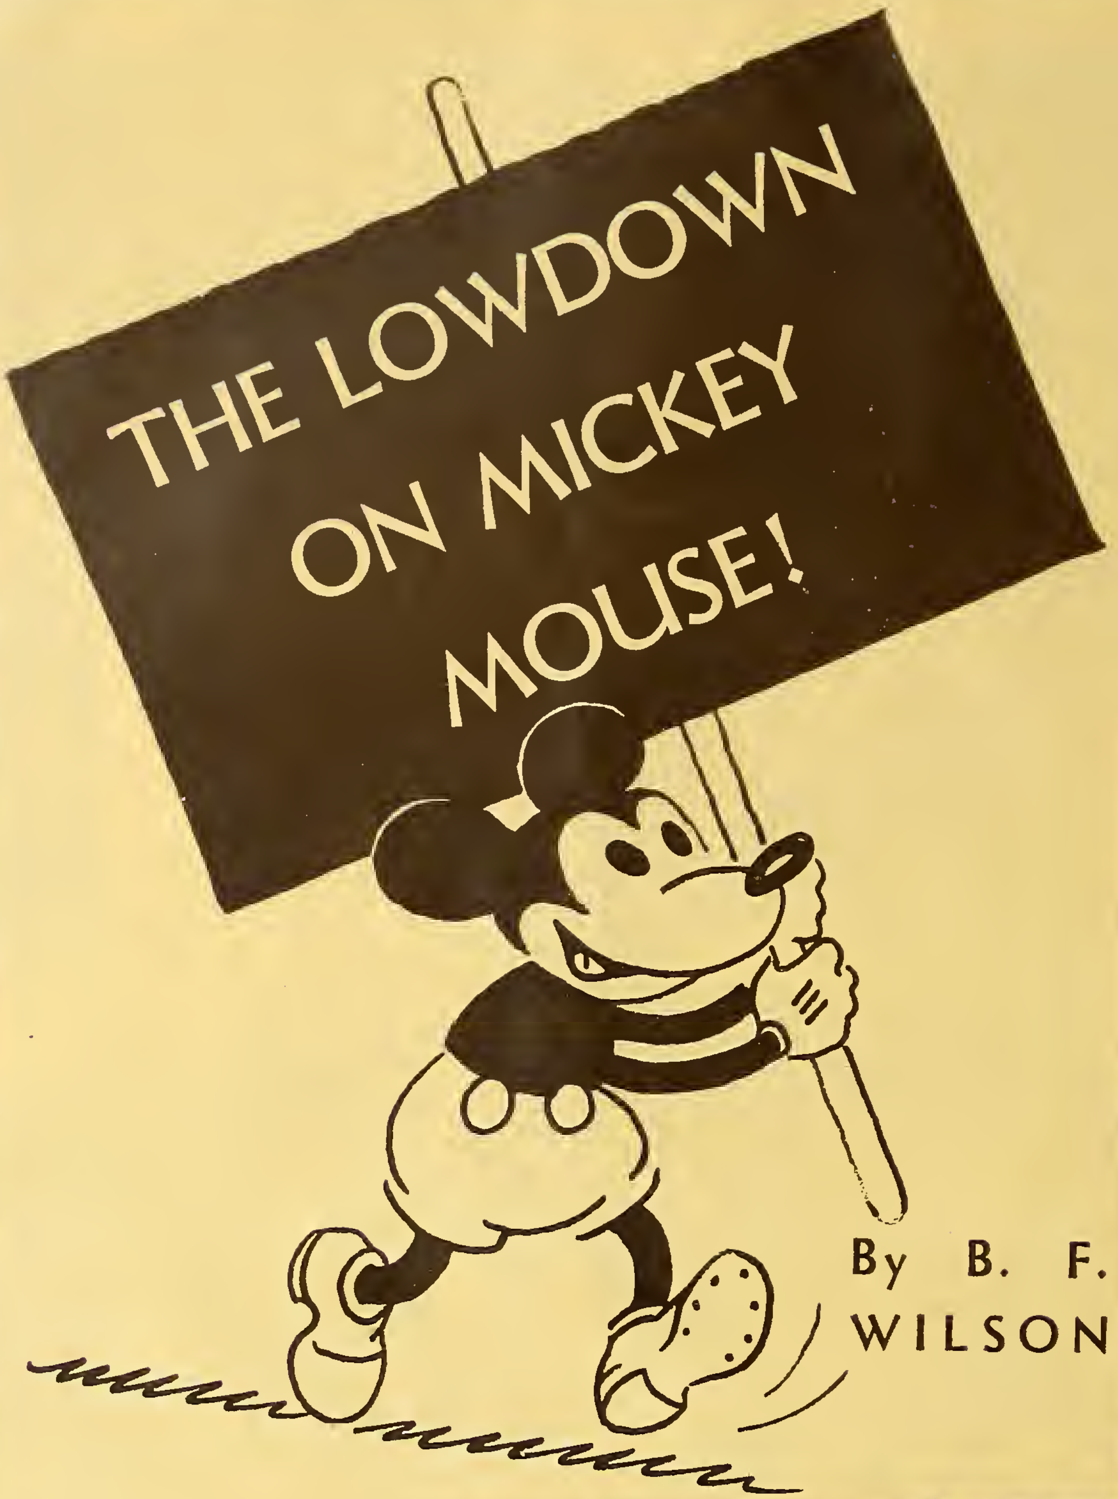
Warner Baxter has been in the show business since he was five. He has been happily married to the same woman for sixteen years. His chief hobby is picking up charming odds and ends for their new house. After "Fox Follies," you'll see him in "Grand Canary."

Loretta Young and Spencer Tracy are still romancing. Loretta dislikes all sports, except badminton (of all things) and adores all picture shows. After "Born to be Bad," she'll be in "House of Rothschild" with Mr. George Arliss.

How would you like to see Lew Ayres teamed up in a picture with that eccentric girl and marvelous actress—Margaret Sullavan? They may do the best seller, "Little Man, What Now?" after Lew's "Cross Country Cruise."

Johnny Mack Brown, in his quiet, unassuming way, has managed to keep his fans loyal through a series of bad breaks. His present pride and joy and chief topic of conversation is his three-months-old son. Like all good Southerners, he's a bit daffy about duck hunting. Latest picture—"Swan Song."

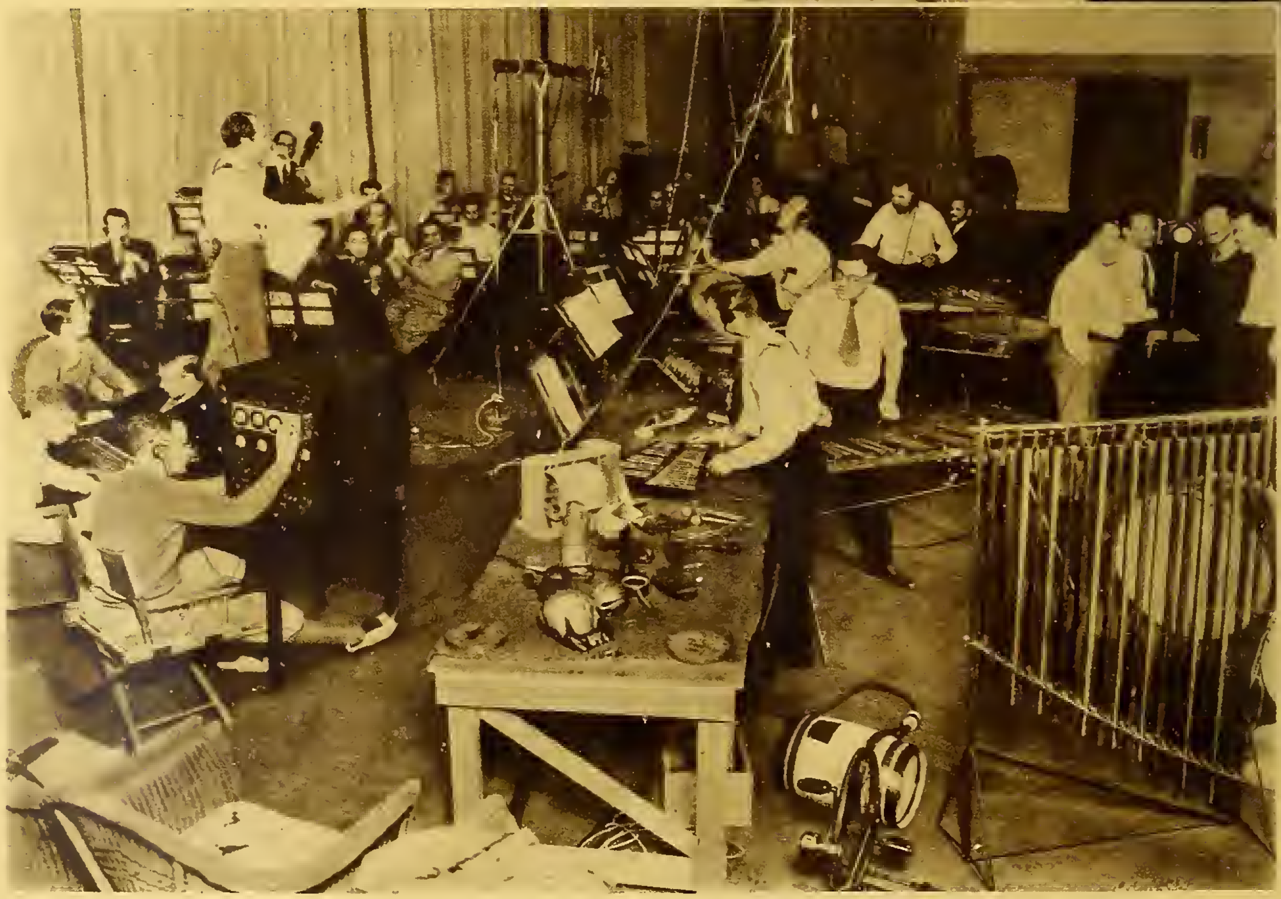
Madge Evans gets up every morning at six to play tennis with Tom Gallery—and then expects us to believe she isn't going to marry the chap! Madge dotes on ice cream sodas and eats them without any figure-fears. With Montgomery, she has completed "Fugitive Lovers." A grand cinematic team.



THE LOWDOWN ON MICKEY MOUSE!

...He's five year's old and famous—yet it hasn't gone to his head. For Minnie's boy-friend knew days when producers wouldn't give him the price of a piece of cheese

By B. F. WILSON



This may look like a photograph titled, "Each man for himself." But in reality the boys are co-operating in the music room of Walt Disney's film factory, to synchronize one of Mickey Mouse's celluloid adventures. A rehearsal is in progress, as you see.

When these enthusiastic tango-ers are transferred to the screen, they will be Mickey and Minnie in the throes of the "light fantastic." The cartoonists draw from life in order to get correct body movement, while Mr. Disney supervises the proceedings.

Here is Walt with his best pal and severest critic. Mrs. Disney used to draw in her famous husband's studio. However, that was before she became mistress of a six-room bungalow, a three-year-old car and a new refrigerator. They're oh, so-o happy.

WHAT would you say if you discovered that the greatest star of them all—a screen favorite who has leaped far above the heads of players like Garbo, Dietrich, Crawford or Barrymore—draws a salary of a mere two hundred dollars per week? You would immediately jump to the conclusion that I should be rushed around to the nearest padded cell, wouldn't you?

It is true, however. The most famous movie star in the world today is Mickey Mouse. He leads the band of popularity from Timbuktu to far Japan, where he is known all over the land as "Miki Kuchi." Each country has its own peculiar name for him. He has been placed, along with the other immortals, in Madame Tussaud's wax-works Hall of Fame. He has been acclaimed by writers, scientists, savants and the "Brain Trust" of the world. He has played command performances before the Kings and Queens of Europe. And his fan mail outnumbers that of any other star.

And yet, he is the only celluloid luminary who isn't riding around in a Rolls-Royce or living in a palace. The reason being, that the man responsible for him in every way, has his own ideas about success.

Walt Disney, creator of Mickey Mouse and Silly Symphonies, is a shy young man of thirty-three. He lives in a six-room bungalow five minutes walk from the studio where Mickey Mouse is made. He has a three-year-old car of modest cost, and his chief luxury, up until now, has been a new electric refrigerator. He is very happily married to a girl by the name of Lillian Bounds, who used to draw for him in his studio. Just recently, his wife presented him with a baby, and that, as you all know, is a far greater luxury than any ice-box. He takes a weekly salary for himself of two hundred dollars. Every other penny goes back into the making of Mickey Mouse and the Silly Symphonies.

Mickey Mouse is only five years old. When he was born, Disney tried to get every movie producer in Hollywood to back him financially. About this time, talkies had just appeared to give the film magnates further headaches, and bustling around trying to get sound effects into pictures which were almost finished, or had just been finished, made these same magnates deaf to Disney's entreaties. He decided to make them himself—on the proverbial shoe-string. He also decided that Mickey needed sound effects to increase his attraction. He made Mickey dance and sing, and that was the beginning of such fantastic, incredible feats as elephants pirouetting like Follies girls; pigs fiddling with the ease of concert masters; wolves turning into Fuller Brush men as realistic as the most every-day visitor of that well-known household necessity to your back door.

WITHIN a year every producer in Hollywood who had refused to listen to Disney, was crowding the office of his studio with tremendous sums on the contracts they offered him. Mickey Mouse went up in electric lights at movie houses. People flocked to theatres where he appeared. And when the success of Mickey became assured, Disney began another series of one-reel features, and called them "The Silly Symphonies," which caught on with such sure-fire (Continued on page 97)

DON'T SEND GILBERT INTO EXILE

By GLADYS HALL

> ### HIS FATE IS IN YOUR HANDS
>
> Read this story and see what cruel calamity can overtake John Gilbert. Do you resent it?
>
> What is to become of this player? Is he headed for a break or oblivion? Will he be given further opportunity to work at his chosen profession, or is he doomed to the limbo of forgotten favorites?
>
> It all depends on you. And you and you.
>
> Does it matter to you? It should. Real talent is as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth.
>
> Write and tell us your opinion. It is valuable. It will influence both producers and exhibitors mightily. It will determine John Gilbert's future.

JOHN GILBERT called me on the phone one night. He said, "I am filing a complaint against the studio to have my contract construed. When I gave you the first story about my comeback, thanks to Garbo, I told you I'd give you the next big story that might happen to me. It has happened. Come up tomorrow and I'll tell you about it. My lawyers have just left. You are the first to know anything about it."

I went up the next morning. My pulse was accelerated by ten beats to the minute. There had been Jack's ad in the Hollywood Reporter advising the world that he was at liberty. "At liberty"—when it was understood that he was under a seven year contract. There had been a mysterious silence at the studio where he was concerned. On one hand rhapsodic reports of his superb performance in "Christina" and on the other hand silence when you asked, "What is he to do next?" Still, I couldn't believe it, whatever it was.

I was thinking of Jack as he had been a few weeks ago when he first knew he was to play with Garbo in "Christina." He had been exalted, transported, in Seventh Heaven. He had been like a man reborn, revivified reinstated in Paradise. One would have sworn that he would endure all things rather than allow anything to interfere in any way with his "new deal" in this game he hates and loves.

I thought, the man is really tremendous. He is a rebel in the ranks. He is a militant pacifist. He is the stuff of which the mad martyrs were made. He is of the blood that fight their lives through for some Holy Cause only to fling it, bloody, into the teeth of the first offender.

It's grand that there can be a man like this in a world gone soft and compromising and riddled with poor little cowardly fears. A man without compromise or caution, with a fierce and violent pride, with a lusty heart and a skin as thin as tissue paper.

Jack paced that long and sumptuous living-room of his. His brown, lean hands were gesticulating, his hair was wild and black. I thought, "What an actor!" There isn't anyone else like him. He brings the old and barbaric colorfulness of the theatre back to us again. An actor who doesn't have to act, because there is greasepaint in his very veins, histrionics in his very blood, drama in every cell of his body.

He said, "You know how happy I was when that magnificent Swede made the chance for me to play with her in 'Queen Christina.' I would have given away twenty years of my life to have done that picture. I would give the twenty years away again today. It was and it is the most magnificent thing that ever happened to me, or ever will. You know how exalted I felt at my chance to get back to where I had been, to do what I had once done. It doesn't happen twice to most men, you know. It happened twice to me, thanks to Garbo.

A chance to work, a try at happiness seems little to ask—yet an unjust

Greta Garbo and John Gilbert in the tavern scene from "Queen Christina." (Left) Jack registers a court "smash" on his day off.

AND I want to tell you that she was magnificent to me while we were working together. She is greater than she ever was, greater to work with, greater in her work. She knew that I was nervous, raw, almost sick with the excitement and the thrill of the thing. And never once did she fail in consideration of me, in tact, in saying and doing the right thing at the right moment. She was gracious and friendly. She sensed every one of my feelings and was tender toward them.

"It was hard work, of course, making that picture. I was nervous and gun shy. I felt that only Garbo really wanted me there. I was sick a lot and Garbo was sick. There were delays and retakes and troubles like that. The executives were looking at me with the old-time and too-familiar suspicion and hostility. I didn't care. I was working again.

"Then, after the picture was finished, I was feeling on top of the world one day and thought I'd call up one of the executives and just say thank you to him, for the part, for the chance, for—well, for everything, you know.

"I got him on the phone. I started in to say thank you to him. I'd hardly opened my mouth before he opened up on me and let me have it—foul abuse, threats, damnation and all hell let loose. I tried to scream into the phone that I was just trying to say thanks. I didn't want any more dough, I tried to (Continued on page 112) fate can and— more—may deny them to this star

WHAT YOU CAN LEARN FROM ALINE MacMAHON

You can learn a secret of quiet charm—more potent, sometimes, than glamor and sex appeal can ever be

She is prettier than her screen portrayals would have you believe. Fairer of skin. And slighter of figure. As for wisecracks—she believes they belong on the screen. Not in a woman's life. Wise girl, Aline.

By FAITH BALDWIN

IF you met Aline MacMahon you would see instantly that she is a much prettier woman than her screen portrayals had led you to believe. There is a charm and a harmony there and a grace of carriage which is most attractive, for she has something in her features, mobile and alive, something in her long, slender hands, something in her perfect poise which will endure long after merely pretty and even beautiful women have been forgotten.

I had expected a dash of brusqueness, a slight amusingly hard-boiled veneer and a constant effect of comedy. I found none of these. And I was very glad that I didn't find them. Because I think that too often, girls of Aline MacMahon's type are apt to take refuge behind a hard-boiled manner and a barrage of smart wisecracks. And by "girls of Aline MacMahon's type," I mean this: girls who are not beautiful in the accepted sense; girls who are not born with sex appeal sticking out from every pore; girls whose intelligence tells them that they are not sirens. These girls are too apt, sometimes, to sit down and decide that they have no sex appeal at all. They become the "good eggs" of this world. The "perfect peaches." The girls to whom men tell their love troubles—about other girls. Not that you can't have sex appeal and be a good egg. too, but—you see what I mean, don't you? That is what you can learn from Aline MacMahon.

Aline MacMahon can be as funny as a crutch—on the screen. But you don't find her playing the clown—or even the flippant wisecracker—in real life. Because, somehow, in a woman, that just doesn't go with charm—unless you happen to be Mae West. And Aline has a lot of charm. I might say, oodles of it.

Aline MacMahon is fairer of skin than I thought and her hair is brown and I am trying to remember whether her eyes were hazel or a blue gray. She has a low, delightful voice and a way of making you feel that you are interesting to her. She was an excellent stage actress before reaching the screen. She told me of an incident in her theatrical career which was both amusing and pathetic.

We were speaking of the unfailing regularity with which dreams come true if you have the wisdom to work for them and the gift requisite for the realization of your especial dream. We agreed that often they come true, not quite as one expected and sometimes too late or in a different form. She said that she had her first leading part in a play called "Collusion." The play was well received and after it was over someone said, "Well, this is your big night, the night you were to have been dragged through the streets in your carriage by the wild and cheering multitudes."

(Continued on page 105)

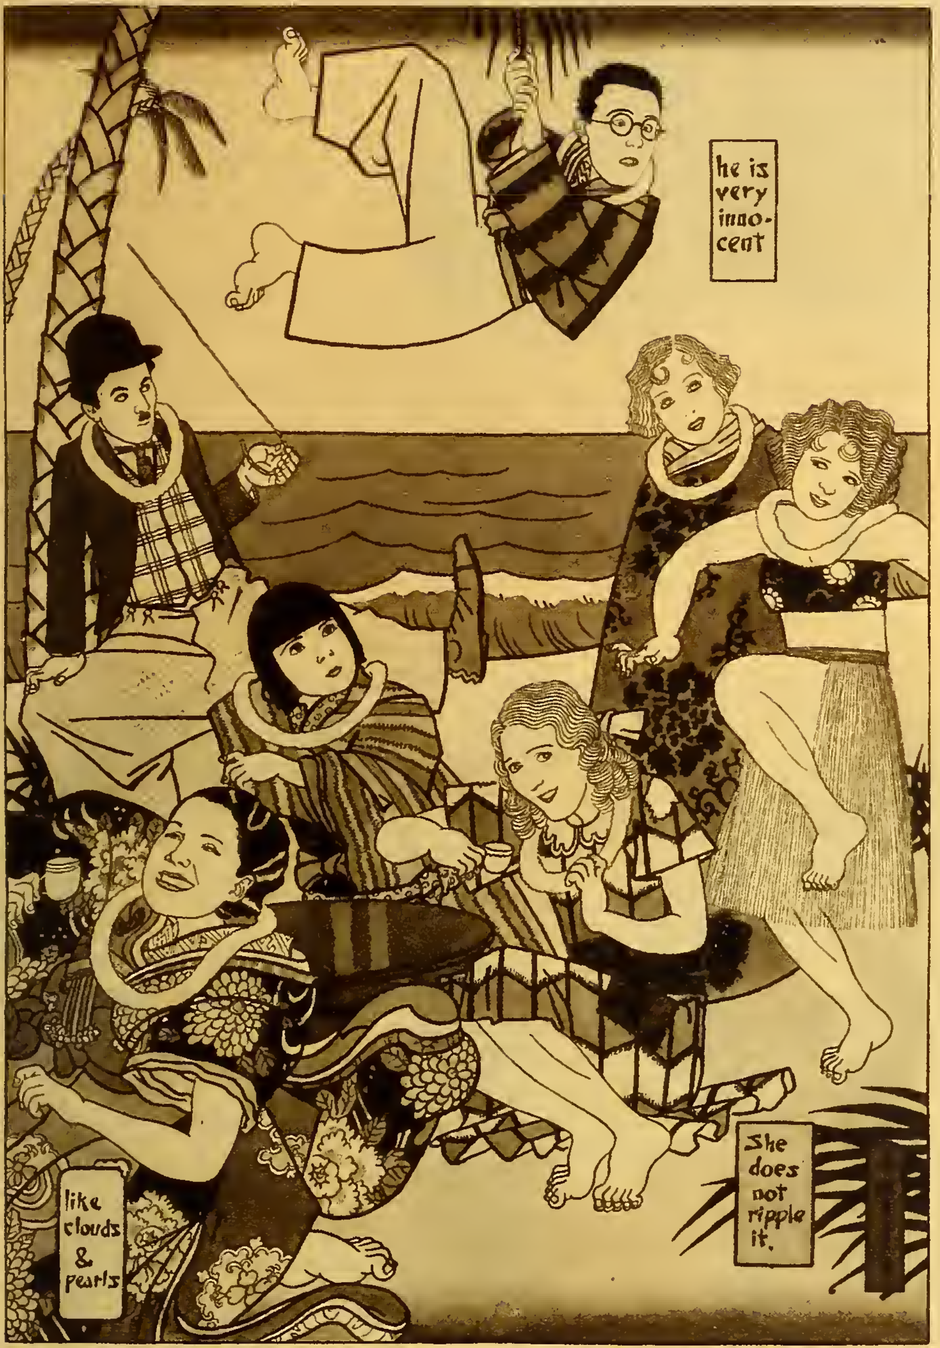
Their "BEST ESTEEMED" Stars



. . . Delightful—and somehow touching—tributes to some of our movie stars, written by the young Oriental pupils of a Hawaiian school. The English may be wild, but the sentiments are sincere!

Most elegant artist, Jack Welch, have pulled these sketch. Very uproarious they show the stars in such costume they imaginatively attire in Land of Ancestors. We cogitate they most amusement for illustrate this fastidious article

NORMA SHEARER: the magnificent star, functions on the screen and is known as an excelling beauty. She looks excessively repose with tooths like clouds and pearls. Her hairs are so undulating that I think so it is hard to comb it. Her eyelashes are tedious and exceedingly cute. When she commences her eyes, her eyelashes goes reluctant, as if she did it for intentionally. Her lips are not spacious, but paltry. Her nose is not so inadequate, nor are they too comparative. They are just upright. She exploits so pungently that she is known as one of the movie stars.

AYAKO MURAOKA

MARION DAVIES: My most best, esteemed actress is Marion Davies. She is one of the superior actress. Her complexion is fair with large blue eyes, circular countenance, extended hair with a modish dress. She have a fine proceedure in walking, and is fitful to be at every show and are well prepared to act movies kind.

Marion Davies is calm and perfectly good. Her reputation is what people ponder she are. I maxim she is preferable to any movie star that exploits. She is an actress of not so long ago.

KINUYE HASHIMOTO

CHARLIE CHAPLIN: Charlie Chaplin is a man of the jollity class actor. He has a black hair, a dark blue organ of vision and always vesture himself in a funny condition in a long pant and a coat with a large space exposed by the end of the front part. He have pregnant feet, and when he walk the part by the toes propogate away from each other. He were always winking the eye, but without utterance a bit of laugh.

I perception no actor can act so comedies as Charlie Chaplin. I most desirious to sit downing in the Princess Theater and observation how he shackle his basis. In one movies his foot grew a corn, and everyplace he go he would conveyance a cane.

KIM YUN HO

COLLEEN MOORE: MY most propitious esteemed actress is Colleen Moore. I saw

(Continued on page 95)

~~"I said that Ralph Forbes and George Brent were no longer good friends and that either one could see the other at the bottom of a well with total unconcern."~~

"I was wrong. I discover that Ralph and George are still Damon and Pythias to each other and that Ruth, George and Ralph are the greatest of friends."

The real truth about

By HOMER CROY

Ruth beams—instead of scowling—upon ex-husband Rafe.

IF you will turn to your file of back copies of MODERN SCREEN (which, of course, you keep) and get the October issue, you will find something interesting. In it you will discover an article entitled "Hollywood Feuds" written by myself. It now brings the blush of shame to my brow, and when I walk the street my eyes are lowered and I skulk in alleys where once I strode boldly in the full light of day among my fellowmen.

The reason of my ignominy is that I listened to the scandal of Hollywood and spoke harsh words about Ruth Chatterton and George Brent when I had better been in Sunday School studying the golden text instead of believing all that fell upon my unsuspecting ears. In the article I said that Ralph Forbes, who was once the husband of Ruth Chatterton, and George Brent, to whom she is now married, had once been the best of friends, in spite of the rather unusual relationship; but that they were no longer so, and that either one could see the other at the bottom of a well with surprising composure.

Thus the report came to me and I put it into words and it went forth to the world. But I am new at keyholes; in all my long years I have never been the first to tell an astonished husband that a Blessed Event is about to come into his life. And, these days, no writer who has not done this amounts to shucks. I set the words down in New York as I heard them, but now I am in Hollywood and I discover that Ralph Forbes and George Brent are still Damon and Pythias to each other and that the three are the greatest of friends and at least once a week get together at food time to celebrate their three-cornered moon. So unusual is the situation, and so deep my humility at having cast them into a well, when I should have exalted them upon a housetop, that I fared forth to meet them and to see the moon with my own dim eyes.

ONE may well marvel at my temerity in accepting an invitation to a peace conference with three properly indignant celebrities, but mutual friends assured me they were really the souls of tolerance and that I need not have any fear of being drawn and quartered.

Rafe, friendly—not hostile—husband-in-law and good friend of George.

Ruth, George and Ralph

Besides, I welcomed the opportunity to tear down the Hollywood grapevine, which has long disseminated falsehoods of the Brent-Forbes relationship.

What might well have been an embarrassing situation was instantly dispelled by the charm and graciousness of a lady and by the good-natured attitude of two gentlemen. Their behavior, despite the distressing circumstances, merely reflected their good breeding.

In my career as a writer I have experienced many strange interviews, but none so strange as this meeting with Ruth Chatterton, George Brent and Ralph Forbes. It took place at the Brent home in Beverly Hills.

To find myself, an alleged author of homely humor such as Will Rogers plays, suddenly precipitated into a frank and intimate discussion of the marriage, divorce, and remarriage of a celebrated actress—with the lady herself; and on the cause and effect of the preservation of an extraordinary friendship between the former and present husband of the lady—with the two gentlemen themselves; is an experience that seldom, if ever, befalls any mortal.

Controversy rages in Hollywood over what the picture colony loves to believe is a bizarre domestic situation, worthy of a Noel Coward plot. I said as much in my introductory remarks as we bent elbows together in the famous Brent "glory hole," which has probably heard more brilliant conversation and sparkling wit than any other rendezvous in the picture capital.

Miss Chatterton: "Since living in Hollywood, Mr. Croy, I have come to entertain the deepest sympathy for Irvin Cobb's goldfish. Apparently there is no limit to the violations of one's privacy. I feel that there are intimacies in one's life that even an actress in the public eye is entitled to hold sacred. To publicize, or to consent to the publication of such, is bad taste. It has always been my policy to ignore gossip and scandal, but this latest slander is too unjust to pass unanswered."

I heartily agreed. This continuous gossip of the doings of screen stars, which is usually based upon garbled hearsay, sweeps our country from one end to the other. It often results in the blasting of the reputations of innocent persons.

Mr. Brent: "Our friendship with 'Rafe' here is so thoroughly honest and sincere that it is a perfectly natural relationship to us. Perhaps it is so simple that it becomes complex to people of limited understanding. They can't seem to believe that it is possible for two men, who have loved the same woman, to remain staunch friends."

Mr. Forbes: "Certain people won't understand it, you mean. If they can't dramatize and scandalize, they have nothing to talk about."

Miss Chatterton: "When 'Rafe' and I were divorced and George and I married,

(Cont. on page 110)

George seeks—instead of shunning—the company of Rafe.

"SLAPSTICK'S

Hal Roach lights twenty candles

Illustrated by

(Reading down) It looks as if Irving Thalberg and Thelma Todd are having themselves a grand time, doesn't it? And here are Ginger Rogers and her mother with Lew Ayres serving as escort. Will Rogers tells Hal Roach and Harold Lloyd that the party is a huge success and we agree with him.

ONCE upon a time Bebe Daniels told Harold Lloyd that some day comedians would be making one hundred dollars a week. Mr. Lloyd, who had great respect for the Daniels judgment—even when it went reckless—passed the good word on to Hal Roach. The latter, listing tolerance among his finer qualities, smiled sympathetically at his be-spectacled co-worker and murmured something about, "everything's gonna be all right; just you take things easy for a while."

The foregoing incident occurred in the not-so-good old days and much celluloid has flowed into the camera since. Much gold has clinked into the Roach coffers, too—hard-earned and well-deserved gold, the result of thoughtful planning and wise investment.

And now, in the land of sunshine and sound tracks, Hal celebrates his twentieth anniversary. Short subjects—good ones—have made him a time-tested success, for no sky-rocketing, flash-in-the-pan sensation is Mr. Roach.

Perhaps best-known of his products are the "Our Gang"

ANNIVERSARY"

and Hollywood helps him celebrate

JACK WELCH

(Reading up) Stan Laurel, Walt Disney, Hal Roach and Oliver Hardy are all happy to be "among those present." Our cameraman snapped the host with Jean Harlow and her mother. The Messrs. Hardy, Roach and Laurel join Thelma and Patsy Kelly to cut themselves a piece of cake.

comedies. These bright juvenile two-reelers have consistently proved to be the exhibitor's delight, for there has always been an audience for them. Little Farina's sufferings and Fatty's pie-eating lures an adult as well as a very youthful spectator.

Later—much later—Mr. Roach signed Laurel and Hardy and then Charley Chase and, to date, he hasn't missed as a "spotter-upper" of talent, as Jimmy Durante would say, if "Schnozzle" had a better vocabulary.

Hal Roach was once a cowboy. He literally rode into Hollywood, parked his spurs and donned a celluloid collar. Perhaps it was the material of his neckwear that gave him the cinematic idea. At any rate, we're glad he got it, for we have all indirectly profited by his success.

We feel sure that the infant industry, long since out of swaddling clothes—having learned to talk with various and varying qualities of diction—joins us in congratulating this king of comedy purveyors on his many achievements and in wishing him continued prosperity.

ALICE BRADY IS LIKE THAT!

The publicity boys and girls didn't find Alice Brady very good copy. Too independent. Too truthful. Too natural. What do you think?

By HILARY LYNN

YOU don't know very much about Alice Brady, do you? Except that every performance she gives is superb. But—I mean—the lady herself hasn't been plastered all over the magazines in story and picture; you haven't been invited to read an exposé of her love life; you haven't seen her pottering domestically around a prop kitchen—or lolling on Malibu's sands in beach pajamas. Right? Right. And you never will. Because Alice Brady just isn't like that. I'll try to give you a picture of what she really is like.

Hollywood's suavest comedienne (who is also one of Broadway's greatest tragediennes) lolled back on a white leather couch before the fireplace in her red and white Empire drawing-room, nibbled at a lamb sandwich and sipped a glass of sherry.

It was tea-time. Jessie de Brady, Sammy de Boy (born Hayworth Thane—much too aristocratic a name for him, so Alice Brady changed it), Nina Hopkins and Hotcha Lavinia Mannon solemnly gnawed at enormous beef bones spread bare at our feet on the thick biscuit-colored rug.

In order not to confuse you, let me quickly introduce the above-mentioned bone-gnawers. They're Alice's three wire-haired terriers and one very sedate Scotty.

"A well-meaning woman once asked me why I always wore black," Alice was saying, "and I answered, 'Because I love red so much!' She didn't know what I was driving at. But what I meant was—if once I started wearing red, there'd be no stopping me. So I keep as far away from it as possible and usually dress entirely in black. That's safe!"

Certainly there was no doubt about her passion for all shades of red. What wasn't white in her striking drawing-room was red. And through the open archway which led out into a combination library-bar, one saw cozy red leather chairs and lounges and red woodwork. Also such warnings as "Ladies not permitted to smoke" and "Dogs not allowed." But since the dogs hadn't yet learned to read, those signs didn't disturb them!

The predominant color in the dining-room was also red—several shades of it. Red-flowered wall paper, red frames on the pictures, red tones in the furniture and woodwork, red and white crystal candelabra and the glow from a California winter sunset in the rich red Bohemian glassware on the buffet.

Bill Brady's daughter, with her French eyes and her Irish grin, has given the screen a number of superb comedy roles. (Opposite page, left) "Should Ladies Behave?" was one of the finest. In "Miss Fane's Baby" (right) she plays a very different sort of role. Yes, believe us, that's Baby LeRoy, with his hair and face blacked up for the part.

YOU know, I rented this place furnished," Miss Brady was saying, "and then decided that the furniture in the house just wasn't me. So I stripped it bare and started all over again and the result is what you see." She watched me amusedly for a moment as I glanced around the room.

"You don't have to be polite about it," she said. "Be frank and say what you think. It wouldn't surprise me if you thought exactly what Adrian did."

It seemed that shortly after moving into her new Beverly home, the whimsical Miss Brady, all hopped up about her original ideas for decorating and furnishing, rushed into Adrian's studio at M-G-M to tell him all about it and to get the reaction of a connoisseur. When Adrian heard about the red-flowered wall paper and that large slap of still life—the red flowers in a red frame—on that particular flowered wall paper, he threw up his hands and groaned with horror.

"It sounds frightful, Miss Brady," he said.

"Come out and look at it before you convict me," suggested the unperturbed Alice. Adrian did.

Politely, he suggested that perhaps there was just a leetle too much red in the room for comfort. Perhaps it might hurt someone's eyes, said he. Gently, he advised that she might improve it by removing that large blotch of red flowers from the wall.

"But I didn't," said the redoubtable Miss Brady, jingling the bangles on her wrist. "As I said to him, 'You're a lamb to give me your frank opinion, Adrian, and I'm sure you're right. But I'm afraid I prefer to rot in my own bad taste.' No matter how wrong it is—it expresses me!" And Alice Brady is like that!

ALICE BRADY is one of the few actresses—or women, for that matter—who is completely sufficient unto herself. In the disapproving face of the most violent objections, she goes blandly and contrarily on her own sweet way. Unconcerned, cool and filled with lazy mirth over the consternation caused by her perfectly harmless, legitimate foibles. In this typical Brady, but most untypical movie star fashion, she lives in Hollywood exactly as she might live in New York, London, Paris or Kamchatka.

"I'm one of those people who is never affected by environment," she once told me, with a flash of her French eyes and a broad flicker of her Irish grin. "I suppose I'm just too lazy to live any other way. That must make me a terrible worry to the publicity department of M-G-M. Not good copy. What a blow!"

If she only knew! Vividly I remember the day of my first appointment with her. Just before going out to her house, I called up that much-harassed department to get some idea about the mentionable virtues or vices of Broadway's famous dramatic actress.

I knew nothing whatever about her, except that she was the daughter of William Brady, the theatrical producer. And that she had made the role of Lavinia Mannon in Eugene O'Neill's "Mourning Becomes Electra" burn with such malignant, tragic passion that some New York critics, who were pre-convinced that Nazimova would carry off the honors overwhelmingly, staggered out of the theatre wondering whether Alice Brady hadn't stolen the show.

I also knew that her first

(Continued on page 108)

Have YOU background in

1. Here is a novel black and white fire-place graced by a gay red dancing girl. 2. A modern room—gray-green carpet and white furniture. 3. An interesting parchment lamp shade is trimmed with red plaid. 4. An attractive corner featuring a peacock green vase and a black figurine. 5. And a brown and white kitchen boasting practical plaid piqué drapes with voile curtains. 6. This suite of Ramon Novarro's is done in two shades of green with lamps and tables of chromium. 7. A white corduroy couch sets off a chair of brilliant red leather. 8. An "intimate" living-room—ivory woodwork and mantel, plain walls.

By VIRGINIA T. LANE

VERY few people, says Willie Pogany, realize how much a house can do for them. The proper setting is not only conducive to greater happiness, but to success. And he reveals the way to get that proper setting.

Pogany is a wizard at creating certain moods with the sets he designs—as the studios have discovered. He says a house, no matter how small or how large, can take on any quality you wish it too—peace, cheeriness, sophistication.

There's adventure, in his estimation, in John Barrymore's home. You feel it when you see that dagger picked up in India, those queer scimitars. And there's romance in it, too. As witness that vase from Florence, the little rose quartz figurines.

Pickfair reflects a queenly elegance. But it misses being austere because of the low ceilings. He doubts very much if Douglas Fairbanks ever felt at home in it, principally because of the oyster white woodwork. "So much of it is repelling to a man of his active nature," explained Pogany. Your background, you see, must always be in the right YOUR home?

3

4

. . . The right setting can enhance your personality or change your whole life, for with it you may create peace or glamor at will. And here is how you can do it tune with your personality. Otherwise it becomes irksome.

6

8

Pogany sees Joan Crawford, for instance, striving toward strength in her surroundings. "I think," he observed musingly, "she must hate mere prettiness. She wants strikingness. I can't imagine her having any pink or blue ribbons about or any boudoir pillows. She has the vividness of a gypsy. She's intense, restless and romantic. I picture her in an enormous studio living-room, having all the incongruity of a studio. No particular system, but great stimulation. Strong, vibrating colors like rich deep green, with a touch of black here and there. No interior could ever be soothing to her. It must be restless like herself for her to really enjoy it. Her relaxation she must get from a beautiful garden, from huge windows giving on to wide sweeps of velvety lawn.

"Janet Gaynor, on the other hand, is a typical little home girl. You see her amid gay chintz and lace curtains and canary birds. In a pretty house, possibly on the bungalow order, with bright flowers in the window boxes. In the sort of house most men love coming home to.

"There's only one environment in which I can fancy Marlene Dietrich—the Dietrich, that is, of the screen. I see her sitting immobile on (Continued on page 101)

On Dress Parade

Ann Harding, in "The Right to Romance," adds a bit of feminine fluff-and-ruffle to an otherwise severe black gown with armlets and muff of white ruching.

Satin lure—and plain as plain, can be. Dolores Del Rio, in the sparkling "Flying Down to Rio," wears this satin hostess gown with its stunning corded trimming.

By MARGERY WELLS

THIS is a new department. I hope you're going to like it. If you do, write and tell me. And if you don't, you can write and tell me that, too, but please tell me why, at the same time, so that I can give you something that you will like.

Briefly, this is what the department is going to do for you. I shall dash busily around and see all the movies I can. And I shall watch, with an eye like a hawk, for good fashion in those movies. Then I shall tell you in this department about the clothes that I see. About the clothes that are good—and the ones which are not. About the ones which would be adaptable for everyday wear. About the ones which will bring glamor into your soul and happiness into your lives—for clothes can do that, you know!

Also make a note of this—I'm working on a scheme whereby you will be able to obtain copies, at a reasonable price, of certain particularly good dresses which I see on the screen. Watch for this! And now—to work.

Talk about dressing aiding the art of "Going in a big way for a Gigolo"—or for any he-man for that matter! See Dolores Del Rio pull off this stunt in white and more white, transparent or opaque—in "Flying Down to Rio."

Over and against her dark skin (you can do it with tan make-up, or real) white thinnesses and surfaces make her sparkle. And as for those spotted organdy puffed sleeves over her arms, around her dark face, setting off her dark eyes—well, mark that down in your June calendar for Summer Madness. Added, a little white cap over black hair and the enchantment is complete.

Then, for sparkling, shimmery, satiny lure, take the home gown, in white room (in picture). Not a frill in a carload—just banded cordings, and what a setting for a jewel of a head.

White net—yards and yards of it—making sleeves mostly, for a blouse, for a gray suit. These voluminous sleeves over dark arms,

(Continued on page 114)

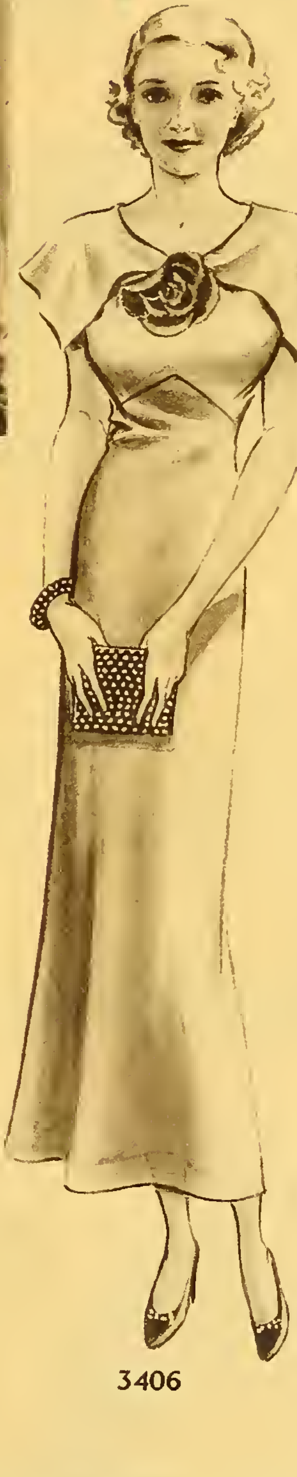
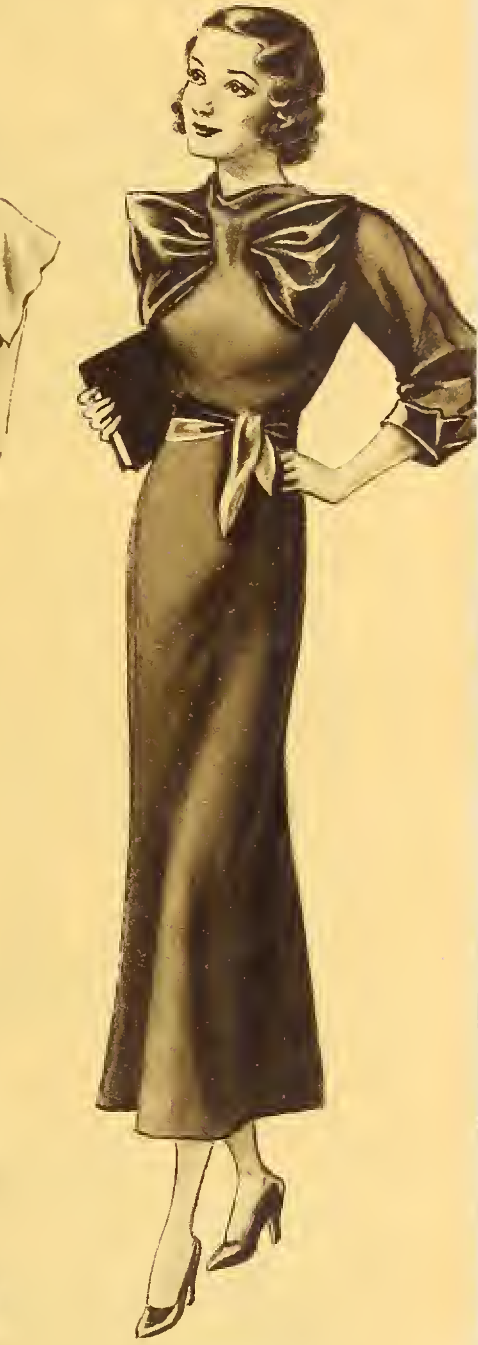
• Reviewing the movie clothes as they flash past us on the screen •

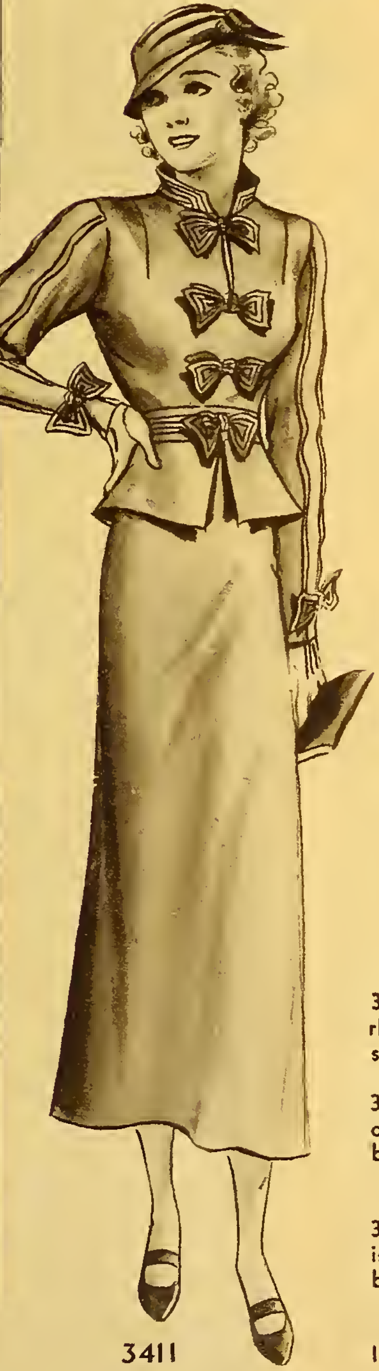
Three Star Patterns



3406



3392



3411

3411—Wynne Gibson's interesting tunic dress fashioned of rhumba-rust wool. The stitched bows at the front and on the sleeves make a smart trim. Sizes 11, 13, 15, 17 and 19 years.

3406—Bette Davis' charming satin afternoon frock. The wide collar covering the shoulders and upper arms meets in the back, fastening with a single rhinestone button. Sizes 14, 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38 and 40 bust.

3392—Ann Dvorak's dusty emerald green wool daytime dress is trimmed with cire satin cuffs and tie belt matching the brown bow at the front neckline. Designed for sizes 11, 13, 15, 17 and 19 years.

Instructions for ordering patterns—and back views—on page 114

WHAT KIND OF A GIRL IS HEATHER?

. . . She knows India, Yogi philosophy. the thrill of escape from sudden death. Indeed, Miss Angel's past has been almost as colorful as Joseph's proverbial coat

By CAROLINE SOMERS HOYT

TO see her sitting so calm and so British in the very dignified living-room of her very dignified home in Hollywood, you would not believe that her life had been made up of anything but pouring tea for the village vicar—"one lump or two" and "cream or lemon?"—or taking a prim stoll across the English countryside.

Heather Angel is a typical English girl—low voiced, charming, placid and it tests one's credulity and imagination to picture her a part of the curious and sinister atmosphere of India. Yet in this country one finds her for fifteen months, traveling far into the interior, as a member of a repertoire theatrical company.

She was born in Oxford, England, on a bleak day in early February. As a child, she attended the Wyncombe Abbey School and just as a final fillip, she was sent to Switzerland and went to school there since family tradition must be upheld. Her father—and incidentally Angel is their real name—before his death in the World War was a lecturer on chemistry at Oxford and her uncle, Horace Lamb, was a professor at Cambridge. There is also in her family a titled lady, Lady Brooke, her first cousin.

One can see that Heather is what is known in effete circles as "well connected." All the more strange, then, that she should have felt impelled to break away from the family patter and become—"oh, my deah, is it really done?"—an actress.

Heather was attending a dramatic school when the death of the head mistress threw the school into such confusion that the girl tried her own wings and went on the stage immediately, where for three years she played small and featured rôles in London.

It was in 1929 that the chance came for her to tour India, China, Burma and Egypt. There she found an entirely new life, a life different from anything she had ever known and there she (Continued on page 94)

"COWBOYS NEED HEALTHY NERVES — AND, BELIEVE ME, SO DO HOUSEWIVES"

Eddie Woods, Champion Cowboy, says: "To have nerves that can take it, I smoke only Camels. I've tried them all but Camels are my smoke! They have a natural mildness, and I like their taste better. Camels do not jangle my nerves, even when I smoke one after another."

Mrs. Phyllis L. Potter,
Montclair, N. J., says:

"I don't doubt but what it takes healthy nerves to ride an outlaw horse! But any woman who is a home maker will agree with me that shopping, cooking, cleaning, washing, and tending to all the other duties of running a household are enough to jangle anybody's nerves. I know that I have to be careful in choosing my cigarettes. I am a confirmed Camel smoker because I can smoke Camels freely without a hint of jumpy nerves. And they are the mildest cigarette I ever smoked!"

Copyright, 1934, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company

How Are Your Nerves?

Fortunate indeed is that modern man or woman who does not get nervously upset. Raw, jangled nerves seem, all too often, to be the order of the day.

If nerves are your problem, we suggest a check-up now—on your eating, sleeping, and smoking. Get a fresh slant on your smoking by changing to Camels. Much is heard about the tobaccos used in various cigarettes. But this is a fact, as any impartial leaf-tobacco expert will tell you:

☛ Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Everywhere you see Camels smoked more and more. People do care about mildness...about good taste...about their nerves. And Camels never get on your nerves...never tire your taste.

CAMEL
CAMEL
CAMEL
CAMEL TURKISH & DOMESTIC BLEND
QUALITY

Camel's Costlier Tobaccos

NEVER GET ON YOUR NERVES . . NEVER TIRE YOUR TASTE

What makes skin Smooth
—— Wrinkle-free?

TWO REASONS!

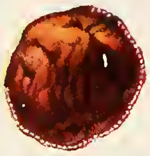
1 Active Oil Glands in Under Skin
2 Natural Moisture in Outer Skin

You have Two Skins. You need Two Creams—a different cream for each skin

THE APPLE TELLS THE STORY

Smooth—Glossy
1 At its peak, the inner and outer skin of the apple are both firm and smooth—perfect!

Soft—Spongy
2 A little past its prime, the inner tissue of the apple has shrunken away from outer skin.



Wrinkled—Discolored
3 Later, the outer skin has wrinkled to fit the shrunken under skin. This causes wrinkles in human skin, too!

UNDER SKIN
WHERE WRINKLES START
OUTER SKIN
WHERE DRYNESS STARTS

Eleanor Roosevelt

lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Roosevelt, of Washington, has already started using Pond's Cold Cream for her Under Skin, Pond's Vanishing Cream for her Outer Skin.

Read the story of the apple above!

Amazing that your skin, too, is subject to changes like that!

But there is a way to keep it youthful . . . free from dreaded lines! That way is to give each of your two skins the different care it needs.

To Avoid Wrinkles, keep your Under Skin firm—Begin early to help this under skin. When its oil glands begin to fail you can supply the oils that keep it firm and young. You need an oil cream that goes deep down. That is exactly what Pond's Cold Cream does. It penetrates to the very under skin. Your skin feels toned, renewed. Soon you feel and look years younger!

Use this satiny cream for cleansing, too. Because it goes so deep, it removes every particle of dirt and make-up. No wonder it is so refreshing!

To Correct Dryness—What to do for your Outer Skin—Here it's an entirely different need! Not oils but natural skin moisture is needed to keep this outer skin from growing dry—chapped.

Pond's Vanishing Cream is made especially for the outer skin. It is greaseless. It contains a marvelous substance that prevents loss of skin moisture—actually replaces lost moisture.

You can test this yourself by a single application of Pond's Vanishing Cream on dry chapped skin! The roughnesses are smoothed away! Your skin is pearly looking. And this cream holds powder and rouge smoothly for hours!

The Two-Skin Beauty Treatment Society Women Use

Eleanor Roosevelt describes the method for you:

"My night cleansing is Pond's Cold Cream—and Pond's Tissues take it off. The tissues show how marvelously this cream cleans. I do this twice.

"After cleansing I like to leave a little Pond's Vanishing Cream on my face overnight. It's so good to keep the skin clear and smooth. And there's no heavy stickiness about it.

"In the morning, and in the day when needed, another good Pond's Cold Cream cleansing. Tissues blot it up. Then a dab of Pond's Vanishing Cream to leave on. It holds powder nicely—keeps off any shine."

Send for the samples offered in the coupon below. In a few days see your own skin growing clearer, smoother, lovelier every day!

POND'S
Liquefying Cream
FOR CLEANSING
POND'S
COLD CREAM
FOR Cleansing

For Your Under Skin—Pond's delicious Cold Cream, or, for those who prefer a cream that melts more rapidly, Pond's Liquefying Cream.

POND'S
VANISHING CREAM
Finishing

For Your Outer Skin—Pond's Vanishing Cream, greaseless. Overnight or daytime softening. Holds powder.

SEND FOR SAMPLES!

Pond's Extract Co., Dept. C, 136 Hudson Street, New York City
I enclose 9¢ (to cover postage and packing) for samples of all Pond's Creams and six different shades of Pond's Face Powder.

Name____________________________________
Street___________________________________
City________________________State____________

TUNE IN on the Pond's Players Friday evenings, 9:30 P. M., E. S. T. WEAF, NBC Network

Copyright, 1934, Pond's Extract Company

NILS ASTHER, ENEMY OF HOOEY

By WALTER RAMSEY

"FORGET everything you have ever read about me! For the most part it is bunk!"

Nils Asther asks this of his fans.

The man who is known in Hollywood as "The Lone Wolf," "The Male Garbo" and the guy-it-is-almost-impossible-to-make-an-interview-appointment-with, stood with his back to the blazing fire in the living room of his hilltop home and grinned at my mood of obvious bad temper. In the first place, I had been exactly three weeks making an appointment with the fellow. In the second place, I had run out of gas on the very perpendicular hill where he maintains his hide-away. And to top it all, I had been assailed at the door by his Great Dane who, assuredly, does not approve of callers.

I had said, sarcastically, "Nice little place you've got here. Bet you get a lot of 'drop in' trade. What is it—a gambling joint?"

"No," said Nils, "it is just a plain joint. It is very simple. But we love it. We call it home."

The Chinaman who does Nils' cooking set down a large platter of hors d'oeuvres and a bottle of wine. Though it was early winter afternoon, the lamps in the enormous room were already lighted and the logs on the hearth flared and crackled in genial warmth. As my tall host set about his duties with the wine, I began to feel better about the whole thing.

"I am sorry about the appointment," he had said, "but to be perfectly frank, I had come to the conclusion that it might be best to dispense with interviews entirely. I am growing a little weary of myself in print. Because—neither the friendly nor the unfriendly writers have ever made me anything but ridiculous on the printed page. I am not the kind of person you have been reading about! But on second thought, I realized that it would be impossible for me to stop talking for publication because I would immediately be called a recluse . . . attempting to create a mysterious atmosphere about myself. But I should really like to tell the people that have read stories about me just what I have said to you:

"Forget everything you have ever read about me."

I SAID: "Why not? It's an excellent idea. Why don't you tell just exactly what is, and what is not, true about Nils Asther? I'll try to remember and set it all down in your own words."

"The oldest and most popular story about me," Nils began, "is the one about my being broke—or that I would be broke if I didn't rush furiously from one picture to the next. I suppose that yarn started with the news that the Bank of Hollywood had failed and that I had money deposited. I did. $35,000 to be exact. But considering the

(Cont. on page 115)

Bad publicity has made Nils feel ridiculous, unhappy—and hopping mad!

Let's Talk About Hollywood

Cary's illness is Randy's luck . . . L. Barrymore feels his age . . . Scandal about Landi? . . . And other highly seasoned tid-bits from talkie town

"CARY GRANT unable to leave England for at least one month on advice his physician" read the cable that arrived at the Paramount studios the other day. This is particularly bad news to Cary's pal, Randy Scott, but the results might be the greatest "break" that Randy ever got.

When Cary left for England recently, it was for the purpose of saying "Hello" to his own folks and "May I" to Virginia Cherrill's folks. He was to have returned at once. His health changed that plan and now Randy may get his great chance in drama after months of Westerns. "Thirty Day Princess" is the picture and Scott will co-star with Sylvia Sidney—if he makes the grade. Luck, Randy, and better luck, Cary.

"YOU'RE more the platinum vamp type," wailed the big shots over at Paramount the day that Ida Lupino arrived from London to try out for the rôle of "Alice" for the "wonderland" picture.

Now the boys-around-town are saying that she acts as a platinum is supposed to with regard to hittin' the high spots. This little gal, Ida, wants to go places every night in the week. She wore out her first escort, Jack LaRue, in no time and now she is playing the field. Ida's field includes Johnny Warburton, Frank Albertson, Teddy Joyce and a dozen others. This is the only way a gal can get around to all the places in short order. Ida never seems to get tired.

WHEN Dick Arlen said, "Elmer will have to fight his own battles. We're going to register him at the casting bureau at once," we all thought he was kidding.

Last week, however, Richard Ralston Arlen sent his card into the "front office" and when he was admitted said, "I'm trying to work my way through kindergarten. Can you help a fellow along?"

"Yes," the executive said. Within five minutes, the young would-be student had signed a contract to play in pictures at a salary of $100.00 each week. He will be the "Baby in The Ice Box." Must be great to have a kid who can get out and hustle at the age of six months. P.S. And was the father burned! Remember, Dick Arlen made one of his greatest pictures, "Wings," at a salary of $75.00 a week.

FLORENCE DESMOND and Ted Fio Rito lost the following things in the order named: their heads, hearts, their way and their urge.

The actress met the band leader and their hearts beat as one. They decided to skip to Yuma and get married. The driver lost his way in the fog and they never reached the airport. By the next day Florence had lost the urge. Maybe it's better to wind up losing the urge. It's certainly better than losing your heart and then having it handed back to you as fast as they usually do in Hollywood.

IN spite of the Hollywood impression that Ann Harding and Harry Bannister will reconcile, the rumor is now out that they won't have time. Harry is scheduled to leave town almost immediately. Maybe their child really was the reason for the get-together after all.

RKO is trying to sign Ruth Chatterton for the lead in "I Loved An Actress" and it looks as though they might succeed, what with Ruth being out of her Warner Brothers contract just in time to make it.

There's a funny story behind it though. Lenore Ulric was handed a nice contract some weeks ago by this same studio and told to rush to Hollywood for the lead in "I Loved An Actress." She rushed, but when she got here nothing happened. First, Lenore didn't like the story, then RKO didn't like the resulting changes. At last the studio came to the conclusion that it was silly to keep such high-powered talent standing around waiting, so they handed her a check for 25,000 dollars and told her she could call it a day. At the last minute RKO thought of using Ulric in a new version of "Lulu Belle," but the Hays office said "Naughty, naughty; mustn't do." So that was that.

THE late word on Garbo was that she is negotiating with Prince Sigvard, King Gustave's grandson, to become a producer of motion pictures in Sweden. But 'tain't so, brother. 'Tain't so.

LIONEL Barrymore admits that he is "growing old." The realization dawned on him the other day when Tom Brown reported on the set of "It Happened One Day" for the juvenile rôle.

The last time Lionel and Tom worked together, some twelve years ago, the present "juvenile" was about six years old.

RONALD Colman is back. Yes, that bit of good news has just flashed around Hollywood. Colman is returning to the same lot, but not to the same company. That peeve with Sam Goldwyn is still very much on. Ronnie will do "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back"

(Continued on page 80)

Mrs. M. Johnston of New York City writes:—

"That's what our Doctor does for Coughs—

—and it works!"

● "Mother's cough wore her out," writes Mrs. Johnston. "We finally decided she must see a specialist. His advice was simply, 'Pertussin.' It was certainly good advice. Mother's bad coughing quickly stopped . . . Pertussin has helped us all again and again."

INSIDE your throat and bronchial passages are millions of glands—like tiny water faucets—that keep the tissues healthily moist.

But these glands clog up when you "catch cold." Thick mucus forms. Your throat tickles—feels dry. You cough so hard, but you can't "raise" a thing.

Get those little moisture glands working again, to stop that cough! . . . That's what Pertussin does!

Just a spoonful or two of Pertussin stimulates the glands and starts their natural moisture flowing freely. Your throat feels relieved. Germ-laden phlegm loosens up almost instantly. Pertussin is helping Nature to cure your cough!

There are no narcotics or harmful drugs in Pertussin . . . it's the scientific extract of a medicinal herb used by doctors to treat the most severe coughs known. Won't you get a bottle of Pertussin now?

●

DOCTORS PRESCRIBE Pertussin for babies . . . it's safe! "I have prescribed it for 25 years," writes one doctor. It won't upset digestion; and is pleasant to take.

PERTUSSIN

has been prescribed by doctors for 30 years . . It works safely!

"She had been Constipated since childhood"

says DR. PLOOS VAN AMSTEL of Amsterdam

The celebrated Dutch intestinal specialist, Dr. P. J. de B. Ploos van Amstel, describes this very typical case:—

" . . . young married woman. Symptoms—loss of appetite, over fatigue, dizziness.

"Examination showed auto-intoxication. She had been constipated since childhood—had been a frequent user of cathartics.

"I prescribed yeast. Her intestines gradually began to function normally. Her appetite returned; dizziness disappeared. Patient showed a surprising gain in vitality."

AUTHOR of the popular "Medische Encyclopedia" (1933) and member, Netherland Assn. of Physicians and Surgeons, the noted Dr. Ploos van Amstel states:—

"Constipation leads to poisons which impair health very seriously . . . cause headaches, skin eruptions, loss of appetite and a generally run-down condition.

"To correct constipation," Dr. van Amstel explains, "I know nothing quite as satisfactory as yeast."

Fleischmann's Yeast, you know, "tones" your intestines—softens the wastes—makes eliminations regular. Extra energy, a clearer skin and much better health result!

Just eat 3 cakes a day, before meals, or between meals and at bedtime—plain, or in a third of a glass of water. Fleischmann's Yeast is very rich in health-giving vitamins B, G and D. At grocers, restaurants, soda fountains. Try it!

HART (HEART)
LEVER (LIVER)
MAAG (STOMACH)
INGEWANDEN (INTESTINES)

MISS ALICE SPINNING, of Washington, D. C., says: "My pep came back and my headaches stopped"

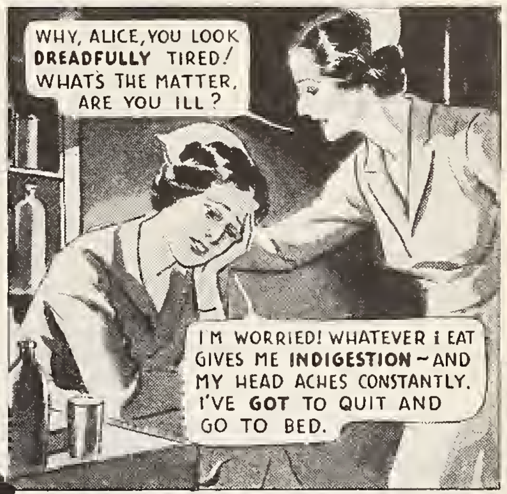
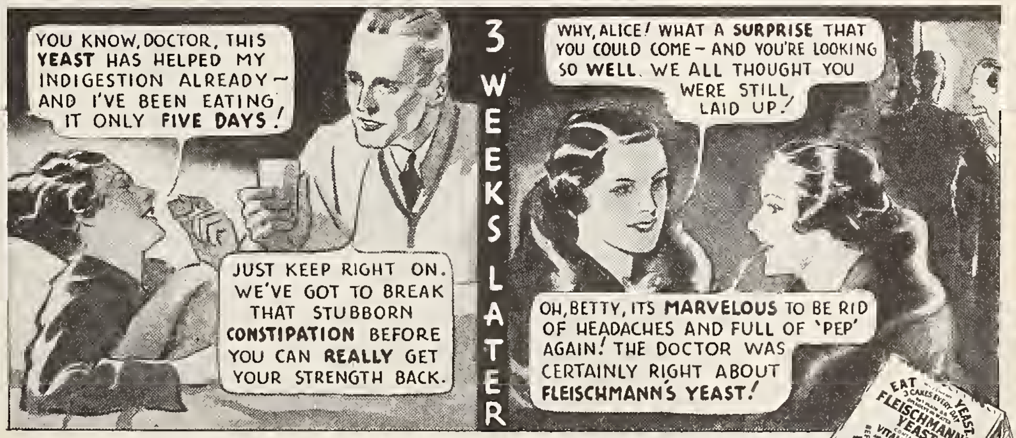
HERE'S ANOTHER CASE THAT SHOWS WHAT EATING FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST WILL DO! MISS SPINNING (ABOVE) WRITES:—



WHY, ALICE, YOU LOOK DREADFULLY TIRED! WHAT'S THE MATTER, ARE YOU ILL?
I'M WORRIED! WHATEVER I EAT GIVES ME INDIGESTION—AND MY HEAD ACHES CONSTANTLY. I'VE GOT TO QUIT AND GO TO BED.

"I AM A NURSE—often on duty for 20 hours a day. I need good health. But I had become constipated—chronically. This led to indigestion. I also had headaches. And then . . .



YOU KNOW, DOCTOR, THIS YEAST HAS HELPED MY INDIGESTION ALREADY—AND I'VE BEEN EATING IT ONLY FIVE DAYS!
JUST KEEP RIGHT ON. WE'VE GOT TO BREAK THAT STUBBORN CONSTIPATION BEFORE YOU CAN REALLY GET YOUR STRENGTH BACK.
3 WEEKS LATER
WHY, ALICE! WHAT A SURPRISE THAT YOU COULD COME—AND YOU'RE LOOKING SO WELL. WE ALL THOUGHT YOU WERE STILL LAID UP!
OH, BETTY, ITS MARVELOUS TO BE RID OF HEADACHES AND FULL OF 'PEP' AGAIN! THE DOCTOR WAS CERTAINLY RIGHT ABOUT FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST!

"I HAD TO STOP WORK and go on a strict diet. But my digestion got no better. Then I started to eat Fleischmann's Yeast. The doctor urged me to keep right on with it . . .

"MY ELIMINATION became normal. My indigestion and headaches left. I agree with the doctors about yeast . . !"

EAT 3 CAKES EVERY DAY
FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST
VITAMINS B G D
IT'S HEALTHFUL
NRA

Copyright, 1934, Standard Brands Incorporated

I'D SKATE TO THE SOUTH POLE FOR A KOOL

MILDLY MENTHOLATED CIGARETTE—CORK-TIPPED

They're easier on your throat—the smoke actually is several degrees cooler. But why talk scientifically when the main thing about KOOLS is the downright pleasure you get smoking them? They're definitely refreshing. The choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos, neatly blended and then mildly mentholated by a process that fully preserves the flavor of the tobaccos. Cork tips are lip-savers. Save the valuable B & W coupons packed with KOOLS for Congress Quality gilt-edged U. S. Playing Cards and other attractive premiums. (Offer good in U. S. A. only.)

PLAYING CARDS—FREE

SAVE THIS VALUABLE B&W COUPON
—REDEEMABLE—
KOOL
MILD MENTHOL
Cigarettes
CORK TIPPED
15¢ for TWENTY

Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., Louisville, Ky.

Let's Talk About Hollywood

(Continued from page 78)

for Twentieth Century. Loretta Young will help him strike. It's our fond hope that Sam keeps his distance. The title of the picture might become an actuality.

IN spite of the fact that most of Hollywood thought that "Alice In Wonderland" was just another mistake, Paramount is cleaning up so much dough with the picture that they are laying plans for a "repeat" on the fantasy-type story for the next holiday season. It looks, now, as though "Cinderella" will be your next Christmas present. Charlotte Henry will no doubt be it.

SOME kind, good friend should get to Mary Pickford and advise her to go easy on further "sob story" publicity in regard to her divorce. In the beginning, Mary's simple, direct statements of her unhappiness caused everyone to realize how broken-hearted she was. But lately America's Sweetheart has overstepped the bounds of good taste in sobbing out her heart to every casual reporter who comes along.

CONSERVATIVE Elissa Landi will probably be annoyed, but there has to be a first time for everything, even a separation rumor. Yes, the report is out that Elissa and her English barrister husband will very quietly call it quits some time this Spring.

More and more frequently Elissa has been seen in the company of a young man named Abram Chasis. In fact, when Elissa recently departed for a vacation in New York, Chasis was not long in hopping an eastward bound train after her.

THAT Mexican business has certainly taken the starch and pepper out of Lee Tracy. Hollywood hardly recognizes the former good-time kid who seldom took anything seriously.

The other day a wisecracker standing by the Brown Derby tossed a fast one at Tracy as he departed from the café. Six months ago Lee would have jovially topped his gag. But this time he ignored the joking remark and stepped hurriedly into his car.

He looks worried and older and he is dodging the stay-up-late places like the plague. No one would be surprised if Lee and Isobel Jewel were married by the time this appears in print. A year ago Tracy was quoted as saying he was a "habitual bachelor." His best friends now claim he has had a change of heart and wants to settle down to the simple life.

COLLEEN MOORE'S "four to six" cocktail party was just about the biggest success of the social season. There were so many people about that one wag remarked he couldn't see the house for the people.

We didn't see Constance Bennett, but the Marquis de la Falaise was there and what's more he was speaking most cordially to none other than Gloria Swanson. So many people were enthralled by this intimate little tête-à-tête they failed to take note of several other interesting developments.

Marian Nixon becomes very peeved when Eddie Hillman announced in a loud voice he was giving a luncheon party for "both of my ex-wives" and went around inviting people to be guests at the interesting event.

Mary Brian and Dick Powell held hands all afternoon.

Jeanette MacDonald and Barbara Bennett evoked the greatest admiration for their beauty.

Bebe Daniels, Ben Lyon, Loretta Young, Spencer Tracy, Lilyan Tashman and Edmund Lowe were posing for the press photographers when we drifted by the library.

WHO do you suppose?

One of the local husbands of a very famous wife is collecting first editions as follows:

He writes famous authors, mentions his celebrated wife's name and by re-

(Continued on page 82)

Three happy couples and one lone wife! They are John Cabot Lodge, Mrs. Chas. Farrell, Johnny Mack Brown and wife, Fay Wray and hubby, and Mrs. John Lodge at the Russian Eagle in Hollywood.

"I can help you win hearts— and hold them." says BARBARA STANWYCK

GIRLS, HERE'S A SECRET I LEARNED MY VERY FIRST YEAR IN THE CHORUS. THERE'S SOMETHING ABOUT THE CHARM OF REALLY EXQUISITE SKIN MEN JUST CAN'T RESIST . . .

I HAVE THE SENSITIVE SKIN THAT GOES WITH RED HAIR, YET FOR YEARS MY SIMPLE BEAUTY CARE — LUX TOILET SOAP — HAS KEPT IT ALWAYS SOFT AND SMOOTH !
LUX TOILET SOAP

DON'T BE SATISFIED WITH A SKIN THAT JUST "GETS BY"! WITH A TEMPTING, TENDER-SMOOTH SKIN YOU CAN WIN HEARTS . . AND HOLD THEM. JUST TRY MY BEAUTY SOAP — YOU'LL SEE !

LOVELY WARNER BROS. STAR

Men can't resist alluring skin —you can have this charm . . .

Barbara Stanwyck tells you Hollywood's secret of loveliness . . . how to have a skin that wins instant adoration.

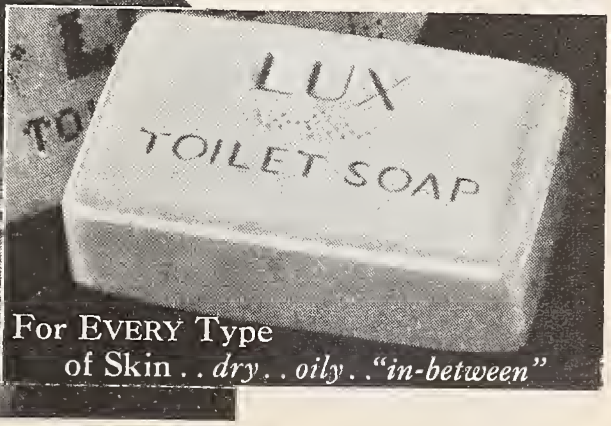
You see her as she looks in her own boudoir. Notice how smooth her skin is. Surely you'll want to follow her advice —make yours as lovely!

All over the country girls are turning to Hollywood's complexion care.

Actually 9 out of 10 Hollywood stars use fragrant, white Lux Toilet Soap. Get some today. Begin at once to win new loveliness!

Precious Elements in this Soap—Scientists Explain

"Skin grows old-looking through the gradual loss of certain elements Nature puts in skin to keep it youthful. Gentle Lux Toilet Soap, so readily soluble, actually contains such precious elements—checks their loss from the skin."



LUX TOILET SOAP

For EVERY Type of Skin . . dry . . oily . . "in-between"

I wish somebody would tell her!

"ISN'T it a shame? There's a girl who has 'come hither' if I ever saw one. But it becomes 'go thither' after a minute in her presence. Why doesn't some kind girl friend put her wise?"

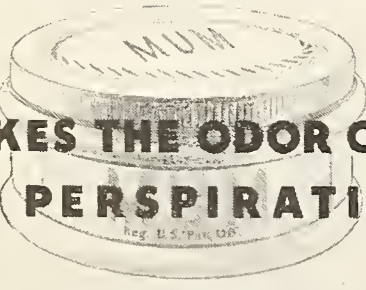
The surprising thing is that there still are girls and women—attractive ones, too—who need to be told that soap and water cannot keep their underarms free from that ugly odor of perspiration which refined people hate.

Smart girls who prize their popularity know that the quick, the easy, the sure way to keep their underarms always fresh and odorless, is with Mum.

It takes just half a minute to use Mum. Then you're safe for all day. And the instant it's on, slip into your dress. For Mum is perfectly harmless to clothing.

It's soothing to the skin, too—so soothing you can shave your underarms and use Mum immediately.

Don't ever let anybody say you are careless about underarm odor. Use Mum regularly and you'll be safe. Mum Mfg. Co., Inc., 75 West St., New York.



TAKES THE ODOR OUT OF PERSPIRATION

ON SANITARY NAPKINS, TOO. Mum is also a wonderful deodorant for this use—guarantees protection from unpleasantness.

Let's Talk About Hollywood

(Continued from page 80)

turn mail (usually) comes an autographed volume of the book he has mentioned.

This little hobby might be worth a lot of money, if the worst happens.

CREDIT Mrs. Pat Campbell with the two most widely quoted "insults" of the current month. To a popular sex appeal star, who is noted for her very hectic kissing scenes with her screen lovers, Mrs. Pat snarled, "My dear, why do you insist on making a meal off your leading man's lips?"

And after taking a look at Lil Tashman's new hat (with a fringe of feathers hanging down over her eyes) the ruthless lady remarked: "You look just like a Sheep Dog in that remarkable hat."

HUGH HERBERT did a nip-up in the middle of his act on Rudy Vallee's Fleischmann's Yeast Hour the other Thursday. Hugh forgot his little piece or lost his notes or something. There was a long silence followed by a heart felt: "Oh, my God!"

Of course the technicians had to switch the rest of it off. There can be no profanity over the ether waves.

SAYS Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in referring to Gertrude Lawrence, "She is the most fascinating and sophisticated woman I have ever known. For the first time in my life I know what true love is."

If Doug's love observation was intended to irritate Joan Crawford, it didn't!

RADIO has offered Katharine Hepburn $6000 per broadcast if she is interested. Marie Dressler has been offered more per broadcast than an entire picture engagement will net her.

And yet this same Mr. M. H. Aylesworth, who is holding out all this gold to Hollywood celebs, is the same gentleman who recently protested in Washington that stars were being paid too much in the movies.

Wonder why they don't clamp a code on radio salaries.

IN the last few months Jeanette MacDonald has, slowly but surely, been adding weight to her lovely figure. The first five pounds were becoming, but the holidays began to play havoc with her curves.

If she does rate the title role in "The Merry Widow" with Maurice Chevalier, a strenuous diet and exercise program is in store for her.

AL JOLSON may be all the world to Ruby Keeler, but the entire cast of "Wonder Bar" is beginning to wonder why.

Their collective necks are out of joint from trying to twist their faces into the camera when Al is in the scene.

Jolson and Ricardo Cortez have been at feud heat ever since the picture started, but lately Kay Francis, Dolores Del Rio and Dick Powell have rated as conscientious objectors to Al's "camera hogging."

During the making of one of the scenes, Jolson had to carry Ric Cortez (who outweighs him by fifty pounds) about a quarter of a block. Was it revenge which prompted the director to shoot and re-shoot this scene? It's too bad the camera couldn't pick up the delighted expression on Ric's face as Al tugged along under the burden of his dead weight.

WONDER what's happened to the reputed Rudy Vallee-Alice Faye romance since they both hit Hollywood? Latest gossip is that Rudy's interest has turned purely managerial and that his social life is being divided between several charming cinema queens. Heigh-ho, everybody!

IT happened on the "Bolero" set t'other day.

One of the character actresses, a Swiss, had a very slight understanding of the English language. Her role was that of a dumb innkeeper. She was to appear with George Raft in the following scene.

"Now, remember," the director explained to her, "you're just a great big yokel."

The scene was ready to shoot. At the proper cue, the Swiss woman appeared before the cameras . . . and to everyone's surprise began a series of loud mountain yells.

"Stop!" shouted the bewildered director, "What are you doing?"

"Vy, I yodel," answered the Swiss. "Didn't you tell me I vas a great big yodel?"

GENE RAYMOND has a cute little romantic habit. At the beginning of every new picture he sends his current leading lady a dozen of American Beauty roses. However, on the first day of "Coming Out Party," Gene hesitated about his floral offering and finally decided against it. Frances Dee is the leading lady and bridegroom Joel McCrea might object.

CAROLE LOMBARD gave a big housewarming a while ago and invited her estranged husband, William Powell.

That was all right with everyone except Carole's current boy friend. Did he burn up when her husband showed up also!

ALISON SKIPWORTH swears her brother loves her even if he did write her the following letter:

"I see all your pictures. Why don't you come home?"

(Continued on page 84)

I HAVE SUCH A HEADACHE—I KNOW I WON'T BE ABLE TO SLEEP
YOU'RE ALWAYS EXHAUSTED ON MONDAY NIGHTS, ANN. I WISH YOU WOULDN'T SCRUB CLOTHES—YOU'RE NOT STRONG ENOUGH
WELL, SOMEBODY HAS TO DO THE WASH. WE CAN'T AFFORD A LAUNDRESS
BILL SAYS HIS WIFE USES RINSO. IT SOAKS OUT DIRT AND SAVES SCRUBBING. WHY NOT TRY IT, ANN?
NEXT WASHDAY
...AND YOU TELL BILL TO TELL HIS WIFE I'M SORE! SHE SHOULD HAVE TOLD ME ABOUT RINSO LONG AGO. I DIDN'T SCRUB OR BOIL TODAY, YET MY CLOTHES ARE 4 OR 5 SHADES WHITER
AND YOU LOOK AS FRESH AS A DAISY
RINSO MAKES CLOTHES LAST 2 OR 3 TIMES LONGER—I KNOW THAT WILL SAVE ME LOTS OF MONEY
Rinso
NRA MEMBER U.S. WE DO OUR PART

I'll never use a washboard again—that's what ruins clothes! The Rinso way is so gentle—yet clothes come whiter than ever. I'm using Rinso for dishes, too. I'm using it for all cleaning—it's so economical.

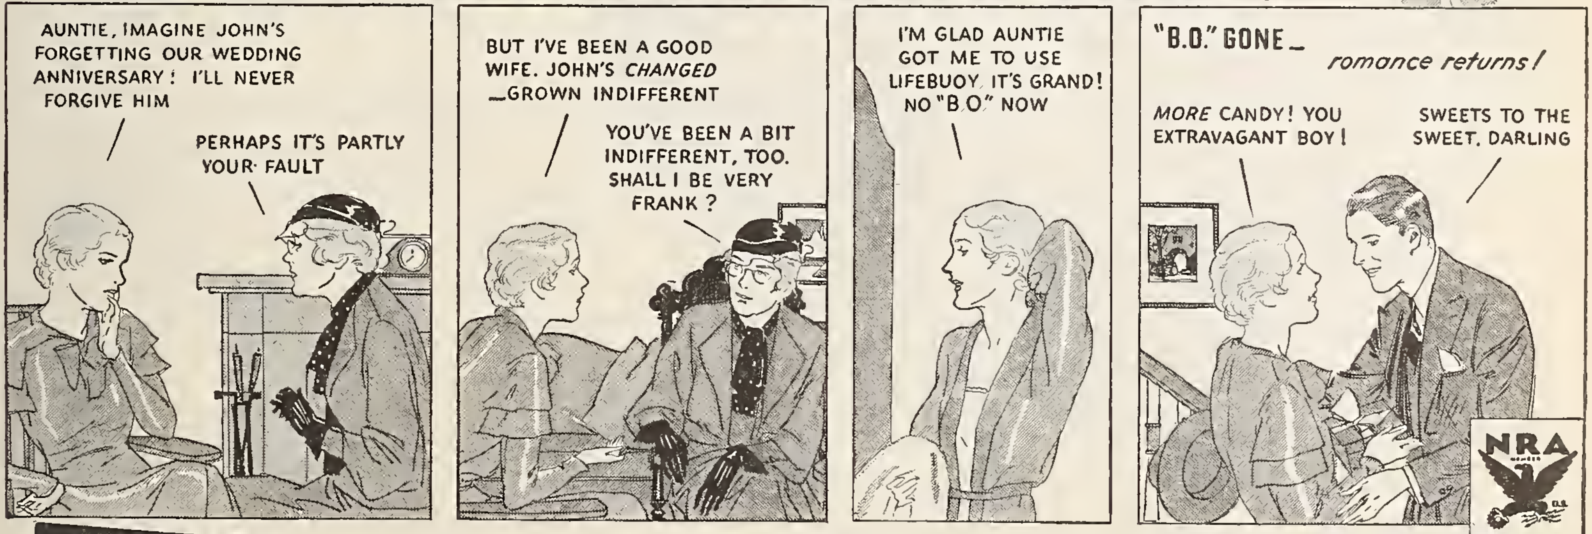
No wonder the makers of 40 famous washers recommend Rinso! No wonder it's approved by Good Housekeeping Institute. Try it. See what rich suds a little gives even in hardest water.

CAN A WIFE FORGIVE THIS?



AUNTIE, IMAGINE JOHN'S FORGETTING OUR WEDDING ANNIVERSARY! I'LL NEVER FORGIVE HIM
PERHAPS IT'S PARTLY YOUR FAULT
BUT I'VE BEEN A GOOD WIFE. JOHN'S CHANGED —GROWN INDIFFERENT
YOU'VE BEEN A BIT INDIFFERENT, TOO. SHALL I BE VERY FRANK?
I'M GLAD AUNTIE GOT ME TO USE LIFEBUOY. IT'S GRAND! NO "B.O." NOW
"B.O." GONE— romance returns!
MORE CANDY! YOU EXTRAVAGANT BOY!
SWEETS TO THE SWEET, DARLING
NRA MEMBER U.S.

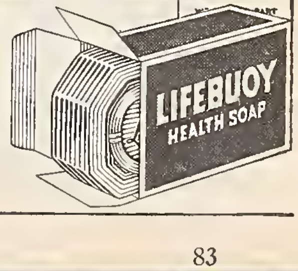
"B.O." (body odor) —a kill-joy

To guard happiness—guard against that unforgivable fault, "B. O." (body odor). Bathe regularly with Lifebuoy. Its extra-clean, quickly-vanishing scent tells you Lifebuoy protects. Its abundant, hygienic lather purifies and deodorizes pores—stops "B. O."

For a lovelier skin

Every night massage Lifebuoy's gentle, purifying lather well into pores; then rinse. Watch skin bloom with health.

Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau.



LIFEBUOY HEALTH SOAP

"Don't blame that tie!"

YOU had planned a nice quiet evening at home with the family . . . when you found other plans had been made, you asked "Why drag me out?"

That was not natural. It was your subnormal condition that made your overworked body rebel against social activities. You had started the day off at top speed—keen and alert—but gradually you had slowed down and by nightfall you were exhausted.

A most likely cause of this let-down feeling was that your red-blood-cells—the carriers of oxygen to all parts of your body—had been reduced to the point where you were not up to your full strength. You were all worn out. No wonder you did not like that tie.

Though you have no organic disease*, you may have a lowered red-blood-cell count with deficient hemo-glo-bin. When this occurs, and it is very common, you need a tonic. Not just a tonic so-called, but a tonic that has the virtue of stimulating gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin of the blood to make it natural for you to "carry on" without exhaustion.

Don't wait until you face a breakdown. It is well to remember that you cannot have good health, energy, and cheerfulness if your blood is in a rundown condition.

If your condition suggests a tonic, we recommend S.S.S. because its value has been proven by generations, as well as by modern scientific appraisal.

S.S.S. is truly a blood and body tonic. It is carried by every drug store in America in two sizes—the larger being more economical. ©The S.S.S. Co.

Consult a physician if you suspect an organic trouble.

S.S.S.

builds sturdy health

Let's Talk About Hollywood

(Continued from page 82)

Pretty soon Hollywood won't know what an "eligible bachelor" looks like. The latest to fall is Mervyn Le Roy. She's Doris Warner—of the Warners.

RUSS COLUMBO and June Knight were at the Beverly-Wilshire the other night, but not together. This didn't prevent them from gazing dreamily into each other's eyes, however, over the shoulders of their respective partners as they danced about the floor.

Must have been a grand evening for the guy-what-brung June and gal-who-was-brung by Russ.

George Raft is so "azycray" about Marjorie King he even invites her mother along when they go out. If that isn't love with matrimonial intention, what is it?

RAFT did punch production supervisor Barney Glazer in the nose. George Raft didn't punch Barney in the nose. He merely pushed him. Those are the two Hollywood stories of the interesting affair which took place on the "Bolero" set, and you may take your choice.

Anyway, the disputed dispute was over a line in the script supposed to be spoken by Georgie.

"How about those pictures of me at my mother's grave? They'd be great publicity!"

George said he wouldn't say such a disgraceful thing. Glazer said the character he was portraying would say such a thing and wound up by wanting to know whether Georgie was an actor or merely a Boy Scout. He found out.

This isn't the only row Raft and Glazer have had. The first took place when George refused to work in "The Story of Temple Drake." The boys just don't get along!

THERE is something a bit sad about that romance between Loretta Young and Spencer Tracy. Intimate friends know well that Spence is hard hit by his deep affection for Loretta and yet they are both deeply devout in a religion which does not countenance divorce and re-marriage.

It is an unhappy and almost hopeless Hollywood love story.

SOME of the boys were trying to crash the "Bolero" set at Paramount to watch Sally Rand do her famous Fan Dance and the studio, anticipating their idea, posted four guards at the door.

Disappointed, but not discouraged, the troupe went hopefully to the cutting-room the next day to see the rushes, but no soap, either.

So they consoled themselves by trotting over to the "Good Dame" set and watching Dorothy Dell, beauty winner, do her version of a hootchy-kootchy number.

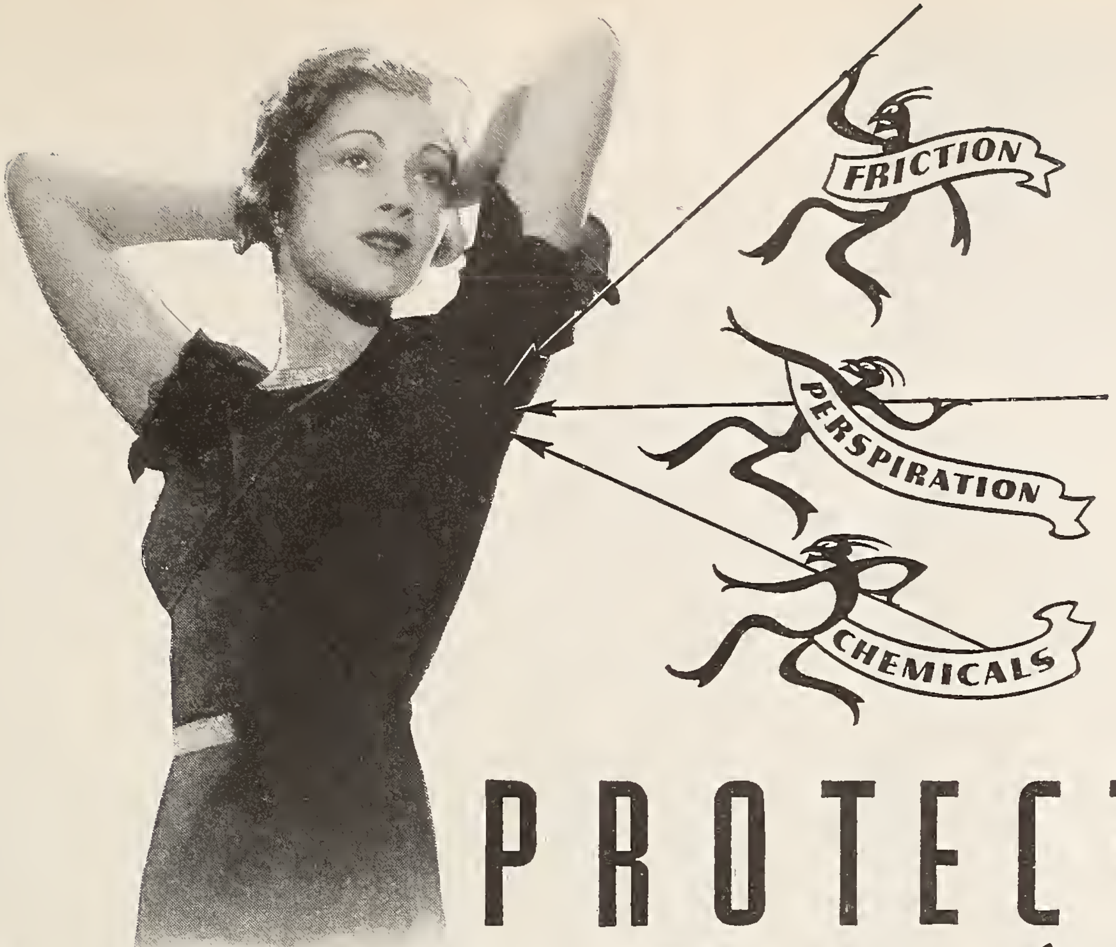
THE small son of the Skeets Gallaghers is called "The Duke." Now that he has a brand new little sister all Hollywood has named her "The Duchess."

MARY CARLISLE is mad at M-G-M.

She has a little trouble keeping down her weight, anyway, and when the studio cast her in a role where she had to eat a whole pound of chocolates it was adding insult to injury. What's more, they made the scene four times and the candy couldn't be faked.

It took a solid week of massage to remedy that trouble!

BABY LEROY is a gold digger! The other day he vamped Mrs. Alexander Pantages out of fifty dollars worth of baby wearing apparel from her Baby Shop. The original idea was merely to photograph the irresistible Mister Weinbrenner in the latest baby fashions for publicity purposes, but before the sitting was over he looked so cute in his "models" Mrs. Pantages packed them up for him to take home.



FRICTION
PERSPIRATION CHEMICALS

PROTECTED

with Kleinert's Dress Shields

Sudden emotion, over-heated rooms, strenuous exercise, strong underarm preparations — these increase the danger to your dress from underarm moisture, friction, and chemicals.

Keep your frocks new and fresh with the guaranteed protection of Kleinert's Dress Shields. There are sizes, styles and colors for every type of costume.

Why risk your dress by trying unknown substitutes when you can buy genuine Kleinert's Shields for as little as 25¢ a pair where you bought this magazine.

Kleinert's
THRIFT
GUARANTEED
MADE IN U.S. AMERICA
JIF 3 300

NRA MEMBER
U.S.
WE DO OUR PART

AS LOW AS 25¢ A PAIR

Kleinert's DRESS SHIELDS

T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

They Visit New York

(Continued from page 35)

filled the air and rocked the house when her likeness first appeared on the silver sheet.

John Gilbert, too, came in for his share of praise. His old friends rallied around and he garnered many new ones.

The evening-garbed audience was punctuated with celebrities and among 'em we spied Nita Naldi, Gene Raymond, Estelle Brody, Irene Dunne, Elizabeth Young, Phillips Holmes, Margaret Livingston and Kay Francis.

Yes, "Queen Christina" was an enormous success.

* * *

LITTLE old New York has been doing right by the famous. Teas and dinners and Repeal parties seem to be the order of the day. First, there was Randolph Scott, who was "done right by" by Paramount.

The southern gentleman, who rides like a westerner, had just returned from across the Big Pond where he and his pal, Cary Grant, stepped around, met royalty and Noel Coward and, in fact, knocked things off in a big way socially.

Randy is "for" movies and "ag'in" marriage; that is, for himself. He claims connubial bliss just "isn't" in them thar Hollywood hills. Besides, he has five sisters who pulled booby prizes in the matrimonial grab bag, which is enough to discourage a more sentimental lad than the Scott.

Of course, he does like Vivian Gaye "much big heap," as the Indians would say, but that's all there is, there isn't any more. Mr. Scott told us this with his hand on his heart and promised not to make us look any more foolish than Nature did, by marrying the lovely lady the day this issue appears.

* * *

And, speaking of the lovelorn, there's Phillips Holmes, as fine a young actor as never wasted any time in a dramatic school. Phil balanced a potato chip at the Waldorf-Astoria's glittering bar as he talked of his future.

He was set to set sail for London, where there is a play waiting and a couple of tempting movie offers. There was a nice picture proposition in the U. S. A., too, which he was about to leave behind with Florence Rice, a pulchritudinous miss who acts on the stage and cares for Phil and hates to be parted and all of that.

They, too, say "some day," and even though Florence has changed her religion in preparation for the big event, it is not as yet scheduled.

There is going to be fuss and feathers connected with the Holmes entrance into wedlock. In other words, this afternoon's wedding isn't going to be a result of this morning's hangover. Tch, tch, now you know it's been known to happen!

WELL, the Gary Coopers left New York in a blaze of glory. They fooled the public, the press and their friends here and, having grown tired of kidding us, called in the preacher and planned a honeymoon.

On said wedding tour the happy pair took four trunks and the bride's parents. They had never seen Gary's ranch in Arizona, either, and the papers do tell us it's sumpin' to look at.

The Coopers appeared at all the opening nights—he, looking very proud and she very luscious and young—and the smart night clubs and were the envy of just about everybody. Another Hollywood bachelor become a benedict!

* * *

Here's a little item fraught with sentiment and prosperity.

The old Biograph studio way up in New York's Bronx has just reopened for production. Yowser. Chester Erskine, who has sound financial backing, is about to start a series of fifteen pictures, the first of which will be "Frankie and Johnnie," co-starring Tallulah Bankhead and Helen Morgan, this month.

Biograph was the locale in which the real film famous began their then precarious careers. The master director, D. W. Griffith, wielded his megaphone there fifteen years ago and Mary Pickford, Mabel Normand and Lillian Gish were among the celebrities who first faced a camera on that old lot.

This is the really cheering news of the month.

* * *

WELL, the rumor hounds on lil old Broadway certainly had themselves a field day when Kay Francis was discovered making the rounds with Billy Gaston. Just by way of keeping the records straight, said handsome man-about-town was once Kay's husband. When the pair decided to call it a day, the gentleman wed Rosamond Pinchot, talented stage actress and, as you know, Kay eventually became Mrs. Kenneth McKenna.

Incidentally, those reputed to be "in the know" claim that the "inside" on the star's recent matrimonial split-up is one of those Harry Bannister-Ann Harding headaches. While Ken was hitting the theatrical high spots in New York several seasons ago, Miss Francis couldn't get a break and when the pair migrated to the land of milk and honey, earthquakes and cloudbursts, the tables were turned and the groom just couldn't take it.

Anyway, we hear that since Kay and Billy Gaston are both apt to be free in the not-too-distant future, they may become Mister and Missus once more.

Wasn't it Will Rogers who said, "Revivals are always flops?" But then, maybe Our Will is just pessimistic!

• This illustration of the Perfolastic Girdle also features the new Perfolastic Uplift Bandeau

"I have REDUCED MY HIPS 9 INCHES WITH THE PERFOLASTIC GIRDLE"

. . . writes Miss Jean Healy

● So many of our customers are delighted with the wonderful results obtained with this Perforated Rubber Reducing Girdle that we want you to try it for 10 days at our expense!

REDUCE YOUR WAIST AND HIPS 3 INCHES IN 10 DAYS

. . . or it won't cost you a cent!

Massage-Like Action Reduces Quickly!

● The Girdle may be worn next to the body with perfect safety for it is ventilated to allow the skin to breathe. It works constantly while you walk, work, or sit . . . its massage-like action gently but persistently eliminating fat with every move you make.

Don't Wait Any Longer . . . Act Today

● You can prove to yourself quickly and definitely in 10 days whether or not this very efficient girdle will reduce your waist and hips THREE INCHES! You do not need to risk one penny . . . try it for 10 days . . . at no cost!

THE COUPON BRINGS YOU FREE BOOKLET AND SAMPLE OF THE VENTILATED PERFOLASTIC RUBBER

SEND FOR TEN DAY FREE TRIAL OFFER!

PERFOLASTIC, Inc.

Dept. 533, 41 EAST 42nd ST., New York, N.Y.

Please send me FREE BOOKLET describing and illustrating the new Perfolastic Reducing Girdle, also sample of perforated Rubber and particulars of your 10-DAY FREE TRIAL OFFER.

Name ____________________

Address ____________________

City ______________ State ______________

Use Coupon or Send Name and Address on Penny Post Card

Except for a couple of cuts and bruises, the Wesley Ruggles arrived safely in our midst. 'Twas a little matter of their train and another one arguing for right of way or something. Mrs. Ruggles (Arline Judge) has about regained her land legs at this writing.

Wes, who just finished making "Bolero," is here to look over the New York theatrical fare with a view to translating something promising to the silver sheet and Arline has promised herself a shopping spree.

OUR town holds no mysteries to Charlotte Henry. Chotsie was born, you see, just across the river in Brooklyn, so subways, the Empire State Building and the Aquarium are mere landmarks that have been hanging around for years. Nothing spectacular a-tall!

However, "Alice in Wonderland" drew a swanky party when she hit Park Avenue. It was unreeled at the Waldorf-Astoria with much gingerale and ice to keep things stimulating.

Miss Henry, contrary to the impression one would gather from her "wide-eyedness," seems to know all the answers. She has had stage experience and social contacts and whatever it takes to gain one assurance. No shy violet is this pretty Brooklyn belle. Indeed, she can hold her own—and anybody else's—in matters conversational.

And because she's a smartie, a good trouper and shows promise, Paramount—ever grateful for favors received—has presented Charlotte with a brand new long-term contract. She'll probably play the title rôle in "Lovey Mary" next.

* * *

And while we are on the subject of social celebrations, the combined press agents of the town—or so it seemed—staged a little whoopee for Gene Raymond, the occasion being the platinum blond's departure on a three-months' European tour with his mother.

There were hors d'oeuvres and clinking glasses long before there was a handsome young actor, for Gene got tied up in the traffic somewhere en route and couldn't get himself disentangled. The blizzard again. When he finally arrived he was gracious and nervous in about equal proportions, but made a great hit with the susceptible New York newspaper women. Gosh, Mary Brian's apprehensions!

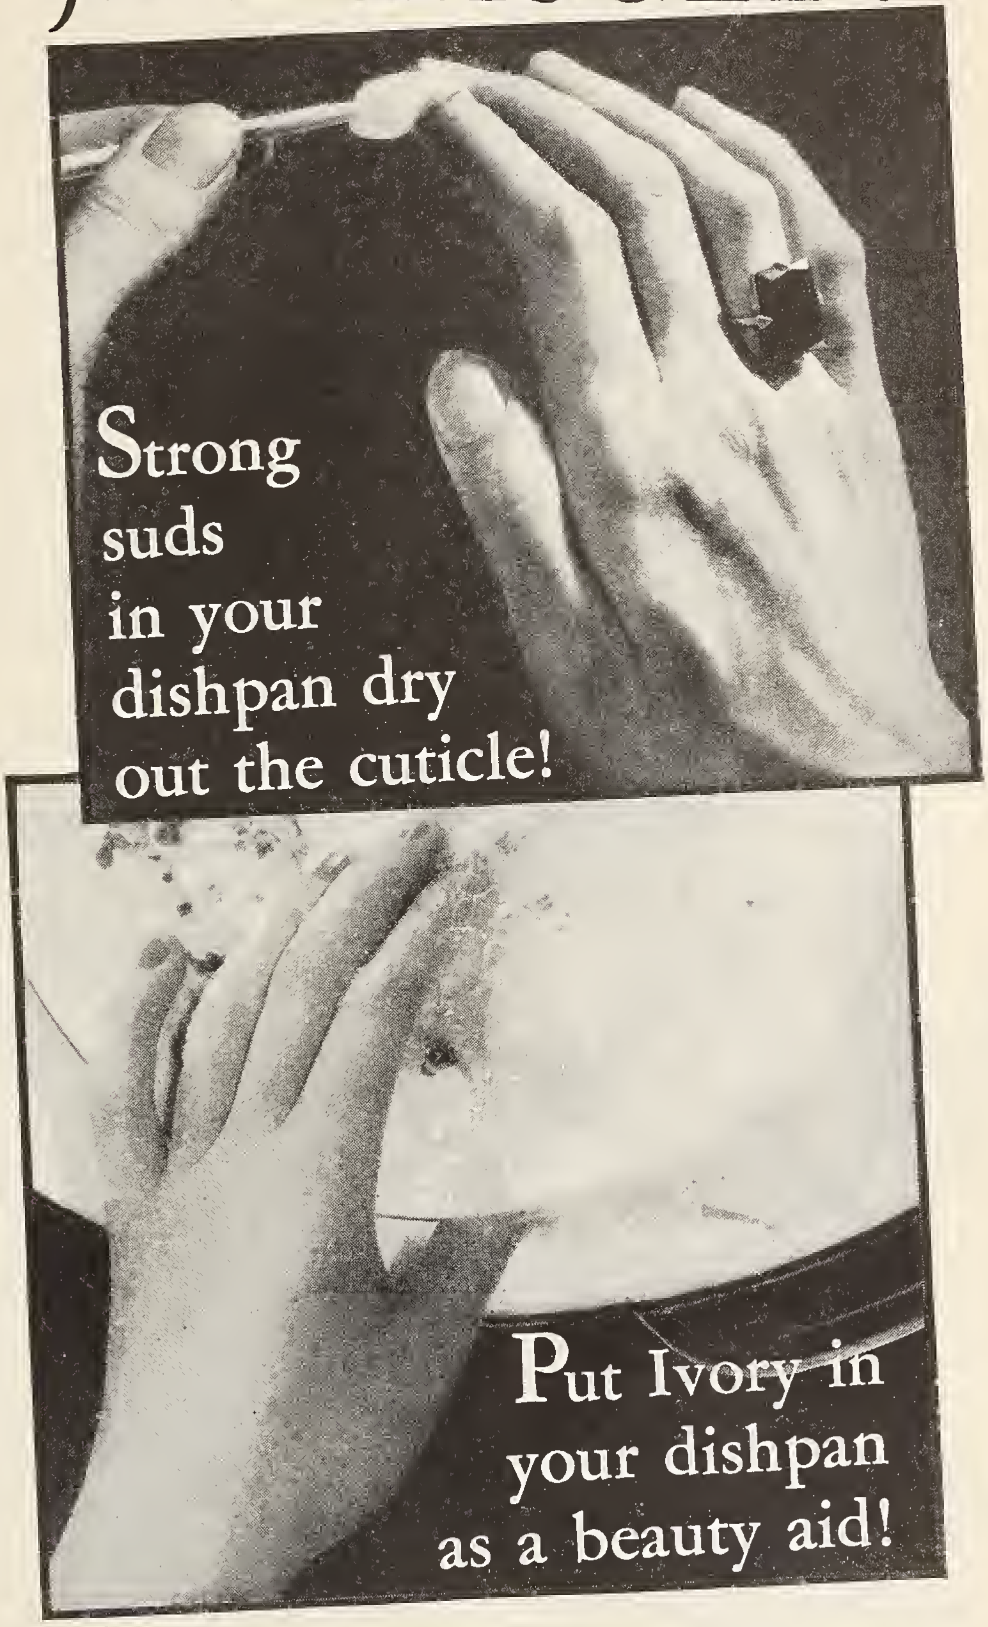
The party was gay and Gene, who isn't due in Hollywood until April first, seemed to survive it with an eventual show of equanimity. In other words, he made the grade with the people who help make the actors.

* * *

And now the O'Briens are here. George and his bride, Marguerite Churchill. They are on sort of a second honeymoon, making unscheduled "personal appearances" at all the places where the smart set gathers.

This popular pair look inconceivably "un-movie-ish" which must help them out in public places, when one takes into consideration the way most stars are

"Why does my Cuticle get so RAGGED?"



Strong suds in your dishpan dry out the cuticle!
Put Ivory in your dishpan as a beauty aid!

It costs so little to use Ivory for all soap-and-water tasks, why ruin your hands with strong suds? Ivory keeps busy hands looking nice . . . . 99 44/100 % Pure.

IVORY SOAP

prevents "Housework Hands"

COLDS
Go Overnight

When You Take This Famous Tablet in Time

BEWARE the cold that hangs on. It may end in something serious. Treat a cold promptly and treat it for what it is—an internal infection—and you will get results overnight.

Never let a cold go 24 hours untreated. At the first sign of a cold, take Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. This famous tablet stops a cold quickly because it is expressly a cold remedy and because it does the four things necessary.

These Four Effects

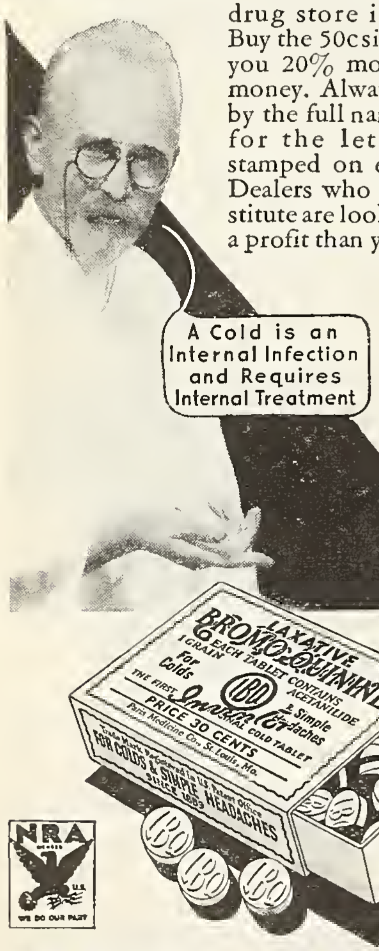
First, Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine opens the bowels, gently but effectively. This is the first step in expelling a cold. Second, it combats the cold germs in the system and reduces the fever. Third, it relieves the headache and that grippy feeling. Fourth, it tones the entire system and helps fortify against further attack.

This is the treatment a cold requires and anything less is taking chances.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is utterly harmless and perfectly safe to take. It is, and has been for years, the leading cold and grippe tablet of the world.

Now—20% More for Your Money

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine comes in two sizes—30c and 50c—and is sold by every drug store in America. Buy the 50c size as it gives you 20% more for your money. Always ask for it by the full name and look for the letters L B Q stamped on every tablet. Dealers who offer a substitute are looking more to a profit than your welfare.



A Cold is an Internal Infection and Requires Internal Treatment
LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE
PRICE 30 CENTS
LBQ
NRA
WE DO OUR PART

GROVE'S LAXATIVE
BROMO QUININE

mobbed and mauled once recognized around these parts.

* * *

The Algonquin, famous hostelry housing celebrities and exuding intimate atmosphere, takes on a Hollywood aspect these days; that is, from the standpoint of luncheon guests. Seated around the main dining-room recently, we spied Helen Hayes, Katharine Hepburn, Miriam Hopkins, Laura Hope Crews, Roland Young and Ross Alexander. Yes, everything there but the cameras and sound track!

Beauty Advice

(Continued from page 6)

odor. The strongest he-man couldn't object to it. For a pimply condition—watch the diet. The plainest of foods for a while. Lots of vegetables. Tomato juice. Fruits. Very little starch. No sweets nor heavy, oily foods. Hot applications to the offending blemishes will help. And a medicated skin cream would help, too, if you get him to use it without his suing for divorce.

Now, about hair. I do see the most pathetic heads of masculine hair. Stiff, dry, no-color-at-all-hair. Dandruff. Oily hair. And hair that looks like a wet whisk broom from being sopped under the shower until there isn't a speck of natural oil and life left in it.

Goodness knows, it ought to be easy enough for every man to brush his hair vigorously once every day. There isn't much territory to cover. And it does give such a grand polish and sleekness to a head of hair. It makes hair stay put and look neat, too.

THERE'S no reason, either, why a guy shouldn't wear a shower cap under the shower. A once-a-week shampoo is plenty, I think. It should be a thorough one. Three soapings with liquid soap. A good rinse under the shower. And plenty of rubbing and scalp-massaging while the hair is drying. Then, when it is quite dry, a little tonic rubbed in. Or one of the good oil preparations, if the hair is dry. But what the dears usually do is to pour on their oil tonic—or rub in the stickum—while the hair is still wet. And there you have a beautiful mess clinging to the hair. This collects dust. And the hair is so caked down all the time that the scalp never has a chance to breathe. The scalp must get aired every day. That's another reason for the brushing. It's a good thing to rumple the hair up—stand it on end and pull it a little, to stimulate the scalp. (That task may be a pleasure to some married ladies, huh?)

For advanced cases of dandruff and for hair which is falling out so fast that it makes your head swim, special care is needed. And one of the best lines of hair preparations that I know about has a remedy for every hair evil. None of the preparations are perfumed. And alcohol—where it must be used for preservation—is used sparingly. They are reasonable in price—neither too high nor too cheap to be good. Write and ask me about them, if you would like to know their names, and I promise you a very prompt reply.

I don't suppose I need to tell men that they should all get regular exercise. I don't need to tell the young ones, I'm sure. They look after themselves pretty well. They're mostly scared to death of getting fat. In fact, they err a bit on the other side, there. I'd like to see some of the young fellows with a little more flesh on their bones. They have natty figures and nice, flat stomachs—but their faces look so thin, sometimes. I think it is because the average young American male is usually so "on the go" that he never has a chance to relax after a meal. I know it's that way with a certain younger brother. He's off—on some mysterious "date" the minute the dessert is finished. A girl may have some home duties to putter with. Her face to fix or her frock to change. That's a bit of relaxation, in a way. Food is digested properly.

Older men, however, are the ones who get careless. You see many more good looking middle-aged women these days than middle-aged men, don't you think? The women have better figures. Competition has been keen, for them, and they have had to spruce up and keep slim and fresh-looking in the face of Father Time.

Middle-aged men are always saying, "Must get some exercise. I'm putting on weight." They may even go so far as to buy a rowing machine—and park it in the coat closet in the hall, where it stays, winter, summer, autumn, and spring. They may, perhaps, play a little golf. And then they open a quart of the finest stuff in the locker room and undo all the good work the golf has done. Liquor is extremely fattening, I'll have you know.

Systematic, regular exercise—be it tennis in summer and rowing machine in winter or whatever—will keep the figure flat where it should be flat and muscular where it should be muscular. And that's the only really important requisite for a good, masculine figure, isn't it?

I'm afraid to say any more about beauty advice for men. I'm afraid of butting in where wives fear to tread. Honest I am. But if anyone feels inspired to write me about any personal problem, I'll be only too glad to answer it—confidentially, of course. I've helped the ladies with a good many of their problems and I'm sure I could handle the men's, too.

Next month, I'll return to the ladies again. And a darned sight easier it will be, says I!

The Booby Prize

(Continued from page 47)

for news pictures with her sisters, Sally Blane and Polly Ann Young. She did pose with them at Colleen Moore's party—but with what poor grace!

● Eddie Hillman announced in public (and in the presence of his latest ex, Marian Nixon) that he was going to throw a big party in honor of his two ex-wives. Was that the best of manners, Mr. Hillman?

● Gene Raymond, leaving for New York, invited three girls down to the train to see him off: Janet Gaynor, Marian Nixon and Mary Brian. He gets a prize—and the girls all get a special prize for showing up!

● We don't quite know who should get this booby prize. But—well, anyway . . . We're a little tired of movies in which the heroine is a brilliant surgeon or a brilliant something else—and looks not a day over twenty-two. Ann Harding, for instance, in "The Right to Romance," was, for the purposes of the plot, in possession of all the surgical knowledge which brilliant men spend years and years slaving to acquire. We seem to remember "Mary Stevens, M.D.," too.

● And Joan Crawford's shoes in "Dancing Lady" provided us with a snicker. "Don't wear bows on your shoes," said Franchot Tone to her. "They're cheap looking." Close-up of the famous Crawford legs and feet. And what did we see? Lovely, expensive, hand-turned slippers. Probably cost $15 per each. And great, big, luscious grosgrain bows on them. Cheap, my eye!

MODERN SCREEN
ON THE AIR!

At 5:30 on Monday afternoons—until 5:45 on Monday afternoons you'll find us holding forth over Station WMCA. If your set will behave nicely and get this station for you, you can obtain an advance broadcast on what this magazine is doing in the world.

"Dry those tears, sister. You were a silly to believe that fancy soaps would make you beautiful. We've known right along that no soap smooths up the skin like Ivory!"
"And don't think your complexion stops at the neckline, sister! Please, if you want your all-over complexion to match your face, do as we do—take Ivory baths."

If you want a baby-smooth skin, use the baby's beauty treatment

Spring's on the way! Now's the time to take stock of your good looks if you want to be able to wear the alluring bright colors that will be so popular this season.

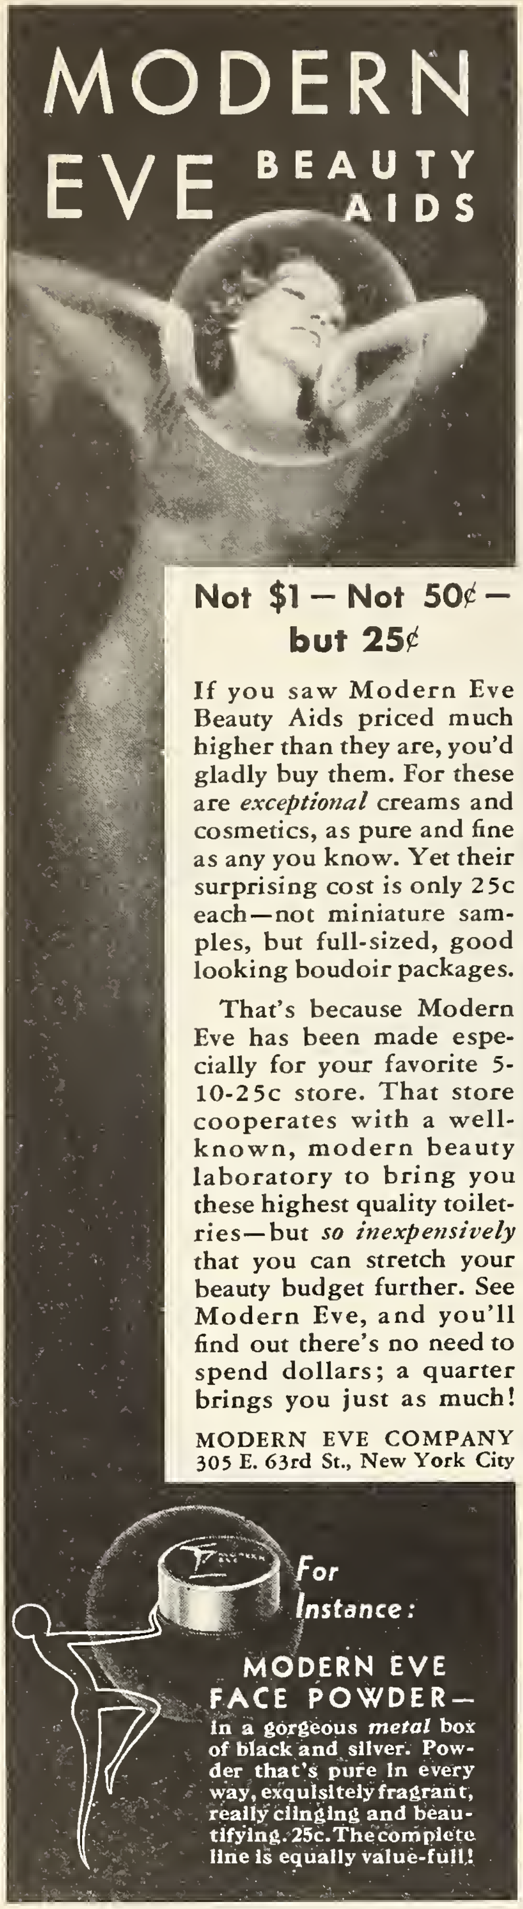
How's your complexion? Dull-looking? Roughened by raw winds? Then make-up alone won't do the trick. Your skin needs a little attention. Get busy with a cake of Ivory Soap and start working for a naturally clear, baby-smooth complexion.

Ivory, you know, is the soap that keeps so many millions of babies' skins rose-petal soft. Doctors advise Ivory for sensitive complexions because it is so pure—because it won't dry up the natural oils that lubricate your skin. No dyes—no soapy perfumes in Ivory!

It's smart to be a baby about your bath, too. Quaintly enough, your complexion doesn't stop at your neck—it extends all over you. And your all-over skin needs Ivory's purity just as much as your face does. So hop into your Ivory bath and scrub yourself shining clean with Ivory's cleansing lather. You'll step out radiant and glowing. Ivory's the best daily beauty treatment your skin can receive. Lucky for you that its price is so modest! And you can buy Ivory at any grocer's.

Ivory Soap

99 44/100 % pure • It floats



MODERN EVE BEAUTY AIDS

Not $1 — Not 50¢ — but 25¢

If you saw Modern Eve Beauty Aids priced much higher than they are, you'd gladly buy them. For these are exceptional creams and cosmetics, as pure and fine as any you know. Yet their surprising cost is only 25c each—not miniature samples, but full-sized, good looking boudoir packages.

That's because Modern Eve has been made especially for your favorite 5-10-25c store. That store cooperates with a well-known, modern beauty laboratory to bring you these highest quality toiletries—but so inexpensively that you can stretch your beauty budget further. See Modern Eve, and you'll find out there's no need to spend dollars; a quarter brings you just as much!

MODERN EVE COMPANY
305 E. 63rd St., New York City

For Instance:

MODERN EVE FACE POWDER—
In a gorgeous metal box of black and silver. Powder that's pure in every way, exquisitely fragrant, really clinging and beautifying. 25c. The complete line is equally value-full!

HUSH CREAM DEODORANT
For Body Freshness
FOR BODY ODORS
ACTUAL 10¢ SIZE AT 5 & 10¢ STORES or send 10¢ in stamps or coin to HUSH CO. 116 Market St. Phila. Pa.

Let Me Tell You About Greta Garbo

(Continued from page 27)

M-G-M was spending a huge amount for her comeback. When she works, she concentrates so hard that I think a cannon could be shot off at her side and she wouldn't move. Lots of men have that power of concentration but very few women have it.

Imagine my surprise, then, in the midst of all this intensity to have her wisecrack the first time she talked to me alone. We were speaking of a love scene in the script and she said:

"This is a very low scene—a very low scene."

I knew she meant it had to be played in a low-pitched voice but the repetition made me imagine she meant something more—and she did! I looked up and found her smiling slyly and looking at me out of the corner of her eye to see if I got her double meaning. When I giggled, her smile spread to a grin. She always waits mischievously to see whether you get her double entendres and if you do, she's as pleased as punch.

But she has the true aloofness of the great. No matter how well you know her, I don't imagine you can take your hair down with her. She's not the sort of person to whom even her intimates would yell, "Hi! Greta." She is "Miss Garbo" always, no matter how human she is and, in my opinion, she's swell.

At first I couldn't forget the "Garbo legend." I remember the first scene we played together. I had to curtsey and kiss her hand. I had been perfect in rehearsals but the "take" was almost spoiled. In the middle of it I thought, "My God, this is Garbo!" and it darn near broke me up. Of course, as the picture progressed and we became more friendly, I got over my awe of her.

We began to gag together. We wore long dresses that swept the floor and hid our feet. One day she lifted her beautiful Adrian creation and showed me her feet encased in an old pair of tennis shoes.

"They said I have four pairs," she laughed, "but I've got only these."

Not to be outdone, I lifted my beautiful dress and showed her my feet in an old and comfortable pair of slippers. It got to be a morning ritual with us. Each day with all solemnity, she'd lift her gown and the tennis shoes were in evidence.

"And you?" she'd ask.

To keep up with her prank and hear her wicked laughter, I used to wear the oldest and most outlandish clodhoppers I could find.

Another gag was her "Nay! Nay!" When she had to give a decision about something, instead of saying "No!" she'd say "Nay! Nay!" until it got so that everyone from Mamoulian down was "Nay, naying."

One terrible day she walked through the sets saying in a sepulchral voice, "There's trouble afut! There's trouble afut!"

We all looked at one another in dismay. There was fear and trembling, for none of us knew what the trouble was. Fortified by her friendship to me, I approached and asked timidly:

"What's the matter, Miss Garbo? Why do you say, 'there's trouble afoot?'"

She looked at me and answered solemnly, "I have just learned your delightful expression. 'There's trouble afut!'"

ANOTHER day I told her I knew one word in Swedish but I didn't know what it meant. My aunt had had a Swedish cook who used to say "forbaunod" a great deal. Garbo roared when she heard that.

"It means damn or hell," she explained. "I have visions of that woman knocking the pots and pans about and shouting 'Damn, damn, damn!'"

She used to take as much pleasure in teasing me as Mamoulian did. She loves tennis and she knew I did, too. When the tennis matches were on, she'd say to me, "Maybe we can get you off today in time for you to see them."

I protested that I didn't want to get off but she kept teasing me about it just the same. And because sometimes some young man would be waiting to take me home, she'd keep asking, "How are all your boy friends?"

One morning I answered lightly, "I'm through with men. They complicate life so."

She answered very seriously, "You're right. If you want to be a success, you must not let anything interfere with your work. You must concentrate. Everything must come from within you."

She's the most amazing person. Wearing the same costume and make-up, she can look hard and sophisticated one day and the next be so radiantly beautiful that "dewy" is the only word that fits her, much as I hate to use it. She is never satisfied with her own work. She used to stop in the middle of a scene which overwhelmed me by its perfection and say, "It's not right." She'd bite her lip, shake her head and walk about in distraction, almost like a caged animal.

Mamoulian always let her do a scene over if she wanted to, even though he thought it had been done all right. He knew better than anyone how hard she was striving for perfection.

Gossip has linked their names but I don't think they were anything more than good friends and fine artists, each appreciating the other's ability—and sense of humor, too.

They would both love to play kids' pranks on each other. We had a man on the sound track called "Skippy." He was short, pot-bellied and wore glasses. Just to look at him made you feel good for he would giggle at you as if you and he had some secret joke.

One day he turned up in a turtle neck sweater and a white cap. It so happened that Mamoulian, who is very tall and wears glasses too, had the same kind of sweater on. Garbo called him over and pointing to Skippy said, "I think you two are brothers."

MAMOULIAN waited until she was off the set and then he sent to the wardrobe department for a white cap like Skippy's. When Garbo was expected back, he motioned for us all to be silent and went over and stood posing with his arm around Skippy. I can't tell you how funny they looked—tall Mamoulian and little Skippy wearing the same kind of clothes. When Garbo came on the set and saw them, she roared. Skippy had his own sense of humor too and I think Garbo liked that. His arms were tatooed and we asked him if he had ever been a sailor.

"Sure," he answered. "I was the captain of a schooner."

When we were all duely impressed, he added, "A prairie schooner."

You can see from this that Garbo created an atmosphere of friendliness to everyone. She didn't play the great lady but was her gracious self to one and all.

And when it came to work, her own flawless performance made us all give our best. She helped us all, particularly myself and Gilbert, who worked at high tension all the time because it was his comeback and he is especially high-strung anyway.

She did lots of kind little things for me that I shall never forget. Whenever she sent her maid out for coffee or tea, she saw to it that I had some too. And one day when we had been working on the back lot and were waiting for the cars to take us to the studio, it began to snow and I began to shiver. Garbo and Mamoulian usually took the first car and I went into the second with the others. But this day the second car didn't come up right away and before I knew what had happened, the first car had backed up and both Garbo and Mamoulian were beckoning me to hop in with them.

I think her good-bye to me was typical of the woman about whom so many conflicting things are written. She didn't say, "It was nice to have you in my picture," as so many great stars do, but instead:

"It has been very nice working together," and remembering that I had told her I was going back East for a holiday with my family she added, "You're going to see your mother and your brother, aren't you?"

"Yes!" I replied and I'm afraid I acted too delighted at the prospect, for she said in the most tragic tones:

"Oh, how I envy you!"

I forgot her greatness then. At that moment I felt that she might be my chum who was frightfully alone and homesick and I was very sorry for her. Imagine, me, Elizabeth Young, feeling sorry for The Great Garbo. Oh, it all sounds too absurd but it's true. That's how I felt.

Do you blame me for thinking that Garbo is a regular person and that I've got something to tell my grandchildren?

Still ... it's her Eyes

THAT MAKE HER SO COMPLETELY ... SO IRRESISTIBLY ...

SO RAVISHINGLY fascinating

Lovely figure, beautifully gowned . . poise and style . . yet, withal, just another mannequin unless her eyes express the fascinating charm of her own unique personality.

She knows well how important is the appearance of long, dark lashes, delicately shaded lids, and graceful, expressive eyebrows, to bring out all the alluring beauty and depth of expression in her eyes. Like five million other clever women, she achieves this natural-appearing loveliness quickly and easily with the famous Maybelline eye beauty aids.

Don't let pale, scanty lashes, blank-looking eyelids, and scraggly brows rob you of the glamorous beauty that can be so easily yours with these exquisite yet inexpensive Maybelline preparations.

A few simple brush strokes of Maybelline Eyelash Darkener will instantly transform your lashes into the appearance of long, dark, luxuriant fringe. Tear-proof, non-smarting, and absolutely harmless, it keeps the lashes soft and silky. Delicately shade your eyelids with Maybelline Eye Shadow and see how the color of your eyes is deepened and intensified. Form lovely, expressive eyebrows with the smooth-marking Maybelline Eyebrow Pencil. Now behold...! Your eyes have become twin pools of alluring beauty, expressing your every mood with irresistible charm.

Encourage the natural growth of your lashes by applying Maybelline Eyelash Grower nightly before retiring. Stimulating and beneficial, it is, like all the Maybelline eye beauty aids, absolutely pure and harmless. Try these four effective aids to eye beauty today. They are obtainable in purse sizes at all leading 10c stores.

Maybelline

Black and Brown

Maybelline
EYEBROW PENCIL

Black and Brown

Maybelline
EYE SHADOW

Blue, Brown, Blue-grey Violet and Green

Maybelline
Eyelash Grower

Colorless

Maybelline

MAYBELLINE CO.
CHICAGO

EYE BEAUTY PREPARATIONS

She's NOT PRETTY
BUT SHE'S engaged

At the Beauty Salon she obtained a permanent which gave her style and personality. Then she kept her hair as originally set—lovable—by using, as her Beautician did—

BOBBY LOX
HAIRPINS

These bob pins are used in Beauty Shops more than any other. Black, Brown, Blonde, Grey. Insist upon Bobby Lox at your favorite store or mail the coupon to

SCOLDING LOCKS CORPORATION, Appleton, Wis.
Enclosed find 10c for 36 Bobby Lox. ☐ Straight ☐ Crimped. ☐ Curved. Color....................
Name.......................................MM334
Address.......................................
City.......................State...........

KILL THE HAIR ROOT

My method positively prevents hair from growing again. Safe, easy, permanent. Use it privately at home. The delightful relief will bring happiness, freedom of mind and greater success.

We teach Beauty Culture. Send 6c in stamps TODAY for Booklet. For promptness in writing me, I will include a $2.00 Certificate for Mahler Beauty Preparations.

D. J. MAHLER
Beauty Specialist

D. J. Mahler Co., Dept. 36C, Providence, R. I.

This alluring fragrance
—adds unseen beauty to your visible charms

RADIO GIRL
PERFUME AND FACE POWDER

"Radio Girl" Perfume was designed for the modern American Girl—gay, vivacious, unaffected. Though compounded from fine French essential oils, Radio Girl Perfume is produced in this country with a thought for thrift . . . You'll love Radio Girl Face Powder, too—with the same exquisite fragrance.

Use this COUPON for FREE SAMPLES

"RADIO GIRL", St. Paul, Minn. M3
Send me FREE Regular Size Radio Girl Perfume and Trial Size Radio Girl Face Powder. I am enclosing 10c (coin or stamps) for cost of mailing. (Offer good in U.S. only)
Name.......................................
Address.......................................

Who's Calling!

(Continued from page 29)

behind some of these encounters of trustful little girls with men who claim they are directors, it is perhaps best not to think. Most of them only go to show that there are a staggering number of empty-headed braggarts in Hollywood. The operators say that calls for these non-existent "directors" often run up to eighty a day.

THEN there are the pitiful calls from people down and out, beaten by life, willing to snatch at any straw. "I'd like to ask about a job," they begin hesitantly.

"In what department, please?"

"Oh, acting — any department — any kind of work," comes the vague answer. "I just hoped—I just thought maybe—"

People who don't even know what kind of job they could handle don't stand much chance of getting any job at all. But it is never without a pang that the operators pull their plugs, saying, "We're sorry, but you'll have to get in touch with the department your work fits you for."

Heaven knows, though, the phone girls get enough comic relief in their daily round. There are the ardent swains who call in to entreat, "When will Betty Daniels finish work in the chorus on that dance picture you're shooting? I've got a date with her and she's three hours late now!" Betty, or whatever her name happens to be, is still on the set.

When will the chorus be through? Doesn't the chorus wish it knew! Don't the studio executives wish they knew! Doesn't the director wish he knew! And if they don't know how can the poor telephone operator know?

Then there are the curiosity hounds who want to know "Is Ruth Chatterton really married?" "Does Cagney wear a wig?" "How old is Randy Scott?" "Is Jimmie Dunn going to marry Ann Harding?" They know the answers already. They just want to hear them via voice from the studio itself. There are the downcast salesmen who say to the phone girl, "I can't seem to get to Mr. X. Will you sell him a car for me?" There are the skeptics who demand suspiciously, "Did Eddie Robinson really ride that horse in that picture I saw last night or did he just wear the riding-clothes and let a double do it?"

An odd quirk is that people who call in to ask questions like these—"Is Norma Shearer's hair really curly?"—and so on—almost always preface their questions the same way. "A bunch of us were sitting around the house the other day and we had a bet that such and such was the case," they begin. It seems to make it less embarrassing, that old fib about the bet.

ANOTHER mix-up out at Warners' recently might not have been so funny had not Jack Warner, vice president in charge of production, had a sense of fun. One evening after hours Mr. Warner came into the office and said to the girls on duty, "I'm Mr. Warner. Please get me long distance to New York."

People are always trying to swipe free telephone calls. The girls exchanged knowing smiles. Mr. Warner actually had to write his signature on a piece of paper before they would believe him.

And as with production heads, so with stars. The operators know their voices, know them well enough to kid them over the wires, but quite frequently they have never seen them off the screen. Of four operators on duty at a major studio, only one has ever been on a set.

Poor little Jackie Cooper went unrecognized one day, too. The girls at the M-G-M board heard a childish voice saying, "Please let me talk to Miss Joan Crawford." The operator who got the call closed her key and turned to her chief. "It's a little boy wanting to talk to Joan," she said. "Gee, I've got half a mind to put him through to her. You know how she is about kids. She'd talk to him." But rules are rules and so, opening her key again, she said, "I'm sorry, but I can't let you talk to the stars."

"But I'm a friend of Miss Crawford's," the young voice insisted.

A friend! That's what they all say. "I'm sorry—"

"But darn it, Marie," said the voice, peeved by now, "I am! This is Jackie."

Only then did the girls recognize his voice.

Joan Crawford, by the way, once checked an attempt at robbery by a peculiar accident of the switchboard that could not happen one time in twenty thousand. A woman's voice called the studio saying, "This is Robinson's Department Store. What is the number of Miss Crawford's charge account with us, please?" This is an old dodge of department store thieves. They make every effort to get a charge account number. Once they get it, the star finds thousands of dollars of merchandise charged to her name. But the operators are wise to the stunt and never give out the information. Ordinarily they would simply have cut the connection. What happened on this occasion is inexplicable. The operators to this day don't know exactly. Joan must have lifted the receiver of her private phone at the exact instant the call came in to the main board, just as the operator was ringing her. The department store crook, little though she had planned for it, was talking straight into Joan's ear. She must have shivered as she heard a quiet voice ask, "This is Miss Crawford speaking. What was it you wanted, please?"

There was a moment of stammering, and then the connection was hastily broken.

JOAN was once a phone operator herself. Now and then she drops in at the studio switchboard and clips a transmitter around her neck just for old times' sake. Would it thrill you to know that that husky-voiced operator who took your call that time you phoned Republic 0211 was Joan?

The lengths to which people will go to talk to their favorite stars over the phone are unbelievable. A girl called Hollywood all the way from St. Louis not long ago to enquire, "May I talk to John Barrymore?"

"What is the nature of your business?"

"Oh, I haven't got anything to say, I just want to talk to him," came the answer with blissful assurance.

"Mr. Barrymore isn't on the lot today." Mr. Barrymore was, but the phone girls try not to antagonize people if they can help it.

"Then can't I talk to Jean Harlow? She'll let me reverse the charges. I know she'll be glad to pay for this call."

There's egotism for you! Such long distance calls are by no means uncommon, the girls say, although they may cost all the way from ten to fifty dollars, depending on their point of origin.

Another egotist is the elderly woman who calls in every day to tell one studio what picture she saw last night and bawl them out for making it the wrong way. "Now, if I had written that story," she begins, and goes on for fifteen minutes to criticize plot, casting, performances, dialogue, everything.

But that's the sort of thing the phone girls are paid to listen to. Guardian angels, they sit between the studio and the world. When a man called in frantically to swear he was the only person in the world who could cure Clark Gable of appendicitis, the phone girls had to decide whether he was a crank or a physician who really had something to offer. Clark was in the hospital at the time, scheduled to be operated upon the following morning. When, as once happened, it was reported over the radio that Wallie Beery was dead in a plane crash, it was the phone girls who called his home in a rush, talked to him, and issued reassuring denials to something like fifteen hundred persons who telephoned to ask whether the report was true.

But exciting moments are rare. The routine calls which flood in hour after hour, day after day, year in and year out, are less dramatic. They're the same over and over.

"I'm a high school girl. Will you please ask Gloria Stuart what kind of rinse she uses on her hair?"

"Will you give me the colors of all the gowns Claudette Colbert wore in 'Tonight Is Ours'? I'm getting married and I want to copy her clothes for my trousseau."

"Your call to New York is ready, now, Mr. Marx."

"Good afternoon. Universal."

"Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios."

The tiny lights blink, the patient voices go on giving infinite answers, the deft hands glide over the board like the pale ghosts of a million hopes and dreams.

WHICH SKIN FAULT IS SPOILING YOUR BEAUTY?

●

LARGE PORES?
BLACKHEADS?
PIMPLES?
OILY SKIN?
CHAPPED HANDS?

●

For new beauty use this medicated corrective cream

—say scores of nurses

Among the 6,000,000 women who are now using this new kind of corrective cream, there are thousands of trained nurses. And they ought to know what's really good for the skin! Their training has taught them what the skin needs to keep it healthy and beautiful.

WONDERFUL FOR CHAPPED HANDS, TOO

Make this convincing overnight test. Apply Noxzema on one hand tonight. In the morning note how soothed it feels—how much softer, smoother, whiter that hand is! Noxzema improves hands overnight.

GREASELESS
NOXZEMA
Skin Cream

After you've tried Noxzema, get the new, big money-saving 50c jar.

Invisible Pore Poisons

Science now recognizes that many of the common skin faults come from tiny hidden poisons that lurk unseen beneath the skin surface. Large pores, blackheads, pimples, oiliness, roughness and other beauty-destroying flaws are often caused by these invisible poisons.

Ordinary care is not enough. Creams and lotions that merely cleanse the surface fail to reach these deep-lodged poisons. A special medicated cream is necessary. And Noxzema is such a cream. Noxzema is pure-white, greaseless, vanishing—containing medicines that sink into the skin, help to keep pores germ-free and restore the skin to normal health and beauty.

HOW TO USE: Apply Noxzema every night after all make-up has been removed. In the morning wash off, first with warm water, then with cold water or ice. Apply a little more Noxzema then as a protective powder base. With this scientifically perfect complexion aid, you'll soon glory in a skin so clean and clear and lovely it will stand closest scrutiny.

SPECIAL TRIAL OFFER

You can try Noxzema at little cost—you can see for yourself in a few short days how wonderfully it clears, softens and refines your skin—you can see why over 10,000,000 jars are used yearly. Noxzema is sold by all drug and department stores. Ask for the new larger economical 50c jar—or first get the generous 10c trial jar. But don't wait—start improving your skin tonight. Get a jar today from the nearest dealer.

NRA

GLORIA STUART, UNIVERSAL PICTURES PLAYER

A new TYPE
EYEBROW PENCIL
with a delicate tone

THE MAKERS of Winx mascara—America's foremost authorities on eye make-up—have just brought out a NEW-type eyebrow pencil.

This pencil has a delicate tone . . . and, therefore, gives just the right, delicate, gossamer touch to eyebrows. It never looks coarse or smeary or spotty—as so many pencils do.

Just touch it to your brows (you needn't press it) . . . and watch how it transforms even skimpy eyebrows to a soft, rich line.

The Winx Pencil is new . . . but already it has made a hit in New York and Hollywood. Women who use Liquid Winx or Cake Winx doubly welcome this new Winx product as a true help to eye beauty.

Only 10¢—at all good 5 and 10 stores.

WINX
EYEBROW PENCIL

CONDON'S GIANT EVERBEARING TOMATO
"QUEEN OF THE MARKET," Big Money Maker. Large, solid fruit; excellent canner. To introduce to you our Northern Grown Live Seeds and Plants, we will mail you 125 seeds of Condon's Giant Everbearing Tomato and our big 1934 Catalog of Seeds, Plants, Shrubs, FREE 200-Page Book tells how, and when to plant. Send 3c stamp to cover postage.
Prices Lower Than Ever Before
CONDON BROS., SEEDSMEN
BOX 158 ROCKFORD, ILLINOIS

DON'T LET CRACKS MAR LOVELY LIPS!

Treat That COLD SORE
QUICK EASY WAY!

JUST touch cracked lips and that cold sore tonight with antiseptic, penetrating Campho-Phenique. It starts to soothe pain and speed up healing instantly, and restore your lips their natural smoothness and ripe beauty. Protects against infection, too. not only on cold sores but on minor cuts, burns and similar hurts. Get a bottle of Campho-Phenique at any drug store—30c or 60c—or a trial size, 10c at any ten-cent store.

CAMPHO-PHENIQUE

What Kind of a Girl Is Heather?

(Continued from page 74)

almost met a cruel, horrible death.

In England she had been a good horsewoman and considered that day lost when she did not have an early morning canter. So when one morning she decided, unbeknownst to the rest of the company, that she would like a horseback ride she felt no uneasiness. But she had not reckoned on the wildness of Indian horses nor the curious mountain trails of India.

THEY were playing far in the interior and were the only English speaking people for miles. So, completely alone, Heather hired an Indian pony and set out.

Happily she climbed a mountain road when suddenly, directly in the pathway, she saw a huge snake. The horse saw it, too, and instantly bolted. She had no idea how to stop him and there was nothing for her to do but to cling tight and let him go. He tore around a narrow mountain path and once Heather turned her eyes from the road to see a thousand foot cliff falling sheer below. There was room on the narrow path only for the horse. She could not possibly risk jumping because on the other side the mountain rose like a formidable wall of rock. Her only alternative was to cling to the mad pony's back with all her strength.

What went on in her mind when she was making this wild race with death only Heather Angel knows. Her recounting of the experience is done without embellishments. She describes this hair-raising situation as calmly as she would say, "My mother and I took a walk down Hollywood Boulevard." But it did one thing for her. It gave her a philosophy, a philosophy that death is inevitably so near to all of us and that our fate is held by such a gossamer thread that nothing is important enough to cause us to worry and fret.

That is why there emanates from her a calmness that is seen in very few young people, stoicism that only an old soul seems able to attain.

Perhaps Heather Angel is an old soul. At any rate there was something in the atmosphere of India which fascinated her. She heard much Yogi philosophy and saw the strange peace that possesses even the humblest and most impoverished of Indians.

There were amusing experiences in the Far East, too. The company played in one very small and obscure town where the natives had never seen a theatrical performance before and, when the villain in the play stalked across the stage to show the heroine what a Fate Worse than Death would be like, the fiery natives in the audience bore down upon the stage and made an attempt to kill the poor young actor who was simply playing his part. After that it was as much as his life was worth to show himself upon the street and the fact that the next night his rôle was that of the gentlest of heroes made no difference at all to the natives.

BUT all of these experiences gave Heather a background which she would trade for none other. And incidentally, while she was learning a philosophic outlook on life, she was also learning the rudiments of acting.

Still avid for knowledge of her chosen profession, when the Eastern tour was over, she traveled in rep shows in England. While she was playing in London a picture director saw her and gave her the rôle of an Italian girl in a film which was being partially filmed in Italy. Her screen career had begun. While she was working in a UFA production, the American producers discovered her and she was gobbled up by Hollywood.

Seated in a huge chair that seemed completely to swallow her slight frame and with cigarette smoke curling about her crisp brown hair, she said in her precise little way, "I'm sure I shall always adore Hollywood. It looks so clean, so sun-baked and it has such marvelous sports, my dear. One doesn't have to go long distances to play tennis or swim or skate. It's all spread out before one. I do love it, really."

Her mother is with her in California and Heather's life is much the same as it would be if she were still in Oxford, England. Her friends are found mostly in the English colony of Hollywood. Her tastes are simple—plain but dainty clothes, very little jewelry, and a home not too elaborate.

She isn't "glamorous" in the real sense of that overworked word, but there is about her, some indescribable British charm—something still and deep inside her which assures you that what you see of Heather Angel at first or second—or even tenth—meeting is not all the girl has to give.

Whether or not she will be a brilliant success in Hollywood remains to be seen. She gives clean-cut performances like herself, but she is neither the sloe-eyed allurer nor the wistful, saccharine heroine. I'm afraid she doesn't fit into a pattern. Her life has been too full and she has taken too much out of it to say to herself, "I am this or I am that." There is too much of the philosophy of the East in the blood of this thoroughly British girl.

Don't miss the final installment of the Katharine Hepburn life story in our next issue

Their "Best Esteemed" Stars

(Continued from page 63)

her acted in "The Perfect Flapper" "Ella Cinders" and "Twinkle Toes." She were amazing and I counterpart her very much. She is bobbed with a black, conspicuous hair, a bulky eye and lips so consequent red like an Hibiscus flower. Her nose is tall with an exorbitant shape. Colleen Moore is very clever in making cock-eye, and she frequent acts as poor girl in a country house with a barbarous mother.

She has a complete white tooth in a row. Her feet are trivial and phantom and her astonishing, genteel shoes carry her wonderful legs from place to place. I think so Colleen Moore can acted impudent things for make people rapture. She have so many external coverings that when she acts and wore on those dresses you sure would like it.

Sometimes when she make comedy you could hardly stand it because she act it so mirthful. I hope some day she will come to Honolulu for we all can see her embellish face, hair, eyes and how witless she are.

HATSUE NOJI.

MARY PICKFORD: My favorably actress is Mary Pickford. She have a long curly hair with a ribbon tied at the terminate. I ponder she possesses the most extreme delicacy of outline of any actress in Hollywood. I have from Hollywood one of her photographs which it is one she herself have sending me direct. She were standing upright in this photograph, and I ardent it very much.

Mary Pickford have clothes with many decorations of lace, ribbon, long skirt and very fine. She have brown protracted and embellished eyes. Her eyelashes vicissitudes aloft so it constitutes her superior elegance. Her hair is very undulating so people cogitates she ripples it, but it are not so. Mary Pickford was birth with undulating hair. Mary Pickford, in fact, is my extreem favorable actress.

SUN MOY KAM.

HAROLD LLOYD: Harold Lloyd is construction thin and slendor with a sportive eye glass, tedius feet and very jollity. When he act in the movies he makes every individuals laughing, so people are taking him for joke, but Harold Lloyd is very innocent and spotless.

On his childhood he were always sally to school, so his parents were very pleasure and ardent him very much. When he were too enlarge to go to school he became a movie star. Now he is an opulent, salutary man. Sometimes he combs middle, and sometimes sideways. He acts very brilliant and when his film extends to Honolulu all the nations of the Hawaiian islands are ardent to vision the show. Some of his pictures begins with a laugh and

It's hard to believe I was ever so SKINNY!
SO LONG SKINNY!

Posed by professional models

Amazing EASY WAY ADDS 5 to 15 POUNDS FAST

Sensational gains with new double tonic. Richest imported brewers' ale yeast concentrated 7 times and combined with iron. Brings new beauty in a few weeks

NOW you can easily fill out that skinny, beanpole figure, and be just as attractive and have as many friends as anybody. Here's a new easy treatment that is giving thousands solid healthy flesh and shapely, enticing curves that everybody admires—in just a few weeks!

As you know, doctors for years have prescribed yeast to build up health for rundown men and women. But now with this new discovery you can get far greater tonic results than with ordinary yeast—regain health, and in addition put on pounds of firm, good-looking flesh—and in a far shorter time.

Not only are thousands quickly gaining beauty-bringing pounds, but also clear, radiant skin, freedom from indigestion and constipation, new pep.

Concentrated 7 times

This amazing new product, Ironized Yeast, is made from specially cultured brewers' ale yeast imported from Europe—the richest yeast known—which by a new process is concentrated 7 times—made 7 times more powerful.

But that is not all! This marvelous, health-building yeast is then ironized with 3 kinds of strengthening iron.

Day after day, as you take Ironized Yeast, watch ugly, gawky angles fill out, flat chest develop and skinny limbs round out attractively. And with this will come a radiantly clear skin, new health—you're an entirely new person.

Results guaranteed

No matter how skinny and weak you may be, this marvelous new Ironized Yeast should build you up in a few short weeks as it has thousands. If you are not delighted with the results of the very first package, your money will be instantly refunded.

Only be sure you get genuine Ironized Yeast, not some imitation that cannot give the same results. Insist on the genuine with "IY" stamped on each tablet.

Special FREE offer!

To start you building up your health right away, we make this absolutely FREE offer. Purchase a package of Ironized Yeast at once, cut out the seal on the box and mail it to us with a clipping of this paragraph. We will send you a fascinating new book on health, "New Facts About Your Body", by a well-known authority. Remember, results are guaranteed with the very first package—or money refunded. At all druggists. Ironized Yeast Company, Dept. 33, Atlanta, Georgia.

NRA MEMBER U.S. WE DO OUR PART

KISSABLE SKIN

WINS LOVE

●"My skin was so blotched I thought nobody would ever care for me, but 10 days after beginning to use Ambrosia people began to compliment me on my complexion. Now I am very happy."

Letters like this prove that you too can have a lovely skin. Doctor's tests prove it too. For Ambrosia, the pore-deep cleanser, quickly clears up muddy complexions, prevents blackheads and pimples. An old French formula, first made in this country only to private order, Ambrosia Cleanser is now available at all 10c stores and in larger sizes at drug and department stores. Begin today to have a kissable skin. Get Ambrosia at once. For very oily complexions follow with Ambrosia Tightener. It is tonic and antiseptic. Also on sale at 10c and other stores.

Hinze Ambrosia,
Inc.
114 Fifth Avenue
New York, N. Y.

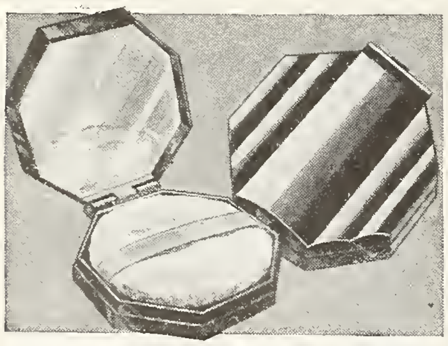
KEEP LAMP & RADIO WIRES OFF FLOOR
New Easy Way

FITS BACK OF BASEBOARD OR MOULDING

JUSTRITE
PUSH-CLIP
10 Cents
at KRESGE'S

Amazing invention guarantees neat, quick job. No damage to woodwork. No tools needed. Improve appearance of your rooms—keep all wires off floors with JUSTRITE PUSH-CLIP. Economical. Set of eight colored clips to match your cords, 10c.

BEWITCHING



Ultra-smart octagonal compact in genuine bakelite, with beveled glass mirror . . . fashionable enough and fine enough for twice the price! Case in red, black, brown, green, blue; high grade velour puff. Odorless, durable, yet light as a feather. 15c at leading Chains.

An exclusive creation of A. L. SIEGEL CO., Inc.
22 West 22nd St., N. Y. City

HANDYSIFT
Loose Powder Vanity

terminates with a riotous conduct.

TIN CHAN GOO.

CLARA BOW: In my period of youth I judgment Clara Bow is my most affectionated actress. She have a merriment proceedure and a circular, bulky eye with a moderate eye ball in the point of concentration. When Clara Bow was a diminutive girl she did not like to stay domestic but loved to go abroad. I have perused this in one movies magazine. Her ambitions was to be well nurtured and also be intelligent but not indolent.

Before Clara Bow become an actress she would lotion the dishes for her mother, purify the house and keep it free from extraneous matter. Now I have acquired knowledge she is attaining her living by being a Hollywood star.

Clara Bow have a short cut red hair, a spherical face with a prostrate nose which is just medium, not too high or too low. She have a broad eye and walk on elevated shoes. She is not very meagre nor too corpulant, but is a frolicsome girl. She is one of the juvenilest girls in Hollywood, and indefinitely she is my utmost movie star.

OI FONG CHUNG.

I've Dressed Them All

(Continued from page 49)

by everyone. When she started in pictures, Lon Chaney taught her the gentle art of make-up. But his hand was not so gentle when he applied it and in her first test she looked like nothing human. It was her talent and beauty that triumphed over too much make-up.

Very often the stars of the screen are different in real life from their film rôles. I saw Theda Bara when she was at the height of her vamp success and was amazed to find her dressed as unobtrusively as a Gish girl. Such, however, was not the case with Betty Blythe. When Miss Blythe walked into my shop she was still being "The Queen of Sheba." We discussed clothes for a vaudeville sketch and she wanted trains eight yards in length, tight skirts slit to the knee, cuffs of fox which would trail on the ground, head dresses of pearls and rhinestones and I was a bit dazed to learn that anyone thought in terms of such ridiculous clothes. At length Miss Blythe swept out—and I mean swept—and I spent days working upon the fantastic sketches. They are still somewhere among my souvenirs, for she never remembered to come back or even to telephone. Maybe it was all a rehearsal for a part she hoped to play.

Here's a girl who sat on top of the ladder and fell to the bottom over night. Evelyn Brent was one of the most extravagant, grandest, badly managed girls who ever crashed pictures. Money was something which was put into the bank without her seeing it and upon which she could draw endless checks. I used to think of her unimportant extravagances—gold-tipped cigarettes at ten cents apiece, two copies of every paper so that she and her husband could each have one—and I knew that anyone as thoughtless with minor things would indulge in the greater extravagances. However, this is no criticism. I adore Betty Brent. But I have often watched her order twenty dresses when I knew she could not possibly use so many. However, I realized that if I didn't sell them to her she would buy them elsewhere. Of all the people temporarily out of the spotlight, I hope Betty will be the first to come back—not bit parts but honest-to-goodness starring rôles.

AND here's another Betty, the grandest of them all.

Betty's real passion in life is the circus. Recently we were invited to go backstage before an afternoon performance and when the elephants and camels were being caparisoned in glittering spangles, we both begged to be part of the opening parade. Betty, draped in chiffon and beads, rode around the arena atop an elephant and I, dressed in an Arabian costume, led a camel. And nobody knew that Betty Compson was in that parade.

Years ago on the Lasky lot one of the most beautiful girls there was Agnes Ayres, who had played with Valentino in "The Sheik." Before silent pictures went out of existence she had married and retired. Severals years later she tried a comeback but never achieved her old place in the cinema sun. This summer on my way home from New York I stopped off in Chicago for a look at the World's Fair. One of the first concessions to draw my eye was the one called "Hollywood." Inside there was a perfect replica of a huge open stage, with a set built in one corner and a company busy "shooting." There was a director's stand, a chair for the assistant director, actors and extras in make-up, electricians, prop boys and a script girl. I thought for a minute I was in Hollywood.

Several thousand people sat around the enclosure wide-eyed at being permitted to see the taking of what they believed was an actual picture. I stood wondering who might be the "stars" and was amazed when Agnes Ayres and Grant Withers came on the set. It's a far cry from films in Hollywood to empty reels at the Century of Progress but, after seeing Agnes before the camera and realizing that she is as beautiful as ever, I wonder why she isn't in Hollywood making pictures.

And now my task is ended. I've come to the end of the famous names in my autograph book. It's been grand sitting here writing about the great and the near-great and if the readers of MODERN SCREEN have enjoyed reading what I've written half as much as I have enjoyed telling it, I'm satisfied.

The Lowdown on Mickey Mouse

(Continued from page 59)

results, that they bid fair to out-rival even Mickey's phenomenal success. Witness how "The Three Little Pigs" has swept the country by storm. It has broken all records everywhere of any other short ever made.

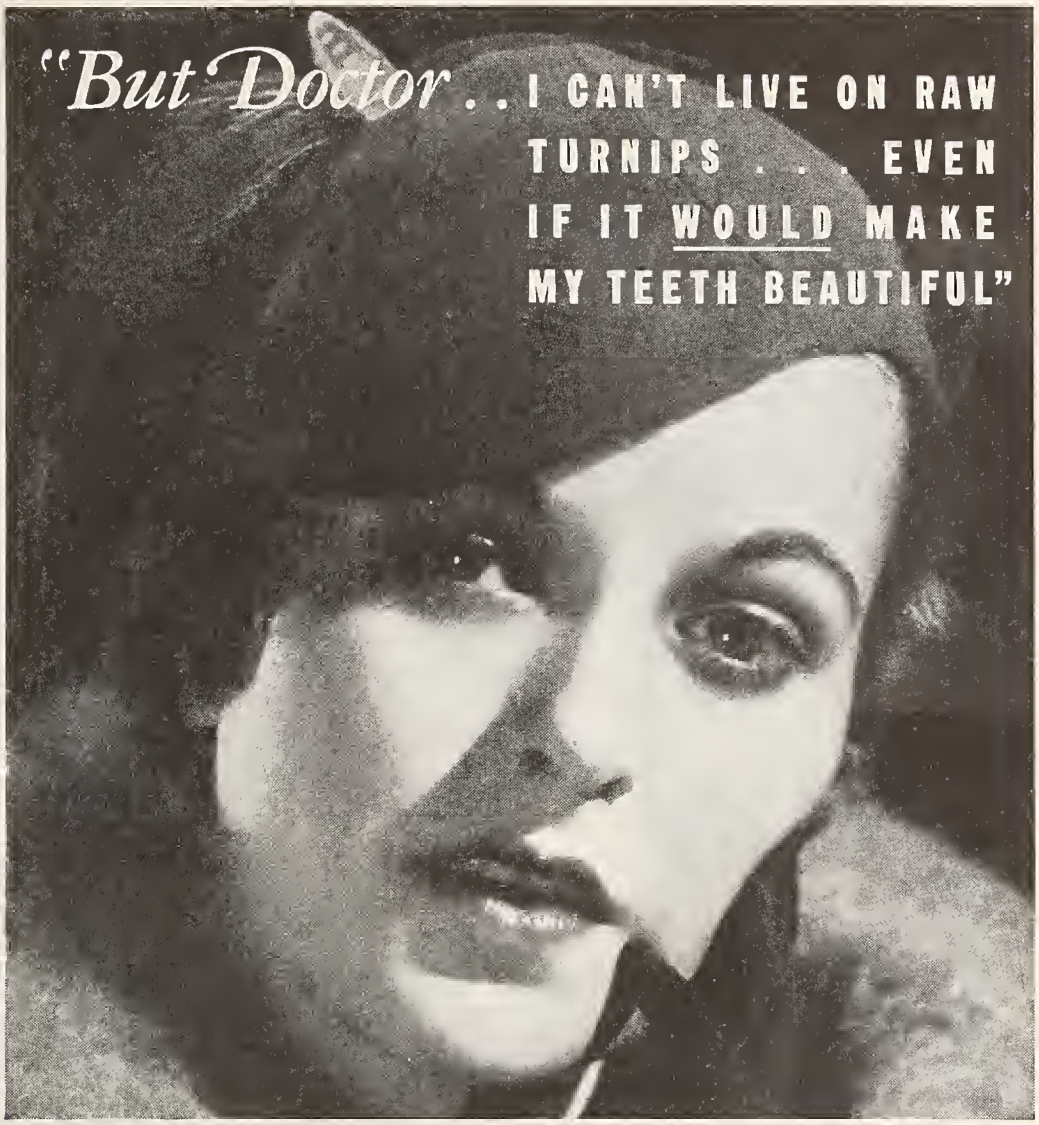
With the first money earned by Mickey, Walt Disney started the building of his now famous studio. Every year the earnings of the entire output were poured back into construction of a work-shop for the universally beloved little rodent. Now he cavorts in a model establishment that is the most interesting studio in all Hollywood. It cost one hundred and fifty thousand dollars to build, and is complete with every latest mechanical device for the development of the pictures.

At the end of this year he will have made his first profit. A ridiculously small sum when you think of the work involved and the extraordinary popularity of his material. But he puts an average of twenty thousand dollars into the making of each black and white feature and his Silly Symphonies in color cost over thirty thousand each and when you realize that he must produce two features each month—well, figure it out yourself—and don't forget to include the facts of operating cost of the studio, his staff salaries, etc.

By the end of next year he will begin to reap the harvest of many years' hard struggling and infinite faith in his products, but I doubt that Disney will ever be classed with the prodigal spenders of the California coast, for the fundamental traits of his character offset any such possibility.

He was born in Chicago in 1901. He went to school there, and having shown from boyhood a natural propensity for drawing, he entered the Chicago Art Institute to develop this talent. The World War came along and he was sent to Europe to drive an ambulance for a year and then came the Armistice. When he returned to America, he headed for Kansas City, bought himself a camera and for a time tried to earn a living taking newsreels. But there isn't enough excitement in Kansas City to support an independent newsreel man and Disney took a job with a store selling supplies to farmers. He drew advertisements of contented cows dreamily chewing their cuds over the delectable taste of some new brand of salt, or wild-eyed hens regarding the stupendous result in their egg-laying from being fed some new kind of grain. The young artist got about ten dollars a week for his work and incidentally laid the foundation of his future success in acquiring a thorough familiarity with barn-yard inhabitants.

HE was, and still is, an inveterate movie fan. He drew some animated cartoons of Kansas City celebrities and sold the idea to a local movie



"But Doctor.. I CAN'T LIVE ON RAW TURNIPS . . . EVEN IF IT WOULD MAKE MY TEETH BEAUTIFUL"

Poor Miss D! When the doctor told her about the beautiful teeth many uncivilized races had . . . she thought he was prescribing their diet for her. How delighted she was to find that she could get better mouth health and sturdy, clean teeth — by chewing Dentyne Gum.

For Dentyne is a delicious gum, with a marvelous flavor. It is the favorite everyday chewing gum of millions who chew it just for pleasure.

The special consistency of Dentyne means vigorous, thorough chewing . . . and this chewing exercises the mouth and makes it clean itself automatically, just as nature intended. It is the lack of this hard, vigorous chewing that makes our teeth decay, in spite of all our care. Read this report based on famous doctors' writings:

Chewing certain tough substances every day is absolutely essential to the health of teeth, gums, jaws, and mouth . . .

. . . to help develop the mouth structure to normal size and shape;

. . . to improve the condition of the tooth sockets and teeth;

. . . to help keep the mouth and gums healthy by insuring a proper supply of blood to all tissues;

. . . to help keep the mouth and teeth clean through an increased flow of saliva.

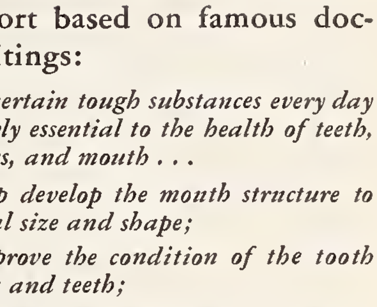
Dentyne Gum is made with a special consistency to give your mouth the exercise necessary to bring about these healthful results.

So chew Dentyne . . . enjoy its delightful flavor, its firm chewiness. Try it today and you will want to chew it every day. It is a delicious chewing gum.

Chew delicious

Dentyne

KEEPS THE MOUTH HEALTHY . KEEPS TEETH WHITE



Very few girls are Born with Curly Lashes!

NO HEAT
NO COSMETICS
NO PRACTICING

NOBODY . . . ever or ever . . . liked having straight lashes. (What is it about that slow, upward sweep that's so devastating?) But up to now, there hasn't been much choice about it. Now there is a Way. Kurlash . . . a new, improved Kurlash. Kurlash is that ingenious little gadget that takes your straight lashes and turns them out divinely curled . . . and instantly! It isn't a cosmetic, and you don't use heat. Slip your lashes in, press the Kurlash handle, and that's all there is to it. It costs $1, and if it isn't at your favorite department store, drug store, or beauty shop, we'll send it direct.

Kurlash

The Kurlash Company, Rochester, New York
The Kurlash Company of Canada, at Toronto 3

END FRECKLES AND BLACKHEADS, QUICK

Apply Tonight
Clearer Tomorrow

No matter how dull and dark your complexion; how freckled and coarsened by sun and wind, tested and trusted Nadinola Bleaching Cream will whiten, clear and smooth your skin to new beauty the quickest, easiest way. Just apply tonight; no massaging, no rubbing; Nadinola begins its beautifying work while you sleep. Then you see day-by-day improvement until your complexion is all you long for: creamy white, satin-smooth, lovely. No disappointments; no long waiting; money back guarantee in every package. At toilet counters, or by mail, postpaid, only 50c. Nadinola, Box M, Paris, Tenn. Generous 10c sizes of Nadinola Beauty aids at many 5c and 10c stores.

Nadinola Bleaching Cream

producer. Flushed with the windfall handed him by the producer and thoroughly convinced that nobody as yet had done a thing with the real possibilities of the animated cartoon, Disney formed a small company and began to make movies with pen and ink drawings for the artists.

He produced quaint little shorts of Jack the Giant Killer, Jack and the Bean-stalk and other fairy tales and released them. But the sophisticated boys and girls of ten years ago treated these short features with open scorn and the clamor Disney had hoped for came, but not the kind he had expected. Soon the little company was bankrupt. But Disney had not lost faith.

With about forty dollars saved from the wreck, Disney left for Hollywood, determined to wheedle some motion picture producer into letting him make a niche for the animated cartoon features. His brother Roy Disney, who is now general manager of the Disney corporation, thoroughly believed in Walter's idea, and when every producer in town had turned Walt down, he offered his little capital and with about five hundred dollars between them, they began to make movie shorts on what was known as "Poverty Row."

The "Alice" cartoons were the beginning of the Disney single reel pictures. It showed a small girl playing with fairies. He had to make thousands of drawings for the short feature and he literally slaved in his efforts to put Alice over, doing every bit of the work himself. He admits that she was "pretty terrible" and as soon as he could, he chased her back into fairyland.

But the idea of the animated cartoon had caught on and Disney next produced a new character known as "Oswald the Cat." Oswald was something of a success. He enabled the brothers Disney to save about fifteen hundred dollars, but trouble was brewing between Oswald's creator and the company releasing him to the theatres. And along came Mickey Mouse into existence.

"I can't say just how the idea started," said Disney. "We wanted another animal. We had had a cat. I suppose a mouse just naturally came to mind. I think we are rather indebted to Clark likes them dark, too. That is—er—of course, as co-stars. And we don't blame him because Claudette is one dark-eyed, dark-haired lass whom we all like. Clark and Claudette are doing "Night of Love" together for Columbia.

Charlie Chaplin for the idea—that, and the fact that we knew the public, particularly kids, liked animals that are cute and small. We wanted something as appealing and wistful as Charlie and we thought of a tiny bit of a mouse, a little fellow trying to do the best he could and getting into difficulties through no fault of his own."

BUT Mickey had a tough battle ahead. No producer thought he was good enough to tie their money to his now-famous tail and Disney made two pictures, using up most of his small capital and getting little or nothing in return. With the advent of sound, however, things began to turn, and when producers watched the hitherto-despised little mouse toot on a flute and heard him sing and saw him dance in perfect rhythm and harmony with a chorus of assorted animals behind him, they fell over each other trying to grab him. Up until two years ago, Mickey was released through Columbia Pictures. Now he heads in importance the glittering galaxy of United Artists Corporation.

When you walk into the Mickey Mouse Studio in Hollywood, after having seen the large electrical figure of the famous star above the building, and just inside his own coat of arms with the words "Ickmay Ousemay," you immediately realize that you have entered a movie work-shop unlike any other studio in the city. The first thing that strikes you is the absence of all that usual hush and pompous air of formality so noticeable in the other studios. You see a busy mob, numbering about two hundred, milling around and working with a cheerful clatter that makes you think you're in the city room of some big daily newspaper. Then you notice that all of these whistling, humming, talking, laughing crowd are very young. The average age seems about twenty-five.

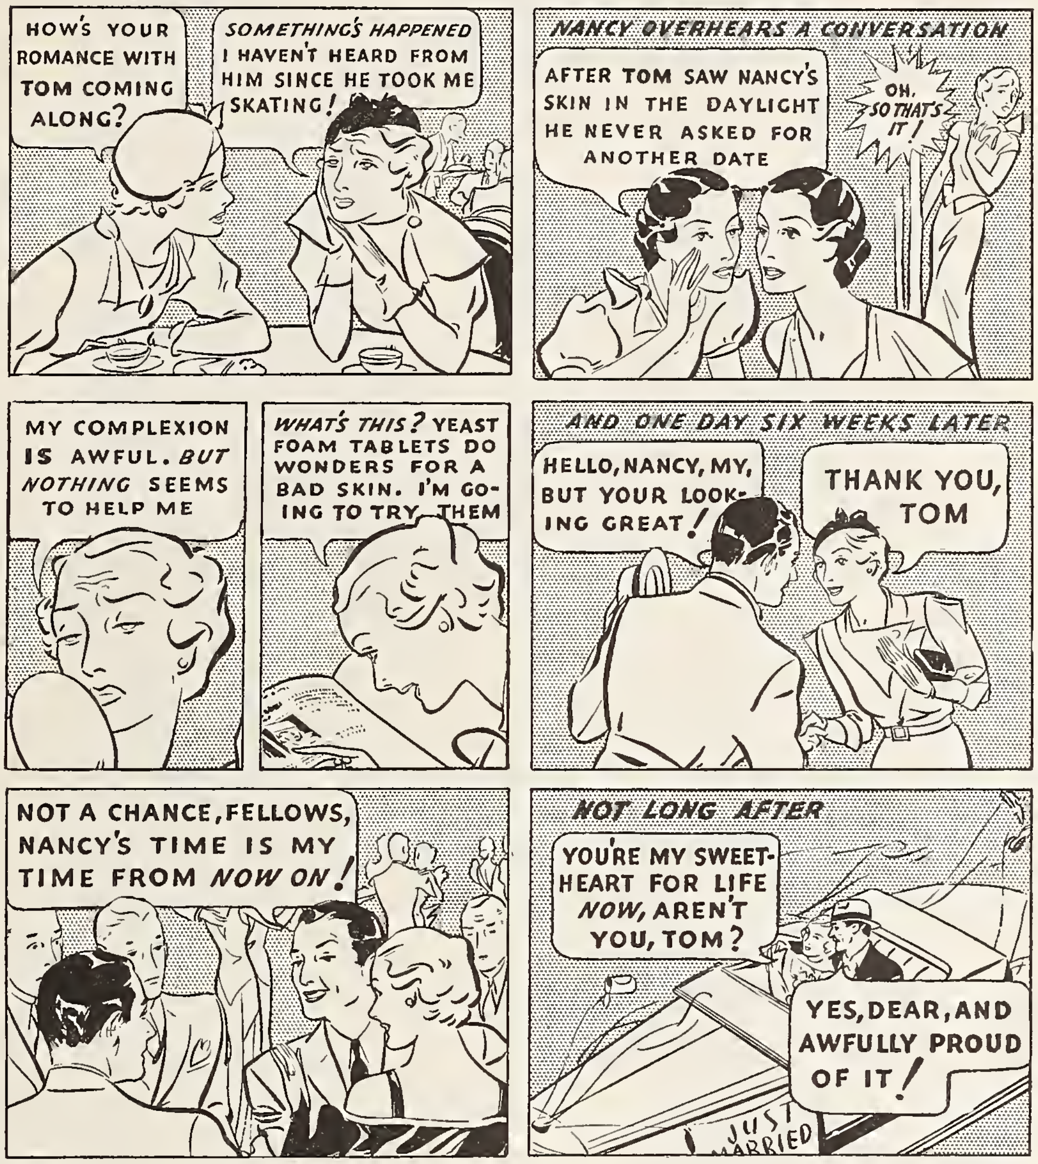
They all look alike, they all call each other by nicknames. They all dress alike, somewhat negligently if you consider the buttoned-up, be-spatted exquisites of the other motion picture studios. But they look so comfortable and jolly and as if they were all having a grand time making fun out of work.

Suddenly you hear one of them yell "Walt" and you look around quickly, because you are anxious to see what the father of Mickey Mouse and Silly Symphonies looks like. If you hadn't known that his name was Walt, you would never have picked him out from any of the others. You are actually seeing Mickey in the flesh. He is about five feet eight inches tall, slim and with brown hair and eyes. He looks shy and interesting. He wears a shirt open at the collar and a shaggy wool sweater. He walks with energetic steps and you can sense a dynamic fund of restrained energy in his body as he moves. His eyes reveal a deep sense of humor.

He slips an arm around the bent shoulders of a draftsman who is working on his board. The two exchange ideas freely. "Okay, Walt!"

"Well, Charlie, if you think that can be done—go right ahead." Somebody

How Beauty and Romance Came to Nancy



HOW'S YOUR ROMANCE WITH TOM COMING ALONG?
SOMETHING'S HAPPENED I HAVEN'T HEARD FROM HIM SINCE HE TOOK ME SKATING!
NANCY OVERHEARS A CONVERSATION
AFTER TOM SAW NANCY'S SKIN IN THE DAYLIGHT HE NEVER ASKED FOR ANOTHER DATE
OH, SO THAT'S IT!
MY COMPLEXION IS AWFUL. BUT NOTHING SEEMS TO HELP ME
WHAT'S THIS? YEAST FOAM TABLETS DO WONDERS FOR A BAD SKIN. I'M GOING TO TRY THEM AND ONE DAY SIX WEEKS LATER
HELLO, NANCY, MY, BUT YOUR LOOKING GREAT!
THANK YOU, TOM
NOT A CHANCE, FELLOWS, NANCY'S TIME IS MY TIME FROM NOW ON!
NOT LONG AFTER
YOU'RE MY SWEETHEART FOR LIFE NOW, AREN'T YOU, TOM?
YES, DEAR, AND AWFULLY PROUD OF IT!
JUST MARRIED

WHAT YEAST FOAM TABLETS did for Nancy's skin, they should do for yours. A muddy, blotchy, unattractive complexion is usually caused by faulty elimination or a nervous, run-down condition. Your trouble is internal and requires internal treatment. That is just what YEAST FOAM TABLETS provide.

YEAST FOAM TABLETS contain rich stores of vitamins B and G which strengthen your digestive and intestinal organs, which give tone and vigor to your nervous system. With the true causes of your trouble corrected, eruptions and blemishes vanish. Your skin becomes clear and smooth. Indigestion, constipation, lack of pep and nervousness all go. You enjoy new health, and new beauty.

Don't confuse YEAST FOAM TABLETS with ordinary raw yeast. YEAST FOAM TABLETS have a rich, appetizing, nut-like flavor. And they cannot cause fermentation in the body because they are scientifically pasteurized. Many leading American universities and various laboratories of the United States government use this new-type yeast in their vitamin research.

Any druggist will supply you with YEAST FOAM TABLETS. The 10-day bottle costs 50c—only a few cents a day. Get a bottle today.

YEAST FOAM TABLETS
YEAST

YEAST FOAM TABLETS

NORTHWESTERN YEAST CO. MM3
1750 North Ashland Avenue, Chicago, Ill.
Please send free sample of YEAST FOAM TABLETS and descriptive circular.

Name

Address

City State

Itching Rash Quickly Relieved

"For more than a month", writes one woman, "I had a rash on my hand which was something like ringworm. I tried various treatments, but it resisted them all. At last I started to use Resinol Ointment, and was amazed when a small amount healed my trouble nicely."

Does your skin annoy or embarrass you? Does it itch so that at times you can't resist scratching, no matter where you are? Does it get chafed or rough, then burn and smart unbearably? Is it pimply?

Here is the way to get real relief. Bathe the affected parts with Resinol Soap and warm water. Pat dry, and freely apply soothing Resinol Ointment to the irritated spots. See how quickly the discomfort is relieved. Remember, Resinol Ointment is safe for any part of the body. Physicians have recommended it for thirty-five years.

Resinol Soap thoroughly cleanses the skin without drying or injuring its delicate texture. Use it daily—it helps to prevent clogged pores, blackheads and pimples.

Get Resinol Ointment and Soap from your druggist today—use them at the first sign of skin irritation, and watch the improvement.

For a free sample of each with skin treatment instructions, write Resinol, Dept. 1-E, Baltimore, Md.

Resinol

Blondes

why be blind?

Don't shut your eyes to the fact that blonde hair requires special care. Its texture is so delicate that ordinary shampoo methods may cause it to fade, streak or darken.

Yet now it's easy to keep blonde hair always lovely. For there is a wonderful shampoo, called Blondex, especially made for blonde hair only, that will bring out all its rich, golden beauty. Helps keep light hair from darkening. Brings back the true golden sparkle to dull, dark, faded and streaked blonde hair. Not a dye. No harmful chemicals. Leaves hair soft, fluffy, silky. Used by millions of blondes.

FREE—TRIAL PACKAGE

To get a generous trial package of Blondex entirely free, just send your name and address to Swedish Shampoo Laboratories, Dept. 103, 27 West 20th St., New York City. Or you can buy Blondex at any good drug or department store—either the economical $1.00 bottle or inexpensive 25c size.

NRA

else shouts and he is hurrying to answer a call from the sound room. In the room where you are standing there are about fifty draftsmen, each busily making some particular set of drawings utilizing his own peculiar talent.

To take the procedure in its proper sequence. First of all there is the story conference, just as there is in any other studio. About twenty-five members of the staff and Walt get together and decide on the plot. After the story is written, the gags are carefully and thoroughly planned. Although these are not recorded until the picture is actually made, they must be taken care of along with the story writing so that the action of the animals' mouths will synchronize with the words and songs as they are uttered in the picture.

Then the artists get busy. Each has his definite part of the picture to draw. Disney makes all assignments, as he knows that this one can draw better animals, that one better scenery, another better boats, automobiles, etc. Often it takes fifty drawings to show Mickey open and close his mouth. As you all must know, the smoothness and success of an animated cartoon depends upon the number of drawings. That is why sometimes as many as twenty thousand drawings are made for one of these shorts, which even at that run about seven hundred feet in length and the average single reel feature runs to a thousand feet in length. You can imagine, somewhat, the amount of work necessary for a Disney feature.

When you see Mickey's pal, "Pluto," galloping off down the road, you scarcely realize that the faster he runs, the more drawings necessary.

The artists all use a light-weight, semi-transparent drawing paper. The work on illuminated boards, necessary because after one drawing is made the second piece of paper is placed right on top of it so that the artist can vary his drawing just enough to make the movement—say of Mickey wagging his tail—smooth. After the drawings have been assigned, the entire action of the characters is acted, and boy, do they have fun! Can you imagine Disney, who always speaks for Mickey Mouse himself and usually acts his rôle, together with several of the others, taking the parts of Minnie, Pluto, Horse-collar Horace, Clarabelle Cow, and any of the other animals, going through the antics assigned to their rôles so that the draftsmen may get the proper action down on their drawing-boards? Each animal has his own artist.

Every detail is thought out to perfection. When you see a Silly Symphony on the screen, the rapidity of the action makes you feel that the thing has been dashed off in a tremendous hurry. That's just exactly the effect on your minds Disney strives for. Spontaneity! But in order to get it, his research work is as involved and thorough as that of a great scientist. He never puts an animal into an embarrassing situation. He knows how many legs a caterpillar has and how he uses them. When a spider weaves a web on the screen, he is absolutely faithful in his movements to his brother in a field. Does a bat drink water? Disney knows. Trees and flowers bend and dip with the grace of a Pavlova; a cabbage may weep with the same wistful tenderness as Lillian Gish, but when a centipede walks, he does so properly. A blue jay never waddles nor does a duck hop. And when you see a crow on the screen walking sedately across the set, you know that he does so in real life.

DISNEY has one inviolable rule around his studio. No living thing can be killed on the place. Not even a fly. And often he can be found in an undignified position, sprawled on the floor and deeply engrossed in watching the movements of a beetle that has strayed into the studio. He spends hours, armed with a miniature motion picture camera, in the various zoos and parks of Los Angeles. He is thrilled when he gets a shot of animals that are unknown to the public. He shows his pictures to the staff at the studio and then they are drawn for the animal characters in the Symphonies. The research is also a strict necessity to the musical staff in order that they may arrange the proper musical accompaniment for the movements of the animals.

"Sometimes we write our musical score to fit the picture and at other times we create the picture to fit the music," Disney explains in the construction of a cartoon. "It all depends upon whether we get the idea for the story or the music first. The perfect rhythm we have in our pictures is a result of coordinating two mechanical forces, drawing and music, without the disturbing human element influence."

"If a man worked alone, it would take him about two years to turn out a Mickey Mouse reel," he continues. "In the studio, it takes about two weeks for a force of one hundred and fifty men and women to complete a feature. We alternate between the Mickey Mouse and the Silly Symphony cartoons, producing one of each every month."

The music and dialogue are made on one sound track and not the least amusing and interesting phase that goes into the making of the Disney shorts is the watching of the actions in the recording room. A symphony orchestra is ready for action and a number of men, handling all sorts of weird contraptions that are used in making the sound effects, stand by. That is how the sudden popping of machine guns coming from a flock of birds flying in perfect aviation formation in the sky is heard so realistically from the screen, or the whistling of a steam engine from a cow who has suddenly turned into a locomotive, or any of the other utterly fantastic but strangely plausible sounds that are used in the Mickey Mouse features are made.

It is delightful to know that he is entirely unspoiled. He is simple—like all the really great—and reserved. He has been living in Hollywood for several years and it has been only lately that he has begun to cultivate the friendship of one or two film stars like Will Rogers and Leslie Howard. He met Charlie Chaplin for the first time at the Chicago Fair and this encounter thrilled him as it would a child.

Have the Right Background in Your Home

(Continued from page 71)

a throne chair in a room that has no feeling of action. Marble, highly polished wood panels, very high, narrow windows and hidden light fixtures. Chastely geometrical furniture. Yes, and there would be dark wine-colored hangings and deep blues with gold."

THE secret lies in dramatizing yourself in your home. It may be the simplest place in the suburbs, but you can make it a man's castle. Your castle.

If you've been pretty dissatisfied with things as they are, if you've been wondering what changes to make and how to make them at little cost, listen to what Pogany prescribes.

First, he suggests that you remove all the lamps and knick-knacks from the room in order to get a clear perspective of it.

Now study your four main areas—your floor, walls, upholstery and draperies. In order to get balance, two of them should be plain and the other two figured. For example, if your floors and walls are plain they will not only make your room look twice as large, but they'll emphasize the pattern of your hangings and overstuffed pieces.

"A good many nervous breakdowns could be attributed to living in too motley surroundings," said Pogany. "After all, what you want in a home primarily is rest and comfort. You won't find that in a combination of decorated walls, rugs with bright designs and boldly figured furniture! The thing to work for is casualness, a human touch. The more squarely you place your pieces around the wall, the less human they become.

"No, what you want to do is adjust everything so that it seems to beckon invitingly to anyone in the entrance. The sofa should be spotted against the longest unbroken wall space; flat against it. If possible have it face the door in a sort of wide-armed welcome. Or if your fireplace is the chief feature of the room the sofa might be placed at right angles to it with a couple of cozy chairs opposite and a coffee table between.

"Most people instinctively place upright pianos correctly—right against the wall where they belong. But a grand piano is more difficult. The best way is to have it straight with the wall and with the curved side fronting the room. The bench should be in the corner so the pianist faces his audience.

"If you have a lot of little things for which you simply must find place in the living-room, by all means keep your walls dark. Arrange your large pieces, especially if you're limited for space, so that they melt into the background. The sofa, for example, might be covered in a brown-black satin. You could make translucent taffeta shades for your lamps, of pale green, lemon-yellow and gray-pink as delicate color accents against violet-brown walls. Incidentally, this makes a superb setting for

The Smartest Women Use
FAOEN BEAUTY AIDS

—yet they cost
ONLY 10¢

The sweeping success of Faoen Beauty Aids is a tribute to the buying wisdom of American women. No longer do they consider it necessary to pay $1 or more for the finest beauty aids. They know that Faoen gives them similar quality for only 10¢. Here is the report of a famous Research Laboratory that has convinced thousands:

> "Every Faoen product tested is as pure and fine as products of like nature sold for $1, $2 and $3."

Your own trial of Faoen Beauty Aids will convince you that science has told the truth!

No. 37
A New FAOEN
Perfume Triumph!
This is an exact duplicate in fragrance of a popular and expensive imported perfume. You will marvel at this new perfume masterpiece —and its price of only 10¢.

● CLEANSING CREAM • COLD CREAM
FACE POWDER • ROUGES • PERFUMES

PARK & TILFORD'S
FAOEN
(FAY-ON)
Beauty Aids

10¢ each at the better 5 & 10¢ Stores

blondes and vivid little brunettes.

IN rooms that are naturally dark, all the light, warm tones should be used exclusively. Cream with much yellow in it is most satisfactory. And do a little experimenting with touches of yellow, rose and orange. Gray and blue are bad, although they're charming where you have southern exposure with plenty of sunlight.

"I have in mind a clever young married woman of very moderate means who turned a tiny drab bungalow into a paradise. Various relatives had given her comfortable furniture, but nothing matched. There were chairs and a couch left over from the mulberry age, a red leather wing chair, a green footstool. She began the transformation by tinting the walls a rich golden tan and having hubby paint the mantel and woodwork ivory color. A carpet toning in with the walls, but three shades darker, made the room appear infinitely bigger. Then she selected a gayly patterned, inexpensive chintz. With this she covered the larger articles and balanced them with plain occasional chairs.

"Next came the problem of how to make the room seem higher. Curtains, she knew, would do this trick for her. By putting the poles several inches above the windows and concealing the space with a wide valance of the chintz, the ceiling appeared to be actually raised. With the arrangement she used long narrow side draperies of a green that blended with the figure in the chintz. And by the way, inexpensive cretonnes and chintzes may be made practically fadeless and more satisfactory by lining them with ivory colored sateen on the outside. Soft straight curtains of sheer beige material were used next to the glass.

"Ivy trailing down over the mantel, long mirrors at the end of the room, amusing old-fashioned oil lamps for side lights—all these added character and charm at very small cost.

"Where you can use them, white and green walls lend a silvery quality to the small dining-room and serve as a perfect foil for daintily flowered china. In this room it's color and freshness rather than intrinsic value which count. Unbleached muslin, hand-dyed or stenciled, can be used with the greatest effect."

Of course if you're a bachelor girl, Pogany points out, and want escape from humdrum office routine, the way to do it is to have an exciting home. Even if it's just a one-room kitchenette apartment. You can do it easily—have a place where you can dream and change personalities at the stroke of five-thirty. How?

Pogany suggests an unusual color scheme. Like black and white and red. Go bargain hunting until you find a marbleized linoleum in black and white squares. Have most of your furniture painted white and add black touches. A modernistic ebony ash receiver. A black rose jar. Make your own parchment lamp shades in white with a plaid border in the three colors. Attach a saucy plaid bow. Bind interesting little Japanese prints in red. Find one of those black velvet wall hangings with a beautiful señorita painted on it. Move in one deep red chair. Oh, the whole thing can be worked out with a bit of ingenuity, and what it will do to lift your spirits!

In fact, any time you feel that mad urge to "get away from it all," just try re-arranging your furniture and buying a picture or two. It saves travel money.

It's taken Ric a long time to make up his mind (he's been seen with a good many of the Hollywood gals) but he's quite sure about Christine Lee. Here they are at their engagement party at the swanky Russian Eagle.

LAST SPRING'S SHOES . . .

. . . . but you'd never guess it!

"I polish them once a week and they never get a bit shabby or worn. It's easy when you use . . .

Realshine SHOE POLISH

EVERY DROP A REAL SHINE

because Realshine penetrates the leather and covers all the scuffs and worn spots. It's wonderful!"

At your 5 & 10c store

10¢

REALSHINE CO. Inc.
Galveston, Texas

Realshine
TRADE MARK
WHITE
SHOE POLISH

Make Money at Home! Grow Mushrooms IN YOUR CELLAR OR SHED

Experience unnecessary, we tell you how. Big demand! Write for Mushroom Book free.
American Mushroom Industries, Ltd.
414 Woolnough Bldg., Toronto, Ont.
EARN up to $25 A WEEK or More

Hollywood Milk Bath

SURPASSING CLEOPATRA'S WILDEST DREAMS

For thousands of years milk has been used by famous beauties. Now . . . an amazing new scientific formula . . . HOLLYWOOD MILK BATH! Purest powdered milk, with other valuable ingredients added Exquisitely dainty! Instantly effective! Inexpensive . . . convenient. NOT IN THE LEAST LIKE ANYTHING YOU'VE EVER SEEN BEFORE. A milk bath more luxurious by far than those relied upon by Lillian Russell and Anna Held. May be used as a hand and face lotion. Ideal as a powder base.

A $1 FACIAL FOR 2c

Makes the loveliest pack . . . mixed in the palm of the hand. Every needed beauty aid, all in one attractive container. Only a trial can possibly tell you how wonderful HOLLYWOOD MILK BATH really is. What miracles it will perform for your skin. So we've arranged for you to test it, at the cost of just a few cents. Act Today!

SEND this coupon and 10c (to help pay cost of packing and mailing) for generous sample . . . enough for one bath and a face pack. Or $1 for full size package in a lovely metal container postpaid. HOLLYWOOD BEAUTY PRODUCTS, INC., 5176 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood, Calif.

The Modern Hostess

(Continued from page 8)

Bread Pudding. We must admit it doesn't taste much like the bread pudding you usually get. It's creamy and smooth and when served with a velvety sauce it is positively delicious.

ANOTHER thing which the hostess must guard against is serving too many courses. Three courses, or at most four, are ample. Here are a couple of menus which exemplify what we mean for they not only can be prepared in advance and require little or no last minute attention but they also won't spoil if dinner is late, can be served with but little effort, and will result in a minimum of dishes to be washed after the guests have gone home:

Corn and Tomato Bisque
Baked Hawaiian Ham & Sweet Potatoes
Cabbage au Gratin
Celery Olives
Hot Banana Cake with Whipped Cream
Coffee

Shrimp Cocktail
Veal and Mushroom Pie
Escalloped Vegetables
Baked Stuffed Potatoes on Half Shell
Chocolate Bread Pudding
Velvet Sauce
Coffee

In the first menu you will notice that the soup is something you have probably never tasted—we never had until Dick mentioned it to us—but since then we have served it on every possible occasion and we are always careful to save a bowlful for lunch the next day. But don't smile at our saving some for our own special delectation until you have made the soup yourself; then see if you don't do likewise. Here is the recipe:

CORN AND TOMATO BISQUE
2 cups milk
1 cup canned corn
2 tablespoons flour
¼ cup cold water
1 cup canned tomatoes
1 bayleaf
3 whole cloves
2 teaspoons sugar
½ teaspoon salt
a few grains pepper
2 tablespoons butter
¼ teaspoon baking soda

Add corn to milk and scald in top of double boiler. Mix flour and water to a smooth paste and add to milk and corn mixture. Stir until thickened. Cover and cook over boiling water fifteen minutes. Meanwhile cook together the tomatoes, cloves, bayleaf, sugar, salt and pepper. Rub through a sieve, reheat and add butter. When butter has melted add the soda and stir slowly into the milk and corn mixture. If it is necessary to reheat, do so in double boiler.

◆ ◆ ◆ HE MADE AN AMAZING DISCOVERY

• Life had been cruel enough when the woman he loved married another man. But then he discovered that still another husband, the man she thought dead, stood in his way!

• That's the first startling situation you meet as you begin Maysie Greig's potent new novel, "Chains of Desire." This fascinating writer, made famous overnight by her splendid story-telling ability, begins the latest of her unusual romances in February 20th SWEETHEART STORIES.

• The editor calls it "One of the best novels it has ever been our fortune to publish." Convince yourself with the first installment. Get the February 20th

Sweetheart Stories
. . . For sale everywhere . . . 10 cents . . .

SORE TOES
Instantly, Safely Relieved!

Also sizes for CALLOUSES
BUNIONS
CORNS
SORE HEELS
SORE INSTEP

Puts You at Ease in New or Tight Shoes

You will have joyful relief in ONE MINUTE with Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads. These thin, soothing, healing, protective pads stop the cause of these foot-troubles—shoe friction and pressure and prevent corns, sore toes, blisters, chafed heels and irritated insteps from new or tight shoes. Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads also painlessly loosen and remove corns and callouses when used with the separate Medicated Disks, included for that purpose. Double value now at no extra cost! Get a box at your dealer's today!

Dr Scholl's Zino-pads
PUT ONE ON—THE PAIN IS GONE!

HAVE YOU OTHER FOOT TROUBLES?
Dr. Scholl has formulated and perfected a Remedy or Appliance for every foot trouble—guaranteed to give relief. Ask your dealer. Write for valuable booklet on FOOT CARE to Dr. Scholl's, Dept. 50 W. Schiller St., Chicago.

New! Engel Pocket Art Corners
ACTUAL SIZE
The real thing for mounting Snapshots, Cards, Stamps, etc. No paste needed. Neat, easy to use for mounting prints tight or loose. Sold at photo supply and album counters or send 10¢ today for pkg. of 100 and free samples.
10¢ BUYS 100
Engel Art Corners Co., Chicago, Ill.,
Address Dept. 63C - 4717 North Clark St.

ANY PHOTO ENLARGED
Size 8x10 inches or smaller if desired. Same price for full length or bust form, groups, landscapes, pet animals, etc., or enlargements of any part of group picture. Safe return of original photo guaranteed.
47c
SEND NO MONEY Just mail photo or snapshot (any size) and within a week you will receive your beautiful life-like enlargement, guaranteed fadeless. Pay postman 47c plus postage—or send 49c with order and we pay postage. Big 16x20-inch enlargement sent C. O. D. 78c plus postage or send 80c and we pay postage. Take advantage of this amazing offer now. Send your photos today. Specify size wanted.
STANDARD ART STUDIOS
908 West Lake Street, Dept. 1324-C, CHICAGO, ILL.

VI-JON CREAMS
The Secret of a smooth, soft, ever-youthful skin—VI-JON CREAMS. Quality and quantity for 10c.

VI-JON COLD CREAM
VI-JON VANISHING CREAM
VI-JON LIQUEFYING CREAM
•
At 5 AND 10 CENT STORES
R-10
VI-JON LABORATORIES . . . ST. LOUIS

THE Hawaiian Ham and Sweet Potato suggestion is one of Dick Powell's own inventions—that is, he says it is. According to Dick he thought up that combination one morning while he was shaving and suggested it to a young hostess he knows. But we don't believe it—why it would take months and months of thoughtful contemplation to think up that miraculous dish. But Dick didn't tell us any more about its origin than the obviously false statement listed above. However, now that we have made it and eaten it, we really don't care where he discovered it. Here's the recipe:

BAKED HAWAIIAN HAM AND SWEET POTATOES

Place an inch thick slice of ham in a greased baking dish. Sprinkle lightly with ground cloves and dry mustard and cover with brown sugar. Parboil sweet potatoes 10 minutes in boiling salted water, cut in halves lengthwise, brush with melted butter and arrange around the ham. Place slices of canned pineapple on the potatoes and pour pineapple juice over all. The juice should be about ½ inch deep in the pan. Cover and place in a moderate over (375°) and bake 45 minutes. Uncover and continue baking ¾ hour longer, and basting occasionally.

We wish we could give you the recipe for that Banana Cake right now (the one that is suggested as dessert in the first menu) but we haven't room so we have had to include it in this month's recipe folder. If you want to have a typical Dick Powell dinner for your family or friends, fill in the coupon on page 8 right away and send it to us. Besides the recipe for the Banana Cake (which is like nothing we have ever tasted), you will get the recipe for the Veal and Mushroom Pie, including a description of the way to make the Bread Crust which is as delicious as it is unusual. There are also recipes for the Escalloped Vegetables and the Chocolate Pudding with Velvet Sauce. That array ought to be enough to make you reach for your pencil, fill in the dotted lines in our little coupon and get it off in the mail right away!

By the way, if you've been too busy to ask us to send you last month's recipes — Dick Cromwell's — or even those for the previous month—William Gargan's — let us know. Besides DEVILLED CRABMEAT, Dick had some excellent sandwich ideas, especially good with cocktails. And William Gargan's QUICK CHILE CON CARNE recipe would put a Mexican to shame.

Johnny Mack Brown has a new tennis court. And he invited everybody to the "opening." The Fredric Marches have just played a set.

What You Can Learn from Aline MacMahon

(Continued from page 62)

But this opening night had not lived up to that tradition. It had merely been quiet and successful and fallen a little flat as most realized dreams must, since our dreams are generally bigger than we are.

I SPOKE of the ladder and the slipperiness of the rungs, the difficulty of staying on each round and of climbing to the next. But Miss MacMahon did not agree with me. She does not believe that one should be as concerned with the round above as with the round one has reached. And the point of the climb, she feels, is to make each step as good a step as possible. She does not admit that anyone should grow stale or dated. The world is altering rapidly and one must alter with it. It is an exciting world, she believes. Something happens in it every minute and there is a veiled future with no guide posts. That is, to my way of thinking, a rather courageous way of looking at life.

On the day we met, the evening would see the opening of her picture, "The World Changes." She did not appear nervous or in doubt. She said merely that she hoped people would like it, that she had enjoyed her part and had been painstaking in her search for detail and had even collected old advertisements of that period in order to steep herself in the proper color.

Aline MacMahon likes to play real women, old or young. She has no vanity about such matters. She told me that when she was playing her lovely role in "The Silver Dollar," she studied the diaries of the original woman after whom the screen character was faithfully drawn.

I want you to look at her with me in some of her parts. Remember the slightly world-weary, very wise, rather sardonic woman in "Once in a Lifetime"? Remember the hard-boiled but sympathetic, brisk and competent nurse in "Life Begins"? Recall the efficient, hard-working wife in "The Silver Dollar" who was deserted for the younger woman and whose affection for her husband endured without mawkishness over the period of time which elapsed between her middle years and old age. And of course you recall her in "Gold Diggers," a grand yet entirely different part? What I am trying to say is this. It would be a pity if they ever "type" Aline MacMahon. She is far too good an actress. Notice, when you see her, that no matter what the part, she is always sympathetic; she always holds her audience. She gets under the skin of her role and stays there. She is the person she depicts.

ALINE MACMAHON grew up in a family that was interested in life. Her steady climb to fame had not been the result of circumstance, but Take Care.. Colds-Susceptible!

An eminent physician states that of the 60,000 preventable deaths yearly in the U. S., many are due to neglect in treating the common cold. It is vitally important, therefore, that colds be kept under control.

In thousands of clinical tests, under medical supervision, Vicks Plan for better Control of Colds has greatly reduced the number and duration of colds—has cut their dangers and expense. The Plan provides proper care and medication, at the proper time and place, for different types and stages of colds. (Full details in each Vicks package.)

When Colds THREATEN . . . VICKS NOSE DROPS

Heed that first warning sneeze, sniffle or nasal irritation. Quick! . . . Apply the new aid in preventing colds, Vicks Nose & Throat Drops. Gently, they stimulate the functions which Nature has provided—in the nose—to throw off threatening infection.

If a Cold STRIKES . . . VICKS VAPORUB

If a cold has developed, massage throat and chest at bedtime with VapoRub. Acting through the skin, like a poultice, VapoRub "draws out" tightness and soreness. All night long, too, its medicated vapors carry soothing relief direct to irritated air-passages.

VICKS PLAN FOR BETTER CONTROL OF COLDS

Free! HOW TO Crochet LAMP SHADES

Make lamp shades, rugs, runners, cushions, hats, bags, belts, jackets, collars, cuffs...also other attractive articles for home and personal wear. Make them of colorful Dennison Crepe, the most effective, least expensive, craft material. Illustrated instructions for all are FREE! Send for "Things to Make".

DENNISON'S
Dept. Q-192 Framingham, Mass.

Dennison Crepe

FREE LESSON HomeArtCrafts

GOOD MONEY FOR SPARE TIME

A new easy way. Art novelties in big demand. Get free lesson and quickly learn to decorate Gifts, Bridge Prizes, Toys, etc. No experience necessary. Anyone can succeed with simple "3-step" method and you earn as you learn. Everything furnished including supply of novelties for you to decorate and Homecrafters Outfit.

NO CANVASSING

Just sit at home and make up to $50 a week spare time or full. Write today for big illustrated book and FIRST LESSON FREE. Absolutely not one cent to pay. Lesson is free. Openings in every locality. Write quick.

FIRESIDE INDUSTRIES
Dept. 147-C, Adrian, Mich.

Be Irresistible

USE

Irresistible

PARFUM

ACTUAL TEN CENT SIZE

OBTAINABLE AT YOUR FIVE AND TEN CENT STORE

JOUBERT • PARFUMEUR

FIFTH AVENUE • NEW YORK

Tan and Colored Shoes Easily Polished

WITH Color-Shine Neutral Color-Creme it is quick and easy. Wonderful results. Cleans, polishes, softens. 12 kinds of ColorShine for all colors, black, white; kid, suede, cloth shoes. Only 10c at 10c stores. In bottles or tubes. Easy and economical.

10¢ AT TEN CENT STORES

CHIEFTAIN MFG. CO.
BALTIMORE, MD.

the reward of hard, unremitting work and talent. Not the breaks, but work has put her where she is and will keep her there, growing steadily for years to come. That's what interests her most—growth. She doesn't want to stand still and she believes that resting on one's laurels must be uncomfortable. Laurels fade and one must renew them.

I left her stepping out briskly to do some shopping and apparently unconcerned with the fact that, a little later there would be a big opening with all its hullabaloo and fanfare. I imagine she accepts these things as part of the game but that they mean a great deal less to her than the game itself, which she plays with everything in her and a strict attention to the rules of fair play, sportsmanship and an attention to goals.

If you met Aline MacMahon, you would profit by it. Her mind is firmly knit—no knots and loose ends, dropped stitches or ravelings. She said that she felt the best advice you can give to anyone is to tell them to make up their minds what they want to do and then do it. Because a person, however talented, pulled this way and that by varying ambition is bound to be disseminated, torn into a thousand pieces and can never really succeed in anything.

I don't believe for a moment that you can sit down and dream of being a great actress or a great anything, even if you work toward it and have your dream realized, unless you have the talent. Dreams can't create the gift. But if you are born with that gift, work to develop it, and are pretty clear about where you're going, you will succeed as Aline MacMahon has.

A scene from "Viva Villa," the picture made over because of the Lee Tracy ructions. Here are Wallace Beery, Kate DeMille and Stu Erwin.

The Career of an Ugly Duckling

(Continued from page 34)

remark—"I could act that part better than you can. And the friend would answer, "I know you could, Katie—none of us can touch you as an actress—but what can we do? They want me to do it just because I happen to have blue eyes and yellow hair—and a pretty face—not because I know anything about acting. Why, you could act rings around the whole lot of us."

But the words failed to comfort the beating young heart and Katie would stand with dilated nostrils, head high to show her bravado in the face of bitter disappointment and perhaps she would answer briefly but emphatically, "Some day—I'll show them! Every damn one of 'em! And will they be sorry they wouldn't let me play in their rotten show!"

It was through these girlish disappointments—this unconscious ostracism of thoughtless friends, that the deep-rooted determination to succeed with the talent that she knew she possessed, took root. The heartbreaks one has at sixteen are just as severe and lasting as the bitter trials of older years, and I can think of no more poignant picture than the slim form of Hepburn watching wistfully from the home-made wings of a small town stage, her girl friends marching off with the honors of the evening—and receiving that priceless reward of applause from her townsmen seated around the hall. And knowing in her heart—that her own ability was so superior to theirs!

You know the Katharine Hepburn the world sees today. But do you know the real girl—and do you know how she overcame her many and peculiarly individual handicaps? In the second—and final—installment you will see how the Ugly Duckling Became a Beautiful Swan. And you will end up knowing and loving Katharine Hepburn as a real girl—instead of criticizing her for a publicity-crazy movie actress!

Mad as a Marx

(Continued from page 31)

demanded, picking up an empty wastebasket and putting it on his head for a hat. "I was never more serious.

"If I ask you less personal questions, will you answer them sensibly?"

"Sure."

"All right," I said, beginning for the third time, "what do you want most in the world?"

Bob jumped up and clapped one hand to his heart. "You're not proposing?"

"Be serious, now. You promised you would."

"All right. State the question again, please, boy. I'm not so young as I used to be and I'm a bit hard of hearing."

"I said, what is your dearest ambition? What do you want to do most in life."

OH, Signor!" Bob cried, grabbing his hair and rocking his head back and forth. "Vot I want most iss to zing in de grant opera. You know de grant opera? Like Carus', like Leelee Pons, I want I should zing." He jumped up on top of a desk and began singing at the top of his lungs. "Oh Soo-loo Mi-oo, Oh Soo-loo Mi-oo——"

The windows rattled and I thought I was set to lose my hearing.

People in offices all down the hall began to yell, "Stop it! Kill it! Shut up!"

Polly Moran stuck her head in at the door. "In the name of——" she said. "What's going on in here? Who's hurt?"

"Hello, Polly," grinned Bob, standing on the desk.

"So it's you, is it?" she asked. "A Colorado soprano!"

"A colora*tura* soprano," he corrected.

"Whatever it is, I don't care for it," she said.

"That's because you don't have a musical ear. You don't appreciate the finer things of life," Bob informed her. "Come on. Get up on the desk and we'll have a quartette, just you and I, my love, my life, my light, my own!" He burst into song again, a mile and a half off key. "Because you're wonderful—you're marvelous—you're gawgeous and divine. And you are mine—and you are MINE!"

"Thank you," said Polly, dropping him a curtsey. "I mean, no, thank you.

"Shut your eyes and see if you can tell whether it's me or Kate Smith," Bob begged her.

"No, sir," repeated Polly. "I'm going right now. I'm going home to bed."

"Goodbye," Bob told her, climbing down off the desk. Turning back to me, he put on his best Lord Chumleigh Bottomley manner. "You must pawdon deah Miss Moran for interrupting our chat, Mister Bruce. She realleh has no manners, y'know. Now, where were we?"

"I don't exactly remember," I admitted. "Oh, yes—I was asking what your ambition was."

MAGIC!
THE MOST AMAZING SHORT-CUTS

World's Easiest Chocolate Frosting

Eagle Brand

MAGIC CHOCOLATE FROSTING

2 squares unsweetened chocolate
1⅓ cups (1 can) Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk
1 tablespoon water

Melt chocolate in double boiler. Add Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk. Stir over boiling water 5 minutes until it thickens. (Imagine! Takes only 5 minutes to thicken perfectly!) Add water. Cool cake before spreading frosting.

Only 5 minutes' cooking instead of 15! And it never fails! Never too thick nor too thin. Goes on in lovely rich swirls! But remember... Evaporated Milk won't—can't—succeed in this recipe. You must use Sweetened Condensed Milk. Just remember the name Eagle Brand.

FREE! "AMAZING SHORT-CUTS!"

Cut out that astonishing recipe above! Prove to yourself that it actually works. And here and now, mail this coupon, to learn a whole new kind of cooking!

The Borden Co., Dept. MM34, 350 Madison Ave., New York
Please send me FREE booklet, "Amazing Short-Cuts."

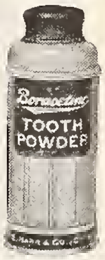
Name..
Street..
City.............................. State..............
(Print name and address plainly)

HESS does Miracles for my skin

Ends Chap Quickly (24)

If your skin chaps, begin using Hess Witch Hazel Cream. It stops chap by relieving the cause. You get quick results because it does not contain gum. Skin absorbs this lotion completely, becoming soft, smooth and comfortable. Hess never leaves greasy or sticky film on skin. Sold in 50c, 25c, 10c sizes at Drug, Dept. and Dime Stores.

HESS Witch Hazel Cream



Try this BETTER WAY to Clean Teeth

- ENDS HARD BRUSHING
- SAFELY REMOVES STAIN
- KEEPS GUMS HARD

The better way to clean teeth is the oxygen way—the way Boracetine Tooth Powder cleans them. By releasing harmless nascent oxygen, Boracetine quickly removes all stain and film like magic and makes teeth sparkling white. This same oxygen hardens the gums to keep them healthy. It's the ideal dentifrice for children because it cleans completely without hard scrubbing. (4)

Boracetine tastes good—children love it. Neutralizes acidity—goes three times as far as paste. Large 10c cans sold in first class dime and variety stores.

Boracetine TOOTH POWDER

"I Bought These IMPROVED WINDOW SHADES FOR 15¢ EACH"

I JUST had to buy some of the new improved Clopays. They are even stronger and heavier than before—with a wooden slat included with each shade . . . and now you need trim only one side to fit narrower windows . . . Millions of Clopays already in use. New improved Clopays at 15c each offer biggest shade "buy" ever. See these shades that won't crack, fade or fray. Rich, solid colors and striking new chintz effects. Send 3c stamp for color samples to Clopay Corp., 1224 York St., Cincinnati, O.

At All 5c and 10c Stores and Most Neighborhood Stores

NRA WE DO OUR PART

CLOPAY WINDOW SHADES

FREE SALE CATALOG

FACTORY PRICES

are still the lowest prices

Send for FREE catalog showing lowest 1934 prices. 200 styles and sizes; Porcelain Enamel Coal and Wood Ranges, Combination Gas, Coal and Wood Ranges, Gas Stoves, Oil Stoves, Furnaces. Easy terms—year to pay. 30 days FREE trial. 24-hour shipments. Satisfaction guaranteed. Over 800,000 customers. 34 years in business.

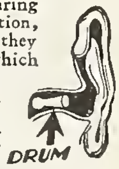
Kalamazoo Stove Co. Mfrs.
405 Rochester, Ave.
Kalamazoo Michigan

Ranges $44.70 and UP

"A Kalamazoo Direct to You" Trade Mark Registered

DEAFNESS IS MISERY

Many people with defective hearing and Head Noises enjoy conversation, go to Theatre and Church because they use Leonard Invisible Ear Drums which resemble Tiny Megaphones fitting in the Ear entirely out of sight. No wires, batteries or head piece. They are inexpensive. Write for booklet and sworn statement of the inventor who was himself deaf.



A. O. LEONARD, Inc., Suite 986, 70 5th Ave., New York

U. S. GOVERNMENT JOBS!

START
$1260 to $2100 Year

Steady Work
Short Hours

Many Early Examinations Expected

MEN—WOMEN
18 to 50

Mail Coupon today sure

COUPON

FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. W-315, Rochester, N. Y.

Sirs: Rush to me without charge (1) 32 page book with list of U. S. Government Jobs. (2) Tell me how to get one of these jobs.

Name. . . . .

Address. . . . .

"Ah, yes. Ah, yes, indeed." Bob folded his hands across his stomach and gave an imitation of a fat Wall Street capitalist. "My ambition is to be a chiropractor."

"Why?"

"So I can rub my own back when it aches."

I GAVE him as dirty a look as I could manage. "What are you going to do in your spare time?" I asked him.

"In my spare time? Oh, in my spare time I'll take out all my friends' appendixes."

"The word is appendices," I told him.

"I know, but I didn't think you could spell it."

He stuck his head out the window and yelled, "Hi, there, kid!" to somebody I couldn't see. "Hi-yah, Charlie! Whatcha looking for?"

"My truck," came a voice—belonging, I imagined, to a truck driver.

"Did you lose it?" Bob yelled.

"I sure did," drawled the voice.

"You ought to tie it to your finger," Bob told him, pulling in his head. "That's how I keep from losing things."

I sighed and put my notebook away.

"Bob," I said, "this couldn't possibly mean that you don't want to do this interview, could it?"

"I?" asked Bob, registering astonishment, amazement and alarm. "Perish the thought!"

"Maybe I just picked a bad day," I suggested.

"No, Wednesday is a fine day," he told me. He spread out his hands, like a magician with a pack of cards. "Now here, you see, I have a pack of days in my hand. You just pick one, little lady, and I'll tell you which one it is without leaving the room. Nothing up the sleeves, no confederates hidden behind the curtains, all fair and above board. Wait till I close my eyes. That's right. Ah—the little lady picks a Wednesday. Fine! She wins a kewpie doll. Step right up, boys, and win your girls a kewpie doll. They all win. No blanks, no ties, no draws, and a prize to every winner!"

"That's enough," I said, exhausted. "I won't ask any more questions. You can go now."

He dropped on one knee and threw out his arms, à la Al Jolson. "Please, please. One more question. Just ask me one more question!"

"No, sir!" I said, firmly. "I've learned my lesson. I'm all through."

"Just one question."

"No!" I repeated.

"Then let me ask you some," he begged.

"No, I came out here to try to write a different story, one that will put the real Bob Montgomery on paper. And how much help do you give me? Not a bit!"

"It's my eczema. I can't think. I keep itching and scratching all the time."

"It serves you right," I told him. "I hope you itch and scratch for years to come."

But at the door I turned and did ask him one more question. I asked it fast and caught him off his guard.

"Bob, you clown like this to keep from showing that you're really shy and scared, don't you?"

He tried to wisecrack again, but his mouth answered before he could stop it.

"Yes," he said. "I mean—no—I mean——"

But by this time I was down the hall.

At first I thought I had failed, and I'd go home and tear this story up. But then I got to wondering. What I wanted to do was to give you the real Bob, shy, boyish, kindly, a little scared of Hollywood, and trying to put on a perpetual clown act to cover it up.

Maybe I've given him to you.

Alice Brady Is Like That

(Continued from page 69)

screen performance—in which she portrayed that scatter-brained, tactless, modern Mrs. Malaprop of "When Ladies Meet"—panicked her film audiences. I knew that all her subsequent screen roles had done likewise. Panicking 'em with her humor in each picture. And now, in "Miss Fane's Baby," playing such a different sort of role—that of a hard-worked, ignorant farm woman. And how she plays it. But there—that's all I knew. Just about what you know yourselves, isn't it?

"I don't know what to tell you about her," said a solemn young man at the other end of the telephone wire. "Frankly, we know nothing about Miss Brady ourselves, aside from the usual chronological facts you could pick up on her automobile registration card. You know—'white, female actress. . . .'

"She doesn't go around much; she works like a demon on the lot; her friends here seem to be among the writers rather than the actors; and she spends most of her time away from the studio at her home."

"Doing what?" I asked.

"Eating and sleeping, as far as we can figure out," came the rather tired answer. Then, worried, because he might have committed a faux pas, the young man at the other end of the wire hastily added, "Of course, I was just kidding."

WHEN I repeated the young man's statement to her about "eating and sleeping," she was positively gleeful.

"Well, that's about the truth," she said, again giving me that disarming Brady smile. "What else can I do here? I'm not by any far stretch of the imagination an outdoorsy person. I loathe athletics, although I suppose I shouldn't admit it. That's why I refuse to let them pose me in a bathing suit, or on the tennis court, or, of all things, on a bicycle in shorts. Fancy me in shorts.

"Anyway, when I'm not working on a picture, I'm more apt than not to be sleeping. I just got up about a half hour before you arrived." (And I'd arrived about 3.30 in the afternoon.)

Can you imagine any other feminine star admitting her laziness with such capsizing unconcern? But that's Alice Brady.

"I'm sure that my laziness accounts for my preferring to be a sort of recluse. I am perfectly happy alone in this house for days, never desiring once to go out that front door. Sleeping, playing with my dogs, and reading detective novels." (Five new mystery stories had arrived by special delivery during my visit.) "Then, after a while, I get a terrific desire for companionship. I want people around me in clumps! Not one but dozens."

Apropos of people "in clumps," reminds me that Alice Brady has been pleasantly disappointed with Hollywood in one respect.

Before she came out here, her New York friends warned her against a peculiar breed of creatures who inhabit only Hollywood; creatures who spend most of their time bursting in on innocent newcomers at any hour of the day or night—of course, without invitation—and insist on making whoopee whether the newcomer likes it or not.

Being a person who values her privacy more highly than almost anything else, Alice Brady desperately resented and feared the rumored invaders; and had already, before arriving, worked out several schemes by which she could evade them on her arrival in the wild and fuzzy west.

It was delightful to hear her relate, naively, with genuine surprise, that no one had as yet pounced in on her and that she was almost ready to believe that no one would.

Another thing that quite confounds Alice Brady about Hollywood is what she quaintly refers to as the "motherliness" of everyone in the studio. It might give some of those hard-boiled electricians and burly members of the technical crew a shock to learn that Miss Brady thinks they're so motherly. But that doesn't worry Alice.

She insists that everyone, from the highest executive down to the humblest office boy, has adopted "such a kindly, protective attitude" toward her. She never found it with the people she worked with in the theatre. "They're so much nicer in Hollywood," she insists.

I didn't dash her illusions by suggesting that "they" might not have had such a motherly attitude toward her if she hadn't early proved to the studio that she was worth coddling—perhaps even humoring!

And there's Alice Brady—how do you like her?

Three Steps to Loveliness

Blue Waltz

...choose first the powder, petal-soft and silken-smooth—this to flatter and to protect your skin... next a touch of lipstick to make the lips warm and luscious... and last, the precious fragrance of the perfume—delicate and alluring—so that forever your loveliness is a haunting memory...try these three steps to loveliness and quickly attain that harmony of effect, that glamorous look, which is your natural right—men will admire you, women envy you, when you use Blue Waltz Beauty Aids. Each only 10c at your nearest 5 and 10c store.

A powder to glorify your complexion—soft and clinging.

An indelible lipstick—in glowing, tempting shades—imparts personality.

An alluring yet delicate odeur... unveils your inner charm.

Other exclusive Blue Waltz Beauty Aids—Cold Cream, Cream Rouge, Toilet Water, Brilliantine, Talcum

JOUBERT · PARFUMEUR · FIFTH AVENUE · NEW YORK

HOW IS HELEN HAYES BRINGING UP HER DAUGHTER?

She has very definite—and interesting—ideas about the training of little Mary MacArthur. Ideas that every daughter's mother—and mother's daughter—will be eager to read.

THIS STORY WILL APPEAR IN MODERN SCREEN SOON

"I like to make RUGS on my Sewing Machine"

THE Singercraft Guide, the clever little rug-maker, does it so easily! And it costs so little because you simply use strips cut from old rags or discarded clothing. Learn in 10 minutes—to make any kind of rug. Get Complete Outfit, with instructions and transfer designs, from the Singer Shop or Singer Representative. Or send 50c with the coupon.

SINGER SEWING MACHINE CO., INC.
Dept. Q-142, Singer Bldg., New York, N.Y.
I enclose...... (money order or stamps). Please send me:
☐ Singercraft Set and Book (50c) (Prices apply in U. S. and Canada only)
☐ Singercraft Book only (10c)
Name..
Street..
City.................... State....................

SINGERCRAFT

Copyright U. S. A. 1933, 1934, by The Singer Manufacturing Co. All Rights Reserved for All Countries

Dora May
POWDER PUFFS
3 for 10¢

Enjoy the Luxury of Clean, Fresh Powder Puffs—Always

Dora May, the new, soft, caressing, fine quality velour powder puff, makes powder go on smoothly, evenly. Costs so little everyone can afford fresh ones always. Cellophane wrapped, completely sterilized.

NRA

3 for 10¢

At Your 5 and 10¢ Store

NO JOKE TO BE DEAF

—Every deaf person knows that—

Mr. Way made himself hear his watch tick after being deaf for twenty-five years, with his Artificial Ear Drums. He wore them day and night. They stopped his head noises. They are invisible and comfortable, no wires or batteries. Write for TRUE STORY. Also booklet on Deafness.

Artificial Ear Drum

THE WAY COMPANY
717 Hofmann Bldg. Detroit, Michigan

ADMIRED BY MEN—

because she is beautiful. But only a short time ago she was skinny and showed her bones instead of healthy, smooth flesh. She was pale, too. But she took "Valitone Bonbons," Dr. A. Gallinger's prescription. By eating these tasty bonbons the weight may be increased within a few weeks from 5 to 15 pounds. The unsightly bones that show on the cheeks and shoulders should become beautifully covered, the flat chest develop, skinny limbs become beautifully rounded, and the body weight increased by many pounds of firm flesh, evenly distributed. She is no longer tired and sickly and within a few weeks her former skinny looks have given way to a beautiful, healthy appearance. If you really want to add many pounds of solid weight on your bones, increase your stamina and nerve force, send 3c in stamps at once for a sample Bonbon. State present weight, height and age.
Valitone Company, 176 State Street, Binghamton, N.Y.

"ZORATOR"
Kills BATH ROOM Odors

COSTS ONLY 10c

Simply hang Zorator inside toilet bowl, as pictured here. It quickly deodorizes air and keeps water sanitary. Patented hanger positively prevents clogging of passage should Zorator be accidentally dropped in bowl. Variety of colors and scents.

Lasts several months. Sold in 10c Stores.

The Zoro Co., 361 W. Superior Street, Chicago

The Real Truth About Ruth, George, and Ralph

(Continued from page 65)

we gave the facts—and the truth about the facts—to the world as honestly as we knew how. Distasteful as it is to go over this story again, I think it best to clarify the situation once and for all. To know the facts is one thing but to know the truth about the facts is quite another."

Briefly, here is the story in chronological order:

WHEN George Brent came into Ruth Chatterton's life nearly two years ago as the leading man in her picture, "The Rich Are Always with Us," she and Ralph Forbes had previously decided that their future paths lay apart. They had been married seven and a half years. Although love had flown, they entertained such a deep respect and admiration for each other that they remained the staunchest of friends. In the meantime, Brent and Forbes developed a mutual regard.

Ruth Chatterton and George Brent fell in love, suddenly and unexpectedly. Straightway, Brent took himself to Forbes with the truth. He, Brent, feared their friendship was at an end. Instead, Forbes congratulated him on his good taste and fortune. Anxious to preserve their friendship, these three intelligent people simply sat down to talk over what promised to be a more dramatic situation than they had ever played in their entire lives.

Ruth would not marry George if it meant sacrificing Ralph's friendship; George was only too willing to preserve it, while Ralph was only interested in Ruth's happiness. Whereupon agreed, these three took the pledge of eternal fidelity which they have kept religiously.

Ruth went to Europe for a vacation; Rafe went to Reno to arrange for the divorce; it was later secured, and Ruth married George in New York on her way back to Hollywood. While Hollywood gasped, Ralph met the newlyweds at the train and gave them their first dinner party.

Hollywood sat back to watch the fur fly. But the Brents and Forbes took up where they had left off. They continued to exchange dinner parties. George and Ralph continued to play tennis or polo together; they went hunting and fishing together. Ralph even brought his new girl friends around to the Brents'. But such unconventional goings-on couldn't last, said Hollywood. They must be playing parts. Such was the unwholesome gossip that was sent forth to the world, via the gossip grapevine.

As George Brent so aptly puts it: "Insidious gossip has caused broken engagements, separations and divorces of once happy couples. Scandalmongers hit a new low when they try to wreck

Is Lila Lee a fit companion for Ralph Forbes? Yes, say George and Ruth. (If you've read the above story, you'll know why their stamp of approval is necessary.) No, there's no romance between Lila and Ralph—this foursome just went to the opera together.

the friendship of two men."

During the evening I found occasion to draw each of the two men aside, to secure from them definite statements that should put an end to all gossip—without the innocent victims suffering undue embarrassment at the presence of the other.

Said Brent: "Rafe and I hit it off from the start. We like the same things, sports and the outdoors. We like to hunt, fish, ride and indulge in every sport we can afford. We speak the same language. There is no man I'd rather see or with whom I'd rather be. We fully understand each other. He is welcome in my house at all times as I fully respect and admire the friendship he has for Mrs. Brent. I make very few friends. The staunch friendship of a thoroughbred like Rafe Forbes, I intend to cherish, come hell and highwater."

Said Forbes: "From the time I first met George Brent, I liked him instinctively. Between us there grew a deeply understanding friendship which was in no way affected by my divorce and his marriage to my former wife. George Brent, as I have repeatedly said before, was in no way responsible for this divorce. His conduct both before and afterward has been all that true friendship calls for. The fact that he is now married to my former wife might well have become a source of enmity, but for the straightforward honesty and consideration shown by everybody concerned. That honesty and consideration seems to baffle and confuse those not legitimately concerned, who it seems to me might just as well mind their own business and save their feelings in the end."

It strikes me that "minding your own business" has almost become a forgotten art. Most folks today remind me of a sage truth uttered by an old Missouri "colonel" of my acquaintance. He was engaged in an argument with his son, who had very positive ideas of what they were talking about.

"The only trouble with you, my boy," said the colonel, "is that you know so many things that aren't so."

The brothers Westmore—who know more about beauty, make-up, grooming and such, than you could shake a stick at—are writing an exciting series of articles for MODERN SCREEN. The first one will appear in our April issue.

You'll want to read this series — watch for it!

Save 50% to 90% with new concentrated mouth wash

Five Star Antiseptic Powder, dissolved in water at home, makes pint of powerful, pleasant-tasting mouth wash for 10 cents

THOUSANDS no longer pay high prices for mouth wash. They know that Five Star Antiseptic is safe, pleasant-tasting, amazingly effective as a mouth wash or gargle, yet goes three to ten times as far.

Scientists who tested this new discovery against other well-known antiseptics were amazed at its extraordinary penetration. A leading bacteriologist said: "Five Star Antiseptic not only kills germs rapidly, but has a far more lasting effect in preventing bacterial growth."

Yet because it is a powder—you dissolve it in water at home—Five Star Antiseptic costs only 10¢ a pint at 5 and 10 cent stores.

Wildroot Co. Inc., Buffalo, N. Y. In Canada; Imperial pint 15¢. Wildroot Ltd., Fort Erie, N., Ont.

Tested and Approved 4523 Bureau of Foods Sanitation and Health Good Housekeeping Magazine

Five Star
ANTISEPTIC
For MOUTH WASH, GARGLE and general use. A powerful, safe antiseptic in powdered form. Penetrating, pleasant-tasting ... combats halitosis.
JUST MIX WITH WATER
MAKES ONE PINT
A WILDROOT PRODUCT

10¢
MAKES ONE PINT
at 5 and 10 cent stores

COULD YOU FIGHT FOR YOUR MAN?

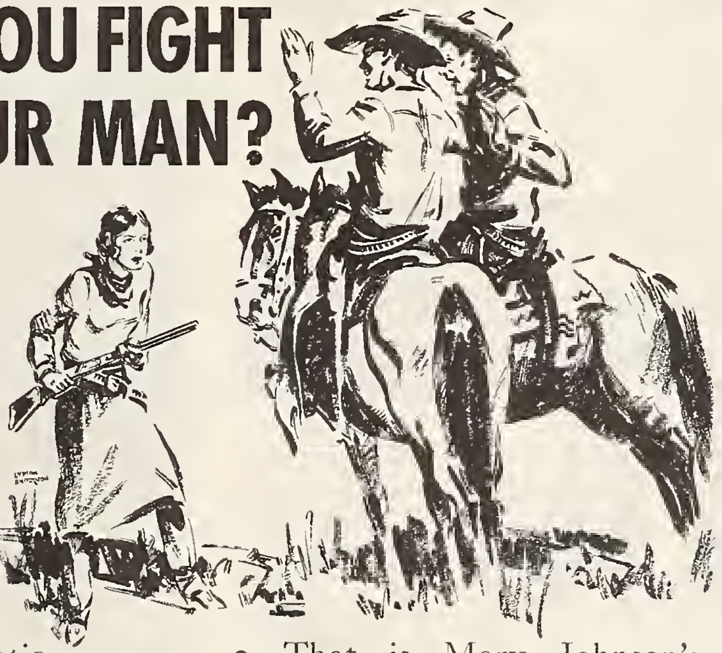
• Here, within the flicker of your hearth, with the sturdy, blue-coated law at the other end of your telephone, you need never answer such a question.

• But in another place, at another time . . . the hard-riding west . . . the man you love surrounded by ruthless, straight-shooting enemies . . . what then?

• That is Mary Johnson's grim problem in "Desert Home", a gripping novelette of love in the western sands. Enjoy this stimulating tale and many other glamorous love stories of the robust west in the MARCH

WESTERN ROMANCES

AT ALL NEWSSTANDS NOW



CAPTURE THE SPIRIT OF Romance

A soft glow of a lamp for your moonlight . . . the alluring fragrance of L'Orday Air Perfume for your flower garden. Romance thrives in such a setting! Apply a few drops of L'Orday Air Perfume on a light bulb, on any hot surface or on a L'Orday Evaporator and revel in the magical effect of this liquid incense. Try it today! Three fragrances: Romance, Gayety, Ecstasy.

On sale at most 5 and 10c stores

10 and 20 cents

Evaporator, 5 cents

If unobtainable, mail coin or stamps to Avon Laboratories, 3205 Shields Ave., Chicago.

L'ORDAY AIR PERFUME LIQUID INCENSE

BECOME AN EXPERT ACCOUNTANT

Executive Accountants and C. P. A.'s earn $3,000 to $15,000 a year. Thousands more are needed. We train you thoroughly at home in spare time for C. P. A. examinations or executive accounting positions. Previous bookkeeping knowledge or experience unnecessary. Training given by C. P. A.'s. Write for free book, "Accountancy, the Profession That Pays," and learn about opportunities in this growing, profitable field.

LaSalle Extension University, Dept.3318-H, Chicago

The School That Has Trained Over 1,200 C.P.A.'s

REMOVE CALLOUSES ★ While you walk

Callouses, or a fallen metatarsal arch.

Relief—with the "Comfort" Callous Remover.

Get quick relief from callouses and tired aching feet with the "Comfort" Callous Remover and Metatarsal Support.

10¢

Slip on one of these light, flexible supports and walk in comfort. A medicated, soft, rubber cushion supports metatarsal arch . . . stops leg pains and aching feet . . . removes callouses safely. • Fits like a glove, invisible under hose. So comfortable . . . and a surprising value at 10c. Sold by most 10 cent stores with a complete line of "Comfort" Foot Aids. If your local store does not have this item, use coupon.

"Comfort" FOOT AIDS

REG. U. S. PATENT OFFICE

FOREST CITY RUBBER CO., 1276 Ontario St., Cleveland, O.
Enclosed is 10c in stamps for 1 (or 20c for 2) Callous Removers.
Shoe size________

Name________________________
Address________________________
City________________________

Don't Send Gilbert to Exile

(Continued from page 61)

say. I wasn't asking for anything. I was trying to say thanks to him, so what the hell?

"It wasn't any use. He wanted to tell me that he didn't have any use for any part of me. He wanted to tell me that I'd work again when they saw fit and nothing would be done about it until 'Christina' had been not only previewed at the studio and for the press, but had run for four or five months throughout the country at large, in order to get the full public reaction to me. Then and only then would they have anything to say to me about anything. He went on to let me understand that my contract reads for seven years. If they wish to exert their power they can keep me off the screen for seven years. For seven years they can prevent my working, either on their lot or anywhere else."

John told me all this, of course, before the "out-of-court" settlement of his contract. I am repeating it all in order that you may understand exactly what the man has been through. To continue, then, with John's story:

"I REALIZED that the four long years of ghastly martyrdom I had undergone before the incredible summons to play 'Christina' had come to me was still going on. Garbo had got me into that picture by virtue of sheer power, used power. They had been forced to concede that point to her. They'd be damned before they would concede another point to me—unless they have to. Unless they find that the public reaction constitutes a demand, a demand for me they will not dare to refuse while box office receipts fill the money-bags.

"They told me I'd been sitting around for months before I made 'Christina' and I could sit around for thirty-six months more and it wouldn't hurt me any.

"I knew then that the old days were back again, never having gone. Then, while I was still under the old contract and holding on to that contract with my teeth, though they had every eminent lawyer in the country examine it with the hope of breaking it. Then the different executives used to call me into their offices almost daily and say to me, 'We don't like you. Will you get out?' Of course I wouldn't get out. Not when a million and a half dollars were in the bag for me. Now I will get out. I want to get out. And they say they won't let me go. They want me there. They don't want me there. And what is it for? To torture me? Good God, what am I? A specimen pinned to the wall and wiggling for their satisfaction?

OPERATING ROO
B

The set of "Once to Every Woman," where Mary Carlisle is working, is equipped in modern hospital style. So Mary took her "Sammy" with her and put him through all the routine of a new-born infant.

"I tell them that I am an actor and I simply want to go to work and do my job like any other man. I get no answer. They sit back and regard me with suspicion thick in their eyes. They look at me as though I were an ogre, a demon, an outcast.

"After 'Christina' and after it became rumored that things were not plain sailing for me at the studio, I had a few nibbles of offers here and there. Nothing ever came of them. They were nipped in the bud. How? Why? I asked them if they would allow me to work, to earn some money. I'll have over $3,000 a week to pay in 1934 for this year's income tax. I have my wife and baby to support. I have other dependents, other calls on me. They wouldn't give me that right.

"And so I am going to file the complaint. No, it doesn't take nerve. It isn't a matter of courage. It's a matter of conviction. I've got to know where I stand and why. I can't get a human reaction when I ask for it, man to man. I'll attempt to get one in a court of law. The complaint is going to be, actually, in the nature of having the judge define the contract for me. I say to them that I am befuddled, that I want to know whether this is a fair and equitable arrangement, or not. I want the judge to tell me what I am to do and to tell the executives what they are to do. If I lose the case, I shall appeal it. If not, then that is another story.

THEY will doubtless raise the point that I signed the contract, being of sound mind. That won't mean anything in court. I could tell you that I'd sell you Brooklyn Bridge and you might sign a contract to that effect. It wouldn't mean anything. And that is precisely what my contract means—nothing.

"I've already told you the terms of it. They agree to submit to me three stories a year. I can write the stories. I can direct them or I can act in them, as I see fit. I have the right to reject one or all three if I so elect. That sounded swell to me at that time. You must remember that I was sore to the bone over the bad stories they had been giving me. You know and I knew what they were doing to me, those stories, what they did do. Here then, it appeared, was my chance, more vital to me at that moment than anything else in the world—to have the right to reject stories that would continue to ruin me. That was all that mattered. That was all I 'saw.' It never occurred to me then, that the old enmity might still persist, that they might, deliberately, submit to me stories I couldn't do—Little Lord Fauntleroy or something!—and that, as a consequence, I couldn't work, I could do nothing. For seven years they could have me tied up in a sack, a dead man when they came to take me out.

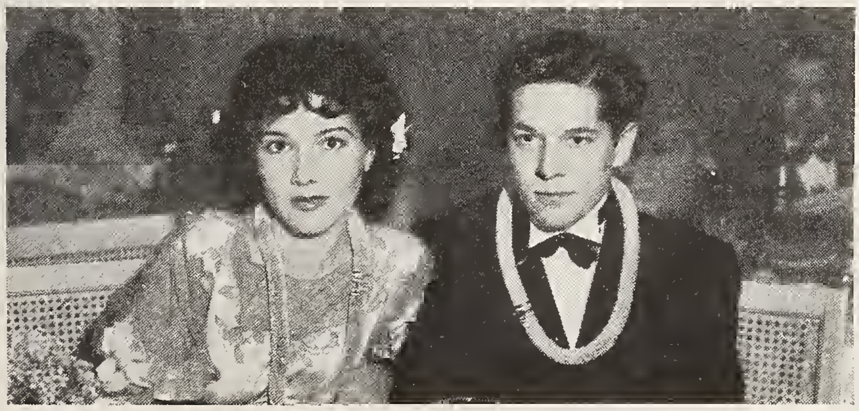
"Thus my reason for squawking, that I don't get a guarantee for anything but money, such as it is. My only reason for existence is self-expression. I don't care about the money. I want to be able to work. The certain and not very considerable sum of money which I am guaranteed at the end of each year of my contract is not the point at issue. It is that they don't ever guarantee to make the pictures.

"I don't understand it. I know that I am hated. Even that isn't a sufficient explanation. Why don't they let me go? Or, if they want me to stay, want me to give them performances, why do they treat me in such a manner as to destroy the only value I have to them? Why ruin the stock on their own shelves?"

Why, indeed? John is too good stock to waste. He knows pictures from many angles. He will work his head off, if given half a chance.

His contract has been settled out of court—yes. But I'm not sure just how much that will mean to him. There is, at present, a rumor that he may play Marc Antony opposite Claudette Colbert's "Cleopatra" for Paramount. But for his own studio—M-G-M—his next assignment will, they say, depend upon the public's reaction to his Don Antonio in "Queen Christina."

Well—let him have your reaction. Whether it be good or bad. He wants to know just how you feel about seeing him on the screen. Do you want the Jack Gilbert of old to return to us? Speak up—and let him know! Let the man know where he stands.



Jean Parker and "Pancho" Lucas are childhood sweethearts. When Jean's five years in pictures are up, they're going to wed.

Capable Hands

must be lovely, too!

Woman's place in the scheme of living has changed, but Romance still holds sway. Wise indeed is she who preserves her feminine charm at any cost!

Don't let the workaday world rob you of the allurement of soft, smooth, white hands. It's too easy to keep them lovely with Pacquin's! Apply a pat of this marvelously penetrating, skin-feeding cream every time your hands have been in water. Use it before and after every exposure to the wind and weather. You'll be delighted at the way rough, chapped skin regains a smooth, soft texture. Pacquin's protects your hands against the drying out of natural oils that is so fatal to hand beauty.

Try Pacquin's and you'll never be without it. It never leaves your skin sticky or greasy, and it's pleasantly economical because a little goes a long way! Don't try to hide your hands—use

Pacquin's

Pacquin's
HAND CREAM

In convenient sized jars, priced 10¢ to $1.00. Also Pacquin's Cold Cream, Vanishing Cream, Lemon Cream, and Cleansing Cream.

Pacquin Laboratories Corporation, New York

"Here is the SECRET" says Mary Brian

MOON GLOW
NAIL POLISH
Beautifies Your Hands

YOU will be delighted with the smartness of your hands when you beautify them with MOON GLOW Nail Polish. Keep on your shelf all of the five MOON GLOW shades—Natural, Medium, Rose, Platinum Pearl and Carmine.

If you paid $1 you couldn't get finer nail polish than MOON GLOW—the new Hollywood favorite. Sold by druggists (25c size) and chain 10c Stores (10c size)—or send coupon.

Moon Glow Cosmetic Co., Ltd., Hollywood, Calif.
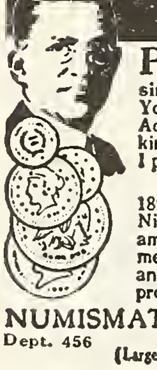
Gentlemen: Please send me introductory pkg. of Moon Glow. I enclose 10c (coin or stamps) for each shade checked.
( ) Natural ( ) Medium ( ) Rose ( ) Platinum Pearl ( ) Carmine.
Name..
St. & No......................................
City......................... State............(MG-A3)

BUNIONS
Reduced Quickly
Pain stops almost instantly! Then blessed relief. Fairyfoot gradually reduces painful, ugly bunions. Enables you to wear smaller shoes. No cumbersome appliances. No messy salves. Used on over 2,000,000 feet since 1897. Write for FREE trial treatment.
Fairyfoot Products Co., Chicago, Ill.
1223 S. Wabash Ave., Dept. 2713

FREE TEST



Old Money and stamps WANTED

POST YOURSELF! It pays! I paid J. D. Martin, Virginia, $200 for a single copper cent. Mr. Manning, New York, $2,500 for one silver dollar. Mrs. G. F. Adams $740 for a few old coins. I want all kinds of old coins, medals, bills and stamps. I pay big cash premiums.

WILL PAY $100 FOR DIME
1894 S. Mint; $50 for 1913 Liberty Head Nickel (not buffalo) and hundreds of other amazing prices for coins. Get in touch with me. Send 4c for Large Illustrated Coin Folder and further particulars. It may mean much profit to you. Write today to

NUMISMATIC COMPANY OF TEXAS
Dept. 456 . . . . FORT WORTH, TEXAS
(Largest Rare Coin Establishment in U S.)

Law!

STUDY AT HOME

We guide you step by step—furnish all text material, including fourteen-volume Law Library. Training prepared by leading law professors and given by members of the bar. Degree of LL.B. conferred. Low cost, easy terms. Get our valuable 64-page "Law Guide" and "Evidence" books free. Send for them NOW.

LaSalle Extension University, Dept. 3318-L Chicago

On Dress Parade

(Continued from page 72)

there I'm telling you, if you are out for attraction purposes, there you have it. And over the blouse effect, a gray coat, gray fur collar with a purple orchid pinned to it. Baby, what an effect for a pure, young, protected girl. She knew how to get around the walls of chaperonage—did that girl.

GINGER ROGERS—did she step out—in the same picture, "Flying Down to Rio." Study her dancing frock when she whirls with Fred Astaire. Black, but how it fits, and then spreads into ruchings about the feet, not to mention ruchings over the shoulders. Don't deviate a step from her dress standard if you want to shine on the floor.

Girls who have been too business-like—too intent upon being the good little bringing-in-the-bacon variety of female—do go to see how Ann Harding works out the problem, via clothes, in "Right to Romance."

When her lover says to her, "I never knew what two yards of organdy could do for a woman," then you see the whole story.

Study her striped organdy dress when she goes female instead of working-woman. Simplicity to a standstill—cape over shoulders, baby bow under chin, and with it, all that smartness. Only proving that you don't have to strive and struggle to be well dressed. Just do it in the sweet, simple way—in style.

Ann Harding went back to her work-a-day love but only after she had worn ruffles to her heart's content—see picture in black dress, with ruchings for shoulders, a muff and earrings. She could be pretty all right even though experience taught her that wasn't all! It's not enough to be just all right.

Goodness knows, Ann Harding's uniforms were becoming enough. Anyone with half an eye could see she was pretty and sweet with the handkerchief thing draped round her throat. But then, it seems to be a matter of record that males want a ruffle or two and a couple of rosebuds somewhere in the setting when they're out to be fascinated. They've been brought up on it and they like it.

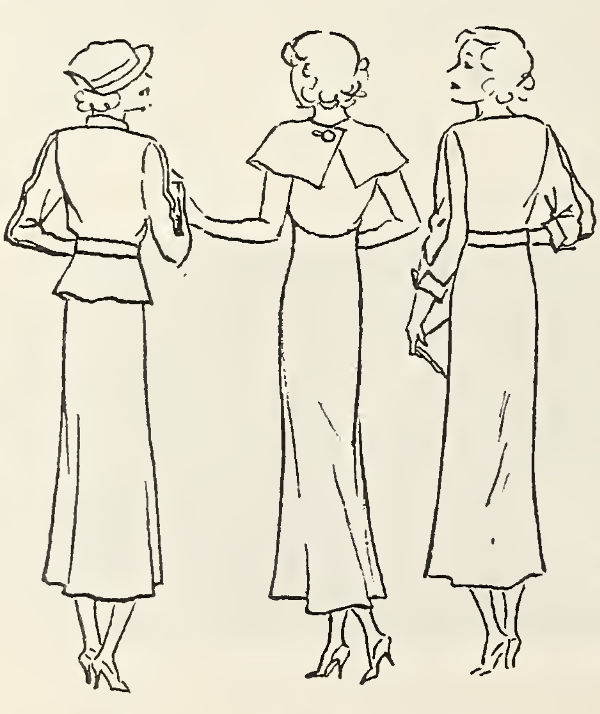
QUITE frankly rosebuddy and girlish is Marion Davies in "Going Hollywood." Her clothes in that picture are a real education in good taste for any youngish person. They give—subtly—the appearance of being absolutely natural for her type of girl, no pose, no striving after an effect.

Take the several white bows under her chin, for instance. One is white piqué, stiff and starched. And that, be it noticed, is the only note on a black frock. Just one other repeat note of the white, and that a snip of an ostrich tip on the side of the crown of a cocky sailor hat. She's just too cute for words in that get-up. Then, on another black dress, she wears a white ermine bow. Nothing stingy about it either. It's a good, wide, spacious bow.

Note: Anyone can dress up an aging frock with a bow copied after one of Marion's. There's an idea for a new season.

It is interesting to see in this picture, how in old-fashioned clothes, or new-fashioned ones, in over-alls, dancing bloomers, even wrapped up in a blanket, Marion Davies looks swell.

See the white organdy dress in the dream picture. Fussy, it might be on someone who failed to know how to carry it off, but Marion in that fluffy



3411 3406 3392

To Order Patterns

The patterns are fifteen cents each. The book is fifteen cents when ordered separately—it is ten cents when ordered with a pattern. You may send stamps or coin—coin preferred. If you live outside of the United States, the patterns cost twenty cents each, the book twenty cents separately and fifteen cents when ordered with a pattern. No foreign or Canadian stamps will be accepted. Orders should be addressed to MODERN SCREEN Pattern Service, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y. In ordering, be sure to state size wanted.

white hat with a flower at one side is truly a dream girl in the costume.

Her hair—well, it's girlish and all, and flattering to her young face. But don't you think it's a bit too, too long to look smart in real life just now? Don't copy that too literally, I beg of you, if you want to make a hit with the boys.

Alice Brady, now, in "Should Ladies Behave?" is a grand hodge-podge of good taste and bad taste in dressing. If you want to know what not to wear, go look at her in that grand picture. Of course, she dresses that way frankly to be funny, for she is a killing character and the clothes help her to do her stuff. But for putting ruffles where they should not be and drapings where they look most terrible, she could take the medal any day.

YOU see lots of people who dress like that. One minute she wears a silver lamé coat at the theatre and looks quite lovely, if a bit over-dressed for coming to town by train. Then in a following scene, you see her in a black and white plaid with white pleatings skating all over it, accenting all the wrong spots. It's a funny sight, all right, but a terrible warning against over-dressing.

Mary Carlisle, who plays the young girl in this picture, is nicely gowned for the part. I liked particularly her suit, when she came home unexpectedly to that wild house party of her mother's. It was so well tailored and still managed to avoid a mannish look which a suit is apt to have. It was not too severe for so young a girl but had the soft dressmaker look, with all the correctness of tailoring. That's an achievement, too, you know, if you've had any experience with choosing suits of this sort. Her's had a softish scarf, sleeves just full enough and a coat which was a bit lighter in tone than the skirt. An extremely well done outfit.

For the theatre she wore black velvet with white gardenias. Now it's a funny thing, but the younger a girl is, the more she loves to wear black these days. It is generally considered a color for an older woman but the interesting thing about it (and all girls seem to realize the fact) is that it sets off extreme youthfulness as nothing else can. And then the combination has quaintness about it that turns out to be utterly charming.

If you want to see thrilling lingerie, you can get an eyeful in this picture. Such fascinating night gowns and negligées. I liked particularly Alice Brady's lace bedecked nightie with wide ribbon bows over the shoulders. It was different and one of those fussy ones which managed to be strongly in the good taste class.

Nils Asther, Enemy of Hooey

(Continued from page 77)

fact that I have been on the stage and screen in both Sweden and this country for quite some years and lived modestly within my means all that time, it was a terrible shock to learn that I had 'lost every penny.' Believe me, the story was far from the truth. Still, everywhere I went I was met with 'Poor old Nils' sympathy.

"But it wasn't only that story that was so very painful," he continued. "It was the story that followed. This particular magazine article went on to say that '. . . since Nils was so desperate for money and had no job, he finally bethought him of a marvelous way to clean up. He got out his fan mail—found that a great deal of it was from love-sick ladies in small towns in the Middle West—and decided that he might be able to sell them something if he was to call on them in person. Life insurance! That was it! Thus he borrowed enough money for expenses and began a house-to-house canvass of his women fans who, of course, were so flattered by the presence of their love-dream that they purchased great gobs of insurance!'"

THE bare memory of this seemed to make Nils so beside himself that he jumped from the chair and began pacing the room with long, angry strides.

"Oh, it was terrifically embarrassing and humiliating," he continued after he had calmed down. "The silly story was even re-printed in some of the European papers and magazines and some of my former friends whom I had been helping out a little financially wrote me that they were sorry and that I mustn't bother with their checks any further. They could not stand to be a burden on a man who was peddling insurance from door to door. Considering the fact that I never left Hollywood—not even once—the Middle West fabrication was a bit uncalled for to say the least. I can't understand it. Never for one minute since I came to Hollywood have I felt pinched financially. For years I have been putting away money against the rainy day. If I never worked another day I would have no reason for changing my present comfortable way of living!"

"Other stories," he went on, "go off on even funnier tangents. One says I am a 'difficult, mysterious man who walks alone.' (Ugh! Did you ever hear anything so nauseating?) While another says that I scorn all social contacts and live like a hermit. Why, just the other evening, a local newspaper columnist revealed that I had 'come out of hiding long enough to eat dinner at a popular cafe.' That was the third time I had eaten at that cafe in one week. And I had been out every night during the week—to the theatre, the fights and had spent two evenings at the home of friends.

"Another little story tells of the

Now May's Lips say "Kiss Me"

1
GOOD NIGHT-I'LL CALL YOU UP...
THOUGHT
WHY DOESN'T HE TAKE ME IN HIS ARMS AND GIVE ME A LONG KISS?
2
I'M SO DISCOURAGED-JACK HAS NEVER EVEN TRIED TO REALLY KISS ME . . .
LISTEN-TRY THE LIP MAKE-UP OF THE MOVIE STARS-THE WONDERFUL NEW KISSPROOF INDELIBLE LIPSTICK
3
HER NEXT DATE WITH HIM
YOUR LIPS DRAW ME LIKE A MAGNET-I CAN'T SEEM TO RESIST THEM...
DON'T TRY-THE LIPSTICK ON THEM IS CALLED KISSPROOF!

Try the Stage and Movie Lipstick

If you admire the appealing "kissableness" of the lips of the movie stars and the girls in the Broadway shows, just try their lip make-up yourself—the new KISSPROOF Indelible Lipstick, Special Theatrical Color...This lipstick discovery is so wonderful it has been placed by the make-up experts in the dressing-rooms of both Hollywood Studios and New York Theatres! The stars could certainly pay anything—yet you can have exactly the same smooth, alluring KISSPROOF they use for a few cents! Have the thrilling new "lip appeal" it will give you tonight. You can get KISSPROOF LIPSTICK in all shades, including the Special Theatrical Color, at all toilet goods counters and at the 10c stores.

Kissproof
Indelible LIPSTICK

DO YOUR Lips CLASH WITH YOUR Cheeks?

"COLOR HARMONY" is the smart new note in make-up. To be truly beautiful, the color-tones of your lips and cheeks must match! OUTDOOR GIRL Lip-and-Cheek Rouge does away with the cheap artificial effect that so often results when different shades of rouge and lipstick are used. A mere touch, applied to lips and cheeks, reproduces the beautiful, natural shades of a healthy, glowing skin. Pure colors; harmless to even the most delicate skin. Goes on smoothly. Indelible and waterproof. In 5 exquisite shades. At leading drug and department stores—50c, 25c. Also at variety stores in miniature sizes for 10c.

OUTDOOR GIRL
LIP-AND-CHEEK ROUGE

CRYSTAL CORPORATION, DEPT. 50C
WILLIS AVE., NEW YORK CITY

Please send me a Free One-Week's Trial Package of OUTDOOR GIRL Lip-and-Cheek Rouge, also samples of 5 popular shades of OUTDOOR GIRL Face Powder.

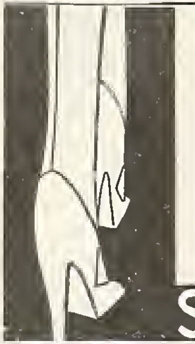
NAME ....

ADDRESS ....

CITY .... STATE ....

350 LITTLE BLUE BOOKS 5¢ EACH

Send postcard for our free catalogue. Thousands of bargains. Address:
LITTLE BLUE BOOK CO., Catalogue Dept., Desk 228, GIRARD, KANSAS



NEW PUMPS?

Rubbing pressure makes shoes hurt. Wrap heel or toe in SEALTEX—ease rub and pressure — stop pain — save hose. SEALTEX bandage sticks only to itself—not to skin—removes like a glove. 10¢, 25¢ and 50¢ sizes. All Kresge stores and drug counters everywhere.

SEALTEX

$2.15
29x4.40-21
12 MONTH WRITTEN GUARANTY BOND WITH EACH TIRE
MEMBER NRA
FREE! TIRE GAUGE
WITH EACH ORDER FOR 2 TIRES
TAKE TIRE PRESSURE THRU SIDE WALL of TIRE
NO FUSS—NO DIRT

NEW LOW PRICES
GOODYEAR
Firestone -- Goodrich
U.S. AND OTHERS
LOWEST PRICES ON EARTH

TIRE USERS
by the thousands all over the U. S. A. vouch for the LONG, HARD SERVICE, under severest road conditions of our standard brand Tires reconstructed by the ORIGINAL SECRET YORK PROCESS. OUR 17 YEARS IN BUSINESS makes it possible to offer tires at LOWEST PRICES in history with 12 month guarantee.

Don't Delay—Order Today

BALLOON Tires			CORD Tires
Size Rim	Tires	Tubes	Size	Tires	Tubes
29x4.40-21	$2.15	$0.85	30x3	$2.25	$0.65
29x4.50-20	2.35	0.85	30x3½	2.35	0.75
30x4.50-21	2.40	0.85	31x4	2.95	0.85
28x4.75-19	2.45	0.95	32x4	2.95	0.85
29x4.75-20	2.50	0.95	33x4	2.95	0.85
29x5.00-19	2.85	1.05	34x4	3.25	0.85
30x5.00-20	2.85	1.05	32x4½	3.35	1.15
28x5.25-18	2.90	1.15	33x4½	3.45	1.15
29x5.25-19	2.95	1.15	34x4½	3.45	1.15
30x5.25-20	2.95	1.15	30x5	3.65	1.35
31x5.25-21	3.25	1.15	33x5	3.75	1.45
28x5.50-18	3.35	1.15	35x5	3.95	1.55
29x5.50-19	3.35	1.15
30x6.00-18	3.40	1.15
31x6.00-19	3.40	1.15
32x6.00-20	3.45	1.25
33x6.00-21	3.65	1.25
32x6.50-20	3.75	1.35

All Other Sizes

DEALERS WANTED

SEND ONLY $1.00 DEPOSIT with each tire ordered. We ship — balance C. O. D. Deduct 5 per cent if cash in full accompanies order.

ALL TUBES BRAND NEW—GUARANTEED

Tires failing to give 12 months' service replaced at half price.

YORK TIRE & RUBBER CO., Dept. 2112A
3855-59 Cottage Grove Ave. Chicago, Ill.

astounding fact that I have a mysterious island—where I shall retire to live the rest of my life in seclusion. It says further that I shall not allow a mirror on my secret island because I shall not want to watch myself grow old!" (Here, another period of pacing the floor.) "It is too preposterous to deny. My friends know that I have a summer home on one of the hundreds of little islands off the coast of Sweden. I shouldn't want them to think that I would actually give out such a story.

"Even those writers who would like to be kind to me generally become so kind that I am made ridiculous. I once told a writer that I often ran three miles before breakfast. When the story came out I was running thirty miles. That's a sleeper-jump—that isn't an exercise.

"And one writer will say that: 'Nils Asther is a woman-hater who has not been able to make a success of marriage.' And the next magazine says, 'Nils is really a gilded Don Juan. He has had a thousand affairs.' It is true that it will take me a long while to get over Vivian divorcing me and taking the custody of our little girl. But I am by no means a woman-hater because my marriage turned out badly."

He stopped. I know he still feels badly about Vivian and I know he isn't fixin' to marry anyone else, so I didn't ask him any fool questions about his love life and such. I just let him tell me what was on his mind.

"I haven't given you anything except a denial of other people's stories," he said.

"Quite okay," said I. "And I'll put them all down just as you told them to me."

"Grrrrff!" said the Great Dane. Which, being interpreted might have meant, "And just see that you do, Ramsey!"

Announcement of Our Cinema Shop Contest Winners

Girls all over the country, girls from London, Australia, the Philippines, rushed to send opinions about the Cinema Shop dresses, to the end of winning the prizes offered.

Pity the poor judges whose duty it was to choose the best letters from so many that were, good, better, best. What the girls of today know about style is something to bewilder the most hard-boiled fashion cynic. No wonder they are a well dressed crowd, judging from their letters and their evident knowledge of what is right and wrong.

Well, anyway, after pondering and eliminating, the following winners were selected:

Irene Dunne's dress went to

THERESA FITZGERALD
Tampa, Florida

Mary Howard's dress went to

KAYE GIDDES
Dunellen, New Jersey

Constance Cumming's dress went to

M. COLLINS
Chicago, Ill.

Miriam Hopkins' dress went to

HILDEGARDE MILLER
Cleveland, Ohio

We are very proud of all of the thousands of girls who answered this contest, and only regret that our coffers will not stand the strain of sending consolation prizes to each and all of them.

For Once—the Truth About Pickford

(Continued from page 41)

It was she who requested a separation and "time to think things over" when her wandering husband suggested a divorce a few years back. She had not lost her self-confidence at that point and believed that time would take care of everything.

It did. But not in the way she wished.

The announcement of the sale of Pickfair was the definite and final answer to her watchful waiting for the breach to heal. The mistress of the estate did not know it was on the market until she read the shocking announcement in a newspaper. It was evidently the Fairbanks way of burning bridges and, while one doubts if his method was according to Hoyle, it was certainly effective.

And now Mary Pickford is alone and, if she is being brave a little too publicly and keeping a stiff upper lip a bit consciously and with perhaps an unwitting nod to the world, one must admire her pluck and her ability to "take it."

Buddy Rogers is now her more constant male companion. She has known the boy for several years; in fact, ever since she cast him in "My Best Girl." They go about to the approved gay places together, where Buddy enjoys Mary and Mary attempts to catch up on her fun. It is kind of hard, though, when all one's life has been devoted to work, to get into the spirit of the thing, especially when you feel cheated of the things for which you have worked.

For Mary Pickford believes that life has not treated her squarely. Why, even the old adage says that Satan finds mischief for idle hands to do, and goodness knows, she has never been idle, yet what she valued most has gone.

Whether she will marry young Rogers is still a delectable morsel about which the gossips may speculate. Indeed, she doesn't know herself as yet, for you see, Mary Pickford has work to do. She feels the urge to write and appear in a Broadway play, make another picture and perhaps direct one. Work, that's what she must do. And yet work is what has done all this to her.

Clark is just a "softie." He bought this dog from a stranger with a hard luck story. Then the stranger disappeared. And the dog followed suit.

JACK FALLS
when Jane Finds the "keynote" of CHARM

1
MARY, IF I COULD KEEP MY HAIR BEAUTIFULLY WAVED LIKE YOURS, I BELIEVE I COULD BE MORE ATTRACTIVE. WHO DOES IT FOR YOU?
MYSELF, SILLY! THIS IS A JO-CUR WAVE —COST ABOUT 5¢ TRY JO-CUR TOMORROW
2 JANE TRIES IT
GEE, I NEVER THO'T I WAS SO GOOD LOOKING AND WAVING WITH THIS JO-CUR IS SO EASY . . .
—YOUR FRIEND JACK WON'T BE ABLE TO RESIST SUCH LOVELY LOCKS, SIS!
3 HER NEXT DATE
DARLING, YOU'VE BECOME A RAVING BEAUTY YOUR HAIR IS GLORIOUS BUT IT MUST COST A LOT TO KEEP IT THAT WAY. . .
NO DEAR, I DO IT MYSELF WITH JO-CUR!

Have a Glorious Wave in Your Own Home Tonight

INSTEAD of paying $2 or more to an expensive hairdresser, do this. Just wet your hair with the new discovery, JO-CUR and then with a comb and your own fingers you set your hair into perfect waves! In a few minutes . . . you can have the most becoming wave you ever had—literally double the attractiveness of your hair and for only 5c.

Remember that JO-CUR is different from any other waveset known. It has a quince-seed base—which eliminates all stickiness, and will not leave white flakes in the hair. And a JO-CUR wave lasts 7 full days. You can get JO-CUR at any drug or department store and at the 10c stores.

Jo-cur
WAVESET
FINGER WAVING
WATER WAVING

Jo-cur
PRONOUNCED "JOKER"
WAVESET

SKIN ERUPTIONS
NEED NOT WORRY YOU

Pimples, eczema, itching, burning skin, undue redness, minor rashes and scaly scalp are no longer necessary when relief is so simple. Poslam will show what it will do for you in one application. Just apply at night and note improvement next morning.

JUST TO PROVE IT
we will send you a test package FREE
Simply send your name and address to:
POSLAM COMPANY
Desk 12-W, 254 W. 54th St., New York, N.Y.
You can get Poslam at any drug store, 50c

FREE CHARACTER READING CHART
Worth $1.00 Complete

• A "get acquainted" gift from REJUVIA, the favorite lipstick of more than a million women. A complete 17 x 22" scientific character reading chart absolutely FREE to you.
Study your sweetheart's character. • Analyze your friends • Learn what you are, and why you are • You will be amazed with the mysteries that this chart will reveal to you.
Mail your name and address on penny post card. No cost. No obligation. SEND NOW TO Rejuvia Beauty Labs., Inc., Dept. C-42, 395 Broadway, N Y

Try REJUVIA Lipstick today, velvet smooth, permanent waterproof, indelible, in correct shade for your individual complexion. A tested quality full size lipstick for only 10 cents at most 5c and 10c Stores.

DENISON'S PLAYS
57 YEARS OF HITS
Musical Comedies, Operettas, Vaudeville Acts, Minstrels, Comedy Songs, Make-up Goods.
Catalog Free
T.S. Denison & Co. 623 S. Wabash. Dept. 25. Chicago

GRAY HAIR PENCIL
Instantly gives to GRAY Hair Desirable Youthful Color. A secret method that keeps gray away from Roots, Temples and Parting, and Keeps Gray from Spreading. Cannot be detected. Will not fade or wash off. Delights both men and women!—To Quick'y Introduce ORATEX Treatment, full size Pencil for 25c coin. Lasts many months. State shade.
NOW 25 CENTS
ORATEX CO., 400 West Eric St., Dept. F-18, CHICAGO

BALD NO LONGER
Mr. A. S. R. of New York City writes:
"I had 3 bald spots the size of a half-dollar. I used Japanese Oil for 3 months and now my bald spots are entirely covered with hair."
JAPANESE OIL, the antiseptic counter-irritant, is used by thousands for baldness, falling hair, loose dandruff and scalp itch. Price 60c. Economy size $1. All druggists'. FREE booklet. "Truth About the Hair"—write.
NATIONAL REMEDY CO.,
56 W. 45th St., Dept. M. M. N. Y.

Don't forget! The second installment of Katharine Hepburn's fascinating life story will appear in our next issue!

Brand New AS LOW AS $19.75
TYPEWRITER
Guaranteed by REMINGTON
Sensationally new low price and easy terms. Standard 4-row keyboard—fully guaranteed by Remington Co. Send No Money.
10 Day Trial – then 10c A Day
Send for new literature and easy pay plan—only $1.00 down, then 10c a day. Also bargains in Standard size refinished office models, sent free. Write for details and special money-making opportunities.
International Typewriter Exch., 231 W. Monroe St. Dept. 361, Chicago

Why Men Fall For Miriam Hopkins

(Continued from page 43)

smart hotels she found comfortable living quarters, but suddenly she wanted a house. She found the perfect place, got five servants and moved in. A couple of weeks later, she dismissed the servants and moved back to the hotel! What a girl!

Her face, her figure, her voice are all soft and feminine but her mind is crisp and brittle. And her life shows the strong determination for success that has motivated most of her deeds.

A good Episcopalian, she left her Sunday school flat to come North and —horror of horrors—became a dancer. The dancing school she attended gave her the chance to become one of the Chester Hale Girls and she made her first stage appearance by being literally thrown through a trap door into the arms of Chester Hale, much to his amazement. It was not a part of the revue but the accident did not daunt Miriam and she went on as a dancing and singing girl in musical comedies.

A sprained ankle changed the course of her career. She found she couldn't dance professionally again but she wasn't going back to Georgia defeated. She went out for the great adventure of dramatic acting. She was fired from many a show. She played in many a flop, but you can't down a girl like Miriam.

Somehow, men sense her forthrightness, her determination, her courage, which bridge all disappointments.

STRANGELY enough, in her second film she appeared as the unattractive princess in a Maurice Chevalier picture. That was before Hollywood had discovered her strange form of glamour—a glamour that needs no props to manifest itself, that is just as much in evidence on the tennis court as in a luxurious boudoir. When Hollywood saw the men flocking around her, enchanted by her beguiling ways, the producers realized that the lass had It and gave her rôles more suitable to her particular type.

There is a touch of madness in Miriam Hopkins, the kind of madness that allowed her once to barge in (she was broke) to a prominent Wall Street banker and demand a loan of $5,000. He gave her a third of that amount. She took a taxi back to her New York apartment and, thrilled by the loan, tipped the taxi driver with a five dollar bill.

Hers is the sort of madness that inspired the high-brow playwright Eugene O'Neill to risk his life by canoeing with her and entrusting her with the plot of his then unwritten "Strange Interlude." It is the sort of madness that shows her how to make a lark of a forced airplane landing at Amarillo, Texas, where she drank beer with the Mayor and practically every newspaper reporter in town before she entrained for Chicago. No wonder she's popular.

For Miriam Hopkins is a baffling creature of strange powers. It is, I feel sure, her very uncertainty that keeps men jumping through hoops. As this is written she is starring in a play on Broadway. If the show is a success—well, that's grand. If it isn't, she'll hop off to Italy and have a grand time. She never plans ahead. It would spoil the fun. She takes what comes and enjoys every hour she lives. A variety of things interest her—books, music, babies, parties.

You just can't blame men for loving a girl like Miriam!

Although Sheila Terry and Lyle Talbot seem to be very much interested in each other, don't let them fool you for a minute. Lyle is still seeing a lot of the Countess di Frasso. That is a romance.

Leslie Howard Didn't Want to Come Back

(Continued from page 17)

Leslie Howard. And Leslie Howard must work. He knows it.

"I've no idea how long I shall stay over this time," he went on. "I'm anxious to do a play besides the picture work. But I must confess I want to get back to England just as quickly as possible. While I know this is the best place for me to work, I keep feeling the house and the kids and the thousand and one things I love doing over there pulling at me all the time.

"When I'm in London, of course, I have the feeling of being home. That's another side of the question. I think I can truthfully say I like New York best because of my work. London next because I'm an Englishman and London is home. And Hollywood—well, I suppose I like Hollywood because it gives me a sensation of space.

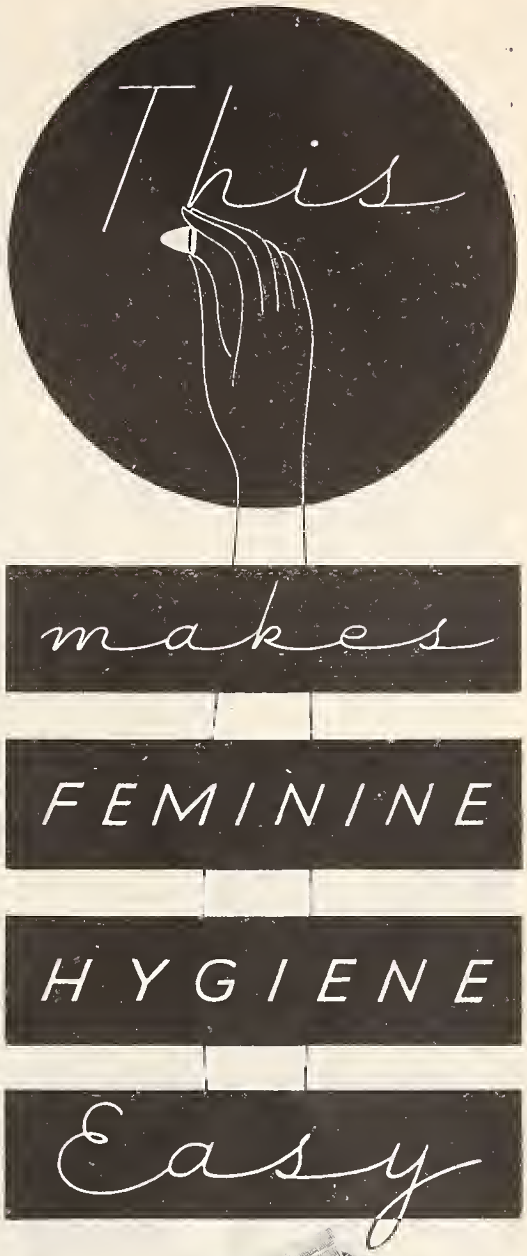
"You know," he continued, "that tiny little spot of Hollywood set in a vast, geographical background is fascinating. You have the feeling that humanity—individuals really don't exist. That all those great high mountains—that wide silent desert, the huge trees and the enormous Pacific Ocean—those are the things that actually count.

"I never think of Hollywood itself as a place of any importance. My work goes on under ideal climatic conditions and material comfort. I enjoy polo and every day after studio hours I am off to a little club I belong to—'The Riviera Club.' We have a team captained by Walt Disney and we call it the Mickey Mouse Polo Team. Will Rogers and his son, Will, Jr., play on it. Bob Montgomery and a couple of other fellows belong. A man by the name of Perkins is captain of the rival team. He has nothing to do with the movies, but loves polo. He calls his team the Perkins Cats and we have some grand games. There's a cup that sometimes the Mickey Mouse team wins—and again the Perkins Cats take it away from us. And the way we play you would think the cup was worth at least a million dollars."

He's a strange mixture, this Howard man. A half artist, half-domestic soul. There is a sensuous streak in his character which is in direct contrast to the stark, austere ambition that dominates his soul. A certain brilliancy that is almost poetic envelops him at these times, and again at your next meeting with him, he is the most matter-of-fact, commonplace of men. A devoted father, a home-lover with genuine deep domestic roots embedded in his heart and soul. A lover of horses, a good swimmer and a keen enthusiast of the outdoors, he might be any ordinary young Englishman until you see him in one of his superb performances on either the stage or screen—and then you realize that above all things else he is wholly an artist.

That artist must work—here, in our land. It was Leslie Howard, the man who "didn't want to come back."

Everybody who is anybody turned out for Colleen Moore's house party. Here you see the hostess, Jeanette MacDonald, Fay Wray and Wesley Ruggles. Incidentally, Wesley had a terrible time getting wife, Arline Judge, away from that party. She just loves to shoot dice and he just couldn't tear her away from the floor where she was gambling with one of the news photographers. She was losing heavily, too!



EVERY DAY, more and more women are adopting Norforms as the easiest, most convenient and satisfactory form of feminine hygiene.

Norforms are easy-to-use antiseptic suppositories that melt at internal body temperature, and spread a protective, soothing, antiseptic film over delicate membranes and tissue. Norforms contain Parahydrecin—a powerful new antiseptic developed by The Norwich Pharmacal Company, makers of Unguentine. Parahydrecin kills germs, yet is harmless to tissue. There is no danger of an "over-dose" or "burn."

Norforms require no apparatus for application. They are dainty and feminine, and actually deodorizing. Many fastidious women use them for this purpose alone. Buy a box of Norforms at your druggist's today. Or, send for Norform booklet, "The New Way", by Dr. M. W. Stofer for further facts.

NORFORMS
KNOWN TO PHYSICIANS AS VAGIFORMS

The Norwich Pharmacal Company
Dept. 113, Norwich, New York
Please send me Dr. Stofer's booklet in plain envelope. I want to know more about "The New Way."

*Name*____________________
*Address*____________________

READ WHAT—
Joan Foster
LEADING BEAUTY CONSULTANT says about
Gayanne FACE POWDER

Joan Foster
FIFTH AVENUE
NEW YORK
BEAUTY CONSULTANT

S. S. Kresge Co.
Gentlemen:
More women should learn how unusally fine your Gayanne Face Powder is—
I found it equal in quality and texture to brands selling at $1.00 and $2.00
Sincerely
Joan Foster

Joan Foster is right—Gayanne Face Powder is an exact copy of Fifth Avenue's most expensive and exclusive face powders.

RETAILS AT 10c EACH AT ALL
S.S. KRESGE CO. STORES

NOW! THE GIANT TUBE
ZiP
PERFUMED DEPILATORY CREAM
ZIP EPILATOR—IT'S OFF because IT'S OUT
PERMANENTLY DESTROYS HAIR

A BEAUTIFUL COMPLEXION
Without Rouge!

Why depend on artificial means to make an unsightly skin attractive? Remove the cause of your trouble. Most complexions are ruined by faulty elimination and impoverished blood due to a lack of Calcium in the system. If such conditions cause your blemishes, a little Calcium will work wonders for you.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers have helped thousands of women to restore their Natural Beauty. They have seen a dull, lifeless, pimply skin become clear, smooth and firm again and with a flush of natural color that nothing can remove. Now their powder and rouge are only a habit instead of a necessity.

Try Stuart's Calcium Wafers for just a few days. Let this gentle, internal beauty-aid prove to you the system's need for Calcium and why Natural Beauty must come from within. A Free Sample will be sent you if you mail the coupon below.

STUART'S CALCIUM WAFERS
AT ALL DRUG STORES: 10c and 60c

FREE SAMPLE COUPON

A sample package sufficient to prove the value to you of Stuart's Calcium Wafers will be sent you if you mail this coupon to the F. A. Stuart Co., Dept. 32-H, Marshall, Mich.

Name ____________________

Address ____________________

Town ____________________

Reviews—A Tour of Today's Talkies

(Continued from page 46)

• THE POOR RICH
(UNIVERSAL)

Edna May Oliver and Edward Everett Horton.

THIS IS FUN. Edna May Oliver and Edward Everett Horton make the most of a swell story about two cousins whose wealth has dwindled with the depression. Too proud to admit they're broke, they try to put up a big front when a Lord, Lady and daughter come to visit them. The game is up, however, when a neighbor stalks in and indignantly demands the return of his goose. Your sides will ache from laughing. Oliver and Horton make a grand team and Andy Devine, Leila Hyams and Andre De Berenger help the fun along mightily, and we know you'll like it heaps.

EIGHT GIRLS IN A BOAT
(PARAMOUNT)

Dorothy Wilson, Douglass Montgomery, Kay Johnson.

TEAR-JERKER. Just one of the girls in a European finishing school commits an indiscretion in the moonlight, but to look at the sobs crammed into this opus one would imagine that all eight of the girls were in the same boat. Dorothy Wilson is the indiscretionee and Douglass Montgomery is the indiscretionist, but he finally turns noble and offers marriage (cheers). Kay Johnson, as the school teacher, made Simon Legree look like an amateur in the first half, but she turns almost human in the finale. When the tears should come and won't, everything looks rather silly.

THE MEANEST GAL IN TOWN
(RKO)

Zasu Pitts, Pert Kelton, James Gleason.

PRETTY bad. This one, kiddies, goes on your "Must Miss" list. It reminded us of a lot of ancient gags strung together in a line with, once in a while, a funny line that seemed out of place. Zasu Pitts, Pert Kelton, Jimmie Gleason, Skeets Gallagher and El Brendel seemed to realize it was hopeless. Zasu is the hotel keeper, Brendel is the barber-in-love—oh, what's the use? You won't say we didn't warn you about this one!

• GALLANT LADY
(20TH CENTURY)

Ann Harding, Otto Kruger, Clive Brook.

CONFUSING REPORTS. Three of us saw this one and we got three answers: "Swell," "fairly good" and "not so hot." It's that old gag about the destitute mother (Ann Harding) who gives up all claim to the child, finds it later and finally marries the adopted father (Otto Kruger). Ann looked lovely, Clive Brook as the drunken sot is great and Kruger is good. Maybe you better guess.

• MAN OF TWO WORLDS
(RKO)

Francis Lederer and Elissa Landi.

FRANCIS LEDERER makes his bow. In spite of the fact that he can't bow very deeply for this one, you'll have a strong hunch you would like to see more of the same man—provided he stays in this World. In the first part where Lederer as an Eskimo assists the expedition from London, it is fairly interesting, but his trip to "white man's land" goes a bit flat. Elissa Landi et al lend support, but it's this fellow Lederer that methinks you'll go for. Some of the local ladies mentioned the name Valentino and something about "successor." What do you think?

FUGITIVE LOVERS
(M-G-M)

Robert Montgomery, Madge Evans, Ted Healy.

BREEZY hokum. It looks as if they started out with a swell idea here and then too many fingers spoiled the pie. Bob Montgomery, an escaped convict, hops atop a bus in which ride Madge Evans, chorus girl, and racketeer, Nat Pendleton, whom she had hoped she was hiding from on the trip. Bob goes through the luggage on top of the bus and comes out with Ted Healy's suit and a flock of bonded stuff. The coppers chase the crew for five reels and Bob and Madge save a lot of school kids from freezing to death in another bus. If you think you can swallow it, we advise you to try. Too bad, it was a swell cast.

• HORSEPLAY
(UNIVERSAL)

Andy Devine and Slim Summerville.

VERY funny indeed, my friends. However, we must warn you that the title means what it says. All about a couple of cowboys (Andy Devine and Slim Summerville) who suddenly wake up millionaires. Accompanied by Slim's horse, Cynthia Anna, they set out for England in search of Leila Hyams, Slim's sweetie. Cynthia Anna occupies the bridal suite on board and, not to be outshone by the horse, Slim and Andy are funny. Their antics, while hobnobbing with royalty, are screamingly-screaming. Go ahead. Have a laugh on us.

THE REPORT CARD

Here you may see at a glance which are the good pictures—and which are not

A MEANS EXCELLENT
B MEANS GOOD
C MEANS FAIR
D MEANS POOR

THESE PICTURES GET "A"

ANN VICKERS (RKO).
BERKELEY SQUARE (Fox).
BROADWAY THROUGH A KEYHOLE (20th Century).
CAPTURED (Warners).
CONVENTION CITY (First National).
COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW (Universal).
DESIGN FOR LIVING (Paramount).
DINNER AT EIGHT (M-G-M).
DOUBLE HARNESS (RKO).
ESKIMO (M-G-M).
FOOTLIGHT PARADE (Warners).
GOLD DIGGERS OF 1933 (Warners).
I LOVED YOU WEDNESDAY (Fox).
LADY FOR A DAY (Columbia).
LITTLE WOMEN (RKO).
A MAN'S CASTLE (Columbia).
MISS FANE'S BABY IS STOLEN (Paramount).
MORNING GLORY (RKO).
MOULIN ROUGE (20th Century.)
NO MARRIAGE TIES (RKO).
ONE SUNDAY AFTERNOON (Paramount).
ONLY YESTERDAY (Universal).
THE POWER AND THE GLORY (Fox).
THE PRIZEFIGHTER AND THE LADY (M-G-M).
THE PRIVATE LIFE OF HENRY VIII (United Artists).
QUEEN CHRISTINA (M-G-M).
REUNION IN VIENNA (M-G-M).
ROMAN SCANDALS (United Artists).
STAGE MOTHER (M-G-M).
THIS DAY AND AGE (Paramount).
TURN BACK THE CLOCK (M-G-M).
VOLTAIRE (Warners).
THE WAY TO LOVE (Paramount).
WHEN LADIES MEET (M-G-M).
THE WORLD CHANGES (Warners).

THESE PICTURES GET "B"

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN (20th Century).
AFTER TONIGHT (RKO).
ALICE IN WONDERLAND (Paramount).
ANOTHER LANGUAGE (M-G-M).
BEAUTY FOR SALE (M-G-M).
BELOVED (Universal).
THE BEST OF ENEMIES (Fox).
BLOOD MONEY (20th Century).
BOMBSHELL (M-G-M).
BROADWAY TO HOLLYWOOD (M-G-M).
BUREAU OF MISSING PERSONS (Warners).
BY CANDLELIGHT (Universal).
A CHANCE AT HEAVEN (RKO).
THE CHIEF (M-G-M).
THE COHENS AND THE KELLYS IN TROUBLE (Universal).
COLLEGE HUMOR (Paramount).
CRADLE SONG (Paramount).
DANCING LADY (M-G-M).
DUCK SOUP (Paramount).
ELMER THE GREAT (Warners).
EMERGENCY CALL (RKO).
FEMALE (Warners).
FLYING DOWN TO RIO (RKO).
FROM HELL TO HEAVEN (Paramount).
FUGITIVE LOVERS (M-G-M).
GALLANT LADY (20th Century).
GOODBYE AGAIN (Warners).
HAVANA WIDOWS (Warners).
HER BODYGUARD (Paramount).
HER FIRST MATE (Universal).
HER SWEETHEART CHRISTOPHER BEAN (M-G-M).
HOLD YOUR MAN (M-G-M).
HOOPLA (Fox).
HORSEPLAY (Universal).
THE HOUSE ON 56TH STREET (Warners).
I LOVED A WOMAN (Warners).
I'M NO ANGEL (Paramount).
JIMMY AND SALLY (Fox).
THE KENNEL MURDER CASE (Warners).
KING FOR A NIGHT (Universal).
THE KING OF THE ARENA (Universal).
LADY KILLER (Warners).
LOVE, HONOR AND OH BABY (Universal).
THE MAD GAME (Fox).
MAMA LOVES PAPA (Paramount).
MAN OF TWO WORLDS (RKO).

STA-RITE RINGLET CURL PINS

STA-RITE
De Luxe
RINGLET
Curl Pins
INVISIBLE
HALF ROUND
PRECIOUS LITTLE AIDS TO BEAUTY

New!

Fashion insists that your new hair dress include those flattering ringlets and soft curls so smartly feminine. And they're not at all difficult with these new Sta-Rite pins. Only an inch and a half long, they're the tiniest, most truly invisible pins you've ever used. Do try them—they make ordinary bob pins seem needlessly clumsy. Ten cents at your favorite store or beauty shop—in black, brown, blonde or gray. Or send 10 cents for trial package. (State Color).

STA-RITE HAIR PIN CO.
Shelbyville, Illinois

STA-RITE HAIR PINS WAVE SET

Be a Nurse

MAKE $25-$35 A WEEK

You can learn at home in spare time. Course endorsed by physicians. Thousands of graduates. Est. 35 yrs. One graduate has charge of 10-bed hospital. Another saved $400 while learning. Equipment included. Men and women 18 to 60. High School not required. Easy monthly payments. Write us now.

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 1493, 1601 Warren Ave., Chicago, Ill.
Please send free booklet and 32 sample lesson pages.

Name________
City________ State________ Age____

How to make
MARY T. GOLDMAN'S
SINGLE LOCK TEST

GRAY HAIR GONE

(TEST BOTTLE FREE)

Your hair takes on new color and lustre when you comb this famous clear, colorless liquid through it. Gray streaks vanish. Desired color comes: black, brown, auburn, blonde. Leaves hair soft, lustrous—easily curled or waved. Countless women use it. Men too, for gray streaks in hair or mustache. Get full-sized bottle from druggist on money-back guarantee. Or test it Free.

Test it FREE ~ We send Free complete Test Package. Try it on single lock snipped from hair. See results first. Just mail coupon. Give color of hair.

MARY T. GOLDMAN
2311 Goldman Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

Name ....
Street ....
City .... State ....
Color of your hair? ....

"I Deserved a Sour Stomach
NRA

But TUMS Kept My Stomach Sweet"

I ADMIT I was indiscreet at the party last night. I had far too much to eat, smoked too much. But I feel fine today. Not a hint of sour stomach. No acid indigestion, not a trace of heartburn. Here's the secret: After the dinner I ate three or four Tums—those delightful new candy-like antacid mints. Tums contain no soda or water soluble alkalies, only soothing insoluble antacids that pass off undissolved and inert when the acid conditions are corrected. Millions now use Tums. Only 10c, all drug stores.

Free Beautiful new gold and blue 1934 Calendar-Thermometer. Also samples TUMS and NR—Just send name and address, enclosing stamp, to A. H. LEWIS COMPANY, Dept. CAA19 St. Louis, Mo.

TUMS FOR THE TUMMY

TUMS ARE ANTACID . . NOT A LAXATIVE

EAT LIKE CANDY TUMS STOMACH DISTR 10¢

HANDY TO CARRY

For a laxative, use the safe, dependable Vegetable Laxative NR (Nature's Remedy). Only 25 cents. NR

FADED GRAY HAIR

Women, men, girls with faded, gray, streaked hair, shampoo and color your hair at the same time with my new French discovery—"SHAMPO - KOLOR". No fuss or muss. Takes only a few minutes to merely shampoo into your hair any natural shade with "SHAMPO - KOLOR". No "dyed" look, but a lovely natural, most lasting color; unaffected by washing, or permanent waving. Free Booklet. Monsieur L. P. Valligny, Dept 39, 254 W. 31st St., New York City.

UP TO $15 A WEEK and your own DRESSES FREE

I need 350 ambitious women to demonstrate nationally known Fashion Frocks. Glorious new Spring Styles at unbelievable low prices. Sold with money-back guarantee. Guaranteed as advertised in Good Housekeeping Magazine.

NO CANVASSING

as low as 3 DRESSES $3.95

No experience necessary. No investment ever required. The work is easy, dignified and pleasant. Requires no canvassing. In addition to your weekly income, you earn your own dresses absolutely FREE. Send no money. Write fully for this unusual opportunity giving your size and color choice.

FASHION FROCKS, Inc.
Dept. CC-250, Cincinnati, Ohio

BLACKHEADS!

DON'T SQUEEZE THEM! IT CAUSES SCARS, INFECTION! Dissolve Blackheads scientifically, refine Large Pores, stop embarrassing Greasiness, "Shine," clear Muddy, Tanned Skin. Just wash with water and wonderful KLEERPLEX WASH! Has marvelous pore-purifying powers. Gets at the cause QUICKLY, SAFELY. RENEWS! LIGHTENS! BEAUTIFIES! Gives you that clean-cut attractive look which means everything in business and social life. SEE INSTANT IMPROVEMENT! No chemicals. No staying home. A guaranteed pure, natural product, approved by Health Authorities, the Beauty Editor of this magazine and thousands of happy users—both Men and Women. Nothing like it! Stop wasting time and money on ordinary cosmetics—send only $1 TODAY for this unusual skin healthifier. MONEY BACK GUARANTEE!

KLEERPLEX (Dept. MR-1)
1 W. 34th St., New York City, N. Y.
( ) Here is $1. Please send me 2 mos. supply of KLEERPLEX WASH or ( ) I will pay postman plus 20c P.O. charge. Outside U.S. $1.25—no C.O.D.'s
(WRITE NAME—ADDRESS IN MARGIN)

MAIL COUPON NOW

MAN OF THE FOREST (Paramount).
THE MAN WHO DARED (Fox).
THE MASQUERADER (United Artists).
THE MAYOR OF HELL (Warners).
MEET THE BARON (M-G-M).
MR. SKITCH (Fox).
MY WEAKNESS (Fox).
MY WOMAN (Columbia).
ONE MAN'S JOURNEY (RKO).
PADDY THE NEXT BEST THING (Fox).
PILGRIMAGE (Fox).
THE POOR RICH (Universal).
PROFESSIONAL SWEETHEART (RKO).
RAFTER ROMANCE (RKO).
THE RIGHT TO ROMANCE (RKO).
SATURDAY'S MILLIONS (Universal).
SHOULD LADIES BEHAVE? (M-G-M)
SMOKY (Fox).
SOLITAIRE MAN (M-G-M).
SON OF A SAILOR (Warners).
SONG OF SONGS (Paramount).
SUNSET PASS (Paramount).
THE THUNDERING HERD (Paramount).
TOO MUCH HARMONY (Paramount).
WHEN STRANGERS MARRY (Columbia).
WILD BOYS OF THE ROAD (Warners).

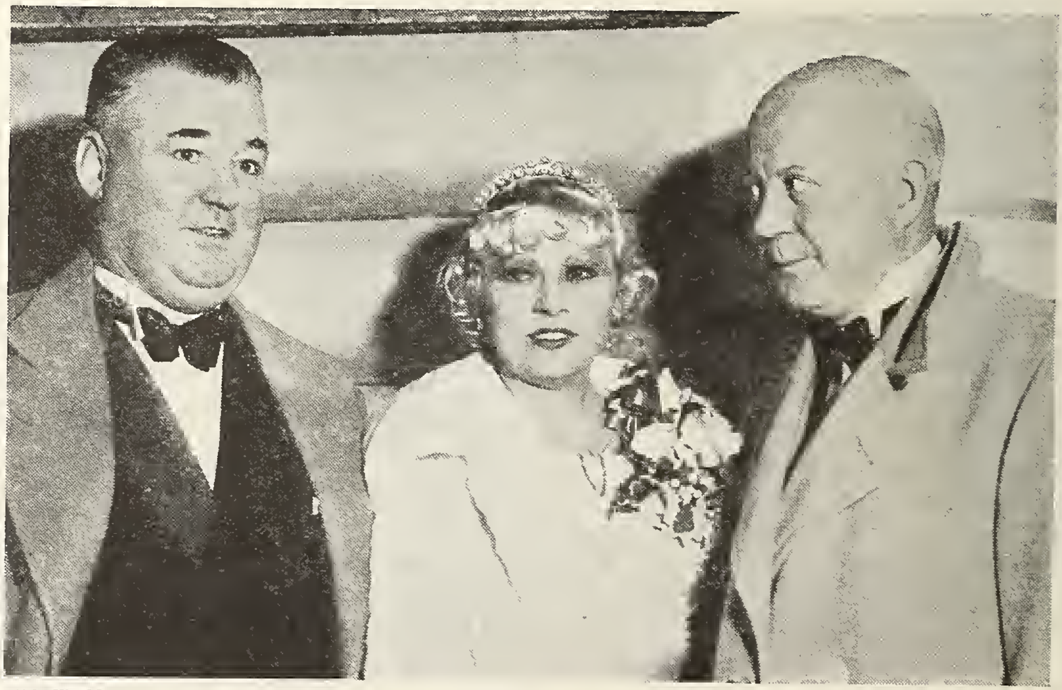
THESE PICTURES GET "C"

AGGIE APPLEBY, MAKER OF MEN (RKO).
THE BOWERY (20th Century).
CHARLIE CHAN'S GREATEST CASE (Fox).
COLLEGE COACH (Warners).
CROSS COUNTRY CRUISE (Universal).
DARK HAZARD (Warners).
DOCTOR BULL (Fox).
EIGHT GIRLS IN A BOAT (Paramount).
EVER IN MY HEART (Warners).
F. P. 1 (Fox-Gaumont).

THE FRONTIER MARSHAL (Fox).
GOING HOLLYWOOD (M-G-M).
HEADLINE SHOOTER (RKO).
I AM SUZANNE (Fox).
THE INVISIBLE MAN (Universal).
LADIES MUST LOVE (Universal).
LONE COWBOY (Paramount).
MARY STEVENS, M.D. (Warners).
MASSACRE (Warners).
MIDSHIPMAN JACK (RKO).
MY LIPS BETRAY (Fox).
OLESON'S BIG MOMENT (Fox).
PRIVATE DETECTIVE (Warners).
ROME EXPRESS (Universal).
SHANGHAI MADNESS (Fox).
S. O. S. ICEBERG (Universal).
THE TORCH SINGER (Paramount).
TO THE LAST MAN (Paramount).
THE WOMEN IN HIS LIFE (M-G-M).
THE WORST WOMAN IN PARIS (Fox).

THESE PICTURES GET "D"

AS HUSBANDS GO (Fox).
BITTERSWEET (United Artists).
BOMBAY MAIL (Universal).
THE CIRCUS QUEEN MURDER (Columbia).
DON'T BET ON LOVE (Universal).
GIRL WITHOUT A ROOM (Paramount).
HELL AND HIGH WATER (Paramount).
HEROES FOR SALE (Warners).
THE MEANEST GAL IN TOWN (RKO).
THE MIDNIGHT CLUB (Paramount).
MYRT AND MARGE (Universal).
SECRET OF THE BLUE ROOM (Universal).
THE SHAKEDOWN (Warners).
SITTING PRETTY (Paramount).
SPECIAL INVESTIGATOR (Universal).
WHITE WOMAN (Paramount).



Wide World

Meet Jim Timony (on the left) —Mae West's manager and (many people say) her boy friend as well. The two of them, with William Le Baron, are dolled up for a Little Club dance at the Cocoanut Grove.

IF YOU LIKE TO LAUGH-

If you like to laugh, long, loud and often; and if you like pictures, hundreds of interesting shots of your screen favorites, then is the magazine for you! Get the March issue today, at any newsstand, and enjoy

FILM FUN

THE HUMOR MAGAZINE OF THE SCREEN

Between You and Me

(Continued from page 15)

Laurel and Hardy comedy. If she is so shy and afraid of people, some time when she goes on one of her famous house hunts for privacy, it might help her to get a place close enough to Joan Crawford's home and see how a real honest-to-goodness actress goes about being a lady—and at the same time serving her public. To my mind, her last publicity act, the one about being in love with her new director, and treating Gilbert like the dust under her feet, is the best yet. And yet the American public goes on eating up this bosh. As far as I'm concerned she can go home to Sweden. (But, I say, Mrs. Graham! Garbo didn't exactly treat Gilbert as dust, you know. First place, she got him that part in the picture. And they say she was very friendly with him throughout the making of the picture. Incidentally, she has actually been stepping out with Mamoulian. Maybe it is more than a publicity stunt.)

AUGUSTA BURGER, of the Bronx, N. Y. C., wants Paul:

Let's give a hand to Paul Kelly who played in "Broadway Through a Keyhole." Would you send me his studio address. Let's try and have lots of pictures starring Kelly. How about it?

(Well, Augusta, Paul Kelly is with 20th Century Pictures, Hollywood, Calif. He isn't doing very much at the moment but don't let that worry you. He's on his way to do big things.)

All Right, All Right

MISS KELLY, of we-don't-know-what-town, isn't at all satisfied with the way they're treating that little Southern gal, Una Merkel:

When Una first came to the screen she was sweet and unhardened but now in all her pictures she plays hard, cold, roles—well, you know what. And the public is not so hot on that stuff as you may think. Am a steady theatre-goer and I have noticed this change with interest. I suppose it isn't her fault. I suppose she has to play the type of role assigned to her. But then it would be nice if she could play the kind that fit her. She has a nice Southern drawl which is pleasant to hear if they will just let her be herself.

Australia Takes Us Over the Coals

MRS. R. FARGUHARSON, New South Wales, Australia, speaks her mind:

Australia is very much neglected in the way of pictures. Certainly, we see good pictures but we also see a lot of rubbish generally putting America and American people in a very bad light. We see divorce treated

GLORIOUS NATURAL COLOR in Cheeks and Lips

EVERYWHERE girls are changing to DIXIE DEB ROUGE AND LIPSTICK because they give such glorious, glowing color . . . yet look so natural . . . free from that artificial effect. And it is no longer necessary to pay high prices for rouge and lipstick of fine quality.

Dixie Deb
for Youthful Charm
Dixie Deb
ROUGE
POPPY

DIXIE DEB ROUGE AND LIPSTICK cost only 10c each, yet they are identical in quality with cosmetics costing many times as much. The rouge comes in Light, Medium and Dark., The lipstick in Pappy (changeable) Vivid and Raspberry.

Dixie Deb
Your Best Beauty Value
Lipstick
VIVID

10c each

Our enormous sales make such a value possible.

DIXIE DEB

Quality Cosmetics

At Better Chain Stores

IVAN LEBEDEFF AND GLORIA STUART--POPULAR STARS

Love!

—the reward of Beautiful Hair!

Clever Girl! One does not have to look further than her lovely hair to understand her popularity with men. Its marvelous luster adds sparkle and vivacity to her eyes and accents her other good features. Her secret? Perhaps you've already guessed it but if not, just one Golden Glint Shampoo will show you the way. 25c at your dealers', or send coupon below for free sample,

FREE

J. W. KOBI CO., 602 Rainier Ave., Dept. C, Seattle, Wash. * * * * * Please send a free sample.

Name
Address
City ________ State
Color of my hair:

(Continued from page 123)

as a matter of course, and morally weak youths crying and sobbing like hysterical women. Sex abounds in pictures. Many a time I have blushed and squirmed on my seat in humiliation for my sex when some screen star lowers herself to go through some dreadful scenes, chasing men I wouldn't walk on and abandoning herself almost to hysterics in a sob scene.

That's why I admire men like Clive Brook, Ronald Colman, Leslie Howard and others like them. Also women like Diana Wynyard, Kay Francis and Marion Davies for their sane and restrained acting.

Joan Crawford was not bad in "Today We Live" but she is getting set in her mannerisms. To portray surprise, she lifts her eyebrows and rolls her eyes. Fear—she bites her bottom lip and rolls her eyes again. Abandon and love—eyes roll alarmingly.

Gary as a strong silent gent just fills the bill. He's getting that bored look about him, "I don't do this because I like it—I'm paid for it," says his face.

Clark Gable seems the ideal sheik to me; strong-arm stuff with not too much brains. I can see him doing his stuff à la Valentino and hear the girls saying, "Isn't he too, too marvellous!"

Mae, Take Heed

SANDRA, of Salem, Mass., wants our Mae to do a different type of role:

I am an admirer of Mae West. Her first picture was a great hit but with many more pictures along the same lines, she will be a flop. The public is wondering what she can do with a different role. Give her a picture in which she can do something more than walk around swinging her hips and handing out wisecracks.

(I'm afraid we'll have to disappoint you, Sandra, because Mae's next picture is "It Ain't No Sin." Nuff said?)

Isn't He Too Wonderful

JANICE EARL, of Logan, Utah, wants you to know that she's c-r-a-z-y about Georgie Raft:

Many biting remarks have been made about George Raft but, personally, I think he's the most handsome man I have ever seen on the screen. His dark eyes and black hair make a wonderful combination. And when he smiles—well, my heart skips a beat. That smile displays a marvellous set of teeth and a very charming pair of dimples. I like the way he moves and talks. In short, I like everything about the man. He surpassed all my expectations in "The Bowery." More success and an orchid to you, George Raft.

Well—Beer's Good, Too

FLORENCE KRATTEBOL, of Minneapolis, Minn., looks like Barbara Stanwyck:

Although I am just one of those persons with a champagne taste and a beer pocketbook, there are many stars whom I would like to meet should opportunity every present itself. I would like to meet Joan Crawford because she seems to be a very mysterious person (Oh, I don't mean the kind of a person you read about in a mystery story). But she appears to be rather a moody type, yet there is something magnetic about her personality.

Too, I would like to meet Barbara Stanwyck because I have been told by several persons that I resemble her a great deal and that my voice is exactly like hers. But aside from this, I have seen her in quite a number of pictures and I like her natural way of acting, she is not a bit forced and I feel that one would enjoy knowing her.

Helen Hayes because she seems so sincere. I feel I might tell her all my troubles and she would be very sympathetic. She also has a lovely voice.

Satisfied

MARGARET FORCIER, of Woonsocket, R. I., is sincere about it, too:

I know it is very strange of me to talk that way, but I feel so glad for the runaway marriage of Frances Dee and Joel McCrea. It is the first time in all my life that I feel so happy about a runaway marriage. They are two famous stars whom I love very much. When I saw them together in "The Silver Cord" something in their eyes told me that they were meant for each other. And now they're married! What a happy ending for those two lives and I wish them luck with all my heart. Let me tell you that deep in my heart I would be even more happy to read in newspapers and magazines a year or two from now that the McCrea family numbers three.

(They are a nice couple—we agree. By the way, in spite of all rumors to the contrary Frances and Joel flatly refuse to make a picture together. Do you think they're wise?)

MARY LOU DIXON, of Warren, Pa., says:

Let's have more of Margaret Sullavan. "Only Yesterday" was made very sincere and beautiful by her wonderful work.

HELEN SANZ, of Los Angeles, Calif., chimes in with:

I saw "Only Yesterday" in fact the whole family did—and did we enjoy it! It was just the way you wanted it to be. I understand that Margaret Sullavan wants to return to the stage. You tell her for me that every one likes her screen work. She's just wonderful. We want to see her more often.

(The astounding Margaret may do "Little Man, What Now?" as her next picture. And Lew Ayres is tentatively set for the role of the Little Man.)

"Maedchen" Scores Again

MARY MONTGOMERY, of Detroit, Mich., cheers for Dorothea Wieck:

I can't find enough words to express my deep admiration of the way in which Dorothea Wieck portrayed her part—all of us who saw her are looking forward to her next picture. I have read over and over again letters from Americans lamenting the bringing of foreign stars into this country but where would we ever have found a Dorothea Wieck in this country? She is superb and deserves the praise of our country for the noble and tender presentation of Joana. May she have a successful career here and may we have many more clean, wholesome, inspiring pictures like "Cradle Song."

("Miss Fane's Baby Is Stolen" with the inimitable Baby LeRoy is her next. And then, they say, she goes back to Germany. It's whispered that she is very pro-Nazi. And in Hollywood . . . Well! But we dunno for sure.)

She Speaks Up for a Strong, Silent Man

MARTA M., of Detroit, Mich., wants to round up all those Gary Cooper fans:

For many months I've been reading the letters praising Clark Gable, Robert Montgomery and other favorites. But why, oh why, hasn't someone mentioned the splendid work being done by Gary Cooper? He was superb in "Farewell to Arms" and "One Sunday Afternoon." His acting is so real. So, come on Cooper fans and see how many nice things you can say about him.

It's Still Up in the Air

CONSTANT READER, Montreal, Canada, has a suggestion:

There seems to be great difficulty in deciding who is to play in "Merry Widow." I think that John Gilbert and Joan Crawford would be the best choice. This part would afford Joan to get away from her usual type of role, that of a very modern maiden. John Gilbert would be marvellous in the role of Prince Danilo. Unlike Chevalier, who seems only able to make himself silly on the screen, John Gilbert is a splendid actor and dancer.

(It may be Jeanette MacDonald and Maurice Chevalier and then again it may not.)

Printed in the U. S. A. by Art Color Printing Company, Dunellen, N. J.

SHE VAMPED HER HUSBAND AWAY FROM herself . . . !

Constance Bennett and Franchot Tone in a gay scene from "Moulin Rouge."

IMPOSSIBLE? NOT AT ALL. LISTEN TO THE TALE OF HELEN HALL!

- Talk about your queer situations—just hearken a moment to Helen Hall's tale of woe!

- To prove she can act, she masquerades as a beautiful French actress—notorious but nice—and she's so good at it that even her own husband is fooled by the wig and phoney accent. He comes in gulping, presumably on business, but Helen is very soon horrified to find that he's falling hard for her!

- What would you do in a case like this? Would you go right on vamping your husband or would you put on the brakes and save your happy home?

- What Helen Hall did makes a story you'll enjoy hugely—a story you can read in the new SCREEN ROMANCES. "Moulin Rouge," it's called—a gay, sprightly fictionization of Constance Bennett's new hit.

- Every month SCREEN ROMANCES offers 12 stimulating stories of the later, better motion pictures, generously illustrated with "stills" from the actual Hollywood productions. The result is grand entertainment. Take our advice and enjoy it. Stop at the next newsstand for the March SCREEN ROMANCES and experience the thrill of a dozen screen hits between the covers of one fascinating magazine!

Enjoy these 12 stories complete in March SCREEN ROMANCES

MOULIN ROUGE. Constance Bennett, Franchot Tone.
MAN OF TWO WORLDS. Francis Lederer, Elissa Landi.
DARK HAZARD. Edward G. Robinson, Genevieve Tobin.
MISS FANE'S BABY IS STOLEN. Dorothea Wieck, Baby LeRoy.
MASSACRE. Richard Barthelmess, Ann Dvorak.
LET'S FALL IN LOVE. Edmund Lowe, Miriam Jordan.
CATHERINE THE GREAT. Marlene Dietrich.
HI, NELLIE! Paul Muni, Glenda Farrell.
THE WOMEN IN HIS LIFE. Otto Kruger, Una Merkel, Ben Lyon.
EASY TO LOVE. Adolphe Menjou, Mary Astor.
CROSS COUNTRY CRUISE. Lew Ayres, Alice White.
PALOOKA. Jimmy Durante, Lupe Velez, Stuart Erwin.

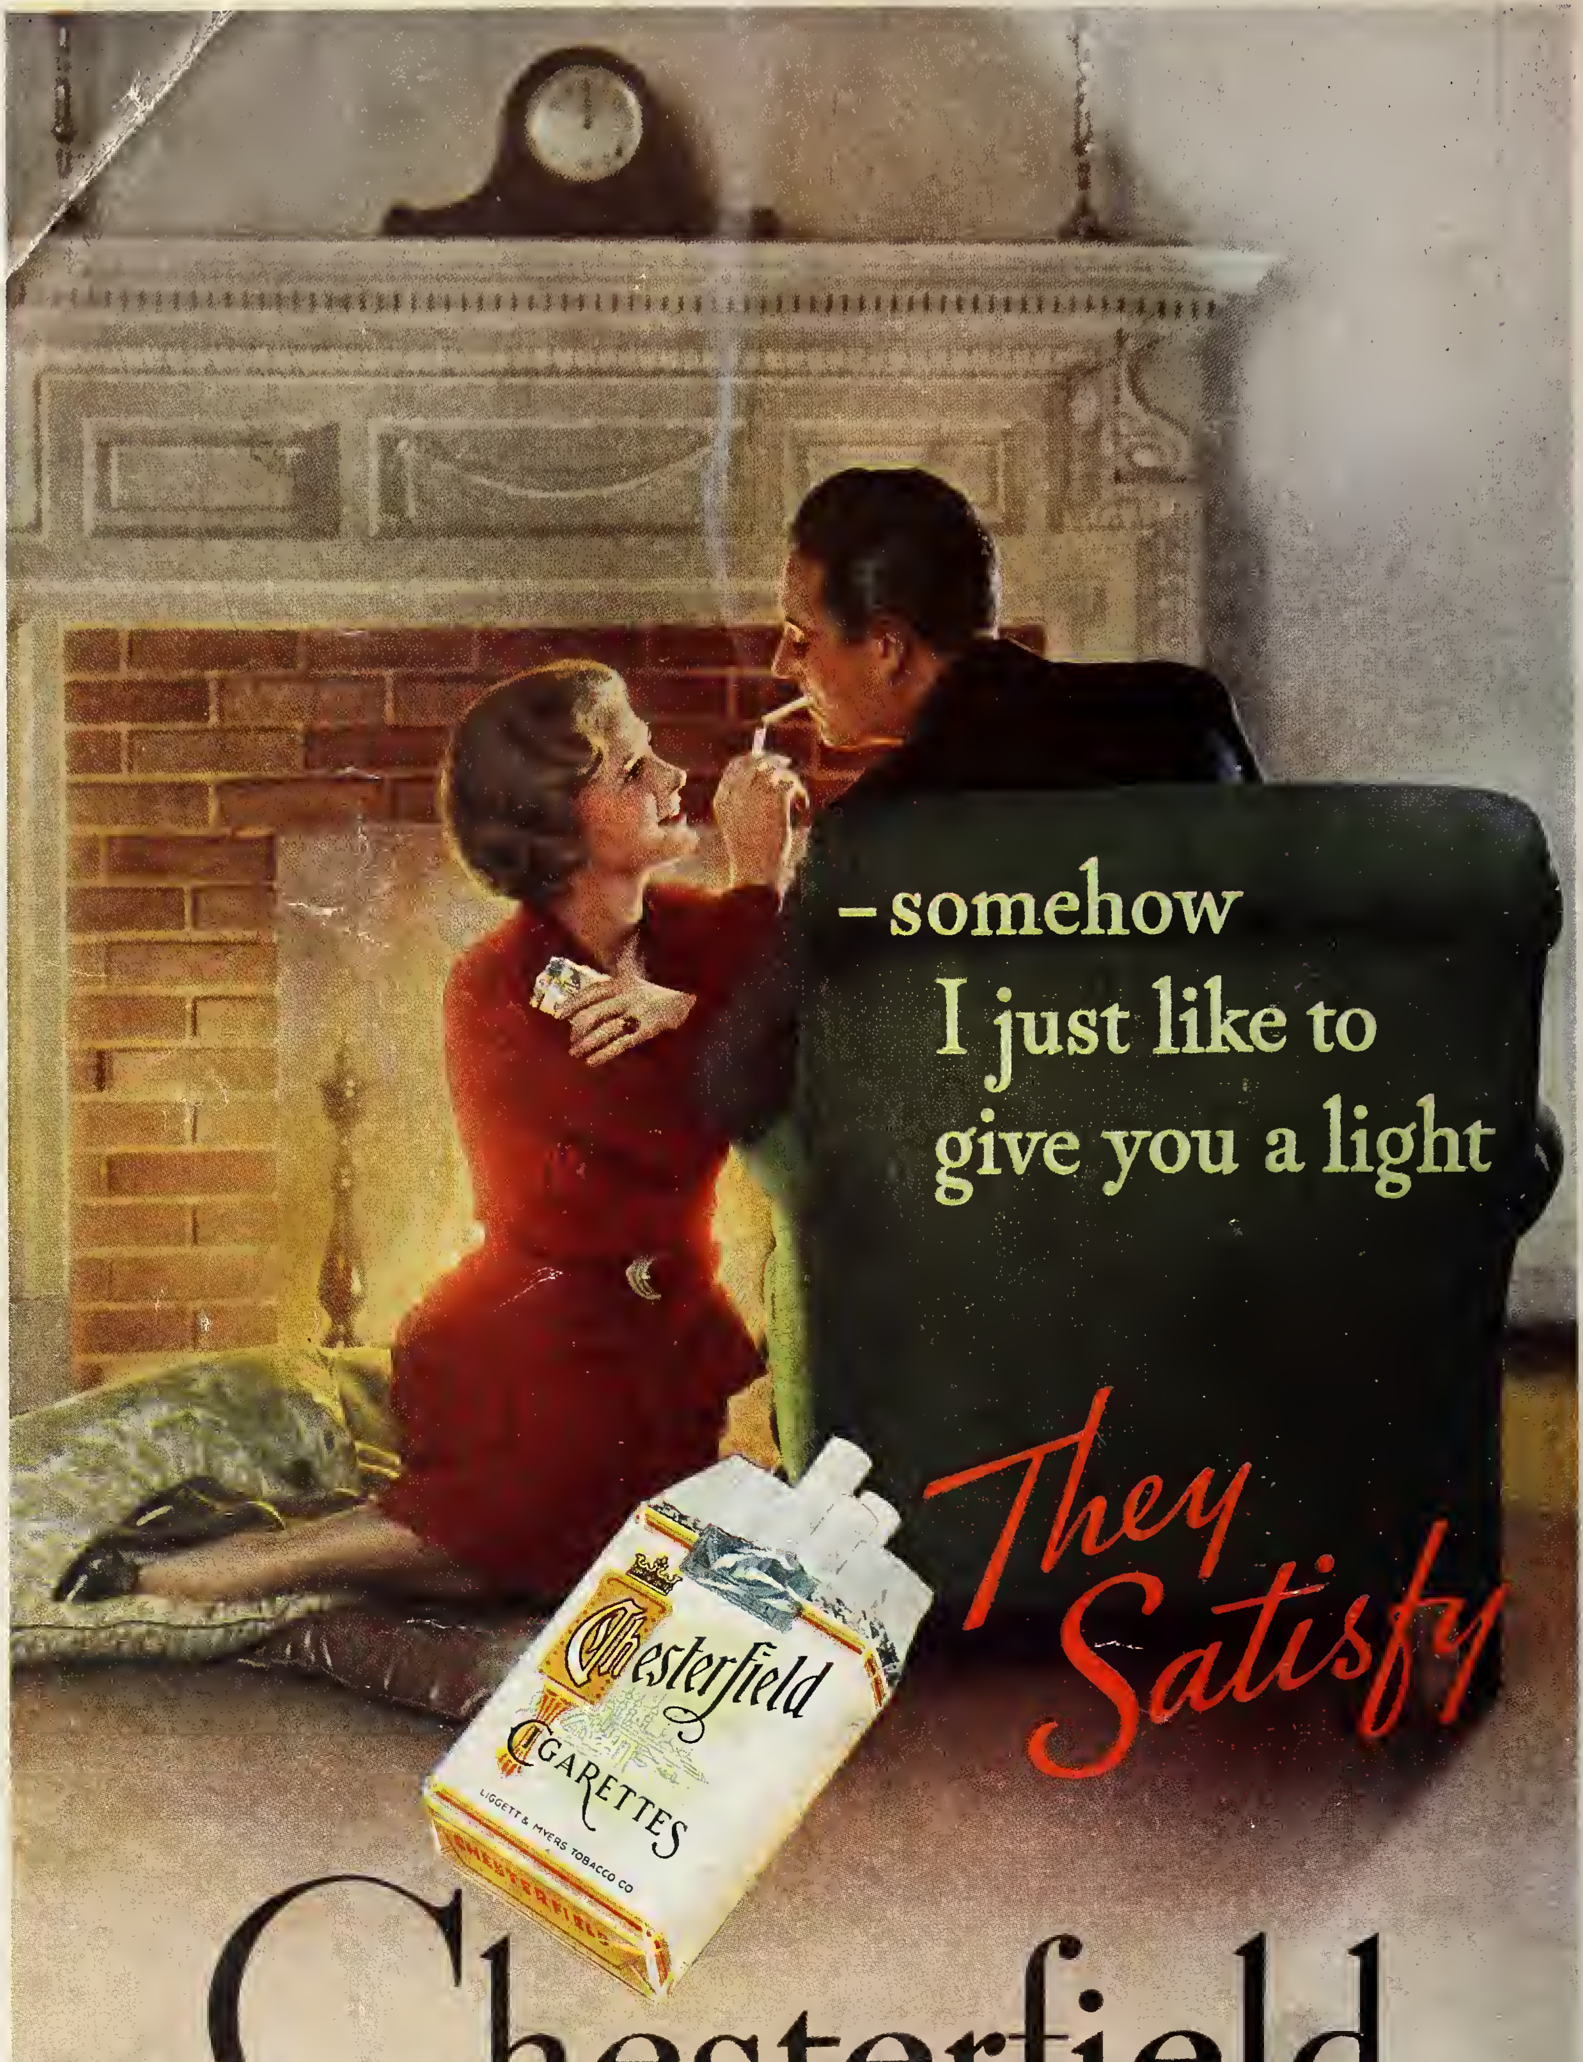
Scores of Illustrations from the Screen Productions

MARCH ISSUE AT NEWSSTANDS NOW

SCREEN ROMANCES

THE 12 BEST SCREEN STORIES OF THE MONTH!

MAY -3 1934
©ciK 22330



–somehow
I just like to give you a light
They Satisfy
Chesterfield
CIGARETTES
LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO CO
CHESTERFIELD
Chesterfield

the cigarette that's MILDER • the cigarette that TASTES BETTER

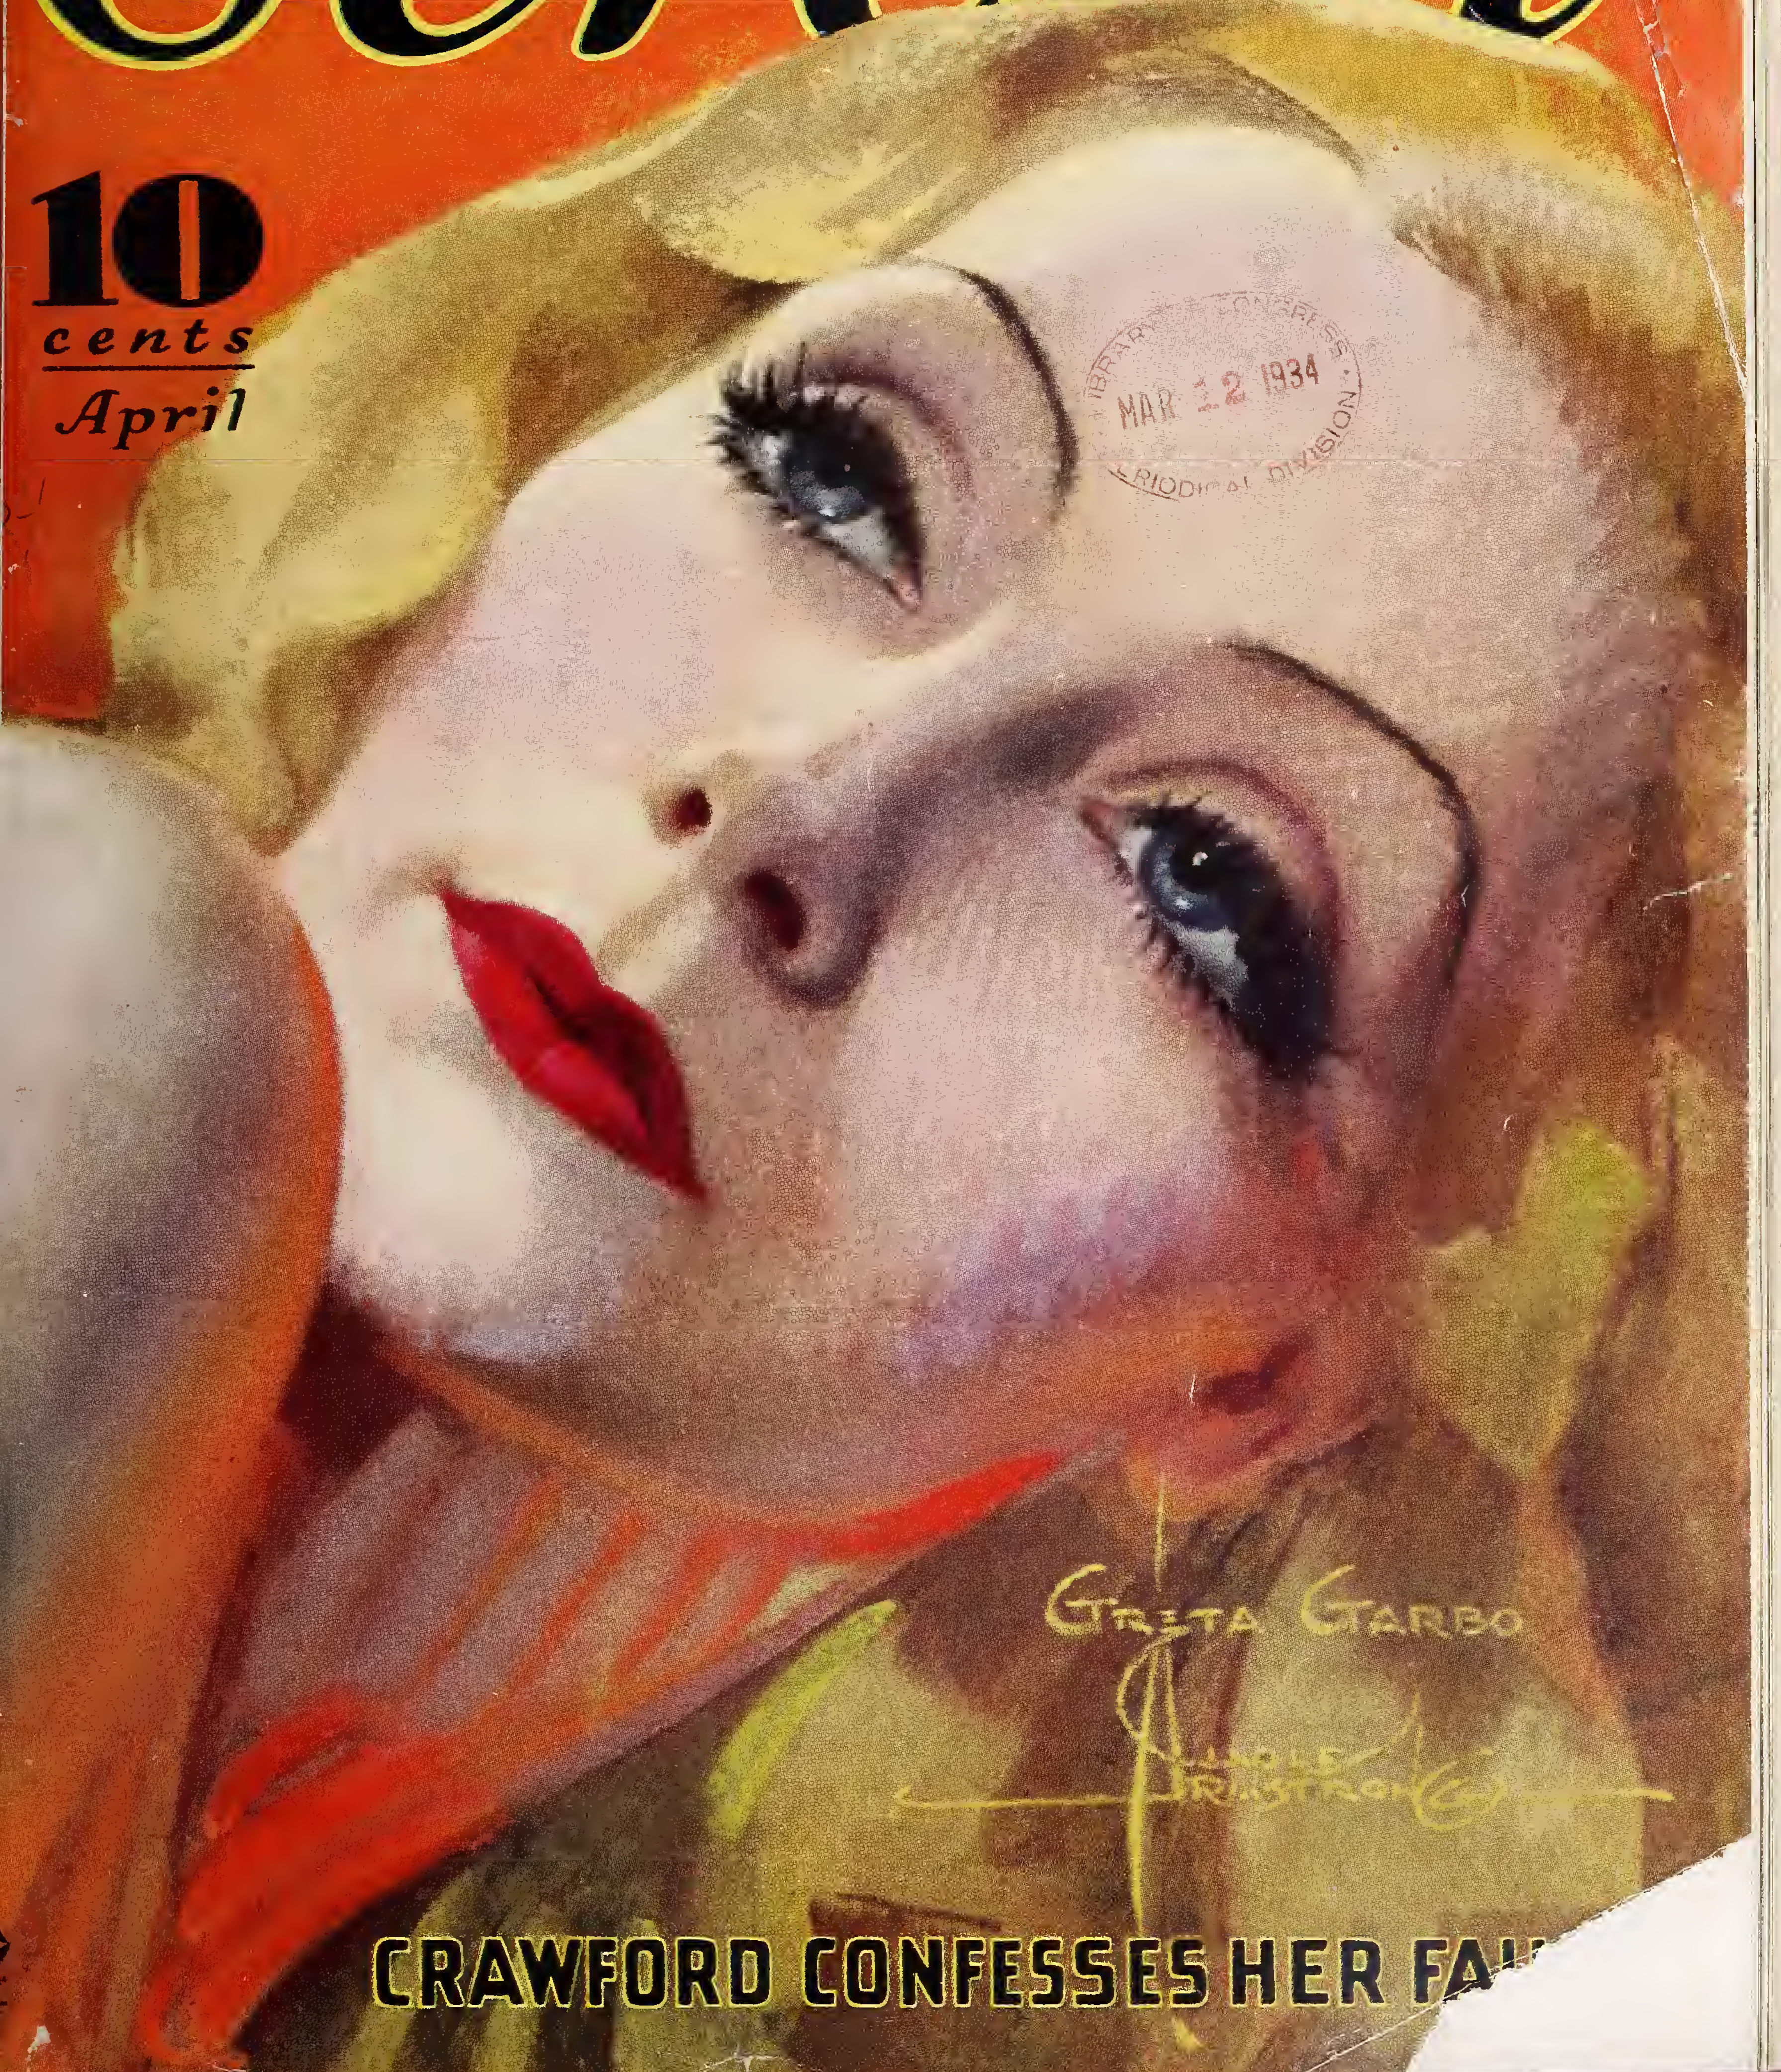
© 1934, Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION OF A CREEN MAGAZINE

MODERN Screen

10 cents
April

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS
MAR 12 1934
PERIODICAL DIVISION



CRAWFORD CONFESSES HER FAI

"TINTEX IS JUST AS SIMPLE AS A-B-C!"
John Held Jr

Tintex Acts Like Magic on Faded Fabrics!

● Presto — these famous Tints and Dyes restore gay color to faded Apparel and Home Decorations!

"WHAT IN THE WORLD WOULD WE DO WITHOUT TINTEX!"
John Held Jr

In Your Home use Tintex for

Curtains
Drapes
Doilies
Dinner Cloths
Luncheon Sets
Blankets
Cushions
Bed Spreads
Table Runners
Slip Covers

THERE'S no need to have washed-out looking "undies", dresses or any other faded article in your wardrobe. There's no reason why you should put up with faded curtains or other drab decorations in your home.

●

And you don't have to buy new ones either. Simply buy Tintex. These famous Tints and Dyes cost but a few cents—but what color-magic they bring you!

●

Faded fabrics are restored to their original color-beauty so easily, so quickly when you use Tintex. Or you can give everything different colors if you wish. The results are always perfect!

●

Do as millions of other women are doing. Make your wardrobe and home decorations color-smart, color-new with Tintex. Choose from its 35 brilliant, long-lasting colors.

In Your Wardrobe use Tintex for Underthings

Negligees
Dresses
Coats
Sweaters
Scarfs
Stockings
Slips
Blouses
Children's Clothes

On sale at drug stores and notion counters everywhere

Tintex

. . World's largest selling
TINTS and DYES
PARK & TILFORD, Distributors

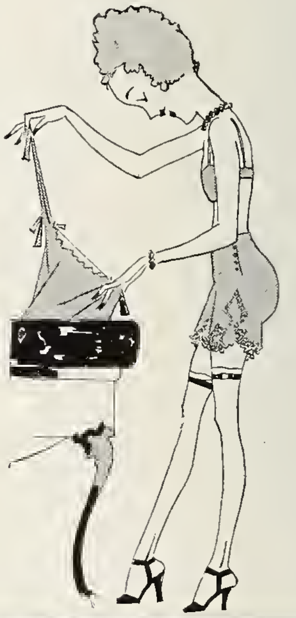
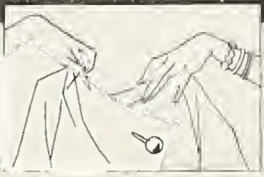
Tintex
TINTS AS YOU RINSE
PINK
PARK & TILFORD

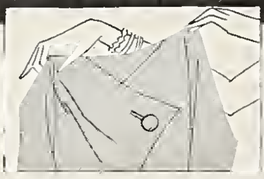


To Change Dark Colors to Light—use Tintex COLOR REMOVER

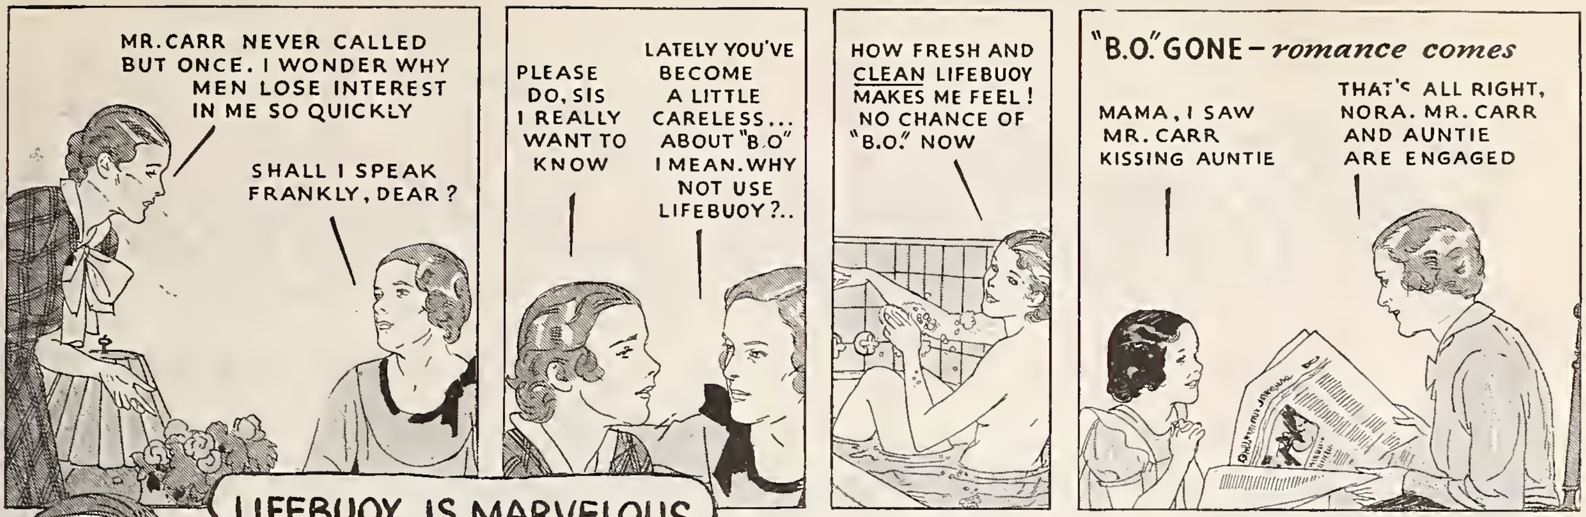
Supposing you have a dark dress (or any other dark-colored article) and are pining for a lighter colored one . . .



Tintex Color Remover will safely and speedily take out all trace of color (including black) from any fabric . . .



Then it can be redyed or tinted with Tintex Tints and Dyes in any new shade to suit yourself—either light or dark.



MR. CARR NEVER CALLED BUT ONCE. I WONDER WHY MEN LOSE INTEREST IN ME SO QUICKLY SHALL I SPEAK FRANKLY, DEAR?
PLEASE DO, SIS I REALLY WANT TO KNOW
LATELY YOU'VE BECOME A LITTLE CARELESS... ABOUT "B.O." I MEAN. WHY NOT USE LIFEBUOY?..
HOW FRESH AND CLEAN LIFEBUOY MAKES ME FEEL! NO CHANCE OF "B.O." NOW
"B.O." GONE—romance comes
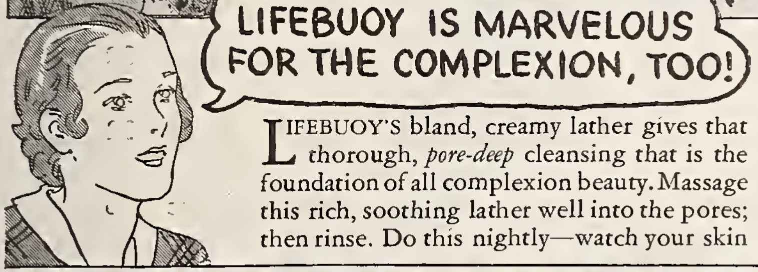
MAMA, I SAW MR. CARR KISSING AUNTIE
THAT'S ALL RIGHT, NORA. MR. CARR AND AUNTIE ARE ENGAGED



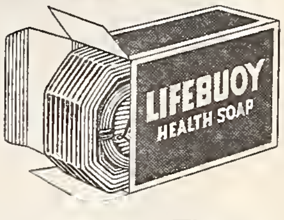
LIFEBUOY IS MARVELOUS FOR THE COMPLEXION, TOO!

Lifebuoy's bland, creamy lather gives that thorough, pore-deep cleansing that is the foundation of all complexion beauty. Massage this rich, soothing lather well into the pores; then rinse. Do this nightly—watch your skin grow clearer, fresher — lovelier than ever!

Its very scent is different!

Clean, fresh, vanishing as you rinse, Lifebuoy's pleasant, hygienic scent tells you this delightful toilet soap purifies pores, gives extra protection against "B. O." (body odor).

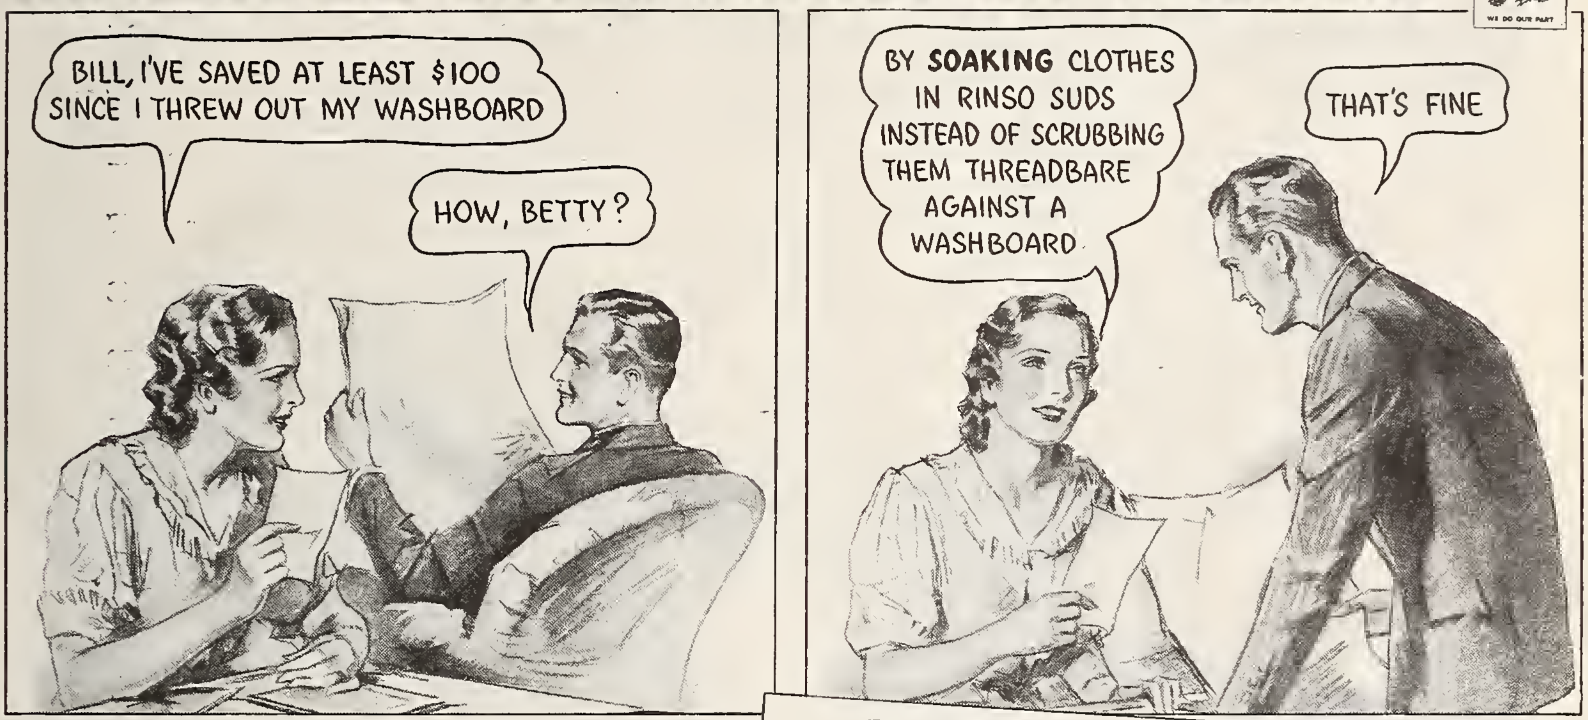
Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau.



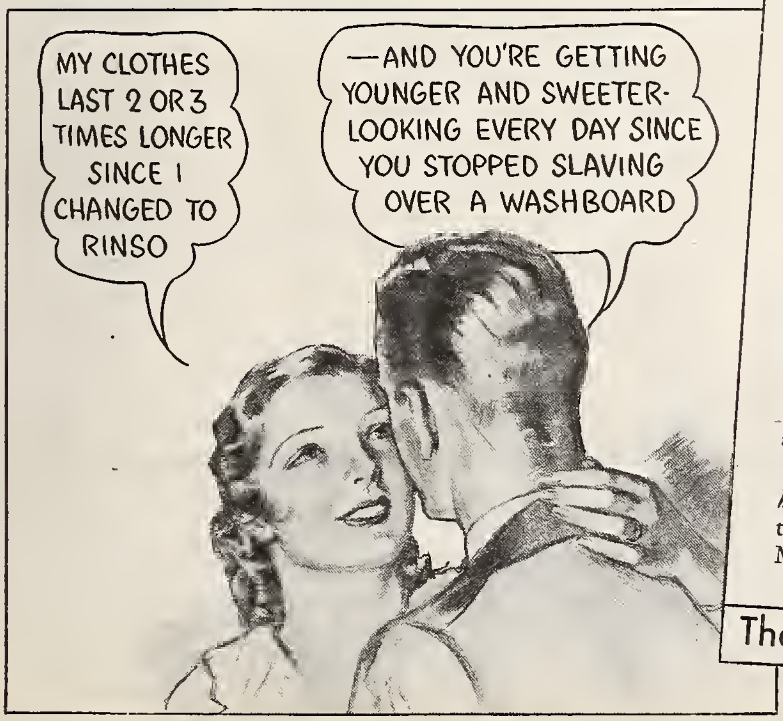
LIFEBUOY HEALTH SOAP

HOW BETTY SAVES MONEY ON WASHDAY

NRA WE DO OUR PART



BILL, I'VE SAVED AT LEAST $100 SINCE I THREW OUT MY WASHBOARD
HOW, BETTY?
BY SOAKING CLOTHES IN RINSO SUDS INSTEAD OF SCRUBBING THEM THREADBARE AGAINST A WASHBOARD
THAT'S FINE



MY CLOTHES LAST 2 OR 3 TIMES LONGER SINCE I CHANGED TO RINSO
—AND YOU'RE GETTING YOUNGER AND SWEETER-LOOKING EVERY DAY SINCE YOU STOPPED SLAVING OVER A WASHBOARD

RINSO WASHES CLOTHES WHITER?
YES – 4 OR 5 SHADES WHITER!

Approved by Good Housekeeping Institute.

Be clever! Use the soap that saves scrubbing and boiling — that does away with the old-fashioned washboard.

Be thrifty! Use the soap that soaks out dirt—makes clothes last 2 or 3 times longer—saves you lots of money. Many women save as much as $100 or more on clothes washed this safe, easy way.

Be modern! Use Rinso. Its lively suds last and last — even in hardest water. Wonderful suds that soak your week's wash whiter than ever. The makers of 40 famous washers recommend Rinso. Makes dish-washing and all cleaning easier, too. Saves the hands.

A PRODUCT OF LEVER BROTHERS CO.

The biggest-selling package soap in America

FEB 28 1934

©CIB 216967

Modern Screen

FOR APRIL

Special Stories

"I'M A TERRIBLE PERSON!" SAYS JOAN CRAWFORD.....Katherine Albert 28
One of our most honest stars frankly confesses her faults

THE LIFE AND LOVES OF LYLE TALBOT..................Walter Ramsey 30
The true story of his early years—and the sweet thrills of first romance

SO YOU WON'T TALK, CONNIE!..............................Carter Bruce 32
Why does the Bennett girl keep mum when she does something kind and generous?

HOW I'M TEACHING MY DAUGHTER TO FACE LIFE.............Helen Hayes 56
(As told to Nanette Kutner)
Wise and tender advice on one of the greatest problems that confront women

Features

PLEASE, MR. DEMILLE, WHAT IS GLAMOR?.................... Martha Kerr 34
Cecil B. ought to know—he's seen enough of it!

WHAT'S HAPPENED, GABLE?............................. Walter Ramsey 40
He's unhappy. His career is endangered. Why? He tells you

GUARDIAN ANGELS OF HOLLYWOOD................... Robert Fender 42
How the old-timers keep the newcomers out of the dangerous pitfalls of film town

HE WENT UP TO SEE HER ONE TIME..............................Dena Reed 47
A new, engrossing chapter to add to the book of Mae West's life

WHO IS FREDDIE'S BOSS?..Jim Kahn 48
Fredric March himself is only too ready to agree when we say "It's the Missus!"

TICKLING HOLLYWOOD'S RIBS (Illustrated by Jack Welch).........Jack Jamison 58
Proving that your favorites can take a practical joke

ANNA STEN—"PASSIONATE PEASANT".......................Lynn Farnol 60
Meet the star of "Nana," who brings a new warmth and allure to the screen

THE HUSBAND WHO NEVER GOES HOME (Illustrated by Jack Welch) Gladys Hall 66
A fascinating revelation about that sterling actor, Lewis Stone

THE CAREER OF AN UGLY DUCKLING...................Beatrice Macdonald 68
Concluding the life story of the glamorous Katharine Hepburn

Fashion and Home

QUEEN CHRISTINA, 1934... 70
Have you seen the new "Queen Christina" dresses? These were inspired by Garbo herself

ON DRESS PARADE..Margery Wells 72
Wherein fascinating fashions from the latest films pass in review

THE MODERN HOSTESS... 77
Who likes pie? Everybody! And here are the most delicious recipes!

Departments

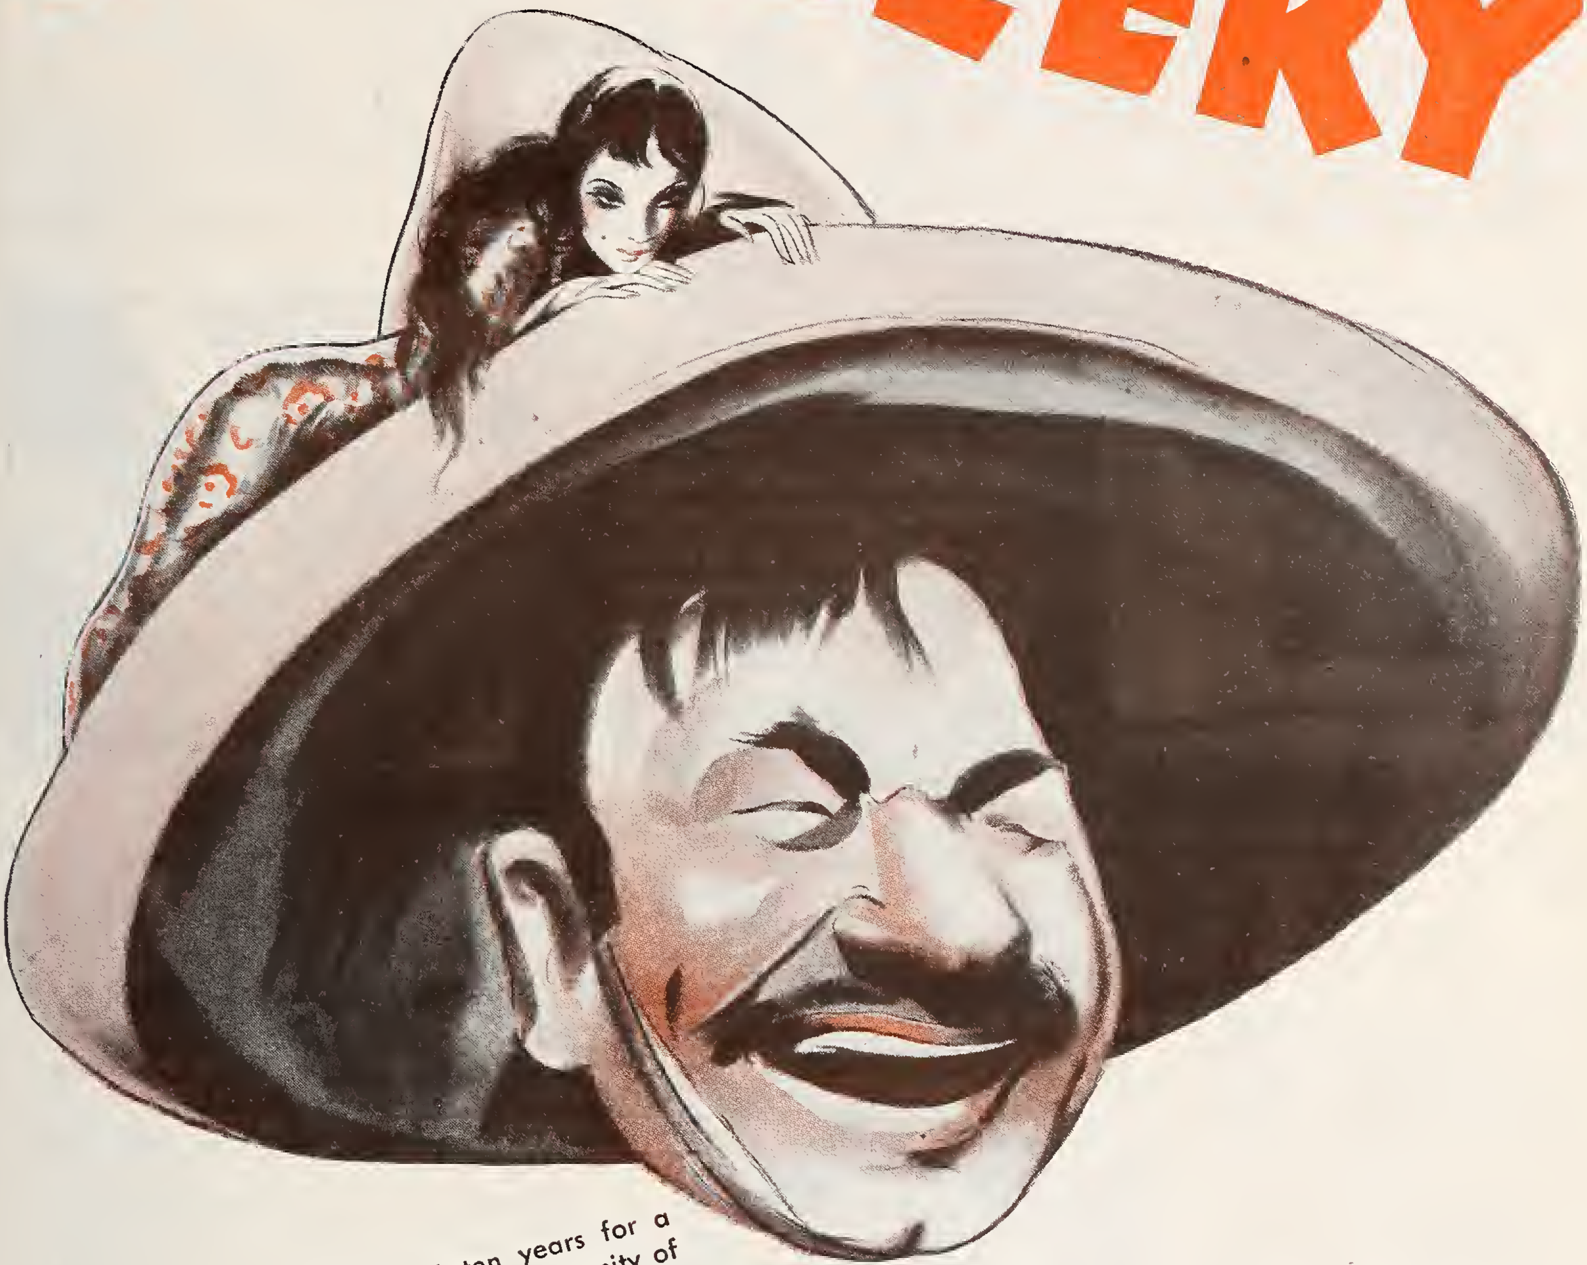
BEATUY ADVICE.................. 6
BETWEEN YOU AND ME.......... 12
PICTURE NEWS.................... 14
LET'S TALK ABOUT LOVE.......... 17
THEY VISIT NEW YORK........... 35
GOOD NEWS....................... 36
REVIEWS.......................... 44
ALL JOKING ASIDE.............. 50
THE REPORT CARD............... 130
THE INFORMATION DESK......... 132

MARY BURGUM, Managing Editor

REGINA CANNON, Associate Editor ABRIL LAMARQUE, Art Editor WALTER RAMSEY, Western Representative

Published monthly and copyrighted 1934 by Dell Publishing Company, Incorporated. Office of publication at Washington and South Avenues, Dunellen, N. J. Executive and editorial offices, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y. George T. Delacorte, Jr., President; H. Meyer, Vice-President; M. Delacorte, Secretary. Vol. 7, No. 5, April, 1934. Printed in the U. S. A. Price in the United States, $1.20 a year; 10c a copy. Canadian subscriptions, $2.40 a year. Foreign subscriptions, $2.20 a year. Entered as second class matter September 18, 1930, at the Post office at Dunellen New Jersey, under act of March 3, 1879 The publishers accept no responsibility for the return of unsolicited material.

Wallace BEERY



The screen which has waited ten years for a picture to equal the thrill, the epic humanity of "The Big Parade" now welcomes "VIVA VILLA." Because in its 1001 nights of amazing, romantic adventure . . . in its story of riotous revolution and revelry...in its blood-tingling heroism is entertainment that will pack the theatres of the nation!

"VIVA VILLA"

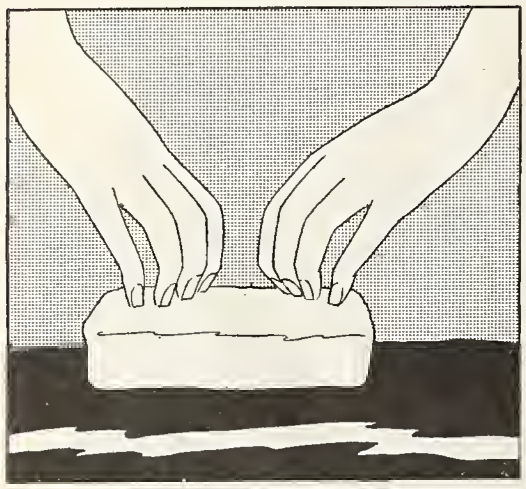
An all-star cast with thousands of others in METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S Giant of Screen Triumphs!

Directed by JACK CONWAY
Produced by DAVID O. SELZNICK

Beauty Advice

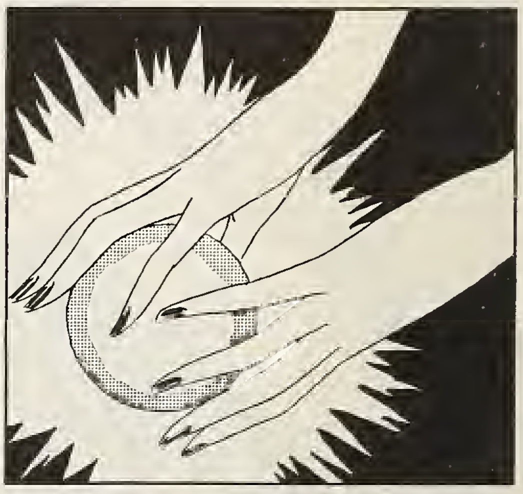
COLD CREAM
OLIVE OIL
MUSCLE OIL

"Hands up!" How do they look? Here's how to make 'em look better!



By MARY BIDDLE

If you would have hands which are lovely, you really need only the simplest care. (Left) Lining the fingernails with pure white soap is a good idea if you have some dirty work to do. (Right) Bright polish stays "in"—and is getting brighter!



HANDS have been neglected. Very much neglected. How often do you see a pretty, well-kept face and hands which have been allowed to age and wither? That's a pity, for often the hands have about them more expression than a face could ever hope to portray.

Well, I suppose we had to look after our faces first of all. But now that we've more or less accomplished the facial problems, what about the poor paws? You know, we are flashing them about all the time under the bosses' noses with the stenographic pencils, on the typewriter keys, or we are dealing out cards with them at a bridge table. They are forever in the limelight. And how awful some of them do look!

Painting up the fingernails isn't the entire secret. Not at all. I have seen glittering finger-tips on positively neglected hands. They look horrible that way.

How about a campaign for softer, prettier, more well-kept hands and fingers? Let's all join together right this minute on that important subject.

That dreaded phrase, "constant attention," is the deep, dark secret. But the process is easy enough once you have the idea and have things so arranged that you can rub in the proper ingredients in the shortest possible space of time.

Washing, so much of which must be done for the hands all the time, dries them out no end, and the skin becomes hard and dry and brittle. To get the better of that soap-and-water reaction, keep a bottle of hand lotion over the washstand, or over the sink, and dab it on as soon as you hear the water stop running and have rubbed the towel on to take off the superfluous drops.

This is your basic principle. Stick to it. That bottle is your mascot. Regard it as your ally, and you will never be one of those to poke unsightly fingers into the faces of your friends and admirers.

All this does a lot, but remember that dryness is your arch enemy as far as your hands are concerned. Rob the cold cream jar to fight dryness. Every time you "do" your face, take the superfluous cream remaining on the hands and rub it well into them. It all helps—and helps a lot.

Skin around the fingernails has a nasty little habit of getting hard and tough, so that you begin to wonder if you are growing horns of some sort. That little annoying condition will respond quite happily to more applications of thick cream. And do you know about muscle oil, so highly recommended for wrinkles? Well, try it on the hardened fingernail places and see what a miracle it can accomplish. Why, it has a softening power which is nothing short of marvelous. Between you and me, I've heard tell that it is nothing less than castor oil, refined with a bit of perfume. Anyway, olive oil will do about the same trick and a bit more effectively, if it is heated just a bit before it is used. Now, don't let me hear you whimpering that the expense is too great after all these inside hints I have slipped you.

With the constant application of olive oil and cream to the cuticle around the nails, very little other attention is needed, for you can keep pushing back this skin with a Turkish towel and find that you will always have pretty, well-groomed fingernails.

However, that stuff—a liquid—known as cuticle remover has a miraculous way of removing any dried skin that may be lurking about. Dab it on freely with a bit of cotton and then, with an orange-wood stick, push back the loosened cuticle. This brings out the moons in your fingers in a shining way and makes you wonder at their clearness.

All this whitening effect, that the manicurists like to stuff under the tips of the nails is just a bit thick—often much too thick, don't you think

(Continued on page 119)

PHOTOS BY REMIE LOHSE

LANNY ROSS

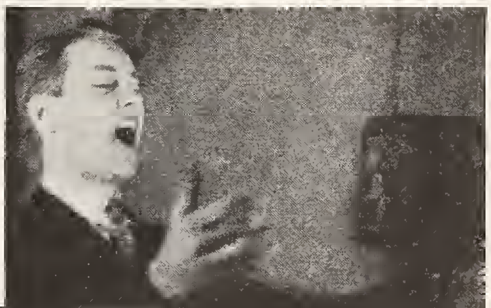
From the radio to the screen, comes Lanny Ross, singing star of the Maxwell House Coffee Showboat Hour. For two years, one of the most popular performers on the air, his thrilling voice and charming personality will be heard and seen from now on in PARAMOUNT PICTURES.

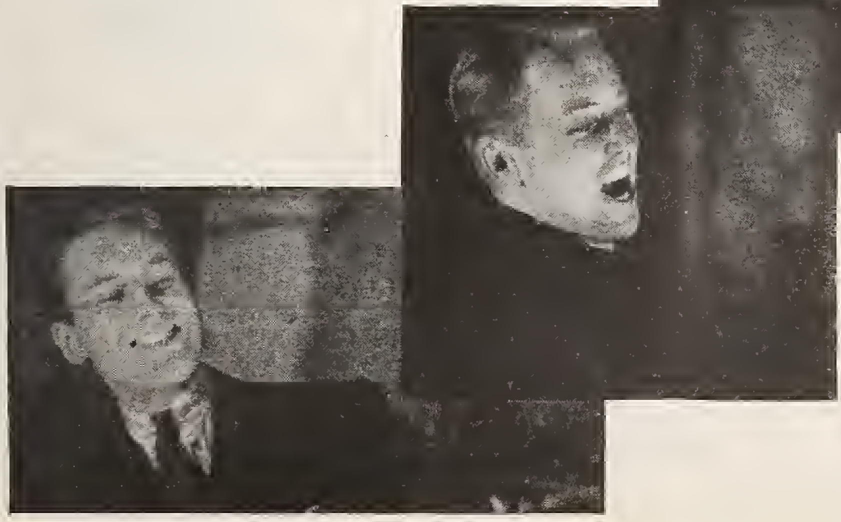
"MELODY IN SPRING"

with

Charlie Ruggles
Mary Boland
Ann Sothern

Directed by Norman McLeod. A Paramount Picture..will introduce Lanny Ross to motion picture audiences





THE WINNERS!

OF MODERN SCREEN'S JOAN CRAWFORD "DANCING LADY" CONTEST

La-deez and gentlemen! Your attention please! We wish to make an announcement which will bring joy to the hearts of twenty-nine people and end the suspense in the hearts of about ten thousand others. In other words, we wish to announce the prize-winners—all twenty-nine of 'em—in the Joan Crawford "Dancing Lady" Contest which we ran in the November and December issues of MODERN SCREEN.

After we had finished paying off the extra help we had to employ to help us take care of the tremendous mail which swamped this office as a result of the contest, and after we had, following long, long vigils and extravagant midnight-oil burning, decided upon the very best entries from among the many good ones, we—er—where were we? Oh, yes—we made our decisions. And it wasn't easy, be assured of that.

The requirements of the contest were, as you doubtless remember, to put together, and arrange in the proper order, eight jig-sawed stills from "Dancing Lady." Over and above that, contestants were required to write a description of Joan Crawford in ten words or less. The prizes go to those contestants who have, in the opinion of the judges, correctly fulfilled the first requirements, most aptly fulfilled the second and presented their entries with the greatest neatness and originality.

The first prize is a trip to Hollywood, with all expenses paid, to spend a week there. The winner will visit and be entertained at various gay and interesting Hollywood places, as the guest of Miss Joan Crawford, experiencing the glamour of filmdom.

The first prize—the trip to Hollywood — goes to: Miss Jean Kraft, 2536 East 124th Street, Shaker Heights, Ohio.

The second prize, a Crosley Shelvador Refrigerator, goes to: Mr. Freddy Jeannent, 59-29—41st Avenue, Woodside, Long Island, N. Y.

The third prize—one hundred dollars in cash—goes to: Mr. Murray MacDonald, 517 Inspector Street, Montreal, Canada.

The fourth prize—a Crosley Dual-Tone Low-Boy radio—goes to: Miss Helen Reher, 6164 Haverford Avenue, Philadelphia. Pennsylvania.

The ten fifth prizes of one Max Factor make-up kit, each, go to: Miss Ann O'Neill, 566 West 159th Street, New York, N. Y.; Miss Martha Mendenhall Rippel, 90 N. Pearl Street, Buffalo, N. Y.; Miss Helen G. Weldin, 1112 North 28th Street, Camden, N. J.; Miss Gertrude Dorries, 947 South Soto Street, Los Angeles, Calif.; Miss Thelma L. Carson, 1908 Willow Street, Huntington, W. Va.; Miss Constance Wills, 83-10 35th Avenue, Apt. 3P, Jackson Heights, N. Y.; Miss Mona Middlebrook, 123 West Columbian Avenue, Neenah, Wis.; Miss Helen E. Winter, 15 Reservoir Street, Worcester, Mass.; Miss Ruth Edwards, 681 Johnson Avenue, Bedford, Ohio.; Miss Alice Putnam, 503 East Pleasant Street, Freeport, Ill.

(Continued on page 113)

HEAR—"DON'T SAY GOOD NIGHT"

And now—the greatest of all the great Warner Bros. star-gemmed musicals!

"GOIN' TO HEAVEN ON A MULE" • "WONDER BAR"

"WHY DO I DREAM THOSE DREAMS"

"VIVE LA FRANCE"

"WONDER BAR"

KAY FRANCIS

GUY KIBBEE

DICK POWELL

AL JOLSON

HUGH HERBERT

HAL LEROY

RICARDO CORTEZ

DOLORES DEL RIO

FIFI D'ORSAY

The most amazing show ever conceived—the one and only "Wonder Bar"! The producers of the screen's most glorious musicals now bring you the master performances of the world's master performers! 4 breath-taking spectacles staged by Busby Berkeley, creator of the sensational numbers of "Gold Diggers" and "Fashions of 1934" . . . 5 rousing song hits . . . and a thousand other thrills and surprises from the director of "42nd St." and "Footlight Parade"—Lloyd Bacon!

LAUGHTER!
SONG!...
DRAMA!...
SPECTACLE!
A First National Picture

ALL THINGS Considered

BY THE EDITOR

BETWEEN you and me . . . I get to wondering why . . . with all the talent they have in Hollywood . . . and all the money . . . and the marvelous writers . . . and their research departments and high-powered directors . . . and everything . . . they can't just once give us . . . a really good . . . true-to-type . . . picture of school or college life. I mean to say . . . they do make college and school pictures . . . but they're never quite the real thing . . . are they? The sets are too luxurious . . . and the clothes too fancy, and it all doesn't quite click . . . does it?

And other times . . . I get to wondering why . . . they don't make pictures . . . based on . . . some of the novels we have all read . . . and loved. I can think of several . . . and you can probably think of more. Did any of you . . . ever read any of the novels of a lady named Baroness Orczy? Weren't they exciting? And I do think . . . that our Pilgrim fathers . . . haven't had a break from Hollywood . . . for these many moons . . . and why couldn't some smart producer . . . make a talkie version of . . . "To Have and to Hold" . . . which Bert Lytell . . . and Betty Compson . . . did in the silent days. I wish they'd film some more . . . of the Louisa M. Alcott stories. Remember "An Old-Fashioned Girl"? . . . And the one . . . (I forget the name) . . . about Rose, who had eight cousins . . . all boys . . . all of whom . . . fell in love with her.

I admit . . . that all this . . . is just my personal opinion . . . and maybe others wouldn't like the same thing . . . that I'd like . . . or you'd like. Across the street from my office . . . is a large wholesale house . . . and in one window . . . sits a very important executive . . . with a mahogany desk . . . and a platinum secretary . . . and six or eight . . . telephones. And on the floor above him . . . sits a little Italian girl . . . at a plain deal table . . . and all day long . . . she inspects . . . men's neckties . . . and packs them neatly . . . in cardboard boxes. I know . . . that the movie that would suit . . . the executive . . . wouldn't suit . . . my little necktie-inspector . . . And if both should happen . . . to see the same movie . . . one will say it's grand . . . and the other will say . . . it's terrible . . .

Well . . . I've said enough . . . about some of the pictures . . . I'd like to see . . . And now I'd like you . . . to say something . . . about the pictures you'd like to see . . . If you'll write and tell me your opinions . . . and your wishes . . . I'll be delighted . . . to publish your letter . . . in your Between You and Me department . . . on page twelve . . . of this issue . . . (advt.)

How's about it, then? . . . Let's have a . . . "Picture I'd Like to See" conference.

Now . . . .

An Exquisite New Castile Shampoo

George Evans

MARCHAND'S

CASTILE SHAMPOO

NEW—Marchand's have discovered a formula for a decidedly superior shampoo.

EXQUISITE—Made to make hair lustrous and lovely, as well as to cleanse it.

If you have been using any old soap or shampoo, use Marchand's Castile Shampoo for a change, for a wonderful change in the condition of your scalp and the beauty of your hair.

Ordinary soaps leave tiny soap particles in the hair (despite rinsing) making it dull, streaky—also tending to dry out the scalp. Marchand's contains the highest grade of virgin olive oil to nourish the scalp and help retard dandruff. Marchand's cleanses gently and thoroughly—leaving the hair exquisitely soft, easy to comb—perfect for waving or dressing. The natural color is not lightened or changed.

Best for children's tender scalps and for men with dandruff. Exceptionally low price—

A LITTLE GOES A LONG WAY

Ask your druggist or send for a bottle—fill out coupon; mail with 35c (coins or stamps) to C. Marchand Co., 251 West 19th St., New York City.

Please send me your Shampoo—35c enclosed.

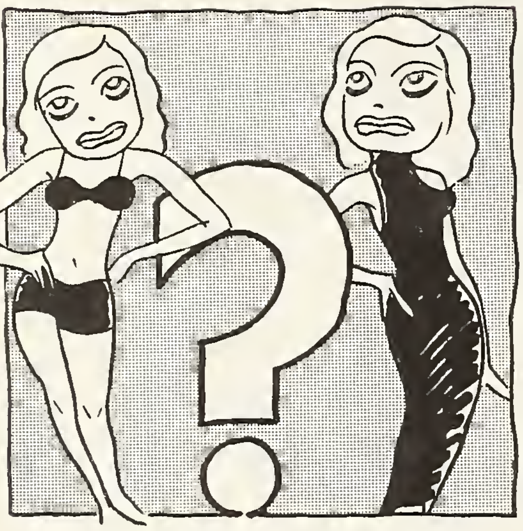
Name..

Address................. City............. State......

Druggist......................... Address...............

NRA MEMBER U.S. WE DO OUR PART

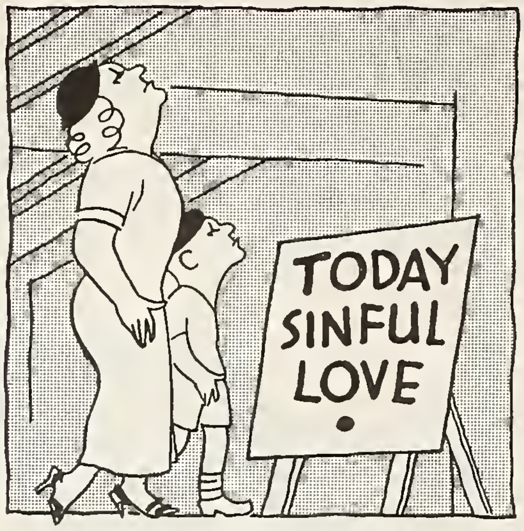
Between you and me



The dahnce or the drahma?

. . . This is the readers' corner—to come right out and speak your minds about movie subjects and movie people. If you're mad or glad about something, write and tell us

He-man roles for Cromwell!



Oh, those misleading titles!

Hooray for Our Scotty!

Greater Variety for Joan?

From AN ARDENT CRAWFORD FAN of Lynn, Mass., comes this plea:

I have been reading that in the future Joan Crawford will play in the Dancing Daughter type of story. Although I realize that she was splendid in that type and far surpassed anybody else in those roles, I don't think she ought to be kept in that type of part continually, but should alternate with dramatic roles. For isn't she the best dramatic actress on the screen today? Because "Rain" turned out to be such a poor picture, fans quickly criticized her acting, instead of realizing that she didn't have a ghost of a chance, handicapped by such a dull, monotonous picture.

I admit Diana of "Our Dancing Daughters," Billie of "Our Modern Maidens," Geraldine of "Our Blushing Brides" and Bingo of "Untamed" couldn't be beat. But neither could Mary Turner of "Paid," Bonnie of "Laughing Sinners," Marian Martin of "Possessed" and Letty Lynton herself.

Think it over, M-G-M, and give the public the chance to enjoy her in both types of roles.

Help! Man Overboard!

B. I. HUTCHINSON of Norwalk, Conn., shouts over the deckrail:

Throw out the life-line to Richard Cromwell! Save a promising young actor from disaster!

Here you have talent being wasted in such pictures as "Hoopla."

What Dick needs is a masculine role. Don't spoil him by shoving him into the arms of women in all his pictures.

And Now What's Wrong With the Movies?

"Plenty!" says MISS M. E. SCOTT, who doesn't give her address:

Wrong titles—which drive away people who want something elevating or clean.

Too sensational movies, which, for the most part, deal too largely with the sex side of life.

A recent development in the movies of running scenes together to show the passage of many hours in a few seconds. This has no real beauty, is not seen clearly, ruins the eyesight and has no justification, as far as I can see.

Lest you think I'm purely a fault-finder, however, I'll say that many times I have been persuaded to go to a movie having a very suggestive name and have found the film to be an excellent one. However, I should have been turned against it, of my own will, by its wrong title.

Scotty is "O.K. Personified," Says an English Fan

A fan in London, England, by the name of HARRY DAVIS, writes to say:

I like the interviews and everything in your magazine, but one of my favorite features is Scotty's roving camera. It's O. K. personified.

Now, I wonder if you would be kind enough to let us hear all about my favorite star, Mary Astor. There's something about that gal I like. (It's on our memo pad, Harry Davis. And thanks for the bouquets.)

Lady, Be Disappointed No More!

A letter from A. BRYANT of Toronto, Canada:

I am positively disappointed when I read the letters in each MODERN SCREEN and find never a word concerning our wonderful child actors.

There are many, including Jack Cooper, Tad Alexander, Jackie

Searle, and David Durant. But the mere mention of the name Dickie Moore brings to my mind's eye his beautiful, winsome little face and his infectious laugh. That boy sure leaves all others way behind. His pathetic, appealing ways brings a lump into my throat. And his jolly and mischievous laugh is a real cure for the blues.

(In "Gallant Lady" with Ann Harding, Dickie is more lovable than ever. The scene where he is naughty and won't apologize when Otto Kruger tells him to, is one of the most natural bits of child acting we have ever seen. Don't miss that picture.)

And Not a Divorce Rumor to Date!

Thrilled over the sweet love story of Joel McCrea and Frances Dee, OTIS COOPER, of Stamford, Conn., cannot refrain from saying:

While getting things off the chest, I want to say that Joel McCrea and Frances Dee are sane-minded individuals. Every young boy or girl has his or her dream of love and that was Joel's and Frances' dream, too. Although, for some reason, they had never wasted time thinking about it. They thought of the opposite sex as companions—nice, pleasant, agreeable companions, who played tennis, or golf or swam or sailed a boat equally well. Of course, she had been made love to and he had made love. Each time it was faintly thrilling, but not horribly so—until they met each other while working on "The Silver Cord."

That's my impression, anyway.

Stars She Would Like to Meet—and Why

FAN FARE, of Winchendon, Mass., picks her favorites:

Leslie Howard: because his restrained acting, back in '31, was a haven of charm and artistry in the vortex of dramatics displayed on the screen at that time and continues to be so, even today, when the screen can boast of some of the best talent in the theatre.

Joan Crawford: because she is not a favorite actress of mine—she's a favorite human being, possessing the strength and weakness, the perfection and imperfection which the term "human being" has come to mean to me in my little jaunt through life.

Katharine Hepburn: because I'd like to tell her, wickedly, how much I approve of those didos and in-

(Continued on page 15)

JANE FROMAN

Lovely Singer of 7 Star Radio Revue and Ziegfeld Follies tells why 50¢ Lipstick is offered to you for 10¢

"AT FIRST", writes Jane Froman, "I was skeptical that such a fine lipstick could be obtained for only 10¢. Then I learned why this amazing offer is being made by the makers of LINIT—to introduce the remarkable LINIT Beauty Bath to those who had not already experienced its instant results in making the skin so soft and smooth. I bought some LINIT; enjoyed the sensation of a rich, cream-like bath; and sent for a lipstick. When it came, I was no longer dubious, but now carry it with me everywhere. I could not wish for a better lipstick."

Just send a top of a LINIT package and 10¢ (wrapping and postage charges) for EACH lipstick desired, filling out the handy coupon printed below.

THIS OFFER good in U. S. A. only and expires Sept. 1, 1934

LINIT is sold by grocers and department stores.

NRA
MEMBER
U.S.
WE DO OUR PART
LINIT
FOR THE BATH
Makes Your Skin Feel Soft and Smooth
LINIT
DELIGHTFULLY PERFUMED FOR THE BATH

CORN PRODUCTS REFINING COMPANY, Dept. MM-4
P. O. Box 171, Trinity Station, New York City

Please send me.........lipstick(s). Shade(s) as checked below. I enclose..........¢ and..........LINIT package tops.

☐ Light ☐ Medium ☐ Dark

Name ....

Address..........

City.......... State..........

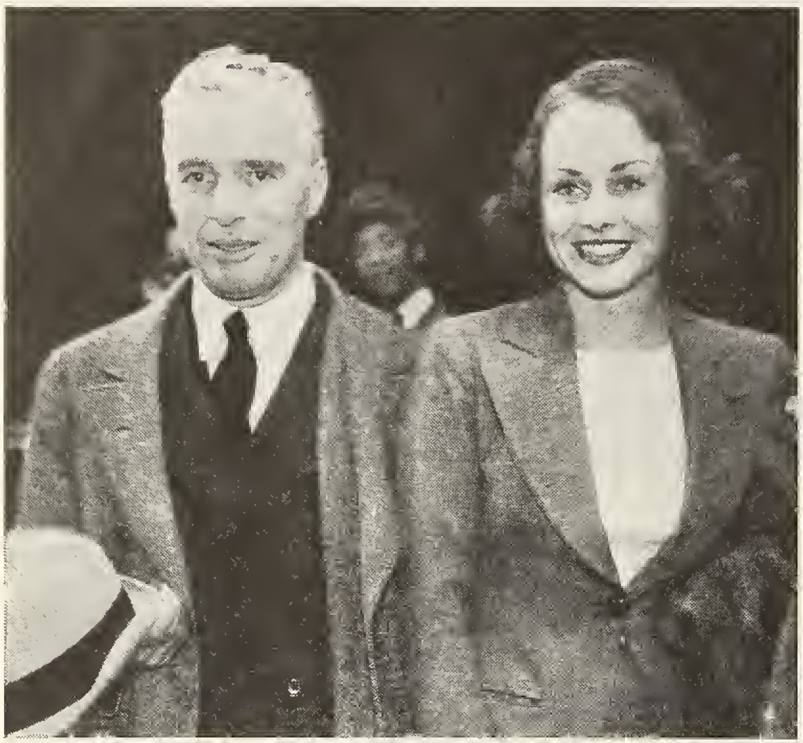
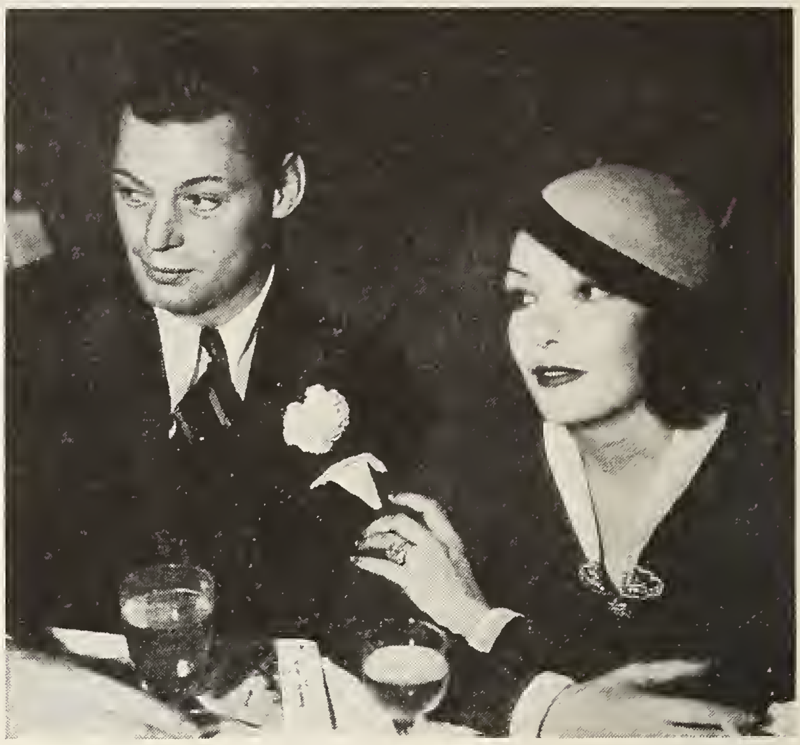
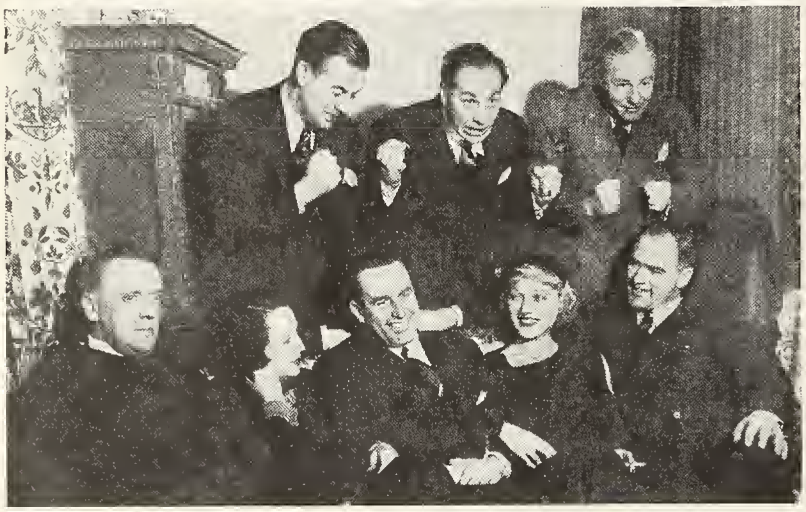
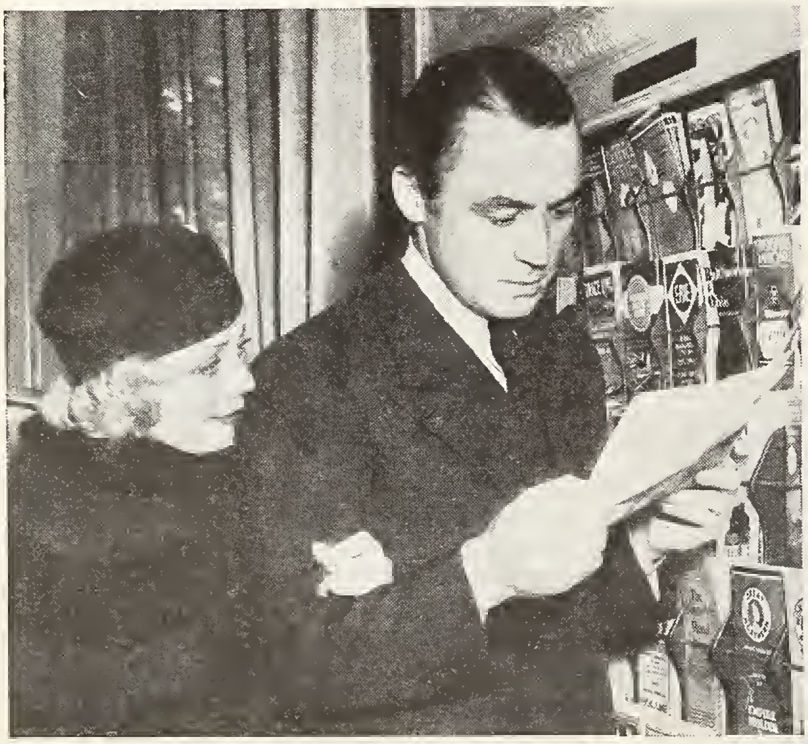
PICTURE NEWS!

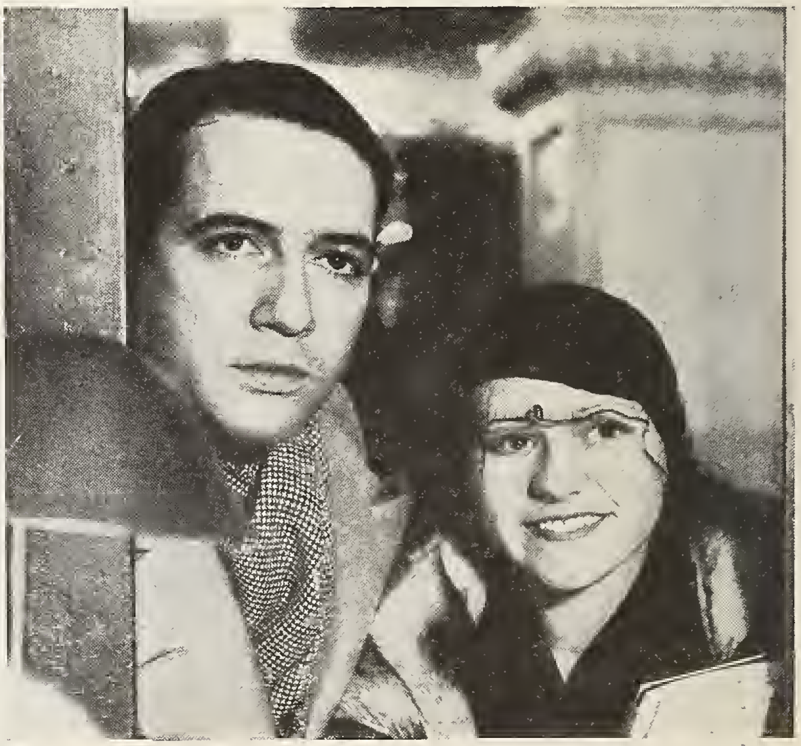






(Above, left) The key-hole artists claim that Mr. Chaplin is already married to Paulette Goddard. Charlie says, "No." Anyway, here they are at the premiere of "Autumn Crocus." (Right) Lupe and Johnny were sweethearts. Or are they still? Your guess is as good as ours, after all those off-again-on-again rumors. (Left) Bebe and Ben Lyon gave a party and among the guests were Zeppo Marx, Skeets Gallagher, Harold Lloyd and Leila Hyams. (Below, left) Alice White and Cy Bartlett can't decide where to go on their honeymoon. (Right) Meet Mrs. Donald Cook, the former Maxine Lewis.





Between You and Me

(Continued from page 13)

conventionalities which are only Kate's way of thumbing her nose at Hollywood.

Paul Muni: because his superb portrayal in "I Am a Fugitive" almost made a communist or an anarchist or something out of me; I wanted to r'ar up on my hind legs and bellow out my wrath on every street corner in the world.

John Barrymore: because ever since he wore them carpet slippers to a premiere, I've been dying to ask him if it was on account of a corn or absent-mindedness.

Franchot Tone: because his crooked smile and artless gaze make me feel very, very young inside; because his good breeding is inherent and not acquired; and because he's a fine actor into the bargain.

Marie Dressler: because the whole world celebrated her sixty-second birthday—and when she was fifty-eight, the whole world said her career as an actress was over.

(This is only one of the umpteen hundred "I'd Like to Meet" letters which came in. We couldn't print 'em all.)

Are the Men Getting a Bad Break?

MYRTLE IDA BENSON, of Hastings, Nebraska, unburdens herself at length about the "new men" problem:

I should like to unload my mind in answer to Faith Baldwin's "New Men! Where Are They?" In your magazine, in comment or explanation of Miss Baldwin's article, were the words, "Oh, yes, there are a few new male attractions. But they lack something. What is it?" That's easy: they lack the good stories, direction, photography, and publicity given to the feminine stars!

The producers are most careful and particular about the stories handed their star actresses. Not only are the stories good, but the leading character is important, vital, dominating. Mae West needs only a few puppets to do just as she desires in order to make her sparkle even more dazzlingly. Katharine Hepburn always has good story material and a good supporting cast. The leading feminine box office hits need only able, hand-

(Continued on page 105)

"JIM MARRIED A PRETTY
GIRL ALL RIGHT... BUT SHE'S NOT A VERY GOOD HOUSEKEEPER."

"I KNOW WHAT YOU MEAN!
THESE LINENS, FOR INSTANCE."

"Tattle-tale!"... "Tattle-tale!"... Yes, clothes tell tales when they come out of your wash musty and gray!

For that gray says plain as day that your soap isn't getting out all the dirt! Before you realize it, your clothes lose their snowy freshness. And other women notice that so quickly...

What to do about it? Change to Fels-Naptha Soap! It will wash your clothes so gloriously white that people will praise them—instead of whispering about them.

Fels-Naptha, you see, is not one of those "trick" soaps that promise a lot and do little. Fels-Naptha is good soap—full-of-action soap—golden soap that's richer. And there's plenty of dirt-loosening naptha added to it!

Two cleaners instead of one! Working together, they banish "Tattle-tale Gray" from your clothes.

Try Fels-Naptha Soap! It's so safe you'll love it for filmiest lingerie, stockings and dainty woolens. It's so mild it keeps your hands nice and soft. It's a wonder in tub or machine—in hot, lukewarm or cool water—whether you soak or boil clothes.

Fels-Naptha's price is now the lowest in almost twenty years. Get a few bars today!... Fels & Co., Phila., Pa. © 1934, FELS & CO.

Everybody notices "Tattle-Tale Gray"

... banish it with FELS-NAPTHA SOAP

A peek AT JOEL AND FRANCES

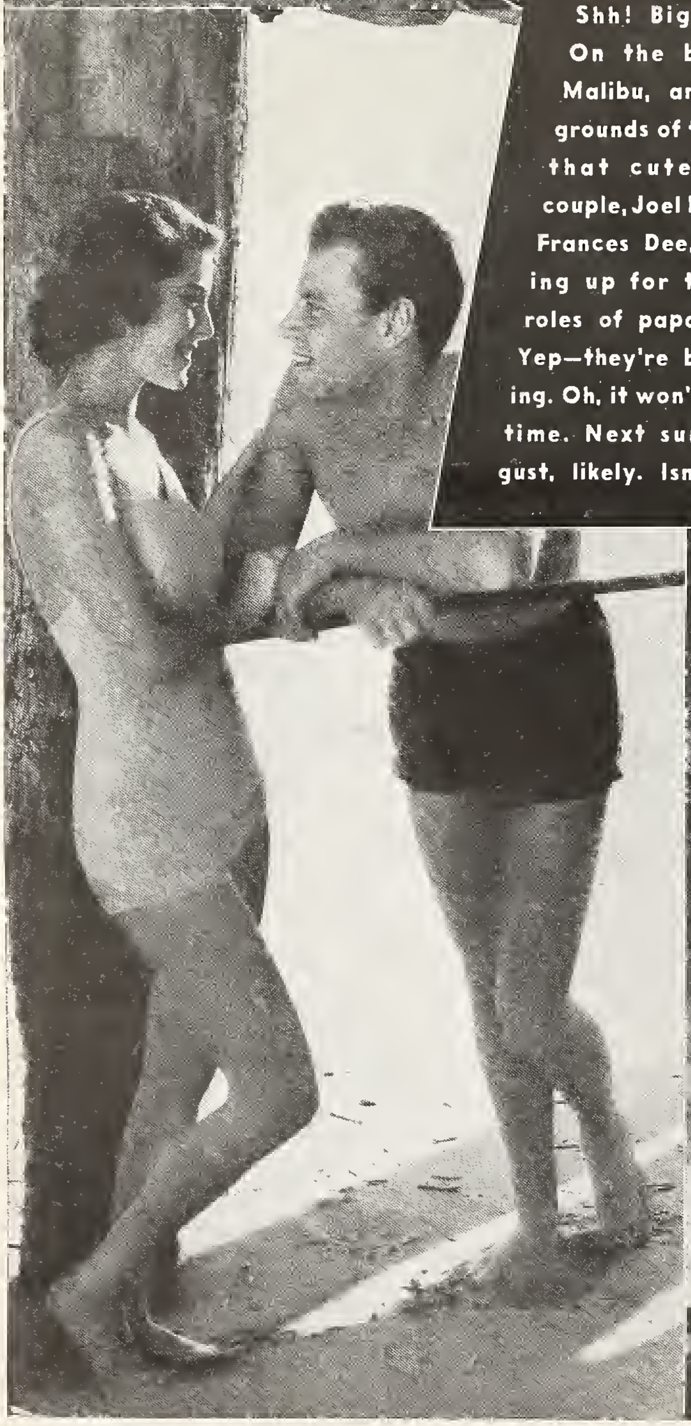
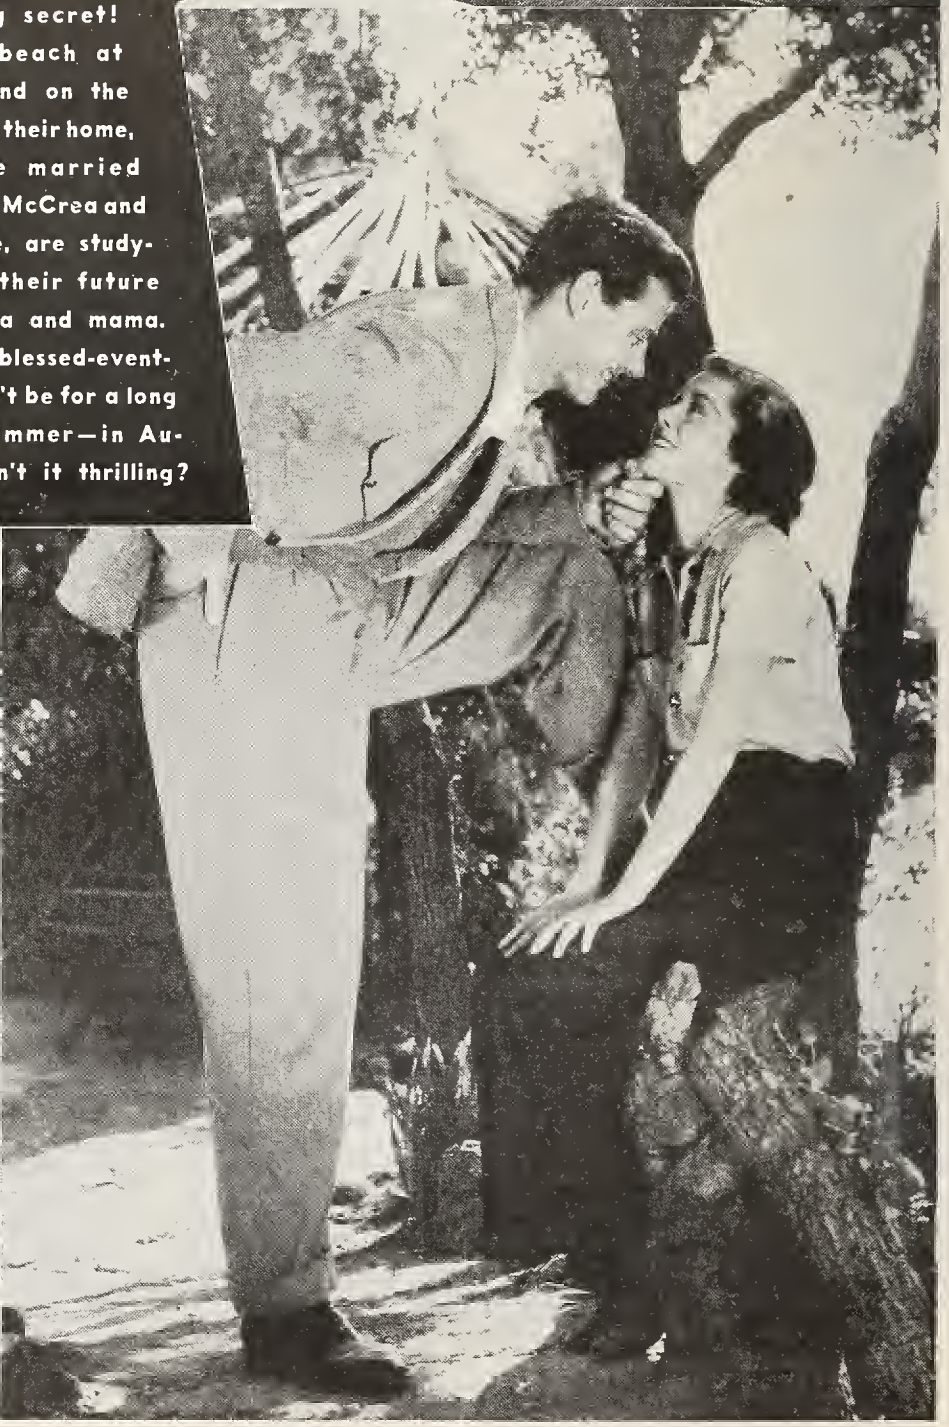
Shh! Big secret! On the beach at Malibu, and on the grounds of their home, that cute married couple, Joel McCrea and Frances Dee, are studying up for their future roles of papa and mama. Yep—they're blessed-eventing. Oh, it won't be for a long time. Next summer—in August, likely. Isn't it thrilling?





Let's talk about LOVE

Jeanette MacDonald and Ramon Novarro in "The Cat and the Fiddle."

By ALICE Van DORAN

I WONDER if you will agree with me that the time has come for us to regard the problems of the heart with as much clear-eyed, clear-thinking sense as we confront other problems? For example: not so very long ago, if a girl were not beautiful, she was doomed by convention to remain unbeautiful for the rest of her natural life. Nowadays, with modern good sense, she consults a beauty expert, saves up her nickels and dimes for the right sort of beauty preparations and smart clothes, and turns plainness into charm. But, even today, if a girl is not loved, she feels that she must accept her fate. If we would only be as wise—but in a different manner, of course—about love and romance as we are about beauty, clothes, money and work!

YOUR PERSONAL PROBLEMS

That's what this department is for. Miss Van Doran will discuss here, with frankness and a wealth of human understanding, romantic problems. No readers' names and no readers' letters will be printed in this column. You may have a personal reply by writing to Alice Van Doran, MODERN SCREEN Magazine, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y. Enclose a stamped, addressed envelope, please.

It is not without a small tremor or so that I shall try to bring to you in this department the most intelligent and sensible and frank advice at my command on the problems of love and romance and sex. But with your help, I'm sure I shall be able to succeed. I want your questions, your problems, your opinions on which to base these articles.

Let me hasten to say that no readers' names will be printed in this department. And no letters. You are earnestly asked to write to me about your problems and I will send you a personal reply.

And now—to business.

I am—just like yourselves—an enthusiastic movie-goer and I go to the movies for one of the same reasons that you yourselves go. Namely, to find romance and excape from humdrum life in the gay and glamorous and exciting stories I see on the screen. And I often wonder, as I observe young people in the audience—sitting very still, their shoulders touching and their hands clasped under cover of a masculine hat—how much the movies affect our ideas of love. I wonder how much time girls and women spend envying the beauty and romance of their favorite stars, instead of profiting by the lessons they could learn from the story portrayed for them. And men commit the same error, too—don't think they don't—only men envy more material things. Money. A fine car. London-tailored clothes. Sure—it would be a cinch for a guy if he had advantages like Clark Gable or Bob Montgomery or one of those fellers.

I'm speaking seriously when I say that there are countless lessons you can learn to make you happier people if you will watch for them on the screen.

A CERTAIN young girl whom I know had been going with a certain young man for five years. He was genuinely fond of her—oh, yes—but sometimes he forgot to show it. He took her for granted. It was Don who made the dates—at his convenience. It was Dot who waited on him, when he visited (Continued on page 120)

HEPBURN
in
SPITFIRE
Completely and daringly different from anything she has ever done.

An RKO Radio Picture with Robert Young · Ralph Bellamy · Martha Sleeper
Directed by John Cromwell . . . From the Play by Lula Vollmer
A Pandro S. Berman Production Merian C. Cooper, Executive Producer

Jean Parker

+

This lovely lady is Jean Parker to us, May Green to her family and one of the most promising actresses that ever faced a camera. She's just teeming with talent. All sorts. Jean paints and writes and dances and could make a success of any or all these professions. She lives in Westwood with her chaperon and only visits the cinema city when "on call." She has just finished "You Can't Buy Everything" and is getting ready for an important role in "In Old Louisiana." Metro is proud of its gifted starlet—and rightly so.

Mary is as cute a trick as ever kicked her way out of the front row chorus into dramatic roles, for beneath all that fragile fluffiness there is determination and talent—an unbeatable combination. "Once to Every Woman" is her latest offering and we predict you'll put her on your list of favorites when you see her in it.

Mary Carlisle

Gene Raymond

Three Hollywood beauties saw this famous platinum blond off when he departed en route to Europe. Janet Gaynor, Mary Brian and Marian Nixon all were at the train. When Gene returns from his extended vacation, he has a brand new Columbia contract waiting and he's hoping his first will be a comedy!

Meet the latest Lady of the Nile. Yes, Claudette is to play "Cleopatra," so at the moment she is just about the most envied girl in Hollywood. She wishes she could gain weight and lose all those superstitions that keep her constantly upset, for worrying is one of the things she does especially well.

Claudette Colbert

Walter Huston

Having finished "Keep 'Em Rolling," Walter Huston has returned to Broadway and the theatre. It's a temporary arrangement, of course, for picture producers won't permit this sterling player to desert the celluloid for long. When he vacations he usually retreats to his home in Lake Arrowhead.

Mrs. Al Jolson would rather have a baby than a career, but the fans will settle for seeing her on the screen any time. Ruby is to be with Dick Powell again in "Sweethearts Forever." When she isn't at the studio, she's busy furnishing the new home she bought for her family not long ago.

Ruby Keeler

Stuart Erwin

When Lee Tracy spoke out of turn, Stu stepped into his role in "Viva Villa," a break this clever comedian could use nicely. He's a happy husband, a devoted daddy and an all-around popular lad.

"I'm a

JOAN CRAWFORD CONFESSES:

I expect too much of people.

I'm terrifically impatient.

I'm stubborn as a mule.

I'm over-sensitive.

And another of my faults is almost too personal to mention!

I'VE always known Joan Crawford was honest, but I never thought any picture star would talk about her faults. I thought that old Hollywood idea that only one's best side should be shown to the public and that virtues alone should ever be mentioned was so deeply planted that it could never be uprooted.

My disillusionment came about in a curious way.

When she was in New York recently, Joan was introduced to some friends of Franchot's. They were allured by her glamor, impressed by her beauty, delighted that they might see her. They didn't know what was going on inside of her.

The next day Joan was down in the dumps.

"I'm a terrible person," she moaned. "Honestly, I'm a terrible person."

I disagreed, violently.

"It is no use your saying nice things," she went on. "I know all about myself. I try my darndest to be at ease when I meet new people. I try to be charming and gracious. But I can't help showing that I'm ill at ease, unhappy in their presence and sometimes bored.

"Listen, while I'm in this mood, I might as well tell you just what I think of myself. They say honest confession is good for the soul. Well, I'm going to Confess All. Tell you my faults. And I've got plenty of them.

"I know how I impress people who have never met me before. They probably say I'm conceited and ritzy. Well, that's not true, but I deserve to have them say it. When I meet new people in a drawing-terrible person"

BY

Katherine Albert

Joan breaks down and declares that she's no angel. Indeed, she admits she's no cinch to get along with at all room something inside me tightens up. I try to be nice but I can't. So I just sit and say nothing. Then I excuse myself, leave the room and become actually ill. I'm never that way with those grand folks who are good enough to be my fans. I feel that they're for me somehow. It's people I meet in a social way that affect me so badly.

"When I'm in a room with a bunch of witty people and someone makes a clever remark that can be taken in two ways, I always take it personally. I always think that there's another meaning which is meant as a crack at me.

NOW that's just plain ego! Why should I think myself important enough for people to make deliberate double meaning remarks about me? I've tried hard to overcome this. I think I'm on the way to doing it.

"Then I'm stubborn. Don't say anything. I'm stubborn as a mule. If someone tries to bully me I close up tight and say to myself, 'I won't do it. I won't do it.' Anybody can win me with soft words. If, on the lot, one of the publicity boys wants me to have a picture taken or give an interview and he says, 'I know you're working and awfully tired, but it would be a favor to me if you'd do this,' I break my neck doing it. But if someone says, 'Come on over to the gallery, Joan, there's a picture that you have to take right away,' I won't do it. And the more I'm told that I must do it, the more determined I am that I won't!

"When a person does that once too often I'm through with that person. I've got very few people I call my real friends. I'm slow to make friendships, but once they're made they're friends for life. Once it has been proven that a person is honest, sincere, loyal and true, nothing that anybody could say about that person would sway me. I'm the same way when I don't like a person. It takes me a long time to get mad at someone. Just as I'm slow about making friends, I'm slow about making enemies. But the fastest way a person can be my enemy is to bully me.

"When I came to New York someone I know wrote and said a party was being planned for me. I replied, 'Please don't plan that party. I'd rather see you at informal dinner or luncheon. You know how I hate big parties.' When I arrived I discovered that the party had been planned anyhow, the people all invited and I was to be guest of honor. 'You've got to come,' the person said. I got mad. I explained that I had said I didn't want a party. 'I can't help it,' the person said. 'The party is planned. You've got to come.' I went, but I'm through with that person. I just won't be bullied. And that, I know, is a very bad fault I should overcome.

"I'm terribly impatient of people who make the same mistake twice. I expect too much of people. I'm too sensitive, but I'm trying to overcome that sensitiveness. Several years ago if someone did something to hurt me I'd brood about it for days and cry my eyes out over it. Well, I've gotten over that. Instead of crying I get mad and get it all off my chest—and that's much better. That's one fault I've overcome.

WHEN I say I expect too much of people, I mean that if I call someone and ask him or her to dinner on a certain night and that person tells me he has another engagement I begin to wonder, 'Is he angry with me? What have I done?' It takes me a long time to get hold of myself and say, 'Look here, Joan, you silly goose. The person just had another engagement. He was telling you the truth. Believe him!'

"But that's a hold-over from a few years ago when I trusted people too much. Trusting too much is a bad fault. But it's one I'm getting over and rapidly, too.

"But one of my worst faults is cleanliness. Does that sound funny to you? Just normal cleanliness is fine, but for a couple of years I've been neurotic about it. Thank God, I now know what causes it—something much too personal to tell—and when we know a thing we can at least try to do something about changing it.

"This neurosis about cleanliness came very slowly. It's going to take just as long a time for me to overcome it. When it was at its worst I never wore a dress, a hat or carried a bag that all weren't sent to the cleaner's instantly. Imagine having a bag cleaned every time I carried it! That was just plain silly, I know it now. I know the reason for it.

"I wouldn't smoke a cigarette unless I had opened the tin myself. And I wouldn't use another cigarette out of that tin if someone else had taken one. I washed my hands every ten minutes. I wouldn't step out of the house unless I had gloves on. I wouldn't touch anything unless I had on gloves. Slowly, I'm getting much better about this. I'm not doing such foolish things. I've never talked about this before. It's very hard for me to do it now, but since I know it and know I must overcome it, I don't mind talking about it as much as I did.

"There—I've gotten my faults off my chest. Maybe I have a lot more that I don't know about. If I have I wish you'd tell me about them. Some of them I'm trying my level best to overcome. Some of them I know it's no use doing anything about. But, at any rate, my conscience rests easy on this score, for I've made a sincere effort to improve and if I've failed, I'll try again."

THE LIFE AND LOVES OF LYLE TALBOT

THE school teacher looked down at the squirming candidate for the first grade and asked, "What is your name?"

The six-year-old regarded the toes of his new shoes with the greatest concentration. Though to the eye he presented merely the stubby figure of a dark-haired little boy, he was, in a truer sense, a living sacrifice on the altar of compulsory education. Here, right in front of all the kids, she would have to ask him about his name.

From some place around his well-fed little stomach came a word that sounded suspiciously like "Lyle."

"Lyle what?" prodded his inquisitioner.

Slowly he lifted a pair of very serious eyes from his boots to the impatient lady at the desk. Taking a deep breath, he blurted, "Which one of my names do you want me to use here? My father's name is J. Edward Henderson, but he doesn't live here because my mother's dead. I'm living with my grandmother. Her name used to be Hollywood but now it's Talbot. Some folks who visit us still call her Hollywood. So I have three names. Which one do you want me to use here?"

There! That was over, the long confusing history of his many names. Some folks who had known his mother and father called him Lyle Henderson and some who had known his grandmother a long time called him Lyle Hollywood and still others called him Lyle Talbot. Out of this large and unusual assortment of names, surely this lady at the desk could pick one that would serve the purpose.

"Well," mused the young school marm, "let's see. Let's settle on Lyle Talbot from now on."

Thus was a future hero of Hollywood named "from now on" by a confused little school teacher in Brainard, Nebraska. And this is the manner in which Lyle Henderson Hollywood Talbot acquired a permanent name that was to identify him through the maze of his barnstorming days with tent shows, his Broadway career and eventually

. . . Early days, featuring the big chewing gum scandal, Bohemian pals and the mystery of the tin can labels . . . the carnival side-show and his love for Lottye, the beautiful saxophone player to Hollywood where they were to spell it in electric lights.

By WALTER RAMSEY

On opposite page Lyle is shown with his stepmother and below that, with his father. (Right) Nine years old and all dressed up for the State Fair and, below, at eight months, sitting in his private car.

SITTING in the living-room of his hilltop home in Hollywood, Lyle Talbot explained:

"It was, of course, many years before I was able to understand the tragically romantic story behind my many names. My Dad, Ed Henderson, was a man whose body was chained by circumstances to a small, drab town, but whose real life was lived in the realm of imagination. When he met and fell in love with my mother, he had dreams of conquering the world, of taking her away from Brainard, of becoming wealthy in a big city and lavishing 'everything' on her.

"So, with only a few dollars in his pocket, he begged my mother to elope with him to Pittsburgh. The money lasted until they were safely married and 'at home' in a Pittsburgh boarding-house. Unfortunately, life has a way of not panning out for the dreamers, despite a lot of hard work. Dad tried to get a job at the street car barns and was told he would have to have a good recommendation. I'll always laugh respectfully when I recall the story of how he went to the mayor of the town and asked for a recommendation. He got it, too.

But mother was terribly lonely in a strange city and when, a few months later, it became known that a baby was on the way, Dad decided to take her back to her own home. I never knew my mother. Just two months after I was born, she contracted typhoid fever and died. It was the tragic ending to their wonderful romance and elopement. Dad, heartbroken, agreed that I should be brought up by my mother's mother. Then he left town for good. I don't think he could stand to remain so near to the unhappy memories."

But young Lyle liked Brainard. It was a small hamlet where the summers were unbearably hot and the winters equally cold, but its population of four hundred was almost entirely Bohemian. That's

(Continued on page 87)

Did Connie—or did she not—come to ex-husband Phil Plant's rescue in a way that is deserving of great praise? Well, we happen to know the facts. And Connie happens to choose to pooh-pooh the whole business. See what you think of the Bennett gal after reading this.

So you won't talk,

SO if you won't, Connie, we will!

It was Connie, wrote the indignant little-girl fans, who would not get off her train to autograph their albums. Now they don't like her any more.

It was she to whom a very famous director referred when he said, "All Connie asks about her last picture is, 'Is it good?' If it is, she wants more money for the next one."

It is Connie they mean when they say "the blonde movie star who never gives an inch and demands a mile, who drives bargains that never leave the other fellow a loophole—even for his neck!"

Hollywood women have said, "I'd hate to be in the way of anything Connie Bennett wanted."

But I don't need to tell you her Hollywood reputation. You've read about it often enough to know it rather well by now, both from her enemies and from Connie's fighting, indignant denials. Of the two Bennett factions, I don't know which is worse: her critics, who would have you believe she is the reincarnation of a skinny devil in a blonde halo or those too-ardent defenders who want you to think she is an abused angel who sees, hears and thinks nothing but good, even if she does have to make an unholy row about it.

Over a period of years, I have known Connie well, although spasmodically. In our many hit-or-miss encounters, I have known moments when I could have cheerfully rushed into print with a heartfelt story on her titled, "The Most Aggravating Woman I've Ever Known." But before I could bat it out on the typewriter, she would do as

As different as the brunette and blonde dual role she played in "Moulin Rouge"

Connie!

By CARTER BRUCE

neat an about-face as was ever executed at West Point and I would be converted to her defense brigade. Well, almost. There has always been something too steely, too dominating and resourceful lurking back of the frank blue of those Bennett eyes to convince me she was the Blasphemed Innocent.

But the other day I heard a story . . . the details of which came pretty straight. It was a story about Constance, the hard-boiled Bennett and an old love of hers. It is the strangest and yet somehow, the most logical yarn about Connie. It will give you the funniest and at the same time the truest slant on her that has ever come out of Hollywood. She is such an amazing person. Even so, it is rather difficult to believe some of the preposterous yarns that have been circulated concerning this blonde siren.

SIX or seven years ago, before they were saying what they do now about Connie and her mathematically educated heart, she was very much in love with a boy she later married, Phil Plant. He was young, handsome and very wealthy. In the beginning, perhaps, she was attracted by his social position and the lavish gifts he showered upon her. But that was only in the beginning. Long before they were married, Constance Bennett was so much in love with Phil, the boy himself, that it could not have been disguised from the most cynical eyes. I recall, once, when Connie was on the west coast making "Sally, Irene and Mary" that Phil Plant flew out from New York to see her. I saw them dancing one evening at the Montmartre Café and the way she looked at him and the glow of happiness that (Continued on page 81)

are these two amazing versions of La Bennett's recent Good Samaritan Act

Please, DE MILLE—WHAT IS GLAMOR . . . ?

"A spell or enchantment," says Noah Webster. But Mr. De Mille tells more—including some things which glamor isn't

It certainly isn't trousers on women, staunchly states Cecil B. Even the lovely Marlene can't get away with them. (Left) Often, Mr. De M. runs off one of his old pictures—like the Swanson-Valentino "Beyond the Rocks." And it amazes him to note how glamor has changed.

By MARTHA KERR

A WOMAN can bend over a steaming washtub and have glamor. She can work all day in a hot kitchen and have glamor. But if she paints her fingernails bright red or wears trousers, then—as far as I'm concerned—she has no glamor at all."

Thus spake—no, not Zarathustra, but a much more modern philosopher—Cecil B. DeMille, who was busy discovering glamor gals before they were called that.

Back in the dim dead days it was known as "It." According to the great DeMille, glamor is just a new word. It's all your old friend sex appeal anyhow, dressed in fancy clothes, but not, if you please, in trousers.

And thus speaks DeMille in spite of the fact that he is now a Paramount director and the greatest feminine wearer of pants is—or, anyway, was—Paramount's big star, Marlene Dietrich. So you know when DeMille so far forgets policy as to talk like that he must mean what he says. So let's let him go on.

"You know what women in pants remind me of? Well, they look like great, bulky mountains. Mountains are grand in their place, but you wouldn't want to make love to one, would you? Women aren't built for pants. They're too broad across the beam and too narrow in the shoulders. When they wear 'em they take away all allure, all charm, all subtlety. In other words, I am agin 'em—and agin 'em strong!

"As for those red fingernails—well! Certainly, I approve of nail polish. I approve of anything that makes a woman look well groomed, lovelier. But that bright red! It's horrible. Whenever I see scarlet nails I have an idea that the woman has just been killing a chicken. Not a nice nor glamorous thought, is it?

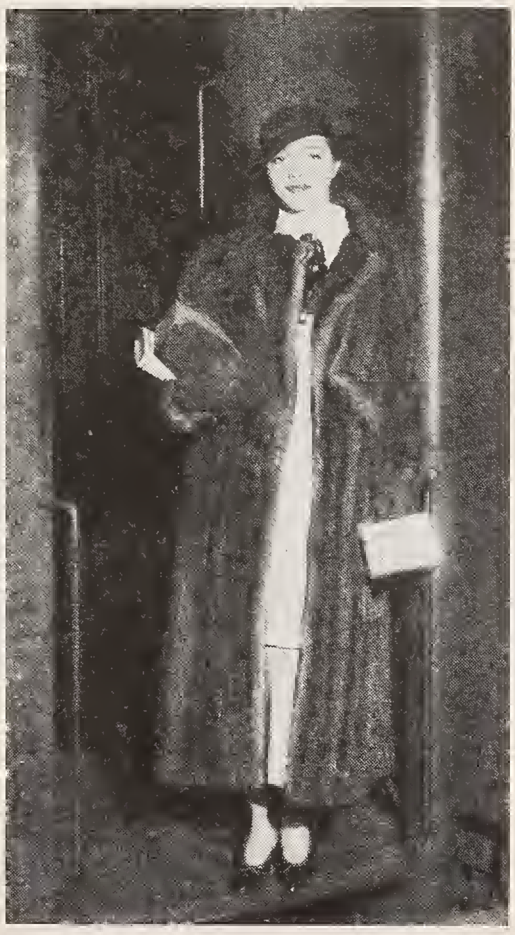
"And one of the most important features of glamor is setting. Let me explain. When I entertain at my home in Hollywood we have a little custom that is rather fun. After dinner I have brought in a tray of costume jewelry—bracelets, necklaces, clips—worthless jewelry, but pretty. Then the women all play a little game to see who has first, second, third choice of the trinkets.

"Occasionally I have put in the midst of that junk jewelry (Continued on page 84)

They Visit New York

BY Regina Cannon

Yes, M. Chevalier's back, and glad to be in this land of equal rights and unequal fights. Sylvia Sidney is in the big city on amusement bent.



IT'S field day in Manhattan for the autograph-seekers and celebrity-chasers, there's been that much of an influx of movie great. Many stars have shot through town on their way from Europe to the camera coast; others, have just dropped in for a night club session and shopping spree; while still more have arrived for the definite purpose of putting their signatures to contracts which mean work in the east.

Chevalier appeared briefly in our midst, grinning amiably when the cameras were focussed and avoiding discussing plans for the forthcoming "Merry Widow," his next vehicle. No definite decision had been reached as to the portrayer of the picture's title role, but the genial Frenchman with a reputation for being difficult, was emphatic as to who would not do it. But "far from us be it," as Gracie Allen would say, to make that lil lady break down and weep by printing the bad news here.

Then, Monsieur didn't care too much for the newspaper reports that he just couldn't wait to see Toby Wing and, to prove that he was good at postponing pleasure, hung around town an extra day. However, Maurice admits he still likes money, even though he has gotten over the idea that producers are conspiring to keep it away from him.

* * *

More fun, more clothes torn when an enthusiastic crowd pushed into the NBC studio where Katharine Hepburn was scheduled to broadcast! Which gives one a slight idea of what Hollywood has done for Hepburn—not that the young lady hasn't contributed one or three things to movie entertainment.

Katie and Douglass Montgomery played the balcony scene from "Romeo and Juliet," that episode which all young players aspire to render. We imagine that the Hepburn is never quite so happy as when she's being dramatic. She takes it all just a bit better than very seriously. Garbed in a purple velvet robe reaching from throat to toes and clutching her throat in a truly Bernhardt-esque manner, Hollywood's strange gal did her stuff. And Doug let her do it; in fact, he let her have it all her own way. We never saw such generosity. It looked like "novice bending to genius" business. And, fun's fun, it shouldn't have been.

The interested on-lookers took it all appropriately intensely and when the last Shakespearian pearl dropped from Katie's ruby lips (we're in the jewelry department now) burst into thunderous applause. Which must have bolstered up the star no little bit, what with audiences visiting "The Lake," her stage vehicle, often being impolite enough to forget they have hands.

* * *

AND, speaking of Douglass Montgomery: in just such an apartment as we would adore to own, located in New York's quietly swank East Fifties, we went one afternoon to have a gingerale with the gentleman. He wasn't there. That is, he wasn't there when we arrived. He dashed in, breathless, three minutes later. He loves to dash in, breathless, three minutes later. Because he is still very young and still very fond of being dramatic about the most everyday happening and he loves to "make entrances" and all that sort of thing. However, a harmless habit, and we enjoyed it all as much as he did.

He's very insistent about the two "esses" on the Douglass. Because, you see, he's a direct descendant of the Black Douglass clan who used to roam the Scottish moors, fighting for the honor of the name, down to the very last "s." Today, the Blond Douglass roams between New York and Hollywood, trying very hard to make up his mind whether it shall be the stage—which he adores—or the screen—which is easier, pleasanter and more lucrative.

He said, among other things, that he is tired of playing very young roles (for that reason, he's delighted with the idea of doing the more mature "Little Man, What Now?"), that he was a fan of Katharine Hepburn's way back in the old days when producers were firing her right and left, and that he has just paid five hundred (Continued on page 111)

Good

WHAT about Garbo and Mamoulian? What about them, indeed! No one at the M-G-M studios has seen them since their little jaunt down to the Grand Canyon, their close friends are close-mouthed, and there are about fifty versions of their "love affair" floating around town.

Some say they are already married, they were married on the trip and it will "break" in the papers any minute.

Others claim they are not married, neither of them is the marrying type and that they merely have the "Continental" attitude.

Still others believe that the trip was used to counteract the "romance build-up" between Garbo and Jack (Left) Arline Judge, in a costume that is intriguing, if a bit unbalanced, announces that she's tickled with her new role in "The Affairs of Cellini." (Below) Director Busby Berkeley and pretty Merna Kennedy will marry verra soon.

J. B. Scott

Lowest lowdown on Garbo-Mamoulian and Lupe-Johnnie situations

News!

Gilbert. Since he and Virginia Bruce separated almost immediately after "Queen Christine" was released, the public might have called Garbo responsible for the rift.

However, Mamoulian stated, "Miss Garbo and I are not married. We are very companionable, that is all."

And Greta, as usual, says nothing.

That trip, of course, was a big story, but it wasn't their first. Garbo and Mamoulian made a secret journey to Santa Barbara, one to Yosemite and, just the other week-end, they left for La Quinta. Maybe they do like automobiling.

THE LUPE AND JOHNNIE SITUATION

A few days ago, we might have written: "Just about the shortest marriage on record . . . Lupe Velez and Johnny Weissmuller!"

J. B. Scott

James Cagney and gorgeous Dolores Del Rio were in charge of the refreshments at the Screen Actors' Guild Ball.

Now our hunch—and remember, it's just a hunch—is that they will stick together (if only temporarily). Either because (1) they love one another or (2) because they couldn't bear to think that Bobbé Arnst could predict anything.

J. B. Scott

Frank Fay and his famous wife, Barbara Stanwyck, who seldom step out, attend "As the Earth Turns."

This is how it started. One night Lupe and Johnny went to the American Legion to see the fights. It seems that they continued on with the fighting after they reached home.

Would you be interested to know what the fight was about? Well, Lupe wanted to go away on personal appearances. Johnny said: "Why should she go? She'll just make a lot of money and buy a flock of bracelets! We got enough bracelets around here now!"

At one o'clock in the dawning,

J. B. Scott

Connie Bennett's Marquis Hank Falaise is off to Indo-China to do another travelogue.

Lupe called her favorite newspaper reporter and gave out a story of the "separation." She said, in part: "We fight like the devil all the time . . . it's fifty-fifty . . . we're both to blame. I got to be my own boss. No one can tell Lupe how to run her business." Johnny gave a couple of his Tarzan grunts and clammed-up on the boys. Lupe told another reporter: "There is no chance for our making up. When something is over, it is over, as far as Lupe is concerned."

The next night they were at the Colony Club together!

The following morning, it was all over Hollywood that Lupe and Johnny had decided to try a ten-day-holiday, during which Johnny would live at his club and they would only see each other during the day time. Lupe explained: "It's only in the evening that we fight. Maybe, at the end of the ten days, if my Johnny has been a good boy, I take heem back!"

So you can see how useless it is to attempt to predict the ending. We think the crack by Bobbé Arnst, Johnny's ex, "I knew it wouldn't last!" had a lot to do with it. But maybe we're wrong.

PRESS-TIME NOTES

More strong rumors that we will soon lose our Garbo. She is slated to return to her native Sweden to make pictures.

Tch! Tch! The Screen Actors' Ball uncovered some bad manners, it seems

Good News!

Emanuel Cohen, vice-president in charge of Paramount productions, entertained the Gary Coopers. Mae West was there, too. (Right) Norma Shearer and Irving Thalberg attend Katharine Cornell's "Barretts of Wimpole Street."

Doug Fairbanks, Sr., may do "Adios Don Juan" in Spain before he returns to Hollywood.

Edna May Oliver will have the lead opposite George Arliss in "Head of the Family."

Since Rudy Vallee is definitely looking for another singer, it would appear that Alice Faye is set at Fox for some time to come.

Finally decided! Chaplin's next will be an all-silent, as usual.

HAVE you heard the story of Glenda Farrell's strange injury? Seems she was lunching in a wayside inn near the Mexican border, when a rooster (kept in the patio of the place, just as added atmosphere) took a sudden dislike to Glenda and before the fowl could be stopped he had made several deep spur lacerations on her legs.

HARLOW—M-G-M BATTLE

Jean Harlow has returned to M-G-M, and 'tis reported that her salary difficulties are all settled with the studio. Jean walked out a while ago and refused to return until she got more $$ on the line. Various of Jean's demands were bandied about —everything from "a raise" to "she wants $10,000 a week." It now appears that she wanted them to ante-up about two G's, and the studio was holding out for a raise of about one-fourth that amount. A conference took place—something was decided—and now Jean is script-reading.

MARY BOLAND and Alison Skipworth are chosen for the "Whoops Sisters," made famous (and sold to Paramount) by Peter Arno!

WHO appeared, or what happened the other night at the Beverly-Wilshire, to scare Connie and the Marquis away? They had one table until eleven o'clock, posed for pictures at the door, and left—hurriedly. At twelve, they returned, looked around—carefully—and took another table.

THE Actor's Guild Ball was a howling success financially, but it did have its other moments. (There are some elegant pictures, taken at the Ball, to be found on pages 62 to 65 of this issue.) First, came George and Mrs. Arliss. They arrived at eight sharp, as per the invitation, and the balance of Hollywood left them sitting alone until almost eleven. Second, we were surprised (after all the kicking we've had to listen to from these very actors) that the actor-audience didn't even give their brothers a break by keeping silent while the entertainment went on.

Why, we couldn't even hear John Boles' marvelous voice, so much plate-clattering and loud talking by those very actors who are loudest in their disgust at "lack of attention" by the average audience. Jeanette MacDonald almost stopped the show, however, with her grand singing. Durante did his act and the stooges heckled Mr. Ted Healy as usual.

As for some of the "names" who were supposed to perform—Chaplin, Lubitsch, et al—we saw none of them. Even Rudy Vallee, billed as master of ceremonies, had to "take it on the lam" before the party to avoid being served a process to appear in his wife's action for separate maintenance. We found out, later, that he had been pretty smart, too. It seems (Below) Diana Wynyard goes around quite a bit with Gordon Westcott these days.

J. B. Scott

Good News!

J. B. Scott

(Above) On Carl Laemmle's birthday, all hands turned to and gave him an elegant party. See if you can find Boris Karloff, Ken Maynard, Junior, Alice White and La Sullavan. (Left) Dr. F. D. Griffin was in Hollywood a while ago to see his wife, Irene Dunne. There they are with Mitzi Green.

J. B. Scott

The first time Virginia Bruce stepped out after her separation —at Mr. Selznick's Grove party.

that among all the autograph hunters at the gate to the ballroom, at least fifteen were serving "the papers."

WE can now die happy. We were up to the Colony the other dawning and Irving Caesar did a parody on the "Last Round-up," which he dedicated to Al Jolson, called "The Last Close-up."

ANOTHER "MYSTERY WOMAN"?

Yes, this gal, Anna Sten, whom Sam Goldwyn has been raving about for, lo, these many moons, is really a sensational beauty.

It is said, however, that Muriel Kirkland, who played a part in "Nana" and got to know Anna rather well, invited her to be her guest when "Sailor Beware" opened on the Los Angeles stage with Muriel in the cast. Miss Sten accepted the invitation, but failed to appear. We thought, for a minute that we might have another "mysterious foreigner" on our hands, but as we prepared for the worst, who should we see in public but Anna and her husband, Dr. Franke. We also hear whispered that, while La Sten is quite a boss around the studio, when she gets home the doctor is the boss!

THIS is the first time any actress lost weight and didn't immediately break out in print with her "method." Molly O'Day lost thirty pounds down in Florida and says there wasn't any particular reason for it that she knew.

DID you ever see a dream dancing? Well, Lil Tashman did! And it was a bad dream, too. It was over at the Grove where Lil and husband Eddie Lowe were dancing one evening. In all that crowd, who should dance right up to Lil but a gal with an identical hair-dress. Lil goes to the beauty parlor every day to protect her little curls—and she had the idea it was an original hair-do. It was too provoking!

Jean Harlow didn't appear to be in a very good humor, either. Maybe it was the crowd or something. Anyway, Jean and her husband, Hal Rosson, didn't attempt so much as a swing around the floor. They sat, very moodily, at a table-for-two, seldom speaking to one another. Jean is wearing a new and not very becoming evening make-up. Very dark powder and a great deal of lip rouge.

MAE WEST refused five grand for a single appearance over the radio . . . and two nights later she appeared free for a local charity!

WE have decided to abandon all plans of divorce at the present," said Sidney Fox and her erstwhile mate, Charles Beahan, in one voice last night. That, then, seems to be that—at least for the moment. The story behind the "separation" though, is rather funny. It seems the devoted couple had a violent quarrel at a recent Hollywood party. However, on the morning following the party (when Sidney woke up in the spare bedroom over at Ann Dvorak's house) neither the wife nor the husband (who had gone home after the party) could recall just what the fight had been about, or who started it. None of the other guests could throw any light on the matter, either.

(Continued on page 78)

WHAT'S HAPPENED, Gable?

By WALTER RAMSEY

"WHAT'S happened is just this. I'm fed up. Something has taken away all the kick I used to get out of my work—and taken my ambition with it. If my option lapsed tomorrow, I wouldn't lift a hand to get another movie job for at least a year. All the thrill and fun of the game are temporarily over for me and I don't know that I shall ever get them back. In my present frame of mind, the movies are just a job, a job that has developed into as much drudgery as that which bends the backs of tired bookkeepers, grown rusty at their benches. If my mental attitude is beginning to show in my work, I'm sorry. But that's the way I feel."

The words and music are by Clark Gable. That little paragraph above is the answer to the current Hollywood question: "What's happened to put out the light of personal and vital magnetism that used to shine in Clark Gable's eyes?" And in the frankest, most abruptly-honest statement ever made by a motion picture star, he spoke his piece.

Alibis? There isn't one, not one in the make-up of this guy who comes so close to being the Prince of Hollywood Good Fellows that you can skip the difference. Kicks against uncongenial rôles and bad pictures? Nothing like it! Let the others hide behind the excuse of "bad casting" and "studio mismanagement." They can pass the buck for their mistakes if they will. Those don't happen to be Gable's methods. He hasn't a single squawk against Hollywood. In one way, he is grateful for everything Hollywood has done for him.

"The fault lies purely with myself," he said. "I thought

We fans like to see him make love, so here Clark gives us plenty of what we want in "It Happened One Night," with Claudette Colbert as his very lovely amour.

You're not the man you were a year ago, Clark! Is it due to illness, to too much money in the bank—or to too little time on your hands? You're different, young man, and we want to know why Clark feels that he does best the roughneck "Red Dust" sort of thing. Not the tuxedoed rôle he played in "Possessed." Is he too modest—or is he right in this assumption?

I wanted something, something I find I don't want at all. I was not meant to be a motion picture actor—or any actor. But in the beginning I didn't realize that. I thought I wanted acting fame more than anything in the world. How, then, can Hollywood be blamed for giving me what I wanted and discovered that I didn't?

"I know it sounds damned ungrateful to my producers and to the fans who have made me what I am, whatever I am. But you asked me a frank question and I want to answer you honestly.

I MEAN it when I say that I was not born to be a movie star. I was born close to the soil and should have stayed close to it. Silence, the great privacy of nature and the joy of earning one's bread by the sweat of the brow—these are my rightful heritage. That is the kind of man I am. That is the fundamental me!

"It is foolhardy for a man to go contrary to the instincts of his nature. And that is exactly what I have done in seeking an acting career for myself. When my stage career developed into a movie career, the contrast was even greater. For Hollywood is a glittering bubble. In place of quiet, it is a Babylon. Its only privacy is a clique and each night brings a fatigue that isn't physical, but pure nerve exhaustion.

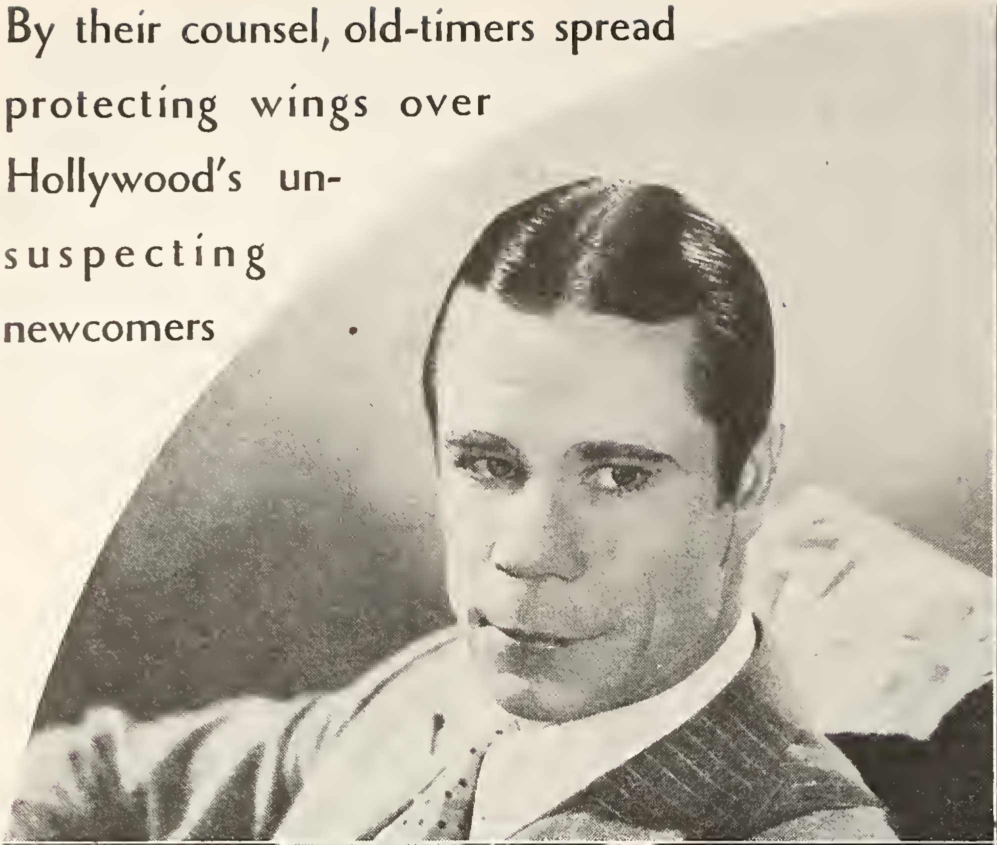
"Of course, in the very beginning, that didn't seem to matter. I got a tremendous kick out of it—all the backslapping, the recognition, the loud plaudits and even having my buttons torn from my clothes when I appeared in public. It was the same artificial kick a man got when he was drunk. Only it lasts a little longer. The thing that has happened to me is that my hangover of fame drunkenness is wearing off. I'm sobering up after a two years bat on Fame Champagne."

We were almost alone on the porch of the studio café. The "Men In White" company, which affords Clark his latest starring rôle, had called luncheon later than usual. Most of the others in their masks of yellow grease paint had long since returned to their sets. I thought Gable looked tired and considerably thinner. He had just returned from the Columbia lot after completing "It Happened One Night."

I said, "Clark, you've worked hard these past four years. You've been desperately ill this last year. Don't you think that if you had a chance to rest this mood would vanish?"

He smiled. "That's a nice, logical excuse. And it's true, I am tired. This is what has happened to me in the last four years. I've had a good dose of Hollywood movie fame, three hunting trips and three severe illnesses. Maybe the ledger is balanced. But when I was lying there in the hospital it seemed to me that the root was deeper than that. Oh, I guess I'm the proverbial square-peg-in-the-round-hole. (Continued on page 94)

By their counsel, old-timers spread protecting wings over Hollywood's unsuspecting newcomers



GUARDIAN ANGELS

By ROBERT FENDER

IT'S a wise child," they keep telling us, "who knows his own parents." If that's true in civil life, it applies doubly to Hollywood, where parental advisers abound on all sides.

The first job any young star or starlet has in this place is to shake loose from the small army of "well-wishers" and advisers who would guide him through the film capital's intricate maze. Nine times out of ten, those who would "advise" are, in reality, simply trying to create jobs for themselves. Sadly enough, they are far more interested in the amount of their paychecks than in the quality of sage wisdom they dispense.

Hollywood has, however, a number of real studio parents; or, if you like, guardian angels—people who, having gone through the battle of getting launched themselves, feel a definite obligation or desire to help others over the bumps. And the work they're doing, although heretofore unheralded, is a fine, unselfish work, deserving of notice and praise. I know of no more difficult place to "crack" than Hollywood. Opportunities for doing the wrong thing, unintentionally perhaps, are at every hand. And for many youngsters who are tasting their first sip of success via the movies, the temptations are most apt to prove too much. That is why a studio parent of the right sort is God's gift to the beginner in this crazy-quilt land.

At least "godsend" is the way Toby Wing described

Joe E. Brown showed Dick Powell the ropes and advised him when to stand pat and when to compromise. And Walter Huston did as much for Max Baer. Joan Crawford encouraged Robert Young with praise and social invitations, and Jack Oakie was Toby Wing's counsellor.

OF HOLLYWOOD

such a person to me. And the person she had in mind was, of all people, Jack Oakie of the contagious grin. Now cute little Toby, in spite of her grown-up pose, is really a youngster; a naïve, adorable kid who would think the very best of any sweet-appearing scoundrel. Completely without guile herself, Toby would find it difficult to imagine guile in another. Hence, during her initiate period in Hollywood, she was all ears to those who were going to "get her into the pitchers." She believed this one. She believed that one. And had it not been for Mr. Jack Oakie, Toby might well have joined that army of unfortunates whose Hollywood career begins and ends at the big studio gates which bear the sign: "Keep Out. This Means You," a truly disheartening slogan.

BUT Jack came along," she told me, "and pounded home what I have since learned—that it was all hooey. He taught me how to let it go in one ear and quickly out the other. He showed me that, for the most part, my well-wishers were wolves, parasites who wanted to be in on the killing, if any. He opened my eyes to the real Hollywood, saving me any amount of grief.

"He also told me of the right and wrong whoopee palaces to visit. You know there are certain places that are simply not patronized, but newcomers here have no way of telling unless someone (Continued on page 101)

A: NANA

(Sam Goldwyn)

Anna Sten, Lionel Atwill, Phillips Holmes, Mae Clarke, Richard Bennett, Muriel Kirkland

INTRODUCING beautiful Anna Sten. And what a gorgeously glamorous person she is! The idea of the story (in which the street-walker becomes a great actress, falls in love with a young boy whose older brother ships him away, only to fall in love with her himself) is nothing that we haven't all seen before in one guise or another. But the atmosphere, the sheer beauty of the sets and the loveliness of the new star, makes this picture spell "entertainment." Phillips Holmes as the boy, is rather wishy-washy, but his older brother, Lionel Atwill, is grand in the characterization of the rake who has been living the life of a Puritan too long. "Nana" has a song hit, too. "That's Love." And you'll like Anna Sten's husky manner of putting it over. This picture is worth your time and money in every way. See it.

We'd like to give a special paragraph of praise to Dorothy Arzner, our ace woman director, who megaphoned this picture. A grand job, Miss Arzner, and may you be appointed boss of many a flicker to come!

(Above) Bette Davis and William Powell supply love interest in "Fashions of 1934." (Below) The happy pair are Arline Judge and Jack Oakie in "Looking for Trouble."

OUR PICTURE RATING

Rating a picture is not the simple task one might suppose. Often, you see, the cast may be good and the story mediocre. Or the plot may be far superior to the players who enact it. To aid you in making a selection of pictures you wish to see, we will grade talkies A, B, C, and D—excellent, good, fair and poor.

Sylvia Sidney and Fredric March are that surprised at the grandeur of their new apartment! This is one of the amusing highlights in "Good Dame," their latest co-starring vehicle.

Reviews

—A TOUR OF TODAY'S TALKIES

•

By WALTER RAMSEY

•

A: LOOKING FOR TROUBLE
(20th Century)

Spencer Tracy, Jack Oakie, Constance Cummings

WE laughed and laughed! This makes the second one this month to deal with the telephone repair man, but it's swell. Spencer Tracy and Jack Oakie (what a team!) are the "trouble shooters" for the telephone company—and they run into everything from blondes to gangsters. Connie Cummings (looking too thin) had a tough time hanging onto Tracy, who liked to roam, but Arline Judge had too easy a time hanging on to Oakie (looking too fat)! When the pair of them discover that there's been a "rat doing some wire-tapping," the big smash starts. You'll get an actual picture (almost) of the earthquake. Run, don't walk!

A: FASHIONS OF 1934
(Warners)

William Powell, Bette Davis, Veree Teasdale

GREAT Entertainment! When you put Bill Powell in a spot where he has to scheme, and the schemes lead to his stealing advance styles from Parisian modistes, then you know it will be a swell evening. Bill, as usual, has his little "outfit" composed of Bette Davis (who does right well as the fashion artiste in the troupe who finally marries Bill); Frank McHugh as his very funny lieutenant, and Dorothy Burgess as a much disappearing secretary. When Bill has practically bankrupt all the Paris firms, he puts on a style show in which he hopes to make the fashion world ostrich-conscious. The gals will like this one for the fashions and the men will enjoy Powell's nefarious scheming. It's a grand hour's entertainment. P.S.: Try and forget Hugh Herbert as the ostrich breeder! And try and forget the scene wherein Powell discovers that the Grand Duchess (Veree Teasdale) is none other than—. Well, we don't mean to tell you everything. It would spoil the fun you'll have over this A-1 movie.

A: STRANGE HOLIDAY
(Paramount)

Fredric March, Evelyn Venable, Guy Standing

A SWELL two hours! We had seen the play "Death Takes a Holiday" from which this picture was made and we still liked it, which is saying, "It's good." Freddie March gives as fine a performance as he ever gave, besides giving you a new slant on this idea of death. Of course, he falls in love with a gal (Evelyn Venable) and when she falls in love with him, she receives the "kiss of death" and that's that for her, in spite of the weeping and wailing of the relatives. Sir Guy Standing, who plays host to Death, gives a beautiful performance. We hope you go. It's worth the price if only because it is so different.

A: HI, NELLIE
(Warners)

Paul Muni, Glenda Farrell, Ned Sparks,

HIGH Ranking Entertainment! Paul Muni was the hard-boiled managing editor, until he crossed the boss, at which time he is placed in charge of the paper's lovelorn column (supposedly run by a gal named Nellie Nelson) and the gang start ribbing him with "Hi, Nellie." We've never seen Muni in such a down-to-earth part and we loved him in it. Lots of real newspaper stuff, underworld atmosphere, suspense and a climax that will leave you talking to yourself. Glenda Farrell does well and Ned Sparks plays his usual role. This little offering would never be called an epic, but it's way up there in entertainment value.

B: COMING OUT PARTY
(Fox)

Frances Dee, Gene Raymond, Alison Skipworth

PRETTY Good! And Frances Dee is swell—getting better with each picture—although the story fails to measure up to her efforts. Debutante Dee is in love Believe it or not, the gentleman with the marcel is Fredric March (again) and the lady who is pinning a rose on him is Evelyn Venable. They are in "Strange Holiday" together.

Glenda Farrell and Paul Muni always may be depended upon to give good performances, but in "Hi, Nellie" the pair sort of outdo themselves. Warner Brothers are proud of this one.

with penniless Musician Gene Raymond. Just before her coming out party, however, she finds she is about to have a "blessed event"—which news almost causes her parents to change the title of the picture to "Staying Home Party." The intervention of the old, faithful butler (new idea!) and an offer from a Jewish band leader, finally make for the usual clinch. If you have time, we advise you to use it here.

B: THIS SIDE OF HEAVEN

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Lionel Barrymore, Fay Bainter, Tom Brown, Una Merkel

YOU'LL probably enjoy this! A simple, homey story told in a charming manner. The Turners are just another family with the usual ups-and-downs. Father Barrymore innocently becomes involved in a $40,000 embezzlement, leaving the kids on the hands of the mother. She writes and sells a novel and must go to Hollywood. The offspring (Tom Brown, et al) have their separate problems, which are shown, together with most of the rest of the picture, in episodic form. Miss Bainter and Barrymore work beautifully together and Tom Brown, as the son, is good.

A: IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT

(Columbia)

Claudette Colbert, Clark Gable, Walter Connolly, Roscoe Karns, Alan Hale

POSITIVELY Swell! Boy, howdy, this is one that you cannot afford to miss. It's just one of those rare exceptions that prove the rule. Clark Gable is a newspaper man who trys to help rich-girl Colbert escape from her father who seems anxious to prevent her marrying a bounder. They, of course, fall in love on their hitch-hike escape and the situations are so real and human that we'll bet you catch yourself smiling plenty of times. Everyone in the picture, especially the stars, seems to have forgotten to "act" and is merely living a very swell slice of life. The dialogue, direction and camera work are superb—just to make the whole ensemble perfect. Don't let anything keep you away.

Mary Carlisle and Lionel Barrymore in "This Side of Heaven."

A: PALOOKA

(20th Century)

Jimmy Durante, Lupe Velez, Stuart Erwin, Marjorie Rambeau

A BOISTEROUS Evening! It seems, for the first ten minutes of the picture, they had to get Stu Erwin from the farm to the Big City, but when they do, what a flock of laughs! Stu decides to follow his father in the fight ring and gets Jimmy Durante as manager and Lupe as the gal-who-likes-heem. We couldn't (and wouldn't) tell you all the laughs. There are millions of 'em! We can tell you, though, that you'll like it if you enjoy your fun in large doses, served with verve and sparkle. Go on, laugh!

"Coming Out Party" features Gene Raymond and Frances Dee.

A: THE LAST ROUND-UP

(Paramount)

Randolph Scott, Monte Blue, Barbara Fritchie, Fred Kohler

ALMOST as good as the song! Yes, if you like Westerns, you'll sure go for this one. A believable hero and villain plus a good reason for everything that takes place (even the "chases") make this page from the Old West very entertaining. Randy Scott finds himself, seemingly by accident, a member of Jack Kells' gang of outlaws. Monte Blue, as Kells, is swell. Of course "The Last Round-Up" is the musical background for the picture, which only makes matters better. The kids will like this one, too.

Anna Sten and Lionel Atwill in a dramatic moment in "Nana."

B: ONCE TO EVERY WOMAN

(Columbia)

Fay Wray, Ralph Bellamy, Walter Connolly, Mary Carlisle

FORMULA No. 6! Operating rooms, chloroform, starched uniforms. Head surgeon, Walter Connolly, breaks down while performing a very delicate brain operation and Hero Ralph Bellamy steps into the breach and finishes the job successfully. This little deed puts him in tops both with the hospital and pretty Nurse Fay Wray. Despite the old-familiar story, excellent bits of acting place this picture in the better-than-middlin' class.

B: LET'S FALL IN LOVE

(Columbia)

Gregory Ratoff, Eddie Lowe, Ann Sothern, Miriam Jordon

THIS is good! Although it's the story of the star who walks out on the picture, leaving the director to find a new girl, it is so interestingly told that we know you will like it. It has a Hollywood background and Gregory Ratoff, as the director, just about steals the whole show. However, Ann Sothern does exceptionally well, and this is her first picture. Of course, the director falls in love with the new star and the ending is a real laugh-provoker. Worth your time.

(Continued on page 125)

HE WENT UP TO SEE HER ONE TIME

Remember how, in "I'm No Angel," Mae befriended Dorothy Cummings? And how, in "She Done Him Wrong," she helped Rochelle Hudson? Mae does things like that.

By DENA REED

How Mae West played counsellor, friend and Lady Bountiful to one who remembers

HERE'S a new chapter to add to the Mae West saga. Much has been written about her numerous charities and her kindness to her fellow-players, but there is one tale that has never before been told and which I believe gives a different slant on the "Come-Up-And-See-Me-Sometime" Girl. I got this story from a boy—we'll call him Jimmy—who was just twenty and full of illusions and a fierce desire to act when he met La West. I think his tale proves how much of her everyday kindness is tinged with an almost maternal feeling.

Mae had just come from a ten-day sentence on Welfare Island for her authorship of "Sex" when an agent sent this lad up to see her about a part in "The Wicked Age," which was to be her next play. The sum total of the applicant's stage experience had been as an extra. He had worn a beard and pushed a wheel in an atmosphere scene of a play in which Fredric March had had a leading role.

Mae looked at Jimmy's frank face and handsome brown eyes and perhaps saw in him the makings of a juvenile in time—much time. She knew what the ambition to act was. She doubtless knew that he was lying when he told of extensive and rather vague stock experience in the Middle West, but she liked his youthful enthusiasm. Although the part was filled, it wasn't filled to her satisfaction, so she told Jimmy she'd take him on as understudy for the role and if the other boy didn't improve, Jimmy might get his chance.

I WAS in a spot then," he told me. "In the first place, my family wasn't in sympathy with an acting career and I had pictures of what would happen if I went home and told them I was going to act with Miss West, just let out—amid the blare of publicity trumpets—from Welfare Island. I tried to explain this to Mae and I made a pretty sorry mess of it. I told her with all the self-confidence and grandiloquence of 'Merton of the Movies' that I wasn't sure whether I was going to make acting or writing my career but I did want to keep up acting for a while to get a knowledge of the theatre. Then I tried to explain how conservative my mother was and that I didn't think she'd like my being in her show.

"Another actress would have given me blazes for wasting her time—but not Mae. She always adored her own mother and I think she liked the fact that I considered mine, although anyone else would have called me a sap and told me to get out. But Mae knew that I stood between two fires and she just smiled consolingly and said: 'Don't worry, kid. I'll phone your mother. There isn't a dame living who can (Continued on page 124)

WHO IS FREDDIE'S Boss?

By JIM KAHN

IN all the madness of Hollywood, the sanity of the Fredric Marches stands out. In that topsy-turvy Mecca of jumbled temperaments and upside down emotions, they've managed to remain a couple of human beings who have gone along together. If they've reached the heights, their high and lofty pinnacle hasn't, as in the case of so many others, made them just a little dizzy. Rather has it served to give them a clear and unobstructed view in all directions.

Behind all the fine success of Freddie March you'll find this good human tale of a husband and wife who went along together, and it's time it was told. Mrs. Fredric March, who was Florence Eldridge, deserves her full share of the credit. In the words of the flip crackers, she has been his "best pal and severest critic" and in Hollywood, where life can be a giddy existence, that's no small achievement.

And how have they done it?

Well, I think you'll find the real beginning of the story back in Denver seven years ago. It was there that the leading man in a Theatre Guild stock company fell in love with and married the leading lady. The leading man, of course, was Freddie March; the leading lady, Florence Eldridge.

If Fred was in love with Florence, he was also a little

(Opposite page) The Fredric Marches arrive in New York for a holiday and (below) Freddie is seen "in character" as the hero of "Strange Holiday."

(Above, left) Remember Freddie in "The Royal Family"? Uh huh—and so does Florence March. (Right) As he plays the tricky gambler of "Good Dame."

. . . It is the Missus who says, "Save your money for a rainy day and your acting for the audience!" And Mr. March replies, "Yes M'am"—and does awed by her. Hers was the "name" of the troupe. She had been a clever young actress on the Broadway stage. Critics found much to admire in her work and made bright prophecies as to her future.

So Fred, who was not quite sure of himself, had a good prop to lean on. When she told him something, he paid attention. When she made a suggestion, he followed it. And the reason this story is being written is that Fred still does.

Through five years of his Hollywood career, a period crammed with success and distinction, you'll find the fine guiding hand of Florence Eldridge. She has done little things, almost infinitesimal in their importance at the moment, but they've kept the forward march of the Fredric Marches in a straight line.

FOR one thing, ever since he has been married to Florence Eldridge, Fred March has had a home. That's one reason why she never went on with that promising stage career. Before anything else, Florence is a home-maker. The phrase is Fred's own. She doesn't give a hoot about hotel life and, though the vagaries of a movie career have taken them back and forth across the country several times, Florence always saw to it that "home" for the Marches wasn't a couple of hotel rooms. It was where it ought to be—in a well-regulated house.

Of course, in a subtle way, that added to Fred's stability and responsibility. Instead of going out, they stayed home and had friends in. It's a little thing, but it has kept them like the rest of us humans.

A few years ago when Fred was working at Paramount's eastern studios on Long Island, I was spending the afternoon with them at their home in Great Neck. Their fourth wedding anniversary was only a few days off and, to surprise his wife, Fred had ordered three diamond bracelets sent out from a Fifth Avenue jeweler. They arrived while I was there. She was to select one and send the other two back.

Florence sent them all back.

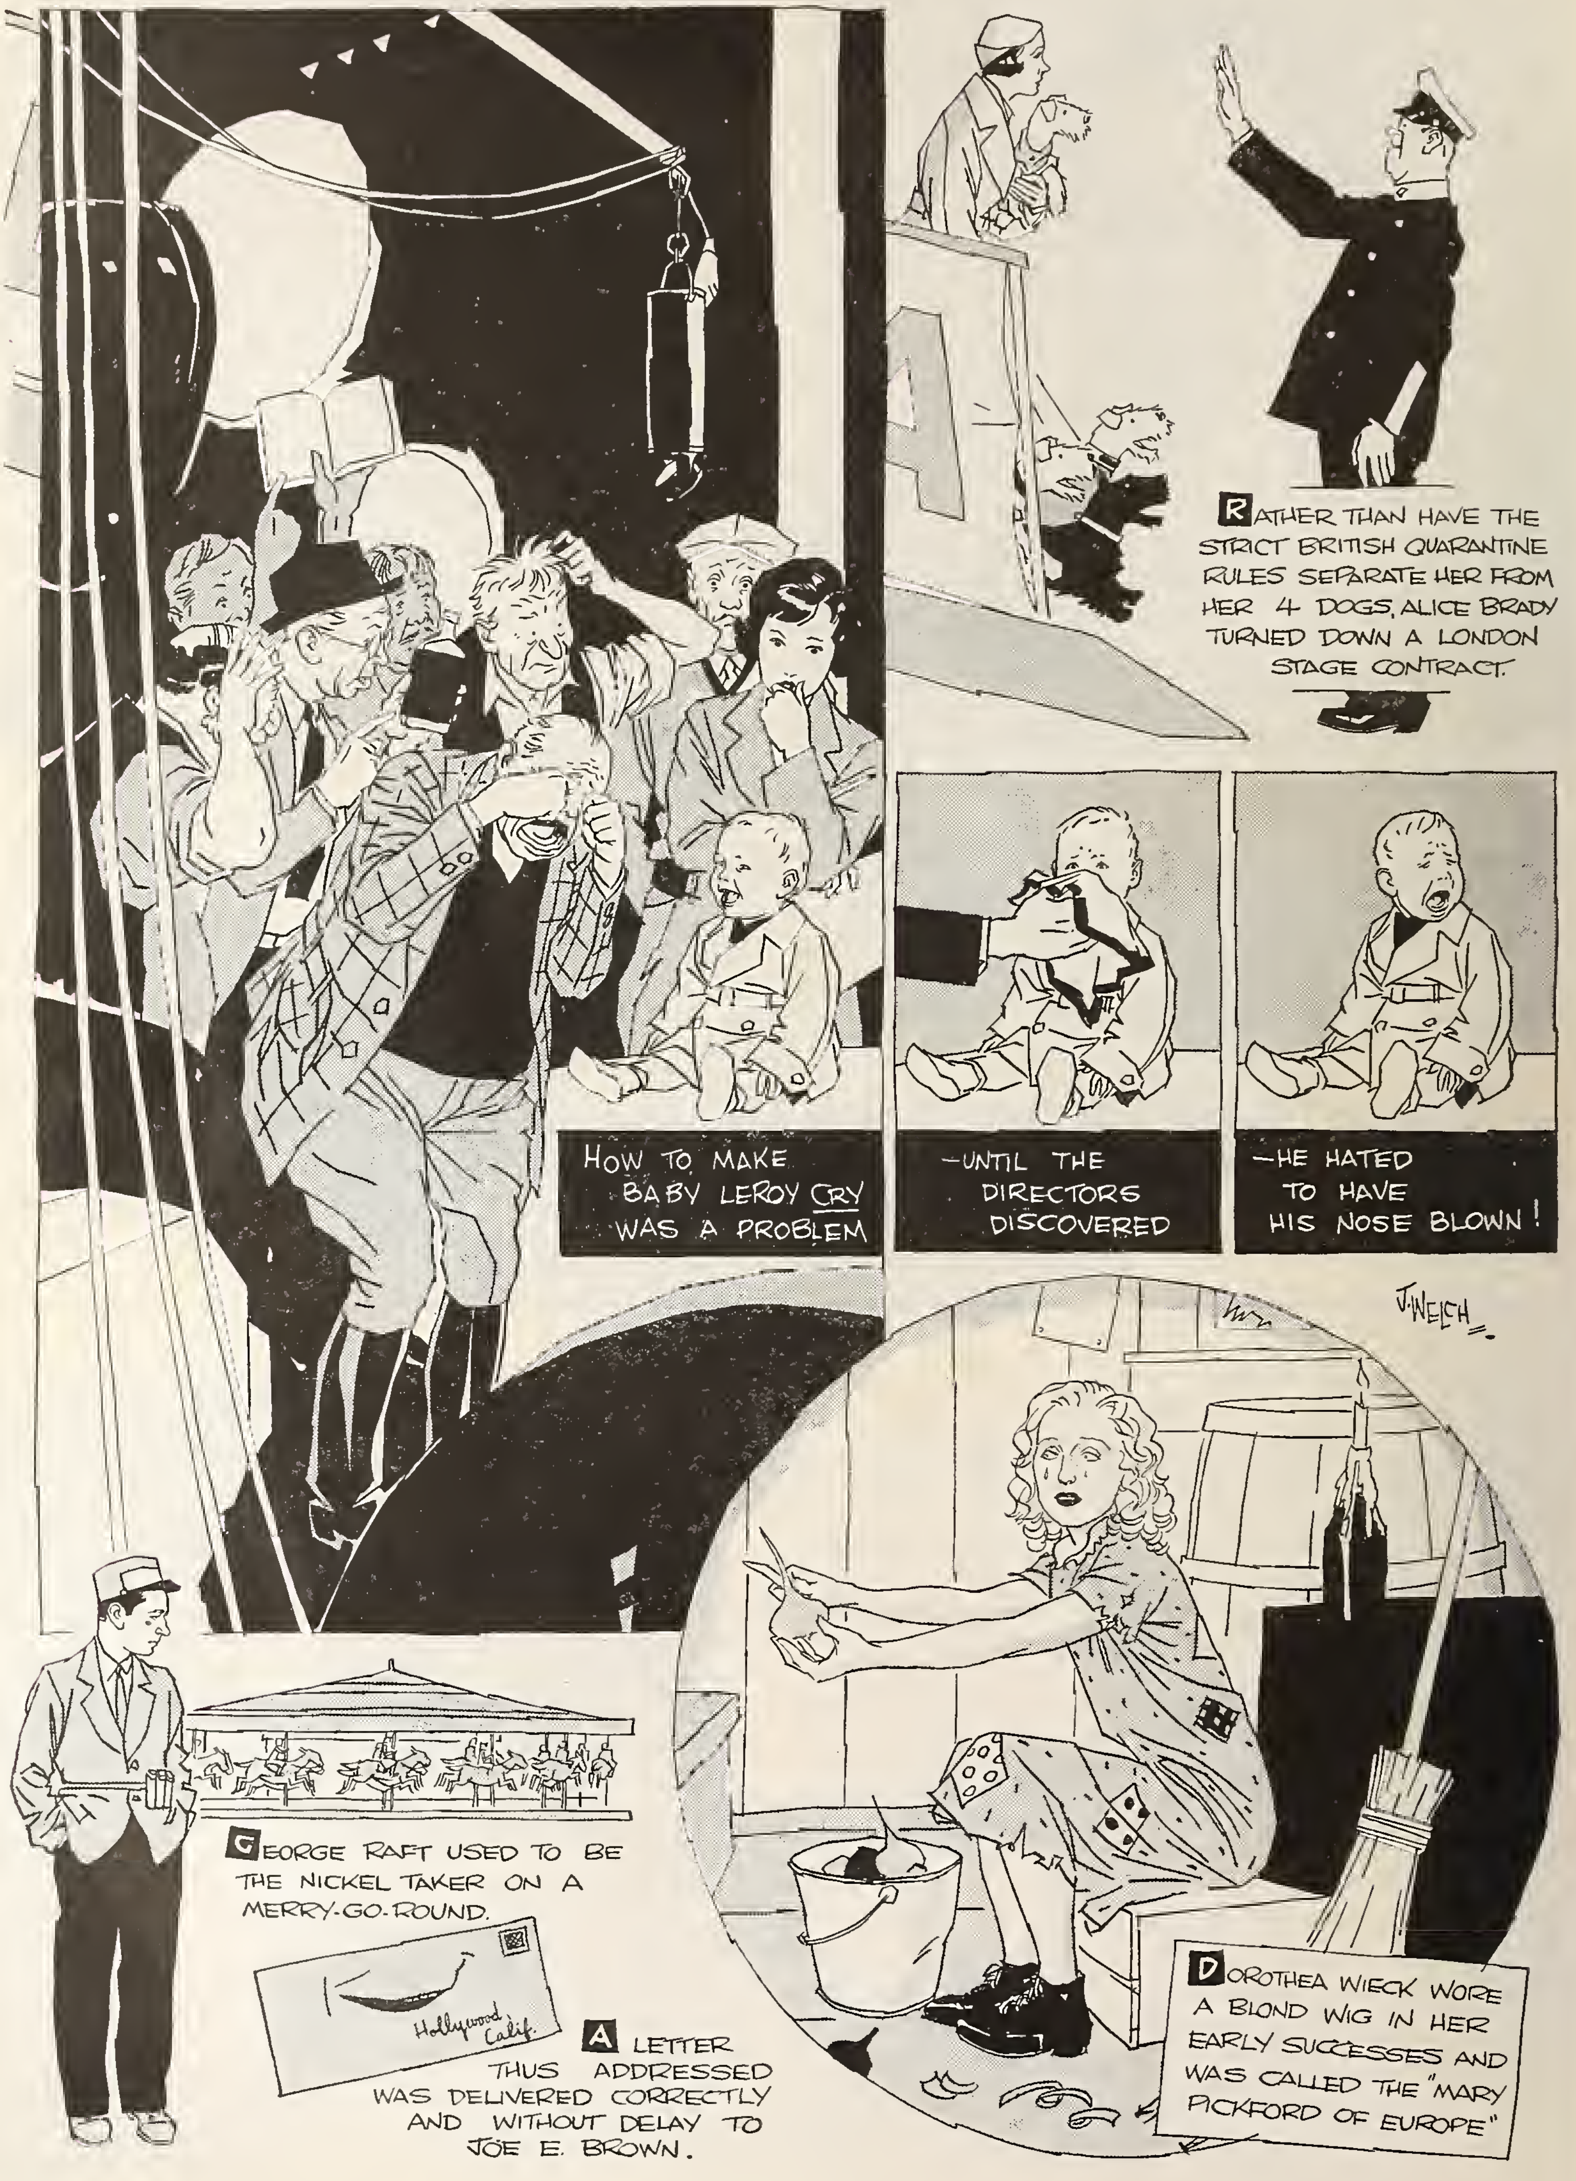
"This is enough for me," she said, proudly exhibiting a diamond ring set in iron. It was her engagement ring. Fred explained he gave it to her in Denver. He had had the diamond and at the time the iron setting seemed appealing.

Also, he chuckled, at the time it was cheaper.

The money for the bracelets stayed in the bank.

While I wouldn't disillusion any of you, I'm afraid if you scratched any actor you'd find ham beneath the surface. You might have to scratch a little deeper on some than on others, but it would be (Continued on page 80)

ALL JOKING ASIDE—By JACK WELCH



RATHER THAN HAVE THE STRICT BRITISH QUARANTINE RULES SEPARATE HER FROM HER 4 DOGS, ALICE BRADY TURNED DOWN A LONDON STAGE CONTRACT.

HOW TO MAKE BABY LEROY CRY WAS A PROBLEM

—UNTIL THE DIRECTORS DISCOVERED

—HE HATED TO HAVE HIS NOSE BLOWN!

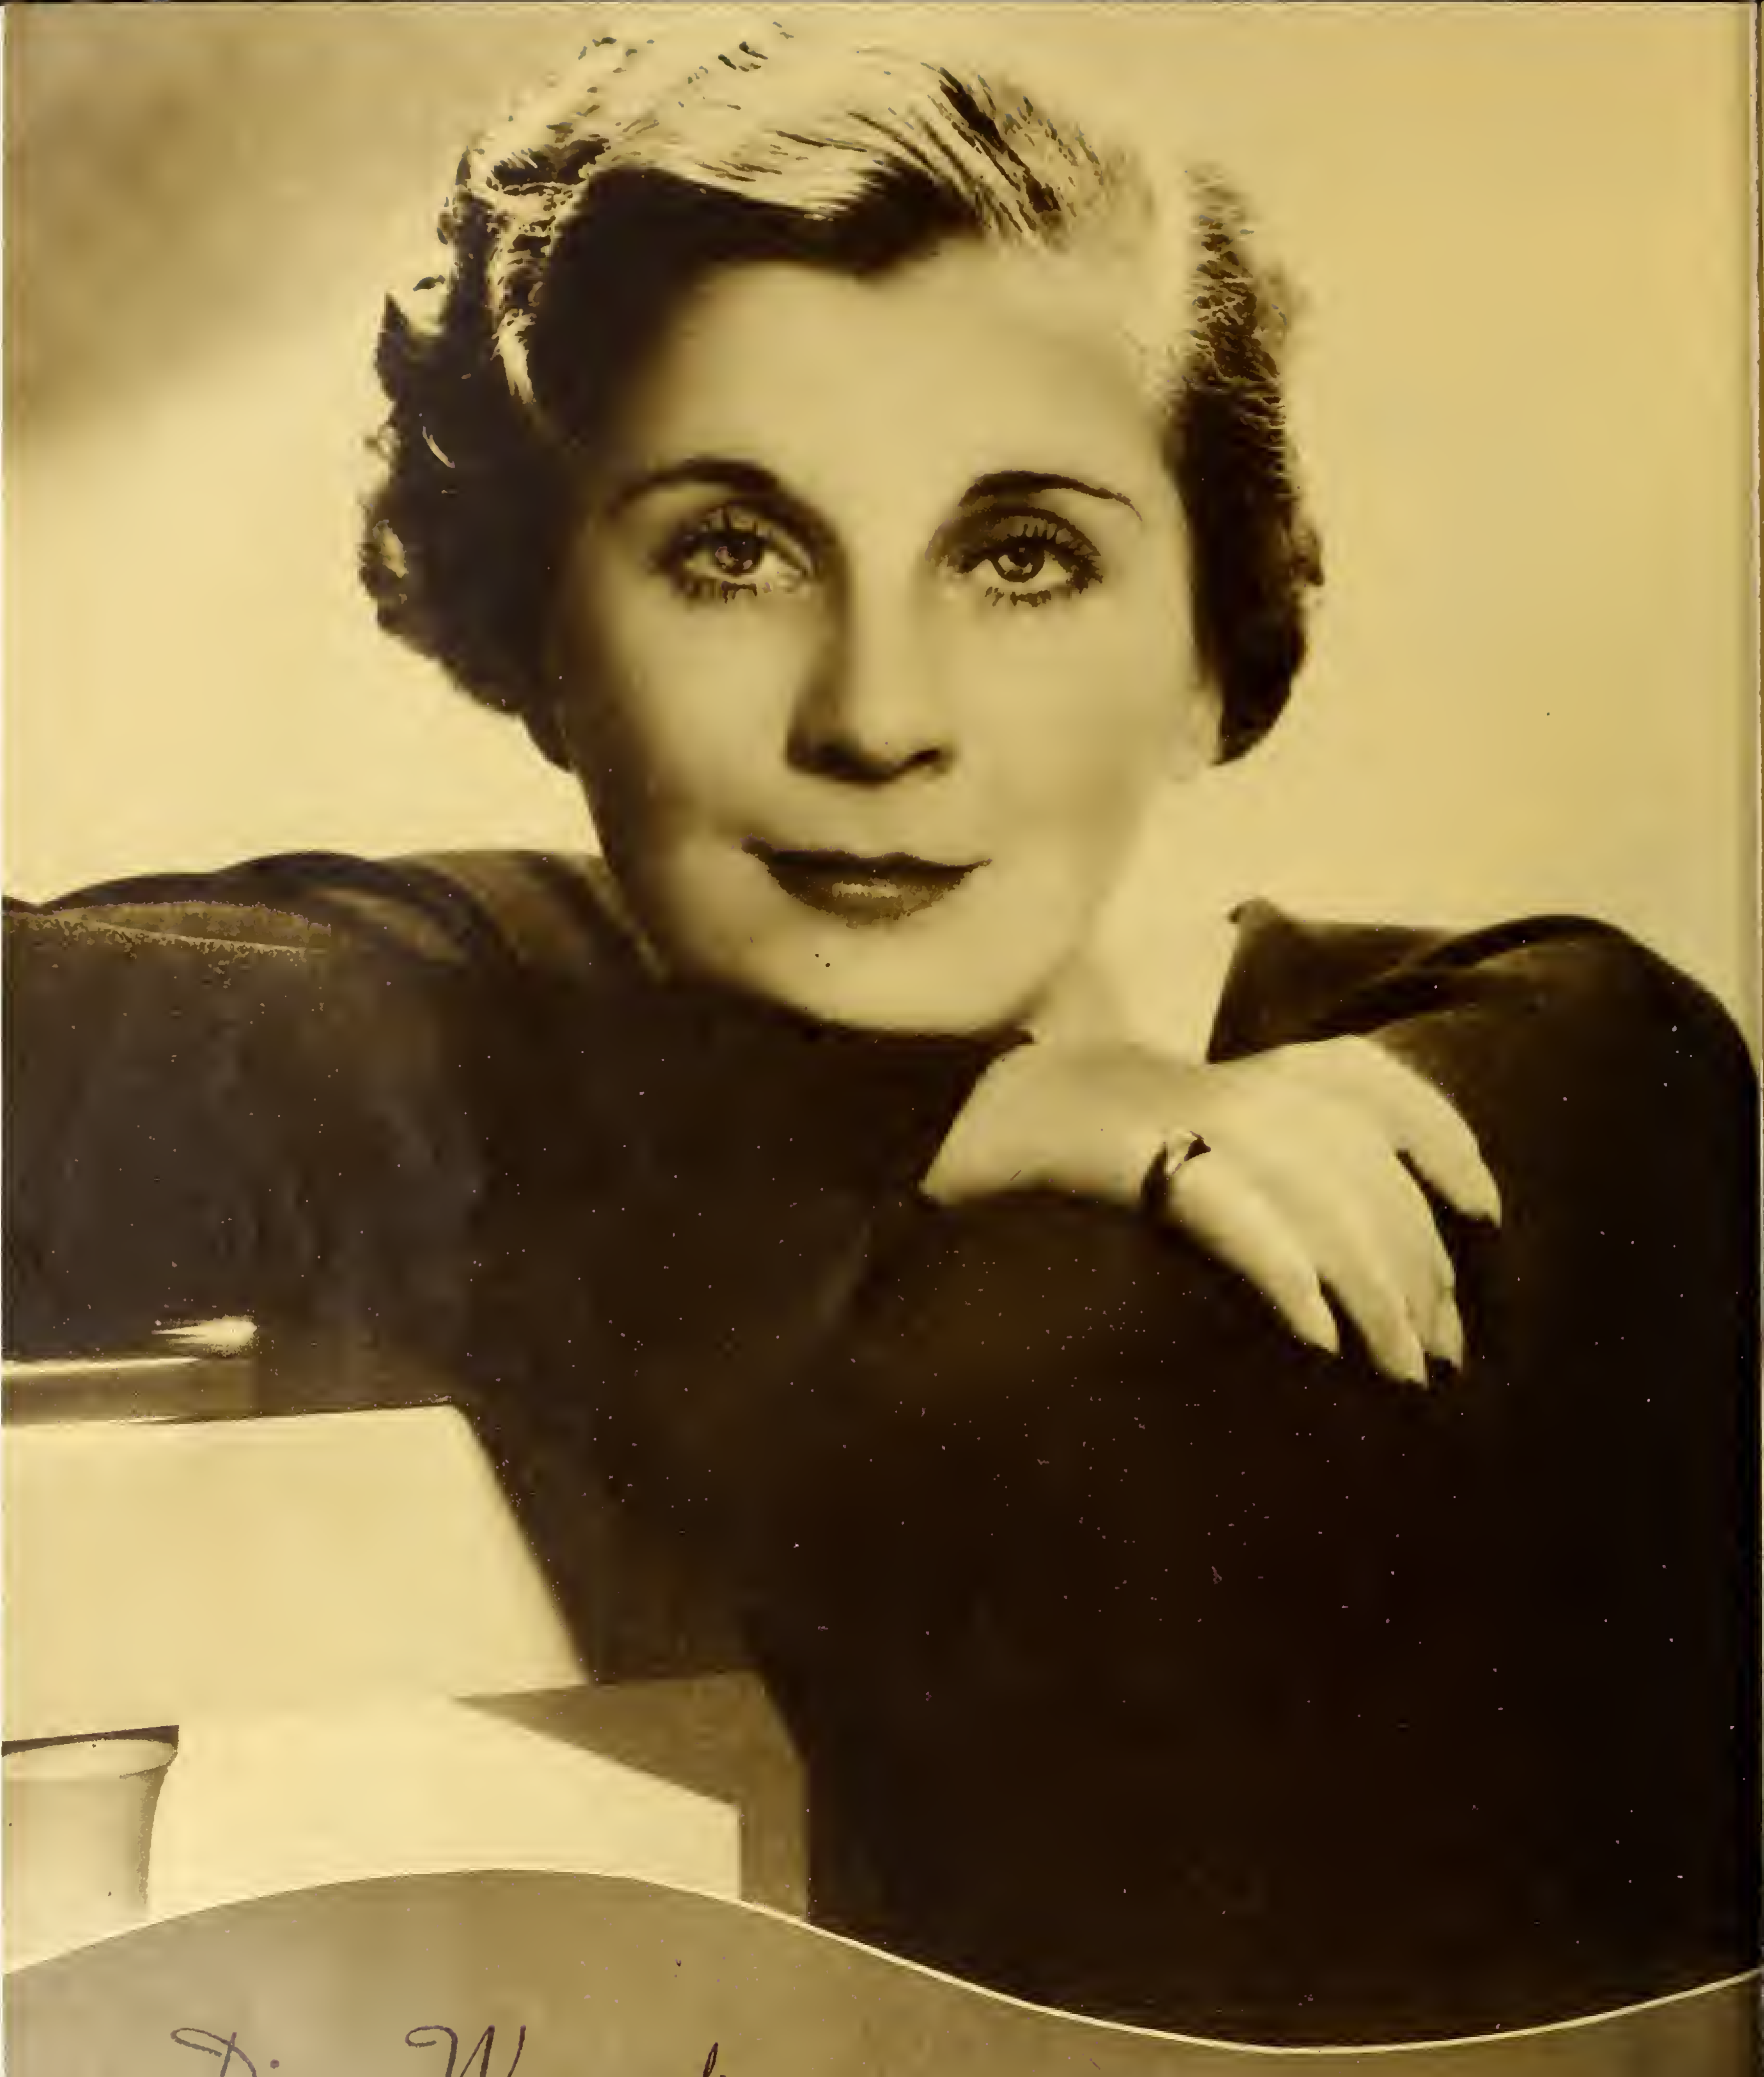
GEORGE RAFT USED TO BE THE NICKEL TAKER ON A MERRY-GO-ROUND.

A LETTER THUS ADDRESSED WAS DELIVERED CORRECTLY AND WITHOUT DELAY TO JOE E. BROWN.

DOROTHEA WIECK WORE A BLOND WIG IN HER EARLY SUCCESSES AND WAS CALLED THE "MARY PICKFORD OF EUROPE"

Clark Gable

He likes the town so well, he has named his new race horse "Beverly Hills"—and the animal won his maiden race at Caliente recently. Now that Clark has finished "Men in White," he's taken that famous collection of guns off on another hunting trip.



Diana Wynyard

A breath of Bond Street is Lady Diana. Sophisticated, smart, yet wholesome. She would like Hollywood even if it didn't contribute so materially to her income. She goes in heavily for the hair-raising variety of radio "mellers," animated cartoons and detective stories. She can play the piano in concert manner, cook like a chef and is handy with a needle. Miss Wynyard may soon be seen in "Vanessa."

Bing Crosby

Croonin' Crosby and Carole Lombard are working in "We're Not Dressing." A snappy team? We think so. When Bing isn't making movies, he is off to Palm Springs or Tolucca Lake or some other section of the great outdoors. He's the real estate agent's delight, for he buys the places he learns to care for. Bing and the Missus expect another little crooner soon to keep young Gary Evans Crosby company.

El

Ah, that Spanish something, that rhythmic glide which spells fire, passion, romance! These seductive scenes are from "Wonder Bar," the Al Jolson "special" in which Dolores Del Río, Ricardo Cortez and Kay Francis appear. And, romance-seekers and cash-customers, we have here the luscious Del Río and the handsome Don Cortez performing the dance that made sunny Spain as famous as its senoritas and, lest we forget, its duennas, those middle-aged girls who keep the young folks in order and the temperature at an even scale when things threaten to become too hot.

tango romántico

HOW I'M TEACHING MY daughter TO FACE LIFE

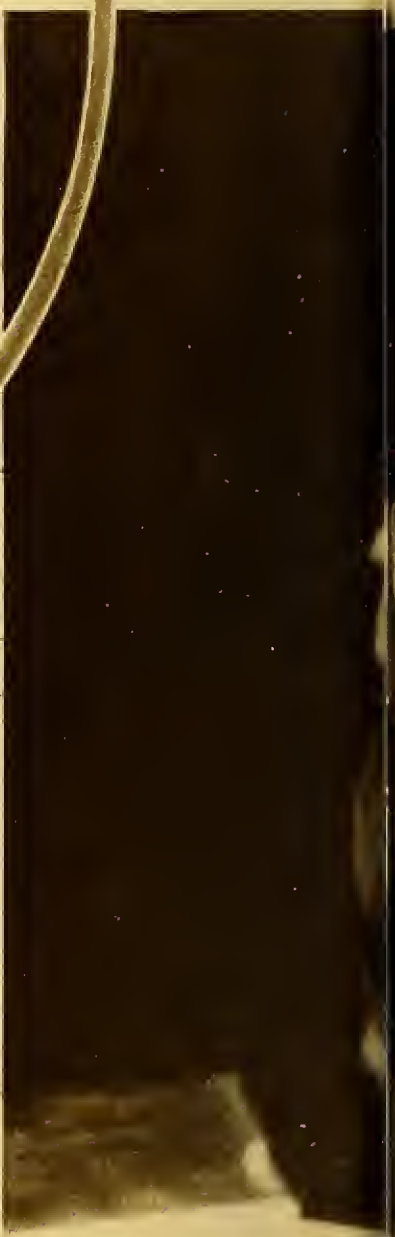
By HELEN HAYES

As told to NANETTE KUTNER

●

"I want her to be honest and audacious. And happy. Not too meek nor too good-natured. I believe in old-fashioned discipline. Sex problems? I'm not worrying!"



I TOOK Mary away from Hollywood and I'm glad of it! She is three and a half years old now. I do not want her to live the life of a movie star's child.

In Hollywood children are always on parade. They never can be just kids. They are lovely looking and exceptionally well behaved, but they do lack a normal upbringing.

Understand, this is not the fault of Hollywood parents. You must remember that the motion picture colony cannot know the meaning of real peace. These kidnapping scares are strictly on the level. But it is terribly depressing for a child to see bars on all the windows and to be obliged to have a guard. I think that constant supervision is bound to give children an exaggerated sense of their own importance. Besides, there is something frightening about a guard, even to me.

Take the Thalberg youngster. Norma's little boy is simply darling, but while he sits and plays in the sand, a big fat detective has to sit right there with him. I must admit that the child doesn't mind it at all. In fact, he's quite used to it. But it does seem rather dreadful, nevertheless.

And I'll never forget this incident. When Mary was two years old, Joe E. Brown's daughter had a birthday party. I escorted Mary there myself. As we drove toward Joe Brown's home, I noticed a state trooper's car parked outside. At the time I did not think anything of it, but when we walked onto the grounds, I stood, positively aghast. There were those dainty little girls with their gay colored hair ribbons and their curls and their starched white dresses, all looking so sweet and fragile, and standing in a grim semi-circle around them, was a group of burly state troopers with enormous revolvers nonchalantly tucked in their thick leather holsters!

WHEN Mary was a year old, I did want to give a party and have our friends see her. Charlie said that nobody was interested in meeting a baby and he asked me to let him send out the invitations. I did so. To my surprise, for I had absolutely no idea as to what he had written, I received a mysterious assortment of prompt and very delighted replies.

I gloated as I said to Charlie, "What do you mean, nobody is interested in visiting a baby? Every single person you've invited to the party has accepted!'

He laughed. I did not know why.

Our first guest was Lucretia Bori, the opera star. She arrived an hour early. She burst into our home, exclaiming, "Tell me! Is he here yet? Where is he? Where is he?" Then, to her obvious dismay and disappointment, there was only little Mary seated in the center of the room.

Practically on Bori's heels, came a variety of theatrical, motion picture and literary lights, all with the same excited questions.

It was then I inquired, and finally discovered that instead of asking our guests to meet Mary MacArthur, my wily husband had invited them to meet Al Capone!

That sort of thing was all very well when Mary was a baby and too young to understand. But now, as she grows older, I have no desire to show her off. I want her to have a normal childhood. I want her to enjoy the kind of life I've never been able to have. You see, ever since I was five years old, I've worked and worked hard. I was a stage child. The theatre is all I have known. I only know how to work. I never knew how to play. And I'm very tired. I don't want Mary to become as tired as I am. I don't want her to become anything but a happy little girl. Through her I want to experience the childhood, yes, and the simple girlhood I could not have.

We live in a small town. It is a typical American town. Nyack, New York. Mary can run about there like any child.

Just the other day I experienced a real thrill because three children called for her. Two of the children were walking, the third rode in a go-cart. They came clamoring up to our porch and they begged Mary to go with them to the village to watch the baby get his hair cut. So Mary joined them, her fat little legs trudging down the steep hill to the barber shop. Now that could never have happened in Hollywood.

WHEN Mary is old enough to attend school, I am going to send her to the public one in Nyack. All the tradesmen's children go there and they are such nice tradesmen, such clean, wholesome families.

When Mary graduates from public school, I shall send her to boarding school. That's because I always wanted to go to boarding school. I want Mary to make a lot of friends and go visiting to other girl's houses.

I'm always making plans, silly (Continued on page 85)

Mary MacArthur, the daughter of the brilliant Helen Hayes and Charles MacArthur, is just three and a half now. Helen has taken her away from Hollywood and she lives in the little town of Nyack, New York, leading the most happy and normal of childhood existences.

TICKLING Hollywood's ribs!

Illustrated by JACK WELCH

HOLLYWOOD has brought "ribbing" up to the level of a fine art. It's gotten so you can hardly stroll down the Boulevard without some kind friend tying a poster on your back saying "Kick Me!" And many a rib is just as crude as that. There is one actress who strolled all the way from Highland Avenue to Vine Street with a placard pinned to her back which said something much funnier. So funny, in fact, that if I told you what it was the Government would arrest me for putting it in print.

Everybody likes to play jokes, but why Hollywood people spend so much time doing it—and in some cases hundreds of dollars to make sure that the rib will click—is just one more of those mysteries. Maybe it's because there is so much waiting between "takes" on the set that they would go crazy if they didn't have something to occupy their time.

You need a pretty tough "sense of humor" to appreciate some of the ribs. Max Baer pushing all the girls at a party into a swimming pool, for instance. Jean Harlow didn't think that was so funny. She told him plenty, made him pay the girls for ruining their dresses and came within an inch of giving him a sock on the jaw. Maurice Chevalier didn't think it was so darned amusing when he was shoved into a pool, either, Doug Fairbanks, Sr., doing the shoving if I remember rightly.

In France they don't do things like that.

But in Hollywood they do.

However, most of it is good-natured kidding. Making "Smilin' Through," I recall the director got a bug in his eye. It wasn't a serious casualty, but Sidney Franklin, the director, took it big. Morning after morning he came to work wearing a celluloid patch over the offending eye. The gang on the set were duly impressed for about a week. Then they decided it just couldn't be that serious and it was about time to let Mr. Franklin know they thought so. So next day when he arrived for work, he found everybody on the set, from Norma Shearer and Leslie Howard down to the third assistant prop boy, togged out in white celluloid eye patches. Not a word was said. Not a giggle was giggled. Mr. Franklin removed his eye patch like a good guy.

IT is no protection to be a good guy though. You won't find a soul in Hollywood who won't say that Clark Gable isn't one of the best. Yet, just because he is such a swell egg, Clark has ribs pulled on him all the time. There have been a couple just lately, but my favorite is the one they pulled while he was making "The White Sister." When he came to work one morning he found the cast lined up in a long row, all of 'em lugging chunks of broken statues from the prop department. One by one they stepped forward and presented them to him, saying seriously:

"The Academy Award for the hottest loving of the month."

"The Sail Manufacturers' Award for the biggest ears."

And so on. Each bit of decrepit bric-a-brac got its tag line and every one said something uncomplimentary about Mr. Gable. But Clark knew it was all in fun and took it that way.

So did Walter Huston that time he stepped on the set and found himself walking under a triumphal arch decorated with the reddest of red Bolshevik bunting. People gravely saluted him and offered him cheery Russian good mornings. "Tovarisch, Comrade Huston!" The thing was, Walter had presided as chairman the night before at Marlene could do nicely without those phone calls.

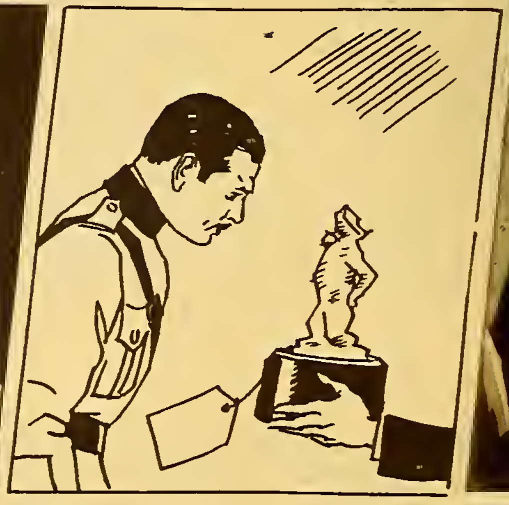
Harlow, Baer and the unfunny swimming pool incident.



Gable's award for big ears wasn't so darn funny, either.

More fun! More people killed—when Hollywood pulls a practical joke

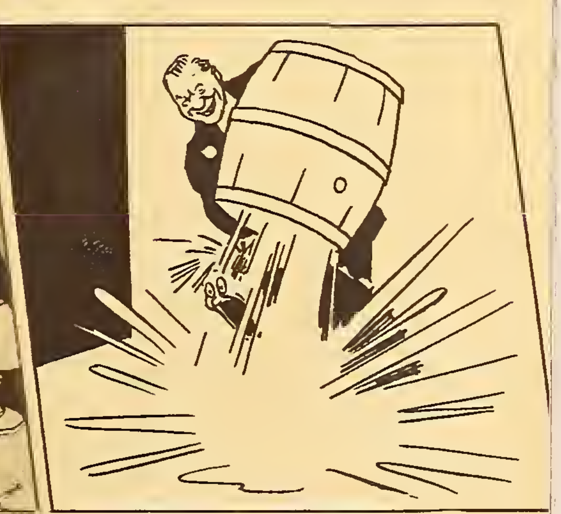
By Jack Jamison

U.S.C., where the college debating team had wrangled with Stanford's on, "Should the U. S. Government recognize Soviet Russia?" Not many actors are asked to colleges and the boys were taking him down a peg or two.

Which was considerably less gruesome than the rib pulled by Sid Grauman, impresario of the Chinese Theatre. Warner Brothers were dedicating a new theatre at the corner of Wilshire Boulevard and Western Avenue. That is the corner that has more traffic than any in New York or London. The Warners were doing it up in style with searchlights, radio announcers blurbing the stars as they drove up, and all that. Right in the middle of the festivities, up drove a hearse. Two black-garbed attendants dismounted, opened the doors and pulled out a coffin. Solemnly, while the assembled thousands caught their breaths, they lifted the lid of said coffin—and took out an enormous sheaf of flowers, bearing a ribbon inscribed, "With best wishes. Sid Grauman."

BUT those are simple ones. Howard Hughes once kept a rib going on Ben Lyon for months. It must have cost him hundreds of dollars. It started when Ben got a summons to appear in court at San Bernardino, a (Continued on page 99)

Jimmy Durante took it out on the piano when a night club host took advantage of him recently. And it wasn't "Schnozzle" who paid for the fun.



Wallie Beery gave Vince Barnett the "water cure."

ANNA STEN, "Passionate PEASANT"

"Nana" has set us all agog over this vibrant, earthy, glamorous creature. Read about her. You'll like her—she's different

By LYNN FARNOL

Zola's naughty romance boasts a large cast. Muriel Kirkland and Mae Clark are Nana's cocotte girl friends. Lawernce Grant is the Grand Duke. Phillips Holmes is the lover. Lionel Atwill is the theatrical producer. And Hardie Albright, a competent wild-oat sower. Richard Bennett is in it, too.

SHE'S a little thing, very blonde, with the wide cheek bones of the Russian peasant, a full, sensuous mouth and a short nose. Not one of your lath-like, scarecrow women, but curved deliciously where she should be curved. Her eyes are cornflower blue with a heavy golden-brown fringe of lashes and her brows are straight and rather heavy. The make-up man, thank God, has left them that way.

They will say of her that she resembles a number of our well loved actresses. But they will have to admit, too, that she also looks like none of them—neither Dietrich nor Garbo nor Hepburn nor whoever—but only like herself. Glamor is not quite the word for her, perhaps. Passion is a better word for the new allure she brings to the screen. An earthy, unsophisticated passion quite different from the glamor we have been taught to like.

Anna Sten is too smart for tricks. The blonde from Soviet Russia has puzzled and even irritated Hollywood.

She has made no flip comment on life and love and she has no gift for wisecracks. She has done none of the things that the screen colony lumps under the heading of showmanship. Anna hasn't worn men's clothes; she has done nothing about Aimee Semple MacPherson; she has entertained no congressional committee, channel swimmer or Spanish countess. There is no election night welcome for her as her black coupe comes into the studio gates in the morning. She is a worker, coming to work. No nonsense and no tricks.

Anna Sten was brought to Hollywood eighteen months ago by Samuel Goldwyn with the fame and world prestige of the German-made "Brothers Karamazov" as her introduction. She was the first actress to have been completely trained in Soviet state, stage and screen institutions.

In her training and her background, there is a key and an insight into her nature. In the desperate days after the World War, when a guerilla civil strife was challenging the new order of things in Russia, Anna was embarking on her career in the theatre. More than that, she was working in a restaurant and helping to edit a provincial paper in order to help feed her sister and her ailing mother.

The theatre, against which she pitted her undernourished strength and frail energy, was a threadbare one. No scenery and no equipment. The actors were glad to have enough clothes to keep them from freezing, enough food to keep them from starving. There was a pride and an honor on the stages of Stanislavsky and Inkijinoff. The theatres and the studios belonged to the workers; their art was for the workers, to inspire and sustain them in bringing into being the new Russian state. It was a big job, especially on an empty stomach and with holes in one's shoes.

TWO important pictures, "Moscow Laughs and Cries" and "The Yellow Ticket," neither of them ever shown except to a few students and critics in America, put Anna on top of the list. The Commissars of Education and Art sent her to Berlin to make pictures. It wasn't propaganda, but rather, good will. Anna isn't a propagandist nor a political economist.

"Who are we?" she asks you. "What do we know and what are we? Fly specks—not even that—in history."

"The Brothers Karamazov" in Berlin was the first of four pictures and the biggest success by far. England, hating the new Russia, loved a new Russian player in the most famous Russian stories. Americans found in her a bright new star from Red Russia, a simple, sensual, earthy type.

Anna is a peasant. In America, we think of a European peasant as of a low social order. The contrary is true. The farmers of Europe are far more proud than its aristocracy, for do they not dethrone kings? Kings come and go, but the farmers go on forever. They are simple, direct, without affectation or nonsense. Anna is one of them.

Because, coming out of the new Russia, she represented a brittle new quality, America welcomed Ann in "Brothers Karamazov." Paris demanded a French version of the story. And so Anna came to the French capital, memorizing the strange French tongue by ear—not knowing the meaning of the words—with the same ease with which she had just mastered German.

Sam Goldwyn sent me to Paris to see the picture. He wanted me to meet Anna and let him know just what kind of a woman she was. He had seen her on the screen as an actress. What is her mind like? How does she think? Tell me about her, my boss demanded.

The interview was a strange one. Anna did not speak either English or French beyond the memorized lines of "Brothers Karamazov." Guy Crosswell Smith, the head of our Paris office, went along to translate all my questions into French and he in turn took along another interpreter to translate his French questions into a German that Anna could understand.

She wanted to know about Hollywood, about methods and equipment. Didn't Hollywood have an extravagance about it, like too much fruit in a cake? She spoke slowly and deliberately. Hollywood was swift-paced, impatient, she said, in broken German. (Continued on page 83)

AT THE SCREEN

THEY Rehearse!

1. Chet Morris, Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery try out a little vocal trio on their ownsomes. Bystanders said it wasn't very good. But then, some folks are never pleased. 2. Bob again, with Dick Powell and Jeanette MacDonald, who really do know something about singing. 3. Watching the performers go through their paces. Gordon Westcott, Chet Morris and Montgomery standing. Jimmy Gleason, Mary Astor and Ann Harding seated. 4. Isabel Jewell seems to disagree with something Jimmy Cagney is telling her. Lee Tracy, her devoted bad boy, is on deck, too. 5. John Boles and Jeanette MacDonald are merrily rehearsing their duet.

All photographs by Scotty

4

5

ACTORS' GUILD BALL

THEY Strut THEIR Stuff!

1. Now, isn't that the cutest foursome you ever saw? The Joel McCrea's (Frances Dee as was) and the Gary Coopers (Sandra Shaw as was) have a table and a high old time together. 2. The devotion of Jack Oakie to his mother, Mrs. Evelyn Offield, is very sweet to see. We understand that Ma is such a riot she steals the show away from all the young folks. 3. Boots Mallory and her husband, Bill Cagney, have some quiet conversation. 4. Loretta Young and Spencer Tracy refused to pose for photographers. But they didn't reckon with Scotty. And there, as you see, they are—with an arc light 'n' everything to make things kinda home-like.

3

4

AN enjoyable time was had by all. At the dinner dance given by the Screen Actors' Guild in the Los Angeles Biltmore, we mean. The stars had themselves a gala evening, seeing and being seen. But the chorus boys and girls! They did better, because they're smarter or something.

Anyway, the young gentlemen of the ensemble charged $150 worth of champagne to the hotel and the little ladies, who kick and look cute, did as much by putting in some "let the other feller pay" slips for facials and cosmetics. Which proves that all the fast-thinkers are not in Wall Street. Nor all the padded expense accounts, either.

The party was verra, verra gay. Charles Butterworth, Bing Crosby and Frank McHugh helped see to that. These merry lads donned girls' clothes and sang in the manner of a harmonizing trio, imitating the Boswell Sisters. Lyrics of said songs were just ducky, being all made up for the occasion, like the boys who rendered 'em, and proved laugh-getters.

2

4

1. John Boles must have just told the Ben Lyons and "Skeets" Gallaghers the one about the traveling salesman, they look so full of the giggles. 2. Mrs. Mike Levee was accompanied by Joe E. Brown and you know that Mary Brian would be there with Dick Powell. 3. Pert Kelton and W. C. Fields, a couple of kidders kidding each other. 4. The lovely Thelma Todd brought her husband, Pat De Cicco. 5. And, you've guessed? Right. Joan and Franchot.

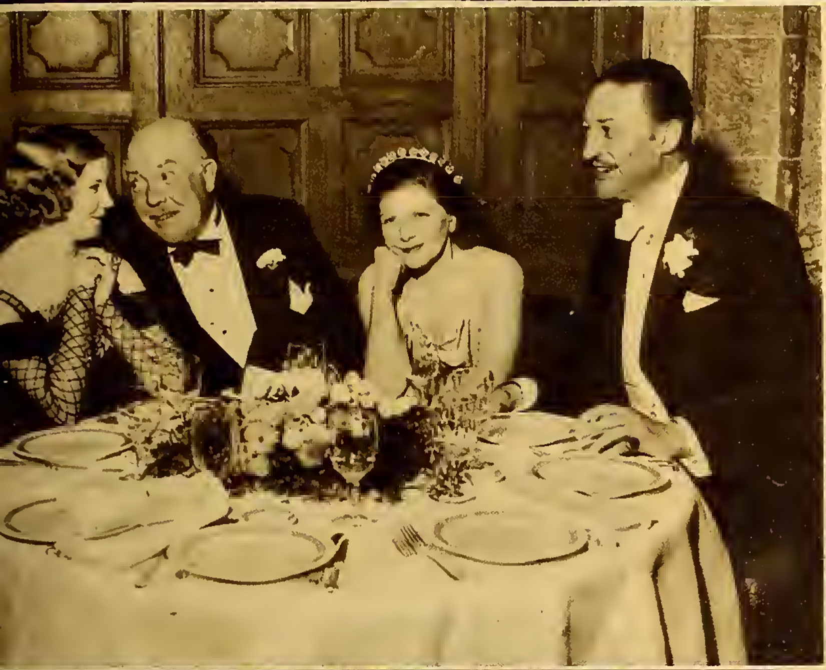
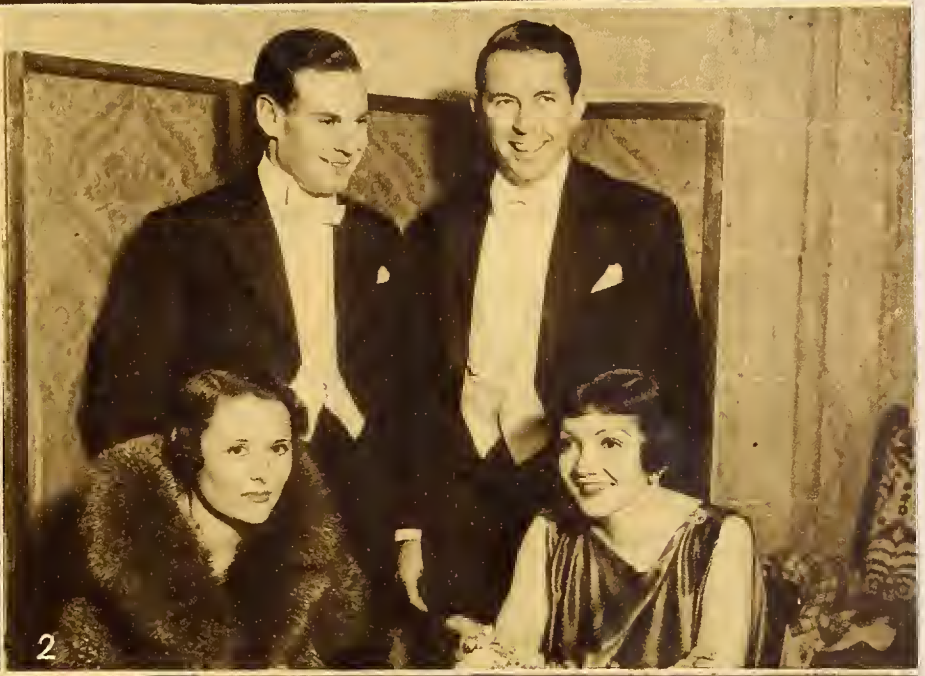
Eddie Cantor should have been Master of Ceremonies, but the gentleman couldn't make it, due to a theatrical engagement, so Dick Powell did a little pinch-hitting, and did it excellently, too. And the Grand March was led by Ann Harding and Adolphe Menjou.

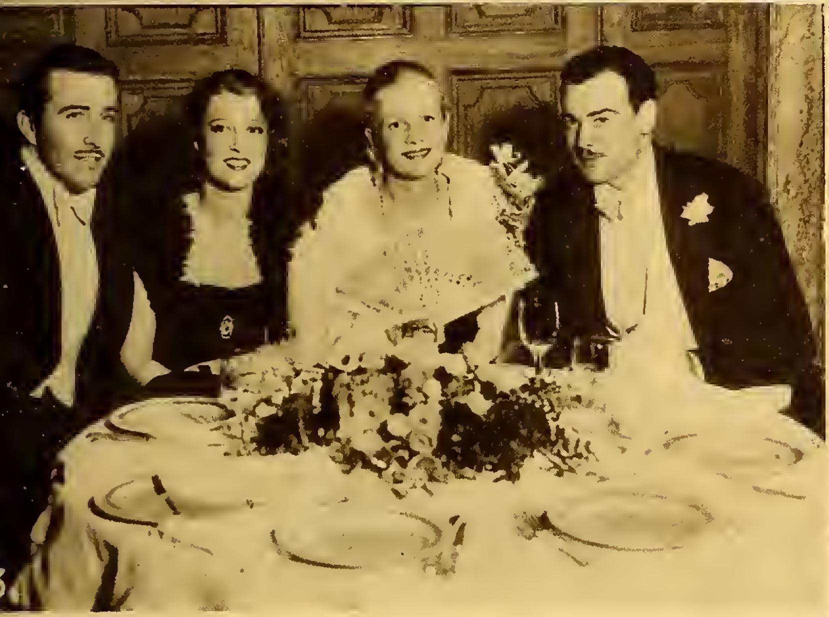
Loretta Young and Spencer Tracy attended the party together, playing hide-and-seek with the cameramen. Mr. Scott finally caught up with them which pleased them not a-tall! The lens lads struck another snag when they asked Mr. Menjou to pose. The best dressed man on the screen—or is it the world?—drew himself up and stated that "he didn't need the publicity and didn't want it" and likened news photographers to autograph-seekers. (We're promoted, fans!) Well, 'Dolphie continues to have an even disposition—always bad.

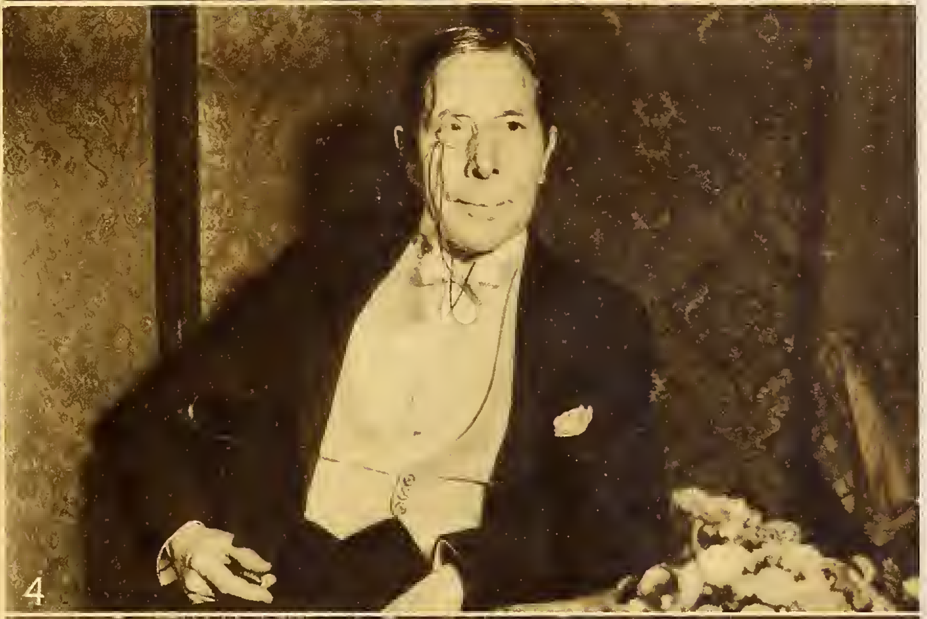
Joan and Franchot were together, but then you'd have guessed that, and the Gary Coopers and the Joel McCreas comprised an attractive foursome. Others who tripped the light fantastic 'til break of day were Una Merkel,

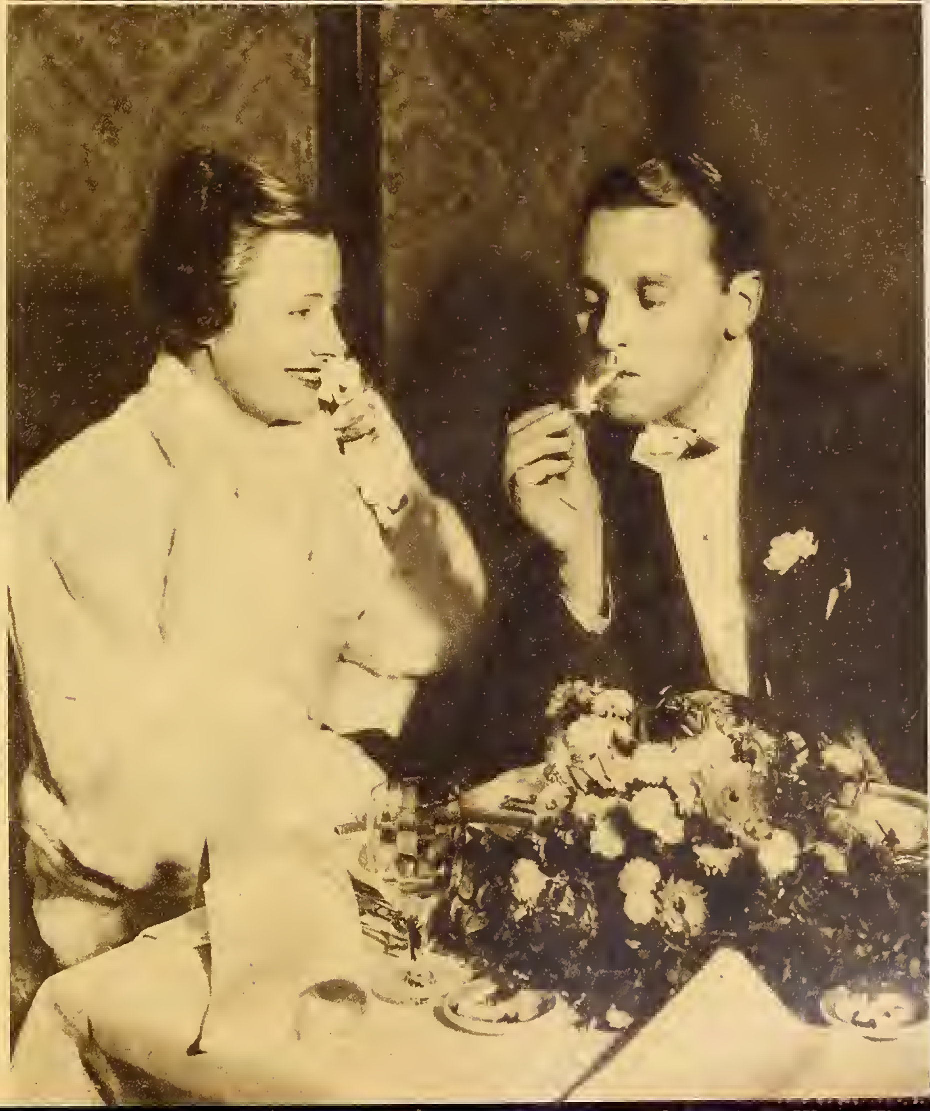
ACTORS' GUILD BALL











1. Warren William and his wife invited Una Merkel and Guy Kibbee over to exchange a little gossip. 2. You need no introduction to Norman Foster and Claudette Colbert. The attractive pair with 'em are the Monta Bells. 3. And here we see John Boles with Jeanette MacDonald, Ann Harding and Nils Asther. Ann attended the shindig with Nils. 4. And, sitting in solitary splendor, George Arliss. 5. Irene Dunne and Ralph Bellamy look nonchalant.

Constance Cummings, Thelma Todd, Boots Mallory, Bill Cagney, Irene Dunne, Ralph Bellamy, the John Boles and Jeanette MacDonald.

The party was very well conducted. It seems that someone on the committee decided that inasmuch as the Guild had gone to considerable trouble to arrange an entertaining program, the guests were going to be able to see it—whether or not! And so, bottles and "set-ups" (gingerale and ice, you innocents) were conspicuous by their absence, so that even the boys busily engaged in doing a disappearing act, returned to their tables little the worse for the trip.

Thus, the morning-after headaches in the film colony were not in evidence because what could have caused them, just wasn't around. Those Guilders are scheming smarties, all right!

And so, the Screen Actors' Guild dinner dance may be put down as one of the major successes of the social season without fear of contradiction from anybody. But then, we don't ever fear anything. No, not much!

THE HUSBAND WHO NEVER COMES HOME

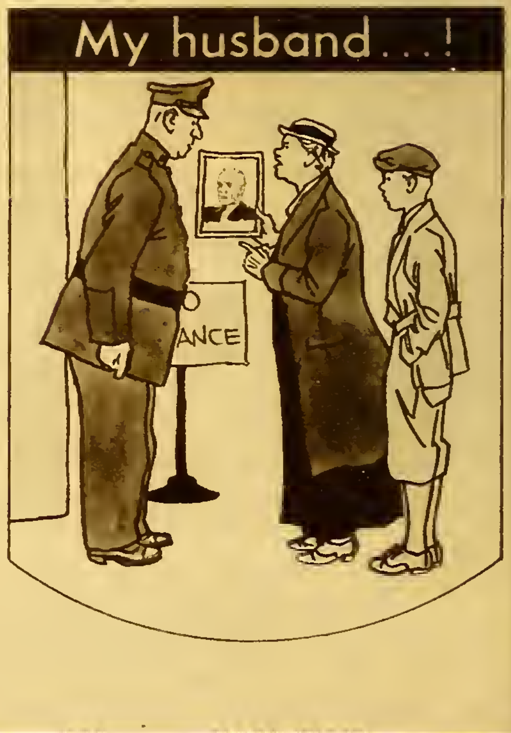
He meant everything to them, but to Lewis Stone these women proved merely a nuisance

By

GLADYS HALL

Acme

Here are Lewis Stone and the Missus—his one and only heart interest—as they appeared at a Hollywood premiere not long ago. A rare picture of a devoted Hollywood couple about whom you never hear the slightest scandal.



A FEW months ago Lewis Stone received a call from a Mr. Matthews of the District Attorney's office.

Mr. Matthews called upon Mr. Stone at the M-G-M studio. He faced the courtly actor across a desk and dropped before him a photograph of a Swedish-appearing youth sitting beside a buxom, Swedish-appearing young woman. He said, "Is this an old photograph of you, Mr. Stone?"

Massachusetts-born, Mr. Stone regarded the square-headed young man in the picture with some amusement. There was no possible resemblance. He said, "What do you think, Mr. Matthews—and why?"

"Well, I don't know," drawled the skeptical enforcer of the law. "It might be, you know. Anything is possible. Anyway, the why of it is that there is a Mrs. Gray here in Los Angeles who has issued a complaint against you in the District Attorney's office. She says you are her divorced husband, that you and she were married for nine years and that—ah—you had better come home."

"Indeed!" said Mr. Stone.

Shortly thereafter Mr. Stone and Mr. Matthews betook themselves to the offices of Beuron Fitts, D.A. There, at Mr. Stone's request, was summoned his "wife," Mrs. Gray. When the lady entered the office Mr. Stone beheld, in his own words, "a woman of some forty-five years, neither good-looking nor the reverse. She might have been any one of a thousand American housewives such as you see doing the family marketing. She looked me straight in the eye, put her hand to her heart for a moment and confessed that it gave her 'quite a turn' to see me again after all these years. I was given quite a turn, too, though not from the pangs of reunion. It is rather a weird sensation to have a lady you have never set eyes on before claim that you and she were husband and wife for nine years.

WELL, Mrs. Gray informed us that she and I had been married in Zanesville, Ohio, in January of 1913. She further refreshed my memory by reminding me that I had joined the Army in Akron, Ohio, and had gone overseas with the Tank Corps. She regarded me closely and pointed to the scar on my face with satisfaction. She said, 'I recall so well the day you got that. Remember that pair of wild colts we had on the farm? Well, remember that morning you were trying to harness them for the first time and when you leaned over to adjust the traces one of 'em upped and kicked you in the face? I always did tell you you'd bear that colt hoof to your grave and, from the way it looks now, you will!'

"Mrs. Gray then went on to relate that we had been divorced in 1920 in Salt Lake City. She said that she had recognized me on the screen some ten years ago but, at that time, she was doing real well and hadn't needed me. Now, what with the depression and bad luck and our daughter here grown up, she did need me and I had better come home.

"I then spoke my little piece. I asked her how old this husband of hers would be today. She said he'd be somewhere around forty-five. I thanked her for that. But I added that I could produce my birth certificate which would, unfortunately, inform her that I was some years older than the age she was kind enough to call me. I also informed her that it would be easy to prove that in 1913, the year of our 'marriage,' I was playing at the Maxine Elliot Theatre in New York in 'Bird of Paradise.' Further, that I had joined the Army at Governors Island, N. Y., also a matter of record and that I had never gone overseas. During the time we were obtaining our regrettable divorce in Salt Lake City I was, actually, playing in the Majestic Theatre here in Los Angeles.

AT this point our 'daughter,' a very nice-looking girl of eighteen spoke up and said, 'Come, come, Mother, you must see by this time that you are mistaken!'

"Mr. Fitts said the same thing rather more emphatically. But Mrs. Gray looked me straight in the eyes again, with assurance, with complete recognition, with, I suppose, some contempt. At any rate, she tossed her head as if to dispose of the whole race of errant husbands and flounced out of the room, never to be heard from again. Thank goodness.

"I said then, what I say now, that it is what I get for looking like everybody's missing husband. I am positive that I must have a composite set of features, the features of all the missing husbands of all deserted wives everywhere.

"I think it is probable that this was a case of genuinely mistaken identity. I don't doubt but what Mrs. Gray really did believe and probably still does believe that I am her lost Mr. Gray.

"At any rate, it is a perfect case history of the kind of thing that happens to me at least once every month.

"Some five or six years ago I began to get letters from a Russian Countess, the Countess Polaski, or something of the sort. The letters came, first, from Russia. They came, then, from Belgium, from Germany from France and from England. They followed up from New York, Chicago and, finally, from San Francisco. They were intimate chatty letters such as one receives from a very intimate friend or from a woman one is to marry. Such appeared to be the confident object of these.

"The letter from San Francisco contained a crude sketch of myself. It made me look even worse than I do. Some days after the receipt of that sketch I was working on the First National lot. As I was paying my luncheon check in the Commissary, a voice said, 'How did you like that sketch of yourself I sent you from San Francisco?' I looked up. It was the cashier speaking. She was the Countess Polaski!

"That night on the way home from the studio something leapt out of the trees at the side of the road almost in front of my car. I skidded, swerved, drew up at the other side and there was the Countess Polaski. I handled that situation as sternly as possible. (Continued on page 92)

The career of an

By BEATRICE MACDONALD

KATHARINE HEPBURN, ever since she was a little girl in Hartford, Connecticut, has been used to plenty of publicity. Not because she consciously sought it, exactly. She is simply the sort of person who attracts publicity, that's all. Why, when she was a mere tot, she was known the town of Hartford over for her wild, tomboyish tricks. She would break up nice little girls' tea parties with what she was pleased to call her "animal imitations."

When she was in her 'teens, she was noted as the "craziest" member of the Hartford Country Club. That, mind you, in a post-war decade when wildness was the order of the day with the younger set.

She never was pretty. And being an ugly duckling hurt a little bit, even if one never would show the hurt. For instance—in all the school plays, although Katie was a much better actress than the other girls, she never got any of the nice parts. How she yearned and longed for a chance to be the heroine, just once. How she would stand in the wings—watching some local belle winning all the local honors—and wish that she were in the local belle's shoes! Making up her mind, all the time, no doubt, that some day—some day!—she would make them all sit up and take notice of Katharine Hepburn.

During her college days at Bryn Mawr, Katharine's chief interest in the school was centered on the dramatic club. She studied each role assigned her in a performance as earnestly and laboriously as though she were going to appear before a Broadway audience instead of a group of familiar schoolmates. In many of the vehicles she was assigned to the leading male parts (even in her school plays she naturally drifted into the eccentric) and once when appearing with Ann Harding as the heroine, Katharine's wild hair became caught in Ann's costume and the two stood before their fellow players, firmly entangled, declaiming their lines with true histrionic determination, in spite of the vain efforts of another player to separate them and the screams of laughter coming from their audience.

When Katie left Bryn Mawr, she went back home to Hartford and announced that she was going on the stage. There was no opposition. The same principles by which the parents had reared their family remained in evidence as they grew up. A child who was permitted to go to bed when she pleased, sleep as late as she desired, eat when she got hungry, read or play as long as she wanted to, could certainly make up her own mind about her future. The fact that there was no touch of the theatrical in the family background made no difference. Individualism was the family slogan and every enthusiastic announcement of a future profession made by an offspring was treated with respect and the proper amount of reverence ugly duckling!

. . . How a stage-struck miss named Katharine Hepburn was buffeted about in her search for a break. How she got the break—and became the beautiful swan she is today on the part of the parents. As a matter of fact, inasmuch as Katie had spent so many days of her childhood in giving shows, in forming a company known as "The Crown Club," the statement that she was going to be an actress failed to surprise anyone. If she wanted to become a second Duse, why in all probability she would! That's all there was to it.

In the meantime, she met and fell in love with a young man from Philadelphia by the name of Ludlow Ogden Smith. Hartford, as everyone knows, is the centre point of a certain well known profession. All roads leading to it are filled with ambitious young neophytes who are anxious to study the intricacies of insurance. The biggest insurance companies in the country have their headquarters in Hartford and young Mr. Smith had found his way to that spot for the same purpose that led thousands of other newly fledged college graduates to the place. Everything happens to Miss Hepburn in whirlwind fashion. After a swift courtship, the two were married and came back to New York to live.

THERE was evidently a distinct understanding that domestic bliss was not to interfere with ambition on either side. The newlyweds took up their abode in a small, remodeled house on East 39th Street and in order to avoid publicity (?) Mr. Smith kept his official residence across the street in an unobtrusive and inexpensive little hotel. Their apartment was characteristic of the occupants. In the first place, the house itself had originally been a stable. Then some artistic owner changed the interior, leaving the original stable doors still standing, and turned it into a dwelling place for the cultured but impecunious home-seeker. Mr. and Mrs. Smith lived there for some time, but the great urge for fame gives no peace to those who are cursed with ambition and Katharine departed for Baltimore to join the Knopf Stock Company.

After a short but extremely interesting trial, she was dismissed with the assurance that she had better go back to her husband and be content with married life. As an actress, she would make a swell housekeeper. She came back to New York undaunted and, with the utmost self-assurance in her own ability and with the encouragement of her husband, she proceeded to take a course in stage technique and dancing. Her long limbs have always been a problem to her. Poise and grace were essential and despite the earnest application she had made to overcome this obstacle, she still moves awkwardly across a stage. But the awkwardness is that of a young boy and far from unattractive.

As she studied, she continued to look for work and one day she landed a job with John Golden who was trying out a play called "Night Hostess" in Minneapolis. Jobs have a peculiar habit of happening along in bunches and almost immediately after this, Katharine was offered a chance to play a leading part in "The Big Pond." Of course, she grabbed at the opportunity, only to find herself dismissed quite abruptly after a few days of rehearsal.

Any other girl would have called it a day and forgotten about trying to get somewhere on the stage after such discouragement—but not Miss Hepburn. Have you noticed what a strong jaw-line she has? She made the customary weary theatrical office rounds and finally succeeded in landing a small bit in a play named "These Days." This opus suffered from a strong dose of over-optimism in time allotment, for it folded up almost overnight.

She rehearsed for a while with Leslie Howard in "The Animal Kingdom." I am quite sure that Mr. Howard was somewhat overcome when first introduced to his future leading lady. Katharine arrived for rehearsal hatless, her red hair blowing in somewhat untidy fashion about her face, the now famous freckles shining brightly on her white skin and her mouth bared in a clipped grin which showed two strong rows of white teeth. Her originality in dress has been a matter of wonder to all who know her. As she stood before Mr. Howard in a long black monk-like coat buttoned tightly at her throat, he probably felt he was indulging in the aftermath of a neat little hang-over. They rehearsed for five days. The script demanded that he clasp her thin, rigid body to him in fervent passion. Katie was as stiff and unresponsive as a poker. He must have felt as though he were making love to an ironing board. A novel experience to this finished actor of many years experience to work with this eager—but very green and unfinished actress. It was only a matter of a short time before she found, upon her arrival at the theatre one day, a brisk note of dismissal.

In her next engagement, Katharine had her longest job. She was understudy to Hope Williams in "Holiday," which turned into a hit. I doubt (Continued on page 95)

Queen

Garbo, with her magic wand in the dress direction, does the unexpected as usual. Who would ever have supposed that Queen Christina of Sweden would become our latest fashion leader? She never could have made the grade, dead or alive, if Garbo had not recreated her character and her fashions in so fascinating a form. Any girl who has seen this picture knows what the wide white collars and cuffs do for the glorification of a beauty who, incidentally, knows how to wear them with the utmost grace. Sensing their popularity, Macy's Cinema Shop has had "Queen Christina" gowns made for all of you—gowns inspired by those actually worn in this most successful movie. The dress pictured on the opposite page (above, right) is possibly the most successful because it can be worn for almost any occasion. But how about the coat (left), with stole collar of fur? Wouldn't that fill a conspicuous place in any girl's wardrobe? The black suit with white piqué collar and cuffs (right) and the hostess gown (top of page) in the same manner start romantic emotions even at a mere glimpse.

Inspired by Garbo herself in the role of "Queen Christina," these lovely creations bring an exciting note of high romance to the current season's fashions

Christina 1934

ON Dress PARADE

(Above and right) Claire Augerot, Ricky Newell, Bette Davis and Verree Teasdale, showing styles which run the gamut of loveliness in "Fashions of 1934," where one gorgeous gown after another makes its appearance.

By MARGERY WELLS

GLAMOR hangs heavily over the dress salons of Paris. Glamor, even glorified, oozes from the flashing film, "Fashions of 1934," for it gives a glimpse of honest-to-goodness French couturier exhibition and selling.

This film gives you a behind-the-scenes picture of the place where styles have for centuries been created. Take it from one who knows, you get the real atmosphere; enough, at any rate, to make any fashion girl's spine go into waves and wiggles.

Dresses in droves pass before your eyes—silver and gold, lace and lamé, bare backs and sheltered ones, fancies and feathers.

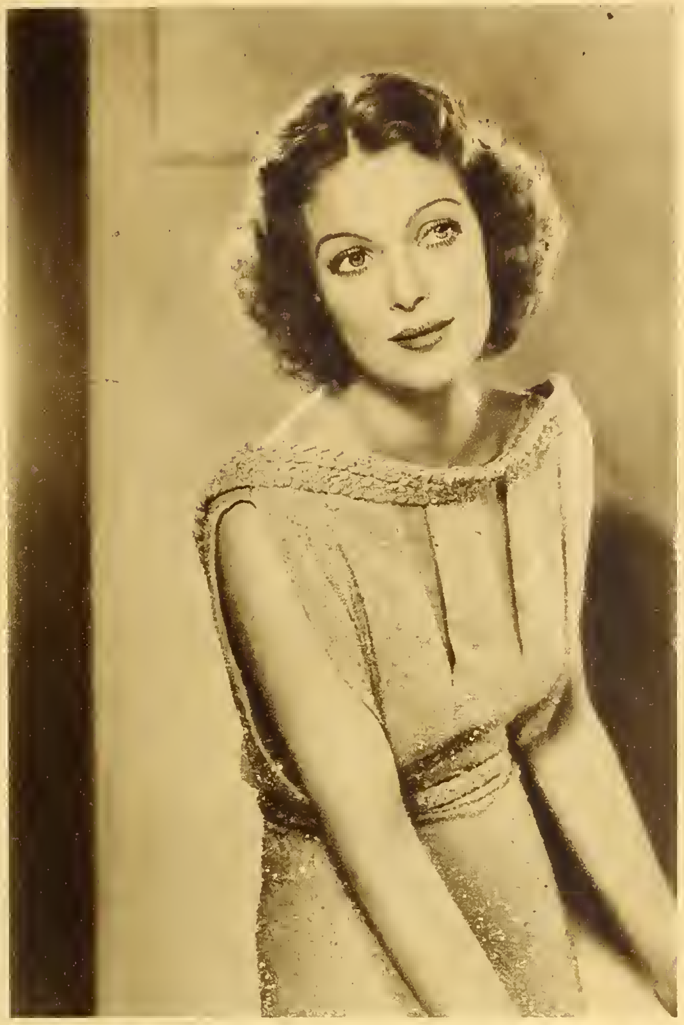
Feathers? Oh, my word! Carloads. Entire outputs of ostrich farms have been dumped upon a mirrored stage. Skirts, fans, hats, brassières, boots and everything made from curling, fluttering, waving feathers. A feather season is being launched and when you see how flattering their surrounding softness can be to one Verree Teasdale, it makes you want to do a Queen Mary and buy a lot of boas.

The slinky gowns of the season are all there, form-fitting and revealing, made from those spun metal threads which alone can do the trick of hugging the figure with gracefulness and allure. Day dresses, riding habits and sport togs appear, too. And, cleverly enough, it is shown how a designer in the "know" consults the pages of fashion history for inspirations in creating last minute styles.

Bette Davis, the youthful player of the piece, stands out naively against all this grandeur, largely because of her girlish and strictly American clothes. Her little sports models "sell" you on clinging to your own ideals and her evening dress of black velvet with a yoke of ermine is too fascinating for words. (Continued on page 97)

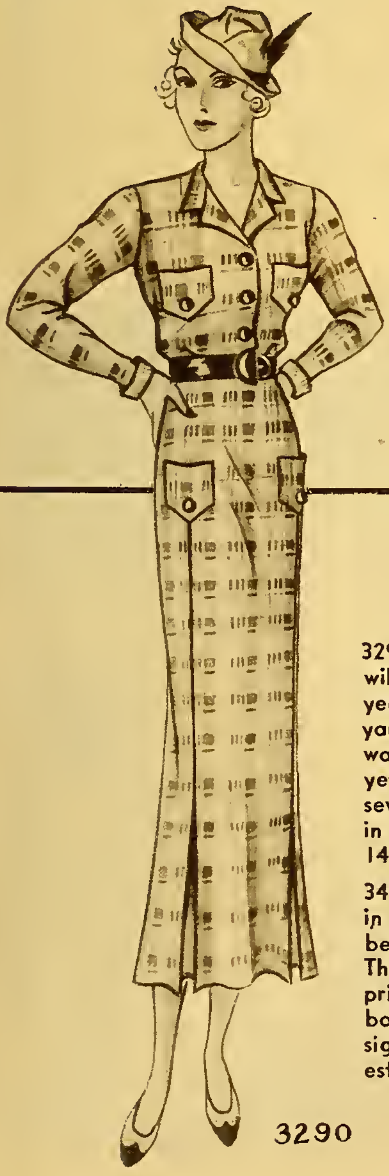
MODERN SCREEN Patterns

(Right) Loretta Young's favorite dinner frock is ready for you in pattern form.

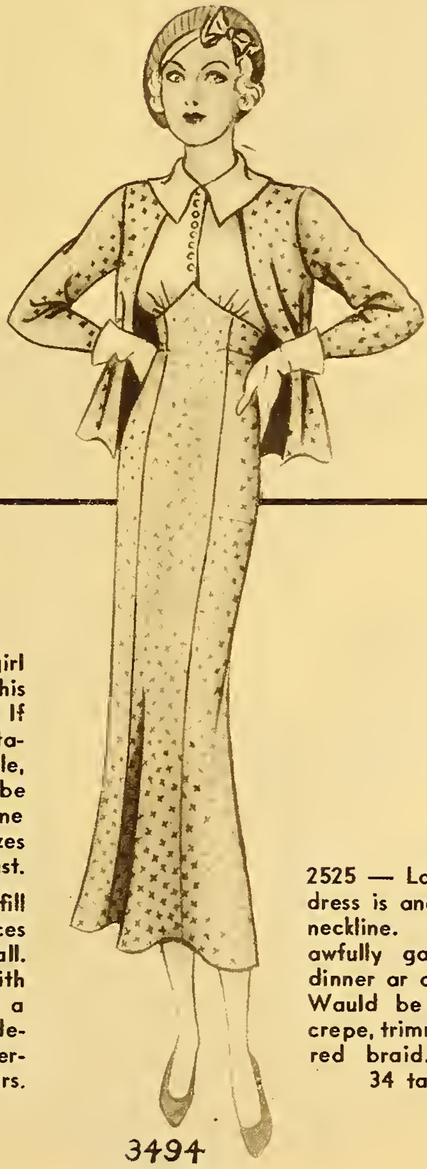


TO ORDER PATTERNS

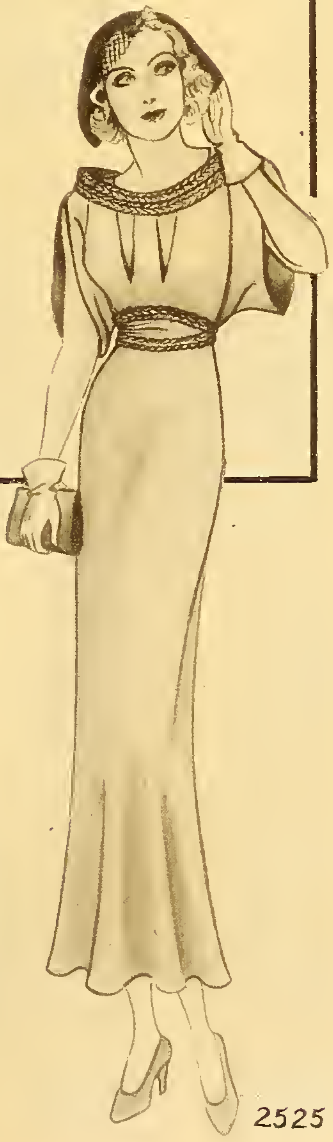
The patterns are fifteen cents each. The book is fifteen cents when ordered separately—it is ten cents when ordered with a pattern. You may send stamps or coin—coin preferred. If you live outside of the United States, the patterns cost twenty cents each, the book twenty cents separately and fifteen cents when ordered with a pattern. No foreign or Canadian stamps will be accepted. Orders should be addressed to MODERN SCREEN Pattern Service, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y. In ordering, be sure to state size wanted.



3290



3494

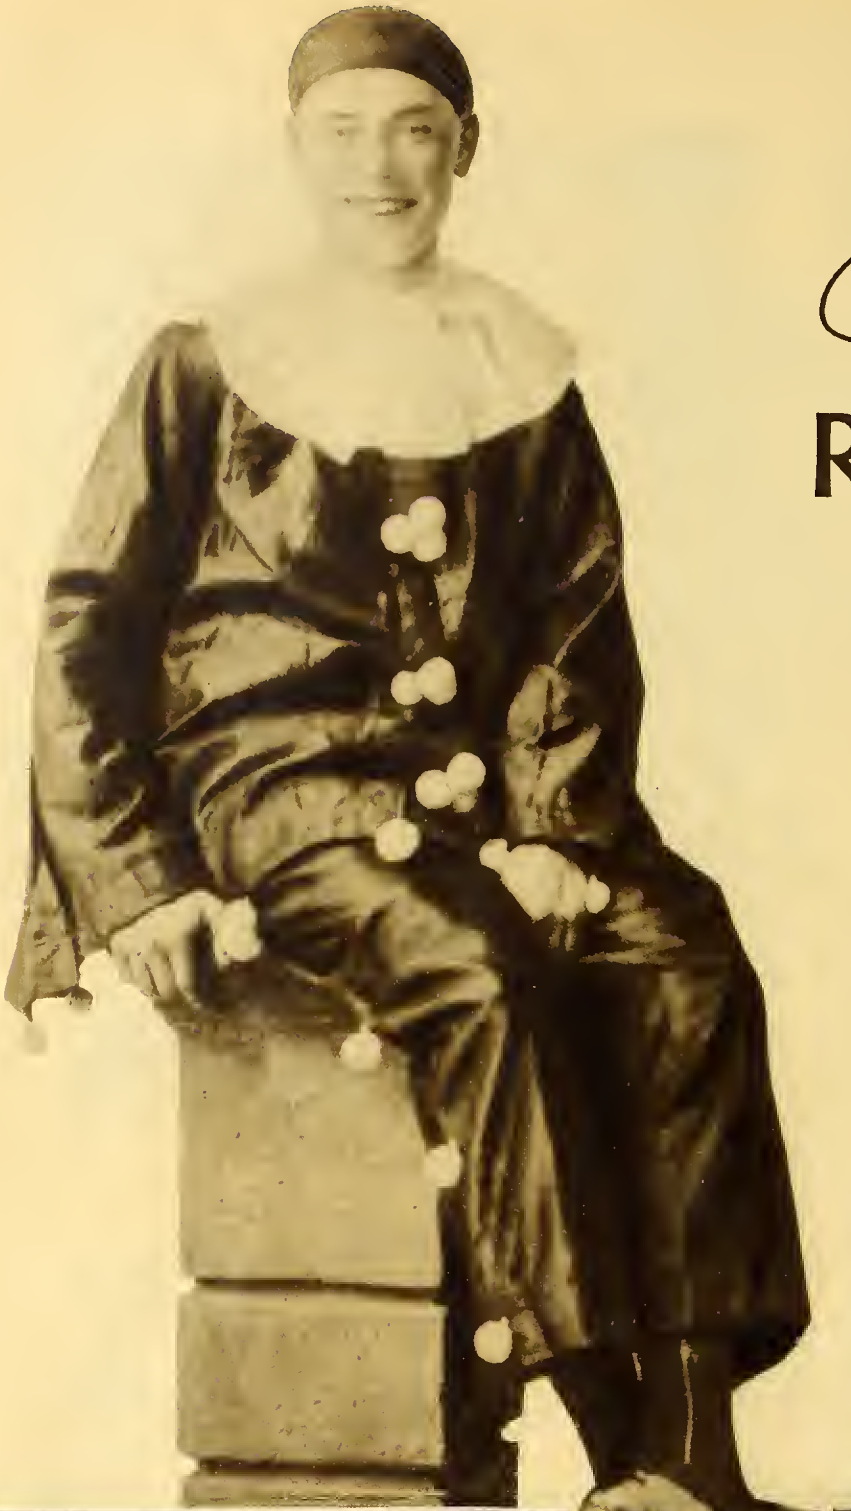


2525

3290—The shirtwaist girl will have her innings this year, and no mistake. If you have a tendency toward speed, this simple, yet perfect design can be sewn up on the machine in about two hours. Sizes 14 to 20, 36 to 42 bust.

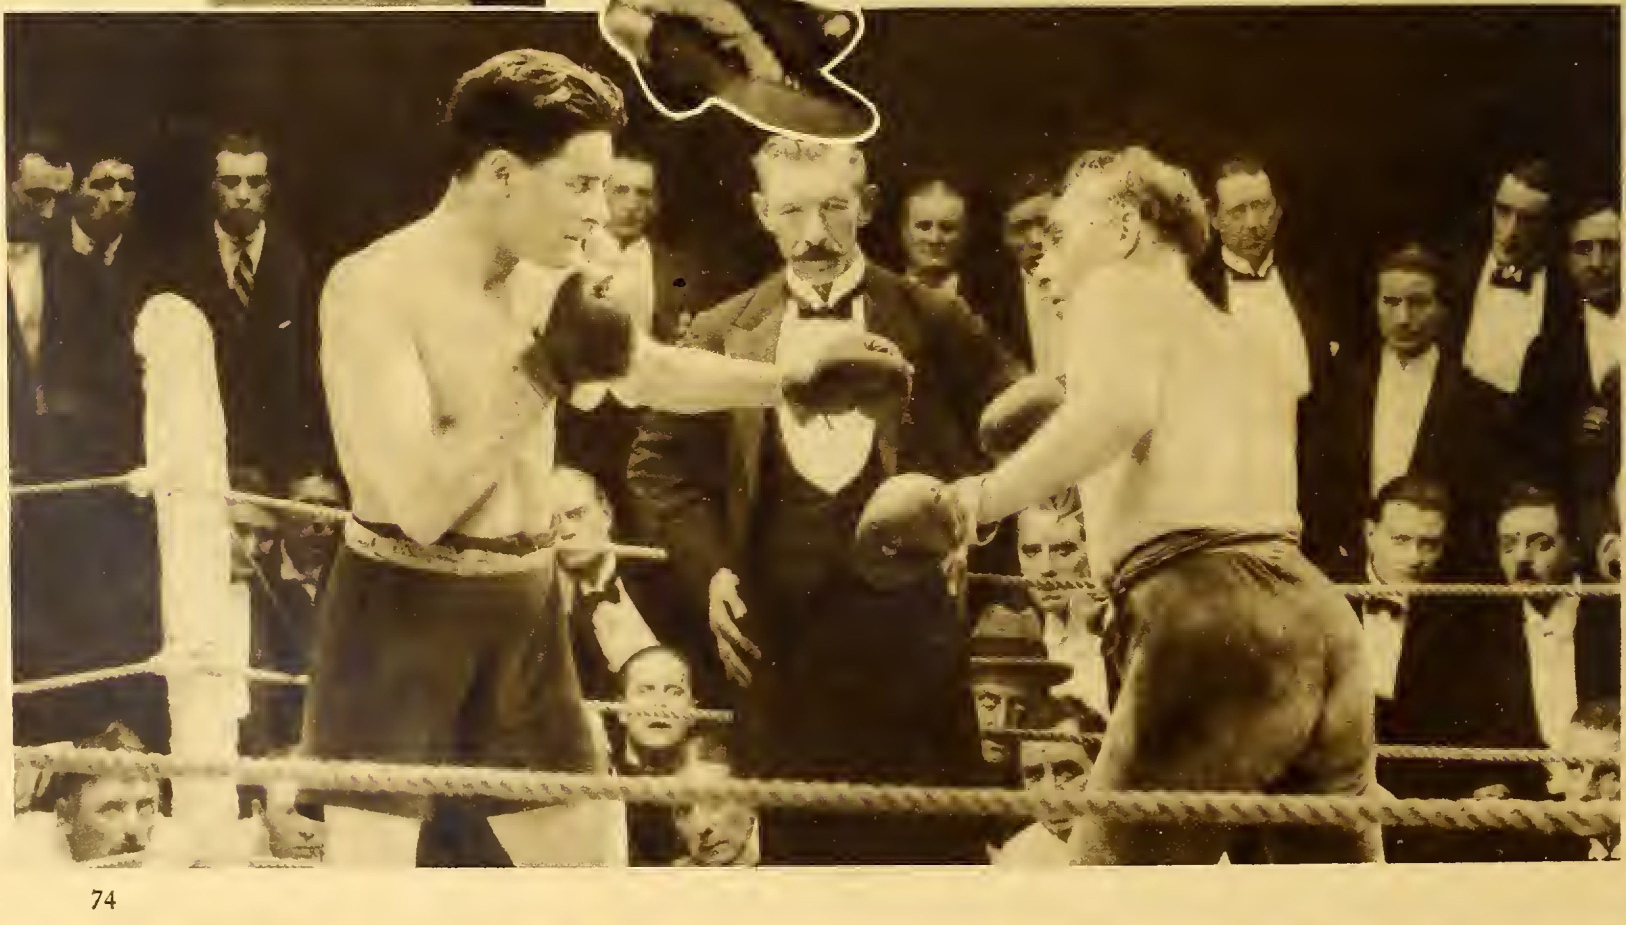
3494—Silk jacket suits fill in many wardrobe services between spring and fall. This one is made with printed crepe and has a bodice to make the design somewhat more interesting. Sizes 11-17 years.

2525 — Loretta Young's dress is one with the new neckline. It's really an awfully good model for dinner or afternoon wear. Would be nice in black crepe, trimmed with bright red braid. Sizes 14-20, 34 to 40 bust.



Ah there, RONNIE!

It's Ronald Colman. That's what we said—Ronald Colman. The Pierrot number at the left and gent in the ill-fitting trunks in the prize-ring are none other than the now suave, worldly and beautifully groomed Ronnie. You see, in 1916, Ronnie wasn't as famous as he is today. Nor as wealthy. He had to do something to earn his living. He was only too glad to act the clown in a British revue called "The Scallywags." Or to do a Maxie Baer in "The Son of David" for a British film company. If you'd like to know what Ronnie is doing now, he has well nigh completed "Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back." Loretta Young is his leading lady.



"DIVING TAKES HEALTHY NERVES — AND SO DOES MY OFFICE JOB!"

Frank Crilley, Champion Deep-Sea Diver, says:

"Deep down under 300 feet of water, working feverishly under terrific pressure—no place for a nervous man! A diver's nerves must always be in perfect condition. I smoke Camels and have smoked them for years. They are a milder cigarette and they taste better. They never upset my nervous system."

Miss Elizabeth Harben,
Garden City, L. I., says:

"I know that deep-sea diving calls for healthy nerves. But, believe me, you can also feel plenty of real nerve strain being a secretary to a busy office executive. Telephones, callers, dictation, and a million other demands all take their toll. As to smoking—I smoke a great deal, but I'm careful in the choice of my cigarettes. I prefer Camels. They don't make my nerves jumpy, and I like their flavor better."

Copyright, 1934, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company

How Are Your Nerves?

Do your responsibilities give you that "dragged through a knot hole" feeling? Do you come home tired, irritable, with nerves all askew?

Whatever your job or place in life, healthy nerves are worth any effort. Check up on your habits—your eating, your sleeping, your recreation—and do not overlook the subject of smoking. Turn to Camels, for the sake of your nerves. Any impartial leaf-tobacco expert will tell you that ☛ Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS than any other popular brand. An important fact to nervous people!

Camel pays millions more—for your enjoyment. And how much better Camels taste—mild, rich in flavor, delightful. They never get on your nerves . . . never tire your taste.

CAMEL
TURKISH & DOMESTIC BLEND
CHOICE QUALITY

Camel's Costlier Tobaccos

NEVER GET ON YOUR NERVES . . NEVER TIRE YOUR TASTE

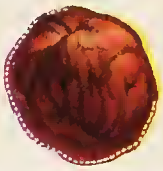
Dryness—a fault of your outer skin

But Lines and Wrinkles come from shrinking of your Under Skin

THE APPLE SHOWS HOW WRINKLES COME

Smooth—Glossy
1. At its peak, the inner and outer skins of the apple are both firm and smooth—they are both perfect!

Soft—Spongy
2. A little past its prime, the inner tissue of the apple has shrunken away from the outer skin.



Wrinkled—Discolored
3. Later, the outer skin has wrinkled to fit the shrunken under skin. This causes wrinkles in human skin, too!

No single cream can care for Both your skins!

TWO SKINS—Your Outer Skin, exposed to sun, wind, dust, needs a substance that restores the moisture that is constantly being whipped out of it.

Your Under Skin is fed by oils that keep it full and firm and prevent lines and wrinkles from forming. When these natural oils fail, this skin needs certain deep penetrating oils to take their place.

And no single cream can be made to contain both kinds of substance.

That is why there are two kinds of Pond's Creams. Why beautiful women constantly use these two entirely different creams.

Pond's Cold Cream melts instantly and sinks deep down into the under skin. It is oily. See how it draws the dirt out!

Pond's Vanishing Cream stays on the surface to soften and lubricate the outer skin only!

Have you been trying to care for your skin with one cream only? Then just try this Two-Skin Care for just a few days and see what wonderful results it brings you.

Miss Anne Gould lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Gould, cares for both her skins, each with a different Pond's Cream.

This is how Miss Anne Gould does it:

1. "Every Night, I cleanse my skin to its depths with Pond's Cold Cream. It's a soft melty kind of cream that coaxes out every speck of make-up and dust from your pores. I wipe it off with Pond's Tissues. Then I go all over face and neck with Pond's Cold Cream a second time. I pat it in to bring up the circulation. It makes any skin feel young deep down! I wipe that off, too. (Sometimes I use Pond's Liquefying Cream. It's a grand cleanser, too, and goes equally deep.)

2. "Next, Pond's Vanishing Cream for overnight. It is greaseless. Makes you look and feel fresh, and never soils your pillow. I apply it liberally over face, neck, arms and hands . . . And I use it all the time to keep my elbows soft and white.

3. "In the Morning, and during the day when needed, I repeat this. Pond's Cold Cream cleansing, then Pond's Vanishing Cream. This last is the grandest foundation cream. It holds powder amazingly."

OUTER SKIN
UNDER SKIN

Two Creams needed for your Two Skins . . .

Your UNDER SKIN where wrinkles start needs an oil cream that goes deep down—supplies failing oils—Pond's Cold Cream or Pond's Liquefying Cream.

Your OUTER SKIN where dryness comes needs an oilless cream that stays on the surface, restores moisture—Pond's Vanishing Cream.

POND'S
Liquefying Cream
POND'S
Cold Cream for Cleansing
POND'S
Vanishing Cream for Finishing

For your Under Skin	For your Outer Skin
Pond's oil-rich Cold Cream or the new Pond's Liquefying Cream.	—Pond's Vanishing Cream. Greaseless. Corrects dryness.

SEND FOR SAMPLES Pond's Extract Company, Dept. D
136 Hudson Street, New York City

I enclose 9¢ (postage and packing) for samples of Pond's Creams and six different shades of Pond's Face Powder.

Name____________________________________

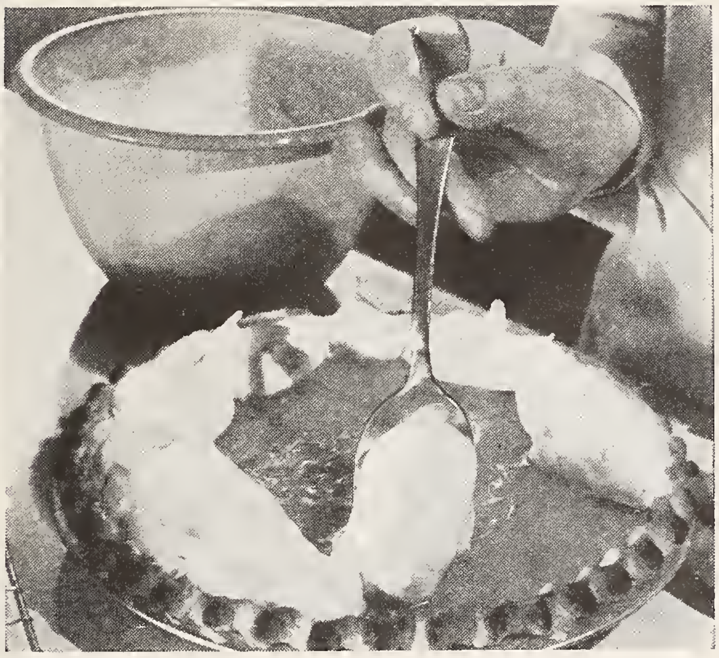
Street___________________________________

City_____________________State____________

Copyright, 1934, Pond's Extract Company

The MODERN hostess

Oh, oh! Wouldn't you just love to know how Judith Allen makes this hunger-provoking Butterscotch Pie with the cream and almond topping (above) or the meringue topping (below)?



PIES are certainly like the little girl who had the little curl right in the middle of her forehead—"when they are good they are very, very good, but when they are bad they are horrid!"

Now, you have probably heard women say how awfully difficult it is to make good pies. We have even heard them boast about their inability to make pastry that is fit for human consumption. For some quaint reason, they think it's something of which to be proud. Personally, we'd hate to admit that a couple of cups of flour and some shortening could throw us and we have been wont to brag that we could make a pie which was a guaranteed short cut to any man's heart. But we are here to admit that little Judith Allen taught us a couple of new tricks in pastry-making which make our erstwhile triumphs mediocre by comparison. That sweet young thing has collected from a genuine southern mammy a recipe for making pastry which is so unbelievably delicate that it falls apart at the touch of a fork and melts away in your mouth. And the swellest part of it all is that this magnificent pastry is a cinch to make. It takes a little time, but there is nothing intricate about it. We'll describe the method to you, just as Judith told it to us:

"First you sift some flour," said Judith. "Then you measure it, add salt and baking powder, and sift together three more times. Then you add vegetable shortening or lard and cut it into the flour, using two broad bladed knives, one in each hand. When the shortening is cut into little pieces about the size of grains of rice, you take a spoonful of ice water and sprinkle it over the flour. Now, with a fork, you stir in the water. Then sprinkle on another spoonful of water and mix that in. Keep this up until the dough holds together. Don't add too much, because if you do the dough will be sticky and hard to handle. Also, don't add too little or the dough will be crumbly. This is really the only tricky part—knowing when you have added enough water.

"When your dough clears the sides of the bowl, it is ready to be turned out onto a lightly floured board and rolled thin. Next you (Continued on page 128)

MODERN SCREEN STAR RECIPES

HOME SERVICE DEPARTMENT
MODERN SCREEN Magazine
149 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y.

Please send me the recipes for April, 1934.

Name...
(Print in pencil)

Address..
(Street and Number)

....
(City) (State)

A NEW CHAMPION in throat comfort

KOOL

MILDLY MENTHOLATED CIGARETTE—CORK-TIPPED

Introduced less than one year ago, a whole army of smoke fans is now cheering for this mildly mentholated cigarette. It's as refreshing as an opened window in a smoke-heavy room. The mild menthol in KOOLS doesn't interfere with the full flavor of the fine tobaccos, but it does end the dry throat of ordinary smoking. Cork-tipped: they don't stick to lips. FREE coupons packed with KOOLS bring you initialed gilt-edged Congress Quality U. S. Playing Cards and *other premiums. (Offer good in U. S. A. only.)

*Send for illustrated premium list.

SAVE THIS VALUABLE B&W COUPON
—REDEEMABLE—
KOOL
MILD MENTHOL
Cigarettes
CORK TIPPED
15¢ for TWENTY

Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., Louisville, Ky.

Good News

(Continued from page 39)

So, at first, the former love-birds said they hoped they never would find out what had happened. Then there was definite talk of a divorce, which has just petered out into what looks like a separation, during which they will live in separate houses and hope for the best. 'Tis rumored that Miss Fox has the avowed intention of continuing her career and is taking steps to put her intention into effect.

IRVING PICHEL just received a swell gift from a lady in France, a beautiful pair of gold cuff-links. With the links, however, came a note reading, "You remind me so much of my husband, of whose death I have just been acquitted by the Paris Courts, that I want you to have his cuff-links."

WHEN Joan Crawford saw a picture of Lanny Ross in the paper, she asked M-G-M to sign him for the singing lead in her next, "Pretty Sadie McKee." We understand that Lanny is doing right well at Paramount in "Melody In Spring," and certainly he's a nice looking chap. But the thing we wanted to mention was the fact that we are beginning to really appreciate the brain of Marion Davies. She saw the handwriting on the wall, knew that several of the gals on the lot were going to need singers and grabbed none other than Bing Crosby before the others could head him off. Now, we're not saying that Lanny Ross won't turn out to be the swellest bet in the world, but, at the moment, Bing Crosby is the biggest male box-office draw in the entire business.

THE BRIDE SPEAKS!

Sandra Shaw—or Mrs. Gary Cooper, if you wish—has been described as being a "very meek and lovely young lady, far different from the usual Hollywood gal." While we agree that she is lovely, we must take issue with that meek business. Upon being told that, "The lady star in Gary's next picture often works far into the night. Are you good at waiting home alone?" Mrs. Cooper replied, with vigor: "So? I'll soon put a stop to that!" And, what's more, with her determined chin and all, we just bet she does!

LOLA LANE and her announced husband-to-be, Al Hall, have reached the "postponement stage" in the marriage date idea.

THERE is a certain blonde and very beautiful moom pix star in Hollywood who has found a way to beat the scandal artists at their own game. This little gal has figured out that the only method of stamping to earth malicious gossip concerning herself is to beat various "hot" members of the press to the punch. Thus, whenever a rumor is floating around, she will approach members of the Fourth Estate with this, "And I hear that the latest dope on me is that I am" (here she will blurt out the "latest" with a loud laugh.) The funny thing is that it works. The reaction of the press is always the same: "Well, after all, if she talks about it, it must be a flock of hooey!" This being the first time the writers of Hollywood have ever run up against such disarming frankness, you really can't blame them.

PETER ARNO has developed into one of the most persistent guys in town, at least as far as Carole Lombard is concerned. But Blonde Carole won't give him a tumble.

A BRAND NEW "wife-in-the-background" star has just arrived in Hollywood from Europe. Carl Brisson! When he jumped from the train (with his eighteen trunks) and was met by a gang from Paramount, his Little Woman got off unnoticed! This fellow Brisson is a matinee idol in Europe and has been married to this one gal for sixteen years. Her background must be good!

REMEMBER the Charles Bickford picture, "Dynamite"? That was Russ Columbo who played the boy in the prison cell singing, "How Am I to Know?"

MAE CLARKE and Sidney Blackmer have decided to "annul their engagement," Mae claiming, "I don't want to allow marriage to stop my career and marriage is a thing that takes just that much concentration."

Sidney counters, "I still love her. I've asked her to marry me. She wants a career first. I hope that is the only reason."

Of course, we had our own little hunch about the whole deal. The other evening at an opening, one of the demon magazine photographers got a bit mixed and asked, "Mr. Clarke, would you step in closer?"

(Continued on page 114)

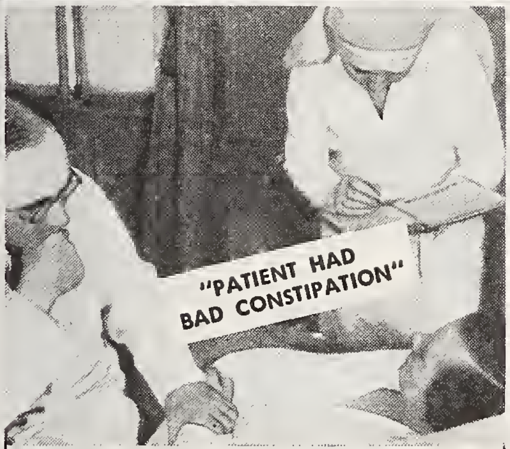
She was Nervous, Run-down—I advised yeast—

The noted PROF. DR. JULES MONGES, of Marseilles, says:—

"Her Elimination became Regular . . . Energy returned . . . Headaches were a thing of the past," he reports

Head of Dept. of Internal and General Pathology, Faculty of Medicine, Marseilles, France. Contributor to "The Hospital," French medical periodical. Consultant, important Marseilles hospitals.



"THIS CASE," Dr. Monges reports, "was a young girl—nervous, run-down—subject to frequent headaches—always tired—losing weight constantly . . .

"LAXATIVES MADE MATTERS WORSE"

"THE FLUOROSCOPE showed her colon was clogged. She had aggravated her condition with large doses of cathartics and laxatives. I advised eating yeast . . .

"YEAST KEEPS INTESTINES CLEAN"

"HER IMPROVEMENT was extraordinary. Eliminations were regular. Energy returned." (X-ray shows healthy condition of intestines—result of yeast).

Will Fleischmann's Yeast help you get rid of indigestion—boils—pimples—loss of pep? YES—very probably!

FLEISCHMANN'S Yeast is a food with astonishing "corrective" properties:

CONSTIPATION. It softens the waste in the body, strengthening the muscles that clear it away. Elimination becomes regular.

INDIGESTION. All the way from stomach through the colon it stimulates the flow of digestive juices. Appetite sharpens. Food digests better.

TONIC ACTION. Your whole system is "energized." (Fleischmann's Yeast is the richest of all foods in 3 indispensable vitamins —B, D and G—often deficient in our diet.)

You do feel better—the minute your system starts carrying off its impurities!

And as yeast "tones" and nourishes, your strength returns amazingly. Colds, headaches often stop entirely. Your skin takes on new life . . . quickly rids itself of pimples, boils, blemishes. You look so well!

Will you give up tonics, pills—and eat Fleischmann's Yeast regularly—for just 30 days, as a test?

Simply eat 3 cakes daily—plain or dissolved in a third of a glass of water—before meals, or between meals and at bedtime. You can get it at grocers, restaurants, soda fountains.

Won't you start now?

Copyright. 1934, Standard Brands Incorporated

"I HAD HEADACHES—and pimples broke out on my face," writes Dahlia Upchurch, of Richmond, Va. (at right). "I decided to eat Fleischmann's Yeast. Soon—no more headaches. My skin cleared up."

EAT FLEISCHMANN'S YEAST
IT IS HEALTHFUL
NRA

FILL YOUR HOME with Springtime
FRESHNESS

Liquid Incense

Perfumes the Air
Freshens the Atmosphere
Banishes Unpleasant Odors

A new thrill awaits you and your friends! Simply apply a few drops of L'Orday Air Perfume on a light bulb or any hot surface; or better still, on a L'Orday Evaporator made especially for this purpose. Suddenly a delicate fragrance fills the room like a breath of Spring air, laden with the scent of budding flowers. So refreshing and stimulating that your entire home assumes a new cheerful personality . . . adding beauty and charm to yourself and surroundings. Try it today. Your choice of three delightful fragrances: Romance, Gayety, Ecstasy.

L'ORDAY
AIR PERFUME
ROMANCE

On sale at most
5 and 10c stores

10 and
20 cents

Evaporator, 5 cents

If unobtainable, mail coin or stamps to Avon Laboratories, 5205 Shields Ave., Chicago.

L'ORDAY
AIR PERFUME
LIQUID INCENSE

Who Is Freddie's Boss?

(Continued from page 49)

there. If this quality in Fred March seems well buried and not discernable after even repeated scratchings, you can credit Florence Eldridge again.

When he was first getting up in pictures, he used to come home from the studio still in the character he had been portraying. He'd act all around the house. When he was making "The Royal Family," he used to come home in that pseudo-Barrymore role, one eyebrow raised in that quizzical Barrymore frown, and just be Tony Cavendish all over the place.

ONE night after watching him for a while, Florence said, "Listen, if you don't stop that and be yourself, I'll think I'm living in adultery with another man. Cut it out!"

Fred cut it out. Ever since, he's left all his acting in the studio.

Penelope March, the little eighteen months old cherub the Marches adopted a year and a half ago, was Florence's idea. To see Fred around that baby now is to know how it has enriched and broadened his life, how it has added to his happiness and humanity. But when the subject first came up, Fred was dead against it. If you couldn't have your own baby, why just forget it. Adoption wasn't the answer to that problem.

But Florence, guiding the March craft with a steady hand, finally won Fred over. It's another bright mark for the Little Woman, for now Fred wonders why he ever said no.

Now he's planning for another, a boy. They're going to get it sometime during the coming year and in that new French provincial house they're building in Beverly Hills, enough extra rooms are being provided, Fred says proudly, for three children.

That new house is Florence's important job right now. While Fred is just beginning his new two-year contract with Twentieth Century Pictures, beginning what he expects will be the most important phase of his career, Florence is seeing to it that Fred will have a place in which to enjoy the fruits of his new labors.

For in that new contract is written that in the first year Fred is to get twelve consecutive weeks' vacation. Three months off! And the following year he'll get eight weeks in a row, and then later four weeks. He wants that time off because he and Florence want to do things. She has never been to Europe. Fred was there once, for a short time. Now they want to go together. After all, the contract that he just concluded never gave him a chance for a real vacation. Now they're going to have some fun together. And, then, Penelope is beginning to make her old man yearn for time off to get acquainted.

THE plans for the new house are all Florence's. Of course, an architect drew them up, but on her design. And no interior decorators will be needed when the rooms are ready to be furnished. She's taking care of that.

A few weeks ago when the Marches were in New York on a vacation, I went up to see them. On a chair in a corner of their sitting-room was a pile of samples of brocades, brocatelles, satins and cretonnes. Out of them Florence was trying to pick the stuff from which draperies for the new house would be made, stuff for chair coverings and wall hangings. Primarily, the trip was a vacation and like all exiles to darkest Hollywood who escape to New York occasionally, they wanted to see the shows and hear a few good concerts. But somehow Florence got prowling around in the shops and that new house became more important than anything else. The result is that she forgot everything else in favor of loading up with decorating material.

Florence made one picture in Hollywood last year with Richard Barthelmess. I asked Fred about it. Did she want to get back on the stage? No, she didn't. She did it to get money to buy him his Christmas presents.

"She thought it was a better idea than asking me for it," he said, "and buying me something with my money."

And what did she buy him for Christmas?

"Stuff for the house," he answered.

An old Georgian silver inkwell Fred had always admired and wanted for his desk was among them, a couple of old Currier and Ives prints, to add to several already hanging in the March menage, and a Sheraton table. That doesn't sound as though the Marches have gone Hollywood yet.

One gift that Fred March got from Florence I saw myself. It was a copy of the Autobiography of Benvenuto Cellini. It was just another of those little things she has continually done to keep Fred headed in the right direction, for the first picture he is making for Twentieth Century, the one he has just started work on, is "The Firebrand," a play built around incidents in the life of Cellini. So he has been able to start work with an understanding of the character he's to portray.

When the Marches were married they had a double ring ceremony. On the second finger of the left hand of each is a slim platinum band. Inside of each is inscribed, "No more beyond thine eyes." It is a quotation taken from a line in Edna St. Vincent Millay's libretto, "The King's Henchman":

"And now I shall look no more beyond thine eyes."

The Freddie Marches have found that a pretty good quotation. They haven't had to look beyond each other.

So You Won't Talk, Connie

(Continued from page 33)

illuminated her face could not have been assumed by the most consummate actress. Connie loved Phil Plant and it was very plainly written for everyone to see.

Eventually they were married. Connie abandoned her promising film career because Phil wanted to travel in Europe. And for the next year or two, whatever Phil desired was law to Connie, as she dwelt in a honeymoon happiness. Hollywood almost lost track of her as Constance Bennett, though we did read of the social activities of the fascinating Mrs. Phil Plant. Quite suddenly and rather unexpectedly, they were divorced.

Just what happened between the beginning of the paragraph above and the end of it, no one knows except, perhaps, Connie's intimate friends. They may have guessed. But one thing most definitely did take place. Phil Plant broke Constance Bennett's heart. He broke it thoroughly, shattering it into a hundred little pieces. There are those who will tell you that this was the period during which something "happened" to Connie. Plant made a million-dollar settlement on her, to be paid in installments. This, of course, attracted world-wide attention and Why two people as young and handsome as Leslie Fenton and Ann Dvorak should want to spend their lives examining microscopes is beyond us. In spite of Ann's successful comeback in "Massacre," she and Les are still stubborn about their urge to study bacteriology. They're planning to go to Vienna for their studies.

"Why do my Hands look so OLD?"

If you'll let Ivory do all your soap-and-water tasks, your hands will get smoother, softer—younger. Ivory is so pure—it is gentle even to a baby's skin . . 99 44/100 % Pure.

IVORY SOAP

prevents "Housework Hands"

there were those who flipped, "Oh, well, that was all she wanted anyway, so . . . . "

But there was no answer from Connie. With her jaw set a little more firmly and a new stand-out-of-my-way-from-now-on look in her eyes, she took the first part of her settlement and returned to Hollywood to pick up the pieces of the movie career that she had begun before her marriage to Plant.

THERE was a ruthlessness and a determination in her onslaught this time that could not be denied. She seemed to be concentrating, forcing, pushing her way through the battlefront of Hollywood as though she wanted desperately to accomplish her ends. Perhaps she was at times rude—heedless, but she pushed on relentlessly. She once said, "I shall not rest until I have earned my own million to match Phil Plant's."

"And then what, Connie?" a friend asked.

"I think I might give it back to him," she snapped.

Pictures and more pictures. Work and more work. If she drove others, she also drove herself. Women (and often men) employ the tactics Hollywood has charged against Connie Bennett when they are goaded to avenge an inner hurt. To someday make somebody see what they can do, how firmly they can stand even without that which has been taken away from them rightfully or wrongfully.

Then, in time, the intensity of the pace slackened. The inner hurt healed. She married the Marquis de la Falaise and they moved to a beautiful home with her little blond curly-headed boy, Peter. A great portion of the antagonism of her personality dropped by the roadside of her personal happiness, though none of the drive was lost in her work. They began to say, "Connie can be the staunchest friend in the world, but I'd hate to have her for an enemy."

Then the depression began to take its toll.

You remember the depression. It had an awful way of leveling humanity, of lowering great fortunes with one fell swoop and of turning very rich people into very bewildered people who, for the first time in their lives, were forced to come face to face with bank balances which did not and would not stretch from their old desires to their new wherewithals.

Now, wait, before you rush on to the conclusion that Phil Plant's fortune was swept away in the depression. It wasn't. But Phil Plant's fortune was tied up in stock and bond investments and trust funds that were neither expanded nor increased by the depression. Besides this, it is common knowledge that Phil's money comes to him in chunks every three or four years. In other words, what he got in 1930 might have been supposed to last him until 1934. Thus, recently, Phil Plant boarded a train for California. He went there to see Connie.

WALTER WINCHELL, who knows lots of things, wrote, "Phil Plant took off for Hollywood yesterday to see if Connie Bennett wouldn't settle the remainder of her divorce settlement for a flat sum of $65,000."

Nice going, Mr. Winchell. Mistaken in only one small detail. Phil Plant did not come to California to offer Connie $65,000. Phil Plant came to Hollywood to borrow money from Connie and ask her advice on several important business matters. Plant came across what he thought to be an excellent business opportunity, found his money too well tied up to allow him to take it and had come to Constance for advice on the deal and to negotiate a loan pending his next payment from his inheritance estate.

Just stop to imagine the situation for a moment. Remember that you are dealing with Constance Bennett, the snooty girl who won't get off the train to autograph fan books, the gal who thinks only of driving hard bargains—the ruthless, militant Miss Bennett of Hollywood. Also, remember that this little Miss Impossible was now dealing with an Old Love who had been responsible for all the cold steel her heart was supposedly wrapped in. If Connie Bennett had carried out Hollywood's own characterization of herself, she would have drawn up her shoulders and said politely, "So sorry. So very, very sorry." And that would have been the end of that.

Before Phil Plant left Hollywood, she was prepared to let him have something over $60,000. And to top it off, Connie called in her own managers and lawyers to help her give him that much needed advice.

Phil Plant didn't accept Connie's offer. Upon his return to New York, a nice little rise in the market had made available certain investments which he had hesitated to sell at a loss. We understand that he immediately wrote her the grandest telegram that has ever been received, telling her of his appreciation for her generous advice and the offer to fill in a temporary financial breach. He said he would never forget her kindness.

So, the other afternoon, I told Connie I was going to write the true story behind her former husband's visit to Hollywood.

"What truth?" inquired Connie, looking very bland and surprised.

"That Winchell was slightly mistaken about Phil coming out here to settle money on you and that he really came out to borrow some and, what's more, you arranged to give it to him."

"Nonsense," said Connie shortly. "Mr. Plant merely wanted a little business advice. That's all I have to say about it. But really, Mr. Plant has so much money it isn't even funny."

Then she smiled, looked at me and said, "Besides, don't you know I'm the girl who never gives an inch, just the ritzy Miss Bennett?"

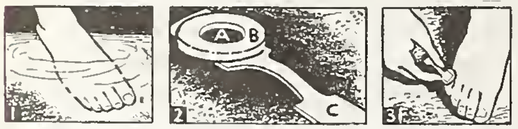
It was a slick little alibi. I might even have been led to believe it if I hadn't known better. But you must know by now, she's the darndest woman!

Imagine doing that last number with a BAD CORN!

● Well-known dance team (Tom and Betty Wonder) are favorites with American vaudeville audiences

● Dancers, like this spirited pair, have no use for foot ailments. They say, "Whenever a corn appears, we use Blue-Jay." ● Blue-Jay—the scientific, safe corn remover! Whatever your job in life, you cannot afford to tolerate painful, unsightly corns—when you can remove them so quickly, so safely with Blue-Jay. The pain stops the minute you apply Blue-Jay. You go about your business with barefoot comfort—and in three days your corn is gone. ● Invented by a famous scientist, Blue-Jay is made by Bauer & Black, surgical dressing house. Don't risk cutting or paring—don't risk unscientific remedies. Use Blue-Jay.

25c at druggists. Special sizes for bunions and calluses.



1 Soak foot ten minutes in hot water, wipe dry.
2 Apply Blue-Jay, centering pad directly over corn.
3 After three days the corn is gone. Remove plaster, soak foot ten minutes in hot water, lift out the corn.

HOW BLUE-JAY WORKS

a is the B&B medication that gently undermines the corn.
b is the felt pad that relieves the pressure, stops pain at once.
c is strip that holds the pad in place, prevents slipping.

BLUE-JAY
BAUER & BLACK'S SCIENTIFIC
CORN REMOVER

FREE BOOKLET—"For Better Feet"—Contains helpful information for foot sufferers. Also valuable foot exercises. Address Bauer & Black, 2500 S. Dearborn Street, Chicago. MS-4

Name ....
Street ....
City ....

© The Kendall Company

Anna Sten, "Passionate Peasant"

(Continued from page 61)

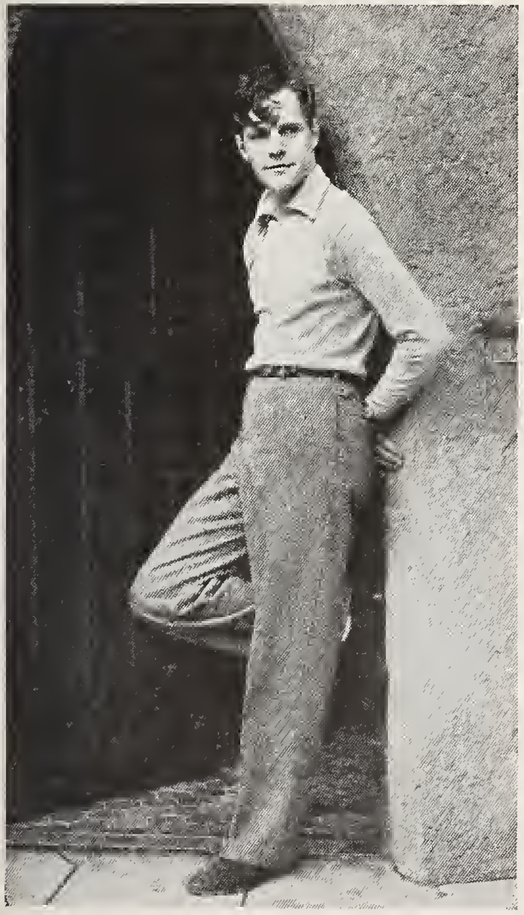
SHE spoke of a scene in "Karamazov." It was made in a train station. In Berlin, she and the director and Fritz Kortner, the great German actor, went to the shed the first afternoon to shoot the sequence, a tender love scene, against the background of the panting locomotive. From high overhead, a single ray of sunshine shot down through the smoky space. When the train came along, they got ready. As it puffed away, they shot the scene. Her director thought it wasn't good. So they came back the next day and shot it again. Only one train a day stops in the shed and even then the sun doesn't shine every day in Berlin. But by coming back every day, they had the shot at the end of three weeks.

It was a strange contrast to "Nana," as an introduction for Miss Sten to the American screen. In one scene in "Nana" Anna was stretched out across a chaise longue with Phillips Holmes kneeling at her feet, his face close to hers. The eyes of two great boxed cameras shot up within twelve inches of her. Each camera was manned by four or five men. Dorothy Arzner, directing the picture, watched intently from underneath. From above, batteries of sunarc lamps shot down. Prop men and make-up men stood about with a couple



Donald Woods, fresh from the New York stage, will be seen in "As the Earth Turns," and "Merry Wives of Reno."

EVENING AFTERNOON
MORNING

PECK & PECK tells you how to save lovely STOCKINGS from a cruel fate: "Use IVORY FLAKES"

When you're after divine sports clothes, stop in at Peck & Peck's. And don't skip that counter where Peck & Peck shows New York what's what in lovely stockings.

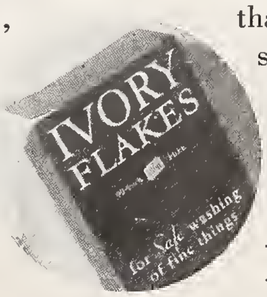
They're all vain legs could wish for—ask for "Queen Victoria" and you'll see 100-gauge cobwebs—"Princess" is your cue for sheers, unclouded by ripples or rings—and use "Bread-and-butter" as your password for stockings that are slick for serious walking.

What will their fate be? Peck & Peck hopes for the best . . . cautions you with these very words, "Never tub stockings with impure soap . . . it's too strong. Use pure Ivory Flakes and lukewarm water."

The frailer stockings are, the fairer they seem. And the poor darlings are at the mercy of the soap you use. Give them life extensions by using Ivory Flakes—those tiny curls of pure Ivory Soap that puff into instant suds!

And deferring the washing of soiled stockings will never do, because perspiration is deadly on silk strength. After each wearing, duck your stockings into pure Ivory suds. Takes but a minute!

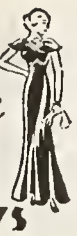
And then! Don't waste money on fine fabrics soaps that cost more than Ivory Flakes. And why should you? Ivory Flakes come in bigger boxes with more soap—and cost a shade less!



IVORY FLAKES

gentle enough for a baby's skin · 99 44/100 % pure

Reduce



YOUR WAIST AND HIPS
3 INCHES IN 10 DAYS OR
. . . it won't cost you one penny!

This illustration of the Perfolastic Girdle also features the new Perfolastic uplift Bandeau.

TEST . . . the PERFOLASTIC GIRDLE . . . at our expense!

"I REDUCED MY HIPS 9 INCHES," writes Miss Jean Healy. . . . "I reduced from 43 inches to 34½ inches" . . . writes Miss Brian.

● So many of our customers are delighted with the wonderful results obtained with this Perforated Rubber Reducing Girdle that we want you to try it for 10 days at our expense!

Massage-Like Action Reduces Quickly!

● The Girdle may be worn next to the body with perfect safety for it is ventilated to allow the skin to breathe. It works constantly while you walk, work, or sit . . . its massage-like action gently but persistently eliminating fat with every move you make.

Don't Wait Any Longer . . . Act Today

● You can prove to yourself quickly and definitely in 10 days whether or not this very efficient girdle will reduce your waist and hips THREE INCHES! You do not need to risk one penny . . . try it for 10 days . . . at no cost!

THE COUPON BRINGS YOU FREE BOOKLET AND SAMPLE OF THE VENTILATED PERFOLASTIC RUBBER

SEND FOR TEN DAY FREE TRIAL OFFER!

PERFOLASTIC, Inc.
Dept. 534, 41 EAST 42nd ST., New York, N. Y.

Please send me FREE BOOKLET describing and illustrating the new Perfolastic Reducing Girdle, also sample of perforated Rubber and particulars of your 10-DAY FREE TRIAL OFFER.

*Name*________________
*Address*________________
*City*________ *State*________

Use Coupon or Send Name and Address on Penny Post Card

of tons of equipment all focused on a passionate love scene, supposedly taking place in the darkness and the intimacy of a bedchamber.

ANNA lives in a beach house in Santa Monica. She likes the pounding surf. She lives simply with her husband, Dr. Eugen Frenke. Frequently he goes back to look after his housing developments in the Berlin suburbs. In Hollywood, he is working on a comedy short that will star Jimmy Savo.

They say he's a nice guy. When he and Anna first took a house in Hollywood, they hired a negro cook. Her idea of a meal was a supper of pork chops at about six in the evening. Anna and Dr. Frenke liked a rousing Russian dinner of cabbage soup, herring and shashlik at high noon. The doctor is mysterious in explaining how they settled their argument. He says it was a compromise—always compromise.

Once he asked the southern mammy to shine his shoes. She said colored girls in America didn't do that kind of thing. He made her take off her shoes. Rolling up his sleeves, he shined them for her.

Please, Mr. DeMille, What Is Glamor?

(Continued from page 34)

a real diamond, a real pearl or a real ruby. And I give you my word not once has it been chosen. They always choose some bauble instead.

"The reason for that is simple. My one valuable jewel required setting. If it were displayed in Tiffany's or Cartier's window, reposing brilliantly upon a black velvet pillow they would all stop to admire it. Then it would have glamor. But when it is tossed in with a bunch of worthless stuff nobody knows its value.

"In the same way glamor can sometimes be aided by setting and background. If you know a woman has a reputation as a heart breaker, if you know that hundreds of men have been in love with her, that she is noted for her charm, you will accept her glamor. Others without such a background must prove themselves.

"And how is that done? It is truly a matter of confidence. Year after year I watch the new recruits come to Hollywood. They are a bunch of raw, unsophisticated, none too pretty kids. A year or so later the public is amazed to see that they have blossomed out into exciting, glamorous women. Girls, comparing the pictures of these youngsters when they first came to Hollywood and a year later, wonder, 'Why can't I undergo that change, too?' Well, the answer is—you can.

"What happens is this. There is a spark of glamor in those raw recruits. It takes a practiced eye to see it without the setting, but it is there. Glamor manifests itself in the smallest gestures. Two women can stand side by side at a kitchen stove boiling eggs and one will have glamor and the other won't. One's movements will be interesting and alluring even at this bromidic task. The other will be dull and sodden at her job.

"Very well. Then in some of these new girls there is that vital spark of glamor. A director sees it. He picks the girl from the crowd and gives her confidence by telling her that she has glamor, by believing in her.

"When she begins to realize that someone believes in her she feels her power. She is no longer timid and afraid—and lo!—the little spark of glamor becomes a blazing fire which lights the entire world.

YES, it is true that glamor can wax and wane. It has nothing to do with beauty, nothing to do with age. I've seen hundreds of women far from beautiful who have the rare quality of glamor. And many, many women past fifty are still glamorous. But glamor goes when confidence goes and this much is certain—glamor cannot be imitated.

"I wish I could talk personally to every woman reader of this magazine. There is a message that I would give them all. Don't imitate. Create your own personality. That's what Garbo has done. And Claudette Colbert, Katharine Hepburn and Joan Crawford. All of these women and many, many more have started their own fashions, created their own vogues. Stupid girls have imitated them, girls who would have had real glamor if they had been individual.

"Glamor does not change, but our conception of it does. Certainly we cannot deny—what with all the stories concerning it—that Cleopatra was a glamorous woman, yet if she were to appear today exactly as she was, she would be a freak and a laughing stock. That is because our ideas have changed so much. However, the essence of glamor is the same.

"Gloria Swanson certainly had and still has glamor. Yet if you would run any of her old pictures—and I'm not excluding those I directed—you would discover yourself laughing at many of the scenes.

"I know that very often I tell my children of some very dramatic and exciting film I have directed. To me it is as wonderful as it was when I had my first enthusiasm for it. I run it for them, thinking that I will get a vicarious thrill out of their enjoyment. And the thing, made really just a few years ago, creaks with age and is ridiculous now.

"But glamor is the same yesterday, today and tomorrow. It cannot be created. It can be—and is constantly—developed.

"Develop glamor by being feminine, subtle, charming and—more important than anything—individual."

How I'm Teaching My Daughter

(Continued from page 57)

little plans, I suppose. They are all for her future.

For instance, the main hall in our house has a marble floor and only the other day, Charlie remarked that it was awfully cold looking and we ought to have it torn up and replaced with something else. But I objected. I said, "Just think how ideal it will be for dances when Mary grows up and gives parties." So Charlie immediately agreed with me and the marble floor remains. Then we have a beautiful arbor that is the perfect romantic spot for her to sit with beaux.

Oh, I guess as she grows older, Mary, like most young girls, will get the urge to express herself. Everyone goes through that phase. So if she wants to take a job or go on the stage, I won't stand in her way, but I'd much prefer her doing nothing. I just want her to be happy.

Lots of people have asked me what I think of the advanced methods in modern education. I am ashamed to say that I know very little about this, but what I do know, I certainly don't like. I do not believe that a child should only do the things he or she happens to feel like doing. I believe that from its earliest years a child should be disciplined. Why, this is only fair to the child. It is decidedly not fair to let a child go one third of its life without discipline and then let it fall, willy-nilly into life with its imperative demands, into a life that insists upon rigid discipline. You can't keep a job or a husband or a home unless you know the full meaning of self-discipline.

They ask me how I punish Mary. Of course, I do not believe one should ever

Baby LeRoy has a competitor! And it's none other than Mrs. Arlen's young son, Richard, Jr., who is co-starring with his Dad and Sally Eilers in "Baby in the Icebox."

● "Goodness — what a day I've had! And now, imagine — got to take off my own socks and shoes! Work — work — work! . . . Lucky I'm always in the pink-and-white of condition."

● "Now — let's see — do I pull or push? Pull, I guess. Yeave-ho!... Nope — didn't work! Guess I'd better pull in the other direction. Oh, dear — I'm getting hot and cross! . . . Get ready with that Johnson's Baby Powder, Mom!"

● "Oops! There she comes! Pretty smart of me to figure that out! Now for the other foot. And then — oh, boy! — my bath and a Johnson's Baby Powder rub-down! And I want to say this to every mother listening in . . .

● "Try different baby powders between your thumb and finger. You'll find some powders are gritty — but Johnson's is so soft and smooth you can't believe it! And it hasn't any zinc-stearate in it, nor orris-root. My doctor said so!"

• • •

Send 10c in coin for samples of Johnson's Baby Powder, Baby Soap and Baby Cream. Dept. 132, Johnson & Johnson, New Brunswick, New Jersey.

Johnson & Johnson NEW BRUNSWICK NEW JERSEY

JOHNSON'S Baby POWDER

FORGET YOUR TROUBLES
ENJOY THE BIGGEST LAUGH BARGAIN OF ALL TIME

1000 NEW JOKES
10 CENTS
LAUGHS GALORE!

"1000 NEW JOKES" FOR 10 CENTS

That means one hundred laughs per penny!—not to mention the scores of clever cartoons in this hilarious new magazine. Get a copy today and enjoy life.

"1000 NEW JOKES" ON SALE EVERYWHERE — 10c

HUSH
CREAM
DEODORANT
For Body Freshness
FOR BODY ODORS

ACTUAL 10c SIZE AT 5 & 10c STORES or send 10c in stamps or coin to HUSH CO. 116 Market St. Phila. Pa.

WANTED STRONG MEN FOR THE MOVIES

Over 3,500 athletes now in pictures! Physical Culture training won me a Movie contract. Studios search constantly for men with well developed bodies. I offer you a chance to win a

FREE TRIP TO HOLLYWOOD
FREE SCREEN & TALKIE TEST

through my home-study Physical Culture Course. What this training has done for me and many other picture stars it can do for YOU too. Send NOW for my FREE booklet. Give name, age and address for full particulars. Joe Bonomo, 230-G, Bonomo Bldg., Hollywood, Calif.

strike a child. As for punishments, I am at a loss. I really am scared. I wouldn't know what to do. I hate to say this, but Mary has never been naughty. She is an extremely docile child. When it's time for her to go to bed, instead of making a fuss, she says good night and trots along with her nurse.

HOWEVER, I don't like her to be too meek. I'm afraid she'll develop into one of these good-natured girls who let everyone take advantage of them.

As for sex. Well, I'm not afraid for Mary. I'd be more afraid if I had a little boy. I think little boys have more ideals than little girls. I think they are far more innocent. Girls seem to have a protective instinct about things.

I, myself, learned about sex in the nicest possible way from my mother. I would have hated to have gathered information through locker-room gossip. With Mary, as soon as she asks me questions, I shall, with the able aid of my husband, do my best to answer them intelligently. I believe that if a child is old enough and wise enough to ask, then at least she should receive the courtesy of an intelligent answer.

There is one phrase in the American language that I consider silly, idiotic, stupid and altogether unnecessary. That is when people say a girl is ruined. No girl can be ruined—ever. I shall tell this to Mary.

Like most professional mothers, I am obliged to be away a great deal from my daughter. Although this is very difficult for me, I believe it is a good thing for her. Every mother is tempted to concentrate entirely too much on the welfare of her child. This selfish monopoly is bad for the child. Being away from Mary makes her independent of me. To my mind there is nothing worse than a possessive mother.

In the spring I am returning to Hollywood to make "What Every Woman Knows" for M-G-M. Mr. Thalberg bought it for me. Perhaps they'll change their minds and say there is not enough picture material in it. As far as I'm concerned, it is my favorite play. After that, I'll probably do one more picture. And then I'm through!

I have to give myself credit. Fully three years ago I said that after three years I'd be washed up with pictures and I'm sticking to this. Following the hit of "Madelon Claudet," which was a tremendous surprise to everyone including myself, Mr. Mayer sent for me and said, "Well, now you're through with the stage."

Through with the stage! Me! It's as if someone would suddenly say you're through with sleeping or eating or, for that matter, breathing. Since I was the smallest child, the stage has been a vital part of me. And I'll tell you this, and I say it sincerely, pictures do not need me.

I have no glamor. I am just an actress. The stage actually needs what I have to give, my years of experience, my technique. Pictures do not need that. They can accomplish anything with the twist of a camera's lens. They have glamorous creatures like Hepburn, like Miriam Hopkins. They do not need me.

On the stage I can play any type of role I choose. But tell me, tell me this, would Hollywood ever have allowed me to play "Mary of Scotland?" Would they? I'll give you your answer. Never, never. Not in a thousand years. Not when they have a Garbo. I don't blame them. But I feel I have something to give and I feel that here on Broadway, on the stage, I have my proper medium. They need what I have to offer and I'm going to do my utmost to give it to them.

When I go back to Hollywood I do not know whether I shall take my child with me. But I do know this. As soon as she is able to understand, I intend giving her just one piece of advice. It was something a young philosopher once told me. "Be honest and audacious!" And I think that just about covers everything in life.

It's just Jack Oakie and Burns and Allen entertaining the folks at the party Emanuel Cohen gave for the Gary Coopers.

The Life and Loves of Lyle Talbot

(Continued from page 31)

why Lyle liked the place. Such a gay, good-natured, colorful people are rare. Even the smallest home boasted a large, happy family and every door was open to a neighbor and his brood. It was more of a settlement than a real town. One man's trouble was every man's trouble and each man's happiness could be shared by all.

Lyle and Grandma Talbot lived in the one and only hotel in Brainard. Mrs. Talbot owned and operated the hostelry and the fame of her exceptional cooking spread far and wide, so far in fact that many traveling men came far off their regular trip to have dinner and stay over night at the Talbot House.

LYLE'S earliest recollection is his attendance at a Bohemian wedding. He was about three years old at the time and was dressed in long skirts of real lace. The Bohemian women are marvelous lace makers and this luxury material was very commonplace in Brainard. Almost every person in town attended the ceremony, which started with a beautiful parade from the bride's home to the church. A wedding was an event for everybody in town.

Lyle marched with the others, his hair pinched up in the center of his head like "Snookums." He recalls the incident clearly because some enthusiastic member of the party stepped on the lace hem of his skirt and tore his clothes almost off him. He ran home crying to Grandma Talbot that he was "too big for lace" and that he "didn't like his funny hair-do." The blonde curls were snipped and the lace skirts laid away for good.

By the time Lyle was five, he was a "grown up" little fellow. The systematic routine of the hotel had been great training for him. As soon as he was able to walk, he liked to "run fetch" things and nothing pleased him so much as to be pressed into bell-boy service. He was permitted to deliver the local paper to the various guests' rooms and do other little jobs that pleased him. On winter evenings he was usually to be found perched on the fat knee of some traveling man who held the little circle about the big stove in the middle of the room enthralled with his "upstate" adventures.

He hated the idea of school. It seemed as if this interruption would halt his fun at the hotel. But before long he came to the conclusion that he could have much more fun with the kids. The few American children in Brainard were allowed to stay away from school on Saturday, but they soon discovered that they might as well go. All the Bohemian kids went to classes on Saturday to learn Bohemian, so there was no one left to "choose up sides." Thus there is one movie star who speaks Bohemian fluently. An

See for yourself

WHAT A truly Amazing DIFFERENCE THIS SMART EYE MAKE-UP ACTUALLY DOES MAKE

Maybelline
Made by Maybelline Co. Chicago
BLACK

The Approved Mascara

Black or Brown

Tested and Approved
Serial No. 4647
by the
Bureau of Foods, Sanitation and Health Conducted by Good Housekeeping Magazine

ALL LEADING 10c STORES HAVE 10c SIZES OF ALL MAYBELLINE PRODUCTS

STYLISTS and beauty authorities agree. An exciting, new world of thrilling adventure awaits eyes that are given the glamorous allure of long, dark, lustrous lashes . . . seductively shaded lids and expressively formed brows. And could this perfectly obvious truth be more aptly demonstrated than by the above picture?

But how can eyes acquire this magic charm? Very easily. Maybelline Mascara will instantly lend it to your lashes . . . Maybelline Eye Shadow will instantly impart the extra alluring touch to your eyelids . . . and Maybelline Eyebrow Pencil will give the requisite smooth smartness to your brows. Anyone can achieve true loveliness in eye make-up . . . and with perfect safety if genuine Maybelline preparations are used.

Maybelline Eye Beauty Aids have been proved utterly harmless throughout sixteen years of daily use by millions of women. They are accepted by the highest authorities and contain no dyes. For beauty's sake, and for safety's sake, obtain genuine, pure, harmless Maybelline Eye Beauty Aids.

MAYBELLINE CO., CHICAGO

Maybelline
Eyebrow Pencil

Maybelline Eyebrow Pencil

smoothly forms the eyebrows into graceful, expressive lines, giving a perfect, natural effect. Of highest quality, it is entirely harmless, and is clean to use and to carry. Black and Brown.

Maybelline
Eye Shadow

Maybelline Eye Shadow

delicately shades the eyelids, adding depth, color, and sparkle to the eyes. Smooth and creamy, absolutely pure. Blue, Brown, Blue-Grey, Violet and Green.

Maybelline
Eyelash Grower

Maybelline Eyelash Grower

pure and harmless, stimulates the natural growth of the eyelashes and eyebrows. Apply before retiring.

Maybelline
Eyebrow Brush

Maybelline Eyebrow Brush

Regular use of this specially designed brush will train the brows to lie flat and smooth at all times. Extra long, dainty-grip handle, and sterilized bristles, kept clean in a cellophane wrapper.

Maybelline harmless EYE BEAUTY AIDS

PEG'S "New Eyes" work a Magic Spell!

1
JACK THINKS I'M DULL... I DON'T SEEM TO "SPARK" WITH HIM...
DEAR, YOUR EYES ARE THE TROUBLE ...GET SOME PEPPY "NEW" ONES... USE DELICA-BROW
2
AFTER SHE USES DELICA-BROW
GOSH, WHERE DID YOU FIND THOSE STARRY "NEW" EYES? THEY TRANSFORM YOU! YOU'RE IRRESISTIBLE, PEG!
...SAME EYES, JACK, REALLY—JUST DONE OVER WITH SOMETHING AT THE 10¢ STORE

Have ALLURING EYES Like Peg's Tonight

You can make your eyes wells of allure... get exactly the same effect the movie and stage stars do—instantly! Simply darken the lashes and brows with the wonderful make-up they use—called DELICA-BROW. In a few seconds DELICA-BROW makes your eyes look bigger, brighter... irresistible. "Peps up" the whole face! Try it tonight. It's waterproof, too. Remember the name, DELICA-BROW. At any drug or department store and at the 10c stores.

Delica-Brow
Delica-Brow
The Original Waterproof Liquid

MARVELOUS VALUE

10c mind you—for a beautiful bakelite vanity, in fashionable solid colors, with ornamented top and a high grade velour puff! Odorless, feather-light, fitted with screw-cap. Sold by leading Chains. Another creation of A. L. SIEGEL CO., Inc. 22 West 22 St., N.Y. City achievement to be proud of indeed.

HANDYSIFT Loose Powder Vanity

FROM the beginning, it was quite clear that Lyle was the ringleader of this colorful group. The fact that his grandmother owned the hotel was a great prestige-builder. Besides, there were always fascinating food handouts at the kitchen door of the Talbot House. Lyle's grandmother had married again by this time and the new grandfather was liberal with all of Lyle's friends.

Though Lyle was never sick a day in his life, he was continually having accidents. One day as he was touring the basement in search of the apple supply, he tripped and fell, his lower teeth cutting a gash in his lip. The cut left a bad scar that has echoed down through his life even to Hollywood, where a casting director told him he must have an operation before he could hope for a "break." He consulted Perc Westmore, famous make-up man at Warner Brothers, about it. Westmore scoffed, "An operation on your lip might ruin it. If you can act, my advice to you is to tell them all to go to hell." Later, a broken bottle was the means of severing a cord in his hand. A colt kicked him in the forehead and he suffered a three-inch gash over the eye from a baseball bat. Each scar, in turn, has affected his life to some extent.

But when Lyle was nine, an event took place that all but broke up his grandmother's flourishing hotel business.

The "gum machine man" left his large supply of gum in Mrs. Talbot's basement while he went out on his territory. One day while he and a pal were scouting around the basement, Lyle stumbled across the mystery box. He felt inside and pulled out a carton of 100 packages of gum. What a find! It never occurred to him that this was the supply for all the gum machines in southern Nebraska. And if it had, I doubt if it would have changed matters one whit! He and Emil proceeded to remove the cartons one at a time to store them all over town in secret hiding places. They soon learned that the gum was like money. They could use it to buy the other kids off. Five packages for taking the Talbot cow to pasture was one of the many deals. At the end of the third day of "gum heaven," Brainard had a dance. Lyle thought it would make a great hit with the girls to get some free gum. This was the downfall of the huge plan. Mr. Hunt was one of the dancers. It didn't take him long to notice the great number of wrappers on the dance floor. Everyone in the hall was chewing. He hurried to the hotel and examined the box in the basement.

Have you ever had that painful experience of having to return something, apologize to a friend, or ask for the return of a gift to another kid? That was Lyle's experience. He was led around the entire town by the ear and forced to ask all the kids he had given the gum to return it. His new grandfather then took him home for a good whipping. It cost the hotel quite a sizable sum to replace the gum that was "beyond return."

Kay Francis, so glamorous and beautiful, is Lyle Talbot's leading lady in his latest offering, "Mandalay." Talbot was substituted for Ricardo Cortez.

THE hotel had hardly recovered from this blow when Lyle threatened its existence anew with a game called "Indian Tent." The gang had plenty of hotel sheets to make the tents with, but what would they use for pictures? They must have decoration for the outside of each white tent. No solution presented itself until the day that Grandma Talbot received her huge supply of canned goods for the winter. Lyle and the boys were told to unpack the hundreds of cans and place them on the shelves in the famous basement. Soon they noticed that some of the cans were "Indian Brand" and others "Tomahawk Brand." In fact, most of the brands of canned goods had something to do with Indians. Great!

It took them the greater part of a whole day to accomplish their new task, but finally they did it. Removed every label from every can in the lot! They had great looking tents from then on, but one day Lyle was sent to the basement for a can of tomatoes. He brought up a can. It was pears. He brought another and another until twenty cans lay open on the kitchen table. Then he got the whipping of his young life. And it wasn't the last. Each time that a can was brought from the basement all winter, he got a fresh whipping. It was long, drawn-out punishment.

When Lyle was ten, his father sent for him to come to Omaha. Mr. Henderson had married again by this time and wanted his son with him. Grandma Talbot leased the hotel for two years and went with Lyle to the "big city." At the end of the lease she went back, leaving him with his father, a new mother and high school.

He hadn't liked the idea of leaving Brainard at first. There were all the kids, the hotel and Emma Sypal, his lady love. Why, he and Emma had even talked of "gettin' married—when they were grown up." Omaha seemed a long way off, a very long way off.

But by the time Grandma Talbot left Omaha for good, Lyle was anxious to stay. There wasn't much difference as far as he could see. His father was in the apartment house business (which seemed like the hotel business to Lyle) and the kids were all okay. But the best thing about staying with Dad was the fact that Mr. Henderson had two businesses and the other one was the show business. From early spring untill late summer, Mr. Henderson ran a traveling show, carnival with side shows, ferris wheel and all the trappings. Lyle went along.

It got to the point where school was merely something to suffer through the winter with, waiting for spring and the show. To make matters worse, Lyle was never able to get even a small part in any of the school plays. Says Lyle: "Some unprofessional ninny who could recite always got the leading role." That left Lyle, with all his "professional experience" out in the cold. Somehow he finished high school, re-

SHE-(to herself) IF HE ONLY WEREN'T SO SKINNY AND WEAK I THINK HE WOULD BE MY MAN
HE-(to himself) I'M AFRAID I HAVEN'T A CHANCE WITH HER. IF I ONLY COULD GET HUSKY AND STRONG

SKINNY? NEW EASY WAY PUTS ON POUNDS—FAST

Thousands gaining 5 to 15 lbs. in a few weeks with new double tonic. Richest imported brewers' ale yeast concentrated 7 times and combined with iron

QUIT being held back by a skinny, unattractive figure and a sickly, weak appearance that keep you from making and keeping worthwhile friends. Here's a new quick easy treatment that is giving thousands solid, healthy flesh and new good looks—in just a few weeks!

As you know, doctors for years have prescribed yeast to build up health for rundown men and women. But now with this new discovery you can get far greater tonic results than with ordinary yeast—regain health, and in addition put on pounds of solid, husky flesh—and in a far shorter time.

Not only are thousands quickly gaining beauty-bringing pounds, but also clear, radiant skin, freedom from indigestion and constipation, new pep.

Concentrated 7 times

This amazing new product, Ironized Yeast, is made from specially cultured brewers' ale yeast, imported from Europe—the richest yeast known—which by a new process is concentrated 7 times—made 7 times more powerful.

But that is not all! This marvelous, health-building yeast is then ironized with 3 kinds of strengthening iron.

Day after day, as you take Ironized Yeast, watch ugly, gawky angles fill out, flat chest develop and skinny limbs round out attractively. And with this will come a radiantly clear skin, new health—you're an entirely new person.

Skinniness dangerous

Authorities warn that skinny, anemic, nervous people are far more liable to serious wasting disease. So start to build up quick, before it is too late.

Results guaranteed

No matter how skinny and weak you may be, this marvelous new Ironized Yeast should build you up in a few short weeks as it has thousands. If you are not delighted with the results of the very first package, your money instantly refunded.

Only be sure you get genuine Ironized Yeast, not some imitation that cannot give the same results. Insist on the genuine with "IY" stamped on each tablet.

Special FREE offer!

To start you building up your health right away, we make this absolutely FREE offer. Purchase a package of Ironized Yeast at once, cut out the seal on the box and mail it to us with a clipping of this paragraph. We will send you a fascinating new book on health, "New Facts About Your Body", by a well-known authority. Remember, results are guaranteed with the very first package—or money refunded. At all druggists. Ironized Yeast Co., Dept. 34, Atlanta, Ga.

fused to attend the State University and informed his father that he was "going in the show business for life."

AT first, with his father's show, he merely did a few tricks for the crowd that always seemed to leave the gawky residents of the middle west dizzy. Between acts in the "dramatic tent" he sold pop-corn and peanuts up and down the aisles. Now and then one of the younger performers would become ill and Lyle, who was growing tall and handsome, would be permitted to substitute in a real part if there weren't too many speaking lines. For his work he received not a cent of pay, but the "glory" of being a professional actor was in itself enough.

The first stage job that rated him a salary was one he obtained through answering an advertisement in the newspaper requesting the services of an "assistant to a mystic." A man named McKnight was a "hypnotist" and Lyle was to be his subject. In the act, Lyle was "hypnotized" and when his muscles were taut, he was suspended between two chairs, his head on one and his feet on the other. Then a large slab of rock was placed on his chest and one of the "local strong men" was invited to use a sledge hammer on the rock.

Lyle learned the trick easily and his biggest thrill came from being pointed out on the street by the young kids as "Atlas" the morning after each performance. He was supposed to get $10.00 each week and "keep." He got the "keep" regularly, but the ten dollars seldom came his way.

When the "act" eventually broke up many miles from Lyle's home, it was necessary for him to pick up whatever work he could find. He rated a season at $15.00 weekly with a traveling show called the "Savage Carnival," running the "Hoop-La Game" and occasionally the "Cover the Red Spot." Here is one movie star who can tell you inside information on the various carnival games and tell you why you don't win. It's amazingly simple.

He had originally intended to work his way back to Omaha and the folks, but as the weeks passed and he managed to keep himself together, the sixteen-year-old Lyle decided to go on his own.

The next two or three years were only "seasons" to him. A season with the Dubinsky Brothers, the show in which Jeanne Eagles had got her start. (She married one of the brothers.) Then came a season with the Clint & Mary Robbins Co., which played such legitimate stock shows as "The Brat," "Polly of the Circus" and many others. Followed a season with Chase-Lister Co., after which he had an engagement with the John Winnanger Company. While he was with this company something very, very interesting happened to our Lyle.

We're going to have a chance to see another one of our favorite radio crooners, Lanny Ross, on the screen. He's caught up on his autographing and "Melody in Spring" his first picture, is practically finished now.

FOR A LIGHTNING SHINE
BLACK SHINOLA
SHOE POLISH
MAKES OLD THINGS LOOK NEW

10¢
[West of Rocky Mts. two sizes—10¢ and 15¢]
Send 25¢ in stamps or coin for Home Shoe Shine Kit, consisting of bristle dauber, genuine lamb's wool polisher, and tin of Shinola. Address 2 in 1—Shinola—Bixby Corporation, Dept. G-4, 88 Lexington Avenue, New York City.

NEW EASY WAY 10¢ JUSTRITE PUSH-CLIP
KEEP WIRES OFF FLOOR (LAMPS AND RADIO)
A neat job instantly. No damage to woodwork. No tools needed. Set of eight colored clips to match your cords, 10c. At Kresge's

This Enchanting Fragrance
RADIO GIRL
PERFUME and FACE POWDER
Invites Romance

YOU can have this unseen beauty, too, for Radio Girl Perfume and Face Powder are made just for the modern American Girl . . . . Fine French essential oils contribute their exquisite odeurs; domestic manufacture explains their modest prices.

Use this COUPON for FREE SAMPLES

"RADIO GIRL", Saint Paul, Minn. M-4
Send me FREE Regular Size RADIO GIRL Perfume and Trial Size RADIO GIRL Face Powder. I am enclosing 10c (coin or stamps) for cost of mailing. (Offer good in U. S. only)

Name ....
Address ....

MOST boys associate white trousers, dates, their first flivver and fraternities with their 'teens. And to them, Lyle's existence might have appeared a blight. But he had other memories. The nights the storms came up and the entire company had to struggle to hold the tents up, stitching in the "crease" in the trousers "permanent," giving out the wrong handbills at the end of the season because they had run out of the right ones, grease paint, acting, travel. Ah, these memories!

During these days, romance passed him by. The main reason for this was the fact that the leading lady was generally years older than himself (the wife of the owner or manager in most cases) and this didn't lead to much romance. He didn't miss it much however, since "curtain time" had come to mean everything worthwhile to him.

Thus it was that love hit Lyle Talbot so hard the first time. He was with the John Winnanger Company at the time.

When the owner had made the announcement that he was going to hire a "lady orchestra" as an added attraction, Lyle had paid but scant attention But that was before the arrival of the young and beautiful saxophone player named Lottye. From Texas, was Lottye, and to Lyle she soon became the center and the entire reason for the universe. He was terribly in love with her, with her cute southern accent, with her pretty hair and the dimples that kept reappearing as she played the saxophone. It was that mooning, cow-sick brand of love that usually hits boys around the ages of fourteen and fifteen. But Lyle had missed love at that age. He wanted Lottye to marry him, thought he wanted to be in the company of this ravishing creature for the rest of his life. But Lottye was a little wiser. "You all don' wan' to get married," she'd drawl. "You all want to get up in the world."

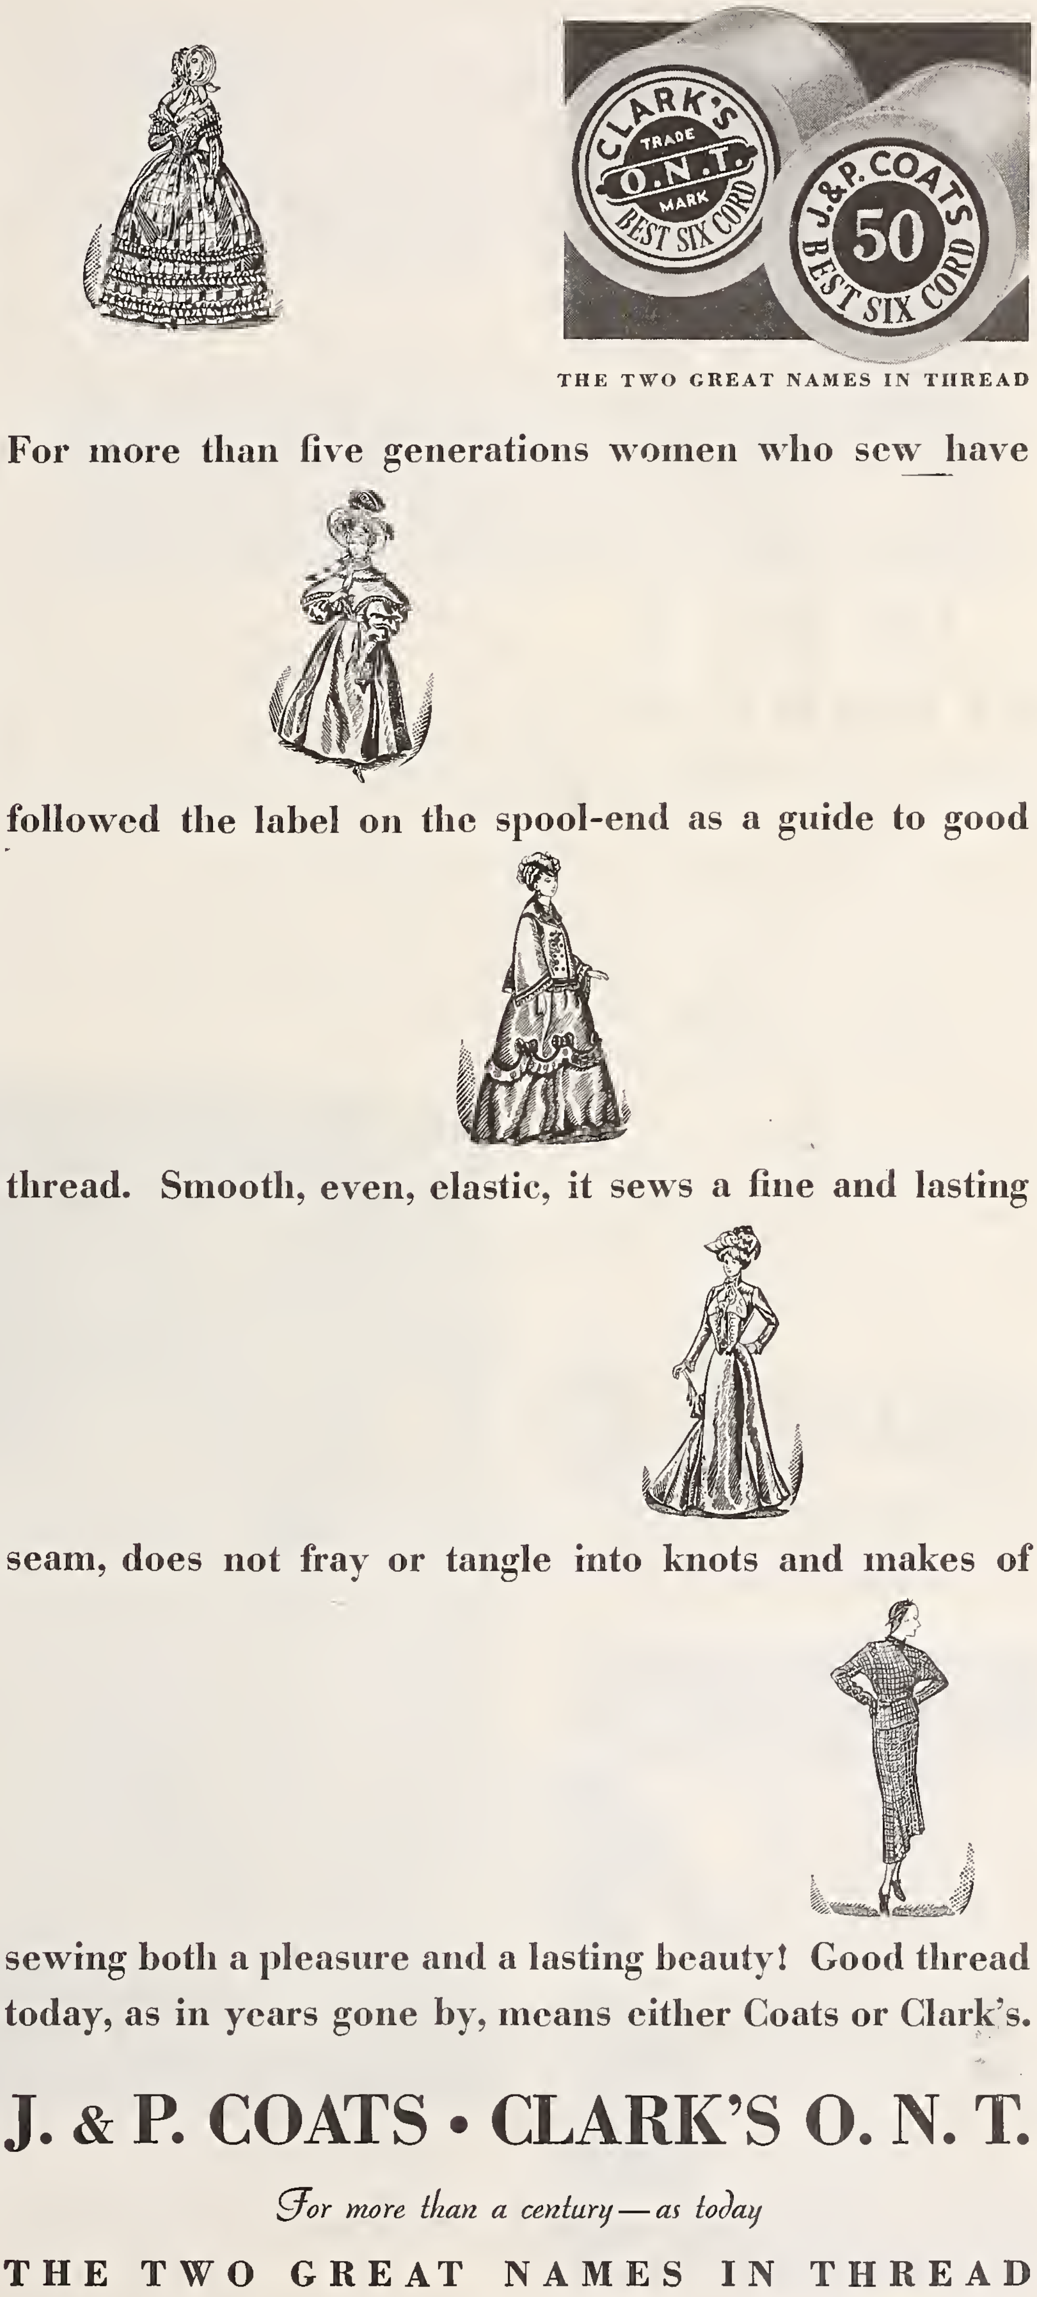
"No, I don't. I want to marry you," Lyle would protest.

"All right, all right," Lottye would say soothingly. She was languid, southern and didn't like to argue.

Love struck Lyle harder and harder. He went from the frantic period to the foaming period in a mere span of days. Then one evening he arrived at the dramatic tent for the evening performance. He walked to the blackboard to find out what play would be used for the show. He found the information in large letters: "Love Me Alone" tonight. He was about to turn away from the board and start for the dressing-room when a small, white notice on the bottom of the board caught his attention. He read it with haste. He read it again. Tears came into his eyes. He repeated slowly:

NOTICE: The lady orchestra quit the show this morning and has left for parts unknown—all of them!

Did Lyle and the lovely Lottye ever set eyes on each other again? And how about all those other women in his life—for there are many. The story about his many loves makes fascinating reading. The remainder of this intimate story appears in the May issue.



THE TWO GREAT NAMES IN THREAD

For more than five generations women who sew have followed the label on the spool-end as a guide to good thread. Smooth, even, elastic, it sews a fine and lasting seam, does not fray or tangle into knots and makes of sewing both a pleasure and a lasting beauty! Good thread today, as in years gone by, means either Coats or Clark's.

J. & P. COATS • CLARK'S O. N. T.

For more than a century—as today

THE TWO GREAT NAMES IN THREAD

The Husband Who Never Comes Home

(Continued from page 67)

I told her the police would be called if she ever tried a trick like that again. Some months passed by. She was fired.

ONE day my daughter informed me that she was taking tennis lessons. I said, 'from whom?' 'Oh,' said my unsuspecting child, 'from the Countess Polaski. She has rented the house next door.' She only stayed there a month. Two or three more months went by. I was at a party in Malibu at which an acquaintance of mine said, 'Lou, I'll drive in with you when you go to the studio.' I said that I was not going to any studio, was not working. 'Oh,' said the friend, 'but I understood that you call for your sister every night, your sister Helen who is singing over KMTR. I looked dumfounded and my friend elucidated further. 'Your sister who married the Russian Count. You know, the Countess Polaski!'

"And that, to date, is the last I have seen or heard from her. Like Mrs. Gray, she looked normal enough. There was nothing in her appearance to indicate the fanatic. She simply and without question seemed to feel that she and I belonged together and that was all.

"Three or four years ago my Filipino boy came into the library one day with a peculiar expression on his face. I thought he was about to announce his departure. He stood first on one foot, then on the other. I asked him what he wanted. He grinned and said, 'Mr. Stone, there has been a young man to see you, six times while you are away. His name John Stone. He say he is your son. He see your daughters here and say they are his sisters and that if they live here with you he can live here, too. I wouldn't let him come in because I did not know.'

"I called the police departments of Los Angeles and Hollywood. It appeared that they could do nothing about it. The implication was, even as with Mr. Matthews, that it might be, you know—anything is possible.

"I turned the matter over to Freddie Freulich, my manager. He discovered that this John Stone was charging wearing apparel to me and that he was living in a small hotel in Hollywood as my son. Freddie went down to see the manager of the hotel and told him that this boy was not my son and they had better know it. The manager was even Introducing Charles John Holt, Jr., otherwise known as Tim. Yes, father and son. Tim's polo playing is up to the best Southern California standards and he's a fine swimmer, too. He's only fourteen and at his age he's not much worried about a career.

GLORIA STUART, UNIVERSAL PICTURES PLAYER

You, too, can have LOVELY EYEBROWS
this new, easier way

JUST a delicate touch of the brows with the magic Winx Pencil and they are given a natural contour, a soft, velvety tone—real, alluring. Not coarse or artificial. This new creation comes from the world's leading experts in eye make-up—the creators of Winx mascara (cake or liquid).

Just try this new-day Winx eyebrow pencil—utterly different. Compare it with anything you have ever tried. Note how the Winx Pencil gives a dainty naturalness heretofore impossible.

Today, buy one of these marvelous new Winx Pencils, black or brown. See for yourself how just the right touch gives your whole face a new interest. You will never be contented with skimpy, unattractive eyebrows again.

Ross Company, 243 W. 17th St., New York City

NEW WINX 10¢
EYEBROW PENCIL
AT ALL GOOD 5 AND 10 STORES

This LOTION Stops Chap

ITS PENETRATING ACTION BRINGS 2 WAY RELIEF

If you have trouble with chapped skin, by all means try Hess Witch Hazel Cream. It's a different kind of lotion that contains no gums and is never sticky. Because it's completely absorbed, Hess relieves the inflammation in the second layer of skin, which is the real cause of chap, and makes the outer layer soft and elastic.

There's no other lotion like Hess. It keeps your skin soft, smooth and comfortable. Sold in 10c, 25c and 50c sizes in Dime, Drug and Department stores. Send 10c for dime size if you can't find it in your favorite store.

(27)

E. E. HESS CO.
19 Main St. Brook, Ind.

HESS Witch Hazel Cream

HESS
WITCH HAZEL CREAM
HESS

more difficult. He said that the boy could live there as my son—and what about it?

THEN the boy made a bad move. He signed a couple of bum checks. The police ran him in, still protesting that he was my son. Freddie and I went to the jail and called on him. He was a nice looking kid of about twenty-four years of age. Normal looking, nicely spoken. He didn't know who I was until I told him. He bluffed and said that he did. I asked him how he had got this idea, who had given it to him. He said that he had got it from his mother, who had always talked about me, told him that Lewis Stone was her husband and his father. He had been brought up on the idea.

"I asked him who his mother was and he said, 'Anna Q. Nilsson!' I anticipated the kick I would get out of telling Anna that 'our boy' had turned up after all these years. He also said that his girl had advised him to do what he'd done and when I asked him who his girl was he said, 'Clara Bow.'

"I departed and left him there still declaring that I was his father. When I last heard of him he was to be taken to a psychopathic ward.

"There was the lady, only a few weeks ago, from Terre Haute, Indiana, who wrote that I was her missing husband and wouldn't I please come home and take up my responsibilities. She said that the children still remembered me in their prayers at night and that they told everyone, "Daddy will soon be home.' She pleaded with me to be a man, to have the generous heart I'd had during the first five years of our married life. She reminded me of the doll houses I had made the children and of how I had always brought her a box of candy on Saturday nights. She said that she didn't see how I, who had been a physician all of my life, could now be content with being a Hollywood actor. She added that if I didn't see fit to return she—well, the threats that she threatened would make Frankenstein a little lamb.

"Occasionally, there will come letters from very old ladies who ask if I might not be their husbands, or their sons, missing since the War. These letters I always answer. They ask a legitimate question. For just as to every bereaved mother the Unknown Soldier may be her boy so, to all deserted or bereaved women, a strong resemblance in a man may mean he is their husband or son.

"I can't figure out the others. The letters that they write are coherent and rational enough. The ones I have met, face to face, do not appear to be insane. And yet, when proofs are given them they are not convinced, they never admit that they are mistaken. I can only put it down to the fact that I must have a set of composite features. I believe that the features of all the missing husbands of the world have been shuffled and reassembled into mine.

"I would like to state, however, that I have two daughters—one sixteen and the other twenty-four and that I have left no unknown or deserted wives carelessly around the country."

He was too selfish to love. She murdered—and did not know! He loved in vain. She was a fool. He reaped the fruits.

STEP UP TO

THE WONDER BAR

. . . and delve into these fascinating lives!

Two men in love with the same woman . . . who loves still another man . . . who courts still another woman. It is a jest to make the Gods roar!

BY all means, read "Wonder Bar" in the April issue of SCREEN ROMANCES—a completely absorbing fictionization of the big new production starring Al Jolson, Kay Francis, Dolores Del Rio, Ricardo Cortez and Dick Powell.

AND enjoy in the same issue the complete stories of 11 other splendid new Hollywood pictures, all abundantly illustrated by scenes from the actual productions:

NANA, starring Anna Sten. CAROLINA, Janet Gaynor, Lionel Barrymore, Robert Young. ALL OF ME, Fredric March, Miriam Hopkins, George Raft. FASHIONS of 1934, William Powell, Bette Davis. MYSTERY OF THE DEAD POLICE, Robert Montgomery. FOUR FRIGHTENED PEOPLE, Claudette Colbert, Herbert Marshall. SUCCESS STORY, Colleen Moore, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. YOU CAN'T BUY EVERYTHING, May Robson, Lewis Stone. COMING OUT PARTY, Frances Dee, Gene Raymond. I'VE GOT YOUR NUMBER, Joan Blondell, Pat O'Brien. WHEN STRANGERS MEET, Richard Cromwell, Arlene Judge.

Ask Today at Any Newsstand for the April Issue of . . .

SCREEN ROMANCES

"—A Dozen Screen Hits Between Covers!"

HOW CLARA CLEARED UP HER RED EYES

CHEER UP, CLARA. LET'S GO TO PEGGY'S PARTY!
I CAN'T, GIRLS. MY EYES ARE A PERFECT SIGHT FROM CRYING!
30 MINUTES LATER!
JUST LOOK AT CLARA NOW! IT'S LUCKY FOR HER I KNEW HOW QUICKLY MURINE CLEARS UP BLOODSHOT EYES.
YOUR EYES ARE GORGEOUS, CLARA!

When eyes become bloodshot from crying, late hours or exposure to sun, wind and dust, apply a few drops of Murine. It quickly clears up the unsightly redness—leaves eyes looking and feeling just fine! Good Housekeeping Bureau approves Murine, so you know it's safe to use. And—it costs less than a penny an application!

MURINE FOR YOUR EYES

Be the Girl With a Smile that Wins

KEEP YOUR TEETH ATTRACTIVE THIS SAFE, EASY WAY

Be particular about your teeth—use only Boracetine Tooth Powder. It releases nascent oxygen, that gently removes all stain, cleans teeth completely, makes them naturally white and gives them an attractive lustre. Boracetine removes even cigarette stain without hard brushing. It also neutralizes acidity and keeps gums firm.

Kresge's and other good 10c stores sell Boracetine. If you fail to find it, send 10c and name of favorite Dime Store. Boracetine will be sent to you postpaid.

Boracetine TOOTH POWDER

F. E. BARR & COMPANY
2527 Calumet Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Boracetine TOOTH POWDER

What's Happened, Gable?

(Continued from page 41)

I KNOW talk like this has a tendency to anger people who think, 'Oh, these movie stars! They have everything in the world. They're paid ten times what they're worth and still they kick. They don't know what real trouble is.'

"I have a little statement for those particular people. I used to want fame. I got it. Now I find that I have sacrificed something a great deal more important—peace. I once could go to a picture show, watch the crowds at theatre time, walk down the street oblivious to everything. I gave that up for this! Let me assure you that I lost in the trade.

"The philosophy about how much money we make is okay if you happen to be one of those people to whom money is really important. I've had so much fun on so little—that I guess my perspective has been ruined. The things that I have to do in Hollywood and the money I am forced to spend does not buy me the pleasures I am longing for. And, what's more, they leave me not much more than you when I am through.

"Lately I've begun to give up a few of the forced things. I'm starting to leave off the 'front' that every actor must have. I'm trying to get some of the things I want and they cost so precious little when you come to think of it. Yes, I enjoyed driving my twelve-cylinder car, but I sold it the other day and bought a Ford roadster. Now I can actually drive down Hollywood Boulevard without so much as a single finger pointing me out.

"The troubled days of my life were not when I was on the bottom of the heap. I didn't have a care in the world then. Honestly, if I had it to do over again I'd never have sought fame or money in the movies or out of them.

"Another trouble with me in Hollywood is the fact that I've never been social-minded. I'm too innately independent to fit smoothly into the grooves of the right things to do and the right people to do them with. I like to do as I please, when I please. Any person who achieves fame in the motion picture world forfeits all claims to independence. I cannot plan to go on a fishing trip because I must be handy in case there are retakes on a picture. I couldn't even get away to see my own horse run at Caliente the other day.

I CANNOT go slouching around in old clothes, because of something, vaguely referred to as my 'position.' I can't slide up to a drugstore counter and have a good old-fashioned chin with the soda jerker, because he subconsciously yeses me. I can't go shopping for a present for my wife because I find I have suddenly become a public spectacle. The manager of the store wants to know if I'll autograph a few articles in the book department. I dare say I should be more than grateful to the fans who attempt to snip buttons off my clothes for souvenirs. They made me, didn't they? But I can't feel that way. I try to grin and bear it, but something inside me rebels. I really appreciate their reason, but I don't like it.

"I think the only thing that will cure me of my violent attack of Hollywood-itis is to go on a good, old-fashioned bum-bat for about a year. I mean I'd like to hop the next tramp steamer out of San Pedro and set off for God knows where. I'd like to lie on a warm deck and let the sun saturate my whole being until I felt I had completely regained my health and steadied my nerves. Then, after a year or two, I might want to come back to Hollywood. I'd like to come back with the idea of starting all over again.

"I'd like to be able to say to them, 'Let's forget all this great lover stuff. Let me get back to the rough, tough roles I played when I first started out.' I like to play those guys. I get a kick out of them. I don't care whether it's a starring part or merely a small role.

"You see, I know I haven't fooled the public with these dinner-jacket parts I've been playing for the past year or more. What's more, I don't like to fool them even if I could. I'd like to get back to Gable-the-roughneck and forget Gable-the-gentleman. I guess what I really want more than anything else is a chance to be myself again, both on and off the screen."

These two Youngs, Loretta and Robert, lend the love interest to George Arliss' first 20th Century picture, "The House of Rothschild."

Career of an Ugly Duckling

(Continued from page 69)

if any actress has ever worked under such a burning pressure of concentration as Miss Williams did. Night after night, Katharine stood waiting in the wings, longing, praying for destiny to step in and take a hand in her behalf. Not that she wanted Miss Williams to break a leg, but if only something would happen—if only her car would break down, so that Katharine could play the part—just once! Oh, just one real chance! But nothing happened and when the play closed after a run of several months, she went off to Europe to soothe her disappointment.

It made no difference to her that she traveled tourist class. In fact, she preferred it. It was cheaper and just as comfortable. She had made several trips abroad in this manner and on one of them, she toured through a large part of southern Europe in a broken down old car with a girl friend. The two budgeted their finances and spent exactly five dollars a day. No more—no less. Often they were forced to sleep in the car at night and the sight of these two young ladies, dirty and weary, dressed in riding trousers, must have aroused the wonder of more than one little provincial French or German town.

Katie spent all her excess money in going to local theatres and studying the technique of foreign players. Whenever she could manage to do so, she visited towns and cities in which some great European star was appearing, and every lesson of gesture, diction, or dramatic approach that the young American girl learned in this manner, has been stored away in her memory and treasured as part of her own equipment.

When she returned to America in 1929, she was given a try-out in "Death Takes a Holiday"—the play Fredric March is doing for the screen now. But there seemed to be some sort of a jinx hanging over her theatrical career, for again she was fired. She next played a small bit with Nazimova in something of very little importance called, "A Month in the Country." This shortly vanished from Broadway and the only thing left for her to do seemed to be stock. In Stockbridge, Massachusetts, she played with the local company for the whole summer.

She worked hard and earnestly in her determination to acquire the technique that all managers seemed to feel she lacked. The brusqueness, the direct frankness of her speech which stamps her apart, may have been acquired at this period of her life, as a sort of shield against the many disappointments and hurts she was receiving in the theatrical world. Like a small boy who sticks out his tongue at a more powerful opponent, Katie's openness of mind, her frank, almost brutal words often caused a battle wherever she went. She swore like a sailor. She used to stride around Stockbridge in ridiculous looking clothes.

"STUNNING" until he saw her PIMPLY SKIN

End pimples, blackheads

with famous medicated cream

DON'T let a poor complexion spoil your romance. Don't permit coarse pores, blackheads, stubborn blemishes to rob you of your natural loveliness. Rid yourself of these distressing faults. But not with ordinary complexion creams. They cleanse only the surface.

Try the treatment that doctors prescribe and nurses use themselves. Already 6,000,000 women know this perfect way to a perfect complexion...Noxzema, the famous snow-white medicated cream that works beauty "miracles".

Not a salve. Snow-white—greaseless, instantly absorbed. Its gentle, soothing medication penetrates deep into the affected pores. Purges them of germ-breeding impurities that cause skin blemishes. Soothes irritated skin. Refines coarse pores. Helps stimulate lagging skin glands. Noxzema's first application leaves your skin far clearer, finer, smoother than before.

HOW TO USE: Apply Noxzema every night after all make-up has been removed. Wash off in the morning with warm water, followed by cold water or ice. Apply a little Noxzema again before you powder as a protective powder base. With this scientifically perfect complexion aid, you'll soon glory in a skin so clean and clear and lovely it will stand closest scrutiny.

Wonderful for Chapped Hands, too

Improve them overnight with this famous cream

10,000,000 jars sold yearly

Make this convincing overnight test. Apply Noxzema on one hand tonight. In the morning note how soothed it feels—how much softer, smoother, whiter that hand is! Noxzema improves hands overnight.

Special Trial Offer

Noxzema Cream is sold by all drug and department stores. Ask for the new economical larger 50c jar. Or if your dealer cannot supply you take advantage of this offer. Get a generous 25c jar of Noxzema FREE. Simply send 15c to cover cost of mailing and handling to the Noxzema Chemical Co., Dept. 54, Baltimore, Maryland.

GREASELESS
NOXZEMA
Skin Cream

Tested and Approved Good Housekeeping Bureau

Noxzema

CHIC
NAIL POLISH
PINK

PARTNERS
in Loveliness . . .

"Pale hands, pink-tipped" with lustrous, lasting Chic—the nail polish that reflects the gleam of admiring eyes!

Chic's fascinating new crystal flacon is unusually generous in size. . . Its new Bakelite top never lets the brush touch the surface of your dressing table. Available in five outstanding shades—Clear (colorless), Pink, Coral, Ruby, Deep. . . . Chic spreads evenly, and keeps its beautiful lustre for days longer. Also Chic Nail Polish Remover and Chic Cuticle Remover.

At all better Chains.

CHIC NAIL POLISH 10¢

CUSHIONS
FOR YOUR TIRED FEET

Insole fits snugly . . . gives cushion comfort to foot.

WEAR "COMFORT" CUSHION INSOLES
10¢

Wear your smartest shoes without a trace of fatigue. "Comfort" Cushion Insoles give relief to tired, aching feet. Made of durable medicated material. Special sponge rubber cushion supports the arch. Sold for 10c a pair at ten cent stores. If you cannot obtain, send coupon.

"Comfort" FOOT AIDS
REG. U.S. PATENT OFFICE

THE FOREST CITY RUBBER COMPANY
1276 Ontario St. Cleveland, Ohio
Enclosed is 10c for pair of insoles. Size of shoe________
Name________
Address________
City________

Her peculiar slant on fashion has long been one of her outstanding eccentricities.

LAST summer, when she visited Hartford, she arrived at the club one afternoon in a costume which upset the entire place. Dress has always been considered highly important to the social ladies of Hartford, so when Katie came into the lounge after playing golf, attired in a pair of the most abbreviated shorts that had ever been seen anywhere by the club members, and wearing a boy's shirt open at the throat, no stockings, a pair of worn old golf shoes, and a black linen coat which struck her lovely legs half way between ankle and knee, the gasp that went up from all the flowery, chiffon, "garden party" ladies seated around the luncheon tables could be heard all over the place.

Of course, they were thrilled at seeing her again. So many stories had drifted back from Hollywood as to her peculiar actions out there that each and every member of the country club felt a sort of vicarious, reflected glory from living in the same town that had produced such a celebrity. Of course, she had always been that "Crazy Katie Hepburn" and one shouldn't be surprised at anything she might do. Such legends as her walking along Hollywood Boulevard wearing dirty overalls and carrying a monkey on her shoulder, or sitting down in the middle of the street to read mail, or answering interviewers with wild statements she made up on the spur of the moment. Like the story told of a reply she gave when asked if it were true that she had two children. "Yes," responded Miss Hepburn, "and they are both black." Yes—the Hartfordites had heard about all that.

But what had startled them most was her sudden leap to fame. She never had been beautiful. She wasn't even pretty. Her mouth was too big, her body too thin, her hair too unruly and her freckles too many. Everything about her was "too much." Including her own conceit. Certainly, not by the wildest stretch of the imagination, could she have ever been called glamorous, exotic, alluring. She was about as sexy as a washboard! But in her work on the screen, she could out-siren Garbo. Well, it just went to show you what cameras, close-ups, crazy movie producers and directors could do. They forgot about her intelligence, her genuine talent, her long, hard struggle to get ahead.

When she came back to New York in the fall of 1929 from stock, victory seemed ahead for the first time. She played with Jane Cowl in "Art and Mrs. Bottle" and something about her seemed to stir the interest of the critics. But the play failed and it was not until "The Warrior's Husband" reached Broadway in 1930, that Katie got her real chance. In this play, she was revealed to the critics as an exciting, intelligent and highly interesting young actress who, both from a fighting and amorous viewpoint, refreshingly interpreted the role of a young Amazon. An RKO official who saw her in the play immediately offered her a film contract to play opposite John Barrymore in "A Bill of Divorcement" and in a short year and a half Katharine Hepburn has become the most outstanding box-office attraction on the screen. What an astute official!

A scene from "The Lake," Katharine Hepburn's much-discussed New York play. Blanche Bates and Frances Starr are shown with her. It is pretty generally agreed that Hepburn on the screen is a much better actress than Hepburn on the stage. She'll be doing "The Tudor Wench" for RKO soon.

However, in spite of the fact that she has become famous all over the country because of her success in the movies, again she seems to have been led by some strange trick of fate into misadventure. She has never lost sight of her real ambition—which is stage work. And so—and so—we had her play, "The Lake." Her movie contract allows for six months leave to follow her own inclinations. The première of "The Lake" had been built up to the point of ludicrous insanity by her theatrical advisers. You would have thought that Sarah Bernhardt was opening for her first American appearance. Ticket speculators received one hundred dollars each for the little printed slips that opened the doors to witness all this magic. If it hadn't been so pathetically funny, it would have been tragic. Katharine was scared of this Frankenstein monster of publicity that had been reared over her head. She was scared of her own ability. She suffered an acute attack of opening night stage-fright. And while the critics praised her promise—her intelligence, her talent—as a body, they failed to hail her as a second Duse.

To tell you the truth, I'm glad. The screen needs Katharine Hepburn. And Katharine Hepburn needs the screen. I think she is essentially a screen actress. Her angular, characterful face should have the benefits of the camera's many-angled magic. And we should have the benefit of a personality who can make mystery and glamor a native, American thing. We need no longer satisfy our hunger for glamor with Swedish, German, Russian and French brands only. For we have our very own "Crazy Katie Hepburn."

On Dress Parade

(Continued from page 72)

Madge Evans' dressing in "Fugitive Lovers" is a far cry from glittering spangles and feathers. Out on a cross-country bus flight through sleet and storm, she can only sport one suit, but she makes the most of her opportunity. Even descending the fire escape, her tweed top-coat strikes a note of smartness just right for an escape occasion. You don't feel as though she is too smart or too dressy, but you do get the sensation that her get-up is just about right. Clothes chosen on that basis are bound to be right no matter what crisis may confront their wearer.

HER little slick tailored suit has a snappy plaid scarf to give an accent and her slouchy felt hat is as correct as it can be. This outfit lived bravely through horror and stress, proving the good sense of dressing in tweeds.

Once, in a hotel bedroom scene, Madge appears in a polka dot tailored affair that can be rolled into a bag and come out unwrinkled and smiling. It's something you will want to own if you are traveling or if you are one who "Ethel dear . . . you've been hanging to mother's skirts all day. I can't imagine why she's so listless, Mrs. Ross."

"Often constipation makes children like that, Mrs. Green. Remember that droopy spell Jackie had? I gave him a laxative—Fletcher's Castoria—it was all he needed!"

"Doesn't Ethel look bright and happy today, Mrs. Ross? I followed your advice and gave her some Fletcher's Castoria last night."

"Fine! Fletcher's Castoria is a wonderful laxative for children. It's made especially for them. It's gentle, doesn't have any harsh drugs in it. These strong drugs are what make most laxatives so harmful for children. And Castoria has such a pleasant taste! And when you buy it, always look for the signature, Chas. H. Fletcher on the carton!"

Chas. H. Fletcher. CASTORIA

The children's laxative

• from babyhood to 11 years •

For the many occasions, mother, when children need a laxative—use Chas. H. Fletcher's Castoria. From babyhood on, it is your best "first-aid" for colic due to gas, for diarrhoea due to improper diet, for sour stomach, flatulence, acid stomach. And every mother knows that a laxative is any doctor's first advice for treating a cold!

NRA MEMBER U.S. WE DO OUR PART

Do You Have These Complexion Faults?

Clogged Pores Dryness
Pimples Roughness

Does your skin redden and roughen easily? Is it extremely sensitive to what you use on it? Then try the safe, gentle Resinol treatment—Resinol Soap to thoroughly cleanse the pores—Resinol Ointment to allay any irritation, roughness and dryness, and help in healing the sore, pimply spots.

The Resinol treatment is not new and sensational. Doctors and nurses have used and recommended it effectively for more than thirty-five years in the care of infants' skin, as well as adults'. They know, that the elements in Resinol Ointment and Soap are pure, soothing and beneficial—that regular use does make the skin clearer, smoother and finer.

Get Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap from your druggist and give yourself a Resinol facial today. See how clean your skin looks—how soft and velvety it feels. Note how quickly Resinol Ointment relieves any "broken out" places.

Free sample Resinol Ointment and Soap sent on request. Write Resinol, Dept. 1-F, Baltimore, Md.

Resinol

STREAKED HAIR?

This way brings even color

FADED streaks — dull strands — grayness—all vanish at the touch of this famous clear, water-like liquid. Just comb it on and color comes: black, brown, auburn, blonde. Hair stays soft—easy to curl or wave. Entirely SAFE. Millions know this time-tested way. Get bottle from your druggist or department store on money-back guarantee.

Test it FREE ~ Will you try Mary T. Goldman's on single lock snipped from hair? No risk this way. We send complete Free Test. . . . Mail coupon.

MARY T. GOLDMAN
2331 Goldman Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

Name..............................

Street..............................

City.................... State...........

Color of your hair?........................

realizes how completely flattering to youthfulness a plain robe of this sort can be. It's easy enough to make for a little—or to buy for a little more.

"Eight Girls in a Boat" holds lots of hints for those who are active-sport-minded.

What good looking turtle-neck sweaters those girls do wear. And are they swell on straight, slim figures? You'll want one even if you have to seek out the woods where you can wear it. And aren't spring hills and dales coming into the picture right now, propounding the question of what to wear? Take a hint from this picture and go shopping for a turtle-neck.

DOROTHY WILSON, the central figure in "Eight Girls in a Boat," has opportunity to show several perfect young girl dresses. She leans to bows under her chin and right flattering they are, too.

First, there is a lace bow. The sleeves are of lace, tiny and puffed—awfully chic. Then, for a trip to town, there is a spotted bow, rather big and puffy. A dotted band about a felt hat goes with this. Very good taste and so simple to do.

Dorothy puts over her girlishness and innocence in a most effective manner and, in my opinion, her clothes help a whole lot.

NOW, Lilian Harvey in "I Am Suzanne" does the little Miss Simplicity in a too, too lovely manner. She's all mixed up with dolls—they're really marionettes—and sometimes you can hardly tell the real gal from the wooden ones. Isn't that just ideal?

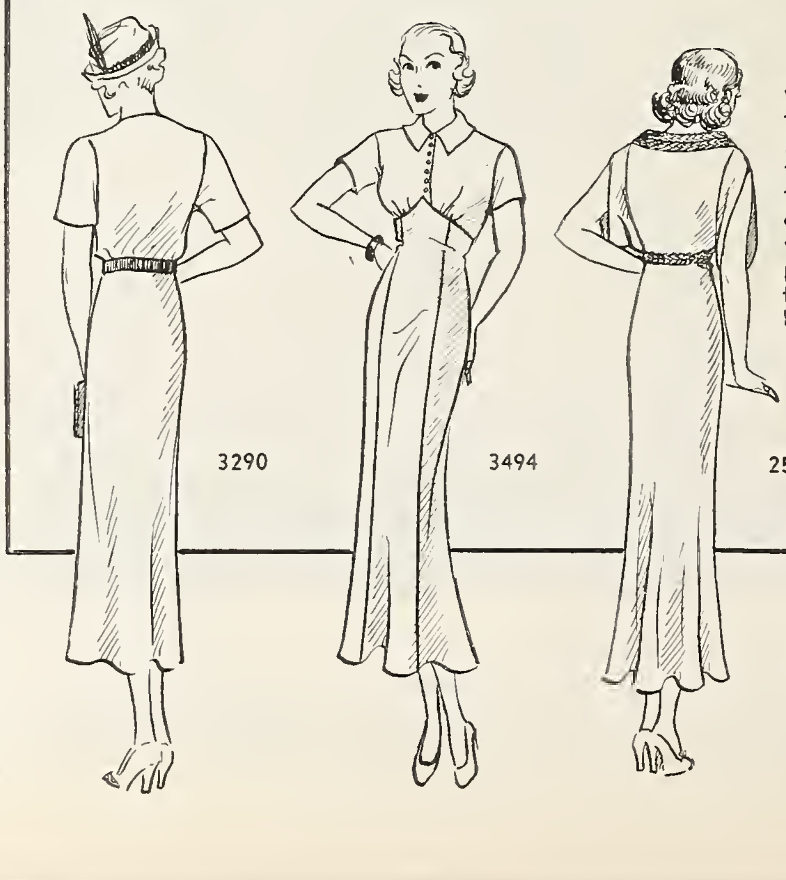
Lilian affects dolls' clothes. You know the sort of thing, spangles and tulle and ruffles, but she does it so awfully well. She happens to be sweet and innocent enough to get away with it. In that scene before she meets her lover, the puppet man, she has on the most adorable silver and white creation—ruffles at the feet and tulle ruffles around the shoulders that are edged with ermine. There's an ermine bow under her chin which is just too youthful looking for a dance dress. She looks cuddly and cute—just right for the loving arms of a protective male. Oh, I tell you, clothes do a lot in that particular.

Later, in the puppet-making studio, those sweet little smocks she wears put ideas into many a home-loving soul. They are so simple and could be sewed up in an evening. They have becomingly-shaped cap sleeves and are so plain otherwise. But just imagine them in pale pink, yellow or blue with white bindings, perhaps, and you have something which, for a cost of about sixty cents, would make you shine in any home setting.

Afterwards, Lilian, in a black velvet dress with a very Grecian look, still has very much the semblance of a doll. Still she looks very smart—silver edged sleeves, and all. Only showing what the sophisticated girl can do in the way of clothes to keep herself smart looking and still in the picture as far as the latest styles are concerned.

If you are young and pretty, see this picture for helpful hints. If you feel you are not such a knockout for prettiness, there will be hints in that direction for you, too.

I WENT to see "Gallant Lady," wondering what that could do for us all in the way of clothes. And did it give me a thrill? From beginning to end Ann Harding gives us something new.



Here are the back views of the patterns featured on page 73. From left to right; 3290—the tailored shirtwaist dress. 3494—a front view of the two-piece dress, without the jacket. 2525—Loretto Young's afternoon dress.

In the first place that little suit with the dark, plain blouse gives us all ideas for the season to come. A dark blouse you must have, of linen, cotton, silk or wool, and when you see Ann in this picture, you will know the reason why. It's that smart—one of those shirtwaists that will be good for many months to come.

And then in that light-toned wool dress with a dark wool overblouse, Ann Harding looked swell. What a grand get-up for a business girl trying her darndest to get ahead. It's not only good style—it's forward-looking style and would make almost any girl look distinguished. It has that stiff, flat, modern look which every girl appreciates right now.

I want to call your attention to the scene where Ann and Janet Beecher are lunching together at a smart restaurant. Observe how plain and straight and sort of tailored they are as to hats, dresses, and coats. That's the way sophisticated young people—and older people, too—are dressing these days for going out and doing things. No ruffles, no white collars, no frills. Everything is just so simple that the girl herself stands out in bold relief. This is good stuff and I do wish you would take it in.

In this picture, when Ann Harding strikes Paris, notice how she takes on the character of Parisian dressing—a little more spectacular, but ever so simple.

Tickling Hollywood's Ribs

(Continued from page 59)

town about seventy miles from Hollywood. To Ben's horror and astonishment he learned that the Government was charging him with sending French photos through the mail to an old maid. He knew perfectly well he had never done such a thing. There must be a mistake somewhere. And yet it was a real summons and a real court of law. And the prison term he would serve, if the case should be proved against him, was all too real.

To make a long story short, it dragged on for months. Lawyers dogged Ben's footsteps. He never knew when he might be called off the set to make the long drive out to San Bernardino. He dreamed of prison every night. Only after it had gone on for weeks did Hughes get to laughing so hard one day at Ben's worried face, that he broke down and admitted it was a rib. A costly one. Lawyers, even to play jokes for you, don't come free.

Nobody is sacred from ribs in Hollywood. Not even Garbo.

Bob Montgomery was walking to his dressing-room when he spotted a janitor about to throw a bouquet of wilted flowers into a garbage can. Bob took the flowers, tied a card to them reading, "To My Favorite Actress," stuck them in a fancy box and gave them to Greta's maid to take to her along with her luncheon tray at noon. Greta laughed. But she heaped coals of fire on Bob's

Kleinert's
T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
DRESS SHIELDS
would have saved it!

No matter whether friction, perspiration, or chemicals spoiled this dress—Kleinert's Dress Shields would have saved it! Why risk your dress even once when you can have the guaranteed protection of genuine Kleinert's Shields for as little as 25¢ a pair. Ask for "Kleinert's" at the Notion Counter of the store where you bought this magazine.

AS LOW AS 25¢ A PAIR

NRA WE DO OUR PART

Kleinert's
THRIFT
3

Looks 20 ...is 40!

"Wherever I go people say: 'What a peaches and cream complexion!' It makes me laugh for people take me to be in my twenties when in reality I am the other side of forty. I certainly give thanks to Ambrosia for it has done wonders to a once-sallow complexion." Mrs. F. J., Pennsylvania.

You, too, can have a youthful skin that others envy. For Ambrosia, the pore-deep liquid cleanser, removes all deep-lying dirt, clears muddy complexions, refreshes and stimulates. Made from an old French formula, it's antiseptic, prevents pimples and blackheads.

Pour Ambrosia on cotton, wipe it over the face and neck. You feel it tingle: you know it is cleansing as nothing has done before. Follow with Ambrosia Tightener to close large pores, reduce oiliness, invigorate circulation.

At all 10c stores; also in larger sizes at drug and department stores.

Hinze Ambrosia, Inc.
114 Fifth Avenue
New York, N. Y.

The second installment of Lyle Talbot's life and love story will be in our May issue.

WHEN SHE'S UPSET

HE SUFFERS

Constipation Drove Her Wild made her feel cross, headachy, half-alive. Now she has a lovable disposition; new pep and vitality. Heed Nature's warning: Sluggish bowels invariably result in poisonous wastes ravaging your system—often the direct cause of headaches, dizziness, colds, complexion troubles. NATURE'S REMEDY—the mild, all-vegetable laxative—safely stimulates the entire eliminative tract—strengthens, regulates the bowels for normal, natural functioning. At druggists'—25c.

FREE! New gold & blue 1934 Calendar-Thermometer — samples NR and Tums. Send name, address, stamp to
A. H. LEWIS CO.
Desk DH-77
St. Louis, Missouri

NR TO-NIGHT TOMORROW ALRIGHT

"TUMS" Quick relief for acid indigestion, sour stomach, heartburn. Only 10c.

head. Because that same afternoon, he got a boxed labelled, "To My Favorite Actor." He opened it and it was full of gorgeous American Beauty roses. Real roses. From Garbo. Now, that's what I call sweet!

Then there was the expensive rib Jimmy Durante pulled on a night club—expensive for the night club, not Jimmy. With a party of friends, El Schnozzola dropped in at the Frolics for an evening. He was recognized immediately, not having any tent handy to cover his beak, and the orchestra leader asked him to come up to the piano and do his stuff. Jimmy sang a couple of songs and clowned a bit. But the orchestra leader wouldn't let him go. He kept calling him back and back and egging the crowd on to applaud him. It was thoughtless. Jimmy had been working hard all day and he wanted some fun himself. Of course it was swell for the club. They were getting one of the highest-paid comedians in the world to work for them free.

Jimmy stood it for a while and then he got sore. The next piece he played, he reached down and pulled a leg off the piano. Then he jerked off the top. Then he pulled out the keys. The crowd howled. They thought it was one of those trick pianos that come apart—breakaways. It wasn't. When Jimmy finished, nothing was left of the piano but a pile of wreckage on the floor. The club had to buy a new one.

LITTLE Wynne Gibson, because she does more than her share of clowning, gets ribs pulled on her all the time. You remember, a while back, those earthquake shocks in Hollywood? Every day for a week afterward the people at Paramount were surprised to see Winnie come dashing down the stairs from her dressing-room, face pale, clothes flying and run out into the street. "Earthquake!" she panted, then they asked her what on earth was the matter. They'd tell her there wasn't any quake and she'd go upstairs, but the next day out she'd come running again. Roscoe Karns was hiding on the porch outside her dressing-room, rattling her windows with his hands.

Then there are the ribs you play over the phone. I don't know whether Gloria Swanson is still phoning Chinese laundries in the middle of the night the way she used to, but here's a newer one. You call up, say, Marlene Dietrich. After a moment she comes to the phone and says, "Yes, this is Miss Dietrich."

We always think of her as "little" Arline Judge. But what with Charley growing up so fast, we think we'd better start calling her Mrs. Ruggles. Though her screen appearances have been scarce lately (she's been busy bringing up her chee-ild), you'll find her in "Looking for Trouble."

"I'll call her," you say.

"I beg your pardon?" asks Marlene bewildered.

"I say I'll call her."

"But this is Miss Dietrich."

"You want Miss Dietrich?" you ask. "I don't know if she's here. I'll see if I can find her."

"But this is Miss Dietrich," she protests.

"Say, what are you trying to do?" you growl, pretending you're sore. "You call up and ask for Miss Dietrich and now you say you're Miss Dietrich! Are you crazy?"

This one can go on for hours. A good many stars on whom it's been played, have ended up wondering if they were crazy. It is guaranteed to be very bad for the nerves.

You hear a lot about the ribs Vince Barnett plays. He made his reputation that way. You don't hear so much about the ones people play on him. He keeps those quiet. But it was only natural that the gang should lay for him. Vince was making a picture with Wallie Beery. The director would say, "Over here, please, Mr. Barnett." Vince would trot over obediently and by the time he got there the director would say, "Sorry. My error. Don't need you now."

Vince would sit down and a second later an assistant cameraman would ask him politely, "Will you step this way and let us try the lights on you?" Again Vince would get up only to be told, "Our mistake. Don't need you." No sooner did he sit down again than an assistant director would ask him to stand in for Wallie. Again, "Sorry. Don't need you now." Vince hardly sat down three seconds in three days. He was always needed somewhere.

He didn't catch on until the still man said, "Mr. Barnett, will you pose for a still with Mr. Beery?" They posed. Vince knelt. Wallie stood over him. The still man squinted and squinted and finally said it was all right. He took hold of the little rubber bulb of his camera, raised one hand and commanded, "Hold it! Still!" Vince held it. And Wallie slowly lifted up a barrel and let Vince have ten gallons of ice water right down his neck.

That's the price you pay in Hollywood for playing ribs.

You get ribbed yourself.

Guardian Angels

(Continued from page 43)

takes them in tow and explains the whys and wherefores. More important than any of his help, however, was the caution he gave me about spending money. Now if a girl hasn't had much money, those first picture checks simply burn holes in her purse. I was all set to spend them and a lot more when Jack, who the wise-crackers say still has part of his first check, put the brakes on for me. He taught me that all that glitters doesn't necessarily have to be purchased. He said it wasn't exactly necessary for me to pay down on the

MARRIES the MAN she first FAILED to ATTRACT

Natural Lips win where paint repelled

SHE came so near to missing out on happiness! For when she sought to make herself attractive by using a lipstick that painted her mouth, she only made herself misunderstood.

Men are attracted by beautiful lips, but only by lips that have the natural color of radiant health. No man wants to marry a woman who looks as if she uses paint.

There is a way to give your lips the youthful glow that men admire . . . without risking that painted look. Use Tangee Lipstick . . . it isn't paint! Instead, it contains a magic color-change principle that intensifies your natural coloring.

LOOKS ORANGE—ACTS ROSE

Try Tangee yourself. Notice how it changes color on your lips. Orange in the stick . . . rose on your lips! Longer lasting, than ordinary lipsticks, too. For it becomes a very part of you and not a greasy coating. Moreover, Tangee is made with a special cream base, so that it soothes and softens lips while it adds to their allure. No drying, cracking or chapping when you use Tangee.

Get Tangee today. 39¢ and $1.10 sizes. Also in Theatrical, a deeper shade for professional use. Or send 10¢ with coupon below for 4-Piece Miracle Make-Up Set containing Tangee Lipstick, Rouge Compact, Creme Rouge and Face Powder.

UNTOUCHED—Lips left untouched are apt to have a faded look..make the face seem older.

PAINTED — Don't risk that painted look. It's coarsening and men don't like it.

TANGEE—Intensifies natural color, restores youthful appeal, ends that painted look.

Cheeks must not look painted either. Tangee Rouge gives same natural color as Lipstick. In new refillable gun-metal case. Buy Tangee refills, save money.*

World's Most Famous Lipstick

TANGEE

ENDS THAT PAINTED LOOK

Don't be switched! Insist upon Tangee. And patronize the store that gives you what you ask for.

★4-PIECE MIRACLE MAKE-UP SET—10¢

THE GEORGE W. LUFT COMPANY MM44
417 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Rush Miracle Make-Up Set containing miniature Tangee Lipstick, Rouge Compact, Creme Rouge and Face Powder. Enclosed find 10¢ (stamps or coin).

Check Shade ☐ FLESH ☐ RACHEL ☐ LIGHT RACHEL

*Name*__________

*Address*__________

*City*__________ *State*__________

"They Guessed My Age 10 Years Younger than I am"

NOW YOU CAN BRUSH AWAY

GRAY HAIR

You can easily look years younger. With an ordinary small brush and BROWNATONE, you can tint those streaks or patches of gray or faded hair to lustrous shades of blonde, brown, or black. Also splendid for toning down over-bleached hair.

For over twenty-two years this tried, proven and popular preparation has aided American women the country over in retaining their youthful charm and appearance. Millions of bottles sold is your assurance of satisfaction and safety. Don't experiment. BROWNATONE is guaranteed harmless for tinting gray hair—the active coloring agent is purely vegetable. Easily and quickly applied—at home. Cannot affect waving of hair. BROWNATONE is economical and lasting—it will not wash out. No waiting. No disappointments. Just brush or comb it in. Easy to prove by applying a little of this famous tint to a lock of hair. Shades: "Blonde to Medium Brown" and "Dark Brown to Black"—cover every need.

BROWNATONE is only 50c—at all drug and toilet counters—always on a money-back guarantee, or—

SEND FOR TEST BOTTLE

The Kenton Pharmacal Co.
301 Brownatone Bldg., Covington, Kentucky
Please send me Test Bottle of BROWNATONE and illustrated book on care of the hair. Enclosed is a 3c stamp to cover partly, cost of packing and mailing.
Color of my hair is ____________
Name ____________
Address ____________
City ____________ State ____________
Print Your Name and Address

$3 EFFECT FOR 10¢
VIVANI
FACE POWDER
ROUGE
CREAMS
LOTIONS

MENDS WITHOUT SEWING

No More Needle and Thread

6 REPAIRS for 1¢

AGENTS UP TO $2.00 an Hour

SEW-NO-MORE is the amazing product that mends rips, tears, holes in any cotton, wool or silk fabric—instantly—neatly—INVISIBLY without needle or thread. Better than darning or sewing. Patterns matched perfectly. Stands washing, boiling, ironing. Anyone can use it. Takes only a minute. Saves eyes, clothes, time, money. Popular priced. Pays 217% GUARANTEED profits. "Made $132.00 in three weeks," writes Harper of Pa.

Stands WASHING BOILING IRONING

FREE SAMPLE

Rush name and address for FREE Sample to prove our claims. FREE Outfit and territory offer. No investment necessary.

SEW-NO-MORE CO., Dept., T-779
Madison Road Cincinnati, Ohio

$1700.00 TO $3000.00 A YEAR For LIFE

U. S. Government Jobs

Many Early Examinations Expected

Men—Women 18 to 50

Mail Coupon today sure

COUPON
FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. A311, Rochester, N. Y.
Sirs: Rush to me free (1) 32 page book with list of U. S. Government Jobs. (2) Tell me how to get one.
Name ____________
Address ____________

biggest car in Hollywood. Yes, if I've had a studio father, Jack has certainly been he."

Even more dramatic was the way Jimmy Cagney took Jean Muir in tow during her first miserable weeks in Hollywood. Jean, fresh from the serious New York stage, couldn't acclimate herself to the breezy informality of Hollywood. So utterly out of place she felt herself, that she had secretly resolved to fly the coop for New York and her own sort of friends. Jimmy, seeing her at luncheon one day, intuitively realized her predicament and engaged her in conversation.

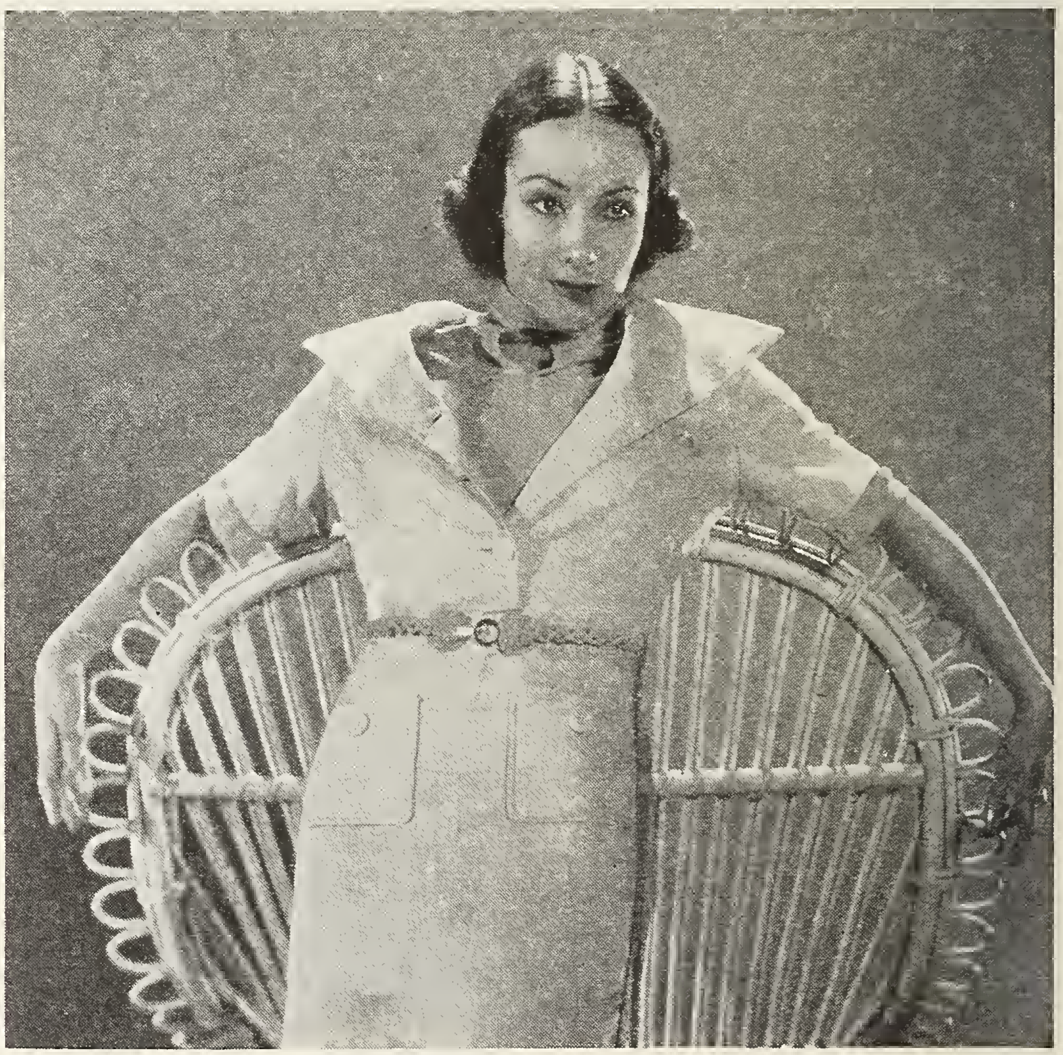
"I told him," said Jean, "that there was nothing for me in Hollywood. I said that the movies were entirely different from what I'd been used to and that I couldn't stand it out here any longer.

"Jimmy heard me through and then opened up with a little discourse of his own, the sum total of which was to take it easy. Hollywood, he told me, although not New York, was a pretty good place after all. Its methods, he went on, were necessarily different from New York's, but its sincerity and determination to turn out good work was just as great as the eastern city's. We became friends. I learned to laugh at myself in the warm glow of this friendship. Hollywood opened up for me and I changed from a miserable to a happy girl. No one knows what a real friend Jimmy Cagney can be. I'm all for him."

AND in just such a way is Richard Cromwell "all for" Claire Du Brey. Claire, Richard's senior in years, has been that lad's studio mother since early in the game when Richard jerked sodas to earn his way through art school. At that time Claire was appearing in a Los Angeles stage production and Cromwell, seeing her once, spent every available cent to return to the play. He finally managed an introduction to her through an usher and then was started a friendship which has few parallels in Hollywood.

Following his art training, Richard started a little shop. Miss Du Brey, believing from the first that he had much to offer the stage and screen, saw to it that such people as Anna Q. Nilsson and Marie Dressler visited his place for objcts d'art and Christmas cards. These meetings proved to be his open sesame to the studios, for it was shortly after that Marie found him small parts. His casting in "Tol'able David" and the launching of his successful career followed.

"But helping me get started was only a small part of the aid she gave me," Richard says. "In half-a-hundred ways since, she has advised and counseled me. One time, I remember, I had obtained an option on a house that looked good



Have you ever worn a sweater under a dress? We thought not. But Dolores Del Rio proves to us that it can be done. And the result is right smart. It's a bright yellow sweater with a high neck and elbow-length sleeves. The neckline of the dress is V-shaped and the sleeves are rather short.

to me. My art training must have taught me not to look further than exteriors, however, because when Miss Du Brey inspected it, she had my money returned. The house, although pleasing to the eye, had nothing else to recommend it. It couldn't be heated. It had no foundation. The basement was full of water. It was entirely inadequate."

But if Claire helped Richard, he has had an opportunity of returning those favors. It was through him that Miss Du Brey received two important film assignments lately. He's not one to forget a friend and especially such a friend as she.

Dick Powell wants to go on record to the effect that Joe E. Brown is the best guardian angel in the business. Dick doesn't mix easily and he, too, was on the point of giving up through loneliness. "Just about the only one to care about the situation," Dick testifies, "was Joe. He had me out to his house early in the game and talked to me in good straight-from-the-shoulder fashion. 'Hollywood,' he said, 'may not be the friendly Pittsburgh I knew, but there are a lot of real fellows out here just the same.' He introduced me to a bunch of those 'real fellows' and the edge was soon worn off my feeling of isolation.

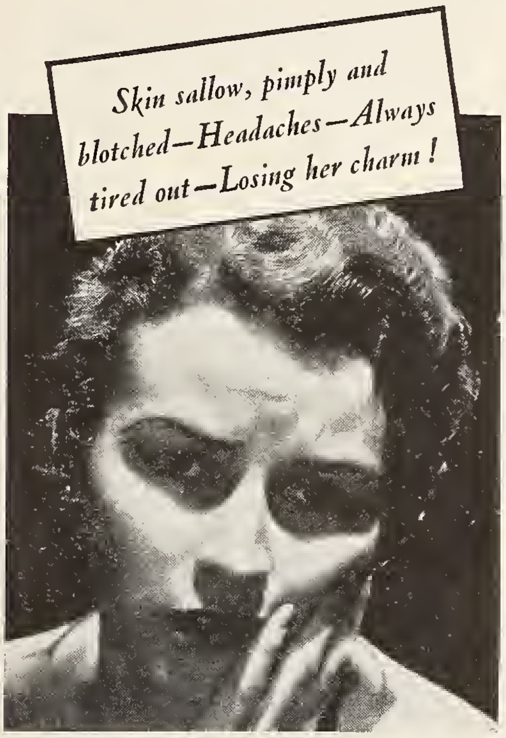
HE didn't need to caution me about money because I made more salary before I came to Hollywood than the studio paid me and I'd learned how to hang onto the stuff. At the same time he did tell me a few things about studio politics and helped me avert what might have been a serious calamity. It was the time when studio cuts were going into effect. I saw no reason why I should accept one at my salary. I wasn't going to either until Joe took me aside to tell me that everyone, himself included, was taking the cut like sportsmen. That opened my eyes. If Joe was taking the reduction, I figured I wasn't too big to refuse it. I can't thank Joe enough for that because I've since learned that studios have a way of doing without a person who can't see the light."

Of course, it is pretty generally known, I think, that Lupe Velez is the "studio mother" of any lad in whom she is interested. It was Lupe who went to bat for Gary Cooper at option-renewal time, securing the non-combative fellow better and still better contracts. And in much the same way has Lupe fought for Johnny Weissmuller.

In the case of Robert Woolsey and Bert Wheeler, the studio parent angle takes another slant. Bert, happy-go-lucky and generous to a fault would, it is said, spend every dime available if it weren't for Bob. For Bert to see something is for him to want to buy it. Automobiles, homes, expensive bric-a-brac—all these work their fatal charms on his wide-open pocketbook. Or rather they used to work them before Bob stepped into the picture. Now it's a different story. Bob has formed the corporation of "Bobert" (Bob and Bert, you see) for the express purpose of safeguarding Bert's money. Bert's salary now goes direct into the corporation and he is doled out a very small and

NEW HEALTH & BEAUTY This Amazingly Easy Way

Remarkable, New-type Pasteurized Yeast Ends Dull, Muddy Skin and Ugly Blemishes—Corrects Common Cause of Constipation



Skin sallow, pimply and blotched—Headaches—Always tired out—Losing her charm!

Skin clear and smooth, complexion lovely—Full of pep—Charming once more!

WHY let the poisons of constipation drag you down, rob you of health and happiness? Why be ashamed of a sallow, blotchy or old looking skin when this simple, easy treatment will do wonders for you? Thousands have found that it brings a clear, lovely skin—perfect digestion and elimination.

"My skin was in very poor condition," writes a lady in South Boston, Mass., "but since taking your pasteurized yeast, the blemishes and pimples have completely disappeared." "I always had trouble with constipation until last winter when I started taking Yeast Foam Tablets. Now my elimination troubles are completely corrected. Your tablets were a great find for me." In such cases, the trouble is internal and requires internal treatment. That's just what Yeast Foam Tablets provide.

New Health and Beauty

These delicious tablets of scientifically pasteurized yeast contain rich stores of the precious vitamins B and G—the nutritive elements which strengthen your digestive and intestinal organs, which give tone and vigor to your nervous system.

With the true causes of your trouble corrected, eruptions and blemishes disappear. Your skin becomes clear and smooth. Indigestion, constipation, lack of pep and nervousness all go. You enjoy new beauty and new health.

These results you get with a food, not a drug. Yeast Foam Tablets are made of pure yeast. Remember, pure yeast is the richest known food source of the vitamins B and G. In the average diet these essential elements are sadly deficient. In some of our most common foods they are entirely lacking! Yeast Foam Tablets are so helpful because they are super-rich in these nutritive factors.

See for yourself

Yeast Foam Tablets are very different from ordinary yeast. They cannot cause gas or discomfort. They keep fresh for months and are always uniform in vitamin content. This yeast is used by various laboratories of the United States government and by many leading American universities in their vitamin research.

Any druggist will supply you with Yeast Foam Tablets. The ten-day bottle costs 50c—only a few cents a day. See what this remarkable corrective food will do for you. Get a bottle today!

NRA WE DO OUR PART

ON THE AIR every Sunday afternoon, Jan Garber's "Yeast Foamers" over NBC-WJZ and all supplementary stations from coast to coast.

YEAST FOAM TABLETS
YEAST FOAM TABLETS

FREE: MAIL THIS COUPON TODAY
NORTHWESTERN YEAST CO.,
1750 North Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill.
Please send me free sample of Yeast Foam Tablets and descriptive circular.

Name..............................
Address..............................
City.................... State.................... MM4

strict amount each month for living purposes. No more splurges or wild spending orgies. Thanks to Bob.

Marie Dressler's rôle as guardian angel is too great and well-known to go into. Let it be noted that not one youngster at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has ever been refused guidance and help from Hollywood's grandest person. Dorothy Jordan, Bob Young and Maureen O'Sullivan all heap tributes on her. Dorothy and Maureen, both romantic youngsters, say that Marie was the only one to talk right out in meeting about their for-the-moment beaux. Marie certainly never minces words. Ramon Novarro calls her the world's best tonic. Ramon, a moody one, would hop in his ear and head for Marie when the blues got him down. "An hour in her company," he says, "is the world's best antidote for that all-gone feeling. Never was there such a grand person."

ROBERT Young also wants it known that Joan Crawford knows a thing or two about studio mothering. Bob, fortunately or unfortunately, was born in Boyle Heights, the "below the tracks" area of Los Angeles. Poor, friendless, lacking in the so-called "social graces," he led a pretty lonely and solitary life in Hollywood until Joan singled him out one night at a preview of "The Wet Parade" to congratulate him on his good work in "The Sin of Madelon Claudet." He warmed to this friendliness and accepted her invitations to large functions at her home where she saw to it that he met the better directors, writers and actors. Joan really drew Bob out, developed and broadened him; let, in fact, the sunshine in.

Gloria Swanson did much the same sort of thing for Joel McCrea in his plug-ugly days, while Walter Huston was the one to father Smacksie-Maxie Baer. Not only did Walter tell Maxie a thing or two about acting, but his advice touched on such well known Hollywood subjects as whoopee, the gals, his salary checks and general studio deportment. The two hit it up from the first and Maxie, another naïve person, was only too glad to receive his Hollywood A.B.C.'s from the wiser Huston.

Onslow Stevens and Gloria Stuart have done wonders for the kids at Universal's school of acting. Both have given freely of their time and efforts to guide the youngsters along the intricate and labored path to recognition. In fact at least a half-dozen of the girl neophytes have officially adopted the not-so-old but plenty wise Gloria as their studio mother. Gloria's proud of it.

Margaret Sullavan, although probably not yet completely weaned from Broadway, owes a very great deal of her success in Hollywood to John Stahl, her director in "Only Yesterday." Margaret was on the very point of checking out by plane when Stahl, hearing of it, buried his pride to visit her apartment and argue, cajole, wheedle, coax and finally win her over to remain.

Everything in Hollywood, it seemed, bothered her. Advertising solicitors annoyed her. Stahl chased them away. She complained of being uncomfortable. He taught her to wear slacks, old tennis shoes, sweat shirts—anything in which she could relax and regain her composure. He taught her how to rest on the set, instructing her to lie down at every possible chance. When she pouted he took re-take after re-take until he got her into a good mood. He taught her to live conservatively and preserve her strength. Stahl, it would seem, was studio father, mother and wet-nurse to her. But his efforts weren't in vain.

We could go on and tell of how Jack Pierce, Boris Karloff's make-up man is more than a friend; of how Chester Morris' own wife has also proved his studio mother, watching his pennies and temper for him; of how Richard Dix has proved a studio father to many a beginner at Radio; of Leslie Howard's "parental devotion" for William Gargan; of John Barrymore's interest in newcomers and the bouquets Pert Kelton hands to Constance Bennett as her studio mother. But isn't what we've already related enough to show that Hollywood's stars are not above extending the hand of help and friendship? Personally, we think it one of the brightest sides of this many-sided place.

The cast of "Merry Wives of Reno" lines up for the cameraman. Roscoe Ates, Margaret Lindsay, Glenda Farrell, Guy Kibbee and Frank McHugh are among those present.

STA-RITE
RINGLET
CURL
PINS

New!

Fashion insists that your new hair dress include those flattering ringlets and soft curls so smartly feminine. And they're not at all difficult with these new Sta-Rite pins. Only an inch and a half long, they're the tiniest, most truly invisible pins you've ever used. Do try them—they make ordinary bob pins seem needlessly clumsy. Ten cents at your favorite store or beauty shop—in black, brown, blonde or gray. Or send 10 cents for trial package. (State Color).

STA-RITE HAIR PIN CO.
Shelbyville, Illinois

STA-RITE HAIR PINS WAVE SET

$5 to $50 a week at Home
MONEY IN MUSHROOMS
Grow Mushrooms in your cellar or shed. Experience unnecessary, we tell you how. Big demand—write today for free Mushroom Book.
BOOK FREE!
White Queen
AMERICAN MUSHROOM INDUSTRIES, LTD., DEPT. 492 TORONTO, ONT.

CLAUDIA DELL POPULAR STAR

Shampoo your hair with
SUNSHINE!

Dancing sunbeams — ripples of gay sunshine that bring the charm of youth and loveliness to your hair. They can be yours forever! And it's so easy—just one Golden Glint Shampoo will bring you all of them.

Golden Glint has a little secret—it's more than a shampoo! Besides cleansing, it gives a finishing sheen to every shade of hair. And what a delightful difference it makes! You'll see a lovely, lustrous sparkle—thousands of tiny dancing lights that hide from ordinary shampoos! You'd never dream a little extra touch could bring such loveliness. At your druggists', 25c, or send for free sample and letter of special advice.

FREE
J. W. KOBI CO., 602 Rainier Ave., Dept. D
Seattle, Wash. * * * * Please send a free sample.
Name ______
Address ______
City ______ State ______
Color of my hair ______

Between You and Me

(Continued from page 15)

some, and convincing support to shoot them to even farther heights.

The male stars, it seems, are given one or two good roles at first and then, for no reason at all, are expected to put over any weak, willy-nilly plot unaided.

Look at Lew Ayres. He was superb in "All Quiet on the Western Front," but what chance has he had since to show his talent?

And is it fair to judge Johnnie Weissmuller at all? He has made one picture—and that several months ago.

Miss Baldwin thinks Clark Gable is almost at the end of his rope. Perhaps. But why? Give him something real and see how real he can be.

Valentino, Barthelmess, Novarro, Gilbert, Barrymore, Reid, Bushman and Fairbanks, Sr., were mentioned as box office sensations in former years. Put any of them in Gable's place in "Dancing Lady," or Cooper's place in "Today We Live," or Ayres' place in "My Weakness"—and where would they have been?

Short—But Sweet

WISE GUY, of Brooklyn, N. Y., allows as how:

"Dancing Lady" was one grand picture.

Joan Crawford ought to continue in such roles—and gowns.

Karen Morley ought to be seen a little more—can't get enough of her.

Paul Kelly ought to be given a big chance to become a star.

We Consider Ourselves Squelched

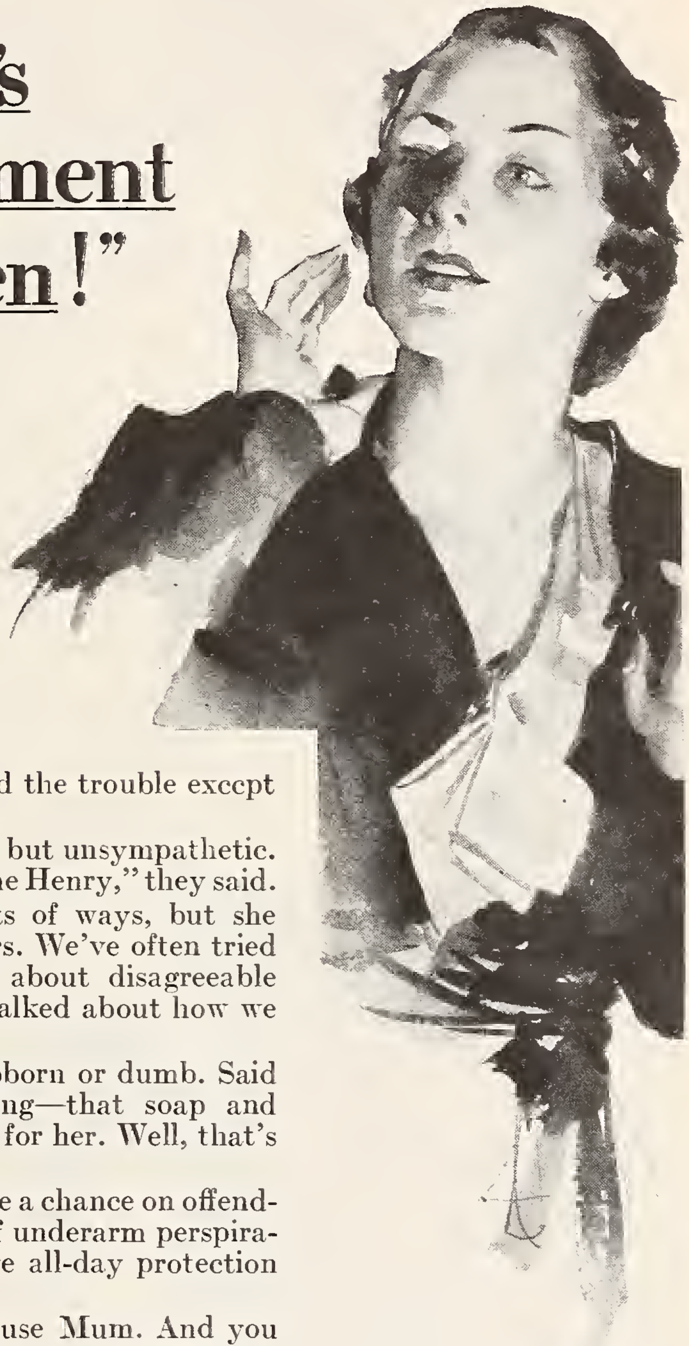
A READER of Terre Haute, Indiana, is werry outspoken:

I have just read the article "What Will Happen to Them in 1934?" by Dareos, one of these so-called astrologers. Modern-minded people with common sense know there is nothing in astrology. No doubt Dareos knows it himself. He is simply keen enough to cash in on his knowledge of human nature and his acquaintance with the movie colony.

Dareos seems to think that Garbo has passed her zenith. He is obviously wrong on that point, for with her great ability and fascination, she couldn't help being the

"GATHER ROUND, GIRLS"

"Peg's engagement is broken!"



EVERYBODY guessed the trouble except poor Peg herself.

Her friends were sorry but unsympathetic. "After all, you can't blame Henry," they said.

"Peg is a dear in lots of ways, but she certainly is slow in others. We've often tried to ease it over to her about disagreeable underarm odor. We've talked about how we all use Mum.

"But she's either stubborn or dumb. Said she didn't need anything—that soap and water were good enough for her. Well, that's Peg's mistake."

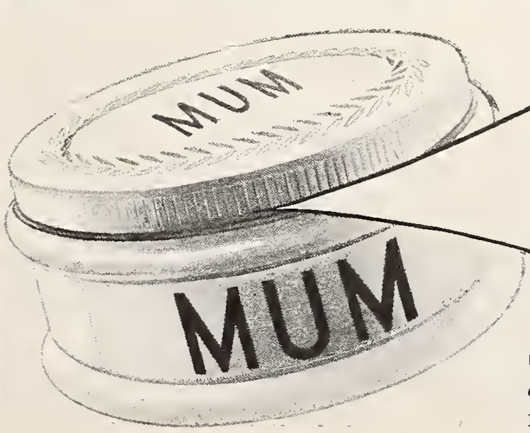
How foolish it is to take a chance on offending with the ugly odor of underarm perspiration, when you can have all-day protection in just half a minute!

That's all it takes to use Mum. And you can use it any time—after you're dressed as well as before. For it's harmless to clothing.

It's soothing to the skin, too. Prove this by shaving your underarms and using Mum immediately.

Count on Mum to keep you safe from odor without preventing the perspiration itself. Mum Mfg. Co., Inc., 75 West St., New York

NRA MEMBER U.S. WE DO OUR PART



TAKES THE ODOR OUT OF PERSPIRATION

USE MUM FOR THIS, TOO. Mum is wonderful to use as a deodorant on sanitary napkins. Enjoy its protection in this way.

A
FLUFFY-DRY
FACE POWDER
CONTAINING
Pure Olive Oil

You know how beneficial Olive Oil is to your skin . . . how it soothes, softens and protects against dryness.

Outdoor Girl is the only face powder to contain this precious ingredient—baked in by a secret, patented process.

Start using Outdoor Girl Olive Oil Face Powder today and see how it improves your skin. It will keep your complexion adorably soft and smooth all winter!

In 7 smart shades to blend with any complexion. At leading drug, department and chain stores—50c, 25c, 10c. Mail the coupon for generous samples.

OUTDOOR GIRL
OLIVE OIL FACE POWDER

CRYSTAL CORPORATION, DEPT. 50D
WILLIS AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY

Please send me Free Trial Packages of 5 skin-blending shades of Outdoor Girl Olive Oil Face Powder.

NAME..

ADDRESS....................................

CITY.......................STATE.........

Skin Troubles . . .
YIELD AMAZINGLY
TO NEW TREATMENT
Doctor Finds

We wish every sufferer from such skin ailments as eczema, boils and itching could read a leading doctor's recent article in a well-known medical magazine. It told of the amazing relief obtained in several groups of skin sufferers, with a "colloidal aluminum compound" (or CAC) treatment. In one group every case showed improvement; results were "remarkable" in nearly all. "CAC" treatment has been so successful that doctors are taking it up right and left.

Now you can buy this "CAC" antiseptic at any drug store under the name HYDROSAL. Either liquid or ointment is highly effective—not only for boils and eczema, but for poison ivy, burns, cuts and sunburn. Wonderful as a gargle too, in liquid form—so soothing and refreshing. Remember to ask for HYDROSAL at any druggist's

Hydrosal

$2.15
29x4.40-21
NEW LOW PRICES
GOOD YEAR
Firestone - Goodrich
U.S. AND OTHERS
LOWEST PRICES ON EARTH
12 MONTH WRITTEN GUARANTY BOND WITH EACH TIRE
MEMBER NRA
FREE! TIRE GAUGE
WITH EACH ORDER FOR 2 TIRES
TAKE TIRE PRESSURE THRU SIDE WALL of TIRE
NO FUSS—NO DIRT

TIRE USERS

by the thousands all over the U. S. A. vouch for the LONG, HARD SERVICE, under severest road conditions of our standard brand Tires reconstructed by the ORIGINAL SECRET YORK PROCESS. OUR 17 YEARS IN BUSINESS makes it possible to offer tires at LOWEST PRICES in history with 12 month guarantee.

Don't Delay—Order Today

BALLOON Tires			CORD Tires
Size Rim	Tires	Tubes	Size	Tires	Tubes
29x4.40-21	$2.15	$0.85	30x3	$2.25	$0.65
29x4.50-20	2.35	0.85	30x3½	2.35	0.75
30x4.50-21	2.40	0.85	31x4	2.95	0.85
28x4.75-19	2.45	0.95	32x4	2.95	0.85
29x4.75-20	2.50	0.95	33x4	2.95	0.85
29x5.00-19	2.85	1.05	34x4	3.25	0.85
30x5.00-20	2.85	1.05	32x4½	3.35	1.15
28x5.25-18	2.90	1.15	33x4½	3.45	1.15
29x5.25-19	2.95	1.15	34x4½	3.45	1.15
30x5.25-20	2.95	1.15	30x5	3.65	1.35
31x5.25-21	3.25	1.15	33x5	3.75	1.45
28x5.50-18	3.35	1.15	35x5	3.95	1.55
29x5.50-19	3.35	1.15
30x6.00-18	3.40	1.15
31x6.00-19	3.40	1.15
32x6.00-20	3.45	1.25
33x6.00-21	3.65	1.25
32x6.50-20	3.75	1.35

All Other Sizes

DEALERS WANTED

SEND ONLY $1.00 DEPOSIT with each tire ordered. We ship — balance C. O. D. Deduct 5 per cent if cash in full accompanies order.

ALL TUBES BRAND NEW—GUARANTEED

Tires failing to give 12 months' service replaced at half price.

YORK TIRE & RUBBER CO., Dept. 2212A
3855-59 Cottage Grove Ave. Chicago, Ill.

star of stars as long as she remains on the screen. (Aw, say, now—maybe you were just mad because of what Dareos said about Garbo?)

Here's An Amusing One!

ALICE HENRY, of Ridgway, Penna., brings up a nice point:

Allow me as a movie fan to say that M-G-M and Hollywood needn't drop Lee Tracy. Holy cats! They say he was nude. Is it any worse for a man than a woman? They seem to be delighted when the gals are like that—or almost. (Um—quite so, Alice. But the facts of that little Mexican matter are coming out—a new fact every day. It seems that Tracy was quite well covered, thank you. That he was on a high balcony. That no one objected to his hilarity, particularly, until the newspapers made a fuss about it. And that, furthermore, so many fans have been demanding his reinstatement, that it will probably take place before you read this.)

The Producers Shouldn't Go Scot Free—No Sir!

THELMA—of some town in New York state which we can't decipher—feels that stars are criticized too much:

I want to put in my kick with both feet. I believe the producers pick stories for their best bets by lottery—on the morning after.

Ye gods! Look at Warner Baxter's leading ladies and stories, for example.

Why don't they make "Tale of Two Cities" with Warner Baxter—as they said they were going to do?

Regarding the "new men" problem—the trouble isn't with our leading men. It's just that Hollywood should chloroform about twenty "experts" in each studio and hire one casting director who knows his stuff.

A Suggestion for a New Movie Team

DOROTHIE GRIFFIN, of Tehachapi, California, has a new co-starring idea:

My favorite actor is Gary Cooper and my favorite actress is Norma Shearer. Would it be possible for the necessary studio-loaning to be done and have them make a picture together? Some good Western story—yes, I mean it. Not the cheap melodrama kind, but one with real romance and yet realistic enough for all fans.

Madge, Take a Bow

JOHN CARDEN, of Philadelphia, Pa., says:

I have been buying Modern Screen for a long time, and in a recent issue I like best the stories on Joan Crawford and Marlene Dietrich, and the portraits of Irene Dunne and Ann Harding. I like these stars and many others, too, but of all the stars in Hollywood I like Madge Evans best. And I cannot tell you how much I'd like and appreciate a portrait, a cover, or a story on Madge Evans. (There's a story on Madge coming out in our May issue.)

Hooray for the Stars and Stripes—and Katharine Hepburn

J. BRERETON CHAMBERLIN, of Sussex, Eng., wants us to know that:

As an English fan, and as one of the American film producer's keen admirers, I would like to congratulate RKO on Katharine Hepburn, besides many excellent pictures made by the only nation which can produce movies.

Hepburn rates along with Garbo. To me, they resemble one another very much, far more so than Dietrich.

Please may we see Hepburn with Gable? I shall never forget "Susan Lennox," the best film I've seen yet. The worst one I've ever seen was "I Loved You Wednesday." What do you see in Elissa Landi over there? I think she is—well I won't say it.

No Alterations, Please!

MARGARET D. KILLE, of Collingswood, N. J., explodes:

Why do they want to re-tailor the version of the "Merry Widow" to fit anyone? M-G-M has people in its own studio who are fitted for the beautiful original version.

As for putting Chevalier in it, that is a laugh. As a singer, he is a flop. As far as Joan Crawford is concerned, she is a jazz dancer. Of course, if they are making a burlesque out of it, this team would be great.

Why not give it to the one and only one who has everything for the part and that is the girl with the golden voice, Jeanette MacDonald? Have a good male singer and graceful dancer for the prince, and the picture will be a success.

The Sullavan Girl Is Okay

A. C. DARDEN, of Orange,

N. J., went for her in a big way:

"Only Yesterday," was a great picture. I used to dislike love pictures more than I can say. But when a film like "Only Yesterday" is shown, no one can help but like it. Margaret Sullavan's acting was simply perfect. It really touched me.

Wants More Man-Appeal

THEODORE A. GEISLER, of Davenport, Iowa, thinks we've been leaving the poor males out in the cold:

Every bit of your magazine is O. K., if one can only take time out to read every article, ad and squib of news. I have done so this month. In looking over the "Between You and Me" page, I want you to know how I feel about Francis Ressell's comment. I agree with him in saying that your magazine caters almost entirely to the "weaker" sex. It would be so much better if you were only half for the "stronger" and their doings. I would be interested, for instance, in a monthly page on men's clothes, accessories and so forth. (MODERN SCREEN for March contained a very helpful "beauty article" for men.)

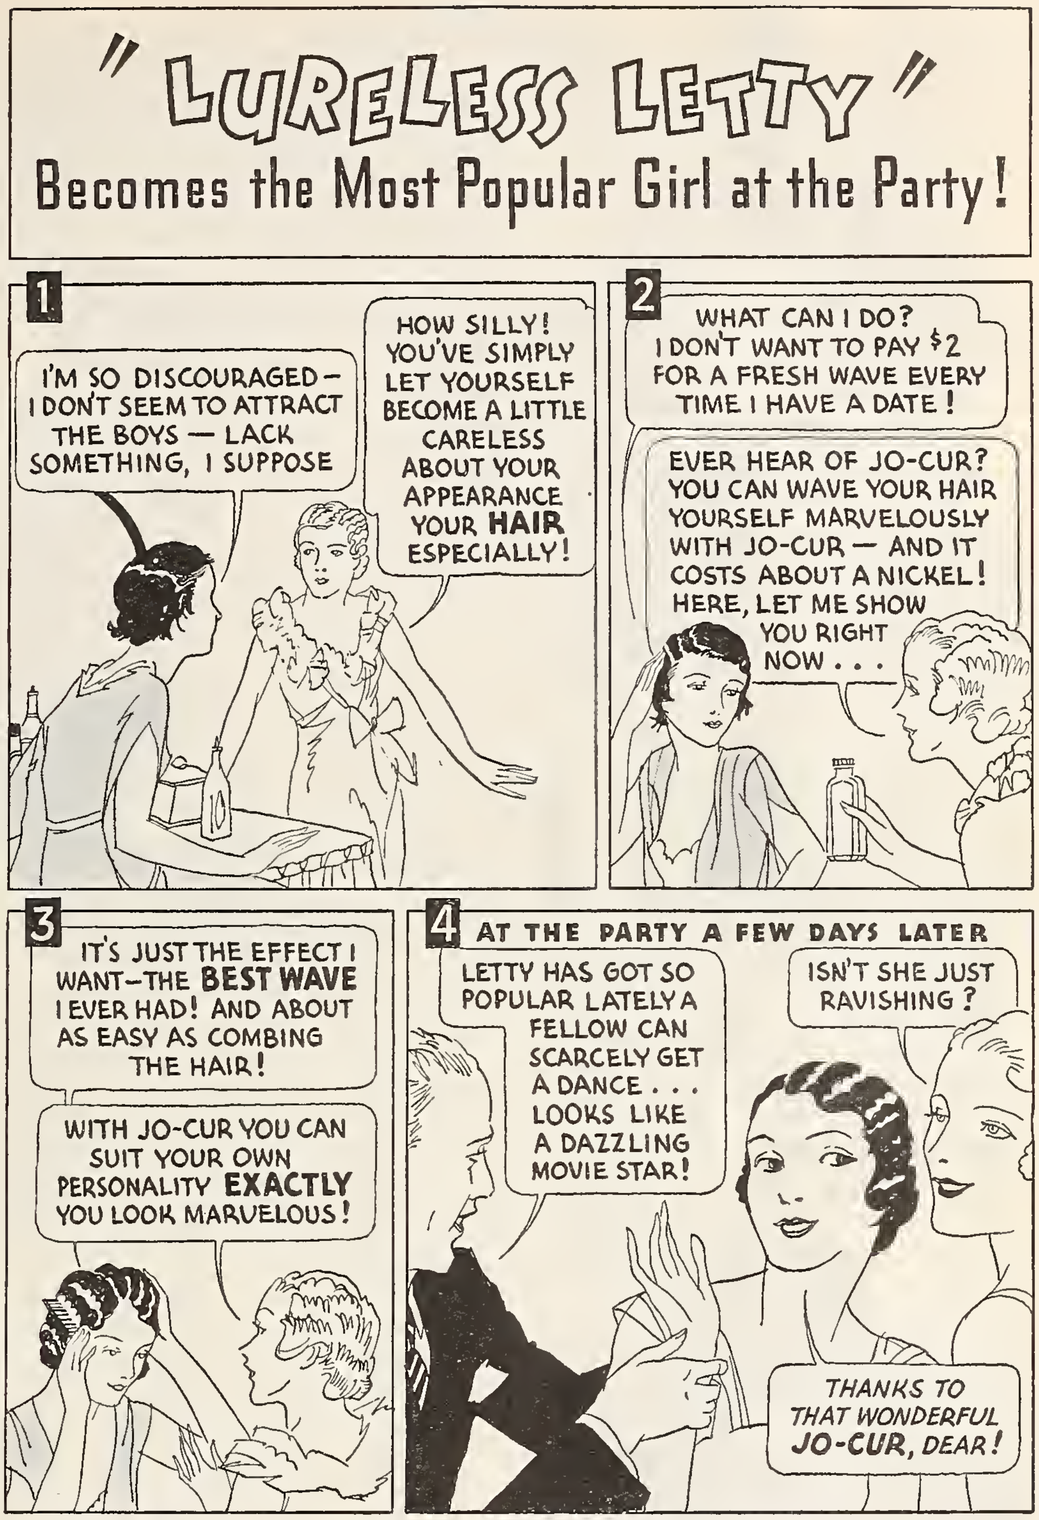
"For Joan, from Kathryn"

KATHRYN WHITE, of Englewood, N. J., pays a tribute to Joan Crawford:

Of all the people in Hollywood, both men and women, I would like to know Joan Crawford. Funny isn't it, coming from a girl? You probably think I should "adore" Clark Gable, "love" Gene Raymond and think Robert Montgomery is "sweet." But you see, I don't.

If I were to meet Joan, one of my greatest dreams would be realized. Because ever since I saw her in "The Duke Steps Out," I've adored her. Do you blame me? There isn't a finer, nicer, more idealistic girl in Hollywood. I want to meet her because I want to prove to myself that she is as perfect as I think she is. I want to be like her. I could dress and look like her, but still I wouldn't be "her." It's something more than clothes and beauty. It's Individuality. It's Personality.

Not long ago, I sent her a letter and I told her how much I thought of her. Then one day soon thereafter, she sent me a beautiful photo of herself and on it she had written, "For Kathryn, from Joan Crawford." I sent her a letter of thanks, I was so glad. Gosh. I hardly expected her to do such a



"LURELESS LETTY"
Becomes the Most Popular Girl at the Party!
1
I'M SO DISCOURAGED– I DON'T SEEM TO ATTRACT THE BOYS — LACK SOMETHING, I SUPPOSE
HOW SILLY! YOU'VE SIMPLY LET YOURSELF BECOME A LITTLE CARELESS ABOUT YOUR APPEARANCE YOUR HAIR ESPECIALLY!
2
WHAT CAN I DO? I DON'T WANT TO PAY $2 FOR A FRESH WAVE EVERY TIME I HAVE A DATE!
EVER HEAR OF JO-CUR? YOU CAN WAVE YOUR HAIR YOURSELF MARVELOUSLY WITH JO-CUR — AND IT COSTS ABOUT A NICKEL! HERE, LET ME SHOW YOU RIGHT NOW . . .
3
IT'S JUST THE EFFECT I WANT–THE BEST WAVE I EVER HAD! AND ABOUT AS EASY AS COMBING THE HAIR!
WITH JO-CUR YOU CAN SUIT YOUR OWN PERSONALITY EXACTLY YOU LOOK MARVELOUS!
4
AT THE PARTY A FEW DAYS LATER
LETTY HAS GOT SO POPULAR LATELY A FELLOW CAN SCARCELY GET A DANCE . . . LOOKS LIKE A DAZZLING MOVIE STAR!
ISN'T SHE JUST RAVISHING?
THANKS TO THAT WONDERFUL JO-CUR, DEAR!

Have That "Ritzy" Fingerwave

in Your Own Home Tonight

NOTHING "lures" like lovely hair! Thanks to a marvelous new French discovery, today it is totally unnecessary ever to sacrifice charm by having hair straggly and unattractive. Indeed, it happens you can have the same wonderful fingerwaves that the famous stars of the stage and movies have. Set them yourself! Try JO-CUR Waveset—today!

With the big bottle of JO-CUR, for 25c, you get 5 perfect waves—each of which might cost you $2 or more at an expensive hairdresser's. Each lasts a full week. And fingerwaving your hair with JO-CUR is about as quick and easy as combing it!

Remember, JO-CUR is different from any other waveset known. JO-CUR is made with a quince-seed base —not cheap gum, which makes the hair gummy and sticky. JO-CUR will not leave white flakes. If you have a permanent, JO-CUR will preserve its beauty far longer . . . Double your "appeal"! Express your VIVID PERSONALITY—bring out YOUR loveliness as never before—TONIGHT!

Get your bottle of JO-CUR at any drug or department store, or, in the trial size, at the 10c store.

Jo-cur
PRONOUNCED "JOKER"
WAVESET

Jo-cur
WAVESET
FINGER WAVING
WATER WAVING

LARGE TUBES 10¢ & 25¢
ALL COLORS
CARBONA SHOE POLISH

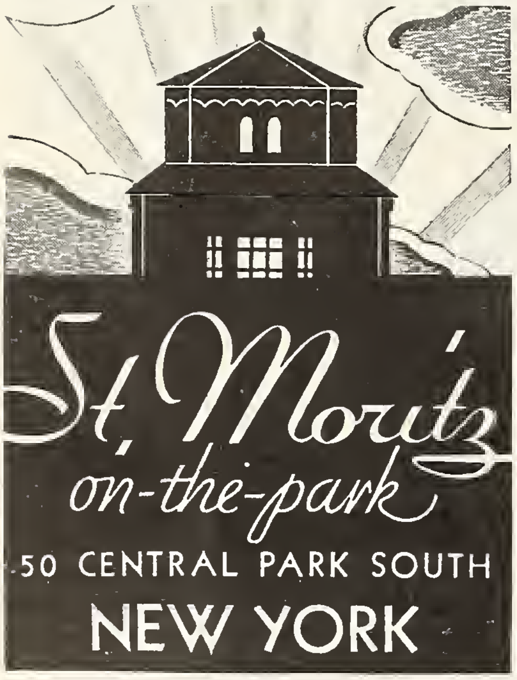
CARBONA
SHOE POLISH
ALSO CARBONA SHOE WHITENER

Brand New AS LOW AS $19.75
TYPEWRITER
On Easy Terms
Only 10c a Day

New Low Price—Standard 4-row keyboard—Fully Guaranteed. Sent on 10 day trial.

SENSATIONAL BARGAINS
Send for our Special bargain catalog offering standard refinished office models at about ⅓ mfg's org'l price. Send no money—10 day trial.

International Typewriter Exch., 231 W. Monroe St. Dept. 461, Chicago



Direction: S. GREGORY TAYLOR

INTERESTING ALWAYS!
Famous people from all over the world make this their New York home.

RATES: Single, $3.50-$5;
Double, $5-$7; Suites from $8

Dancing nightly in the NEW CONTINENTAL GRILL. And the only RUMPELMAYER'S in America.

swell thing. Anyway I shall always adore her for it. I'll always treasure it and some day I'm going to Hollywood and thank her personally. I'll never forget her! (Charming sentiments, Kate. And Joan is deserving of your highest esteem.)

Curves vs. Curves

MARY BARKER, of Hartford, Conn., points out the difference:

This is the first time I've ever written to a movie magazine, but, then, there's never been a Jean Harlow! She's marvelous, gorgeous, and a wonderful actress.

Mae West is all right, but for looks—she's, well, she's fat. Ugh! Curves are okay when they're slender and beautifully proportioned as Jean's are. Give us more pictures of this gorgeous person teamed with Clark Gable. "Hold Your Man" was swell.

Tell Joan Crawford to get off her high horse, please. (Joan on a high horse? No, we don't think so. And neither will you after you've read "I'm a Terrible Person," in this issue. Name us an actress who'd be as frank and honest with her fans?)

A Profile Ain't Everything

LILLIAN FOSTER, of Hartford, Conn., is just plain disgusted:

I would like to express my opinion of handsome actors and those who aren't so handsome. Take Frank McHugh. His work is convincing and his personality clicks. We like him. We're tired of the so-called good-lookers with their false teeth, waved hair, like a beauty salon's advertisement, ears taped back. In other words, enough alterations to be worthy of a first-class fitting room.

Give the public actors with real acting ability. Stop featuring men who have to be all made over to be the ones who get the Mae West invitations. (Aw, Lillian, give 'em a break. Don't be so hard on our Gables, Grants, Crosbys and Chevaliers. They're good guys and we like 'em.)

More Mysteries

HARVEY HANCOCKS, of Oakland, Calif., got a big kick out of seeing the "invisible":

Am I scared of the big, bad "Invisible Man"? I am not. Boy, oh, boy, give us another one of those mysteries. I'm strong for 'em. You betcha my life. Can you give Claude Rains a break so we can see what he looks like? The "Invisible Man" was sorta different, I thought, in the way of mysteries. He played remarkably well, also, in "Frankenstein."

I saw another picture that was great, too. All due credit goes to Frankie Darro and his pal in "Wild Boys of the Road." Makes a fella glad to have a home. Guess I would have done the same thing if I were in their shoes. Wish I could meet a fella like Frankie some day. (No, Harvey, you're mistaken about "Frankenstein." That was Boris Karloff, remember? He may do "The Return of Frankenstein," too.)

He Has What It Takes

FRANK DENNIS, of Bedford, Va., knows a good actor when he sees one:

It appears that we have a new leading man. He's listed as Otto Kruger, has wonderfully expressive eyes and a fine face. He and Barbara Stanwyck reach the top of the ladder of screen artistry in "Ever In My Heart." How would Irene Dunne or Ann Harding stand out, with his support, in another "Back Street," for instance? ("Gallant Lady" has your two favorites, Otto and Ann.)

Prince Charming

GOLDIE SNYDER, of Timmins, Canada, has a yen for Baby LeRoy:

I think he's just too cute for words. But just wait till he can talk. Then he'll say, "Tum up an' tee me tum time." Let's hope we'll see his picture on the cover of MODERN SCREEN soon. There can be ten Crawfords, twenty Garbos, and forty Mae Wests, but give me Baby LeRoy.

A Sensible Attitude

ELIZABETH HART, of Baltimore, Md., says a thing or two:

It was with real satisfaction that I read Lee Tracy's statement concerning that Mexican affair in MODERN SCREEN. Lee Tracy is an excellent actor and a grand guy, so if he says there was no balcony, then there was no balcony.

Moreover, suppose the most fantastic version of the story were true, what of it? Surely Lee has afforded us all enough amusement on the screen to be allowed to have a little fun in his own fashion. People with exceptional talent should not be bound by all the rigid rules that govern the rest of us commonplace mortals. It will be the greatest piece of nonsense imaginable if this little escapade is allowed to affect, adversely, his future career.

JOAN ZAPPA, of Merrie England, joins in with:

This is my first letter to any screen magazine and I wish to congratulate you on being the only magazine that gave Lee Tracy a chance to speak out for himself.

Mr. Tracy is an excellent actor and has given much to the screen, and I hope all Lee Tracy's fans will be quick to show their appreciation by supporting him.

Shake Hands, Eric

JESSIE ORR, of Astoria, L. I., has a wish:

I'd like to meet Eric Linden because I admire him on the screen. His personality is so different from that of any person I have ever known. When he plays a part on the screen, he isn't acting it—it just comes natural, as if he really meant it. And I'd like to see for myself if he is really like that. That's why I'd like to meet him. (The last time we heard from him, Eric was in Capri, France. He wanted to get away from Hollywood for a while. Seems he was sad over the Dee-McCrea marriage.)

Warning! Danger Ahead

One of our constant readers, CAROL LEE, from far-off New Zealand, is disappointed in an old favorite:

Maurice Chevalier used to be my favorite actor, but he has become so disgustingly sex-conscious that he is now just a pain in the neck. Why, oh why, don't the producers give him more pictures like "Innocents of Paris"? The tripe they are dishing out now is far beneath him, and as he is on the downward path it would pay them well if they shook themselves up a bit and put on their blinkers. (So it's spread to New Zealand, too, has it?)

Picture Boners

P. S. C., no address given, scrutinizes the films with an eagle eye:

In "Penthouse" you will recall the scene in which Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy are seen eating breakfast on the terrace of his penthouse apartment. It shows Miss Loy toying with her grapefruit which is minus a cherry, when Mr. Baxter's former fiancée calls. The scene then reverts to the living room in which an argument ensues

The Smartest Women Use
FAOEN BEAUTY AIDS

FAOEN
FAOEN Poudre
FAOEN
No 3 FAOEN

—yet they cost
ONLY 10¢

You can pay $1 or more for your beauty aids, if you wish. But you can't buy finer quality than Faoen offers you for 10¢. We know that statement is hard to believe. So we asked a famous research laboratory to analyze Faoen Beauty Aids. And here's their report:

"Every Faoen product tested is as pure and fine as products of like nature sold for $1, $2 and $3."

Is it any wonder that the smartest women are now using Faoen? Join them—today!

PARK & TILFORD'S
FAOEN
No 44

No. 44
A New FAOEN
Perfume Triumph!
This is an exact duplicate in fragrance of a popular and expensive imported perfume. You will marvel at this new perfume masterpiece —and its price of only 10¢.

PARK & TILFORD'S
FAOEN
(FAY-ON)
Beauty Aids

● CLEANSING CREAM • COLD CREAM
FACE POWDER • ROUGES • PERFUMES

10¢ each at the better 5 & 10¢ Stores

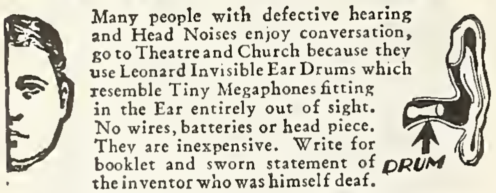
FUNNY
in an advertisement . . .
TRAGIC in life!

You've read it and smiled—"A beautiful face he adored, neglected hands he abhorred!" But it does happen and it needn't!

F-O Nail Polish changes ungroomed fingertips into gleaming, rose-tipped ones he'll love to touch. It makes fingers sing—"Look at us, lovely as a debutante's, though we're busy as bees all day long." Spreads evenly, lasts unbelievably long, comes in five shades for all modes and moods. Also F-O Nail Polish Remover and F-O Cuticle Remover. Fort Orange Chemical Co., Albany, N.Y.

At all better Chains.

F-O
NAIL POLISH
Pink
F-O
NAIL POLISH
10¢



DEAFNESS IS MISERY

Many people with defective hearing and Head Noises enjoy conversation, go to Theatre and Church because they use Leonard Invisible Ear Drums which resemble Tiny Megaphones fitting in the Ear entirely out of sight. No wires, batteries or head piece. They are inexpensive. Write for booklet and sworn statement of the inventor who was himself deaf.

A. O. LEONARD, Inc., Suite 986, 70 5th Ave., New York DRUM

FREE TEST
BUNIONS
Reduced Quickly

Pain stops almost instantly! Then blessed relief. Fairyfoot gradually reduces painful, ugly bunions. Enables you to wear smaller shoes. No cumbersome appliances. No messy salves. Used on over 2,000,000 feet since 1897. Write for FREE trial treatment. Fairyfoot Products Co., Chicago, Ill. 1223 S. Wabash Ave., Dept. 2714

3 Perfumes

SUBTLE, fascinating, alluring. Sell regularly for $12.00 an ounce. Made from the essence of flowers:—

Three odors:
(1) Romanza
(2) Lily of the Valley
(3) Esprit de France

A single drop lasts a week!

Send only 30¢

To pay for postage and handling send only 30c (silver or stamps) for 3 trial bottles. Only one set to each new customer. PAUL RIEGER, 172 First St., San Francisco, Calif.

between the former lovers. When Miss Loy returns to the terrace and her grapefruit, lo and behold, a great big red cherry is perched on it. (The flaws which you found in "Prizefighter and the Lady" and "Going Hollywood" were interesting to note, too.)

Nils Asther—Romantic Hero

F. X. LAUDETTE, of New Brunswick, Canada, says:

I really think your magazine is the best of the movie books and the stories are most interesting, especially the biographical ones. But I've never read a story on Nils Asther, one of the screen's most talented actors. I think he's far more romantic than Gable, or Barrymore, or even Gilbert. Please give us a good story on him. (Read "Nils Asther—Enemy of Hooey," which appeared in our March number. It's a swell yarn.)

Three Cheers for the Old Stand-Bys

E. M. SWANSON, of Claremont, S. D., is hopping mad:

Hurray for Franklin Davis, of Charlottesville, Va.! I've been steaming up over that very same thing for some time. And when Faith Baldwin came out with her article, "New Men—Where Are They?" I just about flew off the handle. Now, why lament about the non-appearance of new men when we have such swell old actors—not in age, perhaps, but in experience, I mean.

If We Get Enough Requests, Maybe We'll Weaken

TWO CLARK GABLE FANS rave about him:

If anyone deserves orchids, Clark Gable does. He's swell. We just saw "Dancing Lady" and he was at his best in that picture. And can't Joan Crawford dance?

Why don't you have actors on your covers and make Clark number one?

Gorgeous Kay

S. MC. appreciates Kay Francis' artistry:

What about "The House on 56th Street"? That's the best picture I've seen in a long time. Perhaps it's because Kay Francis has an opportunity to show a little of what she can do. She is lovely from start to finish. Have you ever noticed how much she gets out of a part?

DELIGHTED FAN, of Albany, N. Y., agrees with S. MC.:

Kay Francis deserves a great big round of applause for her beautiful performance in "The House on 56th Street." She was gorgeous. All in all, the picture was perfect.

Word Pictures

EVELYN McLEAN, of Cheney, Wash., sends us a few impressions of the stars:

Jean Harlow: white fire, icy diamonds; warm ivory; a first snowfall.

Clara Bow: "Please like me!" Smouldering embers; poignant sorrow, rubies; a vivid sunrise.

Fay Wray: Mischief; amber glass; pale rose satin; dreams.

Marion Davies: Sparkle; Christmas trees; New Year's parties; pigtails and freckles; high school.

Lilian Harvey: wire-haired terriers; bubbly springs; twinkly stars; first party gown.

The Sweet and Innocent Types Appeal to Her

EVELYN WANDELT, of Jackson Heights, N. Y., is tired of the sophisticates of the screen:

Ruby Keeler is real. Not the exaggerated type of girl like a few of those stars. Her voice lingers in one's ears long after it is heard. Her smile has that appealing shyness and wistfulness that none of the sophisticated stars have. She has natural beauty, natural acting ability. That's why we all like her. Let me continue—she's demure, ravishing, altogether entrancing.

MODERN SCREEN
ON THE AIR

Want to know who is dating who in Hollywood this week?

Which of our great stars is marrying, babying, divorcing?

It's on the air each week in the MODERN SCREEN REVUE.

WMCA
New York

WPRO
Providence

They Visit New York

(Continued from page 35)

dollars (which he can't afford) for a pure-bred Irish wolfhound.

* * *

Probably the ten most beautiful women in New York, the week she was here, was Dolores Del Rio. There's a gal that's actually breathtaking. You look at her and wonder if it's real, and then she looks at Cedric Gibbons, and you know it is!

"Gibby" is the young woman's husband and the art director at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Therefore, an authority on beauty and the legal custodian of a Del Rio. The gentleman is also what is known as very "social." Remember, he is Veronica Balfe's uncle. Mrs. Gary Cooper, you know. They may all be found somewhere between the covers of the Blue Book.

Thus the Gibbonses did a lot of gadding about in the Park Avenue sector while in town and very little on Broadway. During the day, Dolores made the rounds of the smarter shops and bought herself another wardrobe. And here's an item that might interest you. Most of her clothes selections were made from last fall's stock, and comprised conservative models moderately priced. None of this "ahead of the minute" business for Del Rio. She has no aspirations to the "best dressed" title, which has most of the Hollywood gals slightly dazed. They'd almost rather be dead than out of style, you know.

* * *

Another smart little girl who goes merrily on her own way, dripping in mink and fame, is Sylvia Sidney. All Sylvia desires is good roles in pictures and to keep her name out of the gossip columns. She was in New York several days before the sleuths were even aware of her presence. Not that the Sidney is doing a Garbo, but she just isn't interested—and she isn't proclaiming her lack of desire for publicity, either. Which, you must admit, comes under the head of "news."

Having made "Good Dame," Miss Sidney trekked east for a vacation and, being a native New Yorker, this is the noisy place wherein she can enjoy a rest.

* * *

WHEN you see "Gallant Lady," you'll see Janet Beecher. Miss Beecher is as well-known in the theatre as Amos 'n' Andy are to radio fans. But she has just made her picture debut and made the individual hit of the talkie under discussion.

"Let's Put Our Heads Together On This, Dear!"

Posed by Florence Lake and Edgar Kennedy, RKO Radio players

She: "You've been entirely too cranky lately, and something's got to be done about it."

He: "Sorry, dear, but I can't sleep at night. I'm always tired, and I see spots before my eyes."

She: "Tsk. Tsk. Tsk. You've been working too hard at the office. What you need is my favorite tonic!"

He: "What's that?"

She: "Why, the laugh tonic, of course—

FILM FUN

The Humor Magazine of Hollywood

Pick up a copy next time you pass a newsstand. It's great for that tired feeling!"

ENRICH YOUR PERSONALITY WITH THIS EXOTIC PERFUME IRRESISTIBLE
USE
ACTUAL TEN CENT SIZE
Irresistible
PARFUM
OBTAINABLE AT YOUR FIVE AND TEN CENT STORE
JOUBERT • PARFUMEUR
FIFTH AVENUE • NEW YORK

KILL THE HAIR ROOT

My method positively prevents hair from growing again. Safe, easy, permanent. Use it privately at home. The delightful relief will bring happiness, freedom of mind and greater success.

We teach Beauty Culture. Send 6c in stamps TODAY for Booklet. For promptness in writing me, I will include a $2.00 Certificate for Mahler Beauty Preparations.

D. J. Mahler Co., Dept. 36D, Providence, R. I.

D. J. MAHLER
Beauty Specialist

"Her Blonde Hair won me!"

ROMANCE always comes to blondes who keep their hair golden. And it's so easy with Blondex. This special shampoo not only prevents darkening—but safely restores natural golden color to dull, faded light hair. Brings out sparkling lights—adds gleaming radiance. Not a dye. No harmful chemicals. Fine for scalp. Used and recommended by scores of famous blonde movie stars. Two sizes—$1.00 and 25¢. Get Blondex today and see how beautiful your hair can be.

NEW! Have you tried Blondex Wave-Set? Doesn't darken light hair like ordinary wave-sets. Not sticky or flaky. Only 35¢.

And now she is back in New York temporarily, ensconced in her own apartment, living the life of a very sane person instead of the hectic existence of a celebrity. When she gets her thoughts organized and her ideas arranged from her last Cinema City visit, she will start packing for her next. For, Miss Beecher is to play opposite George Arliss in a forthcoming, as-yet-untitled production.

She wants to know all about acting in the movies and, so eager is she to learn the tricks, we imagine she'd stop the policeman on the corner if she thought he could give her any pointers. If the lady ever knew, she plays cards and spades around most of the film famous at the present writing.

She has a very severe critic who believes in giving her the bad news, if any, right off the bat. He is her twelve-year-old son and may possibly take advantage of the relationship to get off a lot of humdingers!

* * *

We always get a thrill seeing a Sweet Young Thing, armed with talent and beauty, off to Hollywood to embark on a movie career. And this month it was Pauline True's turn.

Pauline owns a lovely face and figure and a dramatic coach, Edith Becton Uhrbrock, who has great faith in her. With all this on the credit side of the books, she worked like a little Trojan, so that when it came time to take a film test, she was all set for the ordeal—as ordeal it is!

This girl you have often seen on the magazine covers came through with flying colors, for her intelligence came in handy, too. And so, we sort of like to fancy ourself a prophet and predict that Pauline True is destined to become a winner. When she does, we are going to get ourself a crystal ball and awning tent and open up a Madame Zaza booth in Coney Island!

* * *

CARL BRISSON arrived from across the sea with a Paramount contract and a reputation for being a veritable dazzler wherever ladies gather. In fact, rumor hath it that in the not-so-good old days, when Garbo sold millinery and Carl tripped the musical comedy boards, the Swedish damsel was that much in love with him! Indeed, nothing parted them but the breadth of the footlights, which, at that, can make the Grand Canyon look like a mere crack when it comes to separating hither from yon or a girl from her heart's desire. In those days, Greta sent her idol violets, but since the card was marked Miss Gustafsen, the star merely relegated the nosegay to "among those odds and ends from women."

Several years later, however, Mr. Brisson sent the Garbo boxes of roses, but that, of course, was when Greta was interested in somebody else. Oh, this Life! Doesn't it get you down!

Brisson landed with a wife and several trunks and, some say, a son, a grown-up feller who might make daddy seem a bit passé if folks were good at mathematics. So wife and son graciously stayed in the background while the hero did his stuff.

Carl declares Hollywood isn't going to spoil him. He knows all the answers and the famous and near-famous won't be able to trip him up. Paramount has announced "Murder at the Vanities" as his first picture, and when you see him, you'll become enamored, because the gentleman has plenty of "what it takes" to make headway cinematically.

* * *

WHEN Sophie Tucker throws a party, it's a party! One of those memorable events that you contemplate even after the corsage has faded and the headache has disappeared.

Recently, Sophie celebrated her birthday at the Hollywood—a swanky night club, doubtless so named because it is situated on Broadway, New York! That's the way they do things around this town.

Well, just about everybody and his wife—or someone else's—attended the big soiree. There was Eddie Cantor, Harry Richman, Janet Gaynor, Barbara Stanwyck, Frank Fay, Nita Naldi and a host of others, there to give the great big girl a much bigger hand.

The Tucker is due on the camera coast any minute to make two pictures. First, "Husband Hunter," an independent for Monogram and then to put over a few snappy song numbers in "Murder at the Vanities."

* * *

Some people aren't permitted a day off even when on vacation; especially when on vacation, we might say. There were, for instance, Lionel Barrymore, Miriam Hopkins and May Robson, all set to make a little mild whoopee in our town when the producers got wind of it.

Before you could say Jack Robinson—or is it Edward G.?—the Paramount theatre had Miriam in a sketch from "Affairs of Anatole." Such a sensation did the little sex appeal lady prove, that Chicago, Detroit and Boston wired offers and, not averse to making a little money, she accepted 'em. But her holiday was shot to—the road.

The Capitol Theatre put in a bid for Miss Robson and Mr. Barrymore to be featured in separate skits and they, too, brought out the "Standing Room Only" signs.

* * *

The Ricardo Cortezes are among us, on a sort of honeymoon trip. They are only to be here a week, so are missing none of the night spots, theatres and shops. It all comes under the head of a grand whirl and Ric, a born and bred New Yorker, declares he feels like a hick, it's been so long since he visited the big town.

No sooner were they established at the Ritz than telegrams from the coast began to appear. Each of 'em wanted to know when Cortez would be back. The gentleman is needed in the talkies, it seems. He is doing splendidly, always giving a fine account of himself. The only little item Ric had to overcome was a "Valentino" hangover from the old silent days. He never wanted to be anybody's successor, but, by gosh, the studio wished it on him. And he says he isn't Spanish either and never in his life has gone for a senorita nor an onion. More publicity—ill-advised. Cortez is just a regular guy and a pretty swell actor.

Crawford Contest Winners

(Continued from page 8)

The five sixth prizes of $10.00 each, to:

Mr. E. J. Bresendine
625 East Quincy
San Antonio, Texas

Mr. Gene Hodge
292 Oakland
Pontiac, Mich.

Dr. Ralston Reed,
65 Washington Street
Morristown, N. J.

Mr. Claude E. Thawley
5135 Parrish Street
Philadelphia, Pa.

Mr. Jimmie Wentz
919 Ninth Avenue
Hickory, N. C.

The ten seventh prizes of $5.00 each, to:

Miss Florence L. Kraus
250 South Georgia Avenue
Mobile, Ala.

Miss Vivian Martin
1004 Churchman Avenue
Indianapolis, Ind.

Miss Justine Huntley Ulp
56 South Washington Street
Rochester, N. Y.

You can't "Kill" colds
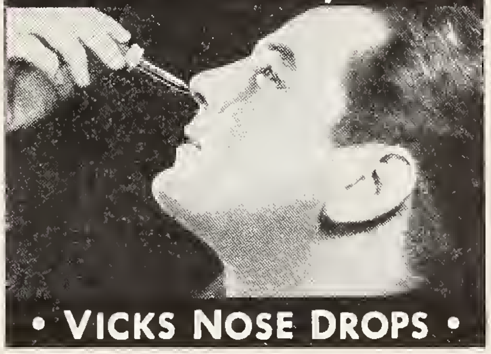
. . but you may
CONTROL them

DON'T run risks with so-called "cold-killing" remedies. It's so easy to upset the system with unwise internal dosing—which often lowers vitality just when it is most needed to resist disease.

Play safe with your family's health! Follow Vicks Plan for better Control of Colds. In thousands of clinical tests, supervised by physicians, it has greatly reduced the number, duration and dangers of colds. (Details of the Plan come in each Vicks package.)

To AVOID Many Colds



• VICKS NOSE DROPS •

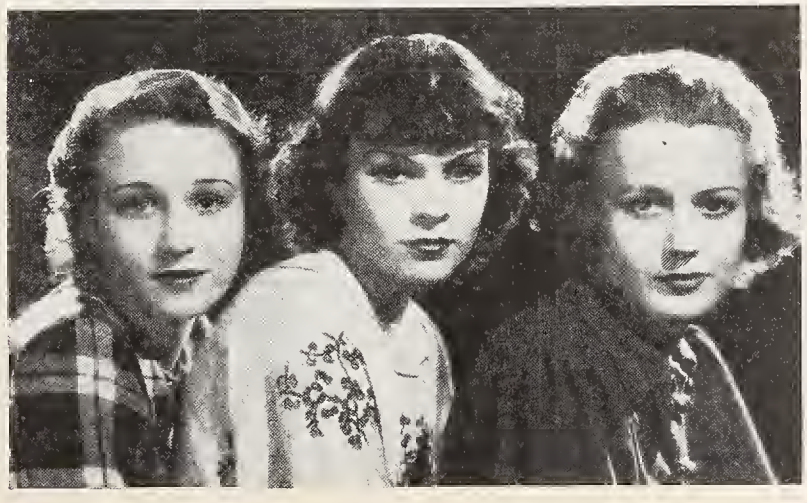
At that first nasal irritation or stuffiness, apply the new aid in preventing colds, Vicks Nose & Throat Drops. The Drops are especially designed to stimulate the functions which Nature has provided—in the nose—to throw off threatening infection.

To END A Cold Sooner

• VICKS VAPORUB •

If a cold has developed, just rub on Vicks VapoRub, the modern method of treating colds. Its poultice action "draws out" tightness. At the same time, its soothing medicated vapors carry relief direct to irritated air-passages.

VICKS PLAN FOR BETTER CONTROL OF COLDS



These three beauties decorate many of Warner Bros.' musicals. They're Lorena Layson, Pat Wing (Toby's sister), and Lynn Browning.

Don't Tuck GRAY HAIRS
Out of SIGHT

Touch them up with
FARR'S FOR GRAY HAIR
Manicuring and "facials" leave you only as young as your hair. Youthful clothes won't offset faded hair. Everyone glances at your hair if it's getting gray. Keep it lovely with FARR'S. Easy to use, without instruction in the clean privacy of home; odorless, not sticky; will not rub off or interfere with curling, marcel or permanent wave. FARR'S tints faded hair one even shade. $1.35. For sale everywhere.

FREE SAMPLE
BROOKLINE CHEMICAL CO. M.G.19
79 Sudbury Street, Boston, Mass.
Send for FREE SAMPLE in plain wrapping.
Name..
Street..
City.......................State............
STATE ORIGINAL COLOR OF HAIR

HOW TO WIN PRIZE CONTESTS This book can make you rich, or at least help you make a good living. The purpose of this book, "How to Win Prize Contests," is to help you win by setting forth the best-known principles and methods. Send 25c to Haldeman-Julius Co., Box 727, Girard, Kansas.

Let Others Envy YOU

Your youthful, petal-smooth complexion will be the envy of other girls if you cleanse, nourish and soften your skin with the famous VI-JON Creams. And think of this. You can get all three of these VI-JON Creams for less than you would pay for just one jar of the "high-priced" creams. Furthermore, VI-JON Creams equal the best in purity, delicacy, results. Try them.

VI-JON CREAMS

VI-JON
COLD CREAM
VI-JON
VANISHING CREAM
VI-JON
LIQUEFYING CREAM
10c EACH AT
5 AND 10 CENT
STORES
S-1

VI-JON LABORATORIES . . . ST. LOUIS

Mr. Leonard J. Aue,
144 Cornell Drive,
Toledo, Ohio

Miss Beatrice Kathryn Yax
58 Westgate Rd.
Kenmore, N. Y.

Miss Blanche Boyd
817 Lakeside Place
Chicago, Ill.

Mr. Stanley Royon
830 Adams Street
Beaumont, Texas

Mr. Richard Lauer
4307 Sixth Avenue
Kenosha, Wis.

Mr. Fred W. Fogwell
3210 Columbia
Cincinnati, Ohio

Mr. Harold Sherman
1907 Lorring Place
Bronx, N. Y.

There! We've more than done our Boy Scout stint for today. Twenty-nine people must be feeling rather happy. And—you disappointed ones—remember that everyone can't win. And cheer up!—because you never can tell how soon we might run another contest. And that would mean another chance for you!

Good News

(Continued from page 78)

THOSE who played the well-known instinct, put down a few sheckels on "Beverly Hills," Clark Gable's new racing pony. It was good, too, for B. H. came in leading the pack with plenty of light between. Most of the gang thought that this first race was merely the omen for more to come, so they went heavy on the nag's second run. Net result: the old 00! Clark says, "How could she win? They put 117 pounds on her back and she couldn't get away fast enough!"

GRACIE ALLEN just loves water with her dinner, so much so, in fact, that her penchant resulted in this story which is related by her w.k. husband, George. "Gracie was so scared that somebody was going to drink her glass of water at that party the other night that she put tabasco sauce in it, just to be sure!"

KEEPING TABS ON 'EM

LeRoy Printz, out at Paramount, has his nose out of joint because Earl Carroll brought twelve show girls to Hollywood for "Murder at the Vanities." Printz claims that Hollywood chorus girls are exactly 100% better than anything New York can offer. . . . John Boles hit himself in the mouth with a tennis racket, causing two stitches, but he still reports for work. . . . Al Jolson spent two weeks at Palm Springs and regained the fourteen pounds lost while making "Wonderbar." . . . 'Tis reported that Jack Dempsey and Mrs. Jack (Hannah Williams) are expecting and strangely enough, they hope it's twins. . . . Jack Oakie calls it recuperating, but he hasn't been to a night spot since his return from Honolulu. . . . Dorothea Wieck registered at the Arrowhead Lodge under a false name to insure privacy—and magazine photographers ran her ragged because the manager thought "the lady was Garbo." . . . Lilian Harvey will kill us yet. Not only has she threatened to leave the screen if her suit against Fox is not successful, but she makes the definite statement, "I will have a baby within one year"—which reminds us that she still denies that she is married!

WILL ROGERS dropped over to George White's "Scandals" set and asked, "Well, how's everything in New York?" George replied, "I hear all the shows are colossal and everybody's making lots of money." To which Will wagged, "I knew just as soon as you and Earl Carroll got off Broadway everything would pick up!"

THE GAS GAVE OUT!

Following a long day-and-evening on location at Sunland, and late at night it was, Clark Gable offered to take Claudette Colbert back to Hollywood in his car. One of the boys on the picture started a few minutes later, and soon came across the Gable car—parked alongside the road, far from town. He backed up and asked if he could be of any assistance, to which Gable replied, "No, it's nothing, just out of gas. Don't you bother about us one bit." So the Good Samaritan drove on, wondering why Clark hadn't asked him to get him some gas—or had they already sent for a supply?

HOLLYWOOD has got quite a bang out of the recent story in a recent weekly concerning "The Men in Her Life," in which the author tells all about the gents who have made up the masculine element in Ruth Chatterton's life. One of the wags snickered, "And Mae West says not one word about her past. She's too busy contemplating the future!"

SOME of the producers, we hear tell, are very sorry that they brought the whole thing up—we mean this idea of the Government going into the matter of actors' salaries. It's all right for the inspectors to find that an actor is being over-paid at $200,000.00 a year, but what if they finish the job and start wondering about the executives who draw half a million?

AFTER two full years of trying, Howard Hughes' picture "Scarface" has at last been "allowed" in Chicago. The reason they gave, all this time, for keeping the gangster picture behind the "eight ball" was the fact that it gave them a black eye by showing the power of Al Capone. They took it in person for quite a number of years, but they couldn't take it in pictures!

HOLLYWOOD has certainly taken on that post-war look of late. Guy Lombardo is packing 'em in at the Grove (they even turned away Dietrich one night) and Gene Austin, with his miniature piano, are crowding the doors of the Clover Club. And Sally Rand's in town . . . and Peter Arno (of the "Fighting Arnos") . . . and an errand boy at one of the studios was fired for making eyes at one of the stenos by an executive who has such eyes . . . and Katherine Cornell opened in "Romeo and Juliet" on the local stage . . . and the Mills Brothers are at the Cotton Club!

AN "ingenue" recently signed by Paramount was called into the publicity offices the other day and the gang started to advise her what to say to the press when she gave out interviews. "Listen," said the gal, "after a season in the 'Follies' with Harry Richman, I can take care of myself!"

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Bing Crosby has two reasons for not singing all the songs that are mailed to him: (1) he might be guilty of pirating a tune and (2) he can't read music, anyway! . . . Irene Dunne has a private driving range of 250 yards in her own back yard and will soon put in a putting practice green. . . . The audience got a huge laugh out of Charlie Chaplin the night he turned up at "I Am Suzanne" with a couple of youthful beauties and left after he had seen the sequence where the puppets imitate him. . . . One Gorgeous Lemon Pie without cooking!

Eagle Brand

MAGIC LEMON CREAM PIE

1⅓ cups (1 can) Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk
½ cup lemon juice
Grated rind of 1 lemon or ¼ teaspoon lemon extract
½ cup whipping cream
2 tablespoons finely powdered confectioners' sugar
Unbaked Crumb Crust

Blend together Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk, lemon juice and grated lemon rind. (It thickens just as though you were cooking it, to a glorious creamy smoothness!) Pour into an eight-inch pie plate lined with Unbaked Crumb Crust. Cover with whipped cream sweetened with confectioners' sugar. Chill before serving.

UNBAKED CRUMB CRUST— Roll enough vanilla wafers to make ¾ cup crumbs. Cut enough vanilla wafers in halves to stand around edge of pie plate. Cover bottom of plate with crumbs and fill in spaces between wafers. Pour in filling as usual.

Here's a lemon filling that's always perfect! Never runny. Never too thick. Try it, and you'll never make lemon pie filling the old way again!

But remember — Evaporated Milk won't — can't — succeed in this recipe. You must use Sweetened Condensed Milk. Just remember the name Eagle Brand.

FREE! "AMAZING SHORT-CUTS"!

Cut out that astonishing recipe above! Prove to yourself that it actually works. And here and now, mail this coupon, to learn a whole new kind of cooking!

The Borden Co., Dept. MM44 350 Madison Ave., New York.
Please send me FREE booklet, "Amazing Short-Cuts."

Name..........
Street..........
City.......... State..........
(Print name and address plainly)

Doug Fairbanks, Jr., and Colleen Moore get romantic in "Success Story." Doug hopped right back to England on the completion of this picture.

QUICKEST WAY TO GET RID OF CORNS
no cutting . . . no pads

ONE DROP STOPS PAIN INSTANTLY

If you want to keep your feet free from aching corns just get a bottle of FREEZONE from any druggist. Put a drop or two on the corn. Pain stops instantly, and for good! Then before you know it the corn gets so loose you can lift it right off with your fingers, easily and painlessly. It's the safe way that millions use to get rid of hard and soft corns and calluses. Works like a charm! Try it.

FREEZONE

ANY PHOTO ENLARGED

Size 8x10 inches or smaller if desired. Same price for full length or bust form, groups, landscapes, pet animals, etc., or enlargements of any part of group picture. Safe return of original photo guaranteed.

47c

SEND NO MONEY Just mail photo or snapshot (any size) and within a week you will receive your beautiful life-like enlargement, guaranteed fadeless. Pay postman 47c plus postage—or send 49c with order and we pay postage. Big 16x20-inch enlargement sent C. O. D. 78c plus postage or send 80c and we pay postage. Take advantage of this amazing offer now. Send your photos today. Specify size wanted.

STANDARD ART STUDIOS
104 S. Jefferson St. Dept. 1324-D CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

NO JOKE TO BE DEAF

—Every deaf person knows that—
Mr. Way made himself hear his watch tick after being deaf for twenty-five years, with his Artificial Ear Drums. He wore them day and night. They stopped his head noises. They are invisible and comfortable, no wires or batteries. Write for TRUE STORY. Also booklet on Deafness.

Artificial Ear Drum

THE WAY COMPANY
717 Hofmann Bldg. Detroit, Michigan

FREE CHARACTER READING CHART
Worth $1.00 Complete

• A "get acquainted" gift from REJUVIA, the favorite lipstick of more than a million women. A complete 17 x 22" scientific character reading chart absolutely FREE to you.
Study your sweetheart's character. • Analyze your friends • Learn what you are, and why you are • You will be amazed with the mysteries that this chart will reveal to you.
Mail your name and address on penny post card. No cost. No obligation. SEND NOW TO Rejuvia Beauty Labs., Inc., Dept. D-42, 395 Broadway, N Y.

Try REJUVIA Lipstick today, velvet smooth, permanent waterproof, indelible, in correct shade for your individual complexion. A tested quality full size lipstick for only 10 cents at most 5c and 10c Stores.

"ZOREX" ENDS MOTH DAMAGE

Costs Only 10c

Instead of using smelly moth balls this year, put your clothes away with Zorex. Zorex releases a delicate flower-like fragrance that brings sure death to moths and larvae, yet quickly vanishes when clothes are aired. Newest and best way to end moth damage. Ask for Zorex. Sold in all good 10c stores.

HANG with Clothes

(4)

The ZORO Co., 361 W. Superior St., Chicago

hundred and twenty-five of his Hollywood pals (male and female) offered their blood for transfusions to help save Director Eddie Sutherland's life when he was lying in an oxygen tank with pneumonia. A pretty swell showing. That Hollywood crowd can't be so bad after all. . . . Conrad Nagel made quite a hit in a stage show in New York named "The First Apple," even though the play itself was a floppo.

THE day after Ric Cortez married Christine Lee, they left for Santa Barbara on a honeymoon. They stopped at a famous hotel and found, after unpacking one of their seven bags, that they were the only customers. They left the remaining six bags packed, played one game of ping-pong and came back to Hollywood the same day. And they've always told me that honeymooners wanted to be alone!

C. B. DE MILLE claims to have proof that Hollywood is on the upgrade, intellectually speaking. Although he has mentioned to many producers and supervisors on the lot that he is "cribbing" from Plutarch for some of the lines for his next opus, "Cleopatra," not one of them has suggested, "Why don't you sign up this guy Plutarch and have him come to Hollywood and write the screen story?"

DID you ever have that insane desire to tell your pals about your operation? Clark Gable has—several times since his recovery from the appendectomy, and what a break he got recently. They made him "technical advisor" for the operating scenes for "Men in White," so that he gets to tell the whole company.

FIREMAN, save my child!" That was what Josef Von Sternberg yipped the other dawning while he was working on the cutting of "Scarlet Empress." Marlene was working with him when the fire broke out, threatening to burn the master negative of their picture. Von rushed into the hall, grabbed the fire extinguisher and put the blaze out alone. Only 1,000 feet of the film were lost. And if you don't think he yelled "Fireman, save my child," you're daffy. A picture really is just like a baby to Von and it was the "baby" he was spraying with put-out fluid.

KATIE'S THEATRICAL TUMBLE

It seems to be unanimous, now, that Katie Hepburn might better have stayed away from the stage. She has no one to blame but herself, however. Most of her friends advised her against a fling at the boards for two reasons: (1) Kate had never been much of a howling success on the stage in the past. (2) It was thought that her possibility of duplicating her great picture success on the stage was just about nil. After many of the New York critics had panned her, Hepburn finally came out with the statement that she knew she had been bad, that she had asked for her release, and that this would be her last offering for quite some time. We hope so. A couple more like "The Lake" and we might not even have a Hepburn on the screen!

Fancy Ronnie Colman taking Elizabeth Allen to the Tennis Matches! What is this power this young English gal has over Hollywood's most famous hermit? Of course, they were properly chaperoned by Mrs. Howard Hawks.

WALLIE BEERY is turning the tables on all the former Hollywood gang of parents by announcing, "I am raising my daughter to be an actress, keeping her around the studio as much as possible so that she will grow up in the atmosphere of the screen." Everyone on the set of "Viva Villa" got an awful bang out of little Carol Ann when she said, "Ah'm goin' to be a movie star some day."

THIS gal Margaret Sullavan is going to be the death of Universal Studios yet! Here she is in town for the purpose of starting work and the gang at the studio don't even know where she is living or what her telephone number is. When she was here before, they couldn't keep track of her because she was always sneaking off to some deserted set and falling asleep.

FUNNY, in spite of the villainous actions of Jack LaRue on the screen, he turned up "sissy" the other afternoon while making a simple little scene for Paramount. Jack was supposed to chew and puff madly at a huge black cigar all during the scene, and the secret is that Jack has never been able to smoke cigars. After about ten minutes of strong smoke and the heat of the kleig lights, Jack fainted dead away. Now, maybe you won't shudder so much when you see him do his usual LaRue-ing.

CORINNE GRIFFITH is coming back. That little story will gladden the hearts of thousands of her fans who have never forgotten her on the silent screen. Remember when she was at the height of her career? Someone coined the expression: "In my next reincarnation, I want to be Corinne Griffith's bath salts!" Her first picture is "Crime Doctor" opposite Otto Kruger.

SHORT STUFF

CLAUDETTE COLBERT has just been sent to the desert to gain fifteen pounds. This after C. B. DeMille had made her lose fifteen for the Only Shelf Paper with the DOUBLE EDGE!

Roylace

- Feels and Looks like Cloth!
- Never Curls . . . Never Musses!
- Lasts 4 Times Longer!

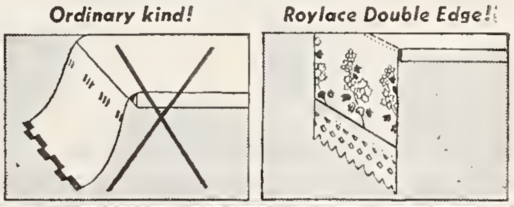
A shelf-paper that's as durable and practical as it is pretty! Feel the attractive cloth-lyke edge . . . find out for yourself why it lasts 4 to 5 times longer than old-type papers. It's double-thick. It's firm. It's difficult to bend or tear it. That's why Roylace Double Edge never curls up, never gets mussy or "raggy"—even in warm steamy kitchens, or in moist dampish bathrooms. It always hangs straight.

Another unique feature . . . Roylace stays clean for months longer . . . its embossed construction resists dirt, grease spots—and the colors won't fade.

NOTE: You don't have to pay one penny more for Roylace Double Edge than you pay for ordinary shelf papers. It's only five cents for the full 9-foot length. At all good Five and Ten Cent Stores. The ROYAL LACE PAPER WORKS, INC., 842 Lorimer St., Brooklyn, N. Y.



Ordinary kind!
Roylace Double Edge!

How Would You Like to Read the Life Story of Bing Crosby?

Well, then—you shall! In a very early issue of MODERN SCREEN, too. All about his early years, and his early struggles for success. His love story, too, with winsome Dixie Lee.

WATCH FOR THIS—In An Early Issue of MODERN SCREEN

"These WINDOW SHADES FOR 15¢ EACH?"

YES—THE NEW IMPROVED CLOPAY!

"YOU'RE JOKING!" He Insisted

BUT when I finally convinced my husband, he wanted new Clopays for every room. "How can they possibly sell such shades," he exclaimed, "for only 15c each?" . . . The new improved Clopays are the biggest shade bargain yet. Full size shades made of a patented fibre material that won't crack, fade or pinhole. Now heavier and stronger than ever before. Wooden slat included with each shade. And now it's necessary to trim only one side to fit narrower windows. Clopay Shades attach to old rollers—no tacks or tools. Plain colors and smart chintz designs. Send 3c stamp today for color samples. Clopay Corp., 1226 York St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

At All 5c and 10c Stores and Most Neighborhood Stores

NRA

CLOPAY WINDOW SHADES

Law!

STUDY AT HOME

We guide you step by step—furnish all text material, including fourteen-volume Law Library. Training prepared by leading law professors and given by members of the bar. Degree of LL.B. conferred. Low cost, easy terms. Get our valuable 64-page "Law Guide" and "Evidence" books free. Send for them NOW.

LaSalle Extension University, Dept. 4318-L Chicago

Who Is the Most Efficient Girl in Hollywood?

You'd never guess who Hollywood's keenest, canniest gal is—because she looks so pretty and fragile and helpless. And we're not going to tell you — here. You'll find out if you buy the May issue of MODERN SCREEN.

the picture just before! . . . Jobyna Arlen had to be married to Dick for seven years and have a baby before she finally got an engagement ring. . . . Bing calls "Three Little Pigs" the Best Tune of 1933 . . . Zasu Pitts is going to get a lawyer to stop those gals who imitate her on the air.

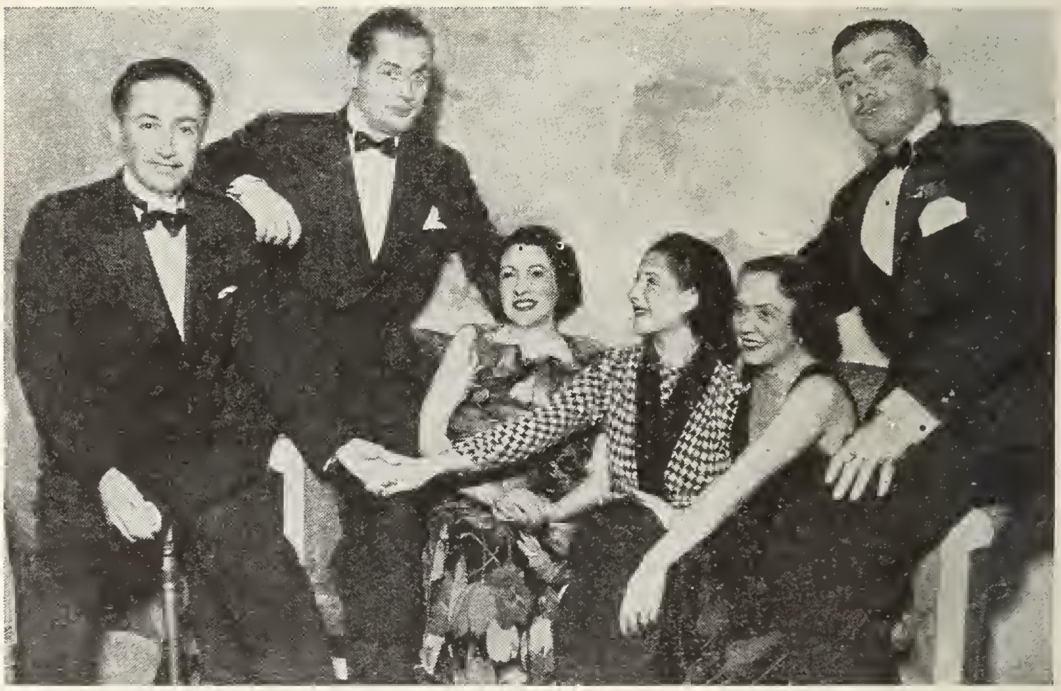
THE way we hear the story, a very funny thing happened at the Mervyn Leroy-Doris Warner wedding in New York. It seems that someone thought it would be a bright idea to play all the hit tunes from the recent Warner musicals, most of which, Mervyn has directed. Eventually, the band got around to that swell little number, "We're in the Money Now!" Right in the middle of the tune, one of the more playful guests rushed up to the orchestra leader and whispered, "Shhh! Don't you know that Mr. LeRoy is touchy?"

"WHEN Summer Comes," should be the title of the first year of marriage for George O'Brien and Marguerite Churchill. If our memory is correct, George and Maggie were married in the early summer of last year and now they are expecting the "first swallow" to be the stork. Our friend, Mrs. O'Brien, is no doubt praying for a girl, knowing that if it's a boy, George will probably want to train it to be a swell Police Chief like George's father!

YOU should have seen the look on Georgie Stone's face the day he discovered that all seventeen bottles of "Imported Perfume" he picked up in Mexico while on the "Viva Villa" location were fake.

ALICE FAYE, platinum-blonde "employee" of Rudy Vallee, is going to have her fun in the next few weeks trying to decide which of two careers she wants. As you know, Alice stepped into the breach as leading woman for Rudy in "Scandals" when Lilian Harvey took a run-out. Rudy had her under personal contract to him, but he was perfectly willing to drop the whole matter to allow Miss Faye to sign a very lucrative moom picture contract. ("Employee," did you say?) Now, Rudy has skipped to New York and George White, producer of the "Scandals," wants her to come back and do a top spot in his stage version of the "Scandals"—and the Fox studio want her to do a little epic entitled, "Red Heads." Fox has her tied body and soul, but, methinks, Rudy has her heart! Which will win?

WHO knows, maybe Lee Tracy's personal letter to his fans in a recent issue of MODERN SCREEN may have been the turning point! At any rate, the fans all over the country (and a lot of them from Mexico) have written letters demanding his return to the screen. As we go to press, it is rumored in Hollywood that Lee may sign a contract with Universal. We hope he gets a real break. If he made a mistake, he's certainly sorry.



You can imagine what a time our Scotty had getting this picture, for Bob was up to his usual pranks and it didn't take the rest of the party long to get into the spirit of the occasion. Anyway, they all calmed down long enough to have a picture "took." So we have the happily married Thalbergs, Montgomerys and Gables at the swanky Little Club.

Beauty Advice

(Continued from page 6)

so? Well, now I want you to know that it need not be used. If you will keep by your washstand or bathtub one of those stiff little bristly brushes, you are quite safe for clean and glistening finger-tips. After you have washed your hands thoroughly, dig the end of your fingernails into the soap, then with the same little bristly brush shove around under the fingernail tips. You will see a cleanliness appearing which will surprise you no matter how many potatoes you have been peeling or how many typewriter ribbons you have been changing or fumbling with. Do the stunt as regularly as you wash your hands and you will need no whitener in your own immediate family.

TOBACCO stains—God forbid that they should show on any lady's fingers. They need not. Constant washing keeps them away, I tell you, and I know. Wash the affected spots with a thick, heavy washcloth on which soap has been generously rubbed. Someone says that if you will moisten the head of a match and rub it on tobacco stains, they will instantly disappear. Try it.

Men purport to hate these shiny fingernails that we are flashing. I wonder whether they really do have all the resistance they assume? Anyway, ladies should worry, bright fingernails are the style at this particular moment, and anyone without them looks just a bit funny.

I know a woman, who, when she is invited to a bridge party, always inquires whether the guests are young or old, because she says, "If they are young and have sharp eyes, I will have to have a professional manicurist do my nails, but if they are old and short-sighted, I can slop around with the paint brush myself."

Experts on this fingernail subject say that it is better form to do the nails with a natural polish or a faint pink in the daytime, but at night the tone should be deepened in accordance with the tone and color of the frock you are wearing.

FOR instance, when you are dressed all in black, then it is a deep shade of red for the fingernails. When you are wearing pastel shades, then do the nails in bright pink—a pink with yellow in it if your skin is tawny, and one with the redder tones if you have a white skin.

There are all sorts of variations for this general scheme. They run from the sublime to the ridiculous. In Paris, just by way of going the limit, they are setting jewels into the fingernails. Now, you know that is an idea only for someone who must be, at all costs, an outstanding figure. It is amusing to read about and certainly must be startling to see, but one wouldn't really want to pull the act in the old home town.

Stubby fingers, which yearn to look

Blue Waltz presents
3 steps to Loveliness

Become truly exquisite with these Blue Waltz Beauty Aids . . . thousands of clever women are using them daily with marvelous results. With the magic help of Blue Waltz, you too, can acquire that soft allure that captivates men and makes you the envy of other women. Blue Waltz Beauty Aids are only 10c each at your nearest 5 and 10c store. Ask for them by name.

First the face powder, petal-soft and clinging, to protect and flatter the skin . . . enhances your natural beauty.

Next you apply the indelible lipstick—it comes in four glowing shades . . . makes your lips lovelier than ever.

Last a touch of perfume . . . its alluring fragrance to make the memory of you always charming.

Other Blue Waltz Beauty Aids—Cold Cream, Cream Rouge, Toilet Water, Brilliantine, Talcum Powder

JOUBERT · PARFUMEUR · FIFTH AVENUE · NEW YORK

Nestle
ColoRinse
Glorifies the Hair
LIGHT GOLDEN BLONDE
2

FOR GLORIOUS HAIR, youthful and natural . . . free from that dull, faded look . . . be sure you use ColoRinse in the shampoo wash. Not a dye or a bleach, it gives the hair a shimmering softness and a rich, colorful lustre that is entrancingly beautiful. There are 12 tints to choose from . . . and you can use it as often as you please, for it is entirely harmless. THE NESTLE-LE MUR CO. • New York

10c

at all 5 and 10c stores and beauty shops—Nestle ColoRinse, Super-Set, Golden Shampoo and Henna Shampoo.

Nestle
COLORINSE

READ WHAT —

Joan Foster
LEADING BEAUTY CONSULTANT says about
Gayanne FACE POWDER

Joan Foster
FIFTH AVENUE
NEW YORK
BEAUTY CONSULTANT

S. S. Kresge Co.
Gentlemen:
More women should learn how unusally fine your Gayanne Face Powder is —
I found it equal in quality and texture to brands selling at $1.00 and $2.00
Sincerely
Joan Foster

Gayanne
FACE POWDER

Joan Foster is right — Gayanne Face Powder is an exact copy of Fifth Avenue's most expensive and exclusive face powders.

RETAILS AT 10c EACH AT ALL
S.S.KRESGE CO. STORES
MADE BY THE MAKERS OF THE FAMOUS
GAYANNE CUSHIONED POWDER PUFFS

BALD NO LONGER

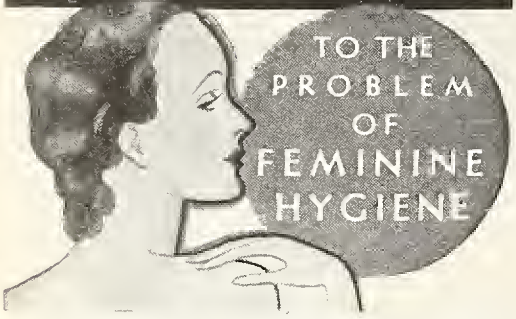
Mr. A. S. R. of New York City writes: "I had 3 bald spots the size of a half-dollar. I used Japanese Oil for 3 months and now my bald spots are entirely covered with hair."

JAPANESE OIL, the antiseptic counter-irritant, is used by thousands for baldness, falling hair, loose dandruff and scalp itch. Price 60c. Economy size $1. All druggists'. FREE booklet, "Truth About the Hair"—write.

NATIONAL REMEDY CO.,
56 W. 45th St., Dept. M. M. N. Y.

MARCO-JAPANESE STYLE OIL
HAIR & SCALP
National Remedy Co

THE Answer



TO THE PROBLEM OF FEMININE HYGIENE

● To the perplexed woman seeking a dependable answer to the vital problem of personal hygiene, we advise BORO-PHENO-FORM. Known to the medical profession for more than forty years, it carries highest recommendations. Convenient—no water nor accessories required. Soothing; harmless—non-caustic; odorless; dependable. A boon to the mind and health of every married woman.

Dr. Pierre's
BORO-PHENO-FORM

● Try it now. Just send 10c and coupon for generous Trial Package.

Dr. Pierre Chemical Co., Dept. D-16,
162 N. Franklin St., Chicago, Ill.
Please send me your Trial Package of BORO-PHENO-FORM, Directions and Enlightening Booklet. I enclose 10c.
Name ____________________
Address ____________________
City __________ State __________

longer, can give that effect by having the polish applied right up to the very tips.

False fingernails are made, so that when a nail has been clipped off or broken in an unsightly manner, a new nail can be pasted on so that even the closest observer would not be able to tell that anything had happened to that ever-so-evident spot. No excuse any more for ill-kept fingernails, is there?

Mary Biddle has a little present for you. A bottle of one of the best known and the nicest brands of hand lotion will be sent to you free of charge, if you will write to her and ask for it. And—don't forget!—questions about your own beauty problems are always welcome and will receive a full and prompt answer. Address Mary Biddle, MODERN SCREEN Magazine, 149 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

A rare beauty indeed is Edmund Lowe's leading lady in "Let's Fall In Love." Meet Miss Ann Sothern. On the stage in New York she was known as Harriette Lake but Columbia soon changed that.

Let's Talk About Love

(Continued from page 17)

her, rather than the other way around. It was understood by their friends that they would get married—some time. At parties, it was Don who had a grand evening, laughing and dancing with all the girls (not that he meant anything by it) and was Dot who awaited his pleasure, simply because she couldn't find even the most casual enjoyment in any other companionship except his.

Well, there came the day when Dot dashed over to my apartment and cried all over my best blue cushion—because Don hadn't called her up for a week and when she had finally summoned courage to call him, he was "busy." I took her to the movies to cheer her up. And the picture was "She Done Him Wrong." Mae West's inimitable wisecracks did at last jar a giggle loose from Dot—but that wasn't the important thing. Do you remember Mae West's line in that picture: "I've been smart enough to make men play the game my way"? Well, that line struck home! Not, of course, that Dot intended to go forth and stagger the world with an imitation of Mae West. But—for her particular, personal problem—the idea of making her man play the game her way, at least to a fifty-fifty degree, was the solution of her problem.

What did she do? Why, she jolly well let Don be as "busy" as long as he liked. And when he did at last, in his own sweet time, get around to calling her up, she was "busy" too. And let me tell you how smart she was. She wasn't a bit disagreeable when he called. On the contrary. She was pleasant. Natural. Matter-of-fact. Yes, she had missed hearing from him. He had been very rushed at the office? Oh, that was too bad. She was glad the rush 'was over. Well—n-o-o-o—she couldn't see him tonight. Awfully sorry. Perhaps if he had called a bit earlier . . . But she was very anxious to see him, of course. Would he call her on—er—Thursday? That would be swell. Goodbye.

And believe me, he called.

NOW, if any of you will sit up and tell me that, when you have known a man five years—or any appreciable length of time, for that matter—it is too late in the day to put on any sort of an act for his benefit, I'll come right back with the answer, "You're all wrong!" Of course, you must be clever about putting on "the act." And you must keep it up if it doesn't work the first time. Granted that an intelligent young fellow may be a bit suspicious of feminine dramatics at first, if you will have the will-power to stick to it for a week or so, he'll tumble.

